20. Achievements. There is increased participation of women in the labour market and subsequent gain in economic autonomy. Some Governments have introduced a variety of measures that address women's economic and social rights, equal access to and control over economic resources and equality in employment. Other measures include the ratification of international labour conventions as well as enacting or strengthening legislation to make it compatible with these conventions. There is increased awareness of the need to reconcile employment and family responsibilities and of the positive effect of such measures as maternity and paternity leave and also parental leave, and child and family care services and benefits. Some Governments have made provisions to address discriminatory and abusive behaviour in the workplace and to prevent unhealthy working conditions, and have established funding mechanisms to promote women's roles in entrepreneurship, education and training, including scientific and technical skills and decision-making. Research has been conducted on barriers to economic empowerment faced by women, including the relationship between remunerated and unremunerated work, and tools are being developed to assist with this assessment.

21. Obstacles. The importance of a gender perspective in the development of macroeconomic policy is still not widely recognized. Many women still work in rural areas and the informal economy as subsistence producers, and in the service sector with low levels of income and little job and social security. Many women with comparable skills and experience are confronted with a gender wage gap and lag behind men in income and career mobility in the formal sector. Equal pay for women and men for equal work, or work of equal value, has not yet been fully realized. Gender discrimination in hiring and promotion and related to pregnancy, including through pregnancy testing, and sexual harassment in the workplace persist. In some countries, women's full and equal rights to own land and other property, including through the right to inheritance, is not recognized yet in national legislation. Progression in the professions, in most cases, is still more difficult for women, due to the lack of structures and measures that take into account maternity and family responsibilities. In some cases, persistent gender stereotyping has led to a lower status of male workers who are fathers and to insufficient encouragement for men to reconcile professional and family responsibilities. Lack of family-friendly policies regarding the organization of work increases these difficulties. Effective implementation of legislation and practical support systems is still inadequate. The combination of remunerated work and caregiving within families, households and communities still leads to a disproportionate burden for women since there is insufficient sharing of tasks and responsibilities by men. It is still also women who perform the larger part of unremunerated work.

G. Women in power and decision-making

22. Achievements. There has been growing acceptance of the importance to society of the full participation of women in decision-making and power at all levels and in all forums, including the intergovernmental, governmental and non-governmental sectors. In some countries, women have also attained higher positions in these spheres. An increasing number of countries applied affirmative and positive action policies, including quota systems or voluntary agreements in some countries and measurable goals and targets, developed training programmes for women's leadership, and introduced measures to reconcile family and work responsibilities of both women and men. National mechanisms and machineries for the advancement of women as well as national and international networks of women politicians, parliamentarians, activists and professionals in various fields have been established or upgraded and strengthened.

23. Obstacles. Despite general acceptance of the need for a gender balance in decision-making bodies at all levels, a gap between de jure and de facto equality has persisted. Notwithstanding substantial improvement of de jure equality between women and men, the actual participation of women at the highest levels of national and international decision-making has not significantly changed since the time of the Fourth World Conference on Women in 1995, and gross underrepresentation of women in decision-making bodies in all areas, including politics, conflict prevention and resolution mechanisms, the economy, the environment and the media, hinders the inclusion of a gender perspective in these critical spheres of influence. Women continue to be underrepresented at the legislative, ministerial and sub-ministerial levels, as well as at the highest levels of the corporate sector and other economic and social institutions. Traditionally assigned gender roles limit women's choices in education and careers and compel women to assume the burden for household responsibilities. Initiatives and programmes aimed at women's increased participation in decision-making have been hindered by a lack of human and financial resources for training and advocacy for political careers; gender-sensitive attitudes towards women in society; awareness of women to engage in decision-making in some cases; accountability of elected officials and political parties for promoting gender equality and women's participation in public life; social awareness of the importance of balanced participation of women and men in decision-making; willingness on the part of men to share power; sufficient dialogue and cooperation with women's non-governmental organizations, along with organizational and political structures, which enable all women to participate in all spheres of political decision-making.

H. Institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women

24. Achievements. National machineries have been instituted or strengthened and recognized as the institutional base acting as catalysts for promoting gender equality, gender mainstreaming and monitoring of the implementation of the Platform for Action and in many instances of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. In many countries, progress has been achieved in terms of the visibility, status, outreach and coordination of activities of these machineries. Gender mainstreaming has been widely acknowledged as a strategy to enhance the impact of policies to promote gender equality. The goal of the strategy is to incorporate a gender perspective in all legislation, policies, programmes and projects. These machineries, despite their limited financial resources, have made a significant contribution to the development of human resources in the field of gender studies and have also contributed to the growing efforts for the generation and dissemination of data disaggregated by sex and age, gender-sensitive research and documentation. Within the United Nations system, much progress has been made in the mainstreaming of a gender perspective, including through the development of tools and the creation of gender focal points.

25. Obstacles. In a number of countries, inadequate financial and human resources and a lack of political will and commitment are the main obstacles confronting national machineries. This is further exacerbated by insufficient understanding of gender equality and gender mainstreaming among government structures, as well as prevailing gender stereotypes, discriminatory attitudes, competing government priorities and, in some countries, unclear mandates, a marginalized location within the national government structures, lack of data disaggregated by sex and age in many areas and insufficiently applied methods for assessing progress, in addition to paucity of authority and insufficient links to civil society. The activities of the national machineries have been also hindered by structural and communication problems within and among government agencies.

I. Human rights of women

26. Achievements. Legal reforms have been undertaken to prohibit all forms of discrimination and discriminatory provisions have been eliminated in civil, penal and personal status law governing marriage and family relations, all forms of violence, women's property and ownership rights and women's political, work and employment rights. Steps have been taken to realize women's de facto enjoyment of their human rights through the creation of an enabling environment, including the adoption of policy measures, the improvement of enforcement and monitoring mechanisms and the implementation of legal literacy and awareness campaigns at all levels. The Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women has been ratified or acceded to by one hundred and sixty-five countries and its full implementation has been promoted by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women. At its fifty-fourth session, the General Assembly adopted the Optional Protocol to the Convention, allowing women claiming to be victims of a violation of any of the rights set forth in the Convention by a State party to submit their claims to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, to which non-governmental organizations contributed by raising awareness and generating support for its adoption. Women's non-governmental organizations have also contributed to raising awareness that women's rights are human rights. They also generated support for the inclusion of a gender perspective in the elaboration of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court. Progress has also been made to integrate the human rights of women and mainstream a gender perspective into the United Nations system, including into the work of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and of the Commission on Human Rights.

27. Obstacles. Gender discrimination and all other forms of discrimination, in particular racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance continue to cause threat to women's enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms. In situations of armed conflict and foreign occupation, human rights of women have been extensively violated. Even though a number of countries have ratified the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the goal of universal ratification by the year 2000 has not been achieved, and there continue to be a large number of reservations to the Convention. While there is an increasing acceptance of gender equality, many countries have not yet implemented fully the provisions of the Convention. Discriminatory legislation as well as harmful traditional and customary practices and negative stereotyping of women and men still persist. Family, civil, penal, labour and commercial laws or codes, or administrative rules and regulations, still have not fully integrated a gender perspective. Legislative and regulatory gaps, as well as lack of implementation and enforcement of legislation and regulations, perpetuate de jure as well as de facto inequality and discrimination, and in a few cases, new laws discriminating against women have been introduced. In many countries, women have insufficient access to the law, resulting from illiteracy, lack of legal literacy, information and resources, insensitivity and gender bias, and lack of awareness of the human rights of women by law enforcement officials and the judiciary, who in many cases fail to respect the human rights of women and the dignity and worth of the human person. There is insufficient recognition of women's and girls' reproductive rights, as well as barriers to their full enjoyment of those rights, which embrace certain human rights as defined in paragraph 95 of the Beijing Platform for Action. Some women and girls continue to encounter barriers to justice and the enjoyment of their human rights because of such factors as their race, language, ethnicity, culture, religion, disability or socio-economic class or because they are indigenous people, migrants, including women migrant workers, displaced women or refugees.

J. Women and the media

28. Achievements. The establishment of local, national and international women's media networks has contributed to global information dissemination, exchange of views and support to women's groups active in media work. The development of information and communication technologies, especially the Internet, has provided improved communication opportunities for the empowerment of women and girls, which has enabled an increasing number of women to contribute to knowledge sharing, networking and electronic commerce activities. The number of women's media organizations and programmes has increased, facilitating the aims of increased participation and promotion of positive portrayals of women in the media. Progress has been made to combat negative images of women by establishing professional guidelines and voluntary codes of conduct, encouraging fair gender portrayal and the use of non-sexist language in media programmes.

29. Obstacles. Negative, violent and/or degrading images of women, including pornography and stereotyped portrayals, have increased in different forms using new communication technologies in some instances, and bias against women remains in the media. Poverty, the lack of access and opportunities, illiteracy, lack of computer literacy and language barriers, prevent some women from using the information and communication technologies, including the Internet. Development of and access to Internet infrastructure is limited, especially in developing countries and particularly for women.

K. Women and the environment

30. Achievements. Some national environment policies and programmes have incorporated gender perspectives. In recognition of the link between gender equality, poverty eradication, sustainable development and environment protection, Governments have included income-generating activities for women, as well as training in natural resource management and environmental protection in their development strategies. Projects have been launched to preserve and utilize women's traditional ecological knowledge, including the traditional ecological knowledge of indigenous women, in the management of natural resources and the preservation of biodiversity.

31. Obstacles. There is still a lack of public awareness about environmental risks faced by women and of the benefits of gender equality for promoting environmental protection. Women's limited access to technical skills, resources and information, in particular in developing countries, due to, inter alia, gender inequality, has impeded women's effective participation in decision-making, regarding the sustainable environment, including at the international level. Research, action, targeted strategies and public awareness remain limited regarding the differential impacts and implications of environmental problems for women and men. Real solutions to environmental problems, including environmental degradation, need to address the root causes of these problems, such as foreign occupation. Environmental policies and programmes lack a gender perspective and fail to take into account women's roles and contributions to environmental sustainability.

L. The girl child

32. Achievements. Some progress was made in primary and, to a lesser extent, secondary and tertiary education for girls, owing to the creation of a more gender-sensitive school environment, improved educational infrastructure, increased enrolment and retention, support mechanisms for pregnant adolescents and adolescent mothers, increased non-formal education opportunities and enhanced attendance at science and technology classes. Increased attention was given to the health of the girl child, including the sexual and reproductive health of adolescents. An increasing number of countries introduced legislation to ban female genital mutilation and imposed heavier penalties on those involved in sexual abuse, trafficking and all other forms of exploitation of the girl child, including for commercial ends. A recent achievement has been the adoption of the optional protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography.

33. Obstacles. The persistence of poverty, discriminatory attitudes towards women and girls, negative cultural attitudes and practices against girls, as well as negative stereotyping of girls and boys, which limits girls' potential, and inadequate awareness of the specific situation of the girl child, child labour and the heavy burden of domestic responsibilities on girls, inadequate nutrition and access to health services, and lack of finance, which often prevent them from pursuing and completing their education and training, have contributed to a lack of opportunities and possibilities for girls to become confident and self-reliant, and independent adults. Poverty, lack of parental support and guidance, lack of information and education, abuse and all forms of exploitation of, and violence against, the girl child in many cases result in unwanted pregnancies and transmission of HIV, which may also lead to a restriction of educational opportunities. Programmes for the girl child were hindered by a lack of or an insufficient allocation of financial and human resources. There were few established national mechanisms to implement policies and programmes for the girl child and, in some cases, coordination among responsible institutions was insufficient. The increased awareness of the health needs, including the sexual and reproductive health needs, of adolescents has not yet resulted in sufficient provision of necessary information and services. Despite advances in legal protection, there is increased sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of the girl child. Adolescents continue to lack the education and service needed to enable them to deal in a positive and responsible way with their sexuality.

III. Current challenges affecting the full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action

34. The review and appraisal of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action occurred in a rapidly changing global context. Since 1995, a number of issues have gained prominence and acquired new dimensions which pose additional challenges to the full and accelerated implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the realization of gender equality, development and peace by Governments, intergovernmental bodies, international organizations, the private sector and non-governmental organizations as appropriate. Continued political commitment to gender equality at all levels is needed for the full implementation of the Platform for Action.

35. Globalization has presented new challenges for the fulfilment of the commitments and the realization of the goals of the Fourth World Conference on Women. The globalization process has, in some countries, resulted in policy shifts in favour of more open trade and financial flows, privatization of State-owned enterprises and in many cases lower public spending, particularly on social services. This change has transformed patterns of production and accelerated technological advances in information and communication and affected the lives of women, both as workers and consumers. In a large number of countries, particularly in developing and least developed countries, these changes have also adversely impacted on the lives of women and have increased inequality. The gender impact of these changes has not been systematically evaluated. Globalization also has cultural, political and social impacts affecting cultural values, lifestyles and forms of communication as well as implications for the achievement of sustainable development. The benefits of the growing global economy have been unevenly distributed, leading to wider economic disparities, the feminization of poverty, increased gender inequality, including through often deteriorating work conditions and unsafe working environments, especially in the informal economy and rural areas. While globalization has brought greater economic opportunities and autonomy to some women, many others have been marginalized and deprived of the benefits of this process, owing to deepening inequalities among and within countries. Although in many countries the level of participation of women in the labour force has risen, in other cases the application of certain economic policies has had such a negative impact that increases in women's employment often have not been matched by improvements in wages, promotions and working conditions. In many cases, women continue to be employed in low-paid part-time and contract jobs marked by insecurity and by safety and health hazards. In many countries, women, especially new entrants into the labour market, continue to be among the first to lose jobs and the last to be rehired.

36. Increasing economic disparities among and within countries, coupled with a growing economic interdependence and dependence of States on external factors as well as financial crises have, in recent years, altered prospects for growth and caused economic instability in many countries, with a heavy impact on the lives of women. These difficulties have affected the ability of States to provide social protection and social security as well as funding for the implementation of the Platform for Action. Such difficulties are also reflected in the shift of the cost of social protection, social security and other welfare provisions from the public sector to the household. The decreasing levels of funding available through international co-operation has contributed to further marginalization of a large number of developing countries and countries with economies in transition within which women are among the poorest. The agreed target of 0.7 per cent of the gross national product of developed countries for overall official development assistance has not been achieved. These factors have contributed to the increasing feminization of poverty, which has undermined efforts to achieve gender equality. Limited funding at the State level makes it imperative that innovative approaches to the allocation of existing resources be employed, not only by Governments but also by non-governmental organizations and the private sector. One such innovation is the gender analysis of public budgets, which is emerging as an important tool for determining the differential impact of expenditures on women and men to help ensure equitable use of existing resources. This analysis is crucial to promote gender equality.

37. The impact of globalization and structural adjustment programmes, the high costs of external debt servicing and declining terms of international trade in several developing countries have worsened the existing obstacles to development, aggravating the feminization of poverty. Negative consequences of structural adjustment programmes, stemming from inappropriate design and application, have continued to place a disproportionate burden on women, inter alia, through budget cuts in basic social services, including education and health.

38. There is a greater acceptance that the increasing debt burden faced by most developing countries is unsustainable and constitutes one of the principal obstacles to achieving progress in people-centred sustainable development and poverty eradication. For many developing countries, as well as countries with economies in transition, excessive debt servicing has severely constrained their capacity to promote social development and provide basic services and has affected full implementation of the Platform for Action.

39. In countries with economies in transition, women are bearing most of the hardships induced by the economic restructuring and are the first to lose jobs in times of recession. They are being squeezed out from fast-growth sectors. Loss of childcare facilities due to elimination or privatization of State work places, increased need for older care without the corresponding facilities and continuing inequality of access to training for finding re-employment and to productive assets for entering or expanding businesses are current challenges facing women in these countries.

40. Science and technology, as fundamental components of development, are transforming patterns of production, contributing to the creation of jobs and new job classifications, and ways of working, and contributing to the establishment of a knowledge-based society. Technological change can bring new opportunities for all women in all fields, if they have equal access and adequate training. Women should also be actively involved in the definition, design, development, implementation and gender impact evaluation of policies related to these changes. Many women worldwide are yet to use effectively these new communications technologies for networking, advocacy, exchange of information, business, education, media consultation and e-commerce initiatives. For instance, millions of the world's poorest women and men still do not have access to and benefits from science and technology and are currently excluded from this new field and the opportunities it presents.

41. The patterns of migratory flows of labour are changing. Women and girls are increasingly involved in internal, regional and international labour migration to pursue many occupations, mainly in farm labour, domestic work and some forms of entertainment work. While this situation increases their earning opportunities and self-reliance, it also exposes them, particularly the poor, uneducated, unskilled and/or undocumented migrants, to inadequate working conditions, increased health risk, the risk of trafficking, economic and sexual exploitation, racism, racial discrimination and xenophobia, and other forms of abuse, which impair their enjoyment of their human rights and, in some cases, constitute violations of human rights.

42. While recognizing that Governments have the primary responsibility to develop and implement policies to promote gender equality, partnerships between Governments and different actors of civil society are increasingly recognized as an important mechanism to achieve this goal. Additional innovative approaches can be further developed to foster this collaboration.

43. In some countries, current demographic trends show that lowered fertility rates, increased life expectancy and lower mortality rates have contributed to the ageing of the population, and increase in chronic health conditions has implications for health-care systems and spending, informal care systems and research. Given the gap between male and female life expectancy, the number of widows and older single women has increased considerably, often leading to their social isolation and other social challenges. Societies have much to gain from the knowledge and life experience of older women. On the other hand, the current generation of young people is the largest in history. Adolescent girls and young women have particular needs which will require increasing attention.

44. The rapid progression of the HIV/AIDS pandemic, particularly in the developing world, has had a devastating impact on women. Responsible behaviour and gender equality are among the important prerequisites for its prevention. There is also the need for more effective strategies to empower women to have control over and decide freely and responsibly on matters related to their sexuality, to protect themselves from high risk and irresponsible behaviour leading to sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS, and to promote responsible, safe and respectful behaviour by men and to also promote gender equality. HIV/AIDS is an urgent public health issue, is outstripping efforts to contain it and, in many countries, is reversing hard-won gains of development. The burden of care for people living with HIV/AIDS and for children orphaned by HIV/AIDS falls particularly on women as infrastructures are inadequate to respond to the challenges being posed. Women with HIV/AIDS often suffer from discrimination and stigma and are often victims of violence. Issues related to prevention, mother-to-child transmission of HIV, breastfeeding, information and education in particular of youth, curbing high-risk behaviour, intravenous drug users, support groups, counselling and voluntary testing, partner notification and provision and high cost of essential drugs have not been sufficiently addressed. There are positive signs in the fight against HIV/AIDS in some countries that behavioural changes have occurred among young people, and experience shows that educational programmes for young people can lead to a more positive view on gender relations and gender equality, delayed sexual initiation and reduced risk of sexually transmitted infections.

45. Growing drug and substance abuse among young women and girls, both in developed and developing countries, has raised the need for increased efforts towards demand reduction and fight against illicit production, supply and trafficking of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

46. The increase in casualties and damage caused by natural disasters has raised awareness of the inefficiencies and inadequacies of the existing approaches and intervention methods in responding to such emergency situations, in which women, more often than men, are burdened with the responsibility of meeting the immediate daily needs of their families. This situation has raised awareness that a gender perspective must be incorporated whenever disaster prevention, mitigation and recovery strategies are being developed and implemented.

47. The changing context of gender relations, as well as the discussion on gender equality, has led to an increased reassessment of gender roles. This has further encouraged a discussion on the roles and responsibilities of women and men working together towards gender equality and the need for changing those stereotypical and traditional roles that limit women's full potential. There is a need for balanced participation between women and men in remunerated and unremunerated work. Failure to recognize and measure in quantitative terms unremunerated work of women, which is often not valued in national accounts, has meant that women's full contribution to social and economic development remains underestimated and undervalued. As long as there is insufficient sharing of tasks and responsibilities with men, the combination of remunerated work and caregiving will lead to the continued disproportionate burden for women in comparison to men.

IV. Actions and initiatives to overcome obstacles and to achieve the full and accelerated implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action

48. In view of the evaluation of progress made in the five years since the Fourth World Conference on Women in implementing the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, as contained in section II above, as well as the current challenges affecting its full realization, as outlined in section III above, Governments now recommit themselves to the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and also commit themselves to further actions and initiatives to overcome the obstacles and address the challenges. Governments, in taking continued and additional steps to achieve the goals of the Platform for Action, recognize that all human rights—civil, cultural, economic, political and social, including the right to development—are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated, and are essential for realizing gender equality, development and peace in the twenty-first century.

49. Organizations of the United Nations system and the Bretton Woods institutions, as well as the World Trade Organization, other international and regional intergovernmental bodies, parliaments and civil society, including the private sector and non-governmental organizations, trade unions and other stakeholders, are called upon to support government efforts and, where appropriate, develop complementary programmes of their own to achieve full and effective implementation of the Platform for Action.

50. Governments and intergovernmental organizations recognize the contribution and complementary role of non-governmental organizations, with full respect for their autonomy, in ensuring the effective implementation of the Platform for Action, and should continue to strengthen partnerships with non-governmental organizations, particularly women's organizations, in contributing to the effective implementation of and follow-up to the Platform for Action.

51. Experience has shown that the goal of gender equality can be fully achieved only in the context of renewed relations among different stakeholders at all levels. The full, effective participation of women on the basis of equality in all spheres of society is necessary to contribute to this goal.

52. Achieving gender equality and empowerment of women requires redressing inequalities between women and men and girls and boys and ensuring their equal rights, responsibilities, opportunities and possibilities. Gender equality implies that women's needs, interests, concerns, experiences and priorities as well as men's are an integral dimension of the design, implementation, national monitoring, and follow-up and evaluation, including at the international level, of all actions in all areas.

53. By adopting the Platform for Action, Governments and the international community agreed to a common development agenda with gender equality and women's empowerment as underlying principles. The efforts towards ensuring women's participation in development have expanded and need to combine a focus on women's conditions and basic needs with a holistic approach based on equal rights and partnerships, promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms. Policies and programmes should be formulated to achieve the goal of people-centred sustainable development, secure livelihoods and adequate social protection measures, including safety nets, strengthened support systems for families, equal access to and control over financial and economic resources, and to eliminate increasing and disproportionate poverty among women. All economic policies and institutions as well as those responsible for resource allocation should adopt a gender perspective to ensure that development dividends are shared on equal grounds.

54. Given the persistent and increasing burden of poverty on women in many countries, particularly in developing countries, it is essential to continue from a gender perspective to review, modify and implement integrated macroeconomic and social policies and programmes, including those related to structural adjustment and external debt problems, to ensure universal and equitable access to social services, in particular to education and affordable quality health-care services and equal access to and control over economic resources.

55. Increased efforts are needed to provide equal access to education, health and social services and to ensure women's and girls' rights to education and the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health and well-being throughout the life cycle, as well as adequate, affordable and universally accessible health care and services, including sexual and reproductive health, particularly in the face of the HIV/AIDS pandemic; they are also necessary with regard to the growing proportion of older women.

56. Given that a majority of the world's women are subsistence producers and users of environmental resources, there is a need to recognize and integrate women's knowledge and priorities in the conservation and management of such resources to ensure their sustainability. Programmes and infrastructures that are gender-sensitive are needed in order to respond effectively to disaster and emergency situations that threaten the environment, livelihood security, as well as the management of the basic requirements of daily life.

57. Sustaining the livelihoods of populations in States with limited or scarce resources, including small island developing States, is critically dependent on the preservation and protection of the environment. Women's customary knowledge, management and sustainable use of biodiversity should be recognized.

58. Political will and commitment at all levels are crucial to ensure mainstreaming of a gender perspective in the adoption and implementation of comprehensive and action-oriented policies in all areas. Policy commitments are essential for further developing the necessary framework which ensures women's equal access to and control over economic and financial resources, training, services and institutions as well as their participation in decision-making and management. Policy-making processes require the partnership of women and men at all levels. Men and boys should also be actively involved and encouraged in all efforts to achieve the goals of the Platform for Action and its implementation.

59. Violence against women and girls is a major obstacle to the achievement of the objectives of gender equality, development and peace. Violence against women both violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment by women of their human rights and fundamental freedoms. Gender-based violence, such as battering and other domestic violence, sexual abuse, sexual slavery and exploitation, international trafficking in women and children, forced prostitution and sexual harassment, as well as violence against women resulting from cultural prejudice, racism and racial discrimination, xenophobia, pornography, ethnic cleansing, armed conflict, foreign occupation, religious and anti-religious extremism and terrorism are incompatible with the dignity and worth of the human person and must be combated and eliminated.

60. Women play a critical role in the family. The family is the basic unit of society and is a strong force for social cohesion and integration and, as such, should be strengthened. The inadequate support to women and insufficient protection and support to their respective families affect society as a whole and undermine efforts to achieve gender equality. In different cultural, political and social systems, various forms of the family exist and the rights, capabilities and responsibilities of family members must be respected. Women's social and economic contributions to the welfare of the family and the social significance of maternity and paternity continue to be inadequately addressed. Motherhood and fatherhood and the role of parents and legal guardians in the family and in the upbringing of children and the importance of all family members to the family's well-being are also acknowledged and must not be a basis for discrimination. Women also continue to bear a disproportionate share of the household responsibilities and the care of children, the sick and the elderly. Such imbalance needs to be consistently addressed through appropriate policies and programmes, in particular those geared towards education, and through legislation where appropriate. In order to achieve full partnership, both in public and in private spheres, both women and men must be enabled to reconcile and share equally work responsibilities and family responsibilities.

61. Strong national machineries for the advancement of women and promotion of gender equality require political commitment at the highest level and all necessary human and financial resources to initiate, recommend and facilitate the development, adoption and monitoring of policies, legislation, programmes and capacity-building for the empowerment of women and to act as catalysts for open public dialogue on gender equality as a societal goal. This would enable them to promote the advancement of women and mainstream a gender perspective in policies and programmes in all areas, to play an advocacy role and to ensure equal access to all institutions and resources, as well as enhanced capacity-building for women in all sectors. Reforms to meet the challenges of the changing world are essential to ensure women's equal access to institutions and organizations. Institutional and conceptual changes are a strategic and important aspect of creating an enabling environment for the implementation of the Platform for Action.

62. Programme support to enhance women's opportunities, potentials and activities need to have a dual focus: on the one hand, programmes aimed at meeting the basic as well as the specific needs of women for capacity-building, organizational development and empowerment, and on the other, gender mainstreaming in all programme formulation and implementation activities. It is particularly important to expand into new areas of programming to advance gender equality in response to current challenges.

63. Girls and women of all ages with any form of disability are generally among the more vulnerable and marginalized of society. There is therefore need to take into account and to address their concerns in all policy-making and programming. Special measures are needed at all levels to integrate them into the mainstream of development.

64. Effective and coordinated plans and programmes for the full implementation of the Platform for Action require a clear knowledge of the situation of women and girls, clear research-based knowledge and data disaggregated by sex, short- and long-term time-bound targets and measurable goals, and follow-up mechanisms to assess progress. Efforts are needed to ensure capacity-building for all actors involved in the achievement of these goals. Efforts are also needed at the national level to increase transparency and accountability.

65. The realization and the achievement of the goals of gender equality, development and peace need to be supported by the allocation of necessary human, financial and material resources for specific and targeted activities to ensure gender equality at the local, national, regional and international levels as well as by enhanced and increased international cooperation. Explicit attention to these goals in the budgetary processes at the national, regional and international levels is essential.

A. Actions to be taken at the national level

By Governments:

66. (a) Set and encourage the use of explicit short- and long-term time-bound targets or measurable goals, including, where appropriate, quotas, to promote progress towards gender balance, including women's equal access to and full participation on a basis of equality with men in all areas and at all levels of public life, especially in decision- and policy-making positions, in political parties and political activities, in all government ministries and at key policy-making institutions, as well as in local development bodies and authorities;

(b) Address the barriers faced by women, particularly by indigenous and other marginalized women, in accessing and participating in politics and decision-making, including lack of training, women's double burden of paid and unpaid work, negative societal attitudes and stereotypes.

67. (a) Ensure policies that guarantee equal access to education and the elimination of gender disparities in education, including vocational training, science and technology and completion of basic education for girls, especially for those living in rural and deprived areas, and opportunities for continuing education at all levels for all women and girls;

(b) Support the implementation of plans and programmes of action to ensure quality education and improved enrolment retention rates for boys and girls and the elimination of gender discrimination and gender stereotypes in educational curricula and materials, as well as in the process of education;

(c) Accelerate action and strengthen political commitment to close the gender gap in primary and secondary education by 2005 and to ensure free compulsory and universal primary education for both girls and boys by 2015, as advocated by several global conferences, and eliminate policies that have been proven to worsen and perpetuate the gap;

(d) Develop a gender-sensitive curriculum from kindergarten to elementary schools to vocational training and universities in order to address gender stereotyping as one of the root causes of segregation in working life.

68. (a) Design and implement policies that promote and protect women's enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms and create an environment that does not tolerate violations of the rights of women and girls;

(b) Create and maintain a non-discriminatory and gender-sensitive legal environment by reviewing legislation with a view to striving to remove discriminatory provisions as soon as possible, preferably by 2005, and eliminating legislative gaps that leave women and girls without protection of their rights and without effective recourse against gender-based discrimination;

(c) Ratify the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, limit the extent of any reservations to it, and withdraw reservations that are contrary to the object and purpose of the Convention or otherwise incompatible with international treaty law;

(d) Consider signing and ratifying the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women;

(e) Consider signing and ratifying the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

(f) Develop, review and implement laws and procedures to prohibit and eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and girls;

(g) Take measures, including programmes and policies, to ensure that maternity, motherhood and parenting and the role of women in procreation are not used as a basis for discrimination nor restrict the full participation of women in society;

(h) Ensure that national legislative and administrative reform processes, including those linked to land reform, decentralization and reorientation of the economy, promote women's rights, particularly those of rural women and women living in poverty, and take measures to promote and implement those rights through women's equal access to and control over economic resources, including land, property rights, right to inheritance, credit and traditional saving schemes, such as women's banks and cooperatives;

(i) Mainstream a gender perspective into national immigration and asylum policies, regulations and practices, as appropriate, in order to promote and protect the rights of all women, including the consideration of steps to recognize gender-related persecution and violence when assessing grounds for granting refugee status and asylum;

(j) Take all appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination and violence against women and girls by any person, organization or enterprise;

(k) Take necessary measures for the private sector and educational establishments to facilitate and strengthen compliance with non-discriminatory legislation.

69. (a) As a matter of priority, review and revise legislation, where appropriate, with a view to introducing effective legislation, including on violence against women, and take other necessary measures to ensure that all women and girls are protected against all forms of physical, psychological and sexual violence, and are provided recourse to justice;

(b) Prosecute the perpetrators of all forms of violence against women and girls and sentence them appropriately, and introduce actions aimed at helping and motivating perpetrators to break the cycle of violence and take measures to provide avenues for redress to victims;

(c) Treat all forms of violence against women and girls of all ages as a criminal offence punishable by law, including violence based on all forms of discrimination;

(d) Establish legislation and/or strengthen appropriate mechanisms to handle criminal matters relating to all forms of domestic violence, including marital rape and sexual abuse of women and girls, and ensure that such cases are brought to justice swiftly;

(e) Develop, adopt and fully implement laws and other measures, as appropriate, such as policies and educational programmes, to eradicate harmful customary or traditional practices, including female genital mutilation, early and forced marriage and so-called honour crimes, which are violations of the human rights of women and girls and obstacles to the full enjoyment by women of their human rights and fundamental freedoms, and intensify efforts, in cooperation with local women's groups, to raise collective and individual awareness on how these harmful traditional or customary practices violate women's human rights;

(f) Continue to undertake research to develop a better understanding of the root causes of all forms of violence against women in order to design programmes and take measures towards eliminating those forms of violence;

(g) Take measures to address through policies and programmes, racism and racially motivated violence against women and girls;

(h) Take concrete steps, as a priority and with their full and voluntary participation, to address the impact of violence on indigenous women in order to implement appropriate, effective programmes and services to eliminate all forms of violence;

(i) Promote women's and girls' mental well-being, integrate mental health services into primary health-care systems, develop gender-sensitive supportive programmes and train health workers to recognize gender-based violence and provide care for girls and women of all ages who have experienced any form of violence;

(j) Adopt and promote a holistic approach to respond to all forms of violence and abuse against girls and women of all ages, including girls and women with disabilities, as well as vulnerable and marginalized women and girls in order to address their diverse needs, including education, provision of appropriate health care and services and basic social services;

(k) Approve and promote a holistic approach to combat violence against women during all their life cycle and circumstances.

70. (a) Take appropriate measures to address the root factors, including external factors, that encourage trafficking in women and girls for prostitution and other forms of commercialized sex, forced marriages and forced labour in order to eliminate trafficking in women, including by strengthening existing legislations with a view to providing better protection of the rights of women and girls and to punishing the perpetrators, through both criminal and civil measures;

(b) Devise, enforce and strengthen effective measures to combat and eliminate all forms of trafficking in women and girls through a comprehensive anti-trafficking strategy consisting of, inter alia, legislative measures, prevention campaigns, information exchange, assistance and protection for and reintegration of the victims and prosecution of all the offenders involved, including intermediaries;

(c) Consider preventing, within the legal framework and in accordance with national policies, victims of trafficking, in particular women and girls, from being prosecuted for their illegal entry or residence, taking into account that they are victims of exploitation;

(d) Consider setting up or strengthening a national coordinating mechanism, for example, a national rapporteur or an inter-agency body, with the participation of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to encourage the exchange of information and to report on data, root causes, factors and trends in violence against women, in particular trafficking;

(e) Provide protection and support to women and their respective families and develop and strengthen policies to support family security.

71. (a) Consider adopting, where appropriate, national legislation consistent with the Convention on Biological Diversity to protect the knowledge, innovations and practices of women in indigenous and local communities relating to traditional medicines, biodiversity and indigenous technologies;

(b) Adapt environmental and agricultural policies and mechanisms, when necessary, to incorporate a gender perspective, and in cooperation with civil society, support farmers, particularly women farmers and those living in rural areas, with education and training programmes.

72. (a) Adopt policies and implement measures to address, on a prioritized basis, the gender aspects of emerging and continued health challenges, such as malaria, tuberculosis, HIV/AIDS and other diseases having a disproportionate impact on women's health, including those resulting in the highest mortality and morbidity rates;

(b) Ensure that the reduction of maternal morbidity and mortality is a health sector priority and that women have ready access to essential obstetric care, well-equipped and adequately staffed maternal health-care services, skilled attendance at delivery, emergency obstetric care, effective referral and transport to higher levels of care when necessary, post-partum care and family planning in order to, inter alia, promote safe motherhood, and give priority attention to measures to prevent, detect and treat breast, cervical and ovarian cancer and osteoporosis, and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS;

(c) Take measures to meet the unmet needs in good quality family planning services and in contraception, namely regarding the existing gap in services, supplies and use;

(d) Collect and disseminate updated and reliable data on mortality and morbidity of women and conduct further research regarding how social and economic factors affect the health of girls and women of all ages, as well as research about the provision of health-care services to girls and women and the patterns of use of such services and the value of disease prevention and health promotion programmes for women;

(e) Ensure universal and equal access for women and men throughout the lifecycle, to social services related to health care, including education, clean water and safe sanitation, nutrition, food security and health education programmes;

(f) Ensure the provision of safe working conditions for health-care workers;

(g) Adopt, enact, review and revise, where necessary or appropriate, and implement health legislation, policies and programmes, in consultation with women's organizations and other actors of civil society, and allocate the necessary budgetary resources to ensure the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, so that all women have full and equal access to comprehensive, high-quality and affordable health care, information, education and services throughout their life cycle; reflect the new demands for service and care by women and girls as a result of the HIV/AIDS pandemic and new knowledge about women's needs for specific mental and occupation health programmes and for the ageing process; and protect and promote human rights by ensuring that all health services and workers conform to ethical, professional and gender-sensitive standards in the delivery of women's health services, including by establishing or strengthening, as appropriate, regulatory and enforcement mechanisms;

(h) Eliminate discrimination against all women and girls in the access to health information, education and health care and health services;

(i) Reproductive health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being, and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity, in all matters relating to the reproductive system and to its functions and processes. Reproductive health therefore implies that people are able to have a satisfying and safe sex life and that they have the capability to reproduce and the freedom to decide if, when and how often to do so. Implicit in this last condition is the right of men and women to be informed and to have access to safe, effective, affordable and acceptable methods of family planning of their choice, as well as other methods of their choice for regulation of fertility which are not against the law, and the right of access to appropriate health-care services that will enable women to go safely through pregnancy and childbirth and provide couples with the best chance of having a healthy infant. In line with the above definition of reproductive health, reproductive health care is defined as the constellation of methods, techniques and services that contribute to reproductive health and well-being by preventing and solving reproductive health problems. It also includes sexual health, the purpose of which is the enhancement of life and personal relations, and not merely counselling and care related to reproduction and sexually transmitted diseases;

(j) Given the above definition, reproductive rights embrace certain human rights that are already recognized in national laws, international human rights documents and other consensus documents. These rights rest on the recognition of the basic right of all couples and individuals to decide freely and responsibly the number, spacing and timing of their children and to have the information and means to do so, and the right to attain the highest standard of sexual and reproductive health. They also include their right to make decisions concerning reproduction free of discrimination, coercion and violence, as expressed in human rights documents. In the exercise of these rights, they should take into account the needs of their living and future children and their responsibilities towards the community. The promotion of the responsible exercise of these rights for all people should be the fundamental basis for government- and community-supported policies and programmes in the area of reproductive health, including family planning. As part of their commitment, full attention should be given to the promotion of mutually respectful and equitable gender relations and particularly to meeting the educational and service needs of adolescents to enable them to deal in a positive and responsible way with their sexuality. Reproductive health eludes many of the world's people because of such factors as inadequate levels of knowledge about human sexuality and inappropriate or poor-quality reproductive health information and services; the prevalence of high-risk sexual behaviour; discriminatory social practices; negative attitudes towards women and girls; and the limited power many women and girls have over their sexual and reproductive lives. In most countries, adolescents are particularly vulnerable because of their lack of information and access to relevant services. Older women and men have distinct reproductive and sexual health issues which are often inadequately addressed;

(k) The human rights of women include their right to have control over and decide freely and responsibly on matters related to their sexuality, including sexual and reproductive health, free of coercion, discrimination and violence. Equal relationships between women and men in matters of sexual relations and reproduction, including full respect for the integrity of the person, require mutual respect, consent and shared responsibility for sexual behaviour and its consequences;

(l) Design and implement programmes to encourage and enable men to adopt safe and responsible sexual and reproductive behaviour, and to use effectively methods to prevent unwanted pregnancies and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS;

(m) Take all appropriate measures to eliminate harmful, medically unnecessary or coercive medical interventions as well as inappropriate medication and overmedication of women and ensure that all women are properly informed of their options, including likely benefits and potential side effects, by properly trained personnel;

(n) Adopt measures to ensure non-discrimination against and respect for the privacy of those living with HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted infections, including women and young people, so that they are not denied the information needed to prevent further transmission of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases and are able to access treatment and care services without fear of stigmatization, discrimination or violence;

(o) In the light of paragraph 8.25 of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, which states:

"In no case should abortion be promoted as a method of family planning. All Governments and relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations are urged to strengthen their commitment to women's health, to deal with the health impact of unsafe abortion as a major public health concern and to reduce the recourse to abortion through expanded and improved family-planning services. Prevention of unwanted pregnancies must always be given the highest priority and every attempt should be made to eliminate the need for abortion. Women who have unwanted pregnancies should have ready access to reliable information and compassionate counselling. Any measures or changes related to abortion within the health system can only be determined at the national or local level according to the national legislative process. In circumstances where abortion is not against the law, such abortion should be safe. In all cases, women should have access to quality services for the management of complications arising from abortion. Post-abortion counselling, education and family-planning services should be offered promptly, which will also help to avoid repeat abortions."

consider reviewing laws containing punitive measures against women who have undergone illegal abortions;

(p) Promote and improve comprehensive gender-specific tobacco prevention and control strategies for all women, particularly adolescent girls and pregnant women, which would include education, prevention and cessation programmes and services, and the reduction of people's exposure to environmental tobacco smoke, and support the development of the World Health Organization international framework convention on tobacco control;

(g) Promote or improve information programmes and measures including treatment for the elimination of the increasing substance abuse among women and adolescent girls, including information campaigns about the risks to health and other consequences and its impact on families.

73. (a) Mainstream a gender perspective into key macroeconomic and social development policies and national development programmes;

(b) Incorporate a gender perspective into the design, development, adoption and execution of all budgetary processes, as appropriate, in order to promote equitable, effective and appropriate resource allocation and establish adequate budgetary allocations to support gender equality and development programmes that enhance women's empowerment and develop the necessary analytical and methodological tools and mechanisms for monitoring and evaluation;

(c) Increase, as appropriate, and effectively utilize financial and other resources in the social sector, particularly in education and health, to achieve gender equality and women's empowerment as a central strategy for addressing development and poverty eradication;

(d) Strive to reduce the disproportionate number of women living in poverty, in particular rural women, by implementing national poverty eradication programmes with a focus on a gender perspective and the empowerment of women, including short- and long-term goals.

74. (a) Undertake socio-economic policies that promote sustainable development and support and ensure poverty eradication programmes, especially for women, by, inter alia, providing skills training, equal access to and control over resources, finance, credit, including microcredit, information and technology, and equal access to markets to benefit women of all ages, in particular those living in poverty and marginalized women, including rural women, indigenous women and female-headed households;

(b) Create and ensure access to social protection systems, taking into account the specific needs of all women living in poverty, demographic changes and changes in society, to provide safeguards against the uncertainties and changes in conditions of work associated with globalization, and strive to ensure that new, flexible and emerging forms of work are adequately covered by social protection;

(c) Continue to review, modify and implement macroeconomic and social policies and programmes, inter alia, through an analysis from a gender perspective of those related to structural adjustment and external debt problems, in order to ensure women's equal access to resources and universal access to basic social services.

75. Facilitate employment for women through, inter alia, promotion of adequate social protection, simplification of administrative procedures, removal of fiscal obstacles, where appropriate, and other measures, such as access to risk capital, credit schemes, microcredit and other funding, facilitating the establishment of microenterprises and small and medium-sized enterprises.

76. (a) Establish or reinforce existing institutional mechanisms at all levels to work with national machineries to strengthen societal support for gender equality, in cooperation with civil society, particularly women's non-governmental organizations;

(b) Take action at the highest levels for the continued advancement of women, in particular by strengthening national machineries to mainstream the gender perspective to accelerate the empowerment of women in all areas and to ensure commitment to gender equality policies;

(c) Provide national machineries with the necessary human and financial resources, including through exploring innovative funding schemes, so that gender mainstreaming is integrated into all policies, programmes and projects;

(d) Consider establishing effective commissions or other institutions to promote equal opportunities;

(e) Strengthen efforts to implement fully national action plans developed for the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and, when necessary, adjust or develop national plans for the future;

(f) Ensure that the design of all government information policies and strategies is gender-sensitive.

77. (a) Provide national statistical offices with institutional and financial support so that they may collect, compile and disseminate data disaggregated by sex, age and other factors, as appropriate, in formats that are accessible to the public and to policy makers for, inter alia, gender-based analysis, monitoring and impact assessment, and support new work to develop statistics and indicators, especially in areas where information is particularly lacking;

(b) Regularly compile and publish crime statistics, and monitor trends in law enforcement concerning violations of the rights of women and girls to increase awareness in order to develop more effective policies;

(c) Develop national capacity to undertake policy-oriented and gender-related research and impact studies by universities and national research/training institutes to enable gender-specific knowledge-based policy-making.

B. Further actions to be taken at the national level

By Governments, the private sector, non-governmental organizations and other actors of civil society:

78. (a) Encourage the creation of training and legal literacy programmes which build and support the capacities of women's organizations to advocate for women's and girls' human rights and fundamental freedoms;

(b) Encourage collaboration, where appropriate, among Governments, non-governmental organizations, grass-roots organizations and traditional and community leaders for the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms of women and girls, the dignity and worth of the human person and equal rights for women and men;

(c) Encourage cooperation between governmental authorities, parliamentarians and other relevant authorities and women's organizations, including non-governmental organizations, as appropriate, in ensuring that legislation is non-discriminatory;

(d) Provide gender-sensitive training to all actors, including police, prosecutors and the judiciary, in dealing with victims of violence, particularly women and girls, including sexual violence.

79. (a) Adopt a holistic approach to women's physical and mental health throughout the life cycle, take further measures to redesign health information, services and training for health workers in order to make them gender-sensitive, promote gender balance at all levels of the health-care system, and reflect women's perspective and right to privacy, confidentiality, voluntary and informed consent;

(b) Reinforce efforts to ensure universal access to high quality primary health care throughout the life cycle, including sexual and reproductive health care, no later than 2015;

(c) Review and revise national policies, programmes and legislation to implement the key actions for the further implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-first special session, paying particular attention to achieving the specific benchmarks to reduce maternal mortality, to increase the proportion of births assisted by skilled attendants, to provide the widest achievable range of safe and effective family planning and contraceptive methods and to reduce young people's risk of HIV/AIDS;

(d) Strengthen measures to improve the nutritional status of all girls and women, recognizing the effects of severe and moderate malnutrition, the lifelong implications of nutrition and the link between mother and child health, by promoting and enhancing support for programmes to reduce malnutrition, such as school meal programmes, mother-child-nutrition programmes and micronutrient supplementation, giving special attention to bridging the gender gap in nutrition;

(e) Review with the full participation of women and monitor the impact of health-sector reform initiatives on women's health and their enjoyment of human rights, in particular with regard to rural and urban health service delivery to women living in poverty, and ensure that reforms secure full and equal access to available, affordable and high-quality health care and services for all women, taking into account the diverse needs of women;

(f) Design and implement programmes with the full involvement of adolescents, as appropriate, to provide them with education, information and appropriate, specific, user-friendly and accessible services, without discrimination, to address effectively their reproductive and sexual health needs, taking into account their right to privacy, confidentiality, respect and informed consent, and the responsibilities, rights and duties of parents and legal guardians to provide in a manner consistent with the evolving capacities of the child appropriate direction and guidance in the exercise by the child of the rights recognized in the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in conformity with the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and ensuring that in all actions concerning children, the best interests of the child are a primary consideration. These programmes should, inter alia, build adolescent girls' self-esteem and help them take responsibility for their own lives; promote gender equality and responsible sexual behaviour; raise awareness about, prevent and treat sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS, and sexual violence and abuse; and counsel adolescents on avoiding unwanted and early pregnancies;

(g) Design and implement programmes to provide social services and support to pregnant adolescents and adolescent mothers, in particular to enable them to continue and complete their education;

(h) Give particular attention to developing and improving access to improved and new technologies and to safe and affordable drugs and treatments to meet women's health needs, including cardiopulmonary diseases, hypertension, osteoporosis, breast, cervical and ovarian cancer and family planning and contraceptive methods, for both women and men.

80. Develop and use frameworks, guidelines and other practical tools and indicators to accelerate gender mainstreaming, including gender-based research, analytical tools and methodologies, training, case studies, statistics and information.

81. (a) Provide equal opportunities and favourable conditions for women of all ages and backgrounds on equal terms with men by encouraging their entry into politics and their participation at all levels;

(b) Encourage the nomination of more women candidates, inter alia, through political parties, quotas or measurable goals or other appropriate means for election to parliaments and other legislative structures, to increase their share and contribution in the formulation of public policy;

(c) Develop and maintain consultative processes and mechanisms, in partnership with women's organizations, including non-governmental organizations and community groups, to ensure that all women, with particular attention to those who face particular barriers to their participation in public life, are fully involved in and informed about decisions that impact their lives.

82. (a) Promote and protect the rights of women workers and take action to remove structural and legal barriers as well as stereotypical attitudes to gender equality at work, addressing, inter alia, gender bias in recruitment; working conditions; occupational segregation and harassment; discrimination in social protection benefits; women's occupational health and safety; unequal career opportunities and inadequate sharing, by men, of family responsibilities;

(b) Promote programmes to enable women and men to reconcile their work and family responsibilities and to encourage men to share equally with women household and childcare responsibilities;

(c) Develop or strengthen policies and programmes to support the multiple roles of women in contributing to the welfare of the family in its various forms, which acknowledge the social significance of maternity and motherhood, parenting, the role of parents and legal guardians in the upbringing of children and caring for other family members. Such policies and programmes should also promote shared responsibility of parents, women and men and society as a whole in this regard;

(d) Design, implement and promote family friendly policies and services, including affordable, accessible and quality care services for children and other dependants, parental and other leave schemes and campaigns to sensitize public opinion and other relevant actors on equal sharing of employment and family responsibilities between women and men;

(e) Develop policies and programmes to enhance the employability of women and their access to quality jobs, through improving access to formal, non-formal and vocational training, lifelong learning and retraining, long-distance education, including in information and communications technology and entrepreneurial skills, particularly in developing countries, to support women's empowerment in the different stages of their lives;

(f) Take action to increase women's participation and to bring about a balanced representation of women and men in all sectors and occupations in the labour market, inter alia, by encouraging the creation or expansion of institutional networks to support the career development and promotion of women;

(g) Develop and/or strengthen programmes and policies to support women entrepreneurs, including those engaged in new enterprises, through access to information, training, including vocational training, new technologies, networks, credit and financial services;

(h) Initiate positive steps to promote equal pay for equal work or work of equal value and to diminish differentials in incomes between women and men;

(i) Encourage and support the education of girls in science, mathematics, new technologies, including information technologies, and technical subjects, and encourage women, including through career advising, to seek employment in high-growth and high-wage sectors and jobs;

(j) Develop policies and implement programmes, particularly for men and boys, on changing stereotypical attitudes and behaviours concerning gender roles and responsibilities to promote gender equality and positive attitudes and behaviour;

(k) Strengthen gender-awareness campaigns and gender equality training among women and men, girls and boys to eliminate the persistence of harmful stereotypes;

(l) Analyse and respond, as necessary, to the major reasons why men and women may be affected differently by the process of job creation and retrenchment associated with economic transition and structural transformation of the economy, including globalization;

(m) Promote gender-sensitivity and social responsibility of the private sector, inter alia, through the management of work time and dissemination of gender-sensitive information and advocacy campaigns.

83. (a) Strengthen or establish, where appropriate, national collaborative and regular reporting mechanisms, with the participation of non-governmental organizations, especially women's organizations, to monitor progress in the implementation of national policies, programmes and benchmarks for achieving gender equality;

(b) Support the work of non-governmental organizations and community-based organizations in helping disadvantaged women, in particular rural women, in gaining access to financial institutions in establishing businesses and other sustainable means of livelihood;

(c) Take measures to enable all older women to be actively engaged in all aspects of life, as well as to assume a variety of roles in communities, public life and decision-making, and develop and implement policies and programmes to ensure their full enjoyment of human rights and quality of life, as well as to address their needs, with a view to contributing to the realization of a society for all ages;

(d) Design and implement policies and programmes to address fully specific needs of women and girls with disabilities, to ensure their equal access to education at all levels, including technical and vocational training and adequate rehabilitation programmes, health care and services and employment opportunities, to protect and promote their human rights and, where appropriate, to eliminate existing inequalities between women and men with disabilities.

C. Actions to be taken at the international level

By the United Nations system and international and regional organizations, as appropriate:

84. (a) Assist Governments, at their request, in building institutional capacity and developing national action plans or further implementing existing action plans for the implementation of the Platform for Action;

(b) Support non-governmental organizations, especially women's organizations, to build their capacity to advocate for, implement, assess and follow up the Platform for Action;

(c) Allocate sufficient resources to regional and national programmes to implement the Platform for Action in its twelve critical areas of concern;

(d) Assist Governments in countries with economies in transition to further develop and implement plans and programmes aimed at economic and political empowerment of women;

(e) Encourage the Economic and Social Council to request the regional commissions, within their respective mandates and resources, to build up a database to be updated regularly, in which all programmes and projects carried out in their respective regions by agencies or organizations of the United Nations system are listed, and to facilitate their dissemination, as well as the evaluation of their impact on the empowerment of women through the implementation of the Platform for Action.

85. (a) Continue to implement and evaluate and follow up the mandated work of the United Nations agencies, drawing on the full range of expertise available within the United Nations system, as well as agreed conclusions of the Economic and Social Council and other programmes and initiatives, to mainstream a gender perspective into all policies, programmes and planning of the United Nations system, including through the integrated and coordinated follow-up to all major United Nations conferences and summits, as well as to ensure the allocation of sufficient resources and maintenance of gender units and focal points to achieve this end;

(b) Assist countries, upon their request, in developing methods for and compiling statistics on the contributions of women and men to society and the economy, and the socio-economic situation of women and men, in particular in relation to poverty and paid and unpaid work in all sectors;

(c) Support national efforts, particularly in developing countries, for enlarged access to new information technology as part of the efforts to develop collaborative research, training and information dissemination, including through the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System developed by the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, while at the same time supporting traditional methods of information dissemination, research and training;

(d) Ensure that all United Nations personnel and officials at Headquarters and in the field, especially in field operations, receive training in order to mainstream a gender perspective in their work, including gender impact analysis, and ensure appropriate follow-up to such training;

(e) Support the Commission on the Status of Women, within its mandate, in assessing and advancing the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the follow-up thereto;

(f) Assist Governments, upon their request, in incorporating a gender perspective as a dimension of development into national development planning;

(g) Assist States parties, upon their request, in building capacity to implement the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, and in this regard encourage States parties to pay attention to the concluding comments as well as the general recommendations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women.

86. (a) Assist Governments, upon request, in developing gender-sensitive strategies for the delivery of assistance and, where appropriate, responses to humanitarian crises resulting from armed conflict and natural disasters;

(b) Ensure and support the full participation of women at all levels of decision-making and implementation in development activities and peace processes, including conflict prevention and resolution, post-conflict reconstruction, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peace-building, and in this regard, support the involvement of women's organizations, community-based organizations and non-governmental organizations;

(c) Encourage the involvement of women in decision-making at all levels and achieve gender balance in the appointment of women and men, with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, including, as special envoys and special representatives and in pursuing good offices on behalf of the Secretary-General, inter alia, in matters relating to peacekeeping, peace-building and in operational activities, including as resident coordinators;

(d) Provide gender-sensitive training to all actors, as appropriate, in peacekeeping missions in dealing with victims, particularly women and girls, of violence, including sexual violence;

(e) Take further effective measures to remove the obstacles to the realization of the right of peoples to self-determination, in particular peoples living under colonial and foreign occupation, that continue to adversely affect their economic and social development.

87. (a) Support activities aimed at the elimination of all forms of violence against women and girls, including by providing support for the activities of women's networks and organizations within the United Nations system;

(b) Consider launching an international "zero tolerance" campaign on violence against women.

88. Encourage the implementation of measures designed to achieve the goal of 50/50 gender balance in all posts, including at the Professional level and above, in particular at the higher levels in their secretariats, including in peacekeeping missions, peace negotiations and in all activities, and report thereon, as appropriate, and enhance management accountability mechanisms.

89. Take measures, with the full participation of women, to create, at all levels, an enabling environment conducive to the achievement and maintenance of world peace, for democracy and peaceful settlement of disputes, with full respect for the principles of sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of States and non-intervention in matters which are essentially within the jurisdiction of any State, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and international law, as well as the promotion and protection of all human rights, including the right to development, and fundamental freedoms.

D. Actions to be taken at the national and international levels

By Governments, regional and international organizations, including the United Nations system, and international financial institutions and other actors, as appropriate:

90. Take steps with a view to the avoidance of and refrain from any unilateral measure at variance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations that impedes the full achievement of economic and social development by the population of the affected countries, in particular women and children, that jeopardizes their well-being and that creates obstacles to the full enjoyment of their human rights, including the right of everyone to a standard of living adequate for their health and well-being and their right to food, medical care and the necessary social services. Ensure that food and medicine are not used as tools for political pressure.

91. Take urgent and effective measures in accordance with international law with a view to alleviating the negative impact of economic sanctions on women and children.

92. (a) Promote international cooperation to support regional and national efforts in the development and use of gender-related analysis and statistics by, inter alia, providing national statistical offices, upon their request, with institutional and financial support in order to enable them to respond to requests for data disaggregated by sex and age for use by national Governments in the formulation of gender-sensitive statistical indicators for monitoring and policy and programme impact assessments, as well as to undertake regular strategic surveys;

(b) Develop with the full participation of all countries an international consensus on indicators and ways to measure violence against women, and consider establishing a readily accessible database on statistics, legislation, training models, good practices, lessons learned and other resources with regard to all forms of violence against women, including women migrant workers;

(c) In partnership, as appropriate, with relevant institutions, promote, improve, systemize and fund the collection of data disaggregated by sex, age and other appropriate factors, on health and access to health services, including comprehensive information on the impact of HIV/AIDS on women, throughout the life cycle;

(d) Eliminate gender biases in bio-medical, clinical and social research, including by conducting voluntary clinical trials involving women, with due regard for their human rights, and in strict conformity with internationally accepted legal, ethical, medical, safety, and scientific standards, and gather, analyse and make available to appropriate institutions and to end-users gender-specific information about dosage, side effects and effectiveness of drugs, including contraceptives and methods that protect against sexually transmitted infections.

93. (a) Develop and support the capacity of universities, national research and training institutes and other relevant research institutes to undertake gender-related and policy-oriented research in order to inform policy makers and to promote full implementation of the Platform for Action and the follow-up thereto;

(b) Develop a South-South cooperation programme with a view to assisting in the capacity-building of national machineries on women through, inter alia, the sharing of expertise, experiences and knowledge of national machineries on women's empowerment, gender issues and gender mainstreaming methodologies and approaches on the twelve critical areas of concern of the Platform for Action;

(c) Support Governments in their efforts to institute action-oriented programmes and measures to accelerate the full implementation of the Platform for Action, with time-bound targets and/or measurable goals and evaluation methods, including gender impact assessments, with full participation of women for measuring and analysing progress;

(d) Undertake appropriate data collection and research on indigenous women, with their full participation, in order to foster accessible, culturally and linguistically appropriate policies, programmes and services;

(e) Continue research on all current trends that may be creating new gender disparities in order to provide a basis for policy action.

94. (a) Take measures to develop and implement gender-sensitive programmes aimed at stimulating women's entrepreneurship and private initiative, and assist women-owned business in participating in and benefiting from, inter alia, international trade, technological innovation and investment;

(b) Respect, promote and realize the principles contained in the ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work and its Follow-up, and strongly consider ratification and full implementation of International Labour Organization conventions which are particularly relevant to ensuring women's rights at work;

(c) Encourage the strengthening of existing and emerging microcredit institutions and their capacity, including through the support of international financial institutions, so that credit and related services for self-employment and income-generating activities may be made available to an increasing number of people living in poverty, in particular women, and to further develop, where appropriate, other microfinance instruments;

(d) Reaffirm commitment to gender-sensitive development and support women's role in sustainable and ecologically sound consumption and production patterns and approaches to natural resource management;

(e) Adopt measures to ensure that the work of rural women, who continue to play a vital role in providing food security and nutrition and are engaged in agricultural production and enterprises related to farming, fishing and resource management and home-based work, especially in the informal sector, is recognized and valued in order to enhance their economic security, their access to and control over resources and credit schemes, services and benefits, and their empowerment.

95. (a) Encourage and implement curriculum changes in training for public officials to make them fully gender-sensitive;

(b) Strengthen and promote programmes to support the participation of young women in youth organizations and encourage dialogue among youth between and among developed and developing countries;

(c) Support national efforts to promote formal and non-formal education and mentoring programmes for women and girls in order to enable them to acquire knowledge, develop self-esteem and skills in leadership, advocacy and conflict resolution;

(d) Undertake comprehensive actions to provide skills training for women and girls at all levels, in order to eradicate poverty, in particular the feminization of poverty, through national and international efforts;

(e) With the full voluntary participation of indigenous women, develop and implement educational and training programmes that respect their history, culture, spirituality, languages and aspirations and ensure their access to all levels of formal and non-formal education, including higher education;

(f) Continue to support and strengthen national, regional and international adult literacy programmes with international cooperation in order to achieve a 50 per cent improvement in the levels of adult literacy by 2015, especially for women, and equitable access to basic and continuing education for all adults;

(g) Continue to examine the decline in enrolment rates and the increase in the drop-out rates of girls and boys at the primary and secondary education levels in some countries, and, with international cooperation, design appropriate national programmes to eliminate the root causes and support lifelong learning for women and girls, with a view to ensuring achievement of relevant international targets on education set by the relevant international conferences;

(h) Ensure equal opportunities for women and girls in cultural, recreational and sports activities, as well as in participation in athletics and physical activities at the national, regional and international levels, such as access, training, competition, remuneration and prizes;

(i) Continue to design efforts for the promotion of respect for cultural diversity and dialogue among and within civilizations in a manner which contributes to the implementation of the Platform for Action, which aims at the empowerment of women and the full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all women, and in a manner which ensures that gender equality and the full enjoyment of all human rights by women are not undermined;

(j) Apply and support positive measures to give all women, particularly indigenous women, equal access to capacity-building and training programmes to enhance their participation in decision-making in all fields and at all levels.

96. (a) Increase cooperation, policy responses, effective implementation of national legislation and other protective and preventive measures aimed at the elimination of violence against women and girls, especially all forms of commercial sexual exploitation, as well as economic exploitation, including trafficking in women and children, female infanticide, crimes committed in the name of honour, crimes committed in the name of passion, racially motivated crimes, abduction and sale of children, dowry-related violence and deaths, acid attacks and harmful traditional or customary practices, such as female genital mutilation, early and forced marriages;

(b) Increase awareness and knowledge of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which affirms that rape, sexual slavery, enforced prostitution, forced pregnancy, enforced sterilization and other forms of sexual violence constitute war crimes and, in defined circumstances, crimes against humanity, with the aim of preventing such crimes from occurring, and take measures to support the prosecution of all persons responsible for such crimes and provide avenues for redress to victims; also increase awareness of the extent to which such crimes are used as a weapon of war;

(c) Provide support to non-governmental organizations, in collaboration with the United Nations system, inter alia, through regional and international co-operation, including women's organizations and community groups, in addressing all forms of violence against women and girls, including for programmes to combat race and ethnic-based violence against women and girls;

(d) Encourage and support public campaigns, as appropriate, to enhance public awareness of the unacceptability and social costs of violence against women, and undertake prevention activities to promote healthy and balanced relationships based on gender equality.

97. (a) Intensify cooperation between States of origin, transit and destination to prevent, suppress and punish trafficking in persons, especially women and children;

(b) Support the ongoing negotiations on a draft protocol to prevent, suppress and punish trafficking in persons, especially women and children, to supplement the draft United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

(c) As appropriate, pursue and support national, regional and international strategies to reduce the risk to women and girls, including those who are refugees and displaced persons, as well as women migrant workers, of becoming victims of trafficking; strengthen national legislation by further defining the crime of trafficking in all its elements and by reinforcing the punishment accordingly; enact social and economic policies and programmes, as well as informational and awareness-raising initiatives, to prevent and combat trafficking in persons, especially women and children; prosecute perpetrators of trafficking; provide measures to support, assist and protect trafficked persons in their countries of origin and destination; and facilitate their return to and support their reintegration into their countries of origin.

98. (a) Improve knowledge and awareness of the remedies available for violations of women's human rights;

(b) Promote and protect the human rights of all migrant women and implement policies to address the specific needs of documented migrant women and, where necessary, tackle the existing inequalities between men and women migrants to ensure gender equality;

(c) Promote respect for the right of women and men to the freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

Recognize the central role that religion, spirituality and belief play in the lives of millions of women and men;

(d) Encourage, through the media and other means, a high awareness of the harmful effects of certain traditional or customary practices affecting the health of women, some of which increase their vulnerability to HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted infections, and intensify efforts to eliminate such practices;

(e) Take necessary measures to protect individuals, groups and organs of society engaged in promoting and protecting women's human rights;

(f) Encourage States parties to continue to include a gender perspective in their reports to the treaty bodies; also encourage these bodies to continue to take into account a gender perspective in the implementation of their mandates, taking into account the need to avoid unnecessary duplication and overlapping of their work; and further encourage human rights mechanisms to continue to take into account a gender perspective in their work;

(g) Support innovative programmes to empower older women to increase their contribution to and benefit from development and efforts to combat poverty.

99. (a) Promote comprehensive human rights education programmes, inter alia, in cooperation, where appropriate, with education and human rights institutions, the relevant actors of civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations and the media networks, to ensure widespread dissemination of information on human rights instruments, in particular those concerning the human rights of women and girls;

(b) Take measures through, inter alia, supporting and strengthening existing mechanisms entrusted with prosecuting perpetrators of violations of the human rights of women, to eliminate impunity;

(c) Take measures to eliminate violations of international law and the Charter of the United Nations. Many of these violations have a negative impact on the promotion and protection of the human rights of women;

(d) Address the root causes of armed conflict in a comprehensive and durable manner, as well as the differences in the impact of armed conflict on women and men, and take them into account in relevant policies and programmes in order to, inter alia, enhance the protection of civilians, particularly women and children;

(e) Ensure the release of hostages, particularly women and children, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflict;

(f) Develop and support policies and programmes for the protection of children, especially girls, in hostilities, in order to prohibit their forced recruitment and use by all actors and to promote and/or strengthen mechanisms for their rehabilitation and reintegration, taking into account the specific experiences and needs of girls;

(g) Improve and strengthen the capacity of women affected by situations of armed conflict, including women refugees and displaced women, by, inter alia, involving them in the design and management of humanitarian activities so that they benefit from these activities on an equal basis with men;

(h) Invite the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, other relevant United Nations agencies, within their respective mandates, and other relevant humanitarian organizations as well as

Governments to continue to provide adequate support to countries hosting large numbers of refugees and those with displaced persons, in their efforts to provide protection and assistance, paying particular attention to the needs of refugees and other displaced women and children;

(i) Seek to ensure the full and equal participation of women in the promotion of peace, in particular through the full implementation of the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace;

(j) Provide support to and empower women who play an important role within their families as stabilizing factors in conflict and post-conflict situations;

(k) Strengthen efforts towards general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control, based on the priorities established by the United Nations in the field of disarmament, so that released resources could be used for, inter alia, social and economic programmes which benefit women and girls;

(l) Explore new ways of generating new public and private financial resources, inter alia, through the appropriate reduction of excessive military expenditures and the arms trade and investment for arms production and acquisition, including global military expenditures, taking into consideration national security requirements, so as to permit the possible allocation of additional funds for social and economic development, inter alia, for the advancement of women;

(m) Take measures to ensure the protection of refugees, especially women and girls, and their access to and the provision of gender-sensitive appropriate basic social services, including education and health.

100. (a) Cooperate and work with private sector partners and media networks at the national and international levels to promote equal access for women and men as producers and consumers, particularly in the area of information and communications technologies, including through encouraging the media and the information industry consistent with freedom of expression to adopt, or develop further codes of conduct, professional guidelines and other self-regulatory guidelines to remove gender stereotypes and promote balanced portrayals of women and men;

(b) Develop programmes that support women's ability to create, access and promote networking, in particular through the use of new information and communications technology, including through the establishment and support of programmes to build the capacity of women's non-governmental organizations in this regard;

(c) Capitalize on the new information technologies, including the Internet, to improve the global sharing of information, research, strengths, lessons learned from women's experiences, including "Herstories" related to achieving gender equality, development and peace, and study other roles that these technologies can play towards that goal.

101. (a) Take effective measures to address the challenges of globalization, including through the enhanced and effective participation of developing countries in the international economic policy decision-making process, in order to, inter alia, guarantee the equal participation of women, in particular those from developing countries, in the process of macroeconomic decision-making;

(b) Take measures, with the full and effective participation of women, to ensure new approaches to international development cooperation, based on stability, growth and equity, with the enhanced and effective participation and the integration of developing countries in the globalizing world economy, geared towards poverty eradication and the reduction of gender-based inequality within the overall framework of achieving people-centred sustainable development;

(c) Design and strengthen poverty eradication strategies, with the full and effective participation of women, that reduce the feminization of poverty and enhance the capacity of women and empower them to meet the negative social and economic impacts of globalization;

(d) Intensify efforts to implement poverty eradication programmes and evaluate, with the participation of women, the extent to which these programmes have an impact on the empowerment of women living in poverty, in terms of access to quality training and education as well as physical and mental health care, employment, basic social services, inheritance and access to and control over land, housing, income, microcredit and other financial instruments and services, and introduce improvements to such programmes in the light of the above assessment;

(e) Recognizing the mutually reinforcing links between gender equality and poverty eradication, elaborate and implement, where appropriate, in consultation with civil society, comprehensive gender-sensitive poverty eradication strategies addressing social, structural and macroeconomic issues;

(f) Encourage the establishment, in partnership with private financial institutions, where appropriate, of "lending windows" and other accessible financial services with simplified procedures that are specifically designed to meet the savings, credit and insurance needs of all women;

(g) Undertake comprehensive actions to provide and support quality skills training for women and girls at all levels, on the basis of strategies developed with their full and effective participation, to achieve agreed targets to eradicate poverty, in particular the feminization of poverty, through national, regional and international efforts. National efforts need to be complemented by intensified regional and international cooperation in order to tackle the risks, overcome the challenges and ensure that opportunities created by globalization benefit women, particularly in developing countries;

(h) Establish, with the full and effective participation of women and in consultation with civil society, particularly non-governmental organizations, in a timely manner, social development funds, where appropriate, to alleviate the negative effects on women associated with structural adjustment programmes and trade liberalization and the disproportionate burden borne by women living in poverty;

(i) Identify and implement development-oriented and durable solutions which integrate a gender perspective to external debt and debt-servicing problems of developing countries, including least developed countries, inter alia, through debt relief, including the option of official development assistance debt cancellation, in order to help them to finance programmes and projects targeted at development, including the advancement of women;

(j) Support the Cologne initiative for the reduction of debt, particularly the speedy implementation of the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Debt Initiative; ensure the provision of adequate funds for its implementation and implement the provision that funds saved should be used to support anti-poverty programmes that address gender dimensions;

(k) Promote and accelerate the implementation of the 20/20 initiative, which integrates a gender perspective to fully benefit all, particularly women and girls;

(l) Call for continued international cooperation, including the reaffirmation to strive to fulfil the yet to be attained internationally agreed target of 0.7 per cent of the gross national product of developed countries for overall official development assistance as soon as possible, thereby increasing the flow of resources for gender equality, development and peace;

(m) Facilitate the transfer to developing countries and countries with economies in transition of appropriate technology, particularly new and modern technology, and encourage efforts by the international community to eliminate restrictions on such transfers, as an effective means of complementing national efforts for further acceleration in achieving the goals of gender equality, development and peace;

(n) Recommend that the Preparatory Committee for the Millennium Assembly make an effort, within the context of gender mainstreaming in the United Nations system, to integrate a gender perspective in all activities and documents related to the Millennium Assembly and Summit, including in the consideration of poverty eradication;

(o) Create an enabling environment and design and implement policies that promote and protect the enjoyment of all human rights—civil, cultural, economic, political and social rights, including the right to development—and fundamental freedoms, as part of the efforts to achieve gender equality, development and peace.

102. (a) Create and strengthen an enabling environment, in accordance with national laws, to support the capacity of women's non-governmental organizations to mobilize resources to ensure the sustainability of their development activities;

(b) Encourage the establishment and strengthening of multi-stakeholder partnerships/cooperation at all levels among international and intergovernmental organizations, with relevant actors of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, the private sector and trade unions, and women's organizations and other non-governmental organizations, communications and media systems in support of the goals of the Fourth World Conference on Women;

(c) Encourage partnerships and cooperation among Governments, international organizations, in particular international financial institutions, and multilateral organizations, private sector institutions and civil society, including non-governmental organizations, especially women's and community-based organizations, to support poverty eradication initiatives focused on women and girls;

(d) Recognize the crucial role of and support women and women's non-governmental organizations and community-based organizations in the implementation of Agenda 21, by integrating a gender perspective in the formulation, design and implementation of sustainable environmental and resource management mechanisms, programmes and infrastructure.

103. (a) Promote programmes for healthy active ageing that stress the independence, equality, participation and security of older women and undertake gender-specific research and programmes to address their needs;

(b) As a matter of priority, especially in those countries most affected, and in partnership with non-governmental organizations, wherever possible, intensify education, services and community-based mobilization strategies to protect women of all ages from HIV and other sexually transmitted infections, including through the development of safe, affordable, effective and easily accessible female-controlled methods, including such methods as microbicides and female condoms that protect against sexually transmitted infections and HIV/AIDS; voluntary and confidential HIV testing and counselling; the promotion of responsible sexual behaviour, including abstinence and condom use; and the development of vaccines, simple low-cost diagnosis and single dose treatments for sexually transmitted infections;

(c) Provide access to adequate and affordable treatment, monitoring and care for all people, especially women and girls, infected with sexually transmitted diseases or living with life-threatening diseases, including HIV/AIDS and associated opportunistic infections, such as tuberculosis. Provide other services, including adequate housing and social protection, including during pregnancy and breastfeeding; assist boys and girls orphaned as a result of the HIV/AIDS pandemic; and provide gender-sensitive support systems for women and other family members who are involved in caring for persons affected by serious health conditions, including HIV/AIDS;

(d) Take effective and expeditious measures to mobilize international and national public opinion concerning the effects of different dimensions of the world drug problem on women and girls and ensure that appropriate resources are provided to this end.

104. Encourage partnerships between Governments and non-governmental organizations in the implementation of commitments made at the Fourth World Conference on Women and at other United Nations world conferences and summits in order to promote gender equality, development and peace in the twenty-first century.

Implementation of Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action

Reports of Secretary-General. During 2000, the Secretary-General reported to each of the three intergovernmental bodies responsible for overseeing follow-up to the Fourth World Conference and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action—the Commission on the Status of Women, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly. Each of the annual reports provided information on progress made since the previous year that was most pertinent to the respective intergovernmental body, in order to facilitate its decision-making process.

The Commission on the Status of Women (New York, 28 February-2 March) had before it a report of the Secretary-General on follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action [E/CN.6/2000/2], which emphasized efforts undertaken by the Secretariat in support of mainstreaming a gender perspective and follow-up activities, including those undertaken by NGOs, since his previous report [YUN 1999, p. 1078]. In addition, the report covered women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS, as well as the situation of Palestinian women and the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned (see below). An addendum [E/CN.6/2000/2/Add.1] contained a joint work plan for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) and the UN Division for the Advancement of Women (DAW).

The Secretary-General's June report to the Economic and Social Council [E/2000/77] focused on facilitating the Council's coordination function, particularly with regard to developments related to implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action in intergovernmental forums reporting to the Council, in the regional commissions and in the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality. By decision 2000/289 of 28 July, the Council took note of the report.

On 11 August [A/55/293], the Secretary-General provided the General Assembly with updated information on implementation activities undertaken by intergovernmental bodies, organizations of the UN system and NGOs. He pointed out that the main priority of the UN system in that connection was the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into programmes and policies, and there had been increased cooperation within the system and with other international organizations and NGOs regarding gender programmes.

In a 30 August report [A/55/341], the Secretary-General, in response to Assembly resolution 54/141 [YUN 1999, p. 1078], provided an overview of the provisions and recommendations for action contained in the political declaration and outcome document adopted at the twenty-third special session. He focused on areas where the Beijing Platform for Action had been strengthened and reinforced; implementation measures for Governments, the UN system, NGOs and others; and recommendations that had immediate implications for action at the international level, including those requiring consideration by the Assembly at its fifty-fifth session.

Inter-agency action. The Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC), at its fifth session (New York, 23-25 February) [ACC/2000/3], urged ACC to select, on a regular basis, gender-specific topics for consideration and to continue to highlight gender equality issues in its discussions. The Committee decided to expand its good practices initiative (in implementing the Beijing Platform for Action and gender mainstreaming), in particular to conduct a content analysis and to create an analytic framework to provide summaries of the work displayed on the WomenWatch web site, with the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) as task managers. The Committee noted that the gender focal point study prepared by the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) had revealed discrepancies between entities' stated gender equality policies and goals and the institutional framework, technical expertise, support and human and financial resources allocated for their achievement. The Committee emphasized that the designation of gender focal points throughout the UN system had resulted in increased attention to gender equality issues and improved gender mainstreaming, despite some problems concerning seniority, resources and the multiple tasks assigned to the focal points.

Stressing that the WomenWatch web site was extremely valuable, the Committee welcomed its continuation beyond the General Assembly's special session, possibly with the inclusion of the database on gender training materials. The Committee also discussed gender mainstreaming in programme budgets; tools and indicators for gender impact analysis, monitoring and evaluation; mainstreaming a gender perspective in common country assessments (CCAs) and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF); and preparation of the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 2002-2005, among other issues.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/55/596], adopted resolution 55/71 without vote [agenda item 108].

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/203 of 22 December 1995, 51/69 of 12 December 1996, 52/100 of 12 Decem- ber 1997, 53/120 of 9 December 1998 and 54/141 of 17 December 1999,

Welcoming the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", namely the "Political declaration" and "Further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action",

Stressing the importance of the outcome of the twenty-third special session, which has assessed the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, identified obstacles and challenges thereto and proposed actions and initiatives to overcome them and achieve full and accelerated implementation,

Deeply convinced that the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session are important contributions to the advancement of women worldwide in the achievement of gender equality and must be translated into effective action by all States, the United Nations system and other organizations concerned, as well as by non-governmental organizations,

Stressing the importance of strong, sustained political will and commitment at the national, regional and international levels in order to achieve full and accelerated implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session,

Recognizing that the responsibility for the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session rests primarily at the national level and that strengthened efforts are necessary in this respect, and reiterating that enhanced international cooperation is essential for the effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session,

1. Reaffirms the commitments contained in the "Political declaration" and "Further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action", adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century";

2. Takes note with appreciation of the reports of the Secretary-General on the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women and of the special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century";

3. Calls upon Governments, the relevant entities of the United Nations system within their respective mandates and all other relevant actors of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to take effective action to achieve full and effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, as elaborated in the above-mentioned documents;

4. Calls upon Governments, in collaboration with relevant actors of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to facilitate the translation and dissemination of the outcome of the twenty-third special session, as broadly and as accessibly as possible;

5. Strongly encourages Governments to continue to support the role and contribution of civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations and women's organizations, in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

6. Reaffirms further its decision that the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on the Status of Women, in accordance with their respective mandates and with General Assembly resolution 48/162 of 20 December 1993 and other relevant resolutions, constitute a three-tiered intergovernmental mechanism that plays the primary role in the overall policy-making and follow-up and in coordinating the implementation and monitoring of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

7. Invites the Economic and Social Council to continue to promote a coordinated and integrated follow-up to and implementation of the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits and their reviews, and requests the Council to intensify further its efforts to ensure that gender mainstreaming is an integral part of all its activities concerning integrated and coordinated follow-up to United Nations conferences, building upon agreed conclusions 1997/2 adopted by the Council on 18 July 1997;

8. Also invites the Council to continue to further policy coordination and inter-agency cooperation towards the achievement of the objectives of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, including by considering the dedication of specific segments of the Council to the advancement of women and implementation of the above-mentioned documents and by mainstreaming a gender perspective in all its work;

9. Encourages the Council to request the regional commissions, within their respective mandates and resources, to build up a database, to be updated regularly, in which all programmes and projects carried out in their respective regions by agencies or organizations of the United Nations system are listed, and to facilitate their dissemination, as well as the evaluation of their impact on the empowerment of women through the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action;

10. Reaffirms that the Commission on the Status of Women has a central role in assisting the Council in monitoring, assessing progress made in and accelerating, within the United Nations system, the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, and in advising the Council thereon;

11. Notes that, at its forty-fifth session, in 2001, the Commission will develop a new multi-year programme of work, and in this respect requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission with recommendations for the effective implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, including by enhancing the effectiveness of its work and its catalytic role in mainstreaming a gender perspective in United Nations activities;

12. Recognizes the importance attached to the regional and subregional monitoring of the global and regional platforms for action and of the implementation of the outcome of the twenty-third special session by regional commissions and other regional or sub-regional structures, within their mandates, in consultation with Governments, and calls for the promotion of further cooperation in that respect among Governments and, where appropriate, national machineries of the same region;

13. Reaffirms that, in order to implement the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, adequate mobilization of resources at the national and international levels, as well as new and additional resources for the developing countries, in particular those in Africa and the least developed countries, from all available funding mechanisms, including multilateral, bilateral and private sources, will also be required;

14. Recognizes that the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session in the countries with economies in transition requires continued national efforts and international cooperation and assistance;

15. Reaffirms that in order to implement the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session a reformulation of policies and reallocation of resources may be needed, but that some policy changes may not necessarily have financial implications;

16. Also reaffirms that in order to ensure the effective implementation of the strategic objectives of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, the United Nations system should promote an active and visible policy of mainstreaming a gender perspective, including through the work of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women and through the maintenance of gender units and focal points;

17. Further reaffirms that United Nations bodies that focus on gender issues, such as the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, have an important role to play in the implementation of the objectives of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly on the full range of tasks of the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, including those that might arise from the implementation of the outcome of the twenty-third special session and from the entry into force of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, with a view to ensuring that the Division can effectively fulfil its tasks;

19. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all United Nations personnel and officials at Headquarters and in the field, especially in field operations, receive training so that they mainstream a gender perspective in their work, including gender impact analysis, and to ensure appropriate follow-up to such training;

20. Requests all bodies that deal with programme and budgetary matters, including the Committee for Programme and Coordination, to ensure that all programmes, medium-term plans and programme budgets visibly mainstream a gender perspective;

21. Invites States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women to include information on measures taken to implement the outcome of the twenty-third special session, as well as the Beijing Platform for Action, in their reports to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women under article 18 of the Convention;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to disseminate the outcome of the twenty-third special session as widely as possible in all official languages of the United Nations;

23. Also requests the Secretary-General to report annually to the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on the Status of Women on follow-up to and progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

24. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session an item entitled "Implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women and of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled 'Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century'".

Critical areas of concern

Violence against women

In February, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Commission on the Status of Women a UNIFEM report on its activities during the previous year to eliminate violence against women [E/CN.6/2000/6]. The Fund's inter-agency regional campaigns had raised public awareness at the community, national and regional levels on the issue of violence against women as a violation of human rights. New pilot initiatives addressing gender-based violence included establishment of zero-tolerance zones, community pacts to end violence, the appointment of regional rapporteurs on the issue, new forms of cooperation between police and women's crisis centres, municipality contests to showcase best strategies to end violence against women and innovative media initiatives.

Since beginning operations in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1193], the Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence against Women had received over $4.3 million in contributions and funded 88 projects around the world, including 16 new projects selected for funding in 1999.

A UNIFEM global videoconference, broadcast to audiences in 20 countries on Women's Day (8 March) in 1999, highlighted successful strategies for addressing various forms of violence against women in different regions of the world, focusing in particular on domestic violence, including dowry-related violence and rape within marriage; threats to women's bodily integrity, such as female genital mutilation; violence against women in conflict situations; and economic violence, including trafficking in women and girls. More than 2,300 individuals and groups had taken part in a virtual working group, launched on the Internet during preparations for the videoconference to identify successful strategies around the world for combating violence against women and girls.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/595 & Corr.1,2], adopted resolution 55/68 without vote [agenda item 107].

Elimination of all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century"

The General Assembly,

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, which, inter alia, calls for international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Recalling also the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Declaration on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, the United Nations Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted on 25 June 1993 by the World Conference on Human Rights, and the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Reaffirming the obligations of all States to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms, as enunciated in the Charter, and reaffirming also the obligations of States parties under international human rights instruments, in particular the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families,

Reaffirming also the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Reaffirming further the call for the elimination of violence against women and girls, especially all forms of commercial sexual exploitation as well as economic exploitation, including trafficking in women and children, female infanticide, crimes committed in the name of honour, crimes committed in the name of passion, racially motivated crimes, the abduction and sale of children, dowry-related violence and deaths, acid attacks and harmful traditional or customary practices, such as female genital mutilation and early and forced marriages,

Stressing the importance of the empowerment of women as a tool to eliminate all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session,

1. Expresses deep concern at the persistence of various forms of violence and crimes against women in all parts of the world, especially all forms of commercial sexual exploitation as well as economic exploitation, including trafficking in women and children, female infanticide, crimes committed in the name of honour, crimes committed in the name of passion, racially motivated crimes, the abduction and sale of children, dowry-related violence and deaths, acid attacks and harmful traditional or customary practices, such as female genital mutilation and early and forced marriages;

2. Stresses that all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, are obstacles to the advancement and empowerment of women, and reaffirms that violence against women both violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment by women of their human rights and fundamental freedoms;

3. Also stresses the need to treat all forms of violence against women and girls of all ages as a criminal offence punishable by law, including violence based on all forms of discrimination;

4. Reaffirms that there is increased awareness of and commitment to preventing and combating violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, and in this context welcomes various legal, administrative and other measures taken by Governments for their prevention and elimination, and calls for high priority to be attached to the further strengthening of such measures;

5. Urges Member States to strengthen awareness and preventive measures for the elimination of all forms of violence against women, whether occurring in public or private life, by encouraging and supporting public campaigns to enhance awareness about the unacceptability and the social costs of violence against women, inter alia, through educational and media campaigns in cooperation with educators, community leaders and the electronic and print media;

6. Expresses its appreciation of the work being done by non-governmental organizations, including women's organizations, community-based organizations and individuals, in raising awareness about the economic, social and psychological costs of all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, and in this regard encourages Governments to continue their support to the work of the non-governmental organizations in addressing this issue;

7. Calls upon States to fulfil their obligations under the relevant human rights instruments and implement the Beijing Platform for Action as well as the outcome document of the twenty-third special session;

8. Encourages States parties to include in their reports to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and other relevant treaty bodies, wherever possible, sex-disaggregated data and information on measures taken or initiated to eliminate all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session;

9. Urges relevant entities of the United Nations system, within their mandates, to assist countries, upon their request, in their efforts aimed at preventing and eliminating all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, and in this regard expresses its appreciation of the work being done by the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund and the United Nations Development Fund for Women and other relevant funds and programmes aimed at preventing and eliminating violence against women and girls;

10. Invites the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences, to further devote equal attention to all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, in her work and her reports, within her mandate, to the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on this matter to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session.

Honour crimes

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/595 & Corr.1,2], adopted resolution 55/66 by a recorded vote of 146 to 1, with 26 abstentions [agenda item 107].

Working towards the elimination of crimes against women committed in the name of honour

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the obligation of all States to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms, as stated in the Charter of the United Nations, and reaffirming also their obligations under human rights instruments, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Bearing in mind the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, as well as the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, and recalling the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Bearing in mind also that crimes against women committed in the name of honour are a human rights issue and that States have an obligation to exercise due diligence to prevent, investigate and punish the perpetrators of such crimes and to provide protection to the victims, and that the failure to do so constitutes a human rights violation,

Aware that inadequate understanding of the root causes of all violence against women, including crimes committed in the name of honour, and inadequate data on such violence hinder informed policy analysis, at both the domestic and the international levels, and efforts to eliminate such violence,

Noting general recommendation 19 concerning violence against women adopted by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women,

Noting also relevant paragraphs in recent reports of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences, the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the independence of judges and lawyers, and of the Special Rapporteur of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights on traditional practices affecting the health of women and the girl child,

Bearing in mind relevant paragraphs in Commission on Human Rights resolutions 2000/31 and 2000/45, of 20 April 2000, as well as in resolution 2000/10 of 17 August 2000 of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights,

Emphasizing that the elimination of crimes against women committed in the name of honour requires greater efforts and commitment from Governments and the international community, inter alia, through international cooperation efforts, and civil society, including non-governmental and community organizations, and that fundamental changes in societal attitude are required, and underlining the importance of the empowerment of women as a tool,

1. Expresses its concern at the fact that women continue to be victims of various forms of violence, including those that are identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", and at the continuing occurrence in all regions of the world of such violence, including crimes against women committed in the name of honour, which take many different forms, and also expresses its concern at the fact that some perpetrators assume that they have some justification for committing such crimes;

2. Welcomes the activities of States aimed at the elimination of crimes against women committed in the name of honour, including the adoption of amendments to relevant national laws relating to such crimes, the effective implementation of such laws and national campaigns, all of which have already led to a decrease in the incidence of these crimes in some countries;

3. Also welcomes the efforts, such as concrete projects, undertaken by United Nations bodies, programmes and organizations, including the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund and the United Nations Development Fund for Women, to address the issue of crimes against women committed in the name of honour, and encourages them to coordinate their efforts, and further welcomes the work carried out by civil society, including non-governmental organizations, such as women's organizations, grass-roots movements and individuals, in raising awareness of such crimes and their harmful effects;

4. Calls upon all States:

(a) To implement their relevant obligations under international human rights law and to implement specific international commitments, inter alia, under the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly;

(b) To intensify efforts to prevent and eliminate crimes against women committed in the name of honour, which take many different forms, by using legislative, educational, social and other measures, including the dissemination of information, and to involve, among others, public opinion leaders, educators, religious leaders, chiefs, traditional leaders and the media in awareness-raising campaigns;

(c) To encourage, support and implement measures and programmes aimed at increasing the knowledge and the understanding of the causes and consequences of crimes against women committed in the name of honour, among those responsible for enforcing the law and implementing policies, such as police personnel, judicial workers and health personnel;

(d) To establish, strengthen or facilitate, where possible, support services to respond to the needs of actual and potential victims by, inter alia, providing for them the appropriate protection, safe shelter, counselling, legal aid, rehabilitation and reintegration into society;

(e) To create, strengthen or facilitate institutional mechanisms so that victims and others can report such crimes in a safe and confidential environment, and encourages States to gather and disseminate statistical information on the occurrence of such crimes;

5. Invites the international community, including United Nations bodies, programmes and organizations, inter alia, through the technical assistance and advisory services programmes of the United Nations Centre for International Crime Prevention, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the United Nations Development Fund for Women, to support the efforts of all countries, at their request, aimed at strengthening institutional capacity for preventing crimes against women committed in the name of honour and at addressing their root causes;

6. Encourages the relevant human rights treaty bodies to continue to address this issue, where appropriate;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session a report on the subject of the present resolution, including on initiatives taken by States to work towards the elimination of the crimes in question.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 55/66:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras,

Women migrant workers

In April, the Commission on Human Rights reviewed a follow-up report of the Secretary-General on violence against women migrant workers [E/CN.4/2000/76]. Summarizing measures taken by States, UN bodies, specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations to address the issue, the Secretary-General concluded that more information was needed in order to identify concrete strategies (see also p. 711).

Women and children in armed conflict

In a report to the Commission on the Status of Women on follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action [E/CN.6/2000/2], the Secretary-General summarized replies received from six Governments and six entities of the UN system in response to his request for information on the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflicts and imprisoned.

On 2 March [E/2000/27 (res. 44/1)], the Commission condemned violent acts in contravention of international humanitarian law against civilian women and children in areas of armed conflict and called for the immediate release of those imprisoned. All parties to armed conflicts were urged to respect the norms of international humanitarian law and to provide unimpeded access to humanitarian assistance for women and children. The Commission asked the Secretary-General and relevant international organizations to facilitate the release of imprisoned women and children. The Secretary-General was also asked to submit a report to the Commission in 2001.

Women, peace and security

On 8 March—International Women's Day—the Security Council President, in a statement to the press [SC/6816], said that the Council recognized that women and girls were particularly affected by the consequences of armed conflict and that women constituted the majority of the world's refugees and internally displaced persons. Also, although women had begun to play an important role in conflict resolution, peacekeeping and peace-building, they were still underrepresented in decision-making with regard to conflict. The statement called on all concerned to refrain from human rights abuses in conflict situations and welcomed the inclusion of all forms of sexual violence as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209]. It stressed the need for protection, assistance and training to refugee and displaced women and the importance of promoting gender mainstreaming in all policies and programmes while addressing conflicts.

Namibia, in a 14 July letter [A/55/138-S/2000/693], transmitted to the Secretary-General the Windhoek Declaration and the Namibia Plan of Action on Mainstreaming a Gender Perspective in Multidimensional Peace Support Operations, adopted at a seminar organized by the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women (Windhoek, 29-31 May). Those documents called for enhanced participation of women in peace support operations.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

The issue of women and peace and security was considered by the Security Council on 24 and 25 October [meeting 4208]. On 31 October [meeting 4213], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1325(2000). The draft [S/2000/1044] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1261 (1999) of 25 August 1999, 1265 (1999) of 17 September 1999, 1296 (2000) of 19 April 2000 and 1314 (2000) of 11 August 2000, as well as relevant statements of its President, and recalling also the statement of its President to the press on the occasion of the United Nations Day for Women's Rights and International Peace (International Women's Day) of 8 March 2000,

Recalling also the commitments of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action as well as those contained in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", in particular those concerning women and armed conflict,

Bearing in mind the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the primary responsibility of the Security Council under the Charter for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Expressing concern that civilians, particularly women and children, account for the vast majority of those adversely affected by armed conflict, including as refugees and internally displaced persons, and are targeted increasingly by combatants and armed elements, and recognizing the consequent impact this has on durable peace and reconciliation,

Reaffirming the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peace-building, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and full involvement in all efforts for the maintenance and promotion of peace and security, and the need to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution,

Reaffirming also the need to implement fully international humanitarian and human rights law that protects the rights of women and girls during and after conflicts,

Emphasizing the need for all parties to ensure that mine clearance and mine awareness programmes take into account the special needs of women and girls,

Recognizing the urgent need to mainstream a gender perspective into peacekeeping operations, and in this regard noting the Windhoek Declaration and the Namibia Plan of Action on Mainstreaming a Gender Perspective in Multidimensional Peace Support Operations,

Recognizing also the importance of the recommendation contained in the statement by its President to the press on 8 March 2000 for specialized training for all peacekeeping personnel on the protection, special needs and human rights of women and children in conflict situations,

Recognizing further that an understanding of the impact of armed conflict on women and girls, effective institutional arrangements to guarantee their protection and full participation in the peace process can significantly contribute to the maintenance and promotion of international peace and security,

Noting the need to consolidate data on the impact of armed conflict on women and girls,

1. Urges Member States to ensure increased representation of women at all decision-making levels in national, regional and international institutions and mechanisms for the prevention, management, and resolution of conflict;

2. Encourages the Secretary-General to implement his strategic plan of action for the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat (1995-2000), which calls for an increase in the participation of women at decision-making levels in conflict resolution and peace processes;

3. Urges the Secretary-General to appoint more women as special representatives and envoys to pursue good offices on his behalf, and in this regard calls on Member States to provide candidates to the Secretary-General, for inclusion in a regularly updated centralized roster;

4. Also urges the Secretary-General to seek to expand the role and contribution of women in United Nations field-based operations, and especially among military observers, civilian police, human rights and humanitarian personnel;

5. Expresses its willingness to incorporate a gender perspective into peacekeeping operations, and urges the Secretary-General to ensure that, where appropriate, field operations include a gender component;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide to Member States training guidelines and materials on the protection, rights and the particular needs of women, as well as on the importance of involving women in all peacekeeping and peace-building measures, invites Member States to incorporate these elements as well as HIV/AIDS awareness training into their national training programmes for military and civilian police personnel in preparation for deployment, and also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that civilian personnel of peacekeeping operations receive similar training;

7. Urges Member States to increase their voluntary financial, technical and logistical support for gender-sensitive training efforts, including those undertaken by relevant funds and programmes, inter alia, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the United Nations Children's Fund, and by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and other relevant bodies;

8. Calls upon all actors involved, when negotiating and implementing peace agreements, to adopt a gender perspective, including:

(a) The special needs of women and girls during repatriation and resettlement, and for rehabilitation, reintegration and post-conflict reconstruction;

(b) Measures that support local women's peace initiatives and indigenous processes for conflict resolution, and that involve women in all of the implementation mechanisms of the peace agreements;

(c) Measures that ensure the protection of and respect for human rights of women and girls, particularly as they relate to the constitution, the electoral system, the police and the judiciary;

9. Calls upon all parties to armed conflict to respect fully international law applicable to the rights and protection of women and girls, especially as civilians, in particular the obligations applicable to them under the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the Additional Protocols thereto of 1977, the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol thereto, relating to the Status of Refugees, the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Optional Protocol thereto of 6 October 1999 and the Convention on the Rights of the Child of 1989 and the two Optional Protocols thereto of 25 May 2000, and to bear in mind the relevant provisions of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

10. Also calls upon all parties to armed conflict to take special measures to protect women and girls from gender-based violence, particularly rape and other forms of sexual abuse, and all other forms of violence in situations of armed conflict;

11. Emphasizes the responsibility of all States to put an end to impunity and to prosecute those responsible for genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes, including those relating to sexual and other violence against women and girls, and in this regard stresses the need to exclude these crimes, where feasible, from amnesty provisions;

12. Calls upon all parties to armed conflict to respect the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and settlements, and to take into account the particular needs of women and girls, including in their design, and recalls its resolutions 1208(1998) of 19 November 1998 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000;

13. Encourages all those involved in the planning for disarmament, demobilization and reintegration to consider the different needs of female and male combatants and to take into account the needs of their dependants;

14. Reaffirms its readiness, whenever measures are adopted under Article 41 of the Charter of the United Nations, to give consideration to their potential impact on the civilian population, bearing in mind the special needs of women and girls, in order to consider appropriate humanitarian exemptions;

15. Expresses its willingness to ensure that Security Council missions take into account gender considerations and the rights of women, including through consultation with local and international women's groups;

16. Invites the Secretary-General to carry out a study on the impact of armed conflict on women and girls, the role of women in peace-building and the gender dimensions of peace processes and conflict resolution, and also invites him to submit a report to the Council on the results of this study and to make this available to all Member States;

17. Requests the Secretary-General, where appropriate, to include in his reporting to the Council progress on gender mainstreaming throughout peacekeeping missions and all other aspects relating to women and girls;

18. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

The girl child

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/598], adopted resolution 55/78 without vote [agenda item 110].

The girl child

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/148 of 17 December 1999 and all previous relevant resolutions, including the agreed conclusions of the Commission on the Status of Women, in particular those relevant to the girl child,

Recalling also all relevant United Nations conferences and the Declaration and Agenda for Action adopted by the World Congress against Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children, held at Stockholm from 27 to 31 August 1996, as well as the outcome documents of the recent five-year reviews of the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development,

Deeply concerned about discrimination against the girl child and the violation of the rights of the girl child, which often result in less access for girls to education, nutrition, physical and mental health care and in girls enjoying fewer of the rights, opportunities and benefits of childhood and adolescence than boys and often being subjected to various forms of cultural, social, sexual and economic exploitation and to violence and harmful practices, such as female infanticide, incest, early marriage, prenatal sex selection and female genital mutilation,

Recognizing the need to achieve gender equality so as to ensure a just and equitable world for girls,

Deeply concerned that, in situations of poverty, war and armed conflict, girl children are among the victims most affected and that thus their potential for full development is limited,

Concerned that the girl child has furthermore become a victim of sexually transmitted diseases and the human immunodeficiency virus, which affects the quality of her life and leaves her open to further discrimination,

Reaffirming the equal rights of women and men as enshrined, inter alia, in the Preamble to the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Reaffirming also the political declaration and further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Reaffirming further the Dakar Framework for Action adopted at the World Education Forum,

1. Stresses the need for full and urgent implementation of the rights of the girl child as guaranteed to her under all human rights instruments, including the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, as well as the need for universal ratification of those instruments;

2. Urges States to consider signing and ratifying the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women;

3. Welcomes the adoption of the Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and invites States to consider signing and ratifying the Optional Protocols as a matter of priority with a view to their entry into force as soon as possible;

4. Also welcomes the United Nations Girls' Education Initiative launched by the Secretary-General at the World Education Forum;

5. Urges all Governments and the United Nations system to strengthen efforts bilaterally and with international organizations and private sector donors in order to achieve the goals of the World Education Forum, in particular that of eliminating gender disparities in primary and secondary education by 2005, and for the implementation of the United Nations Girls' Education Initiative as a means of reaching this goal, and reaffirms the commitment contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

6. Calls upon all States to take measures to address the obstacles that continue to affect the achievement of the goals set forth in the Beijing Platform for Action, as contained in paragraph 33 of the further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, where appropriate, including the strengthening of national mechanisms to implement policies and programmes for the girl child and, in some cases, to enhance coordination among responsible institutions for the realization of the human rights of girls, as indicated in the further actions and initiatives;

7. Urges all States to take all necessary measures and to institute legal reforms to ensure the full and equal enjoyment by the girl child of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, to take effective action against violations of those rights and freedoms and to base programmes and policies for the girl child on the rights of the child;

8. Urges States to enact and enforce strictly laws to ensure that marriage is entered into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses, to enact and enforce strictly laws concerning the minimum legal age of consent and the minimum age for marriage and to raise the minimum age for marriage where necessary;

9. Urges all States to fulfil their obligations under the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women as well as the commitment to implement the Beijing Platform for Action;

10. Also urges all States to enact and enforce legislation to protect girls from all forms of violence, including female infanticide and prenatal sex selection, female genital mutilation, rape, domestic violence, incest, sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, child prostitution and child pornography, and to develop age-appropriate safe and confidential programmes and medical, social and psychological support services to assist girls who are subjected to violence;

11. Calls upon all States and international and non-governmental organizations, individually and collectively, to implement further the Beijing Platform for Action, in particular the strategic objectives relating to the girl child and including the further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action;

12. Urges States to take special measures for the protection of war-affected girls and in particular to protect them from sexually transmitted diseases, such as human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome, and gender-based violence, including rape and sexual abuse, torture, sexual exploitation, abduction and forced labour, paying special attention to refugee and displaced girls, and to take into account the special needs of the war-affected girl child in the delivery of humanitarian assistance and disarmament, demobilization and reintegration processes;

13. Urges all States and the international community to respect, protect and promote the rights of the child, taking into account the particular vulnerabilities of the girl child in pre-conflict, conflict and post-conflict situations, and calls for special initiatives designed to address all of the rights and needs of war-affected girls;

14. Welcomes the holding of the International Conference on War-Affected Children at Winnipeg, Canada, from 10 to 17 September 2000, and takes note with appreciation of the Winnipeg Agenda for War-Affected Children;

15. Urges States to formulate comprehensive, multidisciplinary and coordinated national plans, programmes or strategies to eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls, which should be widely disseminated and should provide targets and time-tables for implementation, as well as effective domestic enforcement procedures through the establishment of monitoring mechanisms involving all parties concerned, including consultations with women's organizations, giving attention to the recommendations relating to the girl child of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences;

16. Calls upon Governments, civil society, including the media, and non-governmental organizations to promote human rights education and the full respect for and enjoyment of the human rights of the girl child, inter alia, through the translation, production and dissemination of age-appropriate information material on those rights to all sectors of society, in particular to children;

17. Requests the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, to ensure that all organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, individually and collectively, in particular the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Food Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Development Fund for Women, the World Health Organization, the United Nations Development Programme and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, take into account the rights and the particular needs of the girl child in the country programme of cooperation in accordance with the national priorities, including through the United Nations Development Assistance Framework;

18. Requests all human rights treaty bodies, special procedures and other human rights mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights and its Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights to adopt regularly and systematically a gender perspective in the implementation of their mandates and to include in their reports information on the qualitative analysis of violations of the human rights of women and girls, and encourages the strengthening of co-operation and coordination in that regard;

19. Calls upon States and international and non-governmental organizations to mobilize all necessary resources, support and efforts to realize the goals, strategic objectives and actions set out in the Beijing Platform for Action and the further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action;

20. Stresses the importance of a substantive assessment of the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action with a life-cycle perspective so as to identify gaps and obstacles in the implementation process and to develop further actions for the achievement of the goals of the Platform;

21. Welcomes the convening of the Second World Congress against Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children at Yokohama, Japan, from 17 to 20 December 2001, and invites Member States and observers to participate in the Congress;

22. Encourages the regional commissions and other regional organizations to carry out activities in support of the preparations for the Second World Congress;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that a gender perspective and the needs and rights of the girl child are integrated into the preparatory work for the special session of the General Assembly on the follow-up to the World Summit for Children in 2001, inter alia, by providing the General Assembly with a comprehensive report drawing on the experiences and outcomes of the five-year reviews of the International Conference on Population and Development, the Fourth World Conference on Women and the World

Summit for Social Development, and the World Education Forum.

Women's health

HIV/AIDS

In his report to the Commission on the Status of Women on follow-up to the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action [E/CN.6/2000/2], the Secretary-General described trends in HIV/AIDS infection of women and efforts by the UN system to address the gender dimension of the pandemic. The report noted that HIV/AIDS infection rates among women had risen steadily, with new information suggesting that there were significantly more women than men living with HIV infection in sub-Saharan Africa and that girls in Africa aged 15-19 were five or six times more likely to be HIV-positive than boys of the same age. Women tended to be infected at a younger age than men for biological and cultural reasons.

The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) (see p. 1165) was increasingly addressing the gender dimension of the pandemic; gender-based differences were taken into account in risk- and vulnerability-reduction approaches, and UNAIDS was cooperating with women's networks that were undertaking advocacy and prevention measures and offered support to affected women. The Inter-Agency Working Group on Gender and AIDS continued to seek ways to incorporate gender into all the UN programmes and departments dealing with AIDS. UNIFEM, in collaboration with UNAIDS and UNFPA, supported a pilot initiative entitled "Gender-focused responses to address the challenges of HIV/AIDS".

Areas of particular concern identified by the Secretary-General included: promotion of female-controlled methods of prevention and vaccine development; mother-to-child transmission and care of children orphaned by AIDS; violence against women affecting the health of women and girls; sexual and reproductive health education for young people, particularly girls; and support for women living with HIV/AIDS. The report concluded that it was important to identify, promote and apply best practices in reducing the vulnerability of women and girls. A gender-based response to the HIV/AIDS epidemic required continued efforts, coordination and long-term commitment at the country, regional and global levels, giving priority to the UNAIDS International Partnership against AIDS in Africa. Strategies needed to focus on improving women's control over their reproductive health because of evidence that infections of the reproductive tract and sexually transmitted diseases increased the risk of HIV transmission.

In March [E/2000/27 (dec. 44/2)], the Commission, concerned by the fact that women represented 46 per cent of all people over the age of 15 living with AIDS and 55 per cent of those infected in sub-Saharan Africa, called for effective prevention strategies and intensified support for national efforts against HIV/AIDS, especially in favour of women and girls in the worst-hit regions of Africa and where the epidemic was severely setting back national development gains. Governments were urged to create an environment of support for those infected with HIV, as well as for children orphaned by AIDS; to provide the legal framework that would protect their rights; to provide access to counselling services; and to adopt long-term, timely, coherent and integrated AIDS prevention policies. The Commission called on UNAIDS to assist Governments in determining the best policies and programmes to prevent women and girls from contracting HIV/AIDS, giving priority to African women and girls. It requested Governments to ensure that condoms and care for sexually transmitted diseases were available and affordable to women, and to provide health care for women with HIV.

The expert group meeting entitled "The HIV/AIDS pandemic and its gender implications" (Windhoek, 13-27 November) [EGM/HIV/AIDS/2000/Rep.1], organized by DAW, UNAIDS and the World Health Organization (WHO), considered the interlinkages among HIV/AIDS, gender, human rights and human security as an input for the Commission's consideration of the issue and for the special session of the General Assembly on HIV/AIDS, to be held in 2001. The meeting made recommendations for both short-term and long-term action and remarked that a lasting solution could not be found without political commitment, adequate resources, good governance and democratic participation.

Traffic in women and girls

In 2000, trafficking in women and girls was addressed by the General Assembly, in resolution 55/67 (below), and the Commission on Human Rights (see p. 711). The Commission on the Status of Women, acting as preparatory committee for the twenty-third special session of the Assembly, also addressed the issue in the context of its review and appraisal of implementation of the critical areas of concern contained in the Beijing Platform for Action.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 53/116 [YUN 1998, p. 704], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/55/322] on steps taken in several forums of the United Nations and other international bodies and at the regional and national levels to address trafficking in women and girls. The report concluded that although the actual incidence of trafficking remained unknown, it appeared to be a growing problem as a result of both the persistence of its root causes—poverty, discrimination and inequality—and the proliferation of trans-border organized crime networks. Priority should be given to strategies addressing the root causes and to the adoption of measures to discourage traffickers, the Secretary-General stated. At the same time, alternatives should be provided to women and girls who were vulnerable to traffickers and to the risks associated with informal migration.

Regional meeting. The Meeting of the Asian Regional Initiative against Trafficking in Persons, especially Women and Children (Manila, Philippines, 29-31 March) adopted a regional action plan, which the Philippines forwarded to the Secretary-General on 29 September [A/C.3/55/3].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/595 & Corr.1,2], adopted resolution 55/67 without vote [agenda item 107].

Traffic in women and girls

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the principles set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the International Covenants on Human Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women,

Welcoming the adoption by the General Assembly of the two Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in particular the Optional Protocol on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and the increasing number of Member States that have signed and ratified these Optional Protocols,

Recalling all previous resolutions on the problem of the traffic in women and girls adopted by the General Assembly, the Commission on the Status of Women, the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, as well as the Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others, as well as the conclusions on violence against women adopted on 13 March 1998 by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-second session and the recommendations of the Working Group on Contemporary Forms of Slavery adopted on 21 August 1998 by the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities at its fiftieth session,

Reaffirming the provisions of the outcomes of the World Conference on Human Rights, held in Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, the International Conference on Population and Development, the World Summit for Social Development, the Fourth World Conference on Women, the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", held in New York from 5 to 9 June 2000, and the twenty-fourth special session of the Assembly, entitled "World Summit for Social Development and beyond: achieving social development for all in a globalizing world", held in Geneva from 26 June to 1 July 2000, as well as the Ninth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, held in Cairo from 29 April to 8 May 1995, and the Tenth Congress, pertaining to the traffic in women and girls,

Welcoming the inclusion of gender-related crimes in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, adopted on 17 July 1998 by the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court,

Noting the work of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Elaboration of a Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, in particular the elaboration of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children,

Reaffirming that sexual violence and trafficking in women and girls for purposes of economic exploitation, sexual exploitation through prostitution and other forms of sexual exploitation and contemporary forms of slavery are serious violations of human rights,

Seriously concerned at the increasing number of women and girl children, in particular from developing countries and from some countries with economies in transition, who are being trafficked to developed countries, as well as within and between regions and States, and acknowledging that the problem of trafficking also includes the victimizing of boys,

Welcoming bilateral and regional cooperation mechanisms and initiatives to address the problem of trafficking in women and girls,

Welcoming also the efforts of Governments and inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations participating in the meeting of the Asian Regional Initiative against Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, held in Manila from 29 to 31 March 2000, to develop a regional action plan against trafficking in persons, especially women and children,

Welcoming further the efforts of the European Union to develop a comprehensive European policy and programmes on trafficking in human beings, as expressed in the conclusions of the European Council at its meeting held in Tampere, Finland, on 15 and 16 October 1999, and the activities of the Council of Europe and of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe in this field,

Acknowledging the work being done by intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in compiling information on the scale and complexity of the problem of trafficking, in providing shelter for trafficked women and children and in effecting their voluntary repatriation to their countries of origin,

Recognizing that global efforts, including international cooperation and technical assistance programmes, to eradicate trafficking in persons, in particular women and children, demand strong political commitment by and the active cooperation of all Governments of countries of origin, transit and destination,

Deeply concerned about the unabated use of new information technologies, including the Internet, for purposes of prostitution, child pornography, paedophilia and any other forms of sexual exploitation of children, trafficking in women as brides and sex tourism,

Gravely concerned at the increasing activities of transnational criminal organizations and others that profit from international trafficking in women and children without regard to dangerous and inhumane conditions and in flagrant violation of domestic laws and international standards,

Stressing once again the need for Governments to provide standard humanitarian treatment to trafficked persons consistent with human rights standards,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on activities of United Nations bodies and other international organizations pertaining to the problem of trafficking in women and girls;

2. Welcomes the steps taken by human rights treaty bodies, the special rapporteurs and subsidiary bodies of the Commission on Human Rights, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, other United Nations bodies, and international, intergovernmental and governmental organizations, within their mandates, as well as non-governmental organizations, to address the problem of trafficking in women and girls, and encourages them to continue doing so and to share their knowledge and best practices as widely as possible;

3. Urges Governments to take appropriate measures to address the root factors, including external factors, that encourage trafficking in women and girls for prostitution and other forms of commercialized sex, forced marriages and forced labour, in order to eliminate trafficking in women, including by strengthening existing legislation with a view to providing better protection of the rights of women and girls and to punishing perpetrators, through both criminal and civil measures;

4. Also urges Governments to devise, enforce and strengthen effective measures to combat and eliminate all forms of trafficking in women and girls through a comprehensive anti-trafficking strategy consisting of, inter alia, legislative measures, prevention campaigns, information exchange, assistance and protection for and reintegration of the victims and prosecution of all the offenders involved, including intermediaries;

5. Encourages Member States to conclude bilateral, subregional, regional and international agreements, as well as undertake initiatives, including regional initiatives, to address the problem of trafficking in women and girls, such as the Action Plan for the Asia-Pacific region of the Asian Regional Initiative against Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, the European Union initiatives on a comprehensive European policy and programmes on trafficking in human beings as expressed in the conclusions of the European Council at its meeting held in Tampere, and the activities of the Council of Europe and of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe in this field;

6. Calls upon all Governments to criminalize trafficking in women and children, in particular girls, in all its forms, to condemn and penalize all those offenders involved, including intermediaries, whether their offence was committed in their own or in a foreign country, while ensuring that the victims of those practices are not penalized, and to penalize persons in authority found guilty of sexually assaulting victims of trafficking in their custody;

7. Invites Governments to consider setting up or strengthening a national coordinating mechanism, for example, a national rapporteur or an inter-agency body, with the participation of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to encourage the exchange of information and to report on data, root causes, factors and trends in violence against women, in particular trafficking;

8. Urges concerned Governments, in cooperation with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to support and allocate resources for programmes to strengthen preventive action, in particular education and campaigns to increase public awareness of the issue at the national and grass-roots levels;

9. Calls upon concerned Governments to allocate resources to provide comprehensive programmes designed to heal, rehabilitate and reintegrate into society and communities victims of trafficking, including through job training, legal assistance and health care, and by taking measures to cooperate with non-governmental organizations to provide for the social, medical and psychological care of the victims;

10. Encourages Governments, in cooperation with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to undertake campaigns aimed at clarifying opportunities, limitations and rights in the event of migration so as to enable women to make informed decisions and to prevent them from becoming victims of trafficking;

11. Also encourages Governments to intensify collaboration with non-governmental organizations to develop and implement programmes for effective counselling, training and reintegration into society of victims of trafficking, and programmes that provide shelter and helplines to victims or potential victims;

12. Invites Governments to take steps, including witness protection programmes, to enable women who are victims of trafficking to make complaints to the police and to be available when required by the criminal justice system, and to ensure that during this time women have access to social, medical, financial and legal assistance, and protection, as appropriate;

13. Also invites Governments to consider preventing, within the legal framework and in accordance with national policies, victims of trafficking, in particular women and girls, from being prosecuted for their illegal entry or residence, taking into account that they are victims of exploitation;

14. Further invites Governments to encourage Internet service providers to adopt or strengthen self-regulatory measures to promote the responsible use of the Internet with a view to eliminating trafficking in women and children, in particular girls;

15. Stresses the need for a global approach to eradicate trafficking in women and children and the importance, in this regard, of systematic data collection and comprehensive studies, and encourages Governments to develop systematic data-collection methods and to update continuously information on trafficking in women and girls, including the analysis of the modus operandi of trafficking syndicates;

16. Urges Governments to strengthen national programmes to combat trafficking in women and girls through sustained bilateral, regional and international cooperation, taking into account innovative approaches and best practices, and invites Governments, United Nations bodies and organizations, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the private sector to undertake collaborative and joint research and studies on trafficking in women and girls that can serve as a basis for policy formulation or change;

17. Invites Governments, once again, with the support of the United Nations, to formulate training manuals for law enforcement and medical personnel and judicial officers who handle cases of trafficked women and girls, taking into account current research and materials on traumatic stress and gender-sensitive counselling techniques, with a view to sensitizing them to the special needs of victims;

18. Invites State parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the International Covenants on Human Rights to include information and statistics on trafficking in women and girls as part of their national reports to their respective committees;

19. Encourages Governments as well as intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, the human rights treaty bodies, the special rapporteurs, especially the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences, the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the human rights of migrants, and subsidiary bodies of the Commission on Human Rights and other relevant United Nations bodies, within their respective mandates, to participate in and contribute to the work of the Working Group on Contemporary Forms of Slavery of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights at its twenty-sixth session, in 2001, which will focus on the issue of trafficking;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to compile, as reference and guidance, successful interventions and strategies in addressing the various dimensions of the problem of trafficking in women and children, in particular girls, based on reports, research and other materials from within the United Nations, including the United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention, as well as from outside the United Nations, and to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session.

Palestinian women

In a report to the Commission on the Status of Women on follow-up to the Beijing Platform for Action [E/CN.6/2000/2], the Secretary-General described assistance provided by the UN system to Palestinian women, whose status and living conditions were closely linked with the progress of the peace process and whose lives continued to be adversely affected by a variety of measures, including closures and settlement activities. The Secretary-General concluded that the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into nation-building programmes and the full participation of Palestinian women were critical to sustainable peace in the region. To that end, UN organizations would continue to assist Palestinian women to participate fully in the peace process and to build Palestinian society.

On 28 July, the Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2000/23, asked the Commission to continue to monitor and take action regarding the situation of Palestinian women and children (see p. 439).

Women in Afghanistan

In April, the Commission on Human Rights took action on the grave human rights situation of women and girls in Afghanistan, and the Secretary-General reported in July on that issue (see p. 713).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2000/27], adopted resolution 2000/9 without vote [agenda item 14 (a)].

Situation of women and girls in Afghanistan

The Economic and Social Council,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, and other instruments of human rights and international humanitarian law,

Recalling that Afghanistan is a party to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, and that it has signed the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,

Deeply concerned about the deteriorating economic and social conditions of women and girls in all areas of Afghanistan, in particular in areas under the control of the Taliban movement, as documented by the continued and substantiated reports of grave violations of the human rights of women and girls, including all forms of discrimination against them, such as restrictions on access to health care, to many levels and types of education, to employment outside the home and, at times, to humanitarian aid, as well as restrictions on their freedom of movement,

Welcoming the ongoing work of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan, in particular his special focus on violations of the human rights of women and girls, especially in territories under the control of the Taliban faction,

Noting with concern the detrimental impact of these harmful conditions on the well-being of Afghan women and the children in their care,

Welcoming the United Nations Inter-Agency Gender Mission to Afghanistan in November 1997, conducted by the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, taking into account the report of the Mission, and hoping that the Mission will serve as a model for future efforts to address the gender dimension of crisis/conflict situations,

Expressing its appreciation for the international community's support of and solidarity with the women and girls of Afghanistan, being supportive of the women of Afghanistan who protest against violations of their human rights, and encouraging women and men worldwide to continue efforts to draw attention to their situation and to promote the immediate restoration of their ability to enjoy their human rights,

1. Condemns the continuing grave violations of the human rights of women and girls, including all forms of discrimination against them, in all areas of Afghanistan, in particular in areas under the control of the Taliban;

2. Also condemns the continued restrictions on the access of women to health care and the systematic violation of the human rights of women in Afghanistan, including the restrictions on access to education and to employment outside the home, freedom of movement and freedom from intimidation, harassment and violence, which has a serious detrimental effect on the well-being of Afghan women and the children in their care;

3. Urges the Taliban and other Afghan parties to recognize, protect, promote and act in accordance with all human rights and fundamental freedoms, regardless of gender, ethnicity or religion, in accordance with international human rights instruments, and to respect international humanitarian law;

4. Urges all the Afghan parties, in particular the Taliban, to bring to an end without delay all human rights violations against women and girls and to take urgent measures to ensure:

(a) The repeal of all legislative and other measures that discriminate against women and girls and those that impede the realization of all their human rights;

(b) The effective participation of women in civil, cultural, economic, political and social life throughout the country;

(c) Respect for the equal right of women to work and their reintegration in employment;

(d) The equal right of women and girls to education without discrimination, the reopening of schools and the admission of women and girls to all levels of education;

(e) Respect for the right of women to security of person, and that those responsible for physical attacks on women are brought to justice;

(f) Respect for freedom of movement for women;

(g) Respect for effective and equal access of women and girls to the facilities necessary to protect their right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

5. Encourages the continuing efforts of the United Nations, international and non-governmental organizations and donors to ensure that all United Nations-assisted programmes in Afghanistan are formulated and coordinated in such a way as to promote and ensure the participation of women in those programmes and that women benefit equally with men from such programmes;

6. Appeals to all States and to the international community to ensure that all humanitarian assistance to the people of Afghanistan, in conformity with the Strategic Framework for Afghanistan, is based on the principle of non-discrimination, integrates a gender perspective, and actively attempts to promote the participation of both women and men and to promote peace and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;

7. Urges States to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of women in Afghanistan and to mainstream a gender perspective in all aspects of their policies and actions related to Afghanistan;

8. Welcomes the establishment of the positions of Gender Adviser and Human Rights Adviser at the United Nations Office of the Resident Coordinator for Afghanistan, in order to ensure more effective consideration and implementation of human rights and gender concerns in all United Nations programmes within Afghanistan, taking into account the recommendations contained in the report of the United Nations Inter-Agency Gender Mission to Afghanistan conducted by the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women in November 1997;

9. Takes note of the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences on her mission to Afghanistan from 1 to 13 September 1999;

10. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure that all United Nations activities in Afghanistan are carried out according to the principle of non-discrimination against women and girls, that a gender perspective and special attention to the human rights of women and girls are fully incorporated into the work of the Civil Affairs Unit established within the United Nations Special Mission to Afghanistan, including the training and selection of staff, and that efforts are made to enhance the role of women in preventive diplomacy, peacemaking and peacekeeping;

11. Stresses the importance of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan giving special attention to the human rights of women and girls and fully incorporating a gender perspective in his work;

12. Appeals to States and the international community to implement the recommendations of the United Nations Inter-Agency Gender Mission to Afghanistan under the leadership of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women;

13. Urges all Afghan factions, in particular the Taliban, to ensure the safety and protection of all United Nations and humanitarian workers in Afghanistan and to allow them, regardless of gender, to carry out their work unhindered;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fifth session a report on progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

Women and development

In response to a 1999 Economic and Social Council ministerial communiqué [YUN 1999, p. 1096], the Secretary-General submitted a June report on the role of employment and work in poverty eradication: the empowerment and advancement of women [E/2000/64]. The report reviewed progress in implementing the communiqué's recommendations, based primarily on the relevant activities of the UN system conducted within the framework of the follow-up to the global conferences held in the 1990s and other major initiatives. National development experience relevant to implementation of recommendations was illustrated by examples from four countries. Among the challenges that had hampered implementation, the report noted, was that while equality between women and men was widely accepted as essential for economic and social development, the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into poverty eradication programmes and policies and for the empowerment of women had lagged behind. In most countries, the employment of women had increased significantly; however, gender inequalities, as reflected in the wage gap and a disproportionate share of family responsibilities, remained obstacles to women's equal access to and participation in the labour market. Women's participation in economic and political fields at the decision-making level was stagnating and their productive and creative potential was largely underutilized. Recommendations were made for further Council action. On 28 July, the Council, by decision 2000/290, took note of the report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2000/26 [draft: E/2000/L.25] without vote [agenda item 6].

The role of employment and work in poverty eradication: empowerment and advancement of women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the ministerial communiqué on the theme "The role of employment and work in poverty eradication: empowerment and advancement of women", adopted on 7 July 1999 at the high-level segment of its substantive session of 1999,

Acknowledging the important outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", and of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, entitled "World Summit for Social Development and beyond: achieving social development for all in a globalizing world",

Recognizing the progress achieved in placing poverty eradication at the centre of national and international policy agendas and in formulating poverty eradication policies and strategies,

Recognizing also that considerable progress has been made in increasing recognition of gender dimensions of poverty and in the recognition that gender equality is one of the factors of specific importance for eradicating poverty, in particular in relation to the feminization of poverty,

Recognizing further that there has been increased attention to the goal of full employment and to policies aimed at employment growth,

Noting with concern the persistent problems in addressing the challenges of poverty eradication, gender inequalities, empowerment and advancement of women and employment, as reflected in the outcome documents of the recent five-year reviews of the Fourth World Conference on Women and the World Summit for Social Development,

1. Reaffirms the commitments and recommendations contained in its 1999 ministerial communiqué, and welcomes the outcome documents of the twenty-third and twenty-fourth special sessions of the General Assembly;

2. Strongly encourages Governments to pursue and strengthen their efforts to work towards achieving the goals of poverty eradication, full and productive employment and the empowerment and advancement of women by implementing the recommendations of the communiqué and the commitments that they undertook at the World Summit for Social Development, the Fourth World Conference on Women and their five-year reviews, and the other major conferences and summits of the 1990s, as well as at the World Education Forum;

3. Reiterates the call for the relevant organizations of the United Nations system and the international community to take consistent, coherent, coordinated and joint action in support of national efforts to eradicate poverty, with particular attention to employment creation and work and the empowerment and advancement of women;

4. Welcomes the commitment undertaken by the General Assembly at its twenty-fourth special session on the five-year review of the World Summit for Social Development to place poverty eradication at the centre of economic and social development and build consensus with all relevant actors at all levels on policies and strategies to reduce the proportion of people living in extreme poverty by one half by the year 2015, with a view to eradicating poverty;

5. Reaffirms the need for Governments and the international community, in the context of their efforts to achieve the empowerment and advancement of women, to address, as a matter of urgency, the challenges of poverty eradication and employment creation in a holistic manner, which includes alleviation of the negative effects on women associated with structural adjustment programmes and trade liberalization and of the disproportionate burden borne by women living in poverty, as well as the identification and implementation of development-oriented and durable solutions which integrate a gender perspective with regard to external debt and debt-servicing problems of developing countries, including least developed countries;

6. Urges all Member States to take measures, at the national and international levels, to promote the effective mobilization of resources in order to facilitate the full implementation of the recommendations of the 1999 ministerial communiqué and the outcomes of the twenty-third and twenty-fourth special sessions of the General Assembly, and urges donor countries to strive to fulfil the internationally agreed target, yet to be attained, of 0.7 per cent of their gross national product for overall official development assistance as soon as possible, and in this regard welcomes the efforts made by those donors that have reached and surpassed such targets;

7. Urges all States that have not yet ratified or acceded to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women to do so as soon as possible, urges all States parties to fulfil their obligations under the Convention, and invites all States to promote universal ratification and implementation of International Labour Organization Convention No. 182 concerning the Prohibition and Immediate Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour, and to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families;

8. Invites States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the Optional Protocol thereto;

9. Encourages Governments, international organizations and civil society, including non-governmental organizations, in particular women's organizations, the media and the private sector to interact further and establish partnerships within and across countries aimed at contributing to poverty eradication and the empowerment of women.

System-wide plan

The Commission on the Status of Women had before it the Secretary-General's January assessment of the implementation of the system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women, 1996-2001 [E/CN.6/2000/3]. The report summarized information provided by UN entities on their efforts to implement the plan in the areas of the gender mainstreaming strategy; gender units and gender focal points; mobilization and allocation of financial resources; human resources; and coordination. Among the obstacles encountered were lack of understanding of gender as a concept or the failure to perceive issues such as poverty, the environment or HIV/AIDS as having gender dimensions; lack of staff capacity to implement gender mainstreaming strategies or carry out gender analysis; inadequately defined management competencies for gender mainstreaming; absence of strategic planning and channels of communication; and lack of staff confidence in their ability to incorporate gender concerns. Information on activities undertaken by the UN system in the 12 critical areas of concern of the Beijing Platform for Action was set out in an annex to the report.

By a June note [E/2000/78], the Secretary-General transmitted the January report to the Economic and Social Council.

The Council, by decision 2000/289 of 28 July, took note of the Secretary-General's note.

Evaluation. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 54/255 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) submitted to the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), in March, an in-depth evaluation of the advancement of women programme [E/AC.51/2000/3]. Focusing mainly on the work of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and DAW, the report assessed the following activities: servicing of intergovernmental bodies, in particular the Commission on the Status of Women, CEDAW, the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly; monitoring the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action; gender mainstreaming; the status of women in the Secretariat; coordination; outreach; and gender advisory services and other activities. Recommendations were made with regard to enhancing the effectiveness of the reporting mechanism of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women; improving coordination within the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality, and between DAW and other UN programmes and entities; and enhancing outreach efforts through more effective marketing and distribution of DAW publications, improving the WomenWatch and DAW web sites, encouraging DAW staff to publish in professional journals, and improving collaboration with NGOs.

In June [A/55/16], CPC agreed on the continued importance and relevance of the advancement of women programme and endorsed many recommendations contained in the report, subject to certain observations.

Convention on elimination of discrimination against women

As at 31 December 2000, 166 States were parties to the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 34/180 [YUN 1979, p. 895]. During the year, Saudi Arabia acceded to the Convention. At year's end, 24 States parties had also accepted the amendment to article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention in respect of the meeting time of CEDAW, which had been adopted by the States parties in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1178]. The amendment would enter into force when accepted by a two-thirds majority of States parties.

The Optional Protocol to the Convention, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 54/4 [YUN 1999, p. 1100], entered into force on 22 December. The Protocol, which entitled individuals or groups to submit directly to CEDAW complaints concerning alleged Convention violations and established procedures for inquiries into situations of grave or systematic violations of women's rights, had 15 States parties by the end of 2000.

The Secretary-General submitted his annual report to the Assembly on the status of the Convention as at 1 August [A/55/308].

Meeting of States parties. The eleventh meeting of States parties to the Convention (New York, 31 August) [CEDAW/SP/2000/6] reviewed reservations, declarations and objections of States parties to the Convention and notifications of withdrawals, as well as objections to State parties' reservations [CEDAW/SP/2000/2]. At the meeting, 11 members of CEDAW were elected to replace those whose terms were due to expire at the end of the year.

CEDAW

In 2000, the 23-member Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), established in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 1149] to monitor compliance with the 1979 Convention, held two sessions in New York [A/55/38]. At its twenty-second session (17 January–4 February), CEDAW reviewed the initial or periodic reports of Belarus, Burkina Faso, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Germany, India, Jordan, Luxembourg and Myanmar on measures they had taken to implement the Convention. It also considered a comparative analysis of the Optional Protocol with existing treaty-based communications and inquiry mechanisms [CEDAW/C/2000/1/5].

The Committee stated that the Convention and the monitoring process established under it would play a crucial role in achieving the goals of the Beijing Platform for Action and any fresh initiatives emerging from the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly. It adopted four decisions on reporting and other procedural matters.

At its twenty-third session (12–30 June), CEDAW reviewed the initial or periodic reports of Austria, Cameroon, Cuba, Iraq, Lithuania, the Republic of Moldova and Romania. The Committee decided to begin to prepare a general recommendation on article 4 of the Convention (on temporary special measures) with a general discussion in 2001. It adopted a suggestion requesting the Secretariat to explore the possibility of holding one of the CEDAW sessions in 2002 or 2003 outside UN Headquarters, in particular in the Asia-Pacific region, in order to facilitate consideration of reports of State parties from that region. Two other decisions on procedural matters were also adopted.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/595 & Corr.1,2], adopted resolution 55/70 without vote [agenda item 107].

Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/4 of 6 October 1999 and 54/137 of 17 December 1999,

Bearing in mind that one of the purposes of the United Nations, as stated in Articles 1 and 55 of the Charter, is to promote universal respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction of any kind, including distinction as to sex,

Affirming that women and men should participate equally in social, economic and political development, should contribute equally to such development and should share equally in improved conditions of life,

Recalling the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, in which the Conference reaffirmed that the human rights of women and the girl child were an inalienable, integral and indivisible part of universal human rights,

Acknowledging the need for a comprehensive and integrated approach to the promotion and protection of the human rights of women, which includes the integration of the human rights of women into the mainstream of United Nations activities system-wide,

Welcoming the political declaration and the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", in particular paragraph 68 (c) and (d) concerning the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Optional Protocol thereto,

Recalling that in the United Nations Millennium Declaration heads of State and Government resolved to implement the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,

Welcoming the progress made in the implementation of the Convention, but concerned about the remaining challenges,

Welcoming also the growing number of States parties to the Convention, which now stands at one hundred and sixty-six,

Welcoming further the adoption and opening for signature, ratification and accession of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, and the subsequent entry into force of the Optional Protocol, thereby fulfilling a goal of the Beijing Platform for Action,

Bearing in mind the recommendation of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women that national reports should include information on the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action, in accordance with paragraph 323 of the Platform,

Having considered the report of the Committee on its twenty-second and twenty-third sessions,

Expressing concern at the great number of reports that are overdue and that continue to be overdue, in particular initial reports, which constitutes an obstacle to the full implementation of the Convention,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the status of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women;

2. Expresses disappointment that universal ratification of the Convention has not been achieved by the year 2000, and urges all States that have not yet ratified or acceded to the Convention to do so;

3. Emphasizes the importance of full compliance by States parties with their obligations under the Convention;

4. Welcomes the fact that, as at 22 September 2000, ten States had become parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, thereby allowing it to enter into force on 22 December 2000;

5. Urges States parties to consider signing and ratifying the Optional Protocol;

6. Notes that some States parties have modified their reservations, expresses satisfaction that some reservations have been withdrawn, and urges States parties to limit the extent of any reservations they lodge to the Convention, to formulate any such reservations as precisely and as narrowly as possible, to ensure that no reservations are incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention or otherwise incompatible with international treaty law, to review their reservations regularly with a view to withdrawing them and to withdraw reservations that are contrary to the object and purpose of the Convention or that are otherwise incompatible with international treaty law;

7. Urges States parties to the Convention to make every possible effort to submit their reports on the implementation of the Convention in accordance with article 18 thereof and with the guidelines provided by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and to cooperate fully with the Committee in the presentation of their reports;

8. Encourages the Secretariat to extend further technical assistance to States parties, upon their request, in the preparation of reports, in particular initial reports, and invites Governments to contribute to these efforts;

9. Commends the Committee on its contributions to the effective implementation of the Convention;

10. Urges States parties to the Convention to take appropriate measures so that acceptance of the amendment to article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention by a two-thirds majority of States parties can be reached as soon as possible in order for the amendment to enter into force;

11. Expresses its appreciation for the additional meeting time that allows the Committee to hold two sessions annually, each session of three weeks' duration and each preceded by a pre-session working group of the Committee;

12. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with resolution 54/4, to provide the resources, including staff and facilities, necessary for the effective functioning of the Committee within its full mandate, in particular taking into account the entry into force of the Optional Protocol;

13. Urges Governments, agencies and organizations of the United Nations system and intergovernmental as well as non-governmental organizations to disseminate the Convention and the Optional Protocol thereto;

14. Encourages all relevant entities of the United Nations system, within their mandates, as well as Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, as appropriate, to continue to assist States parties, upon their request, in implementing the Convention, and in this regard encourages States parties to pay attention to the concluding comments as well as the general recommendations of the Committee;

15. Encourages all relevant parts of the United Nations system to continue to build women's knowledge and understanding of and capacity to utilize human rights instruments, in particular the Convention and the Optional Protocol thereto;

16. Welcomes the submission of reports by the specialized agencies at the invitation of the Committee on the implementation of the Convention in areas falling within the scope of their activities and the contribution of non-governmental organizations to the work of the Committee, and encourages the agencies to continue to submit reports;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session a report on the status of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the implementation of the present resolution.

Commission on the Status of Women

The Commission on the Status of Women, at its forty-fourth session (New York, 28 February–17 March) [E/2000/27], adopted two resolutions related to improving the status of women and ensuring their rights and one decision by which it took note of six documents it had considered. In addition, it recommended two draft resolutions and one decision for adoption by the Economic and Social Council. The Commission held its third and final session (7–17 March, 20 April and 2 June) [A/S-23/2 & Add.1,2] as preparatory committee for the General Assembly's special session in June to review implementation of the 1985 Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women and the 1995 Beijing Platform for Action (see p. 1083). The Commission convened two panel discussions: one, during its regular session, on emerging issues, trends and approaches to issues affecting the situation of women or equality between women and men; and another, during the preparatory session, on gender equality, development and peace beyond the year 2000. It considered a February note by the Secretariat [E/CN.6/2000/5] containing a summary of actions taken by the Commission to implement recommendations of the Economic and Social Council, in particular in the areas of restructuring and revitalization and follow-up to UN conferences and summits.

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2000/237, took note of the Commission's report on its forty-fourth session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its forty-fifth (2001) session. On 18 October, the Council, by decision 2000/310, decided, on an exceptional basis and as an interim measure, to invite those NGOs accredited to the twenty-third and/or twenty-fourth special sessions of the General Assembly to attend the forty-fifth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, provided that they had applied for consultative status.

Communications on the status of women

At a closed meeting on 2 March [E/2000/27], the Commission took note of the report of the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women, established in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1050] to consider ways of making the communications procedure more transparent and efficient. The Working Group considered 25 confidential communications and 4 non-confidential communications received directly by DAW and 44 confidential communications received by OHCHR. The Working Group expressed deep concern regarding the continuing grave violations of women's human rights, as well as persistent and pervasive discrimination. In particular, the Working Group was concerned at the abusive treatment of women, including torture, rape, custodial deaths, abduction, disappearances, arbitrary arrests, and harassment by security forces and other authorities, especially where separatist movements had been reported. Concern was also expressed about the targeting of civilians, especially women and children; the mistreatment of those who were internally displaced in conflict situations; discrimination against women in respect of their access to humanitarian aid; the failure of Governments to protect women and children, including ethnic and minority women, in times of political instability; discrimination against indigenous women and children; and harassment of human rights defenders and their families. The Working Group expressed concern that women and children continued to be the primary victims of armed conflicts. It was gravely concerned in one case by more than 8,000 allegations of gross violations of all the basic human rights of women, particularly degrading and inhuman punishment that included women being beaten, tortured, shot and burnt alive.

UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM)

The UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) continued in 2000 [A/56/174] to focus on women's economic and political empowerment and on advocacy for gender equality and women's empowerment through multilateral policy dialogue, especially in three areas of immediate concern: strengthening women's economic capacity as entrepreneurs and producers, especially in the context of the new trade agenda and the emergence of new technologies; engendering governance and leadership to increase women's participation in the decision-making processes that shaped their lives; and promoting women's human rights to eliminate all forms of violence against women and transform development into a more peaceful, equitable and sustainable process. Those issues were addressed in relation to regional realities in Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Latin America and the Caribbean, Eastern Europe and the countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States.

During the year, UNIFEM approved 77 new projects and supported 159 ongoing initiatives around the world. Those activities aimed to link women's issues and concerns to national, regional and global agendas, by fostering collaboration and providing technical expertise on gender mainstreaming and women's empowerment strategies. For example, in relation to women's economic empowerment, UNIFEM supported situational analyses for the tourism industry in Jordan and hand-loomed textile businesses in the Lao People's Democratic Republic. To increase women's access to information communication technologies, UNIFEM provided training in e-commerce for small and medium-sized businesses owned by women in Albania, Ecuador, Nepal, the Philippines and Romania. The Fund continued to work with regional commissions to expand gender statistics and to bring women into multilateral trade negotiations and policy planning processes. Other activities involved providing assistance to women in conflict situations and supporting their participation in peace and reconstruction efforts, including in Burundi, Guatemala, Somalia and Uganda and in the Palestinian/Israeli conflict; and supporting women candidates for public office in Brazil, Ecuador, Fiji, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, the Kosovo province of Yugoslavia, and the Pacific region.

In June, during the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, UNIFEM launched a new biennial report, Progress of the World's Women 2000. Four other key publications were released by UNIFEM in 2000: Women at the Peace Table—Making a Difference; With an End in Sight; Strategies from the UNIFEM Trust Fund to Eliminate Violence against Women; and The Impact of Armed Conflict on Children.

UNIFEM's Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence against Women funded 17 new projects in 2000, including educating the public and sensitizing law enforcement agents about domestic violence laws in the United Republic of Tanzania, addressing the problem of so-called honour killings in Jordan, building local capacity to protect women from trafficking and domestic violence in the Republic of Moldova, and training human rights lawyers on domestic violence issues in Peru. Since it began in 1997, the Trust Fund had granted more than $4 million to 105 projects in 65 countries.

Total contributions for UNIFEM increased by more than 20 per cent in 2000, to $29.41 million from $23.65 million in 1999. Governments provided $24.68 million, and cost-sharing and sub-trust fund contributions amounted to $7.6 million, an increase of 34 per cent over 1999.

In August [A/55/271], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report on UNIFEM's 1999 activities. The Assembly, by decisions 55/416 and 55/444 of 4 and 20 December, respectively, took note of the report.

Strategy and business plan

In a February report [DP/2000/15 & Add.1], UNIFEM presented to the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board its strategy and business plan for 2000-2003. Based on the results achieved, lessons learned and gaps remaining from the previous strategy and business plan (1997-1999) [YUN 1997, p. 1205], the new plan set forth the Fund's strategic objectives and activities, taking into account the UN reform programme and the five-year review of the Beijing Platform for Action, as well as the social, economic, political and cultural contexts that influenced efforts to achieve gender equality.

The Fund's activities would continue to focus on the three thematic areas identified in the previous plan—strengthening women's economic capacity; promoting women's human rights and the elimination of violence against women; and engendering governance and leadership. In particular, its work would be based on five objectives: to increase opportunities for women, especially those living in poverty, through focused programming in the thematic areas; to strengthen UN capacity to support women's empowerment and gender mainstreaming; to strengthen UNIFEM's effectiveness by incorporating the principles of a learning organization and building strategic partnerships that enhanced field-based operations; to ensure that UNIFEM's human resources and financial systems efficiently supported the Fund's goals and programmes; and to build a larger and more diversified resource base.

UNDP Executive Board action. On 6 April [E/2000/35 (dec. 2000/7)], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board endorsed the programme focus, strategies and targets set out in the UNIFEM strategy and business plan, 2000-2003. The Board recommended that the UNDP Administrator include UNIFEM among the organizations to which execution responsibility for UNDP projects and programmes could be entrusted. Member States were urged to contribute or increase their contributions to UNIFEM.

International Research and Training Institute (INSTRAW)

The Board of Trustees of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW) held its twentieth session at the Institute's headquarters in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, from 4 to 6 April [E/2000/58]. INSTRAW, an autonomous institution, undertook research and training programmes for the advancement and mobilization of women in development.

The Board approved the feasibility study on the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System (GAINS) and recommended that the Institute give priority to its implementation. It decided that INSTRAW should concentrate on launching GAINS and defer all thematic research projects, except for two that were near completion. To start the GAINS project, the Board asked for additional funds over the approved operational budget for 2000.

In a September report on INSTRAW activities [A/55/385], the Secretary-General said that, in the previous year, with minimal financial and staffing resources, the Institute had been able to begin the process of restructuring and revitalization; however, it had not received the funds required for long-term sustainability and to establish GAINS. In the absence of significant additional contributions, INSTRAW would run out of funds in early 2001 and would be closed.

INSTRAW restructuring

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/54 [YUN 1999, p. 1107], the INSTRAW Director submitted a May report on the implementation of revitalization measures [E/2000/59]. Steps taken included the appointment of a new director and development of a new vision and working method based on the GAINS system. A prototype GAINS web site had been developed, an independent feasibility study of GAINS had been carried out, and the system had been approved as the Institute's new working method by the INSTRAW Board of Trustees. However, the Director stated, resources available in the INSTRAW Trust Fund were not sufficient to cover the costs of implementing the initial phases of GAINS. If sufficient support to INSTRAW was not forthcoming in the next few months, all the revitalization efforts undertaken would not bear fruit and the Institute would continue to be threatened with pending closure.

The Council also had before it an executive summary of the independent feasibility study of GAINS [E/2000/98], according to which its objectives were to provide a system for researchers to collaborate and disseminate their work and for trainers to deliver training and capacity-building to women. GAINS services would include a comprehensive, searchable database on gender-related research and training, collaborative research and training, and capacity-building. The study concluded that putting INSTRAW's programme of collaborative research and training on women on the global electronic network was both technically feasible and essential. It estimated a start-up cost of $800,000 and recommended operationalizing GAINS by building the web site and deploying the tools in cooperation with partners at UNDP and in the industry.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2000/24 [draft: E/2000/L.23] without vote [agenda item 14 (a)].

Revitalization and strengthening of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1979/11 of 9 May 1979, in which it recommended that the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women be located in the Dominican Republic, a developing country,

Recalling also its resolution 1999/54 of 29 July 1999, in which it requested the Institute to adopt a new approach to research, training and communications through increased use of new information and communications technologies,

Recalling further the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Institute and General Assembly resolution 54/140 of 17 December 1999 on the revitalization and strengthening of the Institute,

Recalling the importance of information and communications technologies for the advancement of women and the role of the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System in gender research, training, information dissemination and networking, in particular for women in developing countries, while at the same time supporting traditional methods of information dissemination, research and training,

Taking note of paragraph 85 (c) of the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", held in New York from 5 to 10 June 2000, which called for support for national efforts, particularly in developing countries, for enlarged access to new information technology as part of the efforts to develop collaborative research, training and information dissemination, including through the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System being developed by the Institute, while at the same time supporting traditional methods of information dissemination, research and training,

Stressing the need to rectify continuing anomalies noted in the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on an evaluation of the Institute,

1. Takes note of the report of the Board of Trustees of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women on its twentieth session and of the recommendations and decisions contained therein;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Director of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women;

3. Commends the Institute for undertaking important measures for its revitalization, in particular the development and launching of the prototype of the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System at the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", and its presentation at the information technology exhibit held in this connection at the high-level segment of the Economic and Social Council from 5 to 7 July 2000;

4. Acknowledges and appreciates the support of those Governments and organizations that have contributed towards the revitalization efforts of the Institute and the preparation of the prototype of the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System;

5. Expresses grave concern that, despite these efforts, the level of contributions has not adequately increased to a level to enable the full implementation of the System nor the operational viability of the Institute beyond 31 December 2000;

6. Urges Member States to inform the Institute as soon as possible if contributions will be forthcoming in order for it to be able to plan its operations beyond 2000;

7. Urges the Institute, in order to improve its financial situation, to continue to explore new and innovative means of funding, and in this regard decides to amend article VI, paragraph 1, of the statute of the Institute, as follows:

"The activities of the Institute shall be funded by voluntary contributions from States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, foundations, including the United Nations Foundation, private sources and other sources in accordance with article VII of the statute";

8. Urges the Secretary-General:

(a) To continue to invite Member States to contribute to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women so that it can continue to fulfil its mandate beyond 2000;

(b) To encourage other relevant sources of funding within the United Nations, such as the United Nations Foundation, to contribute to the restructuring of the Institute;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session information on:

(a) Progress made in securing an adequate financial base for the operational viability of the Institute beyond 2000;

(b) Progress made in addressing the administrative anomalies noted in the report of the Joint Inspection Unit;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council at its substantive session of 2001 on the implementation of the present resolution.

ACABQ report. In December [A/55/677], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) reported that the level of contributions to the INSTRAW Trust Fund had continued to decrease rapidly, declining from $1.9 million in 1992 to $602,150 in 1999. So far in 2000, the Institute had received $388,489 in contributions, and unpaid pledges amounted to $144,950. Based on a statement submitted by the Secretary-General [A/C.5/55/26], which estimated INSTRAW's financial requirements for 2001 at $1.3 million, compared with projected contributions of $90,000, ACABQ stated that it would be for the General Assembly to indicate the level and manner in which assistance should be provided to meet the anticipated shortfall.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, the General Assembly, on a one-time, exceptional and emergency basis, decided to advance INSTRAW up to $800,000 from the regular budget for 2001 pending receipt of voluntary contributions. If voluntary contributions were insufficient to meet 2001 requirements, the advance would be considered a one-time-only subvention and those resources would be reported in the context of the performance report on the 2000-2001 programme budget. The Assembly emphasized the need for the Institute to pursue, as a priority activity, the expansion of its donor base (decision 55/457).

Also on 23 December [meeting 89], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/595 & Corr.1,2], adopted resolution 55/219 without vote [agenda item 107].

The critical situation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/140 of 17 December 1999, in which it, inter alia, took note with appreciation of the proposal for a new working method of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women through the establishment of an electronic Gender Awareness Information and Networking System, and urged Member States and inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations to contribute or consider increasing their contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women,

Reiterating paragraph 85 (c) of the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", which called for support for national efforts, particularly in developing countries, for enlarged access to new information technology as part of the efforts to develop collaborative research, training and information dissemination, including through the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System developed by the Institute, while at the same time supporting traditional methods of information dissemination, research and training,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/24 of 28 July 2000, in which article VI, paragraph 1, of the statute of the Institute was amended with the aim of allowing the Institute to fund its activities on the basis of voluntary contributions from States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, foundations, including the United Nations Foundation, private sources and other sources, in accordance with article VII of the statute,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, which provides an overview of the current situation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women;

2. Acknowledges with appreciation that, despite severe limitations, and in compliance with the request of the General Assembly in its resolution 54/140, the Institute translated the Gender Awareness Information and

Networking System into Spanish and is in the process of initiating translation into other official languages of the United Nations;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the current efforts being made by the Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Economic and Social Affairs and the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women of the Secretariat for the revitalization of the Institute;

4. Expresses grave concern over the following matters:

(a) Despite the revitalization and fund-raising efforts undertaken by the Secretary-General and the Institute, contributions have not reached the level required to enable the Institute to operate beyond 31 December 2000;

(b) The lack of resources to ensure the future of the only research and training institute for the advancement of women within the United Nations system;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly during its fifty-fifth session on additional possibilities to support the Institute in fulfilling its personnel and administrative needs in conformity with article VII of its statute;

6. Decides, in view of the difficult financial situation of the Institute, to provide it with financial assistance on a non-recurrent basis, in a manner to be determined, in order to enable it to continue its activities throughout 2001;

7. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations that continue to contribute to and support the activities of the Institute;

8. Urges Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to continue to contribute to or consider increasing their contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women to facilitate the ongoing programmes and activities of the Institute;

9. Invites the Institute to intensify its campaign to raise funds and attract support from, inter alia, private sector foundations and corporations for its activities;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution and to include in his reports on the activities of the Institute detailed information on the financial flows of the Trust Fund and the utilization of the resources of the Institute, in keeping with similar reports on such institutes as the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders.

Chapter XI

Children, youth and ageing persons

In 2000, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) continued efforts to improve the situation of children worldwide, especially through advocacy and alliance-building activities and programmes aimed at confronting major challenges affecting children's well-being, including poverty, armed conflict, HIV/AIDS and discrimination.

UNICEF continued to focus on follow-up to the 1990 World Summit for Children, which set comprehensive goals for child survival and development. During the year, national, regional and global end-decade reviews were prepared for the special session of the General Assembly in 2001 to assess progress towards World Summit goals and consider future action. Following the first substantive meeting of the Preparatory Committee for the special session (May/June), the Assembly, in November, decided that the special session would be convened from 19 to 21 September 2001.

UNICEF efforts towards child protection were supported in 2000 by the Security Council and the General Assembly. The Council adopted a resolution on the impact of armed conflict on children (see p. 723), by which it called for all parties to abide by commitments made to ensure the protection of children in situations of armed conflict, as well as for the disarmament and demobilization of child soldiers. The Assembly adopted two optional protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, on the involvement of children in armed conflict, and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography (see p. 615). The Commission on Human Rights and the Assembly also took action to protect children's rights, including meeting the needs of the girl child (see pp. 714 and 1114 respectively).

United Nations activities concerning young people continued to focus on accelerating implementation of the 1995 World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, based on the results of two high-level global meetings convened in Portugal in 1998: the first World Conference of Ministers Responsible for Youth, which adopted the Lisbon Declaration on Youth Policies and Programmes, and the third session of the World Youth Forum of the United Nations System, which approved the Braga Youth Action Plan.

As follow-up to the 1999 International Year of Older Persons, the General Assembly decided to convene the Second World Assembly on Ageing in Madrid, Spain, in April 2002, on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of the first World Assembly (Vienna, 1982), which had adopted the International Plan of Action on Ageing. The Second World Assembly was expected to adopt a revised Plan of Action and a new long-term strategy on ageing.

United Nations Children's Fund

UNICEF's annual flagship reports assessed the well-being of children: The State of the World's Children 2000 noted that despite the many steps forward, a number of the goals of the 1990 World Summit for Children [YUN 1990, p. 797] remained out of reach for hundreds of millions of children; The Progress of Nations 2000 chronicled progress, challenges and constraints regarding early childhood care, immunization and HIV/AIDS, as well as the plight of children who were not reachable, and presented statistical data on a number of social indicators, such as child mortality rates, maternal mortality, malnutrition, education and health.

In 2000, UNICEF's global advocacy, partnerships, programme activities, data collection and analysis, and management and operations were oriented towards achievement of the objectives of the 1998-2001 medium-term plan [YUN 1998, p. 1093], within the context of the end-decade goals of the 1990 World Summit for Children and the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 560] (see p. 614). UNICEF also took steps to consolidate its rights-based approach. Activities at all levels focused on the end-decade review of the 1990 World Summit goals, preparations for the General Assembly special session on children in 2001, and the preparation of the medium-term strategic plan for 2002-2005.

Among the events and activities in 2000 that offered UNICEF special opportunities to promote the rights of children, and to build and sustain partnerships and alliances were the adoption, by General Assembly resolution 54/263 (see p. 615), of two optional protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography; the adoption of International Labour Organization (ILO) Convention No. 182 on the elimination of the worst forms of child labour [YUN 1999, p. 1388]; Security Council resolutions on women and children in armed conflict (see pp. 723 and 1113); the Millennium Summit (see p. 47); the International Conference on War-Affected Children (see p. 724); and the World Education Forum (see p. 1081). In addition, a major step forward for the Global Movement for Children was made with the launch of the Leadership Initiative in May; UNICEF worked with partners in the Movement to develop a set of 10 imperatives for children. However, several setbacks and long-standing problems impeded progress for children, such as persistent poverty, the high debt burdens of developing countries, the HIV/AIDS pandemic, armed conflicts and natural disasters.

UNICEF cooperated with 162 countries, areas and territories during the year: 46 in sub-Saharan Africa; 35 in Latin America and the Caribbean; 34 in Asia; 20 in the Middle East and North Africa; and 27 in Central and Eastern Europe, the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and the Baltic States.

Programme expenditures totalled $1,021 million in 2000, of which 40 per cent was spent on child health; 18 per cent on education; 12 per cent on hygiene, water and environmental sanitation; 9 per cent on community development and gender programmes; 8 per cent on child protection; 7 per cent on child nutrition; and 6 per cent on assessment, analysis and monitoring. In addition, $90 million was spent on management, administration, write-offs and other charges. UNICEF operations in 2000 were described in the 2001 UNICEF Annual Report and the annual report of its Executive Director [E/ICEF/2001/4 (Parts I & II)].

The UNICEF Executive Board held its first regular session of 2000 (31 January–3 February), the annual session (22–25 May) and the second regular session (18–20 September), all in New York [E/2000/34/Rev.1]. During those sessions, the Board adopted 18 decisions.

The Economic and Social Council, in decision 2000/242 of 28 July, took note of the Board's report on its first regular session; an extract from the report on its 2000 annual session [E/2000/L.8] listing various decisions adopted; and the annual report of the Executive Director covering 1999

[E/2000/7], which was transmitted in accordance with a February decision of the Board [E/2000/34/Rev.1 (dec. 2000/4)].

In September [dec. 2000/18], the Executive Board adopted the dates and programme of work for its 2001 sessions. The first regular session would be held from 22 to 26 January, the annual session from 4 to 8 June, and the second regular session from 4 to 7 September.

Programme policies

In decisions related to UNICEF's programme policies, the Executive Board encouraged Governments to ratify the two optional protocols to the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child and asked the Executive Director to support States' efforts to do so [dec. 2000/11]. The Board requested the Executive Director to continue cooperating with UN agencies and other partners to promote achievement of the 1990 World Summit goals and to prepare for the General Assembly's special session in 2001 [dec. 2000/9]. The Board took note [dec. 2000/5] of the recommendations of the second meeting of the World Health Organization (WHO)/UNICEF/United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) Coordinating Committee on Health [YUN 1999, p. 1151]. It approved an extension of the programme of cooperation with Rotary International's PolioPlus programme (2001–2005), in addition to an extension of the Vaccine Independence Initiative (2001–2005) [dec. 2000/14]. It endorsed proposals regarding the timing of various elements of the multi-year funding framework [dec. 2000/3] and approved the 2000–2003 financial medium-term plan [dec. 2000/15]. The medium-term plan was a rolling four-year plan updated every two years [YUN 1998, p. 1093], except for the financial plan, which was updated annually.

Follow-up to 1990 World Summit for Children

In March [E/ICEF/2000/11], UNICEF submitted to the Executive Board its annual progress report on follow-up to the 1990 World Summit for Children [YUN 1990, p. 797], covering 1999. The report presented an overall assessment of global trends and outlined the processes established to prepare for the end-decade review in 2001 (see p. 1132), including national reviews and ongoing efforts to strengthen national capacities in the collection and use of data for monitoring progress towards the Summit goals.

The report stated that, while progress had been made on some of the goals, overall achievements fell short of the global targets set for the end of the decade. Key challenges remained in addressing underlying conditions that had had an impact on children and their families, including debt servicing, declining levels of development aid, armed conflicts, natural disasters and the HIV/AIDS pandemic. Regarding the major goals of the Summit, the under-five mortality rate (U5MR) had declined, but the pace of the decline was slowing. Lack of progress in the reduction of maternal mortality during the 1990s was due, among other factors, to the overall status of women and the lack of respect for their rights. WHO projections suggested that malnutrition rates in children under five had decreased from 32 per cent in 1990 to 27 per cent in 2000, representing only one third of the targeted reduction. However, significant progress was made for some micronutrient goals, particularly the provision of iodized salt and vitamin A supplements. Slow progress in education revealed the decisive impact of prevailing economic and social disparities on access to school, completion of basic education and learning achievement. The number of people lacking access to safe drinking water and sanitation remained virtually unchanged over the decade. Child protection had gained ground, particularly in the development of international standards related to child labour, the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and children in armed conflict.

In May [dec. 2000/9], the Executive Board urged Governments to adopt appropriate measures to accelerate progress towards the end-decade goals, including allocating the maximum resources possible for action, and asked them to conduct national and subnational reviews of such progress. The Executive Director was asked to support the efforts of Governments and civil society to achieve the end-decade goals and to improve national capacities for monitoring progress. She was also asked to cooperate with UN agencies and other partners at the national and international levels to promote the achievement of Summit goals and in preparing for the special session of the General Assembly in 2001, to support the Secretary-General in preparations for his report on the end-decade review in 2001, and to report in 2001.

General Assembly special session (2001)

In May [dec. 2000/6], the Executive Board, having considered the activities and budget for UNICEF secretariat support to the General Assembly special session on the follow-up to the World Summit for Children in 2001, approved the request and allocated the funds for global advocacy for children's rights and for the special session ($2.02 million), civil society mobilization ($1.37 million), children and youth mobilization

($875,000), regional advocacy and mobilization ($690,000) and the substantive secretariat work ($450,000). The Executive Director was asked to provide an interim report on the use of the funds in 2001 and a final report in 2002.

A March report [E/ICEF/2000/AB/L.2] to the Executive Board, on the activities and budget for UNICEF as the substantive secretariat to the General Assembly special session on children in 2001 and additional events, outlined UNICEF's substantive and technical support to the special session's preparatory process. The Executive Director requested that the Board approve additional funds amounting to $5.4 million for 2000-2001 to cover the preparations.

Preparatory Committee. The Preparatory Committee for the special session, established by General Assembly resolution 54/93 [YUN 1999, p. 1113], held an organizational session on 7 and 8 February [A/55/43 (Part I)] and a substantive session from 30 May to 2 June [ibid. (Part II)], both in New York.

In February, the Committee considered a report of the Secretary-General [A/AC.256/2] containing proposals on the scope of the Committee's review and consideration of further initiatives, and on the role of the UN system and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in the preparatory process. The Committee adopted decisions related to its substantive session, NGO participation in its work and arrangements for future sessions.

In May/June, the Committee adopted a decision proposing the dates and venue of the special session, adopted the provisional agenda for its second substantive session and decided on arrangements for NGO accreditation and participation of associate members of the regional commissions. It agreed to authorize its Bureau, with the support of the substantive secretariat, to prepare a draft outcome document.

The Committee had before it an April report of the UNICEF Executive Director on emerging issues for children in the twenty-first century [A/AC.256/3-E/ICEF/2000/13], which analysed progress since the 1990 World Summit and examined the major challenges remaining, including deepening poverty and greater inequality; proliferating conflict and violence; the spread of HIV/AIDS; and continuing discrimination, particularly against women and girls. Proposals for future action were also outlined. The Committee also considered the views of the UNICEF Executive Board [A/AC.256/6] on the report. It reviewed a May report of the Secretary-General updating progress in the preparatory process [A/AC.256/5].

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 54/93 [YUN 1999,

p. 1113], the Secretary-General, in September [A/55/429], reported on the state of preparations for the special session at the national, regional and global levels. The Secretary-General indicated that strong momentum was building for the special session. The report highlighted elements of the draft outcome document to be considered at the special session. It described action taken to facilitate the participation of key actors—Governments, NGOs, children and adolescents, the UN system—in the special session, as well as activities taken to support regional reviews of follow-up to the 1990 World Summit.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 November [meeting 69], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/26 [draft: A/55/L.34/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 42].

Preparations for the special session on children

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/217 of 21 December 1990, in which it welcomed the adoption by the World Summit for Children of the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s, 51/186 of 16 December 1996, 53/193 of 15 December 1998 and 54/93 of 7 December 1999,

Bearing in mind the nearly universal ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration and, in particular, the paragraphs relevant to the situation of children,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the state of the preparations for the special session of the General Assembly in 2001 for follow-up to the World Summit for Children,

Taking note also of the reports of the Preparatory Committee for the Special Session on its organizational and first substantive sessions and of the decisions contained therein,

1. Reaffirms the commitments adopted by the heads of State and Government at the World Summit for Children on 30 September 1990, as contained in the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s, and their appeal to give every child a better future;

2. Also reaffirms that the special session of the General Assembly in 2001, while reviewing the achievements in the implementation and results of the World Declaration and Plan of Action, will make a renewed commitment and consider future action for children in the forthcoming decade;

3. Stresses that the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child contributes to the achievement of the goals of the World Summit for Children, and recommends that a thorough assessment of the ten years of implementation of the Convention be an essential element in the preparations for the special session;

4. Welcomes the initiatives and actions taken by Governments and relevant organizations, in particular the United Nations Children's Fund, as well as regional and subregional organizations, to review the progress achieved since the World Summit for Children, and in this regard encourages appropriate national, regional and international preparatory activities with a view to contributing to the preparations for the special session and building partnerships for and with children;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, taking into account the national reports to be submitted by Member States, to submit to the General Assembly at its special session, through the Preparatory Committee for the Special Session, a review of the implementation and results of the World Declaration and Plan of Action, including appropriate recommendations for further actions, which also elaborates on the best practices noted and obstacles encountered in the implementation process, as well as on measures to overcome those obstacles;

6. Reaffirms the need for the full and effective participation of Member States, and in this regard reiterates its invitation to heads of State and Government to participate in the special session;

7. Welcomes the assignment by heads of State and Government of personal representatives to the Preparatory Committee, and reiterates the invitation to heads of State and Government who have not assigned personal representatives to consider doing so;

8. Reiterates its invitation to States members of the specialized agencies that are not Members of the United Nations to participate in the work of the special session, in the capacity of observers;

9. Reaffirms the important role of all relevant actors, including non-governmental organizations, in implementing the Plan of Action, and stresses the need for their active involvement in the preparatory process, including in the work of the Preparatory Committee, and at the special session, the modalities for which are being addressed by the Preparatory Committee;

10. Reiterates the importance of a participatory process at the national, regional and international levels with a view, inter alia, to establishing partnerships among a broad range of actors, including children and young people, in order to raise momentum for the rights and needs of children;

11. Highlights the important role of children and young people in this process, and in this regard encourages States to facilitate and promote their active contribution to the preparatory process, including in the work of the Preparatory Committee, and the special session;

12. Urges all relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, including the funds and programmes, specialized agencies and the international financial institutions, actively to participate in the preparations for the special session;

13. Reiterates its invitation to the Committee on the Rights of the Child to provide its input to the preparatory process and at the special session;

14. Reiterates its invitation also to all relevant experts, including the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, to participate in the preparatory process and the special session, in accordance with the established practice;

15. Decides to convene the special session of the General Assembly for follow-up to the World Summit for Children from 19 to 21 September 2001, and to refer to it as the "special session on children";

16. Decides also to convene two substantive sessions of the Preparatory Committee in New York during 2001, one from 29 January to 2 February and the other from 11 to 15 June;

17. Decides further to invite the associate members of the regional commissions listed in the footnote to participate as observers in the special session and its preparatory process, subject to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

18. Reaffirms the importance of the full participation of the least developed countries in the special session and the preparations for the session, and in this regard expresses its appreciation to the Governments which have made financial contributions to the trust fund established by the Secretary-General for that purpose, and invites the Governments which have not yet contributed to do so;

19. Expresses its appreciation to the Governments which have made financial contributions towards the preparatory activities undertaken by the United Nations Children's Fund as the substantive secretariat of the special session, and encourages Governments which have not yet contributed to do so;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session an item entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the special session on children".

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 55/458, decided that the agenda item on the special session would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Emergency assistance

A March report [E/ICEF/2000/12], prepared in response to a 1997 Executive Board request [YUN 1997, p. 1209], described UNICEF's role in unstable situations, such as armed conflict, disasters and violent situations. UNICEF implemented programme activities for children and women, emphasizing advocacy, assessment and coordination, and care and protection. In those efforts, UNICEF implemented an integrated approach in meeting the rights and needs of children and women in crisis, taking into account the relationships between physical and emotional security, social and cognitive development, and health and nutritional status. The approach highlighted UNICEF's commitment to providing support to children and women affected by unstable situations, through mutually reinforcing actions in the areas of humanitarian policy, global advocacy and humanitarian response.

The report reviewed UNICEF's initial response to the protection and care of children in unstable situations at the programme level, as well as the implementation of core corporate commitments (CCCs) to ensure effective action at the outset of crises. The CCCs, which were identified at the Martigny Global Consultation, convened by UNICEF in 1998 to formulate recommendations to improve UNICEF responsiveness to children in unstable situations, covered rapid assessment, coordination, and programme and operational commitments. Since the Consultation, improvements had been made in coordinated action in support of children and women; assessment and vulnerability analysis; effective delivery of UNICEF CCCs and competencies to ensure life-saving support, in order to advocate and sustain support throughout the transition from relief to development; and planning, management and monitoring of programme responses to the rights and needs of children and women. Annexed to the report was a detailed description of the CCCs.

Maurice Pate Award

The Executive Director recommended that the Maurice Pate Award for 2000 be presented to an NGO, the Rural Family Support Organization (RUFAMSO) of Jamaica, and that $25,000 be allocated from general resources for that purpose. Established in 1966 [YUN 1966, p. 385], the Award was presented to RUFAMSO for advancing the survival, protection and development of young children and adolescents in Jamaica through a holistic and integrated programme of family support. On 25 May [dec. 2000/10], the Executive Board decided to present the Award to RUFAMSO and approved the allocation.

UNICEF programmes by region

During 2000, regional UNICEF expenditure in support of programmes totalled $1,021 million, of which $392 million (38 per cent) was spent for programmes in sub-Saharan Africa; $309 million (30 per cent) for programmes in Asia; $89 million (9 per cent) for programmes in Central and Eastern Europe, CIS and the Baltic States; $86 million (8 per cent) for programmes in the Middle East and North Africa; and $84 million (8 per cent) for programmes in the Americas and the Caribbean. In addition, $61 million (6 per cent) was spent for interregional programmes. Total programme expenditure represented an increase of 5 per cent over 1999.

As in previous years, the majority of UNICEF resources was spent in 63 low-income countries with a per capita gross national product of $785 or less. Those countries had a total child population of 1.3 billion, or about 69 per cent of all children worldwide, and received 67 per cent of programme expenditure, which was 1 per cent higher than in 1999. About 35 per cent of UNICEF programme expenditure went to countries where the U5MR was classified as very high or high.

Field visits

In March, members of the UNICEF Executive Board visited Ghana and Namibia to learn more about the strategies adopted by UNICEF offices in relation to basic service delivery, capacity-building and strengthening of ownership at the community level. The team found that the Governments of both countries had played a strong role in the coordination of activities in various sectors and in harmonizing the different types of support provided. Mid-term reviews of the two country programmes had resulted in changes that better adapted the programmes of the country offices to national priorities. In Ghana, UNICEF had responded to marked disparities in socio-economic indicators by geographically re-focusing its programme to target the most disadvantaged and vulnerable groups; improve coverage and delivery of social services in the areas of health, education, water and sanitation, and household food security; and promote capacity-building in those sectors. In Namibia, where HIV/AIDS had become the primary cause of death, UNICEF had taken the lead within the UN system in advocating HIV/AIDS-related activities in the area of capacity-building and technical assistance and had included HIV/AIDS components in existing projects. Projects in both countries had been implemented in the context of a community-based approach to improve sustainability and ownership by local people. The team concluded that country programmes reflected the special situation of children in each country and the decentralized structure of UNICEF had proved to be very helpful in that regard. UNICEF was also a leading partner in key areas relating to children's rights and had been working effectively in the priority areas of early childhood care and adolescence.

A second delegation visited China from 19 March to 1 April, where it observed that the key problems in the UNICEF programming environment were related to problems of equity, quality and gender, as well as to the limitations of cost recovery in social services and the need to continue developing and refining social policies. Regarding equity, the Government was concerned about growing gaps in basic social services between the eastern and western parts of the country. Although remarkable achievements were noted in basic services, particularly education, the challenge was to upgrade their quality. Some progress was made regarding the status of women and girls, but gender imbalance persisted in the remote areas for various reasons, including old-age support and security concerns. Gender imbalance was particularly obvious in the area of basic education. As to the limitations of cost recovery in social services, the introduction of user fees could create a hardship for the poor or put the services out of their reach. The delegation observed the need for qualified and trained social workers as part of the development of social safety nets. Among emerging challenges were issues of social protection, HIV/AIDS and the continuing problem of rural water and sanitation.

The Executive Board, in May [dec. 2000/8], took note of the reports on the field visits.

UNICEF programmes by sector

The major share of UNICEF programme expenditure continued to be in the areas of health ($358 million or 35 per cent), basic education ($160 million or 16 per cent) and programme support ($136 million or 13 per cent). Significant shares also went to water and environmental sanitation ($104 million or 10 per cent), community development and gender programmes ($84 million or 8 per cent), child protection ($70 million or 7 per cent), nutrition ($58 million or 6 per cent) and programme assessment, evaluation and monitoring ($51 million or 5 per cent).

A total of $26.2 million was available to country programmes in 2000 from the global set-aside of 7 per cent of regular resources. Based on the criteria set out in a 1997 Executive Board decision establishing the set-aside [YUN 1997, p. 1220], allocations were made by the Executive Director for strategic programming efforts in support of programme priorities and for additional special needs. The largest portion of funds—38 per cent of the total—was spent on immunization programming, as was the case in 1999. The portion of the funds utilized to support AIDS-related programming increased to 23 per cent in 2000, compared with 11 per cent in 1999. In addition, 15 per cent of the global set-aside was used for malaria prevention and control while the remainder was earmarked for special purposes, including support for various programmes in East Timor (8 per cent), Bangladesh (2 per cent), Afghanistan (2 per cent) and Jamaica (1 per cent). Overall, 53 per cent of the set-aside was allocated to sub-Saharan Africa, and 26 per cent went to Asia.

Child and adolescent health

UNICEF activities to reduce childhood death and disease, improve early childhood care, reduce maternal mortality, prevent childhood disability and improve adolescent health continued to focus on achieving the targets and goals established at the 1990 World Summit for Children [YUN 1990, p. 797], including immunization, HIV/AIDS prevention, malaria control and nutritional support. In 2000, UNICEF, as a Board member of the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunization (GAVI), made key contributions to the GAVI goals of universal access to, and use of, immunization services and accelerated introduction of new and underused vaccines in the poorest countries. UNICEF remained the main vaccine supplier to developing countries, buying vaccines for 75 per cent of those children. UNICEF's Vaccine Independence Initiative aimed to help Governments build and sustain their own immunization programmes. Through the Initiative, Kazakhstan and Turkmenistan covered the costs of their children's vaccine needs for the first time in 2000. As a result of UNICEF partnerships, some 12 million women were immunized against tetanus, a disease that put them at risk of dying during or after childbirth; the number of measles cases in southern and central Iraq declined from 10,000 in 1999 to just 678 in 2000; and the lives of almost 1 million children might have been saved since 1998 by the distribution of vitamin A capsules, an increasingly common add-on to immunization campaigns.

Through the Global Polio Eradication Initiative, a campaign spearheaded by UNICEF, WHO, Rotary International, the United States Centers for Disease Control and national Governments, some 1 billion children had been vaccinated against polio in the past two years, placing the world on track for certification as polio-free by 2005. An unprecedented 550 million children under the age of five were immunized during 2000, including 76 million in West Africa. In October, 36 countries in Asia and the Western Pacific region were declared polio-free.

The Roll-Back Malaria Initiative, led by UNICEF, WHO, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the World Bank, promoted the distribution of bednets treated with insecticides and anti-malarial drugs in 37 countries. Within Africa, UNICEF procured more than 1 million bednets and helped to develop anti-malarial policies. Community-based health and nutrition programmes were being supported in some 70 countries.

During the year, early childhood care and development strategies succeeded in improving the practices of some 32,500 caregivers in Nepal, training 8,000 parents in Jordan and training counsellors and preparing national infant feeding policy guidelines in several countries in Eastern and Southern Africa. UNICEF supported surveys on childhood disabilities in 10 countries, and continued to promote universal salt iodization to eliminate iodine deficiency disorders. In addition, landmine awareness efforts were supported in some 24 countries, including Azerbaijan, Cambodia, Eritrea and Lebanon, and the northern Caucasus.

As part of the Safe Motherhood Initiative and an alliance for women's reproductive health, UNICEF supported maternal health programmes in 111 countries and provided training for birth attendants in some 71 countries. The distribution of iron folate and other micronutrient supplements was supported in 59 countries and the fortification of commercial foods in 14 countries. However, the World Summit goal of reducing global low birth-weight rates to less than 10 per cent had proved to be one of the most difficult to achieve. Some of the constraints facing efforts were country-specific, such as resistance to supplementation or problems associated with monitoring weight within 24 hours of birth. More than 100 UNICEF country programmes included a focus on young people's health, development and participation, mostly through life skills and health education as well as the provision of youth-friendly health services. Much of UNICEF mobilization and communication efforts regarding HIV/AIDS focused on young people, with support provided in 2000 for innovative outreach programmes in Haiti and the United Republic of Tanzania. In addition, pilot programmes were initiated in several countries for the prevention of mother-to-child transmission of the virus.

Basic education

In 2000, school enrolment rates continued to increase, despite continuing challenges to the goals of improving access to and the quality of basic education, such as instability and crisis, the AIDS pandemic, persistent poverty, early marriage and a large number of working children. UNICEF assisted 390,000 more girls to enter school in Ethiopia, 130,000 more children (30 per cent girls) in Afghanistan and 11,500 children in Yemen. Some 12,000 working children were reintegrated into schools in Bolivia. In Egypt, retention rates to the fifth grade reached 95 per cent in UNICEF-supported community schools. About 10,000 schools in 46 countries improved the learning environment with UNICEF support, while almost 270,000 teachers and school principals participated in UNICEF-assisted training programmes. In Zambia, UNICEF helped set up 250 community schools for thousands of AIDS-orphaned and other vulnerable children; in Bangladesh, more than 200,000 urban working children were enrolled in learning centres supported by the Fund. As a result of the joint efforts of UNICEF, the World Food Programme, NGOs and other partners to rebuild East Timor's education system, some 95 per cent of school-age children were enrolled by mid-2000. In addition, UNICEF-supplied Schools-in-a-Box brought learning basics to 50,000 students.

UNICEF was asked to lead the 10-year Girls' Education Initiative of the United Nations, launched at the 2000 World Education Forum in Dakar (see p. 1081). During the year, an increase in girls' enrolment rates was reported in more than 20 countries. In Pakistan, some 4,500 girls aged 12 to 18 were trained as educators through UNICEF support and helped establish 950 home schools for children, mostly girls, in need of basic education or extra help. Some 10,000 schools in 46 countries improved the learning environment with UNICEF support, while almost 270,000 teachers and school principals participated in UNICEF-assisted training programmes.

Protection from armed conflict, exploitation and abuse

UNICEF continued to work with various partners to provide protection, relief and rehabilitation to young victims of war, abuse and all forms of violence. New child labour legislation or plans were introduced in some 20 countries, mostly in Latin America and the Caribbean. Efforts were also directed at promoting birth registration, which was increasingly recognized as having an important role in the realization of children's rights. During the year, UNICEF-supported campaigns resulted in the registration of more than 1 million births in Bangladesh and some 322,000 births in Ecuador.

UNICEF provided assistance to some 50 countries in order to ensure greater consistency of juvenile justice systems with the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 560]. In 2000, juvenile justice laws were reformed in Lebanon; child and adolescent defence systems in Peru processed 120,000 cases of violation of children's rights; and UNICEF supported training of police, judges and social workers in Iran.

Humanitarian relief efforts—including rehabilitation of basic health care, education, nutrition, and water and sanitation systems, usually accompanied by major shipments of critically needed supplies—benefited children of displaced and returnee populations in the Congo, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Eritrea and Sierra Leone, and the UN-administered Kosovo province of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, as well as victims of drought and floods in Ethiopia, Madagascar and Mozambique. UNICEF supported mine-awareness efforts in 24 countries during 2000.

UNICEF, in collaboration with NGOs and agencies of the UN system, supported the organization of special events on strategies for delaying marriage of girls; ending female genital mutilation; combating sexual exploitation of girls; and identifying the role of men as partners in ending violence. It supported the elimination of female genital mutilation in 16 countries, including Burkina Faso, Djibouti, Egypt, Ethiopia, Kenya, Mali and Senegal.

Prevention of gender discrimination

UNICEF continued to highlight activities aimed at eliminating gender inequalities in childhood, ending violence against women and girls and promoting their rights. Sensitization seminars were organized for nearly 90,000 women and their husbands in Bangladesh. Local leaders, child protection officers, law officers and children received gender and child rights training in 66 districts in Viet Nam; similar training was provided to 4,800 community leaders in Uganda and to 85,000 village government members in two states in India. In Peru, UNICEF supported an initiative aimed at breaking patterns of gender socialization and stereotyping at an early age and provided gender-sensitive parent education in Jamaica, Maldives, Mexico, Nepal, the Philippines and Viet Nam. UNICEF worked with local women activists, NGOs and other UN agencies to support innovative programmes against domestic violence in almost all regions. The Fund's advocacy efforts resulted in the declaration of honour killings as a criminal offence in Pakistan and the launch of campaigns against violence and abuse in Guyana and the Philippines.

Poverty reduction

The UNICEF strategy on poverty reduction asserted that it must begin with children to prevent lifelong damage. In 2000, UNICEF launched the booklet Poverty Reduction Begins with Children and organized panel discussions with ILO and the World Bank.

UNICEF continued as the lead agency for the 20/20 Initiative, endorsed by the 1995 World Summit for Social Development [YUN 1995, p. III3]. The precepts of the 20/20 Initiative had become better known and understood, and the principle that it encapsulated—joint and equal partnership between donor and developing countries to accelerate improvements in human well-being and capacity—had gained legitimacy as an essential element in the overall strategy to reduce poverty.

Studies had been prepared in 40 countries to assess the percentage of social budgets and official development assistance allocated to basic social services.

In October, UNICEF collaborated with the World Bank on the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper/Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative. The enhanced HIPC Initiative had created an opportunity for policy dialogue and the potential for support of additional programmes benefiting children.

Organizational and administrative matters

UNICEF finances

In 2000, UNICEF income amounted to $1,139 million, which was $27 million higher than the $1,112 million estimated in the 2000 financial medium-term plan and $21 million more than 1999 income. UNICEF derived its income entirely from voluntary contributions, primarily from two sources: contributions of Governments and intergovernmental organizations (64 per cent ($725 million)); and non-governmental and private sector groups and individuals (32 per cent ($366 million)). Another 4 per cent ($48 million) came from other sources.

Budget appropriations

In January [dec. 2000/2], the Executive Board approved the allocation of additional regular resources totalling $9,967,000 to fund programmes in 10 countries as well as a one-year extension of country programmes for Egypt and for Malaysia, as recommended by the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2000/P/L.19].

In September [dec. 2000/12], the Board approved the Executive Director's recommendations for funding for 33 country programmes, one sub-regional programme for Palestinian children and women and four programmes with other resources only [E/ICEF/2000/P/L.27], amounting to the following respective amounts for regular resources and other resources for each region: Africa, $129.9 million and $282.3 million; Americas and the Caribbean, $9.3 million and $49.2 million; Asia, $221.6 million and $420.6 million; Central and Eastern Europe, CIS and the Baltic States, $11.3 million and $38 million; and the Middle East and North Africa, $10.8 million and $28.5 million. Also in September [dec. 2000/13], the Board approved the allocation of additional regular resources totalling $41.7 million for programmes in 21 countries, as recommended by the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2000/P/L.46].

On 19 September [dec. 2000/15], the Board approved the Executive Director's proposal regarding the 2000-2003 financial medium-term plan [E/ICEF/2000/AB/L.5 & Corr.1] as a framework of projections, including the preparation of up to $640 million in programme expenditures from regular resources to be submitted to the Board in 2001. The amount was subject to the availability of resources and to the condition that estimates of income and expenditure in the medium-term plan remained valid.

On the recommendation of the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2000/P/L.47], in September [dec. 2000/14], the Board approved a five-year extension (2001-2005) of the programme of cooperation with the PolioPlus Programme of Rotary International and an increase of $20 million in funding from other resources, subject to the availability of specific-purpose contributions from Rotary International. A five-year extension (2001-2005) of the Vaccine Independence Initiative was also approved, with an increase of $10 million from other resources, for a total of $20 million.

Audits

A July report of the Office of Internal Audit (OIA) [E/ICEF/2000/AB/L.7] summarized the results of audits completed in 1999. Consistent with the field-based emphasis of the UNICEF structure, the focus of OIA audit efforts in 1999 was directed towards the assessment of risks and controls in field offices. The report observed that overall control in almost all UNICEF field locations continued to be satisfactory, although some offices experienced transitional challenges in the introduction of the Programme Manager System and its reporting features. The Executive Board, on 20 September [dec. 2000/17], took note of the report.

Resource mobilization strategy

In response to a 1999 Executive Board decision [YUN 1999, p. 1120] requesting UNICEF to develop a multi-year funding framework (MYFF) that conceptually integrated organizational priorities and major areas of action, resources, budget and outcomes, the Executive Director submitted a report [E/ICEF/2000/5] describing the main building blocks of the MYFF in current practice and how they functioned. It presented an outline of the system UNICEF intended to build, including the actions planned or under way to strengthen each element of the MYFF, as well as the interlinkages among them. The report proposed possible changes in the timing of presentation of MYFF elements that called for the Board's first regular session to focus largely on the budget, financial resources and strategic issues in programme co-operation; the second regular session to focus on planning issues; and the annual session to consolidate all elements of reporting on results, including resource mobilization results, and provide opportunities to present and discuss policy issues.

In February [dec. 2000/3], the Board endorsed the proposed timing of the presentations of the various MYFF elements, with due regard for the extra provisions regarding proposed changes to the support budget. In that regard, the Board asked the Executive Director to submit the proposed modifications to the budget process to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) prior to the Board's 2000 annual session (see below). The Board endorsed the proposal that the next medium-term strategic plan be presented in 2001 for a fixed period of four years (2002-2005); at that occasion, the timing of the presentation of the MYFF elements would also be reviewed. The Executive Director was asked to update the programmatic content of the medium-term strategic plan during the four-year period.

In accordance with decision 2000/3 (see above), the Executive Director submitted a March report [E/ICEF/2000/AB/L.3], proposing modifications to the budget process. Describing constraints in the existing process, she recommended that the biennial support budget be submitted to the first regular session of the first year of the biennium and that the Executive Director have the authority to manage the support management structure within the approved appropriation.

An April report of ACABQ [E/ICEF/2000/AB/L.4], noting that UNICEF did not have a mechanism to deal with unforeseen expenditures, recommended that the Executive Director examine the Fund's current practice and report to the Board through ACABQ on possible policy options. ACABQ also asked her to review all elements and components of the present planning, programming and budget process to identify areas that might be streamlined, as well as reported on less often.

In May [dec. 2000/7], the Board asked UNICEF to conduct consultations with its members and the Committee on Conferences with a view to enabling the Board to approve future biennial support budgets before the end of the preceding biennium, while maintaining the principle that the plan drove the budget. It decided that, within the approved support budget appropriations, the Executive Director had the authority to adjust the support management structure to meet programme and medium-term strategic plan priorities, with the proviso that the establishment of any post above the level of P-5 would require prior approval by the Board. Any changes in the support structure in terms of the grading and number of posts would be reported in the Executive Director's annual report to the Board.

Private Sector Division

In a financial report on the Private Sector Division (PSD) for the year ending 31 December 2000 [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.6], UNICEF stated that the total net income from PSD activities for the year was $163.3 million for regular resources, compared to $202.9 million in 1999. That amount included $41.7 million from the sale of UNICEF greeting cards and other products, $154.1 million from private sector fund-raising activities, and an offset of $32.5 million for other charges and adjustments. In addition, $146.2 million ($153.5 million in 1999) was raised from private sector fund-raising activities that were earmarked for other resources. The net consolidated income, including both regular and other resources, totalled $309.5 million ($356.4 million in 1999).

The Executive Board, in January [dec. 2000/1], approved for 2000 budgeted expenditures of $93.1 million for the PSD work plan, as presented in the proposed budget [E/ICEF/2000/AB/L.1]. The Board authorized the Executive Director to incur expenditures as outlined in the proposed budget and to increase expenditures up to the proposed maximum ($95.1 million) should there be an apparent net proceeds increase from product sales and/or private sector fund-raising, and, accordingly, to reduce expenditures should the net proceeds decrease. She was also authorized to redeploy resources between the various budget lines up to 10 per cent of the amounts approved, and to spend additional funds between Board sessions, when necessary, up to the amount caused by currency fluctuations, to implement the 2000 work plan.

In related action, the Board approved the changes in posts with a net decrease of six posts, as indicated in the proposed budget; established the Nordic Investment Programme, which included four countries, with a budget of $4 million for 2000; authorized the Executive Director to incur expenditures in the 2000 fiscal period related to the cost of goods delivered for the 2001 fiscal year up to $37.6 million; and approved the PSD medium-term plan.

In September [dec. 2000/16], the Board took note of the PSD financial report and statements for the year ended 31 December 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1120].

Coordinating Committee on Health

The second meeting of the WHO/UNICEF/UNFPA Coordinating Committee on Health (Geneva, 2-3 December 1999) [E/ICEF/2000/7] made recommendations related to improving the coverage, scope and quality of immunization services and enhancing follow-up to the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development [YUN 1994, p. 955], especially regarding maternal disease and death, adolescent health and development, mother-to-child transmission of HIV/AIDS and coordination of follow-up activities. The Committee also reviewed resolutions and decisions adopted by the governing bodies of the three organizations.

The Executive Board, on 3 February [dec. 2000/5], took note of the Committee's recommendations.

Youth

Implementation of the World Programme of Action for Youth

In 2000, United Nations policies and programmes involving youth continued to focus on implementation of the 1995 World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 50/81 [YUN 1995, p. 1211]. The Programme of Action addressed the problems faced by youth worldwide and outlined ways to enhance youth participation in national and international policy- and decision-making. The 1998 Lisbon Declaration on Youth Policies and Programmes, adopted at the first World Conference of Ministers Responsible for Youth [YUN 1998, p. 1103], outlined further policy commitments by Governments in the areas of national youth policy, participation, development, peace, education, employment, health and drug abuse. Just prior to the World Conference, the third session of the World Youth Forum of the United Nations System adopted the Braga (Portugal) Youth Action Plan, a set of goals and actions aimed at fostering youth participation for human development. The Plan and the outcomes of the World Conference were submitted to the Assembly in 1999.

Report of Secretary-General. The Commission for Social Development, at its thirty-eighth session (New York, 8-17 February, 14 and 17 March) [E/2000/26 & Corr.1], considered a report of the Secretary-General [A/AC.253/13-E/CN.5/2000/2] on the implementation of the outcome of the 1995 World Summit for Social Development [YUN 1995, p. 1114] that described action taken by Governments to integrate groups at risk of marginalization, including children and youth.

Based on reports received from 74 Governments, the report observed that although many countries had made progress in improving the situation of youth, much remained to be done. The social marginalization of youth was a problem of increasing severity in many countries. One important source was unemployment and barriers to entering the labour market. Persistent high unemployment among youth had led to exclusion and alienation from society and in some cases to increased crime, drug abuse and violence. There was an increased awareness among Governments of the need for comprehensive youth policies. Many Governments had formulated national plans of action for the integration of youth and increased youth employment. A large percentage of Member States had adopted cross-sectoral national youth policies and implemented national plans of action for youth. Other initiatives included programmes to facilitate transition from the educational system to the labour market, efforts to enhance youth entrepreneurship and self-employment, improved social services for youth, increased youth participation in public affairs and measures to combat and prevent illicit drug use among young people.

Follow-up to 1999

International Year of Older Persons

Report of Secretary-General. At its thirty-eighth session (New York, 8-17 February, 14 and 17 March [E/2000/26 & Corr.1], the Commission for Social Development considered a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.5/2000/4] on follow-up to the 1999 International Year of Older Persons [YUN 1999, p. 1124], designated by the General Assembly in a 1992 Proclamation on Ageing contained in resolution 47/5 [YUN 1992, p. 889]. The Year aimed to promote the United Nations Principles for Older Persons, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 46/91 [YUN 1991, p. 698].

The report presented possible options for the review and update of the International Plan of Action on Ageing, adopted by the 1982 World Assembly on Ageing [YUN 1982, p. 1184]. It summarized the views of States, organizations of the UN system and NGOs on the feasibility and desirability of convening a Second World Assembly on Ageing in 2002 and the development of a long-term strategy on ageing for the consideration of the Commission; the Assembly, in resolution 54/24 [YUN 1999, p. 1125], had entrusted the Commission with revising the Plan and developing the long-term strategy. The report contained a possible chronology of events leading to the proposed Second World Assembly.

The report concluded that there was broad support and interest among those countries expressing a view on convening a World Assembly in 2002. Various opinions were expressed regarding the revision, updating or adjusting of the 1982 International Plan of Action and the development of a long-term strategy on ageing. Initial draft texts would need to be submitted to the Commission in 2001, with a view to their being finalized in 2002. The Commission would need to make a decision on postponing the fifth review and appraisal of the Plan of Action, mandated to take place in 2001, and on a review of the global targets on ageing, should it decide to proceed with the revision of the Plan of Action.

Commission action. In February [E/2000/26 & Corr.1 (dec. 38/100)], the Commission for Social Development decided to establish a working group to meet in 2001 and 2002 to revise the 1982 International Plan of Action on Ageing and develop a long-term strategy on ageing for presentation to the Second World Assembly on Ageing. The Secretary-General was asked to present to the Commission in 2001 a first draft of a long-term strategy on ageing and a draft revised plan of action, as requested in resolution 54/24. The Economic and Social Council was requested to extend until 2002 the mandate of the Commission's consultative group for the preparation for the International Year of Older Persons, in order to serve as a forum for exchanging views on preparations for the Second World Assembly as a follow-up to the 1999 International Year. The Commission decided to postpone the fifth review and appraisal of the International Plan of Action until finalization of the activities for the revision of the Plan and the development of the long-term strategy.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 3 May [meeting 7], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2000/1 [draft: E/2000/L.4] without vote [agenda item 2].

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 54/262 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 25 May [meeting 97], the General Assembly adopted resolution 54/262 [draft: A/54/L.85] without vote [agenda item 106].

Follow-up to the International Year of Older Persons: Second World Assembly on Ageing

The General Assembly,

Recalling the World Assembly on Ageing, held at Vienna in 1982, which adopted the International Plan of Action on Ageing,

Reaffirming the importance of the United Nations Principles for Older Persons, as adopted by its resolution 46/91 of 16 December 1991,

Recalling its resolution 54/24 of 10 November 1999 and previous resolutions on ageing and the International Year of Older Persons,

Acknowledging the initiatives undertaken and the momentum generated, at all levels, towards addressing the challenge of ageing and the concerns and contributions of ageing and older persons by the celebration of the International Year of Older Persons, and convinced of the necessity of ensuring an action-oriented follow-up to the International Year of Older Persons with a view to sustaining that momentum,

Recalling resolution 37/2 adopted by the Commission for Social Development at its thirty-seventh session,

Bearing in mind that, under its resolution 54/24, the General Assembly has entrusted the Commission for Social Development with the revision of the International Plan of Action on Ageing and the elaboration of a long-term strategy on ageing,

Recalling the offer made at the fifty-fourth session of the General Assembly by the Government of Spain to host a second World Assembly on Ageing in 2002,

1. Decides to convene the Second World Assembly on Ageing in 2002, on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of the first World Assembly on Ageing held at Vienna, to be devoted to the overall review of the outcome of the first World Assembly, as well as to the adoption of a revised plan of action and a long-term strategy on ageing, encompassing its periodic reviews, in the context of a society for all ages;

2. Stresses that, in fulfilling these objectives, the Second World Assembly should give particular attention, inter alia, to:

(a) Action-oriented measures to be taken by societies in a comprehensive response to the current ageing processes, on the basis of the best practices and lessons learned during the International Year of Older Persons, and bearing in mind the social, cultural and economic realities of each society;

(b) Linkages between ageing and development, with particular attention to the needs and perspectives of developing countries;

(c) Measures to mainstream ageing within the context of current global development agendas;

(d) Appropriate forms of public and private partnership, including with non-governmental organizations, at all levels, for building societies for all ages;

(e) Measures to strengthen the solidarity between generations, keeping in mind the needs of both older and younger generations;

3. Accepts the offer of the Government of Spain to host the Second World Assembly on Ageing, and decides that the Second World Assembly shall be held in Spain in April 2002;

4. Invites all States Members of the United Nations, members of the specialized agencies and observers, as well as other intergovernmental organizations, in accordance with the established practice of the General Assembly, to participate at a high level in the Second World Assembly;

5. Invites non-governmental organizations in the field of ageing, as well as research institutions and representatives of the private sector, to participate in and contribute to the Second World Assembly and its preparatory process, including organizing meetings and studies related to the themes of the Second World Assembly;

6. Decides that the Commission for Social Development shall serve as the preparatory committee for the Second World Assembly on Ageing and, as such, shall be open to the participation of all States Members of the United Nations, members of the specialized agencies and observers, in accordance with the established practice of the General Assembly;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to consult Governments, intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations to elicit their views on progress in and obstacles to the implementation of the International Plan of Action on Ageing, as well as on priority issues to be addressed in a revised plan of action and a long-term strategy on ageing;

8. Invites the Secretary-General to establish a technical committee, funded through voluntary contributions, to assist him in the formulation of proposals to be submitted during the preparatory process to the Commission for Social Development;

9. Stresses that the technical committee should ensure, in its composition, an adequate geographical balance among its members, who will serve in a personal capacity, and the integration of multidisciplinary backgrounds, including perspectives from the research institutions, non-governmental organizations in the field of ageing, the private sector and older persons themselves;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to encourage the active participation of the United Nations programmes and funds and the specialized agencies and related organizations in the preparations for the Second World Assembly, inter alia, within the framework of the Administrative Committee on Coordination and its subsidiary machinery;

11. Invites all relevant organs of the United Nations system, including the regional commissions, funds and programmes, the specialized agencies and the Bretton Woods institutions, to participate in the Second World Assembly and its preparatory process;

12. Encourages Member States and other actors to support the preparatory activities by the Secretariat so as to ensure the quality of the outcome of the Second World Assembly and to provide voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for Ageing in support of preparatory activities of the Second World Assembly, including the participation of least developed countries;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution under the item devoted to social development.

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with resolution 54/262 (see p. 1141), the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/55/167], reviewed activities and developments related to follow-up to the 1999 International Year of Older Persons, including initial preparations for the Second World Assembly on Ageing (2002).

The Secretary-General drew attention to two meetings held as follow-up activities. The Economics Commission for Africa convened an expert group meeting on sustainable social structures in a society for all ages (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 2-5 May), and the first international conference on rural ageing (West Virginia, United States, June) was held on the theme "A global challenge". He described activities taken to implement the conceptual framework developed by the UN programme on ageing to facilitate exploration of a society for all ages, which was built on a four-dimensional framework, comprising the situation of older persons, lifelong individual development, multigenerational relationships and the interplay between population ageing and development.

The preparatory process leading up to the Second World Assembly, which would be devoted to a review of the first World Assembly, as well as the adoption of a revised plan of action and a long-term strategy on ageing, was under way. The Secretary-General observed that, while the essence of the 1982 Plan of Action remained useful, its content and policy recommendations were in need of a fresh and updated approach in order to contend with current demographic and socio-economic realities. The UN programme on ageing had initiated the revision process, beginning with the development and mailing of questionnaires to Member States, intergovernmental organizations, UN system members and NGOs. An analysis of the questionnaires would be submitted to the Commission for Social Development in 2001.

The first meeting of the Technical Committee for the Second World Assembly on Ageing (Frankfurt, Germany, 13-16 June), an expert group established by the Secretary-General, considered ways to ensure that ageing in developing countries was fully integrated into the revised Plan of Action; the possible format of the revised Plan; issues to be addressed; and implementation and monitoring, including follow-up measures. The Committee's second meeting (Dominican Republic, 24-27 October) focused on the main part of the new Plan of Action, involving priority directions with priority issues, including corresponding objectives and recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/592], adopted resolution 55/58 without vote [agenda item 104].

Follow-up to the International Year of Older Persons: Second World Assembly on Ageing

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/24 of 10 November 1999, and its resolution 54/262 of 25 May 2000, by which it decided to convene the Second World Assembly on Ageing, to be held in Spain in April 2002,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/1 of 3 May 2000, as well as Commission for Social Development decision 38/100 of 17 February 2000,

Acknowledging the initiatives undertaken and the momentum generated, at all levels, towards addressing the challenges of the ageing of populations and the concerns and contributions of older persons by the celebration of the International Year of Older Persons,

Bearing in mind that, in its resolution 54/262, the General Assembly decided that the Commission for Social Development would serve as the preparatory committee for the Second World Assembly on Ageing,

Reiterating that the Second World Assembly on Ageing should give particular attention, inter alia, to linkages between ageing and development, with particular attention to the needs, priorities and perspectives of developing countries,

Reaffirming the necessity of ensuring that the Second World Assembly on Ageing will provide an action-oriented follow-up to the International Year of Older Persons, and recognizing the importance of an adequate preparatory process,

Reaffirming also that the revised plan of action and the long-term strategy on ageing will contain realistic financial recommendations for implementation,

Recognizing the continuing process of elaboration of the United Nations research agenda on ageing for the twenty-first century, which is aimed at providing a background for policy responses to ageing, in particular in developing countries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the follow-up to the International Year of Older Persons;

2. Decides that the Second World Assembly on Ageing shall be held at Madrid from 8 to 12 April 2002;

3. Invites Member States, where appropriate, to consider extending the mandate of national committees or other mechanisms established on the occasion of the International Year of Older Persons in order to undertake national preparations for the Second World Assembly on Ageing, and also invites Member States currently without them to consider appropriate ways or mechanisms for their preparations for the Second World Assembly;

4. Notes the encouraging responses of Member States, United Nations entities and non-governmental organizations to the request by the Secretariat eliciting their views on the progress in and obstacles to the implementation of the International Plan of Action on Ageing, as well as on priority issues to be addressed in a revised plan of action, and encourages those that have not yet responded to consider doing so;

5. Invites the regional commissions to explore the feasibility of holding regional activities with Member States, non-governmental organizations and other relevant actors of civil society in their region, in preparation for and as follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing;

6. Invites the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to launch, in cooperation with the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat and the host country, an information campaign for the Second World Assembly on Ageing;

7. Welcomes the establishment by the United Nations programme on ageing of the Internet-accessible database on policies and programmes on ageing, and invites Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to collaborate with the Secretariat in updating and maintaining the database through the provision of timely information;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Chapter XII

Refugees and displaced persons

In 2000, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) provided assistance to 21.1 million persons throughout the world, a decrease from 22.3 million the previous year. More than half of those people (12.1 million) were refugees, 5.5 million were internally displaced persons, 900,000 were asylum-seekers, 800,000 had repatriated, and almost 1.7 million were in other special situations. While there were no new refugee emergencies on the scale experienced in the previous few years, UNHCR continued to face challenging refugee and forced displacement situations, often exacerbated by natural disasters.

African countries continued to host the largest number of refugees, representing almost a third of the worldwide total, with the main groups originating in Sierra Leone, 487,000; the Sudan, 468,000; Somalia, 452,000; Angola, more than 351,000; Eritrea, 346,000; and Burundi, 326,000. The United Republic of Tanzania hosted one of the largest caseloads on the continent, some 488,000 refugees. In January, the Security Council, in a statement on assistance to refugees in Africa, affirmed the need to ensure that both refugees and internally displaced persons in Africa received sufficient protection and assistance, taking into account the special difficulties in providing humanitarian assistance to internally displaced persons on that continent.

Protracted inter-ethnic tension and violence caused displacement of more than 200,000 non-Albanians from Kosovo province into other parts of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, which remained one of UNHCR's major concerns in Europe.

In Central and South-West Asia, renewed and continued fighting between warring factions in Afghanistan dampened hopes for finding a long-term political settlement and peace, a situation that was further compounded by the worst drought experienced in three decades. Thousands of Afghans were displaced internally and thousands more were forced to flee across the border into Iran and Pakistan, where the vast majority of the 2.6 million Afghan refugees were living. During 2000, UNHCR assisted 261,000 Afghans to return voluntarily to Afghanistan from those countries.

Staff safety remained a major concern for UNHCR as it faced restricted access to and lack of security in conflict-ridden areas in Africa, South-West and South-East Asia, the Balkans and Caucasus regions, and South America. During the year, three UNHCR staff members were killed in West Timor and one in Guinea, while carrying out their duties. In October, the UNHCR Executive Committee, noting the coming into force of the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, urged States to consider signing and ratifying that instrument. It also urged the conclusion of an optional protocol to the Convention, which would extend protection to all humanitarian personnel. In other action, the Executive Committee welcomed the UNHCR proposal for commencing global consultations with States aimed at revitalizing the international protection regime for refugees.

In October, the General Assembly elected Ruud Lubbers (Netherlands) as United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for a three-year term beginning on 1 January 2001 to succeed Sadako Ogata (Japan), who had held the position for 10 years.

UNHCR observed its fiftieth anniversary in 2000. In December, the Assembly paid tribute to the work and dedication of UNHCR staff and reaffirmed its support for UNHCR activities on behalf of returnees, stateless persons and internally displaced persons. It decided that, as from 2001, 20 June would be celebrated as World Refugee Day.

Programme policy

Executive Committee action. At its fifty-first session (Geneva, 2-6 October) [A/55/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee of the UNHCR Programme welcomed the UNHCR proposal to commence global consultations on international protection with States to revitalize the international refugee protection regime and to discuss measures to ensure international protection, while taking account of the legitimate concerns of States, host communities and the international community. It affirmed that such a process, on the eve of the fiftieth anniversary of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520], was important for promoting effective implementation of that Convention and its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477], while identifying approaches to new situations not covered by those instruments. The Committee encouraged UNHCR to seek practical responses, in cooperation with States and other relevant actors, to address current and future protection challenges.

For consideration of its annual theme "UNHCR@50: from response to solutions", the Committee had before it a millennium theme paper [A/AC.96/938], which retraced some of the main challenges of the past in chronological order and portrayed in broad terms the essential elements of the international community's response to the refugee problem. It also gave an overview of some of the current dilemmas and identified elements for solutions.

The Secretary-General, in a statement to the Committee in which he paid tribute to the commitment of High Commissioner Sadako Ogata, whose term of office would expire in December, called for support for the High Commissioner's legacy in three areas: strengthening the notion of asylum; a more timely, consistent and adequate system of funding for UNHCR's programmes; and action by States to ensure the safety of humanitarian workers.

Addressing the Committee, the High Commissioner outlined areas needing concrete action in the future. The High Commissioner noted that the refugee crisis in the Kosovo province of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) had revealed a critical need to review UNHCR's emergency mechanisms and response capacity. Consequently, based on the recommendations of an independent evaluation of UNHCR's response to that crisis, UNHCR had begun implementing a plan of action to increase its "surge capacity" through expanded standby arrangements, rosters of trained personnel ready for rapid deployment, and kits and packages designed to meet immediate security, logistics, telecommunications and accommodation needs in the field. In the area of staff safety, UNHCR was examining its security arrangements, including reassessing benchmarks for suspending operations, evacuating staff and the resumption of activities. In developing new approaches to complex forced population movements, UNHCR needed to address two key aspects: ensuring asylum for refugees and meeting the requirements of internally displaced people more effectively. The High Commissioner also addressed the need to bridge the gap between humanitarian and development assistance in the transition from war to peace, and to promote coexistence in divided communities in post-conflict situations.

To meet those challenges, the High Commissioner emphasized that the Office should be managed, trained and equipped for a technologically advanced and globalized environment, taking advantage of the revolution in communications and information technology. Decentralization was crucial, especially in the area of financial and human resources management, and, in that regard, the process had already begun in Africa. Other areas that should be addressed were human resources, staff rotation policies and fund-raising. Raising funds had been a major activity for the High Commissioner, yet UNHCR remained an underfunded organization, while new emergencies had added $100 million to its requirements. UNHCR was reaching out to a new, wider circle of potential supporters among the private sector, the corporate world and the public at large. The budget had been repeatedly reduced during the year, resulting in diminished credibility of UNHCR and strained relations with refugees, Governments and its non-governmental organization (NGO) implementing partners.

By decision 2000/289 of 28 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the High Commissioner's report for 1999/2000 [E/2000/18 & Corr.1,2].

By decision 55/417 of 4 December, the General Assembly took note of the High Commissioner's report for 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1128].

Coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance

In 2000, UNHCR developed new partnerships, while reinforcing ongoing ones in efforts to increase resources reaching refugees and returnees [A/56/12]. Two memorandums of understanding (MOUs) on partnership arrangements were signed with the United Nations Volunteers (UNV) and with the League of Arab States. As a complement to its MOU with the International Organization for Migration (IOM), a joint "Guidance Note on Cooperation in the Transportation Sector" was issued in May.

UNHCR strengthened its collaboration with the World Bank through staff exchanges and joint initiatives under the terms of a Framework for Cooperation signed in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1108]. Joint projects were implemented in Sri Lanka and in countries in the southern Caucasus region, and a staff exchange agreement was activated between the two organizations. During the year, UNHCR also collaborated with the International Labour Organization (ILO) and held its annual high-level meeting with the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), which discussed internally displaced persons and the situations in Angola, Colombia and Sri Lanka. UNHCR began a series of meetings with the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC) on geographical and technical issues. UNHCR and IFRC also embarked on an NGO training programme on protection.

In terms of coordination within the UN system, UNHCR continued to participate in the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC), where, with the support of operational agencies, it ensured that staff safety and security remained high on the agenda, as well as in the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC). Using tools such as the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) and the common country assessment (CCA), UNHCR was able to strengthen cooperation and coordination with other UN agencies.

During 2000, UNHCR entered into project agreements with 536 NGOs covering operational activities in favour of refugees and other populations of concern to UNHCR. It continued to promote the Partnership in Action (PARinAC) process, aimed at enhancing coordination of refugee activities. The process was introduced to NGOs from the five Central Asian republics, linking members of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) to the more global UNHCR-NGO network. In the Balkans, UNHCR met in Sarajevo with 30 NGOs from Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and FRY to discuss the return of refugees and internally displaced persons and linking those efforts to a broader international NGO network. Meetings were also held in the United Republic of Tanzania and Tunisia where a conference was held for UNHCR and NGO staff from North Africa, the Middle East and the Gulf States.

In October [A/55/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee, recognizing the importance of NGOs as partners in UNHCR's humanitarian work on behalf of refugees, extended their observer participation until the end of 2003, at which time it would be reviewed.

Evaluation and inspection activities

UNHCR, reporting on its evaluation activities in an August report [A/AC.96/935], stated that, with the establishment of the Evaluation and Policy Analysis Unit [YUN 1999, p. 1129], a new evaluation policy was introduced based on the principles of transparency, independence, consultation and relevance. As an initial step in its application, UNHCR declassified all previous evaluation reports and posted those issued during the past four years on its web site. It also established an Evaluation Committee to guide the evaluation function and created individual steering committees for each evaluation project. Several initiatives were being undertaken to further enhance the evaluation function in UNHCR, including providing evaluation training, expanding the evaluation consultancy roster and finding ways to plan the work programme more systematically and to integrate evaluation findings more effectively into UNHCR's planning, programming and policy-making.

The major evaluation undertaken during the year was a review of UNHCR's emergency preparedness and response in the Kosovo refugee crisis, based on the findings of an independent team of experts. That evaluation played a major part in the formulation of UNHCR's plan of action to strengthen its emergency preparedness and response capacity. In the area of refugee security and protection, UNHCR undertook a study of violence in Kenya's refugee camps and an evaluation of its security measures in the United Republic of Tanzania. The Office began an evaluation of its policy for refugees in urban areas with reviews of its programmes in New Delhi, India; Cairo, Egypt; and Nairobi, Kenya. Other evaluations were initiated on the reintegration of returning refugees, refugee education, internally displaced persons, protracted situations of displacement, UNHCR's role in relation to statelessness and in strengthening national NGOs, and UNHCR training activities with implementation partners, among others.

As described by UNHCR in its annual report [A/56/12], real-time evaluation missions were undertaken to assess new emergency operations in Angola, Eritrea and the Sudan, while a beneficiary-based evaluation of the UNHCR programme was conducted in Guinea. The Office also joined the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the World Food Programme (WFP) in commissioning an inter-agency evaluation of the UN humanitarian assistance programmes in Afghanistan, focusing on needs assessment and beneficiary identification.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/55/597], adopted resolution 55/74 without vote [agenda item 109].

Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the activities of her Office and the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the work of its fifty-first session and the conclusions and decisions contained therein,

Recalling its resolution 54/146 of 17 December 1999,

Commending the High Commissioner, her staff and their implementing partners for the competent, courageous and dedicated manner in which they discharge their responsibilities, paying tribute to those staff members whose lives have been endangered in the course of their duties, and strongly condemning the deaths and injuries and other forms of physical and psychological violence experienced by staff members as a consequence of generalized as well as targeted violence,

Expressing appreciation, in this year which marks the fiftieth anniversary of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, for the work accomplished since its establishment in responding to the protection and assistance needs of refugees and in promoting durable solutions to their plight, and commending States for their cooperation and support,

1. Endorses the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the work of its fifty-first session;

2. Strongly reaffirms the fundamental importance and the purely humanitarian and non-political character of the function of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees of providing international protection to refugees and seeking permanent solutions to the problem of refugees, and reiterates the need for Governments to continue to facilitate the effective exercise of this function;

3. Expresses sincere appreciation and gratitude to Sadako Ogata for her unrelenting efforts throughout her tenure as United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to promote innovative humanitarian solutions to the refugee problem in various parts of the world, and for her inspiring example in performing her functions in an effective and dedicated manner;

4. Reaffirms that the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees remain the foundation of the international refugee regime and recognizes the importance of their full application by States parties, notes with satisfaction that one hundred and forty States are now parties to one instrument or to both, welcomes the fact that an intergovernmental event involving those States is planned on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the Convention, and encourages the Office of the High Commissioner and States to strengthen their efforts to promote broader accession to those instruments and their full implementation;

5. Notes that fifty-two States are now parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and that twenty-three States are parties to the 1961 Convention on the reduction of statelessness, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue her activities on behalf of stateless persons;

6. Reaffirms that, as set out in article 14 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, everyone has the right to seek and enjoy in other countries asylum from persecution, and calls upon all States to refrain from taking measures that jeopardize the institution of asylum, in particular by returning or expelling refugees or asylum-seekers contrary to international standards;

7. Emphasizes that the protection of refugees is primarily the responsibility of States, whose full and effective cooperation, action and political resolve are required to enable the Office of the High Commissioner to fulfil its mandated functions, welcomes the proposal of the Office of the High Commissioner to commence a process of global consultations on international protection, and requests a report thereon;

8. Welcomes measures taken by the Office of the High Commissioner to make protection effective, recognizing that international protection is a dynamic and action-oriented function, carried out in cooperation with States and other partners, inter alia, to promote and facilitate the admission, reception and treatment of refugees and to ensure protection-oriented solutions;

9. Stresses the importance of international solidarity, burden-sharing and international cooperation to share responsibilities and partnerships in reinforcing the international protection of refugees, urges all States and relevant non-governmental and other organizations, in conjunction with the Office of the High Commissioner, to cooperate and to mobilize resources with a view to reducing the heavy burden borne by States, in particular developing countries, that have received large numbers of asylum-seekers and refugees, and calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to play its catalytic role in mobilizing assistance from the international community to address the economic, environmental and social impact of large-scale refugee populations, especially in developing countries;

10. Condemns all acts that pose a threat to the personal security and well-being of refugees and asylum-seekers, such as refoulement, unlawful expulsion and physical attacks, and calls upon all States of refuge, in cooperation with international organizations where appropriate, to take all necessary measures to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection, including the humane treatment of asylum-seekers;

11. Urges States to uphold the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and settlements, inter alia, through effective measures to prevent the infiltration of armed elements, to identify and separate any such armed elements from refugee populations, to settle refugees in secure locations and to afford the Office of the High Commissioner and other appropriate humanitarian organizations prompt, unhindered and safe access to asylum-seekers, refugees and other persons of concern;

12. Calls upon States and all concerned parties to take urgently all possible measures to safeguard the physical security and property of the staff of the Office of the High Commissioner and other humanitarian personnel, to investigate fully any crime committed against them and to bring to justice persons responsible for such crimes;

13. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner, in cooperation with host countries and in coordination with other relevant United Nations bodies, further to develop and integrate appropriate security arrangements in its operations, and to allocate adequate resources for the safety and security of its staff and the persons under its mandate;

14. Notes that the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel is now in force, calls upon those States that have not yet done so to consider signing and ratifying the Convention, but notes in this regard that the Convention does not automatically apply to most humanitarian personnel, and therefore invites States to provide a timely response to the recommendation of the Secretary-General to extend the scope of legal protection to all United Nations and associated personnel through the development of a protocol to the 1994 Convention or by other appropriate means;

15. Urges all States and relevant organizations to support the High Commissioner's search for durable solutions to refugee problems, including voluntary repatriation, local integration and resettlement in a third country, as appropriate, reaffirms that voluntary repatriation is the preferred solution to refugee problems, and calls upon countries of origin, countries of asylum, the Office of the High Commissioner and the international community to act in a spirit of burden-sharing and partnership to enable refugees to exercise their right to return home in safety and with dignity;

16. Calls upon all States to promote conditions conducive to the voluntary repatriation of refugees in safety and with dignity, including conditions furthering reconciliation and long-term development in countries of return, and to support the sustainable reintegration of returnees by providing countries of origin with necessary rehabilitation and development assistance in conjunction, as appropriate, with the Office of the High Commissioner, relevant mechanisms, including those within the United Nations system, and development agencies;

17. Reiterates the right of all persons to return to their country of origin, emphasizes in this regard the obligation of all States to accept the return of their nationals, calls upon all States to facilitate the return of their nationals who have sought asylum and have been determined not to be in need of international protection, and affirms the need for the return of persons to be undertaken in a humane manner and with full respect for their human rights and dignity, irrespective of the status of the persons concerned;

18. Acknowledges the desirability of comprehensive approaches by the international community, notably at the regional level, to the problems of refugees and displaced persons, and notes in this regard that capacity-building in countries of origin and countries of asylum can play an important role in addressing the root causes of refugee flows, strengthening emergency preparedness and response, promoting and building peace, and developing regional standards for the protection of refugees;

19. Urges States, in cooperation with the Office of the High Commissioner and other relevant organizations, to explore and support fully capacity-building initiatives as part of a comprehensive approach to addressing refugee issues and to take necessary measures to promote sustainable development and to ensure the success of capacity-building activities, and reiterates that such initiatives may include those which strengthen legal and judicial institutions and civil society, those which promote services for refugees, the observance of human rights, the rule of law and accountability and those which enhance the capacity of States to fulfil their responsibilities with respect to persons under the mandate of the Office of the High Commissioner;

20. Reiterates its support for the role of the Office of the High Commissioner in providing humanitarian assistance and protection to internally displaced persons on the basis of criteria enumerated in paragraph 16 of its resolution 53/125 of 9 December 1998, and underlines the continuing relevance of the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement;

21. Calls upon States to adopt an approach that is sensitive to gender-related concerns and to ensure that women whose claims to refugee status are based upon a well-founded fear of persecution for reasons enumerated in the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol, including persecution through sexual violence or other gender-related persecution, are recognized as refugees, and encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to continue and to strengthen its efforts for the protection of refugee women;

22. Urges States and relevant parties to respect and observe principles of international human rights and humanitarian and refugee law that are of particular relevance to safeguarding the rights of the child and adolescent refugees whose situation is particularly vulnerable to abuse, welcomes in this regard the adoption of the Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and calls upon States to consider signing and ratifying them as a matter of priority;

23. Underlines the particular role of elderly refugees within the refugee family, welcomes the development by the Office of the High Commissioner of guidelines to address their special needs, and calls upon States and the Office of the High Commissioner to make renewed efforts to ensure that the rights, needs and dignity of elderly and disabled refugees are fully respected and that programmes are designed bearing in mind their special vulnerabilities;

24. Recalls that the family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and that it is entitled to protection by society and the State, and calls upon States, working in close collaboration with the Office of the High Commissioner and other concerned organizations, to take measures to ensure that the refugee's family is protected, including through measures aimed at reuniting family members separated as a result of refugee flight;

25. Calls upon Governments and other donors to demonstrate their international solidarity and burden-sharing with countries of asylum, in particular developing countries, countries with economies in transition and countries with limited resources that, owing to their location, host large numbers of refugees and asylum-seekers, and urges Governments to respond promptly and adequately to the global appeal issued by the Office of the High Commissioner, presenting requirements under its annual programme budget, to support efforts to widen the donor base so as to achieve greater burden-sharing among donors and to assist the High Commissioner in securing additional and timely income from traditional governmental sources, other Governments and the private sector so as to ensure that the needs of persons under the mandate of the Office of the High Commissioner are fully met.

UNHCR fiftieth anniversary and World Refugee Day

In 2000, UNHCR commemorated its fiftieth anniversary. As a lasting legacy to that achievement, the High Commissioner announced that the independent Refugee Education Trust was being launched on 14 December to provide refugee adolescents in developing countries with opportunities for post-primary education.

The Executive Committee, in a decision on the anniversary and World Refugee Day [A/55/12/Add.1], forwarded to the General Assembly a draft resolution for adoption.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/597], adopted resolution 55/76 without vote [agenda item 109].

Fiftieth anniversary of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and World Refugee Day

The General Assembly

1. Commends the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for its leadership and co-ordination of international action for refugees, and acknowledges the tireless efforts of the Office of the High Commissioner to provide international protection and assistance to refugees and other persons of concern and to promote durable solutions for their problems during the past fifty years;

2. Pays tribute to the dedication of United Nations humanitarian workers and associated personnel, the staff of the Office of the High Commissioner in the field, including local staff, who risk their lives in the performance of their duties;

3. Reaffirms its support for the activities of the Office of the High Commissioner, in accordance with the relevant General Assembly resolutions, on behalf of returnees, stateless persons and internally displaced persons;

4. Notes the crucial role of partnerships with Governments and international, regional and non-governmental organizations, as well as of the participation of refugees in decisions that affect their lives;

5. Recognizes that, by virtue of its activities on behalf of refugees and other persons of concern, the Office of the High Commissioner also contributes to promoting the purposes and principles of the United Nations, in particular those related to peace, human rights and development;

6. Notes that 2001 marks the fiftieth anniversary of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, which sets out the fundamental concepts for international refugee protection;

7. Also notes that the Organization of African Unity has agreed that an international refugee day may coincide with Africa Refugee Day on 20 June;

8. Decides that, as from 2001, 20 June will be celebrated as World Refugee Day.

Enlargement of Executive Committee

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2000/302, took note of Mexico's request [E/2000/92] for membership in the UNHCR Executive Committee and recommended that the General Assembly take a decision at its fifty-fifth (2000) session on the question of increasing the membership of the Executive Committee from 57 to 58 States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/597], adopted resolution 55/72 without vote [agenda item 109].

Enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council decision 2000/302 of 28 July 2000 concerning the enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Taking note also of the request regarding the enlargement of the Executive Committee contained in the letter dated 11 July 2000 from the Permanent Representative of Mexico to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Decides to increase the number of members of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from fifty-seven to fifty-eight States;

2. Requests the Economic and Social Council to elect the additional member at its resumed organizational session for 2001.

Financial and administrative questions

UNHCR's initial annual programme budget for 2000, presented for the first time under a single unified structure, was $933.5 million [A/56/12], revised later to $942.3 million. Of that amount, $824.7 million related to the annual programme budget, $6.8 million to Junior Professional Officers, $20.2 million to the UN regular budget and $90.6 million to supplementary programmes for Angola, East Timor, Eritrea, Sierra Leone and the northern Caucasus. Total income, including adjustments and prior-year cancellations, reached $786 million. Total expenditure amounted to $801.4 million, of which $707.5 million was from the annual programme budget. The latter figure was $117.2 million (or 14 per cent) less than the revised budget, as a result of actions taken in late 2000 to closely manage expenditure. UNHCR expenditure by region in 2000 was as follows: Africa, $285 million; Asia and the Pacific, $75.4 million; Europe, $229 million; the Americas and the Caribbean, $25 million; Central and South-West Asia, and North Africa and the Middle East, $73.4 million.

For 2001, the Executive Committee approved budgetary requirements of $898.5 million. By 31 December, total needs had increased to $953.7 million due to supplementary programmes for Angola, Eritrea and Sierra Leone. It approved the revised 2000 annual programme budget amounting to $824,740,973, which, together with the UN regular budget contribution of $20,191,400, provision for Junior Professional Officers of $6,826,400 and the needs for supplementary programmes, brought total requirements for the year to $942,346,173. The Committee requested the High Commissioner, within available resources, to respond flexibly and efficiently to needs currently under the 2001 budget and authorized her, in the case of additional emergency needs that could not be fully met from the Operational Reserve, to issue special appeals and create supplementary programmes.

Funding arrangements

The Executive Committee, in a decision on the pledging conference [A/55/12/Add.1], recalled the decision of the Standing Committee at its eighteenth meeting [A/AC.96/393] proposing an alternative pledging arrangement and reaffirmed the need to link more closely the procedures relating to the adoption of UNHCR's annual programme budget, the issue of the global appeal and the funding mechanism. It recommended a draft resolution to the General Assembly for adoption.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/597], adopted resolution 55/75 without vote [agenda item 109].

Ad hoc Committee of the General Assembly for the announcement of voluntary contributions to the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1556 A (XV) of 18 December 1960 and 1729 (XVI) of 20 December 1961 on the convening of an ad hoc Committee of the Whole, under the chairmanship of the President of the General Assembly, as soon as practicable after the opening of each regular session of the Assembly, for the purpose of announcing pledges of voluntary contributions to the refugee programmes for the following year,

Recalling also that the ad hoc Committee of the General Assembly for the announcement of voluntary contributions to the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees has been convened annually, under the chairmanship of the President of the General Assembly or his or her designated representative, at United Nations Headquarters, immediately following the debate on the report of the High Commissioner in the Third Committee,

Noting that the General Assembly, in its resolution 54/146 of 17 December 1999, endorsed the presentation of a unified annual programme budget of the Office of the High Commissioner,

Noting also that financial requirements under the annual programme budget for the programmes of the Office of the High Commissioner are presented in the global appeal issued late in November or early in December each year at Geneva, forming the basis for pledges in response to the information provided in the global appeal,

Decides, in order to improve and rationalize the funding mechanism following the adoption of the annual programme budget, that the ad hoc Committee of the General Assembly may be convened as from 2001 at Geneva, the headquarters of the Office of the High Commissioner.

Accounts (1999)

The audited financial statements on voluntary funds administered by UNHCR for the year ending 31 December 1999 [A/55/5/Add.5] showed total expenditure of over $1,023 million and total income of $927 million, with a reserve balance of $145.1 million.

The Board of Auditors' main findings were that a decline in voluntary contributions from donor countries posed a liquidity risk for UNHCR; inadequate segregation of functions in field offices could not ensure checks and balances of responsibility; the asset tracking system had been inadequate to capture accurate and complete non-expendable property databases and had failed to support effective tracking and decentralized management of UNHCR assets; financial statements did not include comprehensive inventory lists and therefore did not reflect an accurate valuation of non-expendable property; of 13 implementing partners having $8.2 million in outstanding advances, 8 had not submitted final sub-project monitoring reports, which had delayed closure of the projects; and the required submission of audit certificates by implementing partners had reached the set target of 70 per cent.

The Board recommended that the Administration should improve presentation of non-expendable property in notes to the financial statements; ensure regular reconciliation of account balances between headquarters and field offices; strengthen proper monitoring and evaluation of programme implementation; and strictly adhere to UN accounting standards.

UNHCR, in September [A/AC.96/933/Add.1], reported on measures taken or proposed to respond to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors.

In an October report [A/55/487], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) shared the concern of the Board of Auditors about UNHCR's financial situation. It commended the Office for steps taken to ensure accountability of implementing partners and hoped that, in view of resource constraints, UNHCR activities would be planned and implemented more efficiently, and greater financial control would be exercised over agency funds and operations. It urged UNHCR to address urgently the shortcomings identified by the Board regarding budgetary control, human resources, programme management and project implementation. Noting the abandonment of the asset management system, ACABQ requested comprehensive data on the implementation of all information technology projects, including costs.

The Executive Committee, in a decision on administrative, financial and programme matters [A/55/12/Add.1], requested to be kept regularly informed on measures taken to address the recommendations and observations raised by the Board of Auditors and ACABQ.

OIOS report

On 7 April, the General Assembly, in resolution 54/257, took note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the 1998 review of the procurement of Lysol disinfectant by UNHCR [A/52/887]. That review determined that there was no evidence that UNHCR staff had acted negligently in the loss of $2.1 million.

Standing Committee

The Standing Committee held three meetings in 2000 (29 February–2 March [A/AC.96/929]; 5–7 July [A/AC.96/939]; 27–28 September [A/AC.96/943]). It considered programmes and funding for the near term, as well as UNHCR's medium-term plan for 2002–2005, and reviewed its programmes and activities in various regions. Other issues included programme/protection policy issues, such as safety and security of staff, and the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and settlements and their security; the independent evaluation of UNHCR's response to the Kosovo emergency; international protection; and matters relevant to management, finance, oversight and human resources. Decisions were adopted on programme and funding, the medium-term plan, the new annual programme budget, and mobilizing resources for a unified budget: the pledging conference, as were conclusions on older refugees and on mainstreaming environmental concerns in refugee operations. The Committee recognized general principles on resourcing UNHCR's unified budget. It endorsed UNHCR's policy on older refugees.

In October [A/55/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee requested UNHCR to include in the documentation for each item of the Standing Committee's 2001 programme of work the relevant audit and ACABQ recommendations, as well as information on steps taken to implement those recommendations and related Executive Committee decisions and conclusions. It authorized the Standing Committee to add items to or delete them from its intersessional programme of work, as appropriate. The items adopted for the 2001 programme of work were international protection; programme/protection policy; programme and funding; governance; coordination; and management, financial, oversight and human resources.

Safety of staff

In 2000, restricted access in conflict areas in various parts of the world inhibited UNHCR's ability to protect and provide relief to many affected populations and impacted the Office's own security, as was evidenced by the murder of three UNHCR staff members in West Timor and one in Guinea. In the aftermath of the killings and abductions of several staff members, UNHCR reassessed its safety and security preparedness and established a strategy to improve security.

On 8 September, the Security Council, in resolution 1319(2000) (see p. 283), welcomed Indonesia's intention to conduct a full-scale investigation into the killings in West Timor and to take firm action against those found guilty.

In an October decision on safety of staff of UNHCR and all other humanitarian personnel [A/55/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee urged States to safeguard the physical security of the staff of the United Nations and its agencies and of other humanitarian personnel, to ensure their safe and unhindered access to affected populations and to investigate fully any crimes committed against those persons and bring to justice those responsible. It noted that the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel [YUN 1994, p. 1289] was in force and urged States to consider signing and ratifying that instrument. It also urged the conclusion of an optional protocol to the Convention, which would extend protection to all humanitarian personnel. The Committee encouraged UNHCR to further develop appropriate security arrangements in its operations and to allocate sufficient resources for the safety and security of its staff and its beneficiary populations.

Refugee protection and assistance

Protection issues

In the 2000 annual report [A/56/12], the High Commissioner said many States, often those with the most limited resources, continued to host large refugee populations on their territories. However, the quality of asylum had deteriorated in a number of countries due to economic and social difficulties of hosting such populations for extended periods, national security considerations, concern about the use of asylum procedures by illegal immigrants, and trafficking and smuggling of persons. While there was general tightening of borders around the world, regions faced different problems, such as politicization and militarization of refugee camps; security risks due to the presence of armed elements in camps and areas populated with refugees; forced conscription of refugees, often minors; trafficking of refugee women and their vulnerability to sexual violence; exploitation and abuse of refugee children; and forced repatriation despite the risks to returnees' safety.

A July note on international protection [A/AC.96/930] pointed out that the Office's international protection function had evolved over the past five decades from being a surrogate for consular and diplomatic protection to ensuring the basic rights of refugees and, increasingly, their physical safety and security. UNHCR had to contend with a rapidly changing and complex environment in which the political, security, economic and social costs of hosting refugees had affected States' willingness and capacity to receive refugees. Its protection function had come under increasing scrutiny and, in situations of large-scale influxes, international assistance to affected States had overshadowed issues of international protection, causing confusion over the relationship between protection and assistance. Additionally, because a plethora of varying notions of protection had emerged, there was a need to clarify its content. International protection encompassed activities covering both policy and operational concerns carried out in cooperation with States and other partners to enhance respect for the rights of refugees and to resolve their problems. The operational focus of UNHCR's international protection activities, coupled with the fact that UNHCR did not have to be invited to become involved in protection matters, had made UNHCR's mandate distinct within the international system. The note examined the Office's organizational practice regarding its four principal protection challenges: ensuring the availability and quality of asylum; revitalizing the refugee protection system; promoting durable solutions for protection and engaging in in-country protection activities; and fostering partnerships to support the international refugee protection system.

Regarding asylum, UNHCR activities were aimed at enhancing the capacity of States to receive and protect refugees; intervening with authorities; ensuring physical safety of refugees; prioritizing the protection needs of women, children, adolescents and the elderly; promoting national legislation and asylum procedures; and determining refugee status. In efforts to revitalize the protection system, UNHCR promoted international refugee law and standards, including through its global campaign to promote accession to international refugee instruments. The Office also explored new approaches to refugee protection, strengthened linkages with international human rights law and international humanitarian law, and encouraged consistency in regional approaches.

UNHCR's work in the field focused on establishing conditions for voluntary repatriation, an activity that retained a political nature, placing it beyond the Office's capabilities. According to the note, return had been used in certain countries as the sole vehicle to achieve ethnic integration and promote multi-ethnicity and, eventually, reconciliation. However, in the highly politicized context in which it often occurred, caution was necessary to ensure respect for protection standards. Other activities in that area included concluding voluntary repatriation agreements; monitoring treatment of returnees; maintaining a presence in the country of origin; assisting returnees, particularly women and children; local integration; and resettlement.

The Office strengthened its partnerships with States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, judges, parliamentarians, journalists, the military and the corporate sector. It promoted collaboration on refugee protection through the "Reach Out" consultative process, initiated in 1998 to engage non-State actors in dialogues on the nature and dimensions of protection challenges, among other initiatives.

In an October conclusion on international protection [A/55/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee welcomed UNHCR's proposal to commence global consultations with States, involving refugee protection experts, NGOs and refugees, to revitalize the international protection regime and to discuss measures to ensure international protection for those who needed it. It also affirmed the importance of according priority attention to the protection needs of women, children, adolescents and the elderly in the planning and implementation of UNHCR's programmes and State policies.

International instruments

In 2000, Mexico and Trinidad and Tobago became parties to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] and its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477]. Swaziland also acceded to the 1951 Convention, bringing the number of States party to one or both instruments to 137. Guatemala, Lithuania, Mexico and Slovakia became parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons [YUN 1954, p. 416], raising the number of States parties to 53. With the accession of Slovakia and Tunisia, the number of States party to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness [YUN 1961, p. 533] reached 23.

Promotional activities

Global consultations

In July, UNHCR launched a process of global consultations on international protection to promote full and effective implementation of the 1951 Convention [YUN 1951, p. 520] and its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477] and to develop new approaches, tools and standards to ensure its continuing vitality and relevance. The consultations were designed along three parallel tracks. The first was to encourage reaffirmation of States parties' commitment to implementation of the Convention and its Protocol, and to promote further accessions. To that end, a major inter-governmental event to mark the fiftieth anniversary of the Convention was being organized by the Swiss Government and UNHCR, to be held in Geneva in December 2001. The second track would provide for the study of developments in refugee law and an examination of emerging issues through expert discussions on specific interpretive aspects of the Convention and its Protocol. The process would comprise four round tables, drawn from Governments, NGOs, academia, the judiciary and the legal profession. The third track would focus on protection policy issues, including those inadequately covered by the Convention. It was designed to foster common understanding of protection challenges and enhance cooperation to address them; to identify and promote practical responses to those challenges; and to develop new approaches, tools and standards. The discussions would take place within the framework of the Executive Committee in 2001 and 2002.

Assistance measures

The global population of concern to UNHCR decreased from 22.3 million in 1999 to 21.1 million in 2000. Those assisted included asylum-seekers, refugees, returning refugees in the early stages of their reintegration, internally displaced persons and other people of concern, mainly victims of conflict. Although there was no massive repatriation on the scale of the 1999 Kosovo repatriation [YUN 1999, p. 1135], some 800,000 refugees returned home, often to situations of uncertainty or fragile peace. The Office also facilitated the resettlement of 40,000 refugees from first asylum countries. Although less frequently an option, local integration provided an opportunity for some groups of refugees to start new lives, particularly in West Africa and the Balkans region. However, solutions remained elusive for the majority of displaced persons, and some protracted situations spanned decades, as in the case of refugees from Afghanistan.

In 2000, UNHCR received a total of some $705.3 million in voluntary contributions towards its annual programme budget.

Refugees and the environment

In 2000, UNHCR's focus on environmental issues evolved in response to the changing needs of its operations in different countries and regions. Priority issues addressed included promoting and implementing UNHCR's environmental policy through practical field activities; designing and implementing an environmental assessment and monitoring programme; strengthening the education programme to raise environmental awareness; training in environmental management for UNHCR staff and implementing partners; and improving communications and outreach within and outside UNHCR.

The Office supported a number of model projects in Afghanistan, Rwanda, the Sudan and Zimbabwe. To raise awareness of environmental management, other initiatives included developing an educational booklet in Liberia, Our Environment: Taking Care of Our Future, in collaboration with the Environmental Foundation for Africa. UNHCR also worked with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) on environmental education projects in Djibouti, Ethiopia, Guinea, Kenya, the Sudan and Zambia, as well as with the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) on projects in Guinea and Kosovo, and in assessing the environmental impact of refugees in Albania and in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Refugee women

UNHCR's approach in addressing the rights and needs of refugee women was to continue efforts to incorporate a gender equality perspective in all its operational activities. Key objectives included the integration of gender analysis into UNHCR's policies, guidelines and key documents, as well as the evaluation of activities from a gender perspective; improvement of prevention of and response to sexual and gender-based violence; empowerment of refugee and returnee women to participate in peace-building; encouragement of dialogue with displaced women; and development of multisectoral regional and country-level gender networks. UNHCR disseminated a new policy directive, Gender Based Persecution, in 2000 and began developing a new Policy on Gender Equality for People of Concern to UNHCR. It also updated its Policy on Refugee Women and began a revision of the Guidelines on the Protection of Refugee Women. The Office facilitated a consultation between representatives of displaced women from Burundi, Colombia, Kosovo, Myanmar and Sierra Leone, and government and intergovernmental and non-governmental organization representatives in October to maintain focus on those women's real needs and concerns.

Also in 2000, UNHCR funded the participation of Burundian refugee women in the Arusha peace talks for Burundi (see p. 146) and supported the creation of a network of women peace activists in West Africa. In addition, UNHCR continued to implement programmes to address sexual and gender-based violence.

Refugee children and adolescents

Some 10 million, approximately 45 per cent of all refugees and other persons of concern to UNHCR, were children and adolescents under 18 years. In 2000, UNHCR retained the issue of refugee children as a policy priority in terms of both international protection and assistance activities. It worked closely with the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and with UNICEF. It also collaborated with the Geneva-based NGO subgroup on refugee children and children in armed conflict and maintained close association with the Action for the Rights of Children training and capacity-building programme. The focus throughout 2000 remained the review and revision of resource materials and regional follow-up activities. Five resource packs—Working with Children; Community Mobilization; Child Soldiers; Education; and Sexual and Reproductive Health—were completed and made available on UNHCR's web site. Other initiatives included workshops to train trainers in East and West Africa and in the Great Lakes region, an expansion of the regional scope of the project to Southern Africa and regional follow-up activities in Eastern Europe and West Africa.

Elderly refugees

UNHCR's policy on older refugees, calling for efforts to mainstream the policy priorities relating to the elderly, was endorsed by the Standing Committee in March [A/AC.96/929] and operationalized through integration into UNHCR programming and learning tools. During the year, all field offices received HelpAge International research and best practices, funded by UNHCR and the European Community Humanitarian Office, as well as the video Hardship and Courage, which described the situation of older refugees, internally displaced persons and returnees in Croatia, and a policy document on older refugees. The policy and examples of activities with older refugees in UNHCR operations were presented in the form of a brochure, Older Refugees—A Resource for the Refugee Community, which was disseminated to UNHCR offices and partners.

Refugees and HIV/AIDS

UNHCR, recognizing that conflicts, instability, food insecurity, poverty and deprivation offered fertile ground for the spread of HIV and AIDS, developed a strong partnership with the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and continued to rely on that agency's expertise and advocacy role in ensuring that refugees were included in existing assistance programmes. In 2000, UNHCR benefited from a grant from the United Nations Foundation—a public charity founded by Robert Edward Turner to manage his gift to the United Nations of some $1 billion—to strengthen reproductive health and HIV/AIDS activities for refugees. The focus of UNHCR's efforts was in Southern and East Africa.

Regional activities

Africa

Security Council consideration. The Security Council, on 13 January [meeting 4089], considered the agenda item "Promoting peace and security: humanitarian assistance to refugees in Africa".

Addressing the meeting, the High Commissioner said that in the last few years, the pattern of refugee crises, especially in Africa, had undergone significant changes. Although refugees continued to flee violence and conflict and to seek asylum in safer countries, they increasingly sought refuge in safer parts of their own countries. In Angola, almost 20 per cent of the population had fled, both outside and inside the country's borders. Hundreds of thousands of people at risk in war areas, such as Angola, Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Sierra Leone and southern Sudan, the majority of them displaced, were currently not accessible to humanitarian organizations. Where such access was possible, it was often very dangerous. Asylum countries that had generously hosted refugees, such as Guinea and the United Republic of Tanzania, had paid a high price in terms of their security and socio-economic and natural environment. War-induced mass population movements had also contributed to the spread of conflicts, as in Central and West Africa. The High Commissioner said that there could be no solution to the refugee crisis if wars that forced people to flee did not stop. However, refugee crises could not be solved in a vacuum. The Council should seek more decisive measures to solve the problems of the indiscriminate struggle for resources, the uncontrolled flow of arms, the lack of a conflict resolution mechanism, and weak support in post-conflict situations.

The High Commissioner suggested the adoption of a comprehensive regional strategy to deal with the host of problems facing Africa. The Council should promote regional initiatives, following the model of the Stability Pact on South-Eastern Europe [YUN 1999, p. 398], that could involve States in the respective regions. It had an essential role to play in preventing, containing and resolving conflicts and, hence, refugee problems in Africa by taking clear, strong and united positions, supporting more decisively, rapidly and substantively the follow-up to peace agreements and promoting the mobilization of resources for reconstruction and peacebuilding.

The High Commissioner noted that resources provided to refugees in Africa, including food and other basic survival items, were far less than in other parts of the world. She hoped that the Council would prompt the international community to address seriously that grave imbalance in material assistance.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 13 January [meeting 4089], the Security Council President, following consultations among Council members, made statement S/PRST/2000/1 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council recalls its previous statements concerning protection for humanitarian assistance to refugees and others in conflict situations, the situation in Africa, the protection of civilians in armed conflict, and the role of the Security Council in the prevention of armed conflicts. The Council further recalls its relevant resolutions, as well as relevant resolutions of the General Assembly.

Bearing in mind its primary responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security, the Council underlines the importance of taking measures aimed at conflict prevention and resolution in Africa. The Council stresses the need to address the root causes of armed conflict in a comprehensive manner in order to prevent those circumstances that lead to internal displacement and the outflow of refugees. The Council notes with concern that the majority of refugees, returnees, internally displaced persons and others affected by conflict are women and children, and stresses the need to intensify efforts to meet their special protection needs, including their vulnerability to violence, exploitation and disease, including HIV/AIDS. The Council underlines the obligation of all Member States to seek to settle their international disputes by peaceful means. The Council condemns deliberate targeting of civilians and practices of forced displacement. The Council reaffirms its commitment to the principles of political independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States. The Council emphasizes that national authorities have the primary duty and responsibility to provide protection and humanitarian assistance to internally displaced persons within their jurisdiction. The Council reaffirms the obligation of States to prevent arbitrary displacement in situations of armed conflict, and reaffirms as well their responsibility to meet the protection and assistance needs of internally displaced persons within their jurisdiction.

The Council expresses its grave concern that alarmingly high numbers of refugees and internally displaced persons in Africa do not receive sufficient protection and assistance. In this context, the Council notes that refugees are protected under the 1951 United Nations Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees, the 1969 Organization of African Unity Convention Governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa, and other relevant initiatives in the region. The Council notes also that there is no comprehensive protection regime for internally displaced persons and that existing norms are not being fully implemented. The Council recognizes that large-scale human suffering as well as violations of human rights and humanitarian law are consequences of, and contributing factors to, instability and further conflict. In this regard, the Council affirms the need to ensure adequate protection and assistance both for refugees and for internally displaced persons, taking into account the special difficulties in the provision of humanitarian assistance to internally displaced persons in Africa.

The Council urges all parties concerned to comply strictly with their obligations under international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law, and emphasizes the need for better implementation of relevant norms with regard to internally displaced persons. The Council invites States that have not already done so to consider ratifying the relevant instruments of international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law. The Council takes note of the efforts made within the United Nations system aimed at promoting an effective collective response by the international community to situations of internal displacement. The Council calls upon States, in particular States with situations of internal displacement in Africa, to cooperate fully with such efforts. The Council notes further that the United Nations agencies and regional and non-governmental organizations, in cooperation with host Governments, are making use of the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement, inter alia, in Africa.

The Council reaffirms the responsibility of States hosting refugees to ensure the security and the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and settlements, in accordance with existing international standards and international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law. In this regard, the Council underlines the unacceptability of using refugees and other persons in refugee camps and settlements to achieve military purposes in the country of asylum or the country of origin.

The Council underlines the importance of safe and unhindered access, in accordance with international law, of humanitarian personnel to civilians in armed conflict, including refugees and internally displaced persons, and the protection of humanitarian assistance to them, and recalls the responsibility of all parties in conflict to ensure the safety and security of such personnel. The Council condemns recent acts of deliberate violence in Africa against humanitarian personnel.

The Council recognizes the extensive experience and burden of African States in hosting refugees and in dealing with the effects of refugee camps and settlements. The Council welcomes the efforts made to support the needs of refugees in Africa, in particular those of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the host countries. Noting with concern the shortfall in funding for programmes for refugees and internally displaced persons in Africa, the Council calls upon the international community to provide such programmes with the necessary financial resources, taking into account the substantial needs in Africa.

Report of Secretary-General. In an October report on assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa [A/55/471], submitted in accordance with resolution 54/147 [YUN 1999, p. 1141], the Secretary-General stated that, at mid-year, UNHCR was assisting almost 6.3 million persons in that continent, nearly one third of the total number of refugees worldwide. The report noted that the main refugee groups continued to originate in Sierra Leone (487,200), the Sudan (467,700), Somalia (451,500), Angola (350,700), Eritrea (345,600) and Burundi (325,500). The tripartite agreement signed in April by Eritrea, the Sudan and UNHCR raised hopes that some 160,000 Eritrean refugees living in the Sudan for the past 30 years would finally go home. However, with the resumption of hostilities between Eritrea and Ethiopia one month later, that did not happen.

In West Africa, security incidents in northern Liberia triggered the flight of more than 11,000 Sierra Leonean refugees further south in Liberia, while 8,000 Liberian refugees left their homes for Guinea. UNHCR and its non-governmental partners also had to leave the area. Since 1997, more than 356,000 Liberian refugees had returned home, either spontaneously or with assistance, and UNHCR was planning to complete the organized repatriation by the end of 2000. During the year, UNHCR continued preparations for the voluntary return of refugees to safe places in Sierra Leone and facilitated the return of some 1,200 Chadian refugees from Cameroon. Meanwhile, it continued humanitarian assistance activities in Gabon and Guinea.

In Central Africa, Sudanese refugees fled to Chad, and the civil wars in the Congo and in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) caused the flight of more refugees from those countries to the Central African Republic and Gabon. In the Great Lakes region, the DRC accommodated 300,000 refugees and 1.4 million displaced persons. UNHCR provided assistance to 180,000 refugees in the DRC from Angola, Burundi, the Congo, Rwanda, the Sudan and Uganda, as well as 300,000 displaced persons. Due to the ongoing unsettled situation in Burundi, refugees from that country continued to flee to the United Republic of Tanzania, which hosted one of the largest caseloads on the continent, some 488,000 refugees. UNHCR supported the Government in dealing with security issues in refugee-affected areas and surrounding villages, addressed sexual and gender-based violence and provided care and maintenance to the majority of refugees in that country. UNHCR monitored the situation in Rwanda and played a role in the reintegration of returnees. The Office contributed also to the drafting, translation and distribution of refugee legislation.

In East Africa and the Horn of Africa, strategies and solutions were developed to end protracted refugee programmes. Agreement was reached on arrangements to allow the repatriation beginning in March of some 3,700 Ethiopian refugees in the Sudan who had fled before 1991. In Somalia, an encouraging development was the resumed voluntary repatriation of Somali refugees from Ethiopia to north-west Somalia. By mid-2000, some 10,000 Somali refugees from camps in Ethiopia had been assisted to repatriate. The resumption of fighting between Eritrea and Ethiopia resulted in an influx of 90,000 Eritrean refugees into the Sudan, and some 750,000 people were displaced inside Eritrea. The signing of a tripartite agreement by UNHCR, Ethiopia and Kenya in June paved the way for the return of 5,000 Kenyan refugees who had been in southern Ethiopia since 1992.

In 2000, UNHCR assisted over 300,000 refugees and asylum-seekers in Southern Africa and 300,000 internally displaced persons in northern Angola. Developments in the Caprivi Strip of Namibia triggered an influx of asylum-seekers into Botswana, which was hosting 3,000 refugees, and UNHCR was working with the Botswana Refugee Advisory Committee to integrate some of the refugees locally. Meanwhile, Angolan refugees in Namibia had increased to over 20,580 persons who were provided with food, non-food items, medical and legal assistance, and shelter. In Zambia, which hosted over 218,000 refugees, UNHCR provided food aid to 60,000 and helped to establish a new camp to accommodate the ever-increasing refugee population, mostly from Angola and the DRC. UNHCR also assisted over 2,000 refugees in Malawi from different countries and close to 1,750 who had been affected by extensive flood damage in Mozambique. The Office provided basic assistance and legal protection to the 58,000 asylum-seekers in South Africa. It also carried out activities to promote refugee law and protection principles in Swaziland and Zimbabwe.

The Secretary-General noted that inter-agency cooperation had been important in providing assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa, although the ravages caused by the AIDS pandemic had added to the difficulties encountered. Such cooperation had been undertaken in the areas of relief assistance; access to populations of concern; coordinating resources; assisting and protecting children; post-conflict reconstruction; and internally displaced persons in Africa. Regional cooperation was strengthened with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the Intergovernmental Authority on Development, as well as with financial institutions, such as the African Development Bank. UNHCR and OAU organized a special meeting of technical experts and policy advisers on international refugee protection (Conakry, Guinea, 27-29 March), which formulated proposals for a comprehensive plan to help strengthen the implementation of the 1969 OAU Refugee Convention and the regime of international protection for asylum-seekers, refugees and returnees and to facilitate the search for durable solutions to refugee problems.

Concluding, the Secretary-General stated that rebuilding a peaceful society in Africa could not be achieved unless displaced persons and refugees successfully returned and reintegrated. Durable solutions could be found only if the alarming pattern of violence in the continent was reversed.

Report of High Commissioner. In the 2000 annual report [A/56/12], the High Commissioner, outlining UNHCR's regional activities in Africa, said that, following the assassination of a UNHCR staff member and the kidnapping of two others in Guinea in September and December, UN Security Phase IV was declared in all locations in that country, except Conakry and Kissidougou, further restricting UNHCR's protection and operational capacity. Responding to the evolving situation in West Africa, UNHCR adopted a regional strategy, establishing, among other initiatives, a subregional repatriation and reintegration cell in April, which contributed to the coordination of the Sierra Leonean and Liberian refugee situations and the reallocation of resources within the subregion. In Guinea, a three-pronged approach was used to provide emergency assistance to Sierra Leonean and Liberian refugees and internally displaced persons in south-east Guinea; to organize internal relocation to relatively safe areas, giving priority to 135,000 refugees stranded west of Gueckedou; and to facilitate repatriation and reintegration for Sierra Leonean refugees from Guinea and promote the same for Liberian refugees. In Southern Africa, UNHCR's overall objective in 2000 was to ensure that the 320,000 refugees in the region continued to enjoy the right to seek asylum and be treated in accordance with international protection standards.

By subregion, UNHCR assisted 1.6 million persons in Central and West Africa, which received almost $77 million in agency expenditure. In East Africa and the Horn of Africa and the Great Lakes region, $175.2 million was spent on more than 2.9 million persons of concern, while in Southern Africa, $32.8 million was spent on programmes assisting almost 600,000 refugees, internally displaced persons, asylum-seekers and returned refugees.

Communications. By a 3 August letter [A/55/286], Ghana transmitted the decisions adopted by the OAU Council of Ministers (Lomé, Togo, 6-8 July) and the declarations and decisions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of OAU (10-12 July), which included a decision on the situation of refugees and displaced persons in Africa. The ministers endorsed the global implementation plan adopted by the OAU/UNHCR Special Meeting of Government and Non-Government Technical Experts (Conakry, Guinea, 27-29 March), as well as the recommendations of the sixth OAU/ICRC Seminar on International Humanitarian Law (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 15-16 May).

By an October letter [A/55/506-S/2000/1006], Burundi conveyed the report of the Subregional Conference on the Question of Refugees and Displaced Persons in Central Africa (Bujumbura, Burundi, 14-16 August), organized by the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa. The participants recommended measures to be taken at the national and subregional levels to find lasting solutions to the problems of refugees and displaced persons in Central Africa.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/55/597], adopted resolution 55/77 without vote [agenda item 109].

Assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/147 of 17 December 1999, Recalling also the provisions of its resolution 2312(XXII) of 14 December 1967, by which it adopted the Declaration on Territorial Asylum,

Recalling further the Organization of African Unity Convention governing the specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa of 1969 and the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights,

Recalling the Khartoum Declaration and the Recommendations on Refugees, Returnees and Internally Displaced Persons in Africa adopted by the Organization of African Unity at the ministerial meeting held at Khartoum on 13 and 14 December 1998,

Welcoming decision CM/Dec.531(LXXII) on the situation of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its seventy-second ordinary session, held at Lomé from 6 to 8 July 2000,

Welcoming also the convening by the Organization of African Unity and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees of the Special Meeting of Governmental and Non-Governmental Technical Experts at Conakry from 27 to 29 March 2000, on the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary of the adoption of the Organization of African Unity Convention governing the specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa, commending the comprehensive implementation plan adopted by the Special Meeting, and noting its endorsement by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its seventy-second ordinary session,

Commending the First Ministerial Conference on Human Rights in Africa of the Organization of African Unity, held at Grand-Baie, Mauritius, from 12 to 16 April 1999, and recalling the attention paid to issues relevant to refugees and displaced persons in the Declaration and Plan of Action adopted by the Conference,

Recalling the sixth Seminar on International Humanitarian Law, convened by the Organization of African Unity and the International Committee of the Red Cross at Addis Ababa on 15 and 16 May 2000, and noting the endorsement of the recommendations of the Seminar by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its seventy-second ordinary session,

Recognizing the contributions made by African States to the development of regional standards for the protection of refugees and returnees, and noting with appreciation that countries of asylum are hosting refugees in a humanitarian spirit and in a spirit of African solidarity and brotherhood,

Recognizing also the need for States to address resolutely the root causes of forced displacement and to create conditions that facilitate durable solutions for refugees and displaced persons, and stressing in this regard the need for States to foster peace, stability and prosperity throughout the African continent,

Convinced of the need to strengthen the capacity of States to provide assistance and protection for refugees, returnees and displaced persons and of the need for the international community, within the context of burden-sharing, to increase its material, financial and technical assistance to the countries affected by refugees, returnees and displaced persons,

Acknowledging with appreciation that some assistance is already rendered by the international community to refugees, returnees and displaced persons and host countries in Africa,

Noting with great concern that, despite all the efforts deployed so far by the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity and others, the situation of refugees and displaced persons in Africa, especially in the West African and Great Lakes regions and in the Horn of Africa, remains precarious,

Stressing that the provision of relief and assistance to African refugees by the international community should be on an equitable, non-discriminatory basis,

Considering that, among refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons, women and children are the majority of the population affected by conflict and bear the brunt of atrocities and other consequences of conflict,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Notes with concern that the declining socioeconomic situation, compounded by political instability, internal strife, human rights violations and natural disasters, has led to increased numbers of refugees and displaced persons in some countries of Africa, and remains particularly concerned about the impact of large-scale refugee populations on the security, socioeconomic situation and environment of countries of asylum;

3. Recalls the commemoration in 1999 of the thirtieth anniversary of the adoption of the Organization of African Unity Convention governing the specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa of 1969, and commends the convening by the Organization of African Unity and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees of the Special Meeting of Governmental and Non-Governmental Technical Experts at Conakry from 27 to 29 March 2000 to mark that anniversary;

4. Encourages African States to ensure the full implementation of and follow-up to the comprehensive implementation plan adopted by the Special Meeting and endorsed by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity;

5. Also encourages African States to ensure the full implementation of and follow-up to the recommendations of the sixth Seminar on International Humanitarian Law, convened by the Organization of African Unity and the International Committee of the Red Cross at Addis Ababa on 15 and 16 May 2000;

6. Calls upon States and other parties to armed conflict to observe scrupulously the letter and the spirit of international humanitarian law, bearing in mind that armed conflict is one of the principal causes of forced displacement in Africa;

7. Expresses its sincere appreciation and gratitude to Sadako Ogata for her tireless efforts, throughout her tenure as United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to address the plight of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa and for her inspiring example in performing her functions in an exemplary and dedicated manner;

8. Expresses its gratitude and appreciation, in this year which marks the fiftieth anniversary of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, for the work accomplished since its establishment, with the support of the international community, in assisting African countries of asylum and responding to the needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa for assistance and protection;

9. Notes the intergovernmental event planned in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, in 2001, and encourages African States parties to the Convention to participate actively in the event;

10. Reaffirms that the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees, as complemented by the Organization of African Unity Convention of 1969, remain the foundation of the international refugee protection regime in Africa, encourages African States that have not yet done so to accede to those instruments, and calls upon States parties to the Conventions to reaffirm their commitment to their ideals and to respect and observe their provisions;

11. Notes the need for States to address the root causes of forced displacement in Africa, and calls upon African States, the international community and relevant United Nations organizations to take concrete action to meet the needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons for protection and assistance and to contribute generously to national projects and programmes aimed at alleviating their plight;

12. Also notes the link, inter alia, between human rights violations, poverty, natural disasters and environmental degradation and population displacement, and calls for redoubled and concerted efforts by States, in collaboration with the Organization of African Unity, to promote and protect human rights for all and to address these problems;

13. Encourages the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue to cooperate with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, within their respective mandates, in the promotion and protection of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa;

14. Notes with appreciation the ongoing mediation and conflict resolution efforts carried out by African States, the Organization of African Unity and sub-regional organizations, as well as the establishment of regional mechanisms for conflict prevention and resolution, and urges all relevant parties to address the humanitarian consequences of conflicts;

15. Expresses its appreciation and strong support for those African Governments and local populations that, in spite of the general deterioration of socio-economic and environmental conditions and overstretched national resources, continue to accept the additional burden imposed upon them by increasing numbers of refugees and displaced persons, in compliance with the relevant principles of asylum;

16. Expresses its concern about instances in which the fundamental principle of asylum is jeopardized by unlawful expulsion or refoulement or by threats to the life, physical security, integrity, dignity and well-being of refugees;

17. Calls upon States, in cooperation with international organizations, within their mandates, to take all necessary measures to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection and, in particular, to ensure that the civilian and humanitarian nature of refugee camps is not compromised by the presence or the activities of armed elements;

18. Notes the proposal of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to commence a process of global consultations on the international refugee protection regime, and in this context invites African States to participate actively in this process so as to bring their regional perspective to bear, thus ensuring that adequate attention is paid to concerns that are specific to Africa;

19. Deplores the deaths and injuries and other forms of violence sustained by staff members of the Office of the High Commissioner and urges States, parties to conflict and all other relevant actors to take all necessary measures to protect activities related to humanitarian assistance, to prevent attacks on and kidnapping of national and international humanitarian workers and to ensure their safety and security, calls upon States to investigate fully any crimes committed against humanitarian personnel and bring to justice persons responsible for such crimes, and calls upon organizations and aid workers to abide by the national laws and regulations of the countries in which they operate;

20. Calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner, the Organization of African Unity, subregional organizations and all African States, in conjunction with United Nations agencies, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the international community, to strengthen and revitalize existing partnerships and forge new ones in support of the international refugee protection system;

21. Calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner, the international community and other concerned entities to intensify their support to African Governments through appropriate capacity-building activities, including training of relevant officers, disseminating information about refugee instruments and principles, providing financial, technical and advisory services to accelerate the enactment or amendment and implementation of legislation relating to refugees, strengthening emergency response and enhancing capacities for the coordination of humanitarian activities;

22. Reaffirms the right of return and also the principle of voluntary repatriation, appeals to countries of origin and countries of asylum to create conditions that are conducive to voluntary repatriation, and recognizes that, while voluntary repatriation remains the pre-eminent solution, local integration and third-country resettlement, as appropriate, are also viable options for dealing with the situation of African refugees who, owing to prevailing circumstances in their respective countries of origin, are unable to return home;

23. Notes with satisfaction the voluntary return of millions of refugees to their homelands following the successful repatriation and reintegration operations carried out by the Office of the High Commissioner, with the cooperation and collaboration of countries hosting refugees and countries of origin, and looks forward to other programmes to assist the voluntary repatriation and reintegration of all refugees in Africa;

24. Reiterates that the Plan of Action adopted by the Regional Conference on Assistance to Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons in the Great Lakes Region, held at Bujumbura from 15 to 17 February 1995, as endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 50/149 of 21 December 1995, continues to be a viable framework for the resolution of the refugee and humanitarian problems in that region;

25. Appeals to the international community to respond positively, in the spirit of solidarity and burden-sharing, to the third-country resettlement requests of African refugees, and notes with appreciation that some African countries have offered resettlement places for refugees;

26. Welcomes the programmes carried out by the Office of the High Commissioner with host Governments, the United Nations, non-governmental organizations and the international community to address the environmental impact of refugee populations;

27. Calls upon the international donor community to provide material and financial assistance for the implementation of programmes intended for the rehabilitation of the environment and infrastructure affected by refugees in countries of asylum;

28. Expresses its concern about the long stay of refugees in certain African countries, and calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner to keep its programmes under review, in conformity with its mandate in the host countries, taking into account the increasing needs of refugees;

29. Emphasizes the need for the Office of the High Commissioner to collate statistics, on a regular basis, on the number of refugees living outside refugee camps in certain African countries, with a view to evaluating and addressing the needs of those refugees;

30. Urges the international community, in a spirit of international solidarity and burden-sharing, to continue to fund generously the refugee programmes of the Office of the High Commissioner and, taking into account the substantially increased needs of programmes in Africa, to ensure that Africa receives a fair and equitable share of the resources designated for refugees;

31. Requests all Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to pay particular attention to meeting the special needs of refugee women and children and displaced persons, including those with special protection needs;

32. Calls upon States and the Office of the High Commissioner to make renewed efforts to ensure that the rights, needs and dignity of elderly refugees are fully respected and addressed through appropriate programme activities;

33. Invites the Representative of the Secretary-General on internally displaced persons to continue his ongoing dialogue with Member States and the intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned, in accordance with his mandate, and to include information thereon in his reports to the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly;

34. Expresses grave concern about the plight of internally displaced persons in Africa, calls upon States to take concrete action to pre-empt internal displacement and to meet the protection and assistance needs of internally displaced persons, recalls in this regard the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement, and urges the international community, led by relevant United Nations organizations, to contribute generously to national projects and programmes aimed at alleviating the plight of internally displaced persons;

35. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session, taking fully into account the efforts expended by countries of asylum, under the item entitled "Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, questions relating to refugees, returnees and displaced persons and humanitarian questions", and to present an oral report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2001.

The Americas

In 2000, UNHCR's primary operational challenge in South America continued to be the displacement caused by the internal conflict in Colombia and the consequent cross-border movements mainly into Ecuador, Panama and Venezuela. In response, the Office implemented an integrated regional strategy. It reinforced Ecuador's national asylum system, strengthened an emergency contingency plan, provided emergency assistance and supported initial repatriation movements. A tripartite mechanism between the Governments of Ecuador and Colombia and UNHCR was created to promote durable solutions. The Office also lobbied for the adoption of refugee legislation in Venezuela and the establishment of a formal eligibility mechanism. However, Venezuelan authorities reportedly returned more than 2,000 Colombians without granting them access to asylum procedures. In Panama, UNHCR provided emergency assistance to 1,100 Colombians under the special temporary protection mechanism established in Panama's refugee legislation. The Office also strengthened Colombia's national institutional framework for internally displaced persons and, at the regional level, reinforced its emergency response capacity, early warning and standard-setting, paying particular attention to displaced women and children.

In Southern South America, UNHCR promoted regional harmonization of refugee laws and asylum procedures using model refugee legislation for Southern Cone Common Market (MERCOSUR) countries. Among its activities in Central America, UNHCR helped strengthen protection networks. It completed a repatriation programme in Guatemala and closed its office there in December. Other subregional activities were implemented in Costa Rica and Mexico.

In Canada and the United States, UNHCR continued monitoring and advising agencies that implemented complex refugee and asylum systems. The Office also monitored the situation in the Caribbean, particularly regarding possible displacement from Haiti, developed contingency plans and promoted capacity-building efforts in the subregion.

Total UNHCR expenditure in the Americas and the Caribbean for the year was $24.6 million for a total population of concern numbering 1,620,784.

Asia and the Pacific and the Arab States

In 2000, total UNHCR expenditure for activities in Asia and the Pacific amounted to $75.4 million for a total population of concern of 1,753,830. For activities in Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, expenditure totalled $73.5 million for a population of concern of 5,800,000.

South Asia

While the majority of refugees who had fled the Northern Rakhine State of Myanmar to Bangladesh had returned by 2000, procedural difficulties slowed the return of the remaining 21,500 refugees. Only 1,323 persons returned to Myanmar during the year. UNHCR discussed other possibilities with the Bangladesh Government for refugees who were unwilling or unable to return in the near future. In Myanmar, the Office assisted in reintegrating returnees to stabilize the situation of the Muslim population and reduce the likelihood of a renewed population outflow. UNHCR-funded assistance activities in Northern Rakhine State would be taken over by the United Nations Development Programme, but UNHCR would continue its field monitoring activities to address public policy and governance issues affecting the 230,000 returnees from Bangladesh and the local population.

Some 170,000 persons in the Jaffna Peninsula of Sri Lanka were displaced because of the escalation of armed hostilities in the north of the country. UNHCR worked with the Government and others to ease the situation of 560,000 displaced persons. Although there were no large-scale movements of Sri Lankans to India, over 66,000 Sri Lankan refugees remained in India's Tamil Nadu State.

In December, Bhutan and Nepal resolved their differences over modalities for verifying the 97,500 Bhutanese refugees in Nepal. To facilitate the process, UNHCR provided technical expertise and financial support to Nepal and offered to do the same for Bhutan.

East Asia and the Pacific

In 2000, a regional emergency training centre on international humanitarian response (E-centre) was established by UNHCR in Japan to enhance the regional capacity to respond to emergency situations. In China, the Office encouraged naturalization of the majority of the 230,000 Vietnamese refugees who wanted to settle in that country and voluntary repatriation for a limited number who might wish to return. It continued to raise with China the situation of North Korean populations within its northern border provinces and sought access to those populations. UNHCR worked with Thailand on the admission of asylum-seekers from Myanmar into the 11 border camps, and cooperated with Mongolia in the areas of refugee law, capacity-building and refugee status determination. It phased out its reintegration assistance in north-west Cambodia in December and scaled down its activities in the Lao People's Democratic Republic.

Timor

The brutal murder in September of three UNHCR staff members in West Timor precipitated the imposition of UN Security Phase V, which precluded UNHCR from implementing direct protection activities. However, the Office pursued ad hoc repatriation operations beginning in November, allowing for the return of demobilized soldiers, ex-civil servants and other refugees to East Timor. To encourage the return of East Timorese from West Timor, UNHCR expanded basic assistance to returnees, initiated discussions with the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor (UNTAET) (see PART ONE, Chapter IV) on the prosecution of persons charged with committing various crimes before and during the 1999 referendum on independence, and proposed the expansion of "safe houses", which served as transit centres for returnees hesitant to return to their villages of origin immediately after arriving in East Timor. Meanwhile, UNHCR was involved with screening a number of asylum-seekers intercepted in Indonesian waters while trying to reach Australia.

Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East

Little progress was achieved in realizing durable solutions to the refugee situation in the region in 2000. Protracted conflicts were exacerbated in many cases by either political or natural constraints, creating more displacement and suffering. In Central Asia, the repatriation operation in Tajikistan was delayed when the Government suspended returnee movements following security incidents between returnees and local populations. In Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Turkmenistan, UNHCR offices worked for the passage and implementation of refugee laws. Local settlement projects were implemented in Kyrgyzstan and Turkmenistan for the Tajiks of Kyrgyz and Turkmen ethnicity, respectively. In South-West Asia, the situation in Afghanistan was compounded by the worst drought experienced in three decades, displacing thousands of Afghans internally, as well as to Iran and Pakistan. While the majority of the 2.6 million Afghans remained in those countries, UNHCR succeeded in assisting some 261,000 to return voluntarily to Afghanistan.

In North Africa, UNHCR focused on enhancing its protection presence, promoting refugee law and assisting Governments to establish national asylum legislation and procedures. The lack of a breakthrough in the peace process in Western Sahara prevented implementation of the UN settlement plan, including the repatriation of 165,000 refugees from Algeria. UNHCR continued to provide assistance in the Tindouf refugee camps, in cooperation with other partners. In the Middle East, it assisted 130,000 refugees living in urban settings, as well as in small camps in Iraq, Saudi Arabia and the Syrian Arab Republic, and resettled 7,000 refugees from the region.

Europe

In 2000, UNHCR's expenditure for activities in Europe (excluding South-Eastern Europe) totalled $85.1 million for a population of concern numbering 5,148,062.

Western Europe

UNHCR's priority in the subregion in 2000 was maintaining and strengthening the quality of asylum. Its relations with European Union (EU) institutions intensified. In July, UNHCR and the European Commission signed an exchange of letters to reinforce cooperation on asylum and refugee matters, which led to formal strategic senior-level consultations, in addition to the day-to-day liaison and advocacy work of UNHCR Brussels. UNHCR also assisted Western European Governments in their adoption, implementation and amendment of national asylum legislation and policies.

Central Europe and the Baltic States

Central Europe and the Baltic States were in the process of developing functioning asylum legislation and systems, and UNHCR played a catalytic role in linking Governments and NGOs with Western European counterparts for capacity-building assistance. UNHCR offices in EU countries also participated in the EU's Poland/Hungary: Assistance for the Reconstruction of the Economy (PHARE) horizontal programme on asylum, which came to a close at the end of the year, by organizing meetings, workshops, and training and exchange programmes for governmental counterparts in cooperation with EU member States. Activities in the area of asylum institution- and capacity-building were being conducted through national action plans.

Eastern Europe

UNHCR assisted Governments in Eastern Europe to bridge the gap between legislation, in place in most countries, and its proper implementation, thus strengthening the quality of asylum. The Office also supported local NGOs in responding to the needs of asylum-seekers, refugees and displaced persons; assisted Governments to find sustainable solutions for displaced groups; and enhanced partnerships with the Council of Europe, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) and others.

In the Caucasus, finding durable solutions to those displaced due to the conflict in Chechnya in the Russian Federation remained a key objective. Over 160,000 internally displaced persons in the neighbouring republic of Ingushetia received assistance for accommodation, water, sanitation and basic domestic needs. In Georgia, UNHCR provided limited assistance to about 7,000 Chechen refugees, although security conditions hampered monitoring. A small number of convoys carrying food and non-food relief items were sent into Chechnya, and UNHCR worked with the Academy of Science of the Russian Federation to develop a geographical database for better targeting of assistance.

Conference on refugees of CIS countries and neighbouring States

The formal follow-up process to the 1996 Regional Conference to Address the Problems of Refugees, Displaced Persons, Other Forms of Involuntary Displacement and Returnees in the Countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States and Relevant Neighbouring States (CIS Conference) [YUN 1996, p. 1117] ended in July. The Steering Group established to monitor implementation of the CIS Conference met on 13 and 14 July to review the achievements in the implementation of the Programme of Action [YUN 1996, p. 1118] adopted by the Conference and to take a decision on future activities. The Steering Group decided that the follow-up to the 1996 Conference would last for five years starting from 2000, and would focus on four thematic issues: assuring continued focus on groups of concern; migration management, including combating illegal/illicit migration and trafficking, particularly trafficking in women, and improving border management; sustaining the achievements and activities of NGOs and civil society and further promoting their participation; and implementing legislation and avoiding implementation gaps.

A work plan emphasizing protection matters was developed, focusing on building national asylum and migration management systems in the CIS countries in accordance with international standards, including the implementation of national refugee and citizenship legislation, reduction and avoidance of statelessness and support to NGOs and civil society development.

Executive Committee action. The Executive Committee endorsed the Steering Group's decision on the future of the follow-up action. It reaffirmed the continuing validity of the Programme of Action as the basis for future activities and stressed the necessity for joint efforts. The Committee called on Governments, which bore primary responsibility for addressing the acute problems of population displacement, to strengthen their commitment to implementing the Programme of Action to ensure more consistent and far-reaching progress. It urged the High Commissioner to further enhance relationships with other key actors, such as the European Commission and other human rights, development and financial institutions, and called on CIS countries to facilitate the formation and work of NGOs, to further strengthen cooperation with them and to increase their involvement in the follow-up activities.

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in October [A/55/472], submitted a report on the follow-up to the Conference, in response to General Assembly resolution 54/144 [YUN 1999, p. 1146]. He said that the Conference process had considerably advanced several issues identified in the Programme of Action and had met its objectives. In addition, it had given impetus to the development of the NGO sector and civil society and forged vital partnerships.

UNHCR had contributed to the growing awareness of Governments in the region that refugees and asylum-seekers' problems needed to be addressed through effective legislative and institutional frameworks that were consistent with international standards. It continued to provide substantial humanitarian and integration assistance and played a key role in inter-agency efforts to assist internally displaced persons from Chechnya. It also contributed to finding solutions to problems of formerly deported Crimean Tartars, including their legal status. Other types of activities specifically generated by the CIS Conference process, such as legal assistance, capacity-building and training to help States strengthen implementation of the Programme of Action, had been gradually mainstreamed into UNHCR country operations. With the support of IOM, progress was made in establishing national migration management systems in 10 countries. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights supported the Programme of Action through its technical cooperation programme aimed at establishing or strengthening human rights institutions.

By decision 55/417 of 4 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report on follow-up to the CIS Conference.

South-Eastern Europe

Following a year dominated by massive population displacement caused by the conflict in the Kosovo province of FRY, hundreds of thousands of Kosovars were reintegrated into their home communities in 2000 as a result of the encouragement by the new FRY Government (see PART ONE, Chapter V) and a large-scale humanitarian relief effort. To facilitate assistance delivery and reconstruction, UNHCR developed a geographical database of the province using Geographical Information System technology. However, the fact that more than 220,000 non-Albanians from Kosovo remained in other parts of FRY was one of UNHCR's major concerns in the region. Inter-ethnic violence in southern Serbia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) caused more than a million people to remain displaced, with hundreds of thousands requiring support from the international community. The number of refugees and persons of concern to UNHCR in Albania and FYROM declined due to the large-scale repatriation to Kosovo, while tens of thousands of displaced persons and refugees, mainly from FRY, returned to Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia. Enforcement of property legislation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, combined with improved security conditions, led many displaced persons to return to areas to which minorities had not ventured since the end of the war. In Croatia, the new administration eliminated discriminatory elements of legislation governing reconstruction of property in an effort to encourage minority returns.

UNHCR, in efforts to assist countries faced with an increasing number of migrants and asylum-seekers transiting the region en route to Western Europe, initiated a region-wide initiative within the framework of the Stability Pact for South-Eastern Europe (see p. 412) to develop national asylum systems and improve countries' capacities to deal with the issue.

During 2000, UNHCR remained engaged in emergency preparedness response activities with regard to potential areas of population displacement in the region, such as Montenegro, Kosovo, southern Serbia and FYROM.

Total UNHCR expenditure in South-Eastern Europe for the year was $154 million for a population of concern numbering 1,698,342.

Chapter XIII

Health, food and nutrition

In 2000, the United Nations continued to take action to promote human health, coordinate food aid and food security and support research in nutrition.

The total number of people living with HIV/AIDS worldwide at the end of 2000 was 36.1 million, according to the Joint United Nations Programme on Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (UNAIDS) and the World Health Organization (WHO). Some 5.3 million new infections and an estimated 3 million deaths due to the epidemic were recorded, representing the highest annual total of AIDS deaths ever. UNAIDS effectively promoted HIV/AIDS as a priority on national agendas and emphasized the importance of leadership in all sectors. It supported decentralized planning efforts at the district and community levels and promoted synergy with other multilateral and bilateral partners within the framework of national strategies.

In the Millennium Declaration adopted by the Millennium Summit of the United Nations, held in September, world leaders committed themselves to halting and beginning to reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS by 2015; providing special assistance to children orphaned by HIV/AIDS; and helping Africa build its capacity to tackle the spread of the HIV/AIDS pandemic and other infectious diseases. The General Assembly decided to convene a special session in June 2001 to review and address the problem of HIV/AIDS as a matter of urgency.

The United Nations continued to be concerned with tobacco and its ill effects. Based on current smoking trends, it was predicted that tobacco would be the leading cause of disease by the 2020s, resulting in about one in eight deaths, a proportion greater than from any other single cause. The Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control, at its second session, decided that inter-agency partnerships should focus on the economics of tobacco control, including supply and production issues. In October, the Intergovernmental Negotiating Body on the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control considered draft elements and provisional texts.

The World Food Programme—a joint undertaking of the United Nations and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations—provided food aid to 83 million people. Total quantities of food provided amounted to 3.5 million tons, an increase of 3 per cent over the previous year and the highest since the record high of 1992.

AIDS prevention and control

The Joint United Nations Programme on Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (UNAIDS), which became fully operational in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1121], continued to coordinate UN activities for AIDS prevention and control. The Programme, which served as the main advocate for global action on HIV/AIDS, had seven co-sponsors: the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the World Bank and the World Health Organization (WHO). UNAIDS was to lead, strengthen and support an expanded response to the epidemic, mainly through facilitation and coordination, best practice development and advocacy.

According to UNAIDS/WHO, provisional estimates indicated that 36.1 million people were living with HIV/AIDS worldwide at year's end, which was more than 50 per cent higher than projected in 1991 by the WHO Global Programme on AIDS. In 2000, some 5.3 million people were newly infected and about 3 million people died, representing the highest annual total of AIDS deaths ever recorded and bringing the total of deaths since the onset of the epidemic to 21.8 million. By year's end, the epidemic had left behind a cumulative total of 13.2 million AIDS orphans, defined as children who had lost their mother before reaching the age of 15.

In all parts of the world except sub-Saharan Africa, more men were HIV-infected and dying of AIDS than women. Altogether, an estimated 2.5 million men aged 15 to 49 became infected during 2000, bringing the number of adult males living with HIV or AIDS at year's end to 18.2 million. The year 2000 World AIDS Campaign focused on the difference men could make to curb HIV transmission, care for infected family members and look after orphans and others survivors of the epidemic.

According to a report of the UNAIDS Executive Director [E/2001/82], of the more than 36 million people living with HIV at the end of 2000, some 95 per cent were in the developing world. Sub-Saharan Africa continued to be the worst-hit region. Even though the number of new infections in some countries was stabilizing, in the eight African countries with HIV prevalence of at least 15 per cent, some one third of the current population of 15-year-olds were expected to die from AIDS. In the Caribbean region, AIDS was the primary cause of death among young men and women. Eastern Europe and Latin America saw steep rises of new infections. In Asia, some 7 million people were living with HIV. The disproportionate impact of HIV in minority communities and the risk of complacency were growing concerns in industrialized countries.

At the end of the year, 64 countries had completed national strategic plans on HIV/AIDS and 28 others were developing them. UNAIDS supported decentralized planning efforts at the district and community levels and promoted synergy with other multilateral and bilateral partners within the framework of national strategies. Although UNAIDS had limited capacity to keep up with governmental demands for support in preparing plans to expand access to care, it supported the development of 16 care plans during the year. In May, the Contact Group on Accelerating Access to Care and Treatment was set up as a forum for the exchange of information, views and strategic recommendations. Several UN resident coordinator reports for 2000 singled out the theme groups on HIV/AIDS as the most active and successful of all such system theme groups. Many groups had broadened the scope of their efforts, to include advocacy, resource mobilization, support for national programme development and facilitating exchanges of experiences within regions. Although the resources available for the support of national responses from the UNAIDS secretariat were very modest, they represented a significant proportion of the UNAIDS core biennial budget. In 2000, strategic planning development funds were renamed the Programme Acceleration Fund, which was intended to support designing and developing strategic plans, UN integrated work plans and grant or loan programmes addressing HIV/AIDS, including World Bank credits and debt relief programmes; filling funding gaps in existing UN system integrated work plans; and initiating major new and innovative priority activities identified through the strategic planning process.

The Programme Coordinating Board of UNAIDS, at its ninth meeting (Geneva, 25-26 May), endorsed the framework for the International Partnership against AIDS in Africa (IPAA), a broad coalition of actors—African Governments, UN organizations, donors, the private sector and the community sector—committed to reaching agreement on a "Framework for action" for a major intensification and mobilization to address the epidemic in Africa (see p. 1169). The Board made recommendations regarding prevention and access to care, and endorsed a process for developing a coordinated strategy in the education sector to support and strengthen regional and national responses to HIV/AIDS. At its tenth thematic meeting (Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 14-15 December), the Board further discussed the Global Strategy for HIV/AIDS and took note of the progress on the development of the UN Strategic Plan for HIV/AIDS 2001-2005 and on the five-year evaluation of UNAIDS in 2001.

In the Millennium Declaration (General Assembly resolution 55/2) adopted by the Millennium Summit of the United Nations (see p. 47), held in September, world leaders committed themselves to halting and beginning to reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS by 2015, providing special assistance to children orphaned by HIV/AIDS and helping Africa build its capacity to tackle the spread of the HIV/AIDS pandemic and other infectious diseases. The decision by the Assembly to convene a special session to review and address the problem of HIV/AIDS as a matter of urgency was seen as a step in the realization of the commitments expressed in the Declaration.

ACC Subcommittee action. In September [ACC/2000/17], the Subcommittee on Drug Control of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) adopted a draft UN system position paper on preventing HIV transmission among drug abusers, prepared by UNDCP in collaboration with UNAIDS and WHO, which was to be submitted to the Consultative Committee on Programme and Operational Questions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 September [meeting 100], the General Assembly adopted resolution 54/283 [draft: A/54/L.88/Rev.1 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 176].

Review of the problem of human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome in all its aspects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 44/233 of 22 December 1989, Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/36 of 28 July 1999 and other relevant resolutions,

Noting with deep concern the accelerating spread of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), which has already infected millions of people worldwide, and the resulting increase in cases of acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS),

Recognizing that no country in the world has been spared by the AIDS epidemic and that 90 per cent of the people living with HIV/AIDS live in the developing world, which has been very severely affected, particularly in Africa,

Mindful that the AIDS epidemic has become a development crisis in many countries, with devastating consequences for human, social and economic progress, and that the development gains of the past fifty years, including the increase in child survival and in life expectancy, are being reversed by the HIV/AIDS epidemic,

Alarmed that, despite all efforts, the HIV/AIDS epidemic is having a more severe impact than was originally projected, and recognizing that resources devoted to combating the epidemic at both national and international levels are not commensurate with the magnitude of the problem,

Commending the efforts by the Joint United Nations Programme on Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome to coordinate and intensify efforts to address HIV/AIDS in all appropriate forums,

Recognizing that the needs in countries addressing AIDS far outweigh both the human and the financial resources being made available and that high-level political commitment is critical to strengthen the response to the epidemic,

1. Decides to convene a special session of the General Assembly for a duration of three days to review and address the problem of HIV/AIDS in all its aspects and to coordinate and intensify international efforts to combat it, as soon as possible, preferably in May 2001 but not later than the end of its fifty-sixth session;

2. Urges Member States and observers to ensure their representation at the special session at a high political level;

3. Decides that the exact date of the special session, as well as the modalities, participation in and organization of the preparatory process and the special session, should be finalized, at the earliest opportunity, at its fifty-fifth session;

4. Also decides to include in the agenda of its fifty-fifth session the item entitled "Review of the problem of human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome in all its aspects".

By decision 55/409 of 2 November, the Assembly took note of the report of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/55/529] on programme budget implications of Assembly resolution 54/283.

On 3 November [meeting 51], the Assembly adopted resolution 55/13 [draft: A/55/L.13 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 179].

Review of the problem of human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome in all its aspects

Recalling its resolution 54/283 of 5 September 2000 and resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, entitled

"United Nations Millennium Declaration", in particular paragraphs 19, 20 and 28 thereof, as well as other relevant resolutions, and taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/36 of 28 July 1999, as well as Security Council resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

Recalling also the relevant provisions of the final document adopted at its twenty-first special session on 2 July 1999 on key actions for the further implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, the final document adopted at its twenty-third special session on 10 June 2000 on further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, and the final document adopted at its twenty-fourth special session on 1 July 2000 on further initiatives for social development,

Taking note of the statement of thirteen women Ministers for Foreign Affairs concerning the worldwide threat of the human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS), issued on 12 September 2000 and the Ouagadougou Declaration adopted at the fifth Pan-African Conference of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, which was held at Ouagadougou from 21 to 25 September 2000,

1. Decides to convene, as a matter of urgency, a special session of the General Assembly, from 25 to 27 June 2001, to review and address the problem of human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS) in all its aspects, as well as to secure a global commitment to enhancing coordination and the intensification of national, regional and international efforts to combat it in a comprehensive manner;

2. Confirms that the special session will be open for participation to all States Members of the United Nations and observers, in accordance with the established practice of the General Assembly, and urges Member States and observers to ensure their representation at the special session at the highest political level;

3. Decides to invite States members of the specialized agencies that are not members of the United Nations to participate in the work of the special session in the capacity of observers;

4. Also decides that the special session shall be composed of plenary meetings, as well as interactive round-table meetings, the organization, number and themes of which will be finalized during the preparatory process, to discuss, inter alia, issues such as HIV/AIDS in Africa, international funding and co-operation, the social and economic impact of the epidemic, human rights and AIDS, including reduction of the stigma related to AIDS, the gender-specific impacts of AIDS, especially on women and girls, HIV/AIDS prevention, including development of microbicides, improved access to care and treatment including drugs, protection and care of children affected by AIDS, in particular orphans, scientific research and vaccine development, expanded public/private sector partnerships and the building and strengthening of national capacities to combat HIV/AIDS, including the development of national action plans and their implementation, with each interactive meeting to be held in concurrence with a plenary meeting;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary administrative arrangements towards the convening of the special session;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to make available all necessary documentation in a timely manner for the special session;

7. Encourages all entities of the United Nations system, including programmes, funds, the specialized agencies and the regional commissions, to be involved actively in the preparatory activities and to participate at the highest level in the special session, including through presentations on best practices and different experiences in addressing the problem of HIV/AIDS, obstacles encountered and possible strategies for overcoming them, as well as further initiatives, methods, practical activities and specific measures to strengthen national, regional and international efforts and co-operation, taking into account the different ways of addressing the problem of HIV/AIDS;

8. Decides to convene, within the framework of the preparatory process for the special session, open-ended informal consultations of the plenary, chaired by the President of the General Assembly, to undertake, as appropriate, preparations for the special session, including elaboration of a draft declaration of commitment and other relevant documents for consideration during the special session, to further address the modalities and other organizational matters of the special session, with a view to submitting proposals for final decision by the Assembly, and to organize other relevant activities to contribute to the preparations for the special session, and invites the President of the General Assembly to appoint, in consultation with Member States, two facilitators to assist in carrying out these consultations with the effective participation of all countries;

9. Requests the Secretary-General, with the support of the Joint United Nations Programme on the human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS), acting as the substantive secretariat of the special session, to provide substantive input to the preparatory process;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to present, in a timely manner, in order to facilitate and focus the preparatory consultations, a comprehensive report describing both the status of the epidemic and the status and level of national, regional and international response and cooperation as well as other issues, including the developmental impact of the epidemic, its long-term social and economic manifestations, national achievements to date, best practices in prevention and care and identification of major gaps and challenges, taking into account all relevant information and inputs, including relevant findings from previous appropriate conferences;

11. Encourages regional bodies and organizations, as well as the regional commissions, to make available to the preparatory process and to the special session the outcomes of respective subregional, regional and global level initiatives addressing a range of HIV/AIDS issues;

12. Recognizes the importance of the contribution of civil society actors in the response to the epidemic at all levels, and in this regard underlines the need for the active involvement of civil society representatives in the preparatory process and the special session;

13. Invites to the special session and to the preparatory process activities, apart from the informal consultations of the General Assembly to which only Member States and observers are invited, in accordance with paragraph 14 below, non-governmental organizations which enjoy consultative status in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/31 of 25 July 1996, or are members of the Programme Coordinating Board of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, requests the Executive Director of the Joint Programme to prepare, not later than 15 February 2001, for consideration by Member States, on a non-objection basis during the preparatory process, for final decision by the Assembly, a list of other relevant civil society actors, in particular associations of people living with HIV/AIDS, non-governmental organizations and the business sector, including pharmaceutical companies, along with relevant background information to be made available to Member States, and invites those civil society actors to the special session and to the preparatory process activities for the special session, according to the modalities defined above;

14. Invites, in this context, the President of the General Assembly to make recommendations, for consideration by Member States during the preparatory process, for final decision by the Assembly as soon as possible, but not later than 2 March 2001, as to the form of the involvement of such civil society actors, in particular associations of people living with HIV/AIDS, non-governmental organizations and the business sector, including pharmaceutical companies, in the special session and, to the extent possible, in the preparatory process;

15. Stresses the importance of the full and active participation of all States, including the least developed countries, in the preparatory consultations in order to provide substantive input to the special session, invites Governments to make appropriate voluntary contributions to a trust fund to be established by the Secretary-General for that purpose, and requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to ensure mobilization of resources to the fund;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure an effective and coordinated system-wide response to preparations for the special session and to carry out, particularly in the most affected countries, in co-operation with the Joint Programme, a comprehensive public information programme to raise global HIV/AIDS awareness while also building broad international support for the special session and its goals;

17. Decides that the provisions contained in paragraphs 8, 12, 13 and 14 above will in no way create a precedent for other special sessions of the General Assembly;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all Governments, the relevant specialized agencies and programmes of the United Nations, international financial and trade institutions, other intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and other relevant civil society actors, as well as the business sector, including pharmaceutical companies;

19. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Review of the problem of human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome in all its aspects".

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 55/458, decided that the item on review of the HIV/AIDS problem would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

AIDS in Africa

Security Council consideration (January). The Security Council, on 10 January [meeting 4087], held an open high-level debate to discuss for the first time the impact of AIDS on peace and security in Africa. In an opening statement, the Secretary-General remarked that nowhere else in the world had AIDS threatened economic, social and political stability on the scale that it had in Southern and Eastern Africa. In 1999, AIDS had killed about 10 times more people in Africa than had armed conflict. By overwhelming the continent's health services, by creating millions of orphans and by decimating health workers and teachers, AIDS was causing social and economic crises, which, in turn, threatened political stability and good governance. The breakdown of health and education services, obstruction of humanitarian assistance and displacement of entire populations all ensured further and faster spread of the epidemic on the continent. The fight against the disease in Africa was an immediate priority, said the Secretary-General. Council members and interested non-members focused on actions Member States and the international community might take to address the devastating impact of AIDS on Africa.

On 31 January [E/2000/4], the Security Council President informed the President of the Economic and Social Council that the Security Council had received a letter dated 21 January from the Executive Director of UNAIDS, outlining the follow-up actions UNAIDS planned to take to combat and control the spread of HIV/AIDS, as well as UNAIDS plans to coordinate with the Security Council. The Security Council wished to explore the possibility of further cooperative action with the Economic and Social Council.

In a 31 January letter to the General Assembly President [S/2000/75], the Security Council President said that, as a result of the 10 January meeting (see above) and further consultations, the Council recognized the negative impact of AIDS on peace and security in Africa, as well as worldwide, and considered that it was time the United Nations developed a comprehensive and effective agenda for action against the epidemic. Therefore, the Council suggested that the Assembly might wish to review the HIV/AIDS problem in all its aspects and propose new strategies, methods, practical activities and specific measures to strengthen international cooperation in addressing the problem.

Communications. On 10 January [S/2000/9], the President of Mali, in his capacity as Chairman of the Economic Community of West African States, called for increased commitment by the international community to intensify AIDS research, expand prevention and support the millions of persons affected by HIV/AIDS, particularly those in Africa.

On 18 January [S/2000/42], the President of Senegal described his country's initiatives regarding HIV/AIDS.

Report of Secretary-General. In his report to the Millennium Assembly [A/54/2000] (see p. 55), the Secretary-General, referring to the situation in Africa, noted that of nearly 36 million persons living with HIV/AIDS, more than 23 million were in sub-Saharan Africa. In the worst-hit cities of Southern Africa, 40 per cent of pregnant women were HIV-positive and more than 1 child in every 10 had already lost its mother to AIDS. It was estimated that by 2010 there would be 40 million orphans in sub-Saharan Africa, largely because of HIV/AIDS. The Government of Zimbabwe projected that HIV/AIDS would consume 60 per cent of the nation's health budget by 2005 and even that would be inadequate. AIDS was decimating the ranks of the skilled and educated during their prime years, with tragic implications for every affected country and the region. The report mentioned the effect of the severity of Africa's AIDS crisis on the region's economic difficulties.

Security Council consideration (July). On 5 July [S/2000/657], the Secretary-General conveyed to the Security Council a note from UNAIDS summarizing actions taken as follow-up to the Council's 10 January meeting. It outlined steps taken to intensify UN clearing house efforts on HIV/AIDS in Africa within the United Nations; efforts to address HIV/AIDS in emergencies, conflict situations and in the uniformed services in Africa; and progress made in developing IPAA (see p. 1166).

The Security Council, on 17 July [meeting 4172], focused on HIV/AIDS and international peace-keeping operations as part of its responsibility in maintaining international peace and security. The UNAIDS Executive Director reported that, regarding clearing house efforts on information on AIDS in Africa within the United Nations, one of the most comprehensive initiatives—the Country Response Monitoring Project—would provide easy access to the latest information through the World Wide Web. The IPAA framework had been endorsed by the Conference of African Ministers of Health (Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, May) and the Organization of African Unity Summit of Heads of State or Government (Lomé, Togo, July). The most significant progress, however, was being made at the country level through, among other achievements, a successful round table in Malawi that had mobilized more than $100 million for AIDS in the country; the creation by the Government of special funds in Burkina Faso and Ghana; renewed community responses in Ethiopia; strategic plans in Mozambique; and the establishment of high-level national coordination councils in the United Republic of Tanzania and other countries. An Inter-Agency Standing Committee working group had endorsed an action plan that emphasized the importance of incorporating AIDS into humanitarian action and addressed the role of uniformed services and peacekeeping forces in the prevention and spread of AIDS; the epidemic's potential to contribute to social instability and emergency situations; and the need to ensure minimum standards of prevention and care before, during and immediately after conflicts or disasters occurred. Subsequently, the UNAIDS secretariat established a humanitarian coordination unit, and a number of countries, the majority in Africa, had been identified for the first phase of the effort. Talks were under way with the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations to promote responsible behaviour among staff providing humanitarian aid and peacekeeping troops. Referring to the draft resolution before the Council, he noted that its emphasis on the uniformed services was significant.

At the end of the discussion, the Council adopted resolution 1308(2000) on the impact of HIV/AIDS on peace and security (see p. 82).

Tobacco or health

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/56 [YUN 1999, p. 1151], the Secretary-General, in a May report [E/2000/21], described progress made by the Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control.

According to the report, an estimated 4 million deaths annually were caused by tobacco, and the figure was expected to rise to about 10 million in 2030. Based on current smoking trends, it was predicted that tobacco would be the leading cause of disease by the 2020s, resulting in about one in eight deaths, a proportion greater than from any other single cause. Of those deaths, 70 per cent would occur in developing countries. Half of all long-term smokers would eventually die from tobacco use, and of those, half would die during the productive middle age, losing from 20 to 25 years of life. Recent studies indicated that the tobacco epidemic showed a significant socio-economic gradient and, increasingly, tobacco use clustered in lower socio-economic groups.

Moreover, tobacco use among women, particularly young women, was increasing worldwide.

Effective demand reduction strategies included tax and price increases, advertising bans and counter-advertising, and nicotine replacement and other cessation therapies. Controls on smuggling were an effective supply-side intervention. Crop substitution was often proposed to reduce the tobacco supply, but there was scarcely any evidence that it was applied, as the incentives to grow tobacco were currently much greater than for other crops.

The Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control, established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1151], held its second session (Rome, 7 March) to consider specific strategies and projects for strengthening and extending inter-agency collaboration among Task Force member organizations. New inter-agency partnerships focusing on the economics of tobacco control, and supply and production issues, were initiated. The principal themes for future work by the Task Force related to dissemination of Task Force information to the country level; employment effects of tobacco control; effects of passive smoking; the framework convention on tobacco control (see below); risk-taking behaviour; trade and investment issues; and women and tobacco.

By decision 2000/236 of 27 July, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to report in 2002 on the continuing work of the Task Force.

Framework convention

In March, the working group on the WHO framework convention on tobacco control continued to lay the technical foundation for formal negotiations by the Intergovernmental Negotiating Body (INB). The working group, which was open to the participation of all WHO member States and regional economic integration organizations and observers, reached consensus on, among other things, focusing on the framework convention and its related protocols on demand reduction strategies; emphasizing evidence-based interventions; the necessity of an incremental, comprehensive approach to negotiating an international legal regime for tobacco; and emphasizing the importance of taking account of the social, economic and agricultural impacts of tobacco control, especially in developing countries. It agreed to a general architecture for the framework convention. A document before the group contained provisional texts of proposed draft elements for the convention. A further document explored the technical components of three possible protocols.

At its first session (Geneva, 16-21 October), INB, among other things, considered the proposed draft elements for the convention, taking into account the comments of the working group and of the WHO World Health Assembly. INB was scheduled to meet again in 2001.

Food aid

World Food Programme

In July, the Economic and Social Council examined two reports pertaining to the work of the World Food Programme (WFP) in 1999: the annual report of the Executive Director [E/2000/54] and a report of the WFP Executive Board containing an overview of activities in 1999 and the decisions and recommendations of its four 1999 sessions [E/2000/36]. The Council, by decision 2000/242 of 28 July, took note of the two reports.

The WFP Executive Board [E/2001/36] decided on organizational and programme matters and approved a number of projects at its 2000 sessions, all held in Rome: first regular session (8-10 February), second regular session (17-19 May), annual session (22-25 May) and third regular session (23-26 October). In October, the Board adopted a resource mobilization strategy, which, among other things, called for the promotion of a broadened base of donor support. It stated that pledging conferences had outlived their usefulness and should not be convened and recommended hiring an experienced professional fund-raiser to achieve the full potential benefits from the private sector.

WFP activities

During 2000 [E/2001/47], WFP assisted 83 million people in 83 countries, of whom 36 million were victims of natural disasters, 7 million were victims of man-made disasters such as wars and civil unrest, 18 million were beneficiaries of protracted relief and recovery operations and 22 million people benefited from development programmes. Included among the beneficiaries were 18 million internally displaced persons in 32 countries and 3 million refugees in 25 countries. Assistance to victims of sudden natural disasters, which increased over the previous year by 20 per cent, and to victims of drought and crop failure, which increased by 12 per cent, accounted for one third of all WFP food aid. A range of scientific experts forecast that not only would the future bring more natural disasters, but their damage would be greater as people's vulnerability increased. Assistance to victims of conflict and civil unrest increased by 7 per cent compared with the year before and accounted for almost 50 per cent of WFP's total expenditures.

Total quantities of food provided amounted to 3.5 million tons—an increase of 3 per cent from 1999 and the highest since the record high of 1992. Of the total food provided, 649,000 tons was for development projects, 1,958,000 tons for emergency operations and 936,000 tons for protracted relief and recovery operations.

Global food aid deliveries amounted to 10.4 million tons, down some 27 per cent from 15 million tons delivered in 1999. Programme food aid provided bilaterally on a government-to-government basis decreased by 65 per cent, from 7.8 million to 2.9 million tons, which accounted for the decrease of global food aid deliveries in 2000. Nearly half of the food aid delivered in 2000 was emergency food aid provided as relief to people affected by man-made or natural emergency situations. Emergency food aid deliveries in 2000 increased by 16 per cent, while project food aid delivered increased only slightly, from 2.5 million to 2.7 million tons. Thus, targeted food aid, made up of project and emergency food aid, represented some 74 per cent of 2000 deliveries, compared with less than 50 per cent in 1999.

Sub-Saharan Africa received the largest share of WFP assistance, with 60.3 per cent of its operational expenditures spent in 40 countries; Asia received 26.6 per cent for 16 countries; Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States, 7.1 per cent for 7 countries; the Middle East and North Africa, 3.4 per cent for 9 countries; and Latin America and the Caribbean, 3.1 per cent for 14 countries.

Administrative and financial matters

Resources and financing

WFP operational expenditure for 2000 amounted to $1,490 million for development and relief activities in the least developed countries and low-income, food-deficit countries. Contributions totalled $1,750 million, of which $226 million was contributed to development, $381 million to protracted relief and recovery operations, $1,070 million to emergency operations and $70 million was provided as "other contributions".

Food security

Follow-up to 1996 World Food Summit

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to implement the Plan of Action adopted at the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129], in which the organization committed itself to assisting developing countries on trade issues, particularly in preparing for multilateral trade negotiations in agriculture, through studies, analyses and training. At the FAO Council meeting in November 2000, member countries endorsed a proposal to hold a "World Food Summit: five years later" from 5 to 9 November 2001 to review progress towards the Summit goal of reducing the number of hungry in the world from 800 million to 400 million by 2015. In 2000, the number of hungry people declined at the rate of only 8 million per year instead of the 20 million necessary to achieve Summit goals. Unless extra efforts were made to accelerate progress in the fight against hunger, those goals would not be achieved before 2030.

The State of Food and Agriculture 2000, an FAO publication, reflected on humankind's achievements and failures in fighting hunger and poverty over the past 50 years. Undernourishment, especially in populous countries in Asia, had diminished. Famine currently occurred only in exceptional cases, such as in war and conflict where suffering already existed from undernutrition and institutional capacity. On the other hand, the past 50 years had left a backlog of unresolved problems, new challenges, risks and uncertainties. More than 800 million people—13 per cent of the world's population—still lacked access to sufficient food and were therefore destined for short and unfulfilled lives. The State of Food and Agriculture 2000 advocated ways out of the "poverty trap" in which Governments and institutional structures played a major role.

Nutrition

ACC activities

During its twenty-seventh session (Washington, D.C., 10-14 April) [ACC/2000/9], the ACC Subcommittee on Nutrition (ACC/SCN) reviewed reports of working groups on such questions as life-cycle consequences of foetal and infant malnutrition; micronutrients; breastfeeding and complementary feeding; nutrition in emergencies; nutrition, ethics and human rights; household food security; and nutrition of school-age children.

The Interim Steering Committee, established by the Subcommittee in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1154], had drawn up a draft ACC/SCN strategic plan containing proposals with respect to the structure and functioning of SCN. Several aspects of the plan had been implemented and an assessment of effectiveness was proposed for 2003. As regards funding, the draft plan suggested that, in place of the voluntary nature of both core and programme funding, it would be desirable to establish a system of assessed contributions from UN agencies to the core budget. Currently, of the total programme budget of $1,077,000 for 2000-2001, donor commitments totalling $527,500 had been confirmed, leaving $549,500 to raise.

The Subcommittee was informed of the recent creation of the World Health Policy Forum, designed as a global membership network aimed at creating a context in which policy action plans addressing important public health issues could be developed and made to work. It was also informed of the release of the Fourth Report on the World Nutrition Situation, based on the theme "Nutrition throughout the life cycle". The report covered available indicators of nutritional status from foetal life to the elderly and stressed that nutrition was fundamental, nutrition failures were egregious, but rapid progress was possible.

The Subcommittee decided to establish two new working groups: one on nutrition and HIV/AIDS and the other on capacity-building in nutrition.

UNU activities

The United Nations University (UNU) continued its food and nutrition programme in 2000. The programme, undertaken in collaboration with WHO, UNICEF and FAO, addressed major nutrition concerns in developing countries. During 2000, it maintained six major global projects and a number of minor ones, and provided 15 fellowships for various kinds of advanced training. The topics of some of the projects under the programme were: international network of food data systems; international iron nutrition project; international dietary energy consultative group; multi-country growth reference study; global initiative for enhancing institutional capacity in food and nutrition; African leadership initiative (a joint project with the International Union of Nutritional Sciences); and harmonization of approaches for setting national dietary standards. The programme continued its quarterly publication of the Food and Nutrition Bulletin and the Journal of Food Composition and Analysis.

The priority in 2000 was to work more effectively in strengthening capacity in Africa; two workshops were held, in East and West Africa.

Within the framework of its "Food and Nutrition Programme for Human and Social Welfare", UNU supported three workshops in Africa and Latin America. Those workshops provided potential leaders in nutrition with an opportunity for close interaction with senior nutrition leaders and for practical training in leadership, communication and management skills. In cooperation with the Humanity Development Library, UNU Press continued to expand the "Food and Nutrition Library" CD-ROM project. Designed as a cooperative project with numerous international and non-governmental organizations, such as WFP, FAO and the Peace Corps, the "Food and Nutrition Library" contained the full text of 260 publications and was available free of charge in developing countries.

Chapter XIV

International drug control

During 2000, the United Nations, through the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) and the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP) of the Secretariat, continued to strengthen international cooperation and increase efforts to counter the world drug problem, in accordance with the obligations of States under the United Nations drug control conventions, and on the basis of the outcome of the General Assembly's twentieth special session, held in 1998. Activities focused mainly on implementation of the 1999 Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, which served as a guide to Member States in adopting strategies and programmes for reducing illicit drug demand in order to achieve significant results by 2008.

UNDCP stimulated action at the national, regional and international levels through technical cooperation programmes and supported the international community in implementing the strategy agreed upon by the Assembly at its special session. It assisted States in complying with international treaties and supported national efforts and initiatives to reduce or eliminate illicit cultivation of narcotic crops through alternative development and to strengthen national capacities in demand reduction and institution-building.

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs—the main UN policy-making body dealing with drug control—addressed a number of issues and adopted resolutions on the reduction of the demand for illicit drugs, illicit drug trafficking and supply, and the implementation of international treaties. In July, the Economic and Social Council urged Governments to continue to contribute to maintaining a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials for medical and scientific needs, and to prevent illicit production or diversion of opiate raw materials to illicit channels. It also promoted the design of national and regional prevention programmes through an interdisciplinary approach.

INCB continued to oversee the implementation of the three major international drug control conventions, to analyse the drug situation worldwide and to draw Governments' attention to weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance. It examined the problem of the excessive use of controlled drugs in many developed countries and highlighted the scarce availability of narcotic drugs for medical needs in a number of developing countries.

Follow-up to the twentieth special session

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/132 [YUN 1999, p. 1157], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/55/126], presented an overview of the implementation of the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem, held in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1135], and of resolution 54/132, by which the Assembly adopted the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction. The Guiding Principles were adopted at the special session [ibid., p. 1137]. The report reviewed 2003 and 2008 goals and targets, set by the special session; the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs; the Action Plan for implementing the Declaration on the principles; elimination of illicit cultivation of the opium poppy, coca bush and cannabis through alternative development; measures to promote judicial cooperation; the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and their Precursors [YUN 1998, p. 1139]; control of precursors; countering money-laundering; and UNDCP as a catalyst for action by Member States and the UN system.

In December [E/CN.7/2001/2], the UNDCP Executive Director submitted his first biennial report on the implementation of the outcome of the special session. The report, prepared pursuant to Commission resolution 42/11 [YUN 1999, p. 1191], presented an analysis of the drug situation and described efforts by Governments to implement the action plans and measures adopted by the Assembly, drawing on information provided by Governments through biennial questionnaires. The report described the role of the Commission in the implementation process; reviewed global trends in drug abuse; and provided an overview of regional trends.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/55/594], adopted resolution 55/65 without vote [agenda item 106].

International cooperation against the world drug problem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 52/92 of 12 December 1997, 53/115 of 9 December 1998 and 54/132 of 17 December 1999,

Reaffirming its commitment to the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly devoted to countering the world drug problem together, held in New York from 8 to 10 June 1998, and welcoming the continued determination of Governments to overcome the world drug problem by a full and balanced application of national, regional and international strategies to reduce the demand for, production of and trafficking in illicit drugs, as reflected in the Political Declaration, the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the measures to enhance international cooperation to counter the world drug problem,

Gravely concerned that, despite continued increased efforts by States, relevant international organizations, civil society and non-governmental organizations, the drug problem is still a challenge of a global dimension, which constitutes a serious threat to the health, safety and well-being of all mankind, in particular young people, in all countries, undermines development, including efforts to reduce poverty, socio-economic and political stability and democratic institutions, entails an increasing economic cost for Governments, also threatens the national security and sovereignty of States, as well as the dignity and hope of millions of people and their families, and causes irreparable loss of human lives,

Concerned that the demand for, production of and trafficking in illicit drugs and psychotropic substances continue to threaten seriously the socio-economic and political systems, stability, national security and sovereignty of many States, especially those involved in conflicts and wars, and that trafficking in drugs could make conflict resolution more difficult,

Deeply alarmed by the violence and economic power of criminal organizations and terrorist groups engaged in drug-trafficking activities and other criminal activities, such as money-laundering and illicit traffic in arms, precursors and essential chemicals, and by the increasing transnational links between them, and recognizing the need for international cooperation and implementation of effective strategies on the basis of the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, which are essential to achieving results against all forms of transnational criminal activities,

Noting with grave concern the global increase in the use of minors in the illicit production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, as well as in the number of children and young people starting to use drugs at an earlier age and in their access to substances not previously used,

Alarmed by the rapid and widespread increase in the illicit manufacture, trafficking and consumption, in particular by young people, of synthetic drugs in many countries and by the high probability that amphetamine-type stimulants, in particular methamphetamine and amphetamine, may become drugs of choice among abusers in the twenty-first century,

Deeply convinced that the special session made a significant contribution to a new comprehensive framework for international cooperation, based on an integrated and balanced approach with strategies, measures, methods, practical activities, goals and specific targets to be met, that all States, the United Nations system and other international organizations must implement them with concrete actions and that the international financial institutions, such as the World Bank, and the regional development banks should be invited to include action against the world drug problem in their programmes, taking into account the priorities of States,

Reaffirming the importance of the commitments of Member States in meeting the objectives targeted for 2003 and 2008, as set out in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, and welcoming the guidelines for reporting on the follow-up to the twentieth special session adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its reconvened forty-second session,

Emphasizing the importance of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, which introduces a global approach, recognizing a new balance between illicit supply and demand reduction, under the principle of shared responsibility, aims at preventing the use of drugs and at reducing the adverse consequences of drug abuse, ensuring that special attention is paid to vulnerable groups, in particular children and young people, and constitutes one of the pillars of the new global strategy, and reaffirming the need for demand reduction programmes,

Emphasizing equally the importance of supply reduction as an integral part of a balanced drug control strategy under the principles enshrined in the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, reaffirming the need for alternative development programmes that are sustainable, welcoming the achievements of some States on their way to eradicating illicit drug crops, and inviting all other States to make similar efforts,

Underlining the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs as the principal United Nations policy-making body on drug control issues, the leadership role and commendable work of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme as the main focus for concerted multilateral action and the important role of the International Narcotics Control Board as an independent monitoring authority, as set out in the international drug control treaties,

Recognizing the efforts of all countries, in particular those that produce narcotic drugs for scientific and medical purposes, and of the International Narcotics Control Board in preventing the diversion of such substances to illicit markets and in maintaining production at a level consistent with licit demand, in line with the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971,

Recognizing also that the problem of the illicit production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances is often related to development problems and that those links and the promotion of the economic development of countries affected by the illicit drug trade require, within the context of shared responsibility, appropriate measures, including strengthened international cooperation in support of alternative and sustainable development activities, in the affected areas of those countries, that have as their objectives the reduction and elimination of illicit drug production,

Stressing that respect for all human rights is and must be an essential component of measures taken to address the drug problem,

Ensuring that women and men benefit equally, and without any discrimination, from strategies directed against the world drug problem, through their involvement in all stages of programmes and policy-making,

Recognizing that the use of the Internet poses new opportunities and challenges to international cooperation in countering drug abuse and illicit production and trafficking, and recognizing also the need for increased cooperation among States and the exchange of information, including with reference to national experiences, on how to counter the promotion of drug abuse and illicit drug trafficking through this instrument and on ways to use the Internet for information concerning drug demand reduction,

Convinced that civil society, including non-governmental organizations and community-based organizations, should continue to play an active role and make an effective contribution to countering the world drug problem,

Acknowledging with appreciation the increased efforts and achievements of many States, relevant international organizations, civil society and non-governmental organizations in countering drug abuse and illicit production of and trafficking in drugs, and that international cooperation has shown that positive results can be achieved through sustained and collective efforts,

I

Respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law in countering the world drug problem

1. Reaffirms that countering the world drug problem is a common and shared responsibility which must be addressed in a multilateral setting, requiring an integrated and balanced approach, and must be carried out in full conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law, and in particular with full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of States and all human rights and fundamental freedoms;

2. Calls upon all States to take further action to promote effective cooperation at the international and regional levels in the efforts to counter the world drug problem so as to contribute to a climate conducive to achieving that end, on the basis of the principles of equal rights and mutual respect;

3. Urges all States to ratify or accede to and implement all the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

II

International cooperation to counter the world drug problem

1. Welcomes the renewed commitment made in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to counter the world drug problem;

2. Urges competent authorities, at the international, regional and national levels, to implement the outcome of the twentieth special session, within the agreed time frames, in particular the high-priority practical measures at the international, regional or national level, as indicated in the Political Declaration, the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the measures to enhance international cooperation to counter the world drug problem, including the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and Their Precursors, the measures to prevent the illicit manufacture, import, export, trafficking, distribution and diversion of precursors used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, the measures to promote judicial cooperation, the measures to counter money-laundering and the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development;

3. Urges all Member States to implement the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction in their respective national, regional and international actions and to strengthen their national efforts to counter the abuse of illicit drugs among their population, in particular among children and young people;

4. Recognizes the role of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme in developing action-oriented strategies to assist Member States in the implementation of the Declaration, and requests the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-fourth session on the follow-up to the Action Plan;

5. Reaffirms its resolve to continue to strengthen the United Nations machinery for international drug control, in particular the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, and the International Narcotics Control Board in order to enable them to fulfil their mandates, bearing in mind the recommendations contained in Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/30 of 28 July 1999, and notes the measures taken by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-third session aimed at the enhancement of its functioning;

6. Renews its commitment to further strengthening international cooperation and substantially increasing efforts to counter the world drug problem, in accordance with the obligations of States under the United Nations drug control conventions, on the basis of the general framework given by the Global Programme of

Action, and the outcome of the special session, and taking into account experience gained;

7. Calls upon all States to adopt effective measures, including national laws and regulations, to implement the mandates and recommendations of the Global Programme of Action and the outcome and the goals of the special session, within the agreed time frame, to strengthen national judicial systems and to carry out effective drug control activities in cooperation with other States in accordance with those international instruments;

8. Calls upon the relevant United Nations bodies, the specialized agencies, the international financial institutions and other concerned intergovernmental and international organizations, within their mandates, and all actors of civil society, notably non-governmental organizations, community-based organizations, sports associations, the media and the private sector, to continue their close cooperation with Governments in their efforts to promote and implement the Global Programme of Action, the outcome of the special session and the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, including through public information campaigns, resorting, inter alia, where available, to the Internet;

9. Urges Governments, the relevant United Nations bodies, the specialized agencies and other international organizations to assist and support States, upon request, in particular developing countries in need of such assistance and support, with the aim of enhancing their capacity to counter illicit trafficking of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, taking into account national plans and initiatives, and emphasizes the importance of subregional, regional and international cooperation in countering illicit drug trafficking;

10. Reaffirms that preventing the diversion of chemicals from legitimate commerce to illicit drug manufacture is an essential component of a comprehensive strategy against drug abuse and trafficking, which requires the effective cooperation of exporting, importing and transit States, notes the progress made in developing practical guidelines to prevent such diversion of chemicals, including those of the International Narcotics Control Board and the recommendations on implementing article 12 of the 1988 Convention, and calls upon all States to adopt and implement measures to prevent the diversion of chemicals to illicit drug manufacture, in cooperation with competent international and regional bodies and, if necessary and to the extent possible, with the private sector in each State, in accordance with the objectives targeted for 2003 and 2008 in the Political Declaration and the resolution on the control of precursors adopted at the special session;

11. Calls upon States in which cultivation and production of illicit drug crops occur to establish or reinforce, where appropriate, national mechanisms to monitor and verify illicit crops, and requests the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-fourth session, in March 2001, on the follow-up to the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development;

12. Calls upon all States to report biennially to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on their efforts to meet the goals and targets for 2003 and 2008, as set out in the Political Declaration adopted at the special session, in accordance with the terms established in the guidelines adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its reconvened forty-second session;

13. Welcomes the decision of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to submit a report to the General Assembly in 2003 and 2008 on the progress achieved in meeting the goals and targets set out in the Political Declaration;

14. Encourages the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the International Narcotics Control Board to continue their useful work on the control of precursors and other chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

15. Calls upon the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to mainstream a gender perspective into all its policies, programmes and activities, and requests the Secretariat to integrate a gender perspective into all documentation prepared for the Commission;

16. Recalls the World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond adopted by the General Assembly on 14 December 1995, notes with satisfaction the commitment of young people to a drug-free society made at various forums, and stresses the importance of young people continuing to contribute their experiences and to participate in the decision-making processes and, in particular, putting into effect the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction;

17. Urges all States to assign priority to activities aimed at preventing drug and inhalant abuse among children and young people, inter alia, through the promotion of information and education programmes aimed at raising awareness of the risks of drug abuse with a view to giving effect to the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction;

18. Calls upon States to adopt effective measures, including possible national legislative measures, and to enhance cooperation to stem the illicit trade in small arms, which, as a result of its close link to the illicit drug trade, is generating extremely high levels of crime and violence within the societies of some States, threatening the national security and the economies of those States;

19. Welcomes the elaboration of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and notes the progress achieved in the elaboration of the three related international instruments, within the framework of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Elaboration of a Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

20. Acknowledges the efforts made by Member States, the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and the United Nations system during the United Nations Decade against Drug Abuse, 1991–2000, under the theme “A global response to a global challenge”;

III

Action by the United Nations system

1. Reaffirms the role of the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme in coordinating and providing effective leadership for all United Nations drug control activities so as to increase cost-effectiveness and ensure coherence of action, as well as coordination, complementarity and non-duplication of such activities throughout the United Nations system;

2. Emphasizes that the multidimensional nature of the world drug problem calls for the promotion of integration and coordination of drug control activities throughout the United Nations system, including in the follow-up to major United Nations conferences;

3. Invites Governments and the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to attach high priority to the improvement of the coordination of United Nations activities related to the world drug problem so as to avoid duplication of such activities, strengthen efficiency and accomplish the goals approved by Governments;

4. Urges the specialized agencies, programmes and funds, including humanitarian organizations, and invites multilateral financial institutions, to include action against the world drug problem in their programming and planning processes in order to ensure that the integral and balanced strategy that emerged from the special session devoted to countering the world drug problem together is being addressed;

IV

United Nations International Drug Control Programme

1. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to implement its mandate within the framework of the international drug control treaties, the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, the Global Programme of Action, the outcome of the special session of the General Assembly devoted to countering the world drug problem together and relevant consensus documents;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Programme for the support provided to different States in meeting the objectives of the Global Programme of Action and of the special session, especially in cases where significant and anticipated progress was achieved regarding the objectives targeted for 2003 and 2008;

3. Requests the Programme to continue:

(a) To strengthen cooperation with Member States and with United Nations programmes, funds and relevant agencies, as well as relevant regional organizations and agencies and non-governmental organizations, and to provide, on request, assistance in implementing the outcome of the special session;

(b) To allocate, while keeping the balance between supply and demand reduction programmes, adequate resources to allow it to fulfil its role in the implementation of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction;

(c) To strengthen dialogue and cooperation with multilateral development banks and with international financial institutions so that they may undertake lending and programming activities related to drug control in interested and affected countries to implement the outcome of the special session, and to keep the Commission on Narcotic Drugs informed of further progress made in this area;

(d) To take into account the outcome of the special session, to include in its report on illicit traffic in drugs an updated, objective and comprehensive assessment of worldwide trends in illicit traffic and transit in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, including methods and routes used, and to recommend ways and means of improving the capacity of States along those routes to deal with all aspects of the drug problem;

(e) To publish the World Drug Report, with comprehensive and balanced information about the world drug problem, and to seek additional extrabudgetary resources for its publication in all official languages;

4. Urges all Governments to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the Programme by widening its donor base and increasing voluntary contributions, to enable it to continue, expand and strengthen its operational and technical cooperation activities;

5. Calls upon the International Narcotics Control Board to increase efforts to implement all its mandates under international drug control conventions and to continue to cooperate with Governments, inter alia, by offering advice to Member States that request it;

6. Notes that the Board needs sufficient resources to carry out all its mandates, and therefore urges Member States to commit themselves in a common effort to assigning adequate and sufficient budgetary resources to the Board, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/20 of 23 July 1996, and emphasizes the need to maintain its capacity, inter alia, through the provision of appropriate means by the Secretary-General and adequate technical support by the Programme;

7. Stresses the importance of the meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies, in all regions of the world, and the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, and encourages them to continue to contribute to the strengthening of regional and international cooperation, taking into account the outcome of the special session;

8. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and, taking into account the promotion of integrated reporting, requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session a comprehensive report on the implementation of the outcome of the twentieth special session, including on the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, and the present resolution.

Millennium Assembly and Summit

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2000/28], adopted resolution 2000/16 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Inclusion of international drug control as a topic for the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations and the Millennium Summit of the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that the General Assembly, at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, held in New York from 8 to 10 June 1998, reaffirmed the unwavering determination and commitment of Member States to overcoming the world drug problem through domestic and international strategies to reduce both the illicit supply of and the demand for drugs, and recognized that action against the world drug problem is a common and shared responsibility requiring an integrated and balanced approach with full respect for the sovereignty of States,

Recalling also that the General Assembly, in its resolution 53/202 of 17 December 1998, decided to designate its fifty-fifth session as "The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations" and to convene a Millennium Summit of the United Nations,

Noting that the Secretary-General, in response to the need to address persistent problems efficiently and effectively and to deal with the emerging trends and challenges of the future, identified drug control as one of the overall priorities of work for the United Nations in its medium-term plan for the period 1998-2001,

Noting with grave concern that the drug problem is a global challenge involving tens of millions of victims abusing drugs worldwide and causing massive social and health difficulties, as well as undermining economies,

Aware that drug trafficking and abuse have an impact on many key areas of United Nations activities,

Recognizing the need for Governments to implement comprehensive measures to follow up the work of the General Assembly at its twentieth special session and to monitor their implementation,

Emphasizing the important role of the international community in mobilizing efforts to give effect to its commitment to drug control as an integral part of the United Nations overall programme for the new millennium,

Noting the forthcoming publication of the new World Drug Report,

1. Invites the General Assembly to include the world drug problem as an item in the agenda of the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations and of the Millennium Summit of the United Nations to be held from 6 to 8 September 2000;

2. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to inform the Secretary-General of the contents of the present resolution in the light of the preparations being undertaken for the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations and the Millennium Summit of the United Nations.

Conventions

In 2000, international efforts to control narcotic drugs were governed by three global conventions: the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 1961, p. 382], which, with some exceptions of detail, replaced earlier narcotics treaties and was amended in 1972 by a Protocol [YUN 1972, p. 397] intended to strengthen the role of INCB; the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1971, p. 380]; and the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 690].

As at 31 December 2000, 161 States were parties to the 1961 Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol. During the year, the Comoros, Georgia, Maldives and San Marino became parties.

The number of parties to the 1971 Convention stood at 167 as at 31 December 2000. The Comoros, Iran, Kenya, Maldives, San Marino and the United Republic of Tanzania became parties during the year.

At year's end, 158 States and the European Community were parties to the 1988 Convention. The Comoros, Estonia, Kuwait, Maldives and San Marino became parties in 2000.

Commission action. At its forty-third session in March [E/2000/28], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs reviewed implementation of the international drug control treaties. It had before it a note by the Secretariat on changes in substance control [YUN 1999, p. 1167] and the INCB report covering 1999 [ibid.]. The Commission emphasized the importance of achieving the objective that narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances should be available for legitimate medical and scientific purposes. With regard to implementation of article 12 of the 1988 Convention concerning the control of precursors, the Commission recognized the need to establish mechanisms for the rapid exchange of information on shipments of precursors, and welcomed the extension into its second phase of "Operation Purple", established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1168] as a systematic international tracking programme for shipments of the precursor potassium permanganate. Since the Operation's inception on 1 April 1999, it had monitored 248 shipments of the substance and stopped or seized 32 of them as suspect and liable to diversion for illicit drug manufacture.

On 7 March [E/2000/28 (dec. 43/1)], the Commission decided to include norephedrine, as well as its salts and optical isomers, in Table I of the 1988 Convention.

On 15 March [res. 43/9], the Commission urged Governments to take measures to control potassium permanganate, in accordance with the measures to control chemical precursors adopted in General Assembly resolution S-20/4 B [YUN 1998, p. 1142], and called on them to consider participating in regional and multilateral activities such as "Operation Purple". It encouraged interested Governments, regional and international organizations and INCB to consider initiatives targeting acetic anhydride, identified for particular attention in the measures to control precursors set forth in resolution S-20/4 B.

On the same date [res. 43/10], the Commission adopted a resolution on the promotion of regional and international cooperation in the fight against the illicit manufacture, trafficking and consumption of synthetic drugs, in particular amphetamine-type stimulants. Welcoming the convening, as part of the anti-drug conferences (Tokyo, January) (see p. 1187), of the Conference on Amphetamine-type Stimulants in East and South-East Asia, the Commission called on Member States and relevant regional and international organizations to give synthetic drugs, particularly amphetamine-type stimulants, due priority in their policies and programmes, and to exchange information on ensuring rapid identification and assessment of new synthetic drugs and on models used to improve the flexibility of the process of scheduling pursuant to the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and Their Precursors, adopted by the Assembly in resolution S-20/4 A [YUN 1998, p. 1139]. Member States were called on to enhance programmes, particularly those targeting youth; to facilitate information exchange on new synthetic drugs; and to strengthen cooperation against their illicit manufacture, trafficking and abuse. The Commission asked UNDCP to expand its regional projects related to synthetic drugs and their precursors and to develop new regional programmes; to assist Member States, upon their request, in establishing a regional system or mechanism, and enhancing those already established, to assess drug abuse trends, particularly synthetic drugs; and to assist Member States in facilitating information exchange on measures taken by Governments and regional and international organizations to counter problems associated with synthetic drugs, in order to promote international cooperation. The Commission decided to consider the matters reviewed in its resolution, based on a report to be prepared by UNDCP.

By another 15 March resolution [res. 43/11], the Commission requested INCB to examine provisions which, in the same way as those contained in the 1971 Convention, might facilitate and enhance security in cases involving travellers carrying medical preparations containing narcotic drugs.

INCB action. In its report covering 2000 [E/INCB/2000/1], INCB stated that the implementation of the provisions of both the 1961 and 1971 Conventions was a prerequisite for achieving the objectives of the 1988 Convention. It welcomed the fact that a growing number of States had taken steps to implement the 1988 Convention and accede to it, and reiterated its requests to States that had not yet done so to accede to the 1988 Convention. The Board invited all metropolitan Governments that had not already done so to extend the territorial application of the 1988 Convention to their non-metropolitan territories; likewise, non-metropolitan territories were encouraged to implement article 12 of the Convention.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2000/28], adopted resolution 2000/18 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1999/33 of 28 July 1999 and previous relevant resolutions,

Emphasizing that the need to balance the global licit supply of opiates against the legitimate demand for opiates for medical and scientific purposes is central to the international strategy and policy of drug control,

Noting the fundamental need for international co-operation and solidarity with the traditional supplier countries in drug control to ensure universal application of the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961,

Having considered the Report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1999, in which the Board points out that in 1998 the current status of stocks of opiate raw materials and major opiates seemed to have improved, and that a balance between consumption and production of opiate raw materials was achieved as a result of the efforts made by the two traditional suppliers, India and Turkey, together with other producing countries,

Noting the importance of opiates in pain relief therapy as advocated by the World Health Organization,

1. Urges all Governments to continue to contribute to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials for medical and scientific needs, the achievement of which would be facilitated by maintaining, insofar as their constitutional and legal systems permit, support to the traditional supplier countries, and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials;

2. Urges Governments of all producing countries to adhere strictly to the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and to take effective measures to prevent illicit production or diversion of opiate raw materials to illicit channels, especially when increasing licit production;

3. Urges consumer countries to assess their licit needs for opiate raw materials realistically and to communicate those needs to the International Narcotics Control Board in order to ensure easy supply, and urges concerned producing countries and the Board to increase efforts to monitor the available supply and to ensure sufficient stocks of licit opiate raw materials;

4. Requests the Board to continue its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions in full compliance with the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961;

5. Commends the Board for its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Council resolutions and, in particular:

(a) In urging the Governments concerned to adjust global production of opiate raw materials to a level corresponding to actual licit needs and to avoid unforeseen imbalances between licit supply of and demand for opiates caused by the exportation of products manufactured from seized and confiscated drugs;

(b) In inviting the Governments concerned to ensure that opiates imported into their countries for medical and scientific use do not originate from countries that transform seized and confiscated drugs into licit opiates;

(c) In arranging informal meetings, during sessions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, with the main States importing and producing opiate raw materials;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Governments for consideration and implementation.

International Narcotics Control Board

The 13-member International Narcotics Control Board held its sixty-eighth (15-26 May) and sixty-ninth (1-17 November) sessions, both in Vienna [E/INCB/2000/1].

In performing the functions assigned to it under the international conventions, the Board maintained a continuous dialogue with Governments. The statistical data and other information received from them were used in analyses of the licit manufacture of and trade in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances worldwide, in order to identify whether Governments had enforced treaty provisions requiring them to limit to medical and scientific purposes the licit manufacture of, trade in and distribution and use of those substances. The international drug control treaties required the Board to report annually on the drug control situation worldwide, noting gaps and weaknesses in national control and in treaty compliance and making recommendations for improvements.

As the aim of the treaties was to prevent drug abuse and its associated problems, the special theme of the Board's report in 2000 focused on the prevention of drug use that had no medical or scientific legitimacy. The linchpin of prevention was to reduce drug availability for non-medical purposes by statutory regulation. However, according to the Board, that approach was insufficient on its own. The Board examined the excessive use of controlled drugs in several countries and discussed possible factors contributing to that situation. It examined ways to curb excessive drug consumption and outlined the responsibilities of health-care professionals, pharmaceutical companies, professional organizations, consumer associations, government and the public. Although the Board observed that the recent trend towards medicalizing social problems should be reversed, it stressed that the proper use of medicines should not be discouraged. In addition to educational programmes, preventive measures that were likely to be effective included reducing drug availability by law enforcement measures that entailed the application of penalties to deter those dealing in illicit drugs. Reducing the excess use of prescription drugs, however, depended more on educating doctors and other health-care professionals in rational prescribing.

The Board analysed the operation of the international drug control system and the major developments in drug abuse and trafficking worldwide. It contacted States that had extremely low consumption of, and estimates for, pain relief drugs to clarify the reasons and identify problems in ensuring the availability of narcotic drugs for medical purposes. The Governments concerned were invited to review the assessments of requirements for psychotropic substances established for their States, establish their own assessments as soon as possible and ensure that they were regularly updated. As a result of the worldwide application of the system of estimates and the import and export authorization system, no cases involving the diversion of narcotic drugs from licit international trade into the illicit traffic were detected, despite the large number of transactions involved. The Board noted, however, that the diversion of narcotic drugs from inadequately functioning domestic distribution channels continued to occur, and hoped that Governments concerned would take measures to prevent it.

In its conclusions and recommendations, the Board noted that its current review had shown that the excessive or inappropriate use of psychoactive substances, once they became strictly controlled, was often replaced by the use of less strictly controlled substitutes. The safest way for Governments to prevent the emergence of new problems was to react in a timely manner to avoid the potential for overconsumption of such drugs. The Board recommended that Governments closely supervise the supply and consumption of controlled drugs, explore ways for closer inter-governmental cooperation and develop inter-governmental arrangements and standards for application at the regional level. Developing countries should establish regulatory control over the national drug supply, seek bilateral and multilateral assistance, promote the manufacture and/or import of generic drug substitutions of good quality, and enlist the assistance of local pharmacies as a source of information. Smuggling of diverted pharmaceutical products containing psychotropic substances had become widespread, and the Board requested Governments to ensure exchange of information among their national authorities on seizures and illicit trafficking, and to provide information, training and technical means to customs officials. It called to Governments' attention the hazards of inadequately storing psychotropic substances seized after having been diverted from licit manufacture and trade. The diversion of precursors from licit trade for the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs or psychotropic substances continued. In 2000, major drug manufacturing, exporting and importing countries continued to participate in "Operation Purple" to monitor potassium permanganate, a key chemical used in the illicit manufacture of cocaine. In order to initiate a comparable programme for acetic anhydride, used in illicit heroin manufacture, the Board convened an international meeting (Antalya, Turkey, October), which agreed to initiate "Operation Topaz" to prevent the diversion of that chemical from international trade, to intercept illicit consignments and to investigate seizures in order that the sources of the seized substance could be identified. Legal provisions regarding travellers under treatment involving the use of preparations containing narcotic drugs differed significantly from country to country. Thus, the Board recognized the need to establish provisions for carrying narcotic drugs similar to those for psychotropic substances as contained in the 1971 Convention. Expressing concern about the increasing use of the Internet to illicitly advertise and sell controlled substances and noting that national efforts had only a limited impact, the Board drew the attention of the Commission to the urgent need to further consider the problem. In view of the introduction of a new variety of opium poppy with a high thebaine content and the growing importance of thebaine as a raw material for the manufacture of opiates, the Board deemed it necessary to review the methodology used for the analysis of the global situation regarding the supply of and demand for opiates for medical purposes.

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2000/241, took note of the INCB report for 1999 [Sales No. E.00.XI.1].

World drug situation

In its 2000 report [E/INCB/2000/1], INCB provided a regional analysis of world drug abuse trends and control efforts, so that Governments would be kept aware of situations that might endanger the objectives of international drug control treaties.

Africa

In most countries in Africa, drug abuse appeared to be rising. Cannabis remained the most widely grown and abused drug. Psychotropic substance abuse was widespread because of inadequate systems for licensing and inspecting trade in those substances, and heroin and cocaine abuse had become more widespread in urban areas. The rise of heroin injecting was of concern due to the high prevalence of HIV/AIDS in most parts of Africa. The lack of resources for drug control remained the main obstacle in the fight against illicit crop cultivation, drug production and trafficking in Africa.

Despite eradication efforts and significant seizures in some countries, the region remained a major supplier of cannabis. South Africa remained one of the world's largest producers of cannabis, most of which was sold on illicit markets in the country or in the subregion of Southern Africa, although the amount smuggled into Europe and the United States continued to increase. Despite law enforcement efforts and the strengthening of customs control, Morocco remained a major source of cannabis resin destined mainly for Western Europe. Significant cannabis cultivation was also reported in Western Africa.

The only confirmed report of opium poppy cultivation in Africa came from the Sinai peninsula in Egypt, where opium was abused but heroin was not manufactured. While the total amount of heroin seized in Africa remained small, heroin seizures increased, particularly in countries in Eastern and Western Africa, through which heroin, mainly from India, Pakistan and Thailand, was smuggled. Cocaine originating in South America and shipped mainly from Brazil transited countries in Western and Southern Africa on its way to Europe. Even though South Africa was only a transit point, the consumption of cocaine in its hard crystalline form, "crack", and in powder form increased in that country. Trafficking in and the abuse of psychotropic substances increased in Western and Central Africa and, along with narcotic drugs, continued to be available over the counter, due to the lack of control over pharmaceutical products. South Africa was thought to be the country with the world's largest prevalence of methaqualone abuse; the substance remained a problem in Eastern, Western and other parts of Southern Africa. When India ceased to be a major source of the substance, local illicit manufacture compensated for the loss, primarily in South Africa. Methylenedioxymethamphetamine (MDMA), commonly known as Ecstasy, was the most recent drug of abuse that appeared in the region; clandestine laboratories manufacturing MDMA and methamphetamine had been detected in South Africa. However, the bulk of MDMA abused in South Africa had been smuggled in from Europe, notably the Netherlands and the United Kingdom.

In September, the Board sent a mission to Senegal and to the United Republic of Tanzania and urged both Governments to strengthen their system of control. It welcomed the establishment of the Inter-Ministerial Anti-Drug Commission in Tanzania, which was to coordinate all drug control efforts in that country.

Many countries had updated their drug laws and policies. National drug control strategies had been adopted in Benin, Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Kenya and Togo and were being prepared in the Central African Republic, Madagascar and Tanzania. Mauritius developed legislation to enable it to become a party to the 1988 Convention; Ghana initiated drug prevention education in the curriculum of all secondary schools and teacher training colleges; Nigeria created committees on drugs and financial crime in its parliament; and South Africa established an asset forfeiture unit under the 1988 Prevention of Organized Crime Act.

Regionally, several Governments cooperated in the fight against drug trafficking through bilateral and international agreements. Kenya and Uganda had joint operations aimed at curbing cannabis trafficking along their common border; Egypt and Pakistan concluded a bilateral agreement on drug control cooperation; and Nigeria signed memorandums of understanding on drug control with Iran and the Russian Federation. The Organization of African Unity (OAU) convened a third expert group meeting on drug control (Algiers, February), to monitor the implementation of the OAU plan of action on the control of drug abuse and illicit trafficking in Africa. The first Africa-Europe summit (Cairo, Egypt, April), held under the aegis of OAU and the European Union (EU), resulted in a plan of action to, among other things, fight illicit drug trafficking. Subregional organizations, namely, the Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa and the East African Community, developed a draft protocol on combating drug trafficking within Eastern Africa; and the Southern African Development Community's (SADC) regional drug control programme became operational. SADC activities included a project aimed at increasing drug awareness and involving the mass media in Southern Africa, a study to assess the needs of law enforcement agencies regarding information sharing and exchange on drug-related issues, and work towards enhancing coordination among national drug control bodies in the sub-region. The first meeting of ministers of the interior and the third meeting of the committee of police chiefs in Eastern Africa (Khartoum, June), organized by the Sudan in collaboration with Interpol, decided to gather and share information on drug trafficking, and to hold regular meetings to discuss drug trafficking trends and operations aimed at countering the problem. A seminar was held, under the auspices of the Central Bank of West African States (Dakar, Senegal, July), to sensitize and inform national authorities and financial institutions throughout the sub-region about money-laundering issues.

Americas

Central America and the Caribbean

In Central America and the Caribbean, the illicit cultivation of cannabis, mainly for domestic illicit markets, was widespread. Opium poppy cultivation was limited to Guatemala, where the area under cultivation had decreased only slightly. Most countries continued to experience problems involving the enforcement of prescription requirements for anxiolytics and, to a lesser extent, stimulants used as anorectics. Seizures of coca paste decreased in 1999 and the first half of 2000 in all countries in Central America, except Guatemala. Seizures of cocaine hydrochloride and "crack", however, continued to increase and were much higher in Nicaragua and Panama than the rest of the region. Belize was the only country in the subregion that did not report seizures of heroin. Weak institutional and political situations in some countries and the large number of political entities in the Caribbean posed challenges to the fight against illicit drug trafficking and abuse. Drug traffickers capitalized on those challenges, moving their operations to weaker jurisdictions and stockpiling illicit drugs in isolated locations. They also took advantage of the potential offered by the growing tourism industry, and the region's location between major drug-producing areas and significant illicit drug markets.

In Jamaica and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, where the cultivation and abuse of cannabis had become socially acceptable and a major source of income, there was considerable illicit cultivation of cannabis, which was destined for illicit national and international markets. On several other islands, as well as in Central America, cannabis was cultivated mainly to be abused locally. Eradication efforts continued to be successful and large amounts were seized. In the region, information on illicit activities related to psychotropic substances was scarce. The manufacture of those substances appeared to be non-existent and the diversion of such substances from licit into illicit channels was rarely reported.

In Central America, the smuggling of drugs, mostly cocaine hydrochloride, coca paste (basuco) and "crack", by land continued unabated. It appeared that in Central America, ports on the Caribbean Sea and on the Pacific Ocean were increasingly used for the trans-shipment of illicit drugs. The spillover of that drug trafficking had a noticeable impact on the abuse of drugs, in particular cocaine and "crack". Private vessels, fishing boats, cruisers and pleasure ships were increasingly used in maritime drug trafficking.

Reliable data on levels of drug abuse in Central America and the Caribbean remained scarce. According to information furnished by Governments to the Inter-American Drug Abuse Commission (CICAD), the most common drug of first-time abuse was cannabis, and in Central America, also inhalants. In Costa Rica, "crack" ranked slightly above cannabis, while in Honduras, tranquilizers were more than twice as popular as cannabis as the drug of first-time abuse. In some parts of the Caribbean, the abuse of Ecstasy was detected.

Following a mission to El Salvador in July, the Board welcomed the adoption of new laws against money-laundering and the sale of glue and solvents, the establishment of a joint secretariat for the anti-narcotics trafficking commission and the anti-drugs commission, and nationwide drug abuse prevention initiatives. The Board also visited Honduras in July and welcomed the Government's efforts to enhance drug control. It remarked that the national anti-narcotics council should be strengthened, particularly regarding the handling of drug policy matters; coordination between law enforcement agencies and the health authorities on drug-related issues required improvement; and the Government needed to establish a regulatory mechanism and designate an agency responsible for precursor control. The Board stated that the Government's efforts should be complemented by financial and technical support from the international community.

The Board noted that, during 2000, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic and Panama developed new national drug control plans; the financial investigation unit created by El Salvador became operational; and Antigua and Barbuda, Barbados and Panama enacted legislation against money-laundering. The Board expressed concern about reports of money-laundering activities in Dominica, Saint Kitts and Nevis, and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines; and the political (see p. 249) and economic situation in Haiti, which had hindered the country's ability to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking. Although Jamaica had enacted drug legislation and created a Port Security Corps to deal with seaport security, drug trafficking had increased significantly. In Saint Lucia, improvements in the police force resulted in increased eradication activities and more seizures. Transit trafficking in Cuba had led to increased availability of drugs in the country.

Regionally, the cooperative efforts of Central American Governments led to multilateral law enforcement operations, such as "Operation Central Skies", a United States counternarcotics aerial reconnaissance programme. In July, El Salvador reached an agreement with the United States on the establishment of a regional centre to combat illicit drug trafficking. In other initiatives, the Permanent Central American Commission for the Eradication of Illicit Production, Traffic, Consumption and Use of Drugs and Psychotropic Substances proposed to design a subregional plan of action; and El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua pursued a tripartite agreement to combat smuggling in the Pacific basin of Central America. The Board noted the importance of regional and subregional initiatives in the Caribbean, such as the United Nations Off-shore Forum (Cayman Islands, March); the third joint meeting (Barbados, May) of the Caribbean Drug Control Coordination Mechanism; and the chemical control workshop organized by CICAD for Caribbean countries (Barbados, October).

North America

Cannabis remained the most common drug of abuse in Canada, Mexico and the United States. The spread of high-content tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) cannabis in Canada and part of the United States was of major concern to law enforcement agencies. Illicit production in Canada was estimated at 800 tons, more than 60 per cent of which might have entered the illicit market in the United States. In the United States, cannabis was mainly smuggled into the country from Canada, Mexico and other countries in the region; however, much of the cannabis was illicitly grown by small-scale operators within the United States. Though efforts to eradicate cannabis had been made by law enforcement agencies in Canada, the impact of those efforts had been reduced by Canadian courts that gave lenient sentences to cannabis growers and couriers. While the overall level of cocaine abuse in the United States remained unchanged, the rate declined for adolescents, which was attributed to drug abuse education. Overall, heroin abuse declined. Although there were no recent statistics on drug abuse in Canada, surveys showed increased drug abuse among secondary school students. Cocaine abuse in Mexico remained at a much lower rate than in both Canada and the United States but appeared to be increasing. Methamphetamine abuse continued to be widespread in Canada and the United States, and Ecstasy from Western Europe was increasingly being abused by young people. Illicit methamphetamine manufacture continued in North America and increased in Canada, where law enforcement agencies uncovered a record number of clandestine laboratories. Gamma-hydroxybutyrate (GHB) abuse was spreading rapidly in the United States, which placed it on schedule I of the country's Controlled Substance Act.

Drug trafficking continued to increase in Canada. Besides cannabis and cocaine, the amount of heroin smuggled into the country increased. Canadian law enforcement agencies intercepted a consignment of heroin that weighed 156 kilograms, the largest heroin seizure ever made in the country. Mexico continued to be a major source of cannabis. Mexican drug trafficking groups were also involved in Ecstasy trafficking, exchanging cocaine from Latin America for Ecstasy manufactured in Europe. Cannabis, cocaine and heroin seized along the Mexico-United States border increased in 2000. As it became more difficult to smuggle drugs into the United States by air, South American traffickers turned to shipping cocaine and heroin by sea to Central America, and then smuggling the drugs into the United States by land.

In North America, the spread of information by the media on methods used to manufacture illicit drugs continued to be a concern, particularly in Canada and the United States. Messages about indoor cannabis cultivation and the manufacture of synthetic drugs, especially methamphetamine, were common on web sites.

Canada, Mexico and the United States continued cooperative efforts against drug abuse and illicit trafficking. Mexico and the United States, based on the 1997 Bi-national Drug Threat Assessment and the Alliance against Drugs, developed procedures to evaluate progress made under their respective national drug control strategies. Customs authorities of both countries signed an agreement to work more on various issues, including money-laundering and drug trafficking. Joint operations by their law enforcement authorities, especially the Mexican Navy and the United States Coast Guard, resulted in increased cocaine seizures. Based on the Cross-Border Crime Forum established in 1997, Canada and the United States worked on a mechanism to enhance the sharing of intelligence and developing priorities for targeting criminal groups involved in drug trafficking. A sub-regional agreement to promote cooperation in demand reduction was approved at a summit of the Presidents of Mexico and the Central American countries. In June, China and the United States entered into an agreement to increase cooperation in the fight against drug-related crime, particularly by sharing evidence related to crime and drug trafficking. A multinational drug law enforcement operation led by the United States and joined by 25 countries in the Caribbean and South America resulted in the capture of thousands of suspected drug traffickers and the seizure of large amounts of illicit drugs.

The Board welcomed the comprehensive review of scientific evidence to assess the potential health benefits and risks of cannabis and its constituent cannabinoids, which was completed in 1999 by the Institute of Medicine in the United States. The study stated that smoking cannabis delivered harmful substances and that plants contained a variable mixture of biologically active compounds and could not provide a precisely defined drug effect. It concluded that, for those reasons, any medical future of cannabinoid drugs did not lie in smoked cannabis but in its isolated components, the cannabinoids and their synthetic derivatives. The Board encouraged further scientific research into the possible medical uses of cannabis.

South America

Cannabis remained the most common drug of abuse in South America, followed by cocaine and inhalants. In most South American countries, cocaine abuse continued to rise, while only in some did the abuse of cocaine base continue to increase. Heroin abuse remained negligible. Statistical data on the abuse of psychotropic substances in South America were rarely available. However, household surveys showed that in Bolivia and Peru the abuse of tranquilizers was widespread. Argentina reported seizures of lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD), and the seizure of Ecstasy became more common in several countries, as the drug had become fashionable among youth.

South America continued to be the sole source of illicitly manufactured cocaine hydrochloride, which was primarily smuggled into North America and, increasingly, into Europe. Despite significant reductions in illicit coca bush cultivation in Bolivia and Peru, the overall capacity of the region to manufacture cocaine hydrochloride was not significantly reduced. Judging by seizure and other data, illicit coca leaf production continued to increase in Colombia, especially in areas where illicit trafficking provided a considerable source of income for guerrillas and paramilitary and criminal groups. In 2000, record amounts of cocaine hydrochloride were seized in several countries. Drug trafficking methods varied, and it appeared that all countries were being used as trans-shipment points. In the northern part of the continent, large-scale trafficking in cocaine destined for North America and Europe was reported, while in the southern part, smaller quantities were smuggled by courier mostly into Europe. Most countries in South America were also the final destination of some of the smuggled cocaine.

Cannabis continued to be cultivated in South America, mainly for local consumption, although extensive cultivation for international trafficking took place in several countries. The Board noted the need for more reliable data on the extent of illicit cannabis cultivation in the region.

In Colombia, illicit opium poppy cultivation and heroin seizures increased. Seizure data from the United States showed that a significant part of its illicit heroin supply was from Colombia. Colombian heroin also appeared on illicit European markets. Brazil and Colombia had taken steps to monitor the movements of acetic anhydride to prevent it from being diverted for heroin manufacture.

The Board noted that, in 2000, coordinated law enforcement activities yielded positive results. Most Governments used the same method to collect and report to CICAD data on drug seizures and drug abuse, which facilitated evaluation of the development of trafficking in and abuse of drugs. Although in South America there had been numerous recent legal developments and policy initiatives to fight drug trafficking and related crime, the Board observed that difficulties in their implementation persisted, due to institutional, organizational, political and/or financial impediments.

The Board undertook missions to Paraguay and Uruguay in February. It welcomed the efforts of both countries in combating drug trafficking and related crime, and suggested that Paraguay take steps to improve its coordination and exchange of information with neighbouring countries. It proposed that Uruguay conduct drug abuse studies regularly using consistent methodology so that trends might be assessed better.

Asia

East and South-East Asia

The abuse of opiates was widespread in all countries in the Mekong area, particularly China, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Viet Nam. Research findings showed that virtually all cases of HIV infection along a particular heroin trafficking route in South-East Asia involved the same subtype of the virus, HIV-1, suggesting that HIV infection was spreading together with the practice of injecting heroin. Heroin abuse appeared to be limited in other countries in East and South-East Asia, such as Japan, Mongolia, the Philippines and the Republic of Korea. China and Thailand were markets for methamphetamine illicitly manufactured in the Golden Triangle. The abuse of Ecstasy significantly increased among youth.

Myanmar continued to be the world's second largest source of heroin and opium. Illicit opium poppy cultivation occurred to a lesser extent in the Lao People's Democratic Republic and was minimal in Thailand and Viet Nam. Heroin manufactured in the Golden Triangle was smuggled into Yunnan Province of China and transported eastward to the coast and beyond, and through the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Viet Nam into the Guanxi Autonomous Region and Guangdong Province of China. Other transit routes brought heroin from the Golden Triangle to major cities on the South-East Asian peninsula, where it was sold on illicit markets or transported to other parts of the world.

Significant sources of illicitly cultivated cannabis destined for other countries included Cambodia, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the Philippines. Australia continued to be one of the primary destinations of cannabis cultivated in the region.

Drug trafficking groups shifted their activities from the illicit trade in opiates to the illicit trade in stimulants, which had become increasingly profitable. Most countries reported increased seizures of methamphetamine in 2000. Cambodia and the Lao People's Democratic Republic saw an increase in abuse and seizures of stimulants, while in Singapore the abuse of ketamine by young people increased. Seizures and the number of abusers of Ecstasy rose in some countries.

Countries in East and South-East Asia continued to strengthen their national legislation and policies to deal more effectively with drug abuse and drug-related crime. China strengthened its monitoring of the domestic distribution of ephedrine, to prevent it from being diverted to clandestine methamphetamine laboratories; in Indonesia, some 200 NGOs established a consortium to consolidate their resources to deal more effectively with drug abuse and illicit trafficking; the cabinet of Thailand endorsed a proposal by the National Narcotics Control Board for a comprehensive strategy to deal with the drug problem; and Viet Nam adopted comprehensive legislation on the control of narcotic drugs.

At the regional level, Japan organized four anti-drug conferences on operational drug law enforcement, maritime drug law, the collection and analysis of intelligence on illicit drug trafficking and amphetamine-type stimulants (Tokyo, January). As follow-up to the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) ministerial meeting (Bangkok, Thailand, July), an international congress (Bangkok, October) endorsed a plan of action for ASEAN members and China that set targets and measures for them to become drug-free. In May, Thailand agreed to train officials in the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Myanmar in the use of remote-sensing technology to map areas under opium poppy cultivation. An agreement was signed between China and the United States, in June, to strengthen co-operation in curbing the flow of illicit drugs between China and Myanmar.

The Board undertook missions to the Philippines and the Republic of Korea in September. It noted the strict measures by the Philippines against all types of drug-related offences, including drug abuse, and the adoption of new legislation against money-laundering. It encouraged the Philippines to cooperate in drug profiling and other law enforcement efforts to prevent trafficking in methamphetamine, the abuse of which was increasing, and its precursors. The Republic of Korea, because of its law enforcement efforts and effective programmes to prevent drug abuse, had avoided almost all of the negative effects of developments in drug trafficking and abuse. While the abuse of stimulants had spread, drug abuse levels remained extremely low.

The Board reviewed progress made by Viet Nam on its 1997 recommendations [YUN 1997, p. 1274], and noted the establishment of a national coordinating body for drug control, efforts to control precursors, and improvements in the submission of data on licit activities related to narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors.

South Asia

Countries in South Asia experienced increased drug abuse. Heroin abuse rose in Bangladesh and Nepal and was widespread in India. The abuse of licitly manufactured narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, particularly codeine-based cough syrups and benzodiazepines, continued to increase in Bangladesh, India and Nepal, mainly because of the lack of uniformity in monitoring compliance with prescription requirements.

Drug problems in South Asia related to its proximity to the main regions that produced opiates illicitly, namely West Asia, including Afghanistan, and East Asia, including Myanmar. South Asian countries became involved in supplying drugs, within and outside the region, for illicit purposes.

In addition to being cultivated illicitly, cannabis grew wild in nearly all countries in the region. Afghanistan, India and Nepal were regarded as major sources. Cannabis was sold locally and elsewhere within South Asia and continued to be smuggled out of the region into Europe and North America. Cannabis eradication campaigns were carried out regularly but did not reach all areas. The situation was further exacerbated by cross-border criminal activities, such as those by Indian smugglers who leased land from Nepalese to cultivate cannabis.

Licitly manufactured psychotropic substances, mainly diazepam and nitrazepam, continued to be smuggled out of India, not only into Nepal, but also into the Russian Federation and Central Asia. In India, efforts by the authorities resulted in a decline in the illicit manufacture of methqualome (Mandrax), which was being smuggled into South Africa and Nepal; the seizure of methamphetamine of Indian origin, at the border of Myanmar; and a decline in the diversion and smuggling of buprenorphine. As the border between India and Myanmar could become a major illicit drug-producing area, the Board welcomed India's intention to establish a drug profiling programme to collect and examine seized methamphetamine and ephedrine samples from the area and to investigate intelligence obtained on drug-trafficking routes and the precursors required for illicit drug manufacture.

Heroin seizures indicated that Afghanistan and Myanmar were the major sources of heroin smuggled through the region and of that destined for illicit markets in Bangladesh, India and Sri Lanka. While traditionally India was used as a transit country, recently clandestine heroin laboratories were detected and destroyed in the country. Drug seizures and drug-related arrests revealed that multinational drug-trafficking groups were operating in South Asia and that West Africans were involved in smuggling heroin out of India into Africa and Europe.

Initiatives taken by India to counter the drug problem were a national survey on the extent, patterns and trends of drug abuse, the adoption of a community-based multidisciplinary approach in programmes to reduce illicit drug demand and a study to identify illicit opium poppy cultivation sites in Arunchal Pradesh. Bangladesh reviewed its Narcotics Control Act to bring it into line with international and regional drug control conventions. In Sri Lanka, a system for monitoring drug abuse began in hospitals.

Bilateral efforts to combat drug trafficking included meetings between authorities in India and Myanmar to facilitate the exchange of intelligence, and high-level talks between India and Pakistan on drug law enforcement and operational matters. India entered into legal arrangements with countries in and outside the region to improve cooperation aimed at reducing the illicit demand for drugs and preventing drug trafficking.

West Asia

Cannabis continued to be the most widely abused substance in West Asia. Heroin addiction rates in Iran and Pakistan appeared to be among the world's highest. The abuse of stimulants, mainly methcathinone and other amphetamine-type stimulants, occurred in Central Asia. In Afghanistan and Pakistan, the abuse of benzodiazepines in the form of pharmaceutical tablets was widespread. Benzodiazepine abuse was increasing in Turkey. Cocaine abuse in the region remained negligible.

In Afghanistan and, to a lesser extent, in Pakistan, where huge quantities of cannabis were illicitly cultivated or grew wild, no eradication efforts were reported. Cannabis resin from those countries was smuggled into West Asia and Europe. In March, the Taliban banned the collection of taxes on cannabis resin and destroyed 4,500 kilograms of the substance, but those efforts had a limited impact. Cannabis was also illicitly cultivated and grew wild in Kazakhstan and, to a lesser degree, in Kyrgyzstan.

The annual opium poppy survey in Afghanistan for 2000, conducted by the UN Office of Drug Control and Crime Prevention, estimated the total opium harvest at 3,300 tons, which was 28 per cent less than the previous crop year, following bad weather conditions and the reduction of the area under cultivation. In April, the Taliban began an opium poppy eradication campaign, but the overall impact on cultivation remained limited. The Taliban issued a decree in July banning opium poppy cultivation. Pakistan's goal of a zero-poppy harvest in 2000 was not achieved. Illicit opium poppy cultivation was limited in Central Asia, where eradication campaigns were conducted annually.

In March, the Taliban destroyed 350 kilograms of heroin; however, it appeared that opiates were sold freely throughout Afghanistan. The huge increase in heroin seizures in West Asia indicated that heroin processing in Afghanistan had increased substantially in the past two years. Heroin processing had disappeared in Pakistan. In Iran and Turkey, morphine seizures remained constant, and some heroin laboratories had moved from Turkey to Azerbaijan. Iran accounted for 80 per cent of the world's total amount of opium seized and 90 per cent of the total amount of morphine seized. In Pakistan, the amount of opiates seized since mid-1999 had increased and seizures of cocaine were reported for the first time. Weak border control between Afghanistan and Tajikistan and between Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan and rugged terrain posed obstacles to effective control of drug trafficking from Afghanistan.

Significant seizures of Ecstasy were reported in Israel and of amphetamines in Saudi Arabia.

Pakistan planned to amend legislation so that law enforcement agencies might utilize assets confiscated from drug criminals, and so that assessments of money-laundering might be made. It intended to complement those steps by establishing special courts in five major cities and to continue to upgrade its judicial system. The Board encouraged the Government to provide resources to reduce illicit drug demand. Activities of the newly established Drug Control Agency of Tajikistan had led to significant seizures. In Kazakhstan, a drug control agency was established in February. Azerbaijan had recently created a national committee on drug control. The fourteenth conference of heads of Arab drug control agencies (Tunis, July) discussed a draft model law to combat money-laundering.

The Board urged the Governments of the region to continue to assess the nature and extent of drug abuse in their countries. It expressed concern about the lack of adequate treatment centres in West Asian countries most affected by drug abuse and at ineffective measures against money-laundering.

Regarding regional cooperation, the "six plus two" group (China, Iran, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan, plus the Russian Federation and the United States) met to address the drug-related issues in a coordinated manner, with a view to eliminating illicit drug production in and smuggling out of Afghanistan, through a comprehensive and balanced subregional plan. It adopted a comprehensive action plan in September to deal with the illicit drug supply and demand in the subregion. The Board also noted the establishment, in June, of the Turkish International Academy against Drugs and Organized Crime, which would train law enforcement personnel in States members of the Economic Cooperation Organization. Agreements were reached by law enforcement agencies from Iran and Pakistan to assist their counterparts in the territory ruled by the Taliban. An international conference on enhancing security and stability in Central Asia (Tashkent, Uzbekistan, October) was held to develop an integrated approach to countering drug trafficking, organized crime and terrorism in the region. A subregional seminar was held (Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, May) on the prevention of money-laundering.

Following a mission to Lebanon, the Board expressed regret that the Government had shown no intention of lifting bank secrecy on drug traffickers, which had made it impossible to confiscate their assets and to investigate money-laundering. It called on Lebanon to withdraw its reservation to the 1988 Convention against drug trafficking regarding the provisions on money-laundering.

Europe

While cannabis abuse remained stable in most countries in Europe, the availability and abuse of synthetic drugs and cocaine continued to rise. In many countries, the prevalence of the abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants was second only to that of cannabis abuse. Albania, Bulgaria, Estonia, Romania, the Russian Federation and Slovenia reported that heroin abuse had become a major concern, and Hungary saw increased intravenous use of the substance at an alarming rate. "Liquid heroin" or "kompot", which was produced from poppy straw, continued to be abused in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. The availability of methamphetamine showed a marked increase in Western Europe.

Cannabis continued to be the most widely trafficked drug in Europe, with Morocco the main source of cannabis resin and Albania a major source of cannabis herb. The Netherlands and Switzerland were becoming important sources of cannabis. Indoor cultivation remained a significant problem in Western Europe, where cannabis seeds and paraphernalia were sold via the Internet. Large areas under cultivation were eradicated in Lithuania and Ukraine.

An increase in the amount of heroin seized in Europe was attributed partly to higher interception rates in Central and Eastern European countries. Law enforcement agencies considered that the bulk of heroin seized in Europe had passed along the Balkan route. Most heroin came from South-West Asia, particularly Afghanistan, and some was from South-East Asia or Colombia.

The availability and demand for cocaine increased in Europe, and large amounts of the substance were smuggled from South America through Spain. Cocaine abuse increased in Belgium, France, Greece, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Sweden, the United Kingdom and Eastern European countries.

Europe continued to be a major source of the illicitly manufactured amphetamines and amphetamine-type stimulants that appeared on illicit markets not only in the region but throughout the world. Amphetamine seizures in Europe increased only slightly, with the United Kingdom accounting for the bulk of those seizures. Significant seizures of Ecstasy were made in France, Germany, Spain and Switzerland.

The Board welcomed the adoption of new drug control legislation in Slovenia and legislation to prevent money-laundering in Albania, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Latvia and Liechtenstein. In September, Poland approved a bill that increased penalties for abusers and sellers of any type of drug. Switzerland initiated a national campaign to prevent drug abuse, Spain adopted a national drug strategy for 2000-2008, and Latvia, Lithuania and Ukraine launched national drug control strategies or programmes.

At the regional level, the EU Action Plan to Combat Drugs (2000-2004), which provided guidelines to implement the EU Drugs Strategy and addressed the improvement of drug coordination and the development of national drug coordination units in each EU member State, was endorsed by the European Council (Santa Maria da Feira, Portugal, June). The Board noted the efforts of the European Monitoring Centre for Drugs and Drug Addiction to collect and analyse drug-related data and to provide comparable data on the drug phenomenon; the Centre's work in assessing synthetic drugs that posed a serious threat to public health; and the large number of cooperative bilateral and regional agreements between European countries.

The Board sent missions to Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Greece, Ireland, Portugal, the Russian Federation, Spain and Switzerland. It expressed concern about the weak institutional structures in Albania that made it attractive to drug traffickers; political developments in Bosnia and Herzegovina that had prevented unified and effective controls over narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances; and that the cultivation and sale of cannabis in Switzerland had developed into a significant grey area of business. The Board commended Greece for offering a wide range of treatment and rehabilitation programmes. It urged Ireland to update the national drug strategy to address the high level of abuse of cannabis and Ecstasy. In view of Spain's importance as a transit country for drugs smuggled into Europe, the Board encouraged the Government to strengthen its law enforcement activities and to dismantle drug-trafficking organizations.

Oceania

The availability of and demand for cocaine were, with the exception of Australia, low in Oceania. Seizure data indicated that the Pacific islands, such as Fiji and Tonga, were increasingly used as transit points for South American cocaine en route to Australia and New Zealand.

Trafficking in and abuse of methamphetamine in crystal form appeared to rise in some of the Pacific islands. In New Zealand, the demand for Ecstasy rose, and LSD continued to be a major problem, since it was illicitly imported mainly through the mail system from Western Europe and the west coast of North America. The sale and abuse of sodium oxybate, a psychoactive substance with hallucinogenic properties not under international control, increased significantly in New Zealand.

In Australia, illicit trafficking in and abuse of heroin continued to be serious problems. Seizure data indicated that the drug remained widely available, that its price had fallen and that its purity remained high. Most of the heroin seized by Australian customs authorities originated in East and South-East Asia. Sydney and Melbourne remained key entry points since they were primary international and domestic transportation hubs. Other countries in Oceania, such as New Zealand, did not appear to have a significant market for heroin. A seizure of 350 kilograms of heroin in Fiji indicated that the Pacific islands were vulnerable to trafficking.

A decrease in the illicit outdoor cultivation of cannabis in Australia was offset by an increase in the hydroponic cultivation of the substance. Illicit cultivation continued in New Caledonia, Papua New Guinea and to a limited degree in Fiji. In Papua New Guinea, cannabis was increasingly bartered for commercial goods and weapons.

In view of the focus on harm reduction in the drug abuse strategies of Australia and New Zealand, the Board stressed that harm reduction should not become a goal in itself and the strategy should not be adopted at the expense of a strong commitment to reduce the supply of and demand for illicit drugs. The Board noted that some Pacific island States, such as Samoa, had considered ways to strengthen their financial controls to ensure that their institutions were not used for money-laundering.

Regional organizations such as the Oceania Customs Organization and the South Pacific Forum played an important role in improving the coordination of action to implement the provisions of the international drug control treaties among the Pacific island States. Australia held consultations with New Zealand and Papua New Guinea, with a view to contributing to more harmonized approaches in Oceania.

Following a mission to Australia in April, the Board recommended that measures be taken to reduce the number of heroin abusers and encouraged the Government to further develop its treatment and rehabilitation programme, which thus far had focused on pharmacotherapeutic assistance.

UN International Drug Control Programme

The United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP), established in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 721] to promote the application of international drug control treaties and the development of drug control strategies, was a catalyst in stimulating action at the national, regional and international levels. The Executive Director described UNDCP's activities in a report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/CN.7/2001/7]. Through a portfolio of technical cooperation programmes supported by a network of field offices located in key regions and countries, it promoted subregional cooperation and furthered bilateral cooperation and direct consultations between Governments. In mounting a global response to the drug problem, UNDCP mobilized specialized agencies and other UN entities, international financial institutions, other intergovernmental organizations and civil society, particularly non-governmental organizations (NGOs). In addition, UNDCP assisted States in complying with the international drug control treaties; supported their efforts to implement initiatives to meet the objectives agreed upon at the twentieth special session of the General Assembly [YUN 1998, p. 1135]; assisted in improving judicial cooperation, particularly by providing training to law enforcement personnel, national administrations, judges, magistrates and prosecutors, as well as personnel working in demand reduction; and provided direct support in the prosecution of serious drug-trafficking offences, including money-laundering. In 2000, UNDCP launched a global illicit crops monitoring programme to assist countries in establishing monitoring systems that would produce internationally comparable data and benchmarks by which to measure progress towards the eradication goals set for 2008.

UNDCP served as the substantive secretariat of INCB. In cooperation with the Board and Governments, it monitored the international drug control system and the flow of precursors, and implemented programmes that contributed to the establishment of mechanisms and procedures for precursor control. UNDCP also served as the substantive secretariat of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-third (2000) session (see p. 1197) and assisted it in initiating the process whereby States would report biennially on their efforts to meet the goals and targets for 2003 and 2008 set out in the Political Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution S-20/2 [YUN 1998, p. 1136].

Income to the UNDCP Fund for 2000-2001 was estimated at $131.2 million, which was 7.5 per cent less than in 1998-1999. UNDCP improved its efficiency in programme delivery, with 79 per cent going to programmes and 21 per cent to support activities.

In the area of research and laboratory activities, the UNDCP databases on estimates and long-term trend analysis, which provided comprehensive data on the worldwide drug problem and on trend analysis, became operational. UNDCP worked with Interpol and the World Customs Organization on the creation of a common and expanded database on individual seizure cases. It provided expertise and data to the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering to help estimate the magnitude of the problem; co-hosted a workshop on dynamic drug policy to understand and control drug epidemics; and, in cooperation with the European Centre for Social Welfare Policy and Research, undertook a project on demand reduction programmes and their impact on drug abuse. The project concluded with an expert group meeting and the establishment of a network of social science researchers who would evaluate the structures of drug control institutions. UNDCP developed international standards and guidelines to enhance Member States' capacity in drug testing and to promote collaboration between national laboratory services and law enforcement, judiciary and health authorities. In that regard, UNDCP provided technical support to drug-testing laboratories in Benin and Cape Verde, and to UNDCP training centres in China, Ghana and Trinidad and Tobago.

UNDCP continued to promote the mainstreaming of drug control issues into the work of other agencies. Activities included collaboration with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and the PanAmerican Health Organization/World Health Organization (WHO) in alternative development in Colombia; joint UN programming for the rural development of the Bekaa valley in Lebanon; and the integration of a demand reduction component in activities undertaken by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific against sexual abuse and exploitation of minors in the Greater Mekong subregion. It continued to take part in the country-based common country assessment (CCA)/United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF), which was leading to more systematic joint programming. The third interparliamentarian meeting on drug control (Washington, D.C., February) was organized in cooperation with the United States Congress. In cooperation with the Asian Development Bank, UNDCP introduced drug control activities into rural development activities in the Lao People's Democratic Republic.

UNDCP, through its Global Youth Network against Drug Abuse and the UNDCP and WHO Global Initiative on Primary Prevention of Substance Abuse, continued to support young people in finding solutions to drug abuse problems. It supported research activities on possible linkages between drug abuse and HIV/AIDS, and was active in the International Partnership against AIDS in Africa, where, in collaboration with other UN agencies, it implemented several global, regional and national programmes that addressed HIV/AIDS and drug abuse.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2000/28], adopted resolution 2000/17 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Promotion of the design of national and regional prevention programmes through an interdisciplinary approach

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Bearing in mind the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, and in particular the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction,

Stressing the need for interdisciplinary teams to promote national and regional prevention programmes, taking into account the specificities and distinguishing features of each region and country, with the aim of promoting health and individual and social well-being and raising awareness, through positive messages, of the consequences of drug abuse with regard to the achievement of that aim,

Noting the need for exchange of information on efforts in this field to ensure the effectiveness of international cooperation and solidarity,

Having considered the Report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1999, which points to the need to continue work on the design of policies to reduce the demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

1. Urges the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, subject to the availability of voluntary contributions, to support States and regional bodies in the design, through an interdisciplinary approach, of national and regional prevention programmes, taking into account the specificities and distinguishing features of each region and country, with the aim of promoting health and individual and social well-being and raising awareness, through positive messages, of the consequences of drug abuse with regard to the achievement of that aim;

2. Urges Member States to promote the establishment of interdisciplinary approaches, as well as multidisciplinary teams, to pursue, in the context of demand reduction, the objectives set out in paragraph 1 above;

3. Calls for the promotion of information and education programmes that will raise awareness of the risks of drug abuse, taking into account differences in gender, culture and education among the target groups, with special attention being paid to children and young people, and will reflect sound, precise and balanced data;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Governments for consideration.

Sub-Saharan Africa

UNDCP expanded the programme portfolio for Southern and Eastern Africa with a comprehensive regional framework integrating demand reduction, control measures, judicial development and cooperation. It initiated an African umbrella programme for demand reduction to support the development of drug abuse and HIV prevention programmes in various subregions. Renewed efforts were taken to develop law enforcement expertise and capacity. The OAU database on African drug control experts, training centres and research institutes, developed with UNDCP support, was in its final phase. In cooperation with the Southern African Development Community, UNDCP initiated, in October, a regional legal assistance programme for the 19 States of Southern and Eastern Africa and, in cooperation with the EU, assisted in the formulation of national drug control strategies for Benin, the Central African Republic, Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea and Togo. Training was provided to national drug control coordinators from Central and Western Africa. National drug control plans were finalized in Kenya, Madagascar and the United Republic of Tanzania.

UNDCP supported the development of networks of local demand reduction experts in Eastern and Western Africa. In Southern Africa, the first of 10 community centres for counselling, treatment and rehabilitation of drug users in South Africa was inaugurated. UNDCP facilitated efforts to determine the extent of drug abuse by providing for rapid situation assessments in Angola, Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, Malawi, Nigeria, Senegal and South Africa. In Burkina Faso, it provided training to community leaders and social workers in drug abuse prevention and, in East Africa, it assisted NGOs in improving their outreach programmes at the grass-roots level.

In an effort to suppress illicit drug trafficking, UNDCP, in cooperation with INCB and WHO, worked towards strengthening the capacity of national authorities in Ethiopia, Kenya, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania to better control the supply and distribution of licit narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. In cooperation with the Universal Postal Union, UNDCP launched an initiative to counter the increasing use of the mail system for drug trafficking and other organized crime and, in cooperation with the Customs Cooperation Council (World Customs Organization), undertook a programme to enhance the interdiction capacity of law enforcement agencies at major ports in Eastern and Southern Africa. Technical and advisory support was provided to assess the extent of cannabis cultivation in the region.

North Africa and the Middle East

In the Middle East, UNDCP initiated a sub-regional drug control programme to support the efforts of States in the Eastern Mediterranean to counter the drug problem. It signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) on cooperation with the secretariat of the Council of Arab Ministers of the Interior to support judicial and other cooperation at the regional level. In May, UNDCP and the Naif Arab Academy for Security Sciences agreed on a programme in the Middle East to promote the sharing of expertise through joint training seminars, the exchange of information, studies and publications. UNDCP also supported the initiative of the Palestinian Authority to harmonize drug control legislation on the basis of the UNDCP model laws, and provided legal training to prosecutors in Egypt and the Syrian Arab Republic. Assessment missions were made to Algeria, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and the Sudan to draw up national drug control master plans.

In the area of drug abuse prevention and reduction, UNDCP assisted Middle Eastern Governments in assessing their capacities and needs for treatment and rehabilitation of drug abusers. In cooperation with the World Food Programme and the United Nations Children's Fund, UNDCP worked on cross-cutting issues, such as drug abuse among street children and promoting the establishment of networks of NGOs to support prevention initiatives. Training workshops on treatment and rehabilitation were held in the Palestinian Autonomous Areas and a seminar was conducted to share the findings of a rapid drug abuse assessment.

In Lebanon, UNDCP provided support to sustain the successful eradication of illicit poppy cultivation in the Bekaa valley, in cooperation with interested donors, other agencies and the Government. A training course on advanced law enforcement techniques was held and equipment provided to the Lebanese police to strengthen their interdiction capacity. In support of an initiative of Egypt, UNDCP conducted a baseline assessment of socio-economic structures in the main areas of illicit cultivation. UNDCP worked with Jordan to strengthen its drug law enforcement capacities, and provided specialized training courses to the United Arab Emirates on the control of precursors.

Central and Eastern Europe

In the Russian Federation, UNDCP completed the implementation of the first phase of a comprehensive programme on drug abuse prevention and countering drug-related organized crime. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, it assisted the Government in preparing new drug control legislation.

Regarding drug abuse prevention and reduction in Central Europe, UNDCP assisted with the training of health-care professionals; building a network of researchers and establishing a database on patterns of and trends in drug abuse; and, in cooperation with the International Labour Organization (ILO), promoting drug abuse prevention in the workplace. Demand reduction programmes were drawn up for Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Croatia, Romania and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM). Some 25 drug abuse treatment providers and health professionals from Belarus, the Republic of Moldova and the Russian Federation, with NGO assistance, were trained in modern techniques to treat drug addictions. UNDCP also initiated a school-based prevention programme in three Baltic States.

In an effort to suppress illicit trafficking in Central Europe, UNDCP provided technical support to enhance capacities for drug law enforcement in five States and continued to strengthen judicial cooperation between authorities of the region. With the support of Interpol and in cooperation with the Poland-Hungary Aid for the Reconstruction of the Economy programme of the European Commission, UNDCP assisted Bulgaria, Romania and FYROM in establishing drug intelligence units. UNDCP drew up a plan to support a policing approach emphasizing intelligence in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Croatia, Romania, Slovenia and FYROM.

South Asia

In India, UNDCP provided training for data collection, the finalization of a rapid situation assessment, and the launching of a drug abuse monitoring system to collect information and plot trends. It granted technical support for the national household survey of drug abuse. UNDCP assisted Nepal to amend drug control legislation for compliance with international drug control treaties.

Two community-wide programmes in India were implemented to reduce and prevent drug abuse among the general population, high-risk groups and drug abusers on a nationwide scale, while support was mobilized for a high-risk group in north-eastern provinces. A five-year plan for drug abuse control was initiated in Bangladesh and material for advocacy and drug education was distributed to the Ministry of Education. In Sri Lanka, in cooperation with WHO, UNDCP provided training and support in data collection, preventive services and treatment and rehabilitation activities, and established a drug abuse monitoring system to cover general hospitals, prisons and outreach and drop-in centres.

The results of a 2000 survey on illicit opium poppy cultivation in north-eastern India were presented to the international community in New Delhi. UNDCP supported initiatives to foster cross-border cooperation between drug law enforcement agencies in India and Myanmar, which would be extended to include Bangladesh. A video on the control of precursors was produced and distributed to law enforcement institutions in India. In Bangladesh, 188 officials from the judiciary and police service received training to enhance inter-agency cooperation.

East Asia and the Pacific

The subregional action plan covering Cambodia, China, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar, Thailand and Viet Nam, the signatories with UNDCP to a 1993 MOU, provided the framework for cooperation in drug control matters. The programmes pursued under the plan related to capacity-building, data collection, the dissemination of information, amphetamine-type stimulants, drug abuse and HIV/AIDS, precursor control, law enforcement training and cross-border cooperation. UNDCP was engaged in assisting Governments in East and South-East Asia to meet the challenge of illicit manufacture, trafficking and abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants. The Conference on Amphetamine-type Stimulants in East and South-East Asia (Tokyo, January), which recommended action for Governments to counter their illicit manufacture, trafficking and abuse, contributed to a landmark commitment to tackle the problem by ASEAN members and China, at a meeting convened by Thailand, ASEAN and UNDCP (Bangkok, 11-13 October).

UNDCP supported initiatives to prevent and reduce drug abuse, including six workshops that were held in Cambodia, China, Myanmar and Thailand on the methodology for conducting national drug abuse assessments and for data collection, and on the use of related software systems for data analysis. School surveys were conducted in the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Viet Nam. Initiatives to reduce drug abuse among selected highland ethnic minority groups were instituted across 17 sites in five countries. Demand reduction activities in the Lao People's Democratic Republic took place in the context of community-based alternative development initiatives, targeting areas affected by illicit opium cultivation; workshops on drug prevention were held following a national survey in the country; and a community-based programme in Xieng Khouang province, which included training for health volunteers and the supply of materials to the district detoxification centre, enhanced social services in the participating 55 villages. In Myanmar, where UNDCP continued to support preventive education, over 300 persons participated in the activities organized in cooperation with the NGO World Concern International. Community-level activities involved 27 villages and over 1,000 village participants. In Viet Nam, an educational curriculum for drug abuse prevention and materials for training primary school teachers were finalized. Other initiatives included a national forum on drug treatment and rehabilitation in Hanoi, a training course for master trainers and courses for treatment professionals.

Law enforcement activities to suppress illicit trafficking continued to constitute a major part of UNDCP's subregional cooperation. In collaboration with the World Customs Organization, most modules of the computer-based, interactive training programme in drug law enforcement were completed, and the training, management and evaluation system was improved following field-testing in northern Thailand. In other law enforcement programmes, UNDCP prepared model guidelines for police and customs interventions in countering illicit drug trafficking, in cooperation with Interpol and the World Customs Organization; delivered communications and training equipment for the Public Security Bureau Training School in the Yunnan province of China; and completed a subregional precursor control programme for East Asia. In the Lao People's Democratic Republic, a programme to strengthen overall drug control capacity continued with the establishment of a comprehensive data collection system. In Viet Nam, interdiction capacities were enhanced through the procurement of telecommunications and drug-detection equipment. To strengthen the judicial and prosecutorial capacity in the region, five national workshops were conducted for judges, prosecutors and senior investigators in Cambodia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar, Thailand and Viet Nam. UNDCP provided legal advice to authorities in Cambodia, the Lao People's Republic and Viet Nam on updating or drafting new drug control legislation.

In its efforts to assist in eliminating illicit crop cultivation, UNDCP launched an in-depth study of alternative development in Thailand to review and document the experiences of a country with a long record of activity in the subregion. In Myanmar, an initiative was under way that included agricultural development, income-generating activities and a programme of immunization covering over 90 per cent of children in 236 villages. A community-based programme for drug demand reduction was completed and teachers were trained in school management and introduced to new teaching methods and educational materials. Alternative development activities in the Lao People's Democratic Republic reduced dependence on opium production and consumption. The pilot phase of Viet Nam's four-year alternative development programme targeting the poppy-cultivating Ky Son district was completed.

West and Central Asia

UNDCP continued its work in Afghanistan, which in 2000 accounted for 79 per cent of global opium production. Working closely with the "six plus two" group (the six States bordering Afghanistan, plus the Russian Federation and the United States) and donor countries to address the illicit production of opium, UNDCP convened a technical meeting (Vienna, May), followed by a high-level meeting (New York, September), which endorsed a regional plan of action to increase cooperation between States bordering Afghanistan. Training on programme planning was offered to officials from drug control-related institutions in Iran (March and September). In Turkey, UNDCP supported the creation of the Turkish International Academy against Drugs and Organized Crime, established to address the needs of 22 countries in the region.

Demand reduction, with the focus on abuse of opiates, particularly heroin, was an integral part of UNDCP's pilot programme for Afghanistan. An assessment of the drug abuse problem in rural areas was undertaken; training courses in drug awareness and abuse prevention were organized; a day-care drop-in centre for heroin addicts in Peshawar was established; and a community-based treatment, rehabilitation and prevention programme in a refugee camp near Peshawar was launched. In Iran, UNDCP organized four workshops to address the role of NGOs in drug abuse prevention, harm reduction, the social impact of drug abuse, and devising a strategy to reduce drug demand. In Pakistan, it supported the implementation of the national drug control master plan and the launching of a rapid assessment of the drug abuse situation. A rapid situation assessment programme was initiated in Central Asia to address the drug problem from a regional perspective, and training was provided to enhance the mass media's capability to raise public awareness of the adverse effects of drug trafficking and abuse.

The UNDCP annual opium poppy survey of Afghanistan indicated a 10 per cent decrease in poppy cultivation over 1999. In Kandahar province and three UNDCP target districts where alternative development assistance was provided, there was a reduction of about 50 per cent. In July, the Taliban issued a total ban on opium poppy cultivation during the 2000/01 planting season. UNDCP would monitor the implementation of the ban through the annual poppy survey to assess the impact on cultivation and production. UNDCP cooperated with Pakistan in the formulation of a strategy for a programme for the Dir district, where opium poppy cultivation had been eliminated, in order to sustain the achievement and to continue development assistance. In Central Asia, following mapping of the extent of illicit cultivation in Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, results showed that cooperation between the three Governments and UNDCP had led to a reduction in illicit opium poppy cultivation.

UNDCP initiated the establishment of a so-called security belt around Afghanistan to contain and reduce the alarming flow of drugs trafficked from the country into neighbouring countries and to stop precursor chemicals used in heroin manufacture from reaching clandestine laboratories. In that regard, UNDCP established regional coordination mechanisms to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of regional law enforcement activities. National programmes included strengthening border controls and cross-border cooperation, improving the analysis of information and training customs and border personnel. An international conference on enhancing security and stability in Central Asia (Tashkent, Uzbekistan, October), sponsored by the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention (ODCCP) of the Secretariat and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), endorsed a set of priorities for cooperation between Central Asian States in the areas of drug control, organized crime and terrorism. UNDCP organized the Central Asian Conference on Diversion of Chemicals into Illicit Drug Trafficking (Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, November) to foster cooperation on the phenomenon. In Tajikistan, the provision of $2.6 million in UNDCP assistance for the establishment of a drug control agency led to a 70 per cent increase in drug seizures in 2000.

Latin America and the Caribbean

In 2000, UNDCP continued to support cooperation in the Caribbean in regional law enforcement programmes, including judicial cooperation and demand reduction programmes. UNDCP participated in the process instituted by the Permanent Central American Commission for the Eradication of the Illicit Production, Traffic, Consumption, and Use of Drugs and Psychotropic Substances to facilitate regional cooperation in drug control by focusing on legal and judicial assistance, drug abuse prevention and advocacy.

In Central America, UNDCP cooperated with national drug control bodies, NGOs, other UN agencies, the media and private enterprise to reduce drug demand. The UNDCP programme for Central America included projects in drug abuse prevention with both Governments and NGOs, the provision of legal advice and judicial training and assistance to forensic laboratories. In the Caribbean, a regional communication and advocacy programme on the theme "sports against drugs" was launched. Other initiatives included a public information programme undertaken with the Caribbean News Agency; community-level activities led by the Caribbean Council of Churches; support for the training of trainers in methods of improving coordination and delivery of health and family life education programmes; and the conduct of rapid assessment surveys in Barbados and Trinidad and Tobago. A survey of drug treatment and rehabilitation in prisons was completed in the Bahamas, and treatment services were provided, along with training and equipment, to Trinidad and Tobago. At the sub-regional level, UNDCP promoted common methods and standards for epidemiological surveillance under a project based on an MOU signed by Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Peru, Uruguay and UNDCP. In Nicaragua, a baseline study towards establishing a prevention programme for children and adolescents at risk was drawn up. In Peru, UNDCP continued to assist the Government in school-based prevention. An ongoing initiative in Bolivia on prevention was carried out in 36 municipalities. Support was granted to create multisectoral committees for drug control and to implement regional abuse prevention plans in Colombia. Brazil continued to implement UNDCP-suggested drug abuse and HIV/AIDS prevention activities, mostly financed by the Government with World Bank support. In April, UNDCP initiated a multisectoral drug control programme in Cuba. A UN inter-agency demand reduction programme was initiated in Guyana, and the Dominican Republic was assisted in extending and decentralizing its drug abuse prevention activities to provinces throughout the country.

UNDCP supported Bolivia, Colombia and Peru in formulating three individual business plans that combined the elimination of illicit drug crops with alternative development measures. Collectively, the three plans consisted of 18 projects, 12 of which were being implemented. In total, UNDCP support for alternative development in the Andean region rose from $4.1 million in mid-1998 to $11.5 million in mid-2000.

In the area of illicit drug trafficking, UNDCP assisted the Caribbean Customs Law Enforcement Council (CCLEC) to establish a regional clearance system for the control of movement of vessels, with pilot workstations in Saint Lucia, Trinidad and Tobago, and Puerto Rico. Through CCLEC, it provided training in risk profiling and targeting techniques to customs and port authorities in Curaçao, the Dominican Republic, Guyana, Haiti, Jamaica, and Trinidad and Tobago. UNDCP facilitated the consultation process for the Caribbean Treaty to Suppress Illicit Maritime Trafficking, initiated by the Netherlands, by holding a preparatory conference (Curaçao, November), and assisted the Legal Affairs Committee of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) to finalize the Caribbean Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters. In El Salvador, Honduras, Mexico and Nicaragua, members of the judiciary received training in the judicial aspects of drug control and investigation. UNDCP assisted the Dominican Republic in the development of a national judicial database, and provided it with expert advice during key trials involving drug trafficking and money-laundering. Under the subregional forensic laboratory programmes for Mexico, the Caribbean and Central America, UNDCP provided equipment to analyse illicit drugs and their precursors, fellowships to train laboratory personnel and training courses to upgrade laboratory services. A drug control programme was initiated in Cuba to provide expert advice in the design of a drug control curriculum for the police academy. UNDCP supported national law enforcement programmes in Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia and Ecuador, through the provision of training programmes, telecommunication devices and computers.

Administrative and budgetary matters

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs, at its March session (see p. 1197), had before it a January note by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2000/10] that drew the Commission's attention to the need to focus on programme support cost arrangements, the integrated financial information system and the 2002-2005 medium-term plan.

In its review of programme support cost arrangements, the note stated that, in view of the high level of earmarking and the decline in the general-purpose balance of the UNDCP Fund, it was necessary to reconsider the appropriate level of programme support charges applied to projects, and that the Commission should authorize charging up to 13 per cent in programme support charges on all UNDCP projects. Those charges should be authorized at the beginning of the 2000-2001 biennium. In March [E/2000/28], the Commission decided to reconsider the issue of programme support charges in 2001. The Secretariat reported that its costs of the development of an integrated financial information system would be presented in the context of a revised budget for 2000-2001, for submission to the Commission at its forty-fourth (2001) session, should a revised budget be required, or in the context of the final budget for 2000-2001, for submission to the reconvened forty-fourth (2001) session. The installation, adaptation and implementation of the system was scheduled to begin in February. The work plan envisaged an 11-month implementation period. As to the 2002-2005 medium-term plan, the report stated that the Secretary-General had proposed joining the programmes on international drug control and on crime prevention and criminal justice, forming one programme on international drug control and crime prevention. Thus, there would be one programme with four subprogrammes for drug control and one subprogramme for crime prevention and criminal justice, all under the heading of the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention of the Secretariat. The four subprogrammes on international drug control of the proposed 2002-2005 medium-term plan were the same as the 1998-2001 plan, which had been revised to incorporate new and expanded mandates for UNDCP flowing from the twentieth special session of the General Assembly in 1998.

In a November report on the proposed revised biennial support and programme budget for 2000-2001 for the UNDCP Fund [E/CN.7/2001/9], the UNDCP Executive Director stated that the revised total Fund budget proposal amounted to $187.6 million, compared to $200 million contained in the initial 2000-2001 Fund budget. The revised Fund budget comprised the programme budget ($148.3 million), the biennial support budget ($35.2 million) and agency support costs ($4.1 million). The revised programme budget amounted to $148.3 million, compared to the initial programme budget of $157 million, which represented a decrease of 5.5 per cent, reflecting resource allocation trends that affected major programmes, mainly in Afghanistan, Myanmar and Peru. The revised support budget amounted to $35.2 million, compared to the initial budget of $36.2 million, representing a decrease of 2.8 per cent attributable to a volume decrease of $0.8 million and a cost decrease of $0.2 million. Total resources budgeted at $187.6 million for 2000-2001 were covered by Fund balances and estimated income of $211.5 million, leaving a balance of $23.9 million over and above the planned budget for 2000-2001, to fund ongoing programmes into 2002-2003. Compared to the initial plan, the revised one was reduced by $12.4 million, or 6.2 per cent, with proportionate decreases in programme and support, so that the plan maintained the balance in the use of resources, with 79 per cent going to programmes and 21 per cent to support activities. Reviewing the funding situation, the report predicted that sufficient funds would be available, mainly as a result of increased income, to cover the proposed budgets. However, the bulk of the increase had been, and was expected to continue to be, special-purpose resources, despite efforts by UNDCP to obtain more general-purpose resources from traditional and non-traditional sources. Therefore, a better balance between general- and special-purpose income was needed to respond to new programme opportunities and to sustain a minimum level necessary for the biennial support budget. In addition, with the reduction in Fund balances, a timing gap arose between project implementation and funding.

A November report of the UNDCP Executive Director on the proposed outline for 2002-2003 for the UNDCP Fund [E/CN.7/2001/8] stated that the proposed outline amounted to $198,254,600, an increase of $10,663,900, or 5.6 per cent, compared with the revised budget for 2000-2001. The estimate of $206,071,900 in resources available in the outline for 2002-2003 reflected a decrease of $5,435,100, compared with the revised estimate for 2000-2001. That decrease was a combination of a reduction of $13,696,100 in the opening balance offset by a modest estimated increase in income of $8,261,000. Income was estimated at $152,496,000 for 2002-2003, compared with $144,235,000 for 2000-2001. The report stated that about 90 per cent of the resources was provided by the UNDCP Fund and 10 per cent was from the regular budget. There had been a marked turnaround from 1999 onwards, with the Fund budget increasing significantly because of higher programme delivery.

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs held its forty-third session in Vienna from 6 to 15 March, during which it adopted 11 resolutions and one decision and recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption three draft resolutions and two draft decisions.

The Commission agreed to convene a ministerial-level segment in 2003 and 2008 to coincide with the target dates to meet the objectives decided upon at the special session of the General Assembly in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1135].

By a 15 March resolution [res. 43/1], the Commission streamlined the annual reports questionnaire and requested the UNDCP Executive Director to revise it, taking into account the results of a technical expert meeting (Lisbon, Portugal, January). He was asked to test the resulting draft questionnaire in countries with various levels of development with regard to data-collection capacity and to submit a draft in 2001.

By decision 2000/240 of 27 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission's report on its forty-third session [E/2000/28] and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the forty-fourth (2001) session, on the understanding that informal intersessional meetings would be held in Vienna, at no additional cost, to finalize the items to be included in the provisional agenda and the documentation requirements for the forty-fourth session.

Demand reduction

At its forty-third session, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs considered reduction of illicit demand for drugs. It had before it a report of the UNDCP Executive Director [YUN 1999, p. 1165] on follow-up to the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and a note by the Secretariat on the world situation with regard to drug abuse [YUN 1999, p. 1188].

By a 15 March resolution [res. 43/2] on follow-up to the Action Plan [YUN 1999, p. 1157], the Commission requested UNDCP to provide guidance and assistance for the development of demand reduction strategies and programmes in line with the Declaration [YUN 1998, p. 1137], and to facilitate the sharing of information on best practices in several areas. It called upon UNDCP, when preparing the regular budget proposals for the 2002-2003 biennium, to allocate adequate resources to allow it to fulfil its role in the implementation of the Action Plan, and called upon Member States to implement the Action Plan.

Drug abuse

In a 15 March resolution on enhancing assistance to drug abusers [res. 43/3], the Commission urged Member States to develop services for early detection, counselling, treatment, relapse prevention, aftercare and social reintegration, and to find strategies and increase access to services designed to reach drug abusers. It invited Member States to exchange with other Member States and relevant national and international bodies information on their strategies, programmes and services, and called for the provision of voluntary contributions for the implementation of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction. The Commission asked the UNDCP Executive Director to take into account the efforts taken by Governments when preparing, for submission in 2001, the biennial report on follow-up to the twentieth special session of the General Assembly [YUN 1998, p. 1135].

A Commission resolution of the same date [res. 43/4] urged States to assign priority to activities aimed at preventing drug and inhalant abuse among children, and to implement prevention programmes, training plans, grass-roots activities and treatment and rehabilitation projects targeted at children and young people, and special prevention projects targeted at children in difficult circumstances, particularly street children and children affected by conflict situations. UNDCP was requested to report in 2001 on the situation with regard to drug abuse among children and on prevention and treatment programmes.

Illicit cultivation and trafficking

By a 15 March resolution [res. 43/6], the Commission urged UNDCP to continue to provide assistance, subject to the availability of voluntary contributions, to countries that had eradicated and continued to eradicate illicit crops, and that were seeking to avoid their relocation, through the implementation of sustainable alternative development programmes.

A Commission resolution of the same date [res. 43/5] encouraged interested Governments to develop regional maritime agreements on co-operation to suppress illicit maritime trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and requested UNDCP to provide technical support to the negotiation processes. It supported UNDCP efforts to facilitate coordination by States parties, under article 17 of the 1988 Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 690], of ways to ensure more effective suppression of maritime drug trafficking and encouraged States parties to consider establishing a mechanism to respond to requests subject to national procedures.

Another 15 March Commission resolution [res. 43/8] outlined a series of measures for States to prevent the diversion of controlled pharmaceuticals and illicitly obtained precursor chemicals involving technologies based on the Internet.

Secretariat report. A December report by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2001/5] provided an overview of global trends and patterns in illicit drug production and trafficking and of action taken by the Commission's subsidiary bodies. The report, which was based on information received from Governments in the annual reports questionnaires submitted to UNDCP and reports on individual significant seizure cases, also drew on information received from the International Criminal Police Organization, the Customs Co-operation Council, INCB and the Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission. The report stated that the global supply of heroin declined in 2000, mainly because of a decline in opium production in Afghanistan from over 5,700 tons in 1999 to some 4,700 tons in 2000. Afghanistan was also responsible for the production peak in 1999, though the overproduction was not passed on to Western Europe, the main consumer region, where prices and seizures of heroin remained stable in many countries. Enormous seizure increases were, however, noted in countries surrounding Afghanistan. In East and South-East Asia, China emerged as an important conduit for opiate trafficking. It was estimated that cocaine production continued at stable levels, with Bolivia and Peru indicating decreases, while estimates for Colombia reflected further increases. In 1999, seizures of cocaine rose in both major consumer regions, the United States and Western Europe.

Production and trafficking of amphetamine-type stimulants, mainly methamphetamine, rose rapidly in East and South-East Asia. In North America, the trafficking of methamphetamine continued, but the main concern was related to Ecstasy-type substances, imported in large quantities from Western Europe. Trafficking in amphetamine-type stimulants within Western Europe stabilized. The report also provided an overview of action taken by the Commission's subsidiary bodies (see below).

Regional cooperation

By a 15 March resolution on enhancing regional cooperation through a regional database on drug-related crimes [res. 43/7], the Commission, taking note of the threat posed by the increasing illicit cultivation of, and trafficking in, narcotic drugs in South-West Asia and the proceedings of the first International Conference of Drug Liaison Officers (Tehran, Iran, 17-18 January), invited the States concerned to continue to hold meetings of drug liaison officers in South-West Asia. It called on States to establish a point of contact to ensure the timely sharing of operational intelligence, and requested the UNDCP Executive Director to ensure assistance to establish in Tehran a South-West Asian regional database on drug-related crimes.

During the year, three of the Commission's subsidiary bodies, following a review of drug-trafficking trends and regional and subregional cooperation, addressed drug law enforcement issues of priority concern. The thirty-fifth session of the Subcommittee on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East (Antalya, Turkey, 26-30 June) [UNDCP/SUBCOM/2000/6] adopted recommendations on measures for law enforcement agencies to mobilize community support for anti-drug objectives; the elimination or reduction of corrupt practices by drug law enforcement personnel; and measures to prevent illicit traffic including smuggling through the mail and express services, and the diversion of precursors. The Subcommittee reviewed progress made in implementing resolutions adopted by the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, and recommended to the Commission the adoption of a draft resolution on enhancing regional cooperation on drug control through training, and the approval of a draft resolution on international cooperation for the control of narcotic drugs for adoption by the Economic and Social Council. It brought to the Commission's attention a resolution on the control of acetic anhydride, a precursor frequently used in the illicit manufacture of heroin.

The Tenth Meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HONLEA), Latin America and the Caribbean (Ottawa, Canada, 3-6 October) [UNDCP/HONLAC/2000/4] examined major regional drug-trafficking trends and countermeasures and adopted recommendations on demand reduction, psychotropic substances and precursors. The Twenty-fourth Meeting of HONLEA, Asia and the Pacific (Yangon, Myanmar, 14-17 November) [UNDCP/HONLAP/2000/5] analysed the drug situation with respect to regional and subregional cooperation and made recommendations on illicit traffic in, and consumption of, heroin; the impact of electronic crime on drug-trafficking strategy; the control of stimulants; and illicit traffic by sea.

UN inter-agency coordination

The Subcommittee on Drug Control of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC), at its eighth session (Vienna, 28 and 29 September) [ACC/2000/17], considered a draft ACC guidance note for UN system activities to counter the drug problem. The Secretariat had suggested that the draft be finalized with the intention of providing authoritative guidance to UN country teams in their coordination of and support to various levels of intervention, from assessments and plans to technical cooperation programmes and projects in their country/countries of operation.

The Subcommittee endorsed a draft UN system position paper on preventing HIV transmission among drug abusers, which was annexed to the report.

Chapter XV

Statistics

In 2000, the United Nations continued its statistical work programme. The 24-member Statistical Commission, at its thirty-first session, adopted the methodological references to the tourism satellite account developed by the World Tourism Organization and noted the launching of PARIS 21—the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the Twenty-first Century—which aimed to build statistical capacity by helping to develop well-managed statistical systems. The Commission, having reviewed the work of a number of established bodies and international organizations, made specific recommendations regarding the implementation of the 1993 System of National Accounts and the production of statistical handbooks and manuals. It recognized the United Nations Statistics Division's ongoing efforts to make crucial information and materials available using the Internet, and welcomed the production of international trade statistics on CD-ROM.

The Commission stressed the need for continuous dialogue between producers of statistics and policy makers, effective partnerships at the national level and the accuracy of data.

The Subcommittee on Statistical Activities of the Administrative Committee on Coordination met in September.

Work of Statistical Commission

The Statistical Commission held its thirty-first session in New York from 29 February to 3 March 2000 [E/2000/24]. Action taken included the adoption of the draft methodological references to the tourism satellite account and, in follow-up to UN conferences and summits, reiteration of the need to lessen the reporting burden of countries by reducing the number of data requests sent by international organizations. The Commission stressed the importance of coordination among and within international organizations and of statistical capacity-building; took note of the launching of the PARIS 21 initiative—the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the Twenty-first Century [E/CN.3/2001/24]; and expressed support for the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) initiative to strengthen capacity-building in social statistics in connection with the General Assembly's special session on the five-year review of the 1995 World Summit for Social Development to be held in June (see p. 1011).

Having reviewed work being undertaken by groups of countries and international organizations in economic, social and environment statistics, the Commission made recommendations for the contents of the compilers' manual for international merchandise trade statistics; gave directions concerning the milestone assessment of the implementation of the 1993 System of National Accounts (SNA); requested the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts (ISWGNA) to consider a number of specific issues at its April meeting; gave specific directions regarding the content of the International Labour Organization (ILO) Manual on Consumer Price Indices, the process of revision of the System of Integrated Environmental and Economic Accounting, and the schedule for completing the Handbook on Integrated Environmental and Economic Accounting; and recommended that the next round of the global International Comparison Programme be postponed for at least one year so that a number of steps it had specified could be taken.

The Commission endorsed recommendations for future work on the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities, made by the Expert Group on International Economic and Social Classifications, and provided specific directions for that work. With regard to the Special Data Dissemination Standard (SDDS) and the General Data Dissemination System of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the Commission urged IMF to reinforce the effective partnerships between statistical agencies, central banks and ministries of finance formed as a result of the data standards initiative; expressed concern about the planned extension of SDDS, stating that there was an opportunity cost in terms of the further development of other data systems and stressing the need for priorities and flexibility when implementing the standards; and requested IMF to take the outcomes of the data quality debate into account when reviewing SDDS.

Having considered information regarding the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) Human Development Report (see p. 805), the Commission requested its Chairman to set up a group of statistical experts to prepare, in conjunction with UNDP, a report on the accuracy of the statistical information in the Report.

In relation to the planned work of the Statistics Division, the Commission took note of the draft medium-term plan for 2002-2005, the work programme for the biennium 2000-2001, the proposed 2000-2001 schedule of expert groups and workshops, and the activities to be undertaken under the Development Account in 2000 and 2001.

The Commission brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Council actions taken or planned as a follow-up to requests made at the Council's high-level and coordination segments and its 1999 resolutions, in particular the development of a multi-year programme of work for the Commission for the period 2000-2003.

By decision 2000/228 of 26 July, the Council took note of the Commission's 2000 report, decided that the Commission's thirty-second session should be held in New York from 6 to 9 March 2001 and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for that session.

Economic statistics

National accounts

The Statistical Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General on the milestone assessment of the implementation of the 1993 SNA by Member States [E/CN.3/2000/3]. The report provided background information on the definition and measurement method of the milestones for implementation of the 1993 SNA; a summary table, by region, of the milestone assessment for member countries covering the period 1993-1998; a general analysis of the assessment results, as well as of the changes that occurred over the preceding three years; and a discussion of what the implementation of the 1993 SNA meant. Annexed to the report was a fact sheet on milestones.

The Commission, while recognizing that the milestone analysis based on the full implementation of the 1993 SNA provided useful information, emphasized the need for additional data, such as evaluation of timeliness, periodicity, direct measurement and conceptual adherence. It also noted that the current analysis showed a lack of progress in the implementation for a large number of countries that needed to be addressed.

The Commission also had before it the report of the 1999 meeting of the Task Force on National Accounts [E/CN.3/2000/2] [YUN 1999, p. 1194].

The Commission requested the high-level group of ISWGNA to reconsider if the current definition of implementation of the 1993 SNA was suitable for all countries and to determine whether a core set of accounts could be defined. It requested ISWGNA, at its April meeting, to consider the items discussed in the Commission with regard to future work on gross domestic product (GDP) volume measures and the link between national accounts data and employment, and to re-examine the mechanism for updating the 1993 SNA. The Commission further requested ISWGNA to continue to give special attention in its work programmes to the needs of the countries listed at milestone levels 0 and 1. The Statistics Netherlands initiative to host a workshop on GDP volume and price measurement, in cooperation with the Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat), was welcomed.

At its April 2000 meeting [E/CN.3/2001/7], the Task Force on National Accounts addressed issues raised by the Commission with respect to the current milestone assessment of countries and made proposals for an alternative approach. Included in the proposals was the identification of three main dimensions that needed to be examined or re-examined in order to better assess to what extent countries had implemented the 1993 SNA: the scope of the accounts; compliance with 1993 SNA concepts; and quality issues. The report also provided information on the frequency of updates; treatment of mobile phone licences; and topics that were candidates for updates of the 1993 SNA: the accrual accounting of interest; treatment of interest under conditions of high inflation; and the cost of transferring ownership of assets.

The Commission took note of the standard integrated presentation of the work programmes of ISWGNA in support of SNA implementation; information provided on handbooks and manuals being developed by "city groups" (see p. 1203); and reports on areas where further and/or new conceptual and methodological work was being carried out.

International trade statistics

Having considered the report of the Task Force on International Trade Statistics [E/CN.3/2000/4], the Statistical Commission restated its request that the treatment of electronic commerce in international trade statistics be clarified, particularly in terms of its coverage and methods of data collection, and noted that the issue would be addressed at the next meeting of the Task Force and in the compilers' manual that was being prepared. It welcomed the data set of international trade statistics analysed according to the Central Product Classification (CPC) produced on a CD-ROM by the Statistics Division for test use by economists and statisticians and requested the Division to provide user feedback as part of a review of the usefulness of CPC data for analytical purposes. The Commission expressed concern that the liberalization of trade and the consequent reduced incentive to secure accurate records of trade transactions could impact negatively on the quality of international trade statistics. It requested the Task Force to address the issue, to consider alternative sources of international trade statistics to supplement the customs-based data, and to reflect the outcomes in the compilers' manual.

Service statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the Task Force on Statistics of International Trade in Services [E/CN.3/2000/5], which stated that the UN Statistics Division and IMF had circulated the draft manual on statistics of international trade in services to the statistical organizations of all Member countries for a worldwide review.

The Commission welcomed the substantial progress made on the manual, noting that it provided a useful framework for guiding future work in a new area of statistics. It noted, however, that the information on extended balance-of-payments classification of services required more detail than most statistical offices could provide and also required careful consideration of the way in which resident and non-resident definitions were utilized in the description of services traded. The Commission suggested that, in practice, trade in services data might be collected by national offices at a more aggregated level.

Finance statistics

In its report on its 1999 meeting (Basel, Switzerland, 17-18 June) [E/CN.3/2000/6], the Task Force on Finance Statistics stated that it had drawn up an outline for revised and expanded guidelines on external debt statistics for compilers and users. The Statistical Commission supported the Task Force's work, in particular that on further developing creditor-side data. It noted that obtaining quality data from financial institutions was essential for that work and that implementing disclosure standards might be an important prerequisite.

International Comparison Programme

In response to a 1999 Statistical Commission request [YUN 1999, p. 1195], the World Bank submitted a report on measures to improve the effectiveness of the International Comparison Programme (ICP) [E/CN.3/2000/7], which was a follow-up to a 1999 consultant's evaluation [YUN 1999, p. 1195]. The report reviewed the objectives of the organizational structure and output of ICP, highlighted areas where significant progress had been made in addressing issues raised in the consultant's evaluation, flagged areas where further progress could be made and outlined practical steps towards addressing outstanding issues.

The Commission noted the support of many countries and international agencies for a viable ICP and the efforts made by the international and supranational agencies to address their reservations. It suggested steps to be taken regarding the reservations on quality, timeliness, credibility and transparency of ICP, as identified in reports of consultants, and recommended that the next round of the global ICP be postponed by at least one year so that the suggested steps could be implemented.

The Commission empowered the Chairman to constitute a group of friends to review the implementation plan and to report back to the Commission's 2001 session.

SDDS and GDDS

The Statistical Commission had before it an IMF report on the Special Data Dissemination Standard (SDDS) and the General Data Dissemination System (GDDS), and issues of data quality [E/CN.3/2000/8], which described the strengthening of SDDS in the wake of recent financial crises, the application of the data dissemination standards, data quality and the status of GDDS.

The Commission welcomed the response of the IMF Statistics Department to its 1999 request to enhance the consultation process [YUN 1999, p. 1192], and acknowledged the contribution made by SDDS to the improvement of data in the economic and financial area. It re-emphasized the importance of early involvement of national statistical agencies in the further development of SDDS and GDDS; stressed the need for effective partnerships at the national level between statistical agencies, central banks and ministries of finance for the successful implementation of the dissemination standards; expressed its concern about the planned extension of SDDS, noting that there was an opportunity cost in terms of the further development of other data systems; and stressed the need for priorities and a certain degree of flexibility when implementing the standards.

The Commission also welcomed the debate on data quality stimulated by IMF, invited IMF to build on existing experiences and expertise in countries and regions, and asked IMF to take the outcomes of the data quality debate into account when SDDS was being reviewed in the future. The Commission also stressed the importance of continuous dialogue between producers of statistics and policy makers, agreed on the need for further capacity-building and resources for the implementation of the standards, and welcomed IMF's intention to integrate GDDS into its regular technical cooperation programme.

Other economic statistics

City groups

The Commission had before it a report of seven city groups in the area of economic statistics [E/CN.3/2000/9] and an addendum [E/CN.3/2000/9/Add.1] containing the report of the Expert Group on Intangibles.

The city group report described the meetings, activities and future work of the Canberra (Australia) Group on Household Income Statistics; the Delhi (India) Group on Informal Sector Statistics; the Expert Group on Capital Stock Statistics; the Ottawa (Canada) Group on Price Indexes; the Paris Group on Labour and Compensation; the Round Table on Business Survey Frames; and the Voorburg (Netherlands) Group on Service Statistics.

The Commission welcomed the progress made by the groups, reiterated the importance of making information about the groups widely available and encouraged them to publish their documents on the Internet. It suggested that the Ottawa Group consider the implications of the increase in e-commerce on price indicators and invited the Voorburg Group to address the difficulties that developing countries encountered when attempting to collect data on the services sector.

With regard to the report of the Expert Group on Intangibles, the Commission noted that the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) would continue its work on intangible assets and the information economy but decided that such work should no longer be reported to the Commission under the city group agenda item.

IWGPS

The Intersecretariat Working Group on Price Statistics (IWGPS) met several times, formally and informally, during 2000 to review progress on the preparation of the manuals on consumer price indices (CPI) and on producer price indices (PPI) [E/CN.3/2001/12]. There was agreement on a common outline for the two manuals and free exchange of information and relevant texts between the two processes; draft chapters had been prepared and the editing process had been established. The technical expert group on PPI held its second meeting in Madrid, Spain, in September, when first drafts of seven chapters of the PPI manual were reviewed.

The Statistical Commission encouraged the inclusion in the manual on CPI of technical guidelines for implementation.

Tourism satellite account

The Statistical Commission had before it the report of the World Tourism Organization on the tourism satellite account (TSA) and related methodological outputs [E/CN.3/2000/11]; the draft TSA [PROV/ST/ESA/STAT/SER.F/80]; and the draft update of the UN/World Tourism Organization Recommendations on Tourism Statistics, including the provisional list of tourism-specific products [PROV/ST/ESA/STAT/SER.M/83/Rev.1].

The report presented the statistical design of a TSA and an update of Recommendations on Tourism Statistics, and described the process that had been followed in developing those products, including by the Enzo Paci World Conference on the Measurement of the Economic Impact of Tourism (Nice, France, 15-18 June 1999).

The Commission adopted the methodological references to the draft TSA, as amended, and requested the World Tourism Organization, OECD and Eurostat to make the approved changes and include in the draft TSA the list of tourism-specific products contained in the draft update of Recommendations on Tourism Statistics, and to publish the document as soon as possible in co-operation with the Statistics Division. Although the Commission welcomed the draft update of Recommendations on Tourism Statistics, reflecting the changes necessary for consistency with the TSA, the 1993 SNA and the fifth edition of the IMF Balance of Payments, including the list of tourism-specific products contained in the draft update, it deferred detailed consideration pending further consultations and review by the World Tourism Organization. It requested that organization, OECD and Eurostat to continue their cooperation in the field and to provide consistent technical advice and data requests to countries. It welcomed ILO's offer to present, at the Commission's 2001 session, a report on its work on developing a labour statistics supplement to the TSA.

Environment statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the London Group on Environmental Accounting [E/CN.3/2000/12], which summarized progress on the revision of the System of Integrated Environmental and Economic Accounting (SEEA) and presented the planned future work programme.

The Commission welcomed the proposed extensive consultation process with the international community during the revision of SEEA, and recommended that the handbook on integrated environmental and economic accounting be submitted to it for approval at its 2001 session, while noting that due to time constraints the document would be available in English only.

Social statistics

The Siena Group for Social Statistics (Maas-tricht, Netherlands, 22-24 May) [E/CN.3/2001/5] discussed the theme "Accounting in social statistics and indicators for social development".

Gender issues

The Commission had before it the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation plan of a project on gender issues in the measurement of paid and unpaid work [E/CN.3/2000/13], which described the rationale and objectives of the project and its major expected outputs. The project was developed with UNDP and the International Development Research Centre (Canada). The report was in follow-up to a recommendation contained in the 1995 Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women [YUN 1995, p. 1169] regarding the need to improve data collection on the full contribution of women and men to the economy, including in the informal sector.

The Commission recognized the importance of the work on the measurement of paid and unpaid work by the Secretariat as set out in the report, and noted the additional related work being carried out by various countries and agencies, particularly on time-use surveys.

Development indicators

The Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General on the harmonization and rationalization of development indicators in the UN system [E/CN.3/2000/15], which described the Statistics Division's activities in support of the two-day informal meeting of the Economic and Social Council in 1999 on basic indicators for the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the major UN conferences and summits [YUN 1999, p. 1352].

Proposed activities to strengthen the efforts of the Division in statistical capacity and common indicators in line with Council resolution 1999/55 [YUN 1999, p. 1353] included: working with countries, international organizations and UN agencies in the harmonization of common indicators; working with OECD on developing indicators on means of implementation; identifying countries' capacities to respond to the requests of international agencies in terms of the burden imposed on countries' reporting systems, quality of data produced and deviation from other national priorities; a comprehensive analysis of the statistical requirements originated by the monitoring needs of the recent international conferences and summits and comparison of those requirements with the statistical capacity of countries; support for statistical capacity-building in order to enable countries routinely to produce relevant data; and working with UN organizations in completing a development indicators web site.

The Commission expressed support for the Secretariat's efforts towards harmonization and rationalization of basic indicators, reiterated the need to lessen the reporting burden of countries by reducing the number of data requests sent by international organizations and stressed the importance of coordination among and within international organizations and of statistical capacity-building. The Commission noted the launch of the PARIS 21 initiative—the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the Twenty-first Century. PARIS 21 was a new global consortium of policy makers, statisticians and users of statistical information in support of development. It aimed to build statistical capacity as the foundation for effective development policies by helping to develop well-managed statistical systems that were appropriately resourced. The Commission noted that unless the necessary resources for capacity-building were made available, it would not be possible to meet the demands for data made by policy makers.

International economic and social classifications

The Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General on international economic and social classifications [E/CN.3/2000/17], which provided an overview of how the Commission's 1999 recommendations concerning international statistical classifications [YUN 1999, p. 1197] had been addressed. Annexed to the report were the conclusions of a meeting of the Expert Group on International Economic and Social Classifications and the summary action plan of the newly formed Technical Subgroup for updating and future revision of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC) and the Central Product Classification.

The Commission endorsed the recommendations for future work on ISIC, as outlined in the report of the Expert Group, and noted that the concerns raised regarding the appropriate level of detail of an international classification were determined by the need to allow for international comparison at aggregated levels, as well as the need for detailed development of national classifications. It also noted that a two-digit ISIC with regional adaptations could possibly serve those needs and referred the matter to the Expert Group for further consideration.

The Commission recommended that the definition and use of alternate aggregations in ISIC receive more attention as a way to satisfy analytical needs of users, emphasized the need for training materials and noted the already existing support of Member countries in that field. The Commission also noted that during the revision process of ISIC, more attention should be given to the definition and use of statistical units and the definition of core units as building blocks, and that, although currently focused on economic classifications, the Expert Group could also bring items relating to social classifications to the attention of the Commission. It further noted the Statistics Division's ongoing efforts to make crucial information and materials available on the Internet.

Other statistical activities

In reviewing other major developments in the work programme of the Statistics Division, the Commission took note of the draft medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005 [E/CN.3/2000/CRP.1], the proposed schedule of expert groups and workshops [E/CN.3/2000/L.4] and the activities to be undertaken under the Development Account [A/53/374/Add.1].

Coordination and integration of international statistical programmes

Having considered the report of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) Subcommittee on Statistical Activities on its 1999 session [YUN 1999, p. 1197] and the report of the Secretary-General on the global integrated presentation of the work of the international organizations in statistical methodology [E/CN.3/2000/20], the Commission took note of the latter report and welcomed the cooperative and supportive action that had been taken by ECE, OECD and Eurostat in the context of the Conference of European Statisticians' integrated presentation of statistical work in that region.

Inter-agency cooperation

The ACC Subcommittee on Statistical Activities, at its thirty-fourth session (Washington, D.C., 20-22 September) [ACC/2000/16], noted, among other things, the outcome of the International Statistical Institute conference on measurement of electronic commerce (Singapore, 6-8 December 1999), agreeing that e-commerce provided challenges to statisticians in concepts, definitions and data collection. The Subcommittee also took note of the work being undertaken on the development indicators web page; recognized the importance of user/producer dialogues and requested the Statistics Division to explore the use of the existing General Assembly panel series in the promotion of dialogues; and expressed concern that OECD had issued the publication Measuring the Role of Tourism in OECD Economies: The OECD Manual on Tourism Satellite Accounts and Employment without sufficient references to the forthcoming joint UN/OECD/Eurostat/World Tourism Organization "TSA: Methodological References", which had been adopted with certain modifications by the Statistical Commission in March (see p. 1203).

Chapter I

International Court of Justice

In 2000, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) delivered one Judgment, made 22 Orders and had 25 contentious cases pending before it.

The ICJ President, in a 26 October address to the General Assembly, explained that although the Court had adopted measures to respond to the increased caseload, those steps would not be sufficient to cope with the situation in coming years. He recalled that the proliferation of international tribunals and their overlapping jurisdictions gave rise to a serious risk to the cohesiveness of international law. The President observed that the international community was dependent on courts acting in the service of law.

Judicial work of the Court

During 2000, the Court delivered a Judgment on its jurisdiction in the case concerning the Aerial Incident of 10 August 1999 (Pakistan v. India).

The Court made Orders on requests for the indication of provisional measures made by the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the case concerning Armed activities on the territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda) and the case concerning the Arrest Warrant of 11 April 2000 (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Belgium).

The Court or its President made further Orders on the conduct of the proceedings in the cases concerning Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom) and (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States); Oil Platforms (Iran v. United States); Sovereignty over Pulau Litigan and Pulau Sipadan (Indonesia/Malaysia); *Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (Republic of Guinea v. ICJ activities in 2000 were covered in two reports to the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 1999 to 31 July 2000 [A/55/4] and 1 August 2000 to 31 July 2001 [A/56/4]. On 26 October, the Assembly took note of the 1999/2000 report (decision 55/407).

Maritime delimitation and territorial questions (Qatar v. Bahrain)

Qatar instituted proceedings in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 820] against Bahrain in respect of disputes relating to sovereignty over the Hawar Islands, sovereign rights over the shoals of Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah, and the delimitation of the maritime areas of the two States.

In 1992, a Memorial by Qatar and a Counter-Memorial by Bahrain were filed [YUN 1992, p. 982], as were their respective Reply and Rejoinder.

Following hearings, the Court delivered a Judgment on 1 July 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1279].

The Court received a letter from Qatar on 30 November 1994 transmitting an "Act to comply with paragraphs (3) and (4) of the operative paragraph 41 of the Judgment of the Court dated 1 July 1994". On the same day, Bahrain transmitted a "Report of the State of Bahrain to the International Court of Justice on the Attempt by the Parties to Implement the Court's Judgment of 1 July 1994".

At a public sitting held on 15 February 1995, the Court delivered a Judgment on jurisdiction and admissibility [YUN 1995, p. 1305], by which it found that it had jurisdiction and that the Application of Qatar as formulated on 30 November 1994 was admissible.

In 1996, each Party filed a Memorial on the merits [YUN 1996, p. 1176]. Counter-Memorials of the Parties were filed on 23 December 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1312].

On 17 March 1998, the President held a meeting to ascertain the views of the Parties on a procedure concerning the authenticity of documents produced by Qatar [YUN 1997, p. 1312]. By an Order of 30 March 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1184], the Court fixed 30 September 1998 as the time limit for the filing of an interim report by Qatar on the authenticity of the documents and directed the filing of a Reply by each of the Parties within the time limit of 30 March 1999. In its interim report filed in September 1998, Qatar stated that it would not rely on the disputed documents for the purposes of the present case so as to enable the Court to address the merits of the case without further procedural complications. In December 1998, Qatar requested "a two-month extension of the time limit for the filing of a Reply by each of the Parties, to 30 May 1999" [ibid.].

In February 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1202], the Court placed on record Qatar's decision to disregard the 82 documents annexed to its written pleadings, which had been challenged by Bahrain, and decided that the Replies yet to be filed by Qatar and by Bahrain would not rely on those documents. After filing their Replies within the extended time limit, Qatar and Bahrain submitted, with the approval of the Court, certain additional expert reports and historical documents.

At the conclusion of sittings held from 29 May to 29 June 2000 to hear oral arguments of the Parties, Qatar requested the Court to adjudge and declare that it had sovereignty over the Hawar Islands, and Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah shoals; and that Bahrain had no sovereignty over the island of Janan nor over Zubarah and that any claim by it concerning archipelago baselines and areas for fishing for pearls and swimming fish would be irrelevant for the purpose of maritime delimitation. Qatar also requested that the Court draw a single maritime boundary between the maritime areas of seabed, subsoil and superjacent waters appertaining to Qatar and Bahrain on the basis that Zubarah, the Hawar Islands and Janan appertained to it and not to Bahrain, that boundary being based on a delimitation agreement concluded between Bahrain and Iran in 1971, a decision of the United Kingdom of 23 December 1947 and a delimitation agreement concluded by Bahrain and Saudi Arabia in 1958. Bahrain's final submission asked the Court to adjudge and declare that it was sovereign over Zubarah and the Hawar Islands, including Janan and Hadd Janan, and that, in view of Bahrain's sovereignty over all the insular and other features, including Gasht and Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah, comprising the Bahraini archipelago, the maritime boundary between Bahrain and Qatar was as described in its Memorial.

The Court held deliberations on its Judgment.

Questions of interpretation and application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the aerial incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom) and (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States)

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya instituted in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 982] separate proceedings against the United Kingdom and the United States in respect of a dispute over the interpretation and application of the 1971 Montreal Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation [YUN 1971, p. 739], which arose from its alleged involvement in the crash of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on 21 December 1988. In the Applications, Libya referred to the charging and indictment of two of its nationals by the Lord Advocate of Scotland and by a United States Grand Jury for having caused a bomb to be placed aboard Pan Am flight 103, which exploded, caused the aircraft to crash and killed all 270 persons aboard.

The United Kingdom and the United States, on 16 and on 20 June 1995, respectively [YUN 1995, p. 1306], filed preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain Libya's Applications. Libya presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by the United Kingdom and the United States within the prescribed time limits set by the Court. Public sittings to hear the oral arguments of the Parties on the preliminary objections raised by the United Kingdom and the United States were held in October 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1313].

At public sittings held on 27 February 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1184], the Court delivered the two Judgments on the preliminary objections, by which it rejected the objection to jurisdiction raised by the United Kingdom and the United States on the basis of the alleged absence of a dispute between the Parties concerning the interpretation or application of the Montreal Convention; found that it had jurisdiction, on the basis of article 14, paragraph 1, of the Convention, to hear the disputes between Libya and the United Kingdom and Libya and the United States concerning the interpretation or application of the provisions of the Convention; rejected the objection to admissibility derived by the United Kingdom and the United States from Security Council resolutions 748(1992) [YUN 1992, p. 55] and 883(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 101]; found that the Applications filed by Libya on 3 March 1992 were admissible; and declared that the objection raised by both countries according to which the same Council resolutions had rendered the claims of Libya without object did not, in the circumstances of the case, have an excessively preliminary character.

The time limit of 30 December 1998 fixed by the Court [YUN 1998, p. 1185] for the filing of the Counter-Memorials of the United Kingdom and the United States was extended to 31 March 1999 following a proposal of the United Kingdom and the United States, which referred to diplomatic initiatives [ibid., p. 163], and after the views of Libya had been ascertained. The Counter-Memorials were filed within the time limit.

Taking account of the agreement of the Parties and the special circumstances of the case, the Court, by Orders of 29 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1203], authorized the submission of a Reply by Libya and a Rejoinder by the United Kingdom and the United States, which fixed 29 June 2000 as the time limit for the filing of the Reply. The Court fixed no date for the filing of the Rejoinders; the representatives of the Respondent States had expressed the desire that no such date be fixed at that stage of the proceedings, "in view of the new circumstances consequent upon the transfer of the two accused to the Netherlands for trial by a Scottish court". Libya's Reply was filed within the prescribed time limit.

By Orders of 6 September 2000, the President of the Court, taking account of the Parties' views, fixed 3 August 2001 as the time limit for filing the Rejoinder of the United Kingdom and the United States. (See also p. 189.)

Oil platforms (Iran v. United States)

Iran instituted proceedings against the United States in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 983] regarding a dispute in which Iran alleged that the destruction by United States warships, on 19 October 1987 and 18 April 1988, of three offshore oil production complexes owned and operated by the National Iranian Oil Company constituted a breach of international law and the 1955 Iran/United States Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations and Consular Rights. Iran requested the Court to rule on the matter.

Orders of the Court in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 983] and 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1183] fixed time limits for the filing of the Memorial by Iran and for a Counter-Memorial by the United States. Iran filed its Memorial, while the United States filed certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court. In 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1280], Iran presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the United States objections, in accordance with an Order of the Court.

The Court delivered its Judgment in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1178], by which it rejected the preliminary objection of the United States and found that it had jurisdiction to entertain the claims made by Iran.

By an Order of 16 December 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1178], the President of the Court fixed 23 June 1997 as the time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of the United States. Within that time limit, the United States filed the Counter-Memorial and a counter-claim [YUN 1997, p. 1313].

In November and December 1997, Iran and the United States, respectively, submitted written observations on the question of the admissibility of the United States counter-claim.

In 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1185], the Court found that the counter-claim presented by the United States in its Counter-Memorial was admissible. It further directed Iran to submit a Reply and the United States to submit a Rejoinder, fixing the time limits for those pleadings at 10 September 1998 and 23 November 1999, respectively.

In May 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1185], the Vice-President of the Court, Acting President, extended, at the request of Iran and taking into account the views expressed by the United States, the time limits for Iran's Reply and the United States Rejoinder to 10 December 1998 and 23 May 2000, respectively. In December 1998, the Court further extended those time limits to 10 March 1999 for Iran's Reply and 23 November 2000 for the United States Rejoinder. Iran's Reply was filed within the time limit thus extended.

By an Order of 4 September 2000, the President of the Court extended, at the request of the United States and taking into account the agreement between the Parties, the time limit for filing the United States Rejoinder to 23 March 2001.

Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia)

Bosnia and Herzegovina instituted proceedings in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1138] against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) (FRY) for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959]. The time limits were fixed for the filing of a Memorial by Bosnia and Herzegovina and a Counter-Memorial by FRY [YUN 1993, p. 1138]. The Memorial by Bosnia and Herzegovina was filed within the prescribed time limit [YUN 1994, p. 1281].

The time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial by FRY was extended in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1307]. Within the time limit, FRY filed certain preliminary objections. The objections related, first, to the admissibility of the Application and, second, to the jurisdiction of the Court to deal with the case. By virtue of the Rules of Court, proceedings on the merits were suspended. Pursuant to an Order of the Court [ibid.], Bosnia and Herzegovina presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by FRY, within the prescribed time limit.

The Court delivered its Judgment in 1996 on the preliminary objections [YUN 1996, p. 1179], by which it rejected the objections raised by FRY. In accordance with an Order of 23 July 1996 [ibid.], FRY filed a Counter-Memorial that included counter-claims against Bosnia and Herzegovina [YUN 1997, p. 1315].

Both Parties accepted in 1997 that their respective Governments would submit written observations on the question of the admissibility of the FRY counter-claims and did so. The Court found that the counter-claims submitted by FRY in its Counter-Memorial were admissible and directed Bosnia and Herzegovina to submit a Reply and FRY to submit a Rejoinder, fixing the time limits for those pleadings at 23 January and 23 July 1998, respectively. In January 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1186], those time limits were extended to 23 April 1998 and 22 January 1999, respectively. The Reply of Bosnia and Herzegovina was filed within the prescribed time limit. The Court, in December 1998 [ibid.], extended the time limit for the filing of FRY's Rejoinder to 22 February 1999, which was filed within the time limit [YUN 1999, p. 1204].

Since then, several exchanges of letters took place concerning new procedural difficulties in the case.

Land and maritime boundary between Cameroon and Nigeria

Cameroon instituted proceedings against Nigeria in March 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1281] in a dispute concerning the question of sovereignty over the peninsula of Bakassi and requested the Court to determine the course of the maritime frontier between the two States insofar as that frontier had not already been established in 1975. The Application was amended by an Additional Application in June 1994. Cameroon's Memorial was filed in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1308]. On 13 December 1995, within the time limit for the filing of its Counter-Memorial, Nigeria filed certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court and to the admissibility of the claims of Cameroon.

In 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1180], Cameroon presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by Nigeria. Following hearings in March 1996, the Court made an Order [ibid.] indicating that neither Party should take any action of any kind, and that both should lend every assistance to a fact-finding mission to be sent by the United Nations Secretary-General [YUN 1996, p. 146].

On 11 June 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1187], the Court delivered its Judgment on the preliminary objections, by which it rejected seven of Nigeria's eight preliminary objections; declared that the eighth preliminary objection did not have, in the circumstances of the case, an exclusively preliminary character; and found that, on the basis of Article 36, paragraph 2, of the ICJ Statute, it had jurisdiction to adjudicate on the dispute and that the Application filed by Cameroon on 29 March 1994, as amended by the Additional Application of 6 June 1994, was admissible. The Court, having been informed of the views of the Parties, fixed 31 March 1999 as the time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of Nigeria.

On 28 October 1998, Nigeria filed a request for an interpretation of the Court's Judgment on the preliminary objections [YUN 1998, p. 1187]. The request for interpretation formed a separate case, in which the Court delivered its Judgment on 25 March 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1205].

On 23 February 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1204], Nigeria requested an extension of the time limit for the deposit of its Counter-Memorial, as it did not know the scope of the case it had to answer on State responsibility until the outcome of its request for interpretation was known. By a letter of 27 February 1999, the Agent of Cameroon informed the Court that Cameroon was resolutely opposed to Nigeria's request, as its dispute with Nigeria called for a rapid decision.

In March 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1204], the Court extended to 31 May 1999 the time limit for the filing of Nigeria's Counter-Memorial, which was filed within the time limit.

The Counter-Memorial included counter-claims. At the end of each section dealing with a particular sector of the frontier, Nigeria asked the Court to declare that the incidents referred to "engage the international responsibility of Cameroon, with compensation in the form of damages, if not agreed between the parties, then to be awarded by the Court in a subsequent phase of the case".

The seventh and final submission set out by Nigeria in its Counter-Memorial read as follows: "as to Nigeria's counter-claims as specified in . . . of this Counter-Memorial, [the Court is asked to] adjudge and declare that Cameroon bears responsibility to Nigeria in respect of those claims, the amount of reparation due therefor, if not agreed between the parties within six months of the date of judgment, to be determined by the Court in a further judgment". In June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1204], the Court found that Nigeria's counter-claims were admissible and formed part of the proceedings; decided that Cameroon should submit a Reply and Nigeria a Rejoinder, relating to the claims of both Parties; and fixed the time limits for those pleadings at 4 April 2000 and 4 January 2001, respectively.

On 30 June 1999, Equatorial Guinea filed an Application for permission to intervene in the case, stating that the purpose was to protect its legal rights in the Gulf of Guinea and to inform the Court of Equatorial Guinea's legal rights and interests so that they might remain unaffected as the Court proceeded to address the question of the maritime boundary between Cameroon and Nigeria. Equatorial Guinea clarified that it did not seek to intervene in those aspects of the proceedings that related to the land boundary between Cameroon and Nigeria, nor to become a Party to the case. It further stated that, although it would be open to a request to the Court from the three countries not only to determine the Cameroon-Nigeria maritime boundary but also to determine Equatorial Guinea's maritime boundary with those two States, Equatorial Guinea had made no such request and wished to continue to determine its maritime boundary with its neighbours by negotiation.

The Court fixed 16 August 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1205] as the time limit for the filing of written observations on Equatorial Guinea's Application by Cameroon and Nigeria, which were filed within the prescribed time limits.

By an Order of 21 October 1999, the Court handed down its decision on Equatorial Guinea's Application for permission to intervene, by which it unanimously decided that Equatorial Guinea could intervene in the case, pursuant to Article 62 of the Statute, to the extent, in the manner and for the purposes set out in its Application for permission to intervene, and fixed the time limits for the filing of the written statement and the written observations at 4 April 2001 for the written statement of Equatorial Guinea and 4 July 2001 for the written observations of Cameroon and Nigeria.

Sovereignty over Pulau Ligitan and Pulau Sipadan (Indonesia/Malaysia)

On 2 November 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1189], Indonesia and Malaysia jointly notified the Court of a Special Agreement between them, signed at Kuala Lumpur on 31 May 1997, which entered into force on 14 May 1998, in which they requested the Court "to determine on the basis of the treaties, agreements and any other evidence furnished by the Parties, whether sovereignty over Pulau Ligitan and Pulau Sipadan belongs to the Republic of Indonesia or to Malaysia". By an Order of 10 November 1998 [ibid.], the Court fixed 2 November 1999 and 2 March 2000, respectively, as the time limits for the filing by each of the Parties of a Memorial and a Counter-Memorial. The time limit for filing the Counter-Memorials was extended to 2 July 2000, by an Order of 14 September 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1206].

The Memorials were filed within the time limit of 2 November 1999, as fixed by the Court's Order of 10 November 1998.

By an Order of 11 May 2000, the President of the Court, acting on a joint request of the Parties, extended the time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorials to 2 August. The Counter-Memorials were filed within the extended time limit.

In October 2000, the President, having regard to the Special Agreement and taking account of the agreement between the Parties, fixed 2 March 2001 as the time limit for the filing of a Reply by each Party.

Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (Guinea v. Democratic Republic of the Congo)

On 28 December 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1190], Guinea instituted proceedings against the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) by an "Application with a view to diplomatic protection", in which it requested the Court to condemn the DRC for the grave breaches of international law perpetrated upon the person of a Guinean national, Ahmadou Sadio Diallo.

According to Guinea, Mr. Diallo, a businessman who had been a resident of the DRC for 32 years, was "unlawfully imprisoned by the authorities of that State" during two and a half months, "divested from his important investments, companies, bank accounts, movable and immovable properties, then expelled". The expulsion took place on 2 February 1996, as a result of his attempts to recover sums owed to him by the DRC (especially by Gécamines, a State enterprise and mining monopoly) and by oil companies operating in that country (Zaire Shell, Zaire Mobil and Zaire Fina) by virtue of contracts concluded with businesses owned by him, namely Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire.

As a basis of the Court's jurisdiction, Guinea invoked its own declaration of acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court of 11 November 1998 and the declaration of the DRC of 8 February 1989.

By an Order of 25 November 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1206], the Court, taking into account the agreement of the Parties, fixed 11 September 2000 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Guinea and 11 September 2001 for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by the DRC.

By an Order of 8 September 2000, the President of the Court, at Guinea's request and after the views of the other Party had been ascertained, extended to 23 March 2001 and 4 October 2002 the respective time limits for the Memorial and Counter-Memorial.

Vienna Convention on Consular Relations (Germany v. United States)

On 2 March 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1206], Germany instituted proceedings against the United States in a dispute concerning alleged violations of the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510]. In its Application, Germany based the jurisdiction of the Court on Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute and on article I of the Optional Protocol concerning the Compulsory Settlement of Disputes, which accompanied the Vienna Convention and which provided that the "disputes arising out of the interpretation or application of the Convention shall be within the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice".

In the Application, Germany stated that in 1982 the authorities of Arizona (United States) detained two German nationals, Karl and Walter LaGrand; that the individuals were tried and sentenced to death without having been informed, as was required under article 36, subparagraph 1 (b), of the Vienna Convention, of their rights under that provision (which required the competent authorities of a State party to advise, without delay, a national of another State party whom such authorities arrested or detained of the national's right to consular assistance guaranteed by article 36). Germany also alleged that the failure to provide the required notification precluded it from protecting its nationals' interests in the United States, as provided for by the 1963 Convention, at both the trial and the appeal level in the United States courts.

Germany stated that it had been, until very recently, the contention of the authorities of the State of Arizona that they had been unaware of the fact that Karl and Walter LaGrand were German nationals, and that it had accepted that contention as true. However, during the proceedings before the Arizona Mercy Committee on 23 February 1999, the State Attorney admitted that the authorities of the State of Arizona had indeed been aware since 1982 that the two detainees were German nationals. Germany further stated that Karl and Walter LaGrand, finally with the assistance of German consular officers, did claim violations of the Vienna Convention before the Federal District Court (the federal court of first instance). In addition, it claimed that the Court, applying the municipal law doctrine of "procedural default", decided that, because the individuals in question had not asserted their rights under the Vienna Convention in the previous legal proceedings at the state level, they could not assert them in the federal habeas corpus proceedings; and the intermediate federal appellate court, the last means of legal recourse in the United States available to them, had affirmed that decision.

Germany asked ICJ to adjudge and declare that: the United States, in arresting, detaining, trying, convicting and sentencing the LaGrands, had violated its international legal obligations to Germany, in its own right and in the exercise of its right of diplomatic protection of its nationals, as provided by articles 5 and 36 of the Vienna Convention; Germany was therefore entitled to reparation; the United States was under an international legal obligation not to apply the doctrine of "procedural default", or any other doctrine of its internal law, so as to preclude the exercise of the rights accorded under the Vienna Convention; and the United States was under an international obligation to carry out in conformity with the foregoing international legal obligations any future detention of or criminal proceedings against the LaGrands or any other German national in its territory, whether by a constituent, legislative, executive, judicial or other power, whether that power held a superior or subordinate position in the organization of the United States, and whether that power's functions were of an international or internal character. The foregoing international legal obligations held that: any criminal liability imposed on the LaGrands in violation of international legal obligations was void, and should be recognized as void by the United States legal authorities; the United States should provide reparation, in the form of compensation and satisfaction, for the execution of Karl LaGrand on 24 February 1999; the United States should restore the status quo ante in the case of Walter LaGrand, which meant re-establishing the situation that existed before the detention of, proceedings against and conviction and sentencing of Walter LaGrand, whose execution had been set for 3 March; and the United States should provide Germany a guarantee of the non-repetition of the illegal acts.

On 2 March [YUN 1999, p. 1207], Germany also submitted an urgent request for the indication of provisional measures, asking the Court to indicate that "the United States should take all measures at its disposal to ensure that Walter LaGrand is not executed pending the final decision in these proceedings, and should inform the Court of all the measures which it has taken in implementation of that Order"; it asked the Court moreover to consider its request as a matter of the greatest urgency "in view of the extreme gravity and immediacy of the threat of execution of a German citizen".

By a letter of the same date, the Vice-President of the Court addressed the United States Government in the following terms: "Exercising the functions of the presidency in terms of Articles 13 and 32 of the Rules of Court, and acting in conformity with Article 74, paragraph 4, of the said Rules, I hereby draw the attention of [the] Government [of the United States] to the need to act in such a way as to enable any Order the Court will make on the request for provisional measures to have its appropriate effects."

At a public sitting on 3 March, the Court rendered its Order on the request for the indication of provisional measures by which it indicated that: the United States should take all measures at its disposal to ensure that Walter LaGrand was not executed pending the final decision in the proceedings, and should inform the Court of all the measures which it had taken in implementation of the Order; and the United States should transmit the Order to the Governor of the State of Arizona. It decided that, until the Court had given its final decision, it would remain seized of the matters which formed the subject matter of the Order. Walter LaGrand was executed later that day.

By an Order of 5 March 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1207], the Court, taking into account the views of the Parties, fixed 16 September 1999 and 27 March 2000 as the time limits for the filing of the Memorial of Germany and the Counter-Memorial of the United States, respectively. The Memorial was filed within the prescribed time limit.

At the conclusion of oral proceedings held from 13 to 17 November 2000, Germany requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: the United States, by not informing the LaGrands, without delay and following their arrest, of their rights under the Vienna Convention, and by depriving Germany of the possibility of rendering consular assistance, violated its international legal obligations to Germany; the United States, by applying rules of its domestic law, which barred the LaGrands from raising their claims under the Vienna Convention, and by executing them, violated its international obligations to Germany; the United States, by failing to take all measures to ensure that Walter LaGrand was not executed pending the final decision of ICJ on the matter, violated its international legal obligations to comply with the Court's Order of 3 March; and the United States should assure Germany that it would not repeat the unlawful acts and that, in future cases of detention of or criminal proceedings against German nationals, the United States would ensure in law and in practice the effective exercise of the rights under the Convention, particularly in cases involving the death penalty. The United States asked the Court to adjudge and declare that there was a breach of the United States obligation to Germany under the Vienna Convention, in that the United States authorities did not promptly notify the LaGrands as required, and that the United States had apologized to Germany for the breach and was taking substantial measures to prevent any recurrence; and all other claims and submissions of Germany were dismissed.

In 2000, the Court held deliberations on its Judgment.

Use of force (Yugoslavia v. Belgium), (Yugoslavia v. Canada), (Yugoslavia v. France), (Yugoslavia v. Germany), (Yugoslavia v. Italy), (Yugoslavia v. Netherlands), (Yugoslavia v. Portugal), (Yugoslavia v. Spain), (Yugoslavia v. United Kingdom) and (Yugoslavia v. United States)

FRY instituted proceedings on 29 April 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1207] against Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States for alleged violation of the obligation not to use force. In the cases against Belgium, Canada, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and the United Kingdom, FRY invoked the jurisdiction of the Court based on Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute and on article IX of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959], and, in the cases against France, Germany, Italy and the United States, on article IX of the Convention and Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of Court.

In its Applications, FRY stated that the disputes involved acts of the [Respondent State concerned] "by which it has violated the international obligation banning the use of force against another State, the obligation not to intervene in the internal affairs of another State, the obligation not to violate the sovereignty of another State, the obligation to protect the civilian population and civilian objects in wartime, the obligation to protect the environment, the obligation relating to free navigation on international rivers, the obligation regarding fundamental human rights and freedoms, the obligation not to use prohibited weapons, the obligation not to deliberately inflict conditions of life calculated to cause the physical destruction of a national group".

FRY requested the Court to adjudge and declare that [the Respondent State concerned] had acted against it by taking part in the bombing of the territory of FRY, breaching its obligation not to use force against another State; by taking part in the training, arming, financing, equipping and supplying of terrorist groups, i.e. the Kosovo Liberation Army, breaching its obligation not to intervene in the affairs of another State; by taking part in attacks on civilian targets, breaching its obligation to spare the civilian population and civilian objects; by taking part in destroying or damaging monasteries and cultural monuments, breaching its obligation not to commit any act of hostility directed against historical monuments, works of art or places of worship that constituted people's cultural or spiritual heritage; by taking part in the use of cluster bombs, breaching its obligation not to use prohibited weapons, i.e. weapons calculated to cause unnecessary suffering; by taking part in the bombing of oil refineries and chemical plants, breaching its obligation not to cause considerable environmental damage; by taking part in the use of weapons containing depleted uranium, breaching its obligation not to use prohibited weapons and not to cause far-reaching health and environmental damage; by taking part in killing civilians, destroying enterprises, communications, health and cultural institutions, breaching its obligation to respect the rights to life, to work, to information and to health care as well as other basic human rights; by taking part in destroying bridges on international rivers, breaching its obligation to respect freedom of navigation on international rivers; and by taking part in activities listed above, and in particular by causing enormous environmental damage and by using depleted uranium, breaching its obligation not to deliberately inflict on a national group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction, in whole or in part. In addition, the [Respondent State concerned] was responsible for the violation of the above international obligations; was obliged to stop immediately the violation of the above obligations vis-à-vis FRY; and was obliged to provide compensation for the damage to FRY and to its citizens and juridical persons.

Also on 29 April 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1208], FRY submitted, in each of the cases, a request for the indication of provisional measures, asking the Court to indicate that "the [Respondent State concerned] shall cease immediately its acts of use of force and shall refrain from any act of threat or use of force" against FRY. Hearings on the requests for the indication of provisional measures were held between 10 and 12 May 1999.

At a public sitting on 2 June 1999, the Vice-President of the Court, Acting President, read the Orders, by which, in the cases (Yugoslavia v. Belgium), (Yugoslavia v. Canada), (Yugoslavia v. France), (Yugoslavia v. Germany), (Yugoslavia v. Italy), (Yugoslavia v. Netherlands), (Yugoslavia v. Portugal) and (Yugoslavia v. United Kingdom), the Court rejected the requests for the indication of provisional measures and reserved the subsequent procedure for further decision. In the cases of (Yugoslavia v. Spain) and (Yugoslavia v. United States of America), the Court—having found that it manifestly lacked jurisdiction to entertain FRY's Application; that it could not therefore indicate any provisional measure whatsoever in order to protect the rights invoked therein; and that, within a system of consensual jurisdiction, to maintain on the General List a case upon which it appeared certain that the Court would not be able to adjudicate on the merits would most assuredly not contribute to the sound administration of justice—rejected FRY's requests for the indication of provisional measures and ordered that those cases be removed from the List.

In each of the cases (Yugoslavia v. Belgium), (Yugoslavia v. Canada), (Yugoslavia v. Netherlands) and (Yugoslavia v. Portugal), Judge Koroma appended a declaration to the Order of the Court; Judges Oda, Higgins, Parra-Aranguren and Kooijmans appended separate opinions; and Vice-President Weeramantry, Acting President, Judges Shi and Vereshchetin and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended dissenting opinions.

In each of the cases (Yugoslavia v. France), (Yugoslavia v. Germany) and (Yugoslavia v. Italy), Vice-President Weeramantry, Acting President, and Judges Shi, Koroma and Vereshchetin appended declarations to the Order of the Court; Judges Oda and Parra-Aranguren appended separate opinions; and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended a dissenting opinion.

In the case (Yugoslavia v. Spain), Judges Shi, Koroma and Vereshchetin appended declarations to the Order of the Court; and Judges Oda, Higgins, Parra-Aranguren and Kooijmans and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended separate opinions.

In the case (Yugoslavia v. United Kingdom), Vice-President Weeramantry, Acting President, and Judges Shi, Koroma and Vereshchetin appended declarations to the Order of the Court; Judges Oda, Higgins, Parra-Aranguren and Kooijmans appended separate opinions; and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended a dissenting opinion.

In the case (Yugoslavia v. United States of America), Judges Shi, Koroma and Vereshchetin appended declarations to the Order of the Court; Judges Oda and Parra-Aranguren appended separate opinions; and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended a dissenting opinion.

By Orders of 30 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1209], the Court, having ascertained the views of the Parties, fixed the time limits for the filing of the written pleadings in each of the eight cases maintained on the List as at 5 January 2000 for the Me-memorial of FRY and 5 July 2000 for the Counter-Memorial of the Respondent State concerned.

On 5 July 2000, within the time limit for filing its Counter-Memorial, each of the Respondent States in the eight cases maintained on the Court's List raised preliminary objections of lack of jurisdiction and admissibility. By virtue of Article 79, paragraph 3, of the Rules of Court, the proceedings on the merits were suspended when preliminary objections were filed; proceedings then had to be organized for the consideration of the preliminary objections in accordance with the Article's provisions.

By Orders of 8 September 2000, the Vice-President of the Court, Acting President, fixed 5 April 2001 as the time for filing, in each of the cases, of a written statement by FRY on the preliminary objections raised by the Respondent State concerned.

Armed activities on the territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Burundi), (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda) and (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Rwanda)

The DRC instituted proceedings against Burundi, Uganda and Rwanda on 23 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1209] for acts of armed aggression perpetrated in flagrant violation of the Charter of the United Nations and the Charter of the Organization of African Unity.

In its Applications, the DRC contended that "such armed aggression . . . involved inter alia violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the [DRC], violations of international humanitarian law and massive human rights violations". The DRC sought the cessation of the aggression against it, which constituted a serious threat to peace and security in Central Africa in general and in the Great Lakes region in particular; reparation for acts of intentional destruction and looting; and restitution of national property and resources appropriated for the benefit of the respective Respondent States.

In the cases against Burundi and Rwanda, the DRC invoked as bases for the jurisdiction of the Court Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute, which provided that the jurisdiction of the Court comprised all cases which the parties referred to it and all matters specially provided for in the UN Charter or in treaties and conventions in force; the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly by resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813]; the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation [YUN 1971, p. 739]; and Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of Court, which contemplated the situation where a State filed an application against another State that had not accepted the jurisdiction of the Court. In the case against Uganda, the DRC based the jurisdiction on Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute.

The DRC requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: [the Respondent State concerned] was guilty of an act of aggression within the meaning of article 1 of Assembly resolution 3314(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 847] and of the jurisprudence of the Court, contrary to Article 2, paragraph 4, of the UN Charter; [the Respondent State concerned] committed repeated violations of the Geneva Conventions for the protection of war victims of 1949 and the two Additional Protocols of 1977 [YUN 1977, p. 706], in flagrant disregard of the elementary rules of international humanitarian law in conflict zones, and was also guilty of massive human rights violations in defiance of the most basic customary law; [the Respondent State concerned], by taking forcible possession of the Inga hydroelectric dam and deliberately and regularly causing massive electrical power cuts, in violation of the provisions of article 56 of the Additional Protocol of 1977, was responsible for very heavy loss of life in the city of Kinshasa (5 million inhabitants) and the surrounding area; and [the Respondent State concerned] had violated the Convention on International Civil Aviation signed in Chicago on 7 December 1944, the 1970 Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft and the 1971 Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation by shooting down, on 9 October 1998 at Kindu, a Boeing 727, the property of Congo Airlines, thereby killing 40 civilians.

The DRC requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: all armed forces of [the Respondent State concerned] participating in acts of aggression should forthwith vacate its territory; [the Respondent State concerned] should secure the immediate and unconditional withdrawal from Congolese territory of its nationals, both natural and legal persons; and the DRC was entitled to compensation from [the Respondent State concerned] in respect of all acts of looting, destruction, removal of property and persons and other unlawful acts attributable to [the Respondent State concerned], in respect of which the DRC reserved the right to determine at a later date the precise amount of the damage suffered, in addition to its claim for the restitution of all property removed.

In each of the cases against Burundi and Rwanda, the Court, by an Order of 21 October 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], taking into account the agreement of the Parties, as expressed at a meeting between the President and the Agents of the Parties held on 19 October 1999, decided that the written proceedings should first address the questions of the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the Application and of its admissibility and fixed 21 April 2000 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial on those questions by Burundi and Rwanda, and 23 October 2000 for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by the DRC.

In the case against Uganda, the Court, taking into account the agreement of the Parties, as expressed at a meeting held with them by the President of the Court on 19 October 1999, fixed, by an Order of 21 October, 21 July 2000 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by the DRC and 21 April 2001 for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by Uganda.

On 19 June 2000, the DRC, in the case against Uganda, filed a request for the indication of provisional measures, stating that "since 5 June last, the resumption of fighting between the armed troops of . . . Uganda and another foreign army has caused considerable damage to the Congo and to its population" while "these tactics have been unanimously condemned, in particular by the United Nations Security Council". It also maintained that Uganda had pursued a policy of aggression, brutal armed attacks of oppression and looting. The DRC requested the Court to indicate the following provisional measures: Uganda must order its army to withdraw immediately and completely from Kisangani; Uganda must order its army to cease all fighting or military activity on DRC territory, withdraw immediately from the territory and desist from providing any support to any State, group, organization, movement or individual engaged or planning to engage in military activities on DRC territory; Uganda must take measures to ensure that any units, forces or agents under its authority or that enjoyed its support, together with organizations or persons which could be under its control, authority or influence, desist from committing or inciting the commission of war crimes or any other oppressive or unlawful act against all persons on DRC territory; Uganda must discontinue any act of disruption, interference or hampering actions intended to give the population of the occupied zones their fundamental human rights; Uganda must cease all illegal exploitation of the DRC's natural resources and any illegal transfer of assets, equipment or persons to its territory; and Uganda must respect the DRC's right to sovereignty, political independence and territorial integrity, and the fundamental rights and freedoms of persons on DRC territory.

Public sittings to hear the oral observations of the Parties on the request for the indication of provisional measures were held on 26 and 28 June 2000.

On 1 July 2000, the Court rendered its Order on the DRC's request for provisional measures, which stated that both Parties must, forthwith, prevent and refrain from any action, particularly armed action, which might prejudice the rights of the other Party in respect of whatever judgment the Court might render, or which might aggravate or extend the dispute before the Court or make it more difficult to resolve; both Parties must, forthwith, take measures to comply with all their obligations under international law; and both Parties must, forthwith, take measures to ensure full respect within the zone of conflict for fundamental human rights and for the applicable provisions of humanitarian law. Judges Oda and Koroma appended declarations to the Order.

Application of the genocide convention (Croatia v. Yugoslavia)

Croatia instituted proceedings against FRY on 2 July 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210] for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959], said to have been committed between 1991 and 1995.

In its Application, Croatia contended that by "directly controlling the activity of its armed forces, intelligence agents, and various paramilitary detachments, on the territory of . . . Croatia, in the Knin region, eastern and western Slovenia, and Dalmatia, [Yugoslavia] is liable [for] the 'ethnic cleansing' of Croatian citizens from these areas . . . and is required to provide reparation for the resulting damage". It further alleged that, "by directing, encouraging, and urging Croatian citizens of Serb ethnicity in the Knin region to evacuate the area in 1995, as . . . Croatia reasserted its legitimate governmental authority . . . , [Yugoslavia] engaged in conduct amounting to a second round of 'ethnic cleansing'". Croatia invoked the jurisdiction of the Court based on Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute and on article IX of the Convention.

Croatia requested the Court to adjudge and declare that FRY breached its legal obligations towards Croatia under articles I, II (a, b, c, d), III (a, b, c, d, e), IV and V of the 1948 Convention; and that FRY had an obligation to pay to Croatia, in its own right and as parens patriae for its citizens, reparations for damages to persons and property, as well as to the Croatian economy and environment caused by the foregoing violations of international law, in a sum to be determined by the Court. Croatia reserved the right to introduce to the Court at a future date a precise evaluation of the damages.

By an Order of 14 September 1999, the Court took account of an agreement of the Parties expressed on 13 September and fixed 14 March 2000 as the time limit for the filing of the Memorial of Croatia and 14 September 2000 for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of FRY.

In 2000, at Croatia's request, the President of the Court extended the time limits twice: in March, to 14 September 2000 for the Memorial of Croatia and 14 September 2001 for the Counter-Memorial of FRY, and again in June, to 14 March 2001 for the Memorial and to 16 September 2002 for the Counter-Memorial.

Aerial incident (Pakistan v. India)

Pakistan instituted proceedings against India on 21 September 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210] regarding a dispute in which Pakistan alleged that on 10 August India destroyed a Pakistani aircraft. Pakistan founded the jurisdiction of the Court on Article 36, paragraphs 1 and 2, of the Statute and the declarations whereby the two Parties had recognized the Court's compulsory jurisdiction. In November, the Agent of India filed preliminary objections to the assumption of jurisdiction by the Court on the basis of Pakistan's Application. During a November meeting between the President of the Court and representatives of the Parties, held pursuant to Article 31 of the Rules of Court, the Parties provisionally agreed to request the Court to determine separately the question of its jurisdiction. The agreement was subsequently confirmed in writing by both Parties. By an Order of 19 November, the Court, taking into account the agreement, decided that the written pleadings should first be addressed to the question of the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the Application. The Court fixed 10 January 2000 and 28 February 2000, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Pakistan and a Counter-Memorial by India, which were filed accordingly.

Following public hearings of the arguments of the Parties between 3 and 6 April 2000, the Court delivered its Judgment on jurisdiction on 21 June. By a vote of 14 to 2, the Court found that it had no jurisdiction to entertain the Application filed by Pakistan. Judges Oda and Koroma and Judge ad hoc Reddy appended separate opinions to the Judgment. Judge Al-Khasawneh and Judge ad hoc Pirzada appended dissenting opinions.

Maritime delimitation (Nicaragua v. Honduras)

On 8 February 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Honduras in respect of a dispute concerning the delimitation of the maritime zones appertaining to each of those States in the Caribbean Sea. In its Application, Nicaragua stated that it had maintained for decades the position that its maritime Caribbean border with Honduras had not been determined, while the position of Honduras allegedly was that a delimitation line was fixed by the King of Spain in an Arbitral Award of 23 December 1906, which was found valid and binding by ICJ on 18 November 1960 [YUN 1960, p. 536]. According to Nicaragua, the position adopted by Honduras had brought repeated confrontations and mutual capture of vessels of both nations in and around the general border area, and diplomatic negotiations had failed. Nicaragua founded jurisdiction of the Court on declarations under Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Court's Statute, by which both States accepted the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court, and also article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement (officially known as the "Pact of Bogotá"), signed on 30 April 1948, to which both Nicaragua and Honduras were parties.

Nicaragua requested the Court to determine the course of the single maritime boundary between areas of territorial sea, continental shelf and exclusive economic zone appertaining to Nicaragua and Honduras.

By an Order of 21 March 2000, the Court, taking into account the agreement of the Parties, fixed 21 March 2001 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Nicaragua and 21 March 2002 for the filing of the Counter-Memorial by Honduras.

Arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Belgium)

On 17 October, the DRC filed an Application instituting proceedings against Belgium concerning an international arrest warrant issued on 11 April 2000 by a Belgian examining judge against the DRC's Acting Minister for Foreign Affairs, seeking his detention and subsequent extradition to Belgium for alleged crimes constituting grave violations of international humanitarian law. The warrant was transmitted to all States.

In its Application, the DRC noted that the warrant characterized the alleged facts as crimes of international law committed by action or omission against persons or property protected by the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the Additional Protocols I and II to those Conventions [YUN 1977, p. 706], and as crimes against humanity, and cited the allegedly applicable Belgian Law of 16 June 1993 as amended by the Law of 10 February 1999 pertaining to the punishment of grave violations of international humanitarian law. The DRC stated that, according to the warrant's terms, the examining judge affirmed his competence to deal with facts allegedly committed on the territory of the DRC by a national of that State, without it having been alleged that the victims were of Belgian nationality, or that the facts constituted violations of the security or dignity of Belgium. It further observed that article 5 of the Belgian Law prescribed that "the immunity conferred by a person's official capacity does not prevent application of this Law" and that its article 7 established the universal applicability of the Law and the universal jurisdiction of Belgian courts in relation to "grave violations of international humanitarian law", which jurisdiction was not subject to the presence of the accused on Belgian territory.

The DRC maintained that article 7 of the Belgian Law and the warrant issued on the basis of that article constituted "a violation of the principle whereby a State may not exercise its authority on territory of another State and the principle of sovereign equality among all Members of the United Nations", as declared in Article 2, paragraph 1, of the UN Charter. It also maintained that article 5 and the arrest warrant contravened international law, insofar as they claimed to derogate from the diplomatic immunity of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of a sovereign State, "deriving from article 41, paragraph 2, of the Vienna Convention of 18 April 1961 on Diplomatic Relations" [YUN 1961, p. 512]. Accordingly, the DRC asked the Court to declare that Belgium should annul the warrant, and filed a request for the indication of a provisional measure seeking to have the warrant withdrawn forthwith.

Hearings on the request for an indication of provisional measures were held from 20 to 23 November. The DRC asked the Court to order Belgium to comply with international law; to cease and desist from any conduct that might exacerbate the dispute with the DRC; and to discharge the warrant issued against its Acting Foreign Minister. Belgium asked the Court to refuse the DRC's request for an indication of provisional measures and to remove the case from its List.

On 8 December, the Court rendered its Order on the request for an indication of provisional measures, by which the Court unanimously rejected Belgium's request to remove the case from the List and, by a vote of 15 to 2, found that the circumstances did not require it to exercise its power to indicate provisional measures. Judges Oda and Ranjeva appended declarations to the Order; Judges Koroma and Parra-Aranguren, separate opinions; Judge Rezek and Judge ad hoc Bula-Bula dissenting opinions; and Judge ad hoc Van den Wijngaert a declaration.

By an Order of 13 December, the President of the Court, taking account of the agreement of the Parties, fixed 15 March 2001 and 31 May 2001 as the time limits for the filing of the Memorial of the DRC and the Counter-Memorial of Belgium, respectively.

1999 advisory opinion

On 4 February, the Economic and Social Council took note of a letter from the Secretary-General to the Council President [YUN 1999, p. 1212] regarding implementation of an ICJ advisory opinion [ibid., p. 1211] on the difference relating to immunity from legal process of a Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights, and decided to remain seized of the matter (decision 2000/208).

Chapter II

International tribunals

In 2000, the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (ICTY) instituted internal reforms and saw an increase in the number of so-called high-profile accused persons anticipated to stand trial.

The International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 (ICTR) delivered two judgements involving convictions for genocide and crimes against humanity.

On 30 November, the Security Council, in an effort to expedite the Tribunals' cases, established a pool of ad litem judges in ICTY, who would serve with the permanent judges on a case-by-case basis, and enlarged the membership of the Appeals Chambers of both Tribunals. The Council amended the statutes of the Tribunals accordingly. ICTY and ICTR shared the same Chief Prosecutor and appellate chamber, but had separate Registrars and Deputy Prosecutors.

The Security Council, by resolution 1315(2000) (see p. 205), requested the Secretary-General to negotiate an agreement with Sierra Leone to create an independent special court to try crimes against humanity, war crimes and other serious violations of international humanitarian law.

International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

In 2000, ICTY efforts to institute internal reforms included the creation of a Coordination Council and a Management Committee to enable the organs of the Tribunal—the Chambers, the Office of the Prosecutor and the Registry—to determine their longer-term judicial priorities together and to work more closely towards the accomplishment of the Tribunal's mission. The package of reforms was expected to allow ICTY to fulfil its mandate by 2008 instead of 2016.

In 2000, the activities of ICTY, established by Security Council resolution 827(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 440], were described in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly—one covering the period 1 August 1999 to 31 July 2000 [A/55/273-S/2000/777] and the other covering the period 1 August 2000 to 31 July 2001 [A/56/352-S/2001/865]. On 20 November, the Assembly took note of the 1999/2000 report (decision 55/413).

The Chambers

The judicial activity of the Chambers comprised trials, appellate proceedings, proceedings pertaining to the exercise of the primacy of the Tribunal and contempt proceedings. The Chambers also reviewed indictments submitted by the Prosecutor, issued arrest warrants, conducted hearings, and engaged in regulatory activities to improve trial procedures.

New trials and cases

Mitar Vasiljevic, detained by the multinational Stabilization Force (SFOR) on 25 January and charged with violations of the laws or customs of war and crimes against humanity, pleaded not guilty to all counts on 28 January. On 22 September, the accused entered a special defence of alibi. The prosecution filed its pre-trial brief on 11 December. The trial was scheduled for September 2001.

On 3 April, Momcilo Krajisnik was arrested by SFOR and charged with genocide, complicity in genocide, crimes against humanity, violations of the laws and customs of war and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions for the protection of war victims of 12 August 1949 (Geneva Conventions). The accused, at his initial appearance on 7 April, pleaded not guilty to all charges. On 8 June, the defence filed two preliminary motions challenging the jurisdiction of the Tribunal and the form of indictment. The Appeals Chamber denied the accused's application for leave to appeal the decision concerning the form of the indictment, while the appeal against the decision on jurisdiction was pending.

Following his detention by SFOR on 21 April, Dragan Nikolic pleaded not guilty to 80 counts charged against him on 28 April relating to grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions, violations of the laws or customs of war and crimes against humanity for his alleged role in the mistreatment of detainees at the Susica camp (Bosnia and Herzegovina) where he was a commander in 1992.

Ongoing trials

Radoslav Brdanin and Momir Talic, both charged with genocide and crimes against humanity [YUN 1999, p. 1215], pleaded not guilty to all counts at a hearing on 11 January. On 28 April, Mr. Brdanin filed a motion for provisional release, which was denied by the Trial Chamber on 25 July, following a hearing, on the basis that it was not satisfied that, if released, he would appear for trial. Mr. Brdanin filed an application for leave to appeal the decision on 1 August, which the Appeals Chamber rejected on 7 September. On 8 December, Mr. Talic filed a motion for provisional release.

In the case of Kupreskic and Others [YUN 1998, p. 1194], the Trial Chamber rendered its judgement on 14 January. In January, notices of appeal were filed by Vladimir Santic, Drago Josipovic, Vlatko Kupreskic, Zoran Kupreskic and Mirjan Kupreskic. The prosecution also filed an appeal. Subsequently, the Appeals Chamber rendered a number of decisions on various procedural and evidentiary matters, primarily concerning the admission of additional evidence.

Following a plea of not guilty to an amended indictment in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1216], the defence in the case of General Radislav Krstic filed a new motion based on defects in the form of some paragraphs of the indictment and pointed out that it considered the acts specified in support of counts 7 and 8 (deportation, inhumane acts) as being identical to those used for count 6 (persecution). The Chamber rejected the motion on 28 January, and suggested that the parties present arguments on cumulative charging in their pre-trial briefs. The trial began on 13 March; the prosecution closed its case on 28 July and the defence on 13 December.

In the appeal of Zlatko Aleksovski against a 1999 judgement and sentence [YUN 1999, p. 1215], the Appeals Chamber, on 9 February, dismissed his appeal against conviction and allowed the prosecution's appeal against the sentence. Stating that a "revised sentence" would be considered, the Appeals Chamber ordered the accused's immediate return to custody and reserved its judgement on the prosecution's grounds of appeal against the judgement. It announced that a written reasoned judgement, including the revised sentence, would be issued. On 24 March, the Appeals Chamber rendered its written judgement and found the accused responsible for aiding and abetting the mistreatment of prisoners outside the prison compound at Kaonik, Bosnia and Herzegovina; however, the Appeals Chamber specified that it did not believe that the additional finding warranted any heavier sentence. As to the prosecution appeal against the initial sentence of two and a half years, the Appeals Chamber found that the Trial Chamber had erred when exercising its discretion by not having given sufficient weight to the gravity of the conduct of the appellant and by failing to treat his position as a commander as an aggravating feature. In imposing a revised sentence, the Appeals Chamber considered the element of double jeopardy, in that the appellant had had to appear for sentencing twice for the same conduct and also that he had been detained a second time after a period of release of nine months. The sentence was increased to seven years' imprisonment with deduction for the time already spent in custody. On 22 September, the accused was transferred to Finland to serve his sentence.

Regarding the three accused in the case of Kunarac and Others [YUN 1999, p. 1215], a redacted indictment against Zoran Vukovic was made public at the time of his arrest on 21 February. The other accused, Radomir Kovac and Dragoljub Kunarac, appeared with him. Their trial began on 20 March and concluded on 13 June. On 20 June, the accused filed a joint motion for judgement of acquittal on certain counts in the indictments against them. On 3 July, the Trial Chamber entered a judgement of acquittal in favour of Mr. Kunarac on count 13 of the third amended indictment, and held that Mr. Vukovic had no case to answer in relation to the allegations made by a witness. All remaining counts stood. On 3 April, the prosecution withdrew counts 14 to 17 against Mr. Kunarac. The defence case began on 4 July and concluded on 20 September. Rebuttal witnesses were heard on 23 October.

The trial of Kvocka and Others (Miroslav Kvocka, Mlado Radic, Zoran Zigic, Milojica Kos) [YUN 1998, p. 1192, & YUN 1999, p. 1216] began on 28 February. A fifth accused, Dragoljub Prcac, who was transferred to the Tribunal in March, pleaded not guilty to the charges against him. The cases against the five accused were joined on 14 April, with the agreement of the parties. The trial resumed on 2 May and, for the first time in the Tribunal's history, two of the accused, Messrs. Kvocka and Radic, chose to testify at the opening of the prosecution case, while Mr. Zigic made a declaration, not under oath, at the start of his defence case. The prosecution case concluded on 6 October, having called 46 witnesses. Four of the five defendants filed motions for acquittal. The Trial Chamber granted certain aspects of the motions, entering a judgement of acquittal in favour of Messrs. Kvocka, Kos, Radic and Prcac on parts of the indictment that concerned the Keraterm and Trnopolje camps, and in favour of all the defendants with respect to certain allegations in support of which no evidence had been presented by the prosecution.

Milorad Krnojelac, who pleaded not guilty to all charges against him in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1216], was charged in the second amended indictment of 2 March with 18 counts of crimes against humanity, violations of the laws and customs of war and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions for his alleged role as warden of a camp in Foca municipality (Bosnia and Herzegovina) between April 1992 and August 1993. At the trial's start, the prosecution motion to withdraw all grave breach charges was granted by the Trial Chamber and the trial proceeded on the remaining 12 counts only. The prosecution filed its pre-trial brief on 16 October and the defence filed its brief on 25 October. The pre-trial conference was held on 26 October and the trial began on 30 October.

Following the 1998 sentencing and appeal of Anto Furundzija [YUN 1998, p. 1194], a hearing of the appeal took place on 2 March. In its judgement of 21 July, the Appeals Chamber unanimously rejected each ground of appeal, dismissed the appeal and affirmed the convictions and sentences. On 21 September, the accused was transferred to Finland to serve his sentence.

Following the trial of General Tihomir Blaskic [YUN 1999, p. 1216], the accused filed a notice of appeal on 17 March against the Trial Chamber's judgement of 2 March. Pursuant to requests by the parties, the Appeals Chamber ordered suspension of the briefing schedule pending the resolution of certain issues relating to the admission of additional evidence.

In the case of Dario Kordic and Mario Cerkez, charged in 1999 [ibid., p. 1215], the Prosecution's case-in-chief concluded on 10 March. On 30 March, the Trial Chamber heard defence motions for a judgement of acquittal, which were dismissed on 6 April. Mr. Kordic's defence began on 10 April. Mr. Cerkez's defence began on 24 July, with closing arguments heard on 14 and 15 December. The Trial Chamber dealt with a large number of applications from both parties relating to provisional release, the admission of affidavit evidence, the admission of transcripts from the other factually related cases and applications for judicial assistance relating to States and other entities. In an interlocutory appeal, the accused, on 17 March, sought to appeal an oral decision of 10 March by the Trial Chamber, which granted a prosecution motion that sought to admit into evidence certain affidavits and a formal statement. On 18 September, the Appeals Chamber directed the Trial Chamber to exclude the affidavits from evidence and to re-evaluate the admissibility of the formal statement.

In the case of Martinovic and Naletilic, Mladen Naletilic was transferred from Croatia to the custody of the Tribunal on 21 March and entered a plea of not guilty, as had the co-accused, Vinko Martinovic, in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1216]. A request by Mr. Naletilic to be interrogated under application of a polygraph was denied on 27 November. Also in November, the prosecution was granted leave to amend the indictment to better characterize the charges contained therein. The amendment gave rise to a new opportunity for the defence to file preliminary motions, and both accused challenged the new indictment by that mechanism. The trial was scheduled to begin in 2001.

Regarding the Celebici case [YUN 1996, p. 1186], the Appeals Chamber heard the oral arguments of the parties from 5 to 8 June on the appeal against the 1998 judgement [YUN 1998, p. 1193] of three of the convicted co-accused, Zdravko Mucic, Hazim Delic and Esad Landzo. The prosecution also had filed a notice of appeal against the judgement, challenging the acquittal of the fourth co-accused, Zejnil Delalic, in 1998 [ibid.].

The Appeals Chamber ordered the brief of Goran Jelusic, convicted and sentenced in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1216], to be filed by 7 August, the Response by 6 September and the Reply by 21 September. Both sides had appealed in 1999, the prosecution against acquittal on the genocide count and the accused against sentence on the counts to which he had pleaded guilty, together with a challenge to cumulative convictions.

On 15 September, the Trial Chamber decided that Dusko Sikirica, arrested by SFOR on 25 July, would be jointly tried with Dragan Kolundzija and Damir Dosen [YUN 1999, p. 1215]. On 13 October, the prosecution filed its second, revised pre-trial brief, taking into account the arrest of Mr. Sikirica. In November, the three accused filed their pre-trial briefs. At a status conference on 22 November, the prosecution clarified certain points in the amended indictment, and counsel for Messrs. Kolundzija and Sikirica confirmed their intention to offer, at trial, evidence on diminished mental responsibility and alibi, respectively.

The defence counsel initially assigned to General Stanislav Galic, who had pleaded not guilty to charges against him in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1215], was replaced in November. The new counsel, who was working towards an expeditious trial, requested five months to prepare.

Three of the five accused in the case of Simic and Others [YUN 1999, p. 1215] (Miroslav Tadic, Simo Zaric, Milan Simic) were granted provisional release in 2000. Stevan Todorovic, the fourth accused, remained in custody while pursuing various challenges to the legality of his arrest. On 29 November, the prosecution and the defence filed a confidential joint motion for consideration of a plea agreement between Mr. Todorovic and the Office of the Prosecutor, pursuant to which Mr. Todorovic would plead guilty to the charge of persecution and withdraw all pending motions, while the prosecution would withdraw the remaining charges under the indictment and request a sentence of 5 and 12 years' imprisonment. It was also a condition of the agreement that he would testify for the prosecution in other proceedings before the Tribunal. On 13 December, Mr. Todorovic entered a guilty plea to count 1 of the indictment. The matter was referred to the full Trial Chamber. The fifth accused, Blagoje Simic, remained at large.

In 2000, there was one request for review. On 18 June, Dusko Tadic filed a review of his case and proceedings [YUN 1999, p. 1216], pursuant to the Tribunal's Rules with reference to the finding by the Appeals Chamber on 31 January of contempt by his previous defence counsel. That decision was reached on the ground that the former counsel had put forward to the Appeals Chamber a case that was known to him to be false and had manipulated two witnesses. On 25 October, a bench of the Appeals Chamber granted the former counsel's application for leave to appeal.

In other action, Mr. Tadic was transferred to Germany on 31 October on the basis of an ad hoc agreement concluded on 17 October between ICTY and Germany. Germany, where Mr. Tadic was first arrested and detained before his transfer to ICTY custody, had not signed a formal agreement with the United Nations on the enforcement of ICTY sentences. The ad hoc agreement was signed following an exequatur decision by a Munich regional court of 6 September, which confirmed the 20-year prison sentence imposed by the Appeals Chamber on 26 January.

Communications. On 4 May [S/2000/381], Bosnia and Herzegovina expressed concern about a public visit with Slobodan Milosevic, the President of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) who was indicted by ICTY in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1214], by two representatives of the Security Council while on a mission to Kosovo. Bosnia and Herzegovina proposed a debate within the Council and the adoption of standards of appropriate protocol in dealing with individuals who denied the Tribunal's authority and, by extension, that of the Council and the United Nations.

On 28 November [A/55/657-S/2000/1136], the Russian Federation, referring to a 21 November statement by the Prosecutor to the effect that the Tribunal had no agreement with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), cited the Tri-bunal's third annual report [YUN 1996, p. 1185], which stated, "On 9 May 1996, a memorandum of understanding between the Tribunal and the Supreme Headquarters of Allied Powers of Europe (SHAPE) was signed by both parties. The memorandum spelled out the practical arrangements for support to the Tribunal and the detention and transfer of indictees to the Tribunal."

Composition of the Chambers

On 23 February [S/2000/188], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President of the resignation for health reasons of Judge Wang Tieya (China), effective 31 March, and that China had presented the candidacy of Liu Daqun to replace him. Mr. Liu's curriculum vitae was annexed to the Secretary-General's letter. Following consultations with Council members, the President, on 3 March [S/2000/189], indicated his support of the Secretary-General's intention to appoint Mr. Liu. On 7 March [S/2000/195], the Secretary-General stated that he had received a corresponding letter from the General Assembly President and had appointed Mr. Liu, effective 1 April 2000, for the remainder of Judge Wang's term, due to expire on 16 November 2001.

On 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on the election of ICTY judges would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458).

Office of the Prosecutor

In 2000, the Office of the Prosecutor, in addition to its ongoing prosecution work, completed mass grave exhumations in Kosovo. During the year, one grave site was exhumed in Croatia and another six in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The Prosecutor's investigative strategy continued to be to prosecute the leaders of the conflict, with lower-level perpetrators subject to local/domestic prosecutions. The Office called on States and relevant organizations to arrest fugitives in Republika Srpska (Bosnia and Herzegovina) and FRY.

Regarding cooperation, the change in Government in FRY, following elections in September (see p. 384), had a significant impact on the activities of the Office. The Belgrade field office was reopened and investigators were granted visas to enter FRY. In January, a headquarters agreement was concluded with Croatia for the establishment of an office in Zagreb. A request to exhume a mass grave in Gospic where Croats allegedly had killed Croatian Serbs in 1991 was complied with, and access was granted to various archives containing collections of documents critically important for ongoing trials and investigations. Cooperation with Republika Srpska remained unchanged, with no indication of any concrete move to apprehend fugitives known to be hiding there.

An advocacy training course was held in March for 24 prosecutors in the Office.

The Registry

The Registry of the Tribunal continued to exercise court management functions and provide administration and services to the Chambers and the Office of the Prosecutor. It also provided information to the media and the public, administered the legal aid system and supervised the Detention Unit. The Victims and Witnesses Section was part of the Registry, which was also responsible for budgetary matters.

France and Spain, on 25 February and 28 March, respectively, concluded the Agreement with the United Nations on the Enforcement of Sentences imposed by the Tribunal, allowing convicted persons to serve their sentences in those countries. The other nations that had signed agreements were Austria, Finland, Italy, Norway and Sweden.

In 2000, the ICTY Outreach Programme, with offices in The Hague and in Banja Luka and Sarajevo (Bosnia and Herzegovina) and Zagreb (Croatia), sought to ensure that the Tribunal's activities were transparent and accessible to the communities of the former Yugoslavia through conferences, seminars and workshops.

International Tribunal for Rwanda

The work of ICTR accelerated in 2000 and its output increased. In February, several of the Tribunal's Rules were amended with a view to expediting and shortening trials. Current investigations were concerned with central and local government figures, members of the armed forces, militias and civil defence, prominent businessmen, intellectuals, members of the clergy and media figures. ICTR played a significant role in developing international humanitarian and criminal law, as many of the substantive legal issues adjudicated by its Trial Chambers previously had not been decided; the emerging jurisprudence would serve as precedent and impetus for the International Criminal Court (see p. 1238) and the special court for Sierra Leone, envisioned in Security Council resolution 1315(2000) (see p. 205). In addition to its judicial work, the Tribunal remained seized of the process of national reconciliation in Rwanda, by carrying out various outreach programmes.

In 2000, the activities of ICTR, established by Security Council resolution 955(1994) [YUN 1994, p. 299], were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000 [A/55/435-S/2000/927] and 1 July 2000 to 30 June 2001 [A/56/351-S/2001/863 & Corr.1,2]. On 20 November, the Assembly took note of the 1999/2000 report (decision 55/412).

The Chambers

New trials and cases

On 29 January, Augustin Ndindiliyimana, former Chief of Staff of the Gendarmerie Nationale of Rwanda, was arrested in Belgium and subsequently transferred to the Tribunal's Detention Facility. At his initial appearance on 22 April, he pleaded not guilty to 10 counts charging him with genocide, crimes against humanity and violations of the Geneva Conventions.

Tharcisse Muvunyi, former Commander of the Ecole des sous-officiers, was arrested in the United Kingdom on 5 February and transferred to the Tribunal on 30 October. On 8 November, he pleaded guilty to the charges against him—five counts of genocide or, alternatively, complicity in genocide, direct and public incitement to commit genocide and crimes against humanity.

François Xavier Nzuwonemeye, former Commander of the Forty-second Battalion, was arrested on 15 February and transferred to the Tribunal from France on 23 May. He pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy to commit genocide, genocide, complicity in genocide, crimes against humanity and violations of the Geneva Conventions.

On 15 February, Innocent Sagahutu, former Second-in-Command of the Reconnaissance Battalion, was arrested in Denmark and subsequently transferred to ICTR on 24 November. At his initial appearance on 28 November, he pleaded not guilty to 12 counts charging him with complicity in genocide, crimes against humanity and violations of the Geneva Conventions.

Jean de Dieu Kamuhanda, former Minister for Culture and Education, was transferred from France on 7 March. On 23 March, at his initial appearance before the Tribunal, he pleaded not guilty to nine counts charging him with genocide and crimes against humanity.

Elizaphan Ntakirutimana [YUN 1998, p. 1202], a former clergyman accused in a case with Gerard Ntakirutimana, was transferred, following protracted legal proceedings in the United States, to the ICTR Detention Facility on 24 March. He made his initial appearance on 31 March and pleaded not guilty to two counts of genocide and crimes against humanity. At a status conference on 24 May, the trial of both accused was scheduled to begin in January 2001.

The trial of André Ntagerura, former Minister of Transport, Emmanuel Bagambiki, former Prefect of Cyangugu, and Samuel Imanishimwe, former Lieutenant in the Rwandan Armed Forces, jointly consolidated as the Cyangugu case in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1222], began on 18 September. They were charged with genocide and crimes against humanity.

The trial of Laurent Semanza [YUN 1999, p. 1223], former Bourgmestre of Bicumbi, charged with genocide and crimes against humanity, began on 16 October. On 3 November, the Trial Chamber issued its decision on the Prosecutor's motion to take judicial notice. By taking judicial notice of various factual matters of common knowledge and numerous documents, the Trial Chamber was able to expedite the trial.

Ongoing trials

On 27 January, Alfred Musema [YUN 1999, p. 1223] was convicted of genocide and of two counts of crimes against humanity (rape and extermination), and was sentenced to life imprisonment. He appealed against the judgement.

In a 6 April decision, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the appeal of Omar Serushago, confirming his 15-year imprisonment sentence [YUN 1999, p. 1221].

On 15 May, Georges Ruggiu, a former Belgian journalist who had pleaded not guilty in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1328], changed his plea to guilty. On 1 June, he was convicted of direct and public incitement to commit genocide and crimes against humanity (persecution). Neither he nor the Prosecutor appealed against the sentence of 12 years' imprisonment on each of the counts, to run concurrently.

Regarding the Kajelijeli case [YUN 1999, p. 1223], involving five senior officials of the 1994 interim Government of Rwanda, the Appeals Chamber rendered two decisions. On 10 August, an appeal was dismissed because the notice of appeal had been filed outside the prescribed time limits. In a second decision, on 12 December, the Appeals Chamber dismissed a motion to grant relief from dismissal of appeal (appeal against its 10 August decision) and confirmed its previous decision.

Following defence motions in 1999 for severance from consolidated cases, known as the government cases, involving eight accused, the Trial Chamber only granted the motion to sever filed by Juvénal Kajelijeli [YUN 1999, p. 1222]. In 2000, the Trial Chamber, following a defence motion, ordered that Mr. Kajelijeli be tried separately.

The Trial Chamber heard closing submissions in September and October in the trial of Ignace Bagilishema [YUN 1999, p. 1223]. On 19 October, the trial was adjourned for the Trial Chamber's deliberations and preparation of its judgement.

On 19 October, the Appeals Chamber rendered its judgement in respect of the appeal filed by Jean Kambanda, former head of the interim Government, against his conviction and sentence of a single term of life imprisonment handed down in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1202]. It unanimously dismissed the eight grounds of appeal and affirmed the conviction and sentence.

In the case against Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza [YUN 1998, p. 1202], consolidated with that of Ferdinand Nahimana and Hassan Ngeze in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1222] as the media case, trial began on 26 October and continued to 9 November. The hearings would resume in 2001. On 31 March, the Appeals Chamber reviewed its decision ordering the release of Mr. Barayagwiza [ibid.] and ordered a continuation of the proceedings, while deciding that the accused would be entitled either to compensation if he was acquitted or to a reduction in the sentence if he was found guilty. Two appeals filed by Mr. Barayagwiza against two decisions rendered by the Trial Chamber on 11 April and 6 June, respectively, were dismissed by the Appeals Chamber on 12 September. The appeals raised objections in respect of matters pertaining to the temporal jurisdiction of the Tribunal and challenged the validity of the indictment. On 14 December, the Appeals Chamber dismissed a motion for review or reconsideration of its 31 March decision, on the basis that the motion lacked merit. On 13 December, the Appeals Chamber dismissed an appeal filed on 18 September because it did not satisfy the Tribunal's Rules.

From 30 October to 2 November, the Appeals Chamber heard oral arguments in the appeals by Clément Kayishema [YUN 1999, p. 1221], former Prefect of Kibuye, Obed Ruzindana [ibid.], former businessman in Kibuye Prefecture, and Jean-Paul Akayesu [YUN 1998, p. 1201], former Bourgmestre of Taba commune. It was planned that the three would be transferred to State prisons to serve their sentences as soon as a treaty between the United Nations and the State concerned was finalized and the detention facilities completed.

On 13 November, the Appeals Chamber dismissed an appeal filed by Gratien Kabiligi [YUN 1997, p. 1328] against the Trial Chamber's decision of 13 April, stating that the alleged irregularity pertaining to the pre-trial proceedings did not fall within the ambit of the Tribunal's Rules.

In 2000, the appeal in the case of Georges Anderson Rutaganda [YUN 1999, p. 1221], the Second Vice-President of the Interahamwe in Rwanda in 1994, was still pending.

Office of the Prosecutor

In 2000, the Office of the Prosecutor continued to implement and refine its strategy of investigating new cases, preparing existing cases for trial and conducting trials before the Trial Chambers. The period was also one of reorientation for the Office. New systems were introduced governing the formal opening of investigations, the assignment of senior trial attorneys to oversee and direct investigations and the allocation, to named individuals, of the responsibility for the preparation and conduct of investigations and prosecutions. The Appeals Section was reorganized, as was the Investigations Division. A special team within the Division tracked the whereabouts of accused persons still at large.

The Office increased the level of cooperation with authorities of countries other than Rwanda by seeking assistance in the investigation and prosecution of crimes committed in Rwanda. A greater level of understanding, coordination and cooperation with the authorities in Rwanda was also achieved.

On 10 May, the Investigations Unit organized a workshop on witness management issues within the Tribunal.

The Registry

The Registry continued to administer and service the Tribunal, emphasizing the provision of judicial and administrative support to the Chambers and the Office of the Prosecutor, as well as reforms in strategies and management systems.

On 31 August, the United Nations signed an agreement with Swaziland on the enforcement of ICTR sentences. Benin and Mali had also committed themselves to enforcing the sentences.

The Press and Public Affairs Unit continued to disseminate information about the Tribunal's mandate, organization and achievements. The Unit produced printed information materials for journalists in English, French, Kinyarwanda and Kiswahili.

The Tribunal's information centre Umusanzu mu Bwiyunge in Kigali, the focal point of its Outreach Programme, was inaugurated on 25 September. Also in September, 20 Rwandan judges attended a week-long seminar organized by the Tribunal in Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania.

Under the internship programme, 105 interns were placed in various sections and units of the Tribunal. To increase the participation of African students/lawyers in the programme, the University of Notre Dame (Illinois, United States) made a grant to cover their expenses.

The Witness and Victims Support Section—Defence completed an operational guidance manual to serve as a reference book for defence counsel and experts in witness protection, in the context of international criminal justice.

Functioning of the tribunals

Amendment of the statutes

In identical letters of 7 September [A/55/382-S/2000/865] to the General Assembly and the Security Council, the Secretary-General summarized three proposals of the ICTY President for reducing the time to complete the trials of those persons who were being, or would be in the future, prosecuted before it. The proposals had been endorsed by the Bureau of the Tribunals and unanimously adopted by the judges on 18 April.

The proposals involved conferring on senior legal officers at the Trial Chambers certain powers vested in judges to take decisions regarding the pre-trial process; creating a pool of ad litem judges, on which the Tribunals could draw, as needed, to put together new Trial Chambers to supplement the existing three Chambers; and enlarging the ICTY and ICTR Appeals Chambers by two additional judges drawn from the ICTR Trial Chambers. While the first proposal would not require Council action, the Assembly's approval would be required for the related increase in the Tribunals' budgets. Adoption of the second proposal would require the Council to amend the ICTY statute, while the adoption of the last would require the Council to amend the statutes of both Tribunals. Adoption of the latter two proposals would require the Assembly's approval of the related increase in the budgets of the Tribunals.

Annexed to the Secretary-General's letter were the ICTY President's complete plan of 12 May on ICTY operation, including his plan for reform, and a letter of 14 June from the ICTR President containing comments on the plan.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

Following consultations among its members on 21 and 30 November [meetings 4229, 4240], the Security Council, on 30 November, unanimously adopted resolution 1329(2000). The draft [S/2000/

1131] was prepared during consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolutions 827(1993) of 25 May 1993 and 995(1994) of 8 November 1994,

Remaining convinced that the prosecution of persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in the territory of the former Yugoslavia contributes to the restoration and maintenance of peace in the former Yugoslavia,

Remaining convinced also that in the particular circumstances of Rwanda the prosecution of persons responsible for genocide and other serious violations of international humanitarian law contributes to the process of national reconciliation and to the restoration and maintenance of peace in Rwanda and in the region,

Having considered the letter from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council dated 7 September 2000 and the letters annexed thereto dated 12 May 2000 from the President of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, and 14 June 2000 from the President of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994, addressed to the Secretary-General,

Convinced of the need to establish a pool of ad litem judges in the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and to increase the number of judges in the Appeals Chambers of the International Tribunals in order to enable the Tribunals to expedite the conclusion of their work at the earliest possible date,

Noting the significant progress being made in improving the procedures of the International Tribunals, and convinced of the need for their organs to continue their efforts to further such progress,

Taking note of the position expressed by the International Tribunals that civilian, military and paramilitary leaders should be tried before them in preference to minor actors,

Recalling that the International Tribunals and national courts have concurrent jurisdiction to prosecute persons for serious violations of international humanitarian law, and noting that the rules of procedure and evidence of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia provide that a Trial Chamber may decide to suspend an indictment to allow for a national court to deal with a particular case,

Taking note with appreciation of the efforts of the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, as reflected in annex I to the letter from the Secretary-General dated 7 September 2000, to allow competent organs of the United Nations to begin to form a relatively exact idea of the length of the mandate of the Tribunal,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to establish a pool of ad litem judges in the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and to enlarge the membership of the Appeals Chambers of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994, and to this end decides to amend articles 12, 13 and 14 of the statute of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and to replace those articles with the provisions set out in annex I to the present resolution, and decides also to amend articles 11, 12 and 13 of the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda and to replace those articles with the provisions set out in annex II to the present resolution;

2. Decides also that two additional judges shall be elected as soon as possible as judges of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, and decides, without prejudice to article 12, paragraph 4, of the statute of that Tribunal, that, once elected, they shall serve until the date of the expiry of the terms of office of the existing judges, and that for the purpose of that election the Security Council shall, notwithstanding article 12, paragraph 2 (c) of the statute, establish a list from the nominations received of not less than four and not more than six candidates;

3. Decides further that, once two judges have been elected in accordance with paragraph 2 above and have taken up office, the President of the International Tribunal for Rwanda shall, in accordance with article 13, paragraph 3, of the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda and article 14, paragraph 4, of the statute of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, take the necessary steps as soon as practicable to assign two of the judges elected or appointed in accordance with article 12 of the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda to be members of the Appeals Chambers of the International Tribunals;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to make practical arrangements for the elections mentioned in paragraph 2 above, for the election as soon as possible of twenty-seven ad litem judges in accordance with article 13 ter of the statute of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, and for the timely provision to the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda of personnel and facilities, in particular, for the ad litem judges and the Appeals Chambers and related offices of the Prosecutor, and further requests him to keep the Council closely informed of progress in this regard;

5. Urges all States to cooperate fully with the International Tribunals and their organs in accordance with their obligations under resolutions 827(1993) and 955(1994) and the statutes of the International Tribunals, and welcomes the cooperation already extended to the Tribunals in the fulfilment of their mandates;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Council, as soon as possible, a report containing an assessment and proposals regarding the date ending the temporal jurisdiction of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia;

7. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

ANNEX I

Amendments to the statute of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

Replace articles 12, 13 and 14 by the following:

Article 12

Composition of the Chambers

1. The Chambers shall be composed of sixteen permanent independent judges, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State, and a maximum at any one time of nine ad litem independent judges appointed in accordance with article 13 ter, paragraph 2, of the statute, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State.

2. Three permanent judges and a maximum at any one time of six ad litem judges shall be members of each Trial Chamber. Each Trial Chamber to which ad litem judges are assigned may be divided into sections of three judges each, composed of both permanent and ad litem judges. A section of a Trial Chamber shall have the same powers and responsibilities as a Trial Chamber under the statute and shall render judgement in accordance with the same rules.

3. Seven of the permanent judges shall be members of the Appeals Chamber. The Appeals Chamber shall, for each appeal, be composed of five of its members.

Article 13

Qualifications of judges

The permanent and ad litem judges shall be persons of high moral character, impartiality and integrity who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices. In the overall composition of the Chambers and sections of the Trial Chambers, due account shall be taken of the experience of the judges in criminal law, international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law.

Article 13 bis

Election of permanent judges

1. Fourteen of the permanent judges of the International Tribunal shall be elected by the General Assembly from a list submitted by the Security Council, in the following manner:

(a) The Secretary-General shall invite nominations for judges of the International Tribunal from States Members of the United Nations and non-member States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters;

(b) Within sixty days of the date of the invitation of the Secretary-General, each State may nominate up to two candidates meeting the qualifications set out in article 13 of the statute, no two of whom shall be of the same nationality and neither of whom shall be of the same nationality as any judge who is a member of the Appeals Chamber and who was elected or appointed a judge of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 (hereinafter referred to as "The International Tribunal for Rwanda") in accordance with article 12 of the statute of that Tribunal;

(c) The Secretary-General shall forward the nominations received to the Security Council. From the nominations received the Security Council shall establish a list of not less than twenty-eight and not more than forty-two candidates, taking due account of the adequate representation of the principal legal systems of the world;

(d) The President of the Security Council shall transmit the list of candidates to the President of the General Assembly. From that list the General Assembly shall elect fourteen permanent judges of the International Tribunal. The candidates who receive an absolute majority of the votes of the States Members of the United Nations and of the non-member States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters, shall be declared elected. Should two candidates of the same nationality obtain the required majority vote, the one who received the higher number of votes shall be considered elected.

2. In the event of a vacancy in the Chambers amongst the permanent judges elected or appointed in accordance with this article, after consultation with the Presidents of the Security Council and of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General shall appoint a person meeting the qualifications of article 13 of the statute, for the remainder of the term of office concerned.

3. The permanent judges elected in accordance with this article shall be elected for a term of four years. The terms and conditions of service shall be those of the judges of the International Court of Justice. They shall be eligible for re-election.

Article 13 ter

Election and appointment of ad litem judges

1. The ad litem judges of the International Tribunal shall be elected by the General Assembly from a list submitted by the Security Council, in the following manner:

(a) The Secretary-General shall invite nominations for ad litem judges of the International Tribunal from States Members of the United Nations and non-member States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters;

(b) Within sixty days of the date of the invitation of the Secretary-General, each State may nominate up to four candidates meeting the qualifications set out in article 13 of the statute, taking into account the importance of a fair representation of female and male candidates;

(c) The Secretary-General shall forward the nominations received to the Security Council. From the nominations received the Security Council shall establish a list of not less than fifty-four candidates, taking due account of the adequate representation of the principal legal systems of the world and bearing in mind the importance of equitable geographical distribution;

(d) The President of the Security Council shall transmit the list of candidates to the President of the General Assembly. From that list the General Assembly shall elect the twenty-seven ad litem judges of the International Tribunal. The candidates who receive an absolute majority of the votes of the States Members of the United Nations and of the non-member States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters shall be declared elected;

(e) The ad litem judges shall be elected for a term of four years. They shall not be eligible for re-election.

2. During their term, ad litem judges will be appointed by the Secretary-General, upon request of the President of the International Tribunal, to serve in the Trial Chambers for one or more trials, for a cumulative period of up to, but not including, three years. When requesting the appointment of any particular ad litem judge, the President of the International Tribunal shall bear in mind the criteria set out in article 13 of the statute regarding the composition of the Chambers and sections of the Trial Chambers, the considerations set out in paragraphs 1 (b) and (c) above and the number of votes the ad litem judge received in the General Assembly.

Article 13 quater

Status of ad litem judges

1. During the period in which they are appointed to serve in the International Tribunal, ad litem judges shall:

(a) Benefit from the same terms and conditions of service mutatis mutandis as the permanent judges of the International Tribunal;

(b) Enjoy, subject to paragraph 2 below, the same powers as the permanent judges of the International Tribunal;

(c) Enjoy the privileges and immunities, exemptions and facilities of a judge of the International Tribunal.

2. During the period in which they are appointed to serve in the International Tribunal, ad litem judges shall not:

(a) Be eligible for election as, or to vote in the election of, the President of the Tribunal or the Presiding Judge of a Trial Chamber pursuant to article 14 of the statute;

(b) Have power:

(i) To adopt rules of procedure and evidence pursuant to article 15 of the statute. They shall, however, be consulted before the adoption of those rules;

(ii) To review an indictment pursuant to article 19 of the statute;

(iii) To consult with the President in relation to the assignment of judges pursuant to article 14 of the statute or in relation to a pardon or commutation of sentence pursuant to article 28 of the statute;

(iv) To adjudicate in pre-trial proceedings.

Article 14

Officers and members of the Chambers

1. The permanent judges of the International Tribunal shall elect a President from amongst their number.

2. The President of the International Tribunal shall be a member of the Appeals Chamber and shall preside over its proceedings.

3. After consultation with the permanent judges of the International Tribunal, the President shall assign four of the permanent judges elected or appointed in accordance with article 13 bis of the statute to the Appeals Chamber and nine to the Trial Chambers.

4. Two of the judges elected or appointed in accordance with article 12 of the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda shall be assigned by the President of that Tribunal, in consultation with the President of the International Tribunal, to be members of the Appeals Chamber and permanent judges of the International Tribunal.

5. After consultation with the permanent judges of the International Tribunal, the President shall assign such ad litem judges as may from time to time be appointed to serve in the International Tribunal to the Trial Chambers.

6. A judge shall serve only in the Chamber to which he or she was assigned.

7. The permanent judges of each Trial Chamber shall elect a Presiding Judge from amongst their number, who shall oversee the work of the Trial Chamber as a whole.

ANNEX II

Amendments to the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda

Replace articles 11, 12 and 13 by the following:

Article 11

Composition of the Chambers

The Chambers shall be composed of sixteen independent judges, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State, who shall serve as follows:

(a) Three judges shall serve in each of the Trial Chambers;

(b) Seven judges shall be members of the Appeals Chamber. The Appeals Chamber shall, for each appeal, be composed of five of its members.

Article 12

Qualification and election of judges

1. The judges shall be persons of high moral character, impartiality and integrity who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices. In the overall composition of the Chambers due account shall be taken of the experience of the judges in criminal law, international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law.

2. Eleven of the judges of the International Tribunal for Rwanda shall be elected by the General Assembly from a list submitted by the Security Council, in the following manner:

(a) The Secretary-General shall invite nominations for judges from States Members of the United Nations and non-member States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters;

(b) Within sixty days of the date of the invitation of the Secretary-General, each State may nominate up to two candidates meeting the qualifications set out in paragraph 1 above, no two of whom shall be of the same nationality and neither of whom shall be of the same nationality as any judge who is a member of the Appeals Chamber and who was elected or appointed a permanent judge of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the former Yugoslavia since 1991 (hereinafter referred to as "the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia") in accordance with article 13 bis of the statute of that Tribunal;

(c) The Secretary-General shall forward the nominations received to the Security Council. From the nominations received the Security Council shall establish a list of not less than twenty-two and not more than thirty-three candidates, taking due account of the adequate representation on the International Tribunal for Rwanda of the principal legal systems of the world;

(d) The President of the Security Council shall transmit the list of candidates to the President of the General Assembly. From that list the General Assembly shall elect eleven judges of the International Tribunal for Rwanda. The candidates who receive an absolute majority of the votes of the States Members of the United Nations and of the non-member States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters, shall be declared elected. Should two candidates of the same nationality obtain the required majority vote, the one who received the higher number of votes shall be considered elected.

3. In the event of a vacancy in the Chambers amongst the judges elected or appointed in accordance with this article, after consultation with the Presidents of the Security Council and of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General shall appoint a person meeting the qualifications of paragraph 1 above, for the remainder of the term of office concerned.

4. The judges elected in accordance with this article shall be elected for a term of four years. The terms and conditions of service shall be those of the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. They shall be eligible for re-election.

Article 13

Officers and members of the Chambers

1. The judges of the International Tribunal for Rwanda shall elect a President.

2. The President of the International Tribunal for Rwanda shall be a member of one of its Trial Chambers.

3. After consultation with the judges of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, the President shall assign two of the judges elected or appointed in accordance with article 12 of the present statute to be members of the Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and eight to the Trial Chambers of the International Tribunal for Rwanda. A judge shall serve only in the Chamber to which he or she was assigned.

4. The members of the Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia shall also serve as the members of the Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal for Rwanda.

5. The judges of each Trial Chamber shall elect a Presiding Judge, who shall conduct all of the proceedings of that Trial Chamber as a whole.

Before adoption of the text, the Council President noted that four urgent issues remained, namely, the issues of geographical distribution, compensation of victims (see below), compensation of victims of miscarriage of justice and of persons unlawfully arrested or detained (see below), and gender balance.

Compensation

In September [S/2000/904] and October [S/2000/925], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council reports of the ICTY and ICTR Presidents indicating that, according to their judges, the Tribunals should be able, in certain situations, to compensate persons wrongfully detained, prosecuted or convicted. Compensation would be awarded when a person had suffered punishment resulting from a final decision and the decision was reversed by the Tribunals or a pardon granted; when a detainee was subsequently acquitted by a final decision or released following a decision to terminate the proceedings against him/her in circumstances that revealed a miscarriage of justice; and when a person was arrested or detained in a manner that constituted a violation of the right to liberty and security of person and when the conduct that gave rise to the violation was legally imputed to the Tribunals and thus to the United Nations. The Presidents observed that the Council would be obliged to amend the Tribunals' statutes to empower them to deal with compensation issues.

However, in November [S/2000/1063], the ICTY President stated that the judges had concluded that conferring the power to order the payment of compensation to the victims of crimes that fell within ICTY's jurisdiction was not desirable, since it would significantly increase the workload of the Chambers and the length and complexity of trials, and raised questions about the funding of such awards. They suggested that the Council, or some other organ to which it might refer the matter, might consider mechanisms for the payment of compensation, such as the creation of an international compensation commission.

The ICTR President, in December [S/2000/1198], stated that the judges shared the same view concerning the implications of ICTR possessing such a power, but considered that the Tribunal, in tandem with other mechanisms, might be vested with a limited power to order the payment of compensation from a trust fund to victims who appeared as witnesses in trials. Adoption of that measure would require the Council to amend the Tribunal's statute.

Expert Group recommendations

In response to General Assembly resolutions 54/239 A [YUN 1999, p. 1220] and 54/240 A [ibid., p. 1225], the Secretary-General, in April [A/54/850], transmitted the comments of the Tribunals on the report of the Expert Group to Conduct a Review of the Effective Operation and Functioning of ICTY and ICTR [YUN 1999, p. 1219].

Of the 46 recommendations made by the Group, 16 had been implemented and 11 had been indicated as subject to further review. The Secretary-General said that two recommendations dealing with the possible realignment of the control of administrative functions were of particular importance in terms of his overall authority. The Group had expressed the view that, although dividing the Registry into two separate administrative structures with one integrated into the Office of the Prosecutor and the other servicing the Chambers might have budgetary implications, it should be seriously considered. The Secretary-General was of the view that the continuing delineation of his overall responsibility for the functioning of the respective Registries did not preclude further efforts being made to improve the quality of support given to the other two organs. To maintain a clear line of accountability, the Secretary-General had delegated authority under the UN Financial Regulations and Rules and Staff Regulations and Rules to the Registrars and other officers under their authority. Should the Security Council decide to revise the administrative elements in the respective statutes, the revision would need to be subject to a full understanding between the Assembly and the Council regarding their respective authorities before any changes could be effected with respect to delegation of authority.

The general observations of the Prosecutor and the ICTR Registry were annexed to the note.

In June [S/2000/597], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council the report of the Expert Group [YUN 1999, p. 1219].

ACABQ action. Following consideration of the Secretary-General's note (see above), the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in May [A/54/874], referring to the recommendations that affected the statutory roles of the Registries vis-à-vis the Chambers and the Prosecutor, recalled that, in recommending the establishment of the Expert Group, it had indicated that the review would be carried out in full respect of the Tribunals' statutes. Accordingly, unless the statutes were amended by the Security Council, ACABQ recommended that the current practice be followed and that the shortcomings that had led to the Expert Group's recommendations on the matter be resolved. It also recommended that the Secretary-General prepare the 2001 budget proposals for the Tribunals based on their existing structures.

The Committee proposed that the Secretary-General prepare a separate report in 2001, in the context of the budgets of the Tribunals, on the actions taken or to be taken in respect of the recommendations that remained under review. Furthermore, a comprehensive report should be submitted in 2001 on the results of the implementation of the Group's recommendations.

ACABQ observed that the Tribunals were independent entities, operating and functioning in different environments, and their practices might diverge. Thus, it cautioned against calling for complete harmonization in applying the Group's recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 June [meeting 98], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/54/678/Add.1], adopted resolution 54/239 B without vote [agenda item 142].

Financing of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/212 and 53/213 of 18 December 1998, in which it requested the Secretary-General, with a view to evaluating the effective operation and functioning of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, to conduct a review in full cooperation with the Presidents of the International Tribunals, without prejudice to the provisions of the statutes of the Tribunals and their independent character, and to report thereon to the relevant organs of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 54/239 A of 23 December 1999, in which it requested the Secretary-General to obtain comments and observations from the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia on the report of the Expert Group to conduct a review of the effective operation and functioning of the International Tribunals, and to submit them, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to the General Assembly for consideration at its resumed fifty-fourth session,

1. Takes note of the report of the Expert Group to conduct a review of the effective operation and functioning of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, established by the Secretary-General pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 53/212 and 53/213, and the note by the Secretary-General transmitting comments thereon;

2. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Security Council for its consideration the report of the Expert Group, together with the note by the Secretary-General transmitting comments thereon;

4. Welcomes the recent improvements in the functioning of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, and encourages continued efforts to that effect;

5. Notes that work is in hand to address areas where improvement is needed, including those noted by the Expert Group and the external and internal oversight bodies;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session, in the context of the budget of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for 2001, reflecting the views of all organs of the Tribunal, on actions taken or to be taken to improve the functioning of the Tribunal, including in respect of the recommendations of the Expert Group that remain under review, to the extent that they can be implemented;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on the results of the implementation of the recommendations of the Expert Group to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session;

8. Notes that the proposed budget for the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for 2000 did not include provision for all the forensic experts later determined to be needed, and emphasizes that the Secretary-General should ensure that the budget proposals for the Tribunal are adequate and conform with the applicable rules and regulations and the relevant General Assembly resolutions;

9. Confirms the appropriation that was approved on a provisional basis in its resolution 54/239 A.

Also on 15 June [meeting 98], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/54/679/Add.1], adopted resolution 54/240 B without vote [agenda item 143].

Financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/212 and 53/213 of 18 December 1998, in which it requested the Secretary-General, with a view to evaluating the effective operation and functioning of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, to conduct a review in full cooperation with the Presidents of the International Tribunals, without prejudice to the provisions of the statutes of the Tribunals and their independent character, and to report thereon to the relevant organs of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 54/240 A of 23 December 1999, in which it requested the Secretary-General to obtain comments and observations from the International Tribunal for Rwanda on the report of the Expert Group to conduct a review of the effective operation and functioning of the International Tribunals, and to submit them, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to the General Assembly for consideration at its resumed fifty-fourth session,

1. Takes note of the report of the Expert Group to conduct a review of the effective operation and functioning of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, established by the Secretary-General pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 53/212 and 53/213, and the note by the Secretary-General transmitting comments thereon;

2. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Security Council for its consideration the report of the Expert Group, together with the note by the Secretary-General transmitting comments thereon;

4. Welcomes the recent improvements in the functioning of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, and encourages continued efforts to that effect;

5. Notes that work is in hand to address areas where improvement is needed, including those noted by the Expert Group and the external and internal oversight bodies;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session, in the context of the budget of the International Tribunal for Rwanda for 2001, reflecting the views of all organs of the Tribunal, on actions taken or to be taken to improve the functioning of the Tribunal, including in respect of the recommendations of the Expert Group that remain under review, to the extent that they can be implemented;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on the results of the implementation of the recommendations of the Expert Group to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session;

8. Confirms the appropriation that was approved on a provisional basis in its resolution 54/240 A.

OIOS review

In response to a request from the UN Controller, the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS), in June [A/55/759], conducted an investigation into possible fee-splitting arrangements between defence counsel and indigent detainees at both Tribunals. The request to OIOS followed the 1999 report of the Expert Group to Conduct a Review of the Effective Operation and Functioning of ICTY and ICTR [YUN 1999, p. 1219].

OIOS investigators found evidence that several former defence counsels at both Tribunals either had been solicited and/or had accepted requests for fee-splitting arrangements. At ICTR, some defence teams had made gifts to their clients and their relatives; at both Tribunals, some teams had hired friends or relatives of their clients as defence investigators. Fee-splitting was linked with problems in verifying claims for indigence submitted by the suspect/accused; the process of selecting and changing assigned counsel; the fees paid to defence teams; and the use of frivolous motions and other delaying tactics before the Trial Chambers.

The information found by OIOS about possible ongoing fee-splitting arrangements needed to be further developed, refined and corroborated by specific investigative steps. Thus, OIOS would continue to pursue the issue in consultation with the Registries and would report as necessary.

OIOS made a series of recommendations, with which the Secretary-General concurred.

Financing

ICTY

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 54/239 B (see p. 1232), the Secretary-General, in October [A/55/517 & Corr.1], submitted the proposed 2001 ICTY resource requirements, amounting to $112,464,300 gross ($100,180,800 net), reflecting an increase of $4,238,200 net and an additional 89 posts over the 2000 appropriation and authorized staffing level.

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 53/212 [YUN 1998, p. 1199], the Secretary-General, in November [A/55/623], presented the fifth annual budget performance report of ICTY for the year ended 31 December 1999, including actual performance indicators. Of the total net appropriation of $94,103,800, actual expenditures recorded for 1999 totalled $80,489,500, resulting in a reduction in requirements of $13,614,300. The 1999 budget was impacted by expanded investigations into the Kosovo conflict that were funded through the assessed budget and the ICTY trust fund; lower-than-anticipated usage of the Tribunal's three courtrooms; and absorption of half the expenditures of the Expert Group to Conduct a Review of the Effective Operation and Functioning of ICTY and ICTR [YUN 1999, p. 1219] within the ICTY 1999 budget.

quirements for 2001, arising from Security Council resolution 1329(2000) (see p. 1228), for the use of six ad litem judges in ICTY in 2001. The estimated additional requirements would amount to $5,280,900 gross ($4,899,400 net) with an additional 54 temporary posts, bringing the total resource requirements for 2001 to $117,745,200 gross ($105,080,200 net). Provisions related to the proposed two additional judges for the ICTY Appeals Chamber were included in the report on the financing of ICTR [A/55/512/Add.1] (see p. 1236).

ACABQ action. In November [A/55/642], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve an appropriation of $108,487,700 gross ($96,443,900 net) for the operation of the Tribunal in 2001. The Committee summarized its recommendations regarding post reductions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/691], adopted resolution 55/225 A without vote [agenda item 127].

Financing of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the oral statement made by the Chairman of the Advisory Committee to the Fifth Committee on 6 December 2000,

Recalling its resolution 47/235 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which were resolutions 54/239 A of 23 December 1999 and 54/239 B of 15 June 2000,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the budget performance of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for 1999 and the comments of the Advisory Committee thereon in its report,

Taking note also of Security Council resolution 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000 concerning the establishment of a pool of ad litem judges in the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Decides that the budget of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 shall be biennialized, on an experimental basis, for the period 2002-2003, also decides to keep the matter of the biennialization under review, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session on the results of the experiment and the impact on the functioning of the Tribunal;

3. Notes with satisfaction that the benefits of this provisional reform could include the use of two-year employment contracts at the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia;

4. Welcomes recent improvements in the functioning of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, and encourages continued efforts to address areas where improvement is needed;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide in his proposed budget, with the involvement of all organs of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, workload data for the budget period so as to give more justification for its resource requirements, and also requests the Secretary-General to include in his budget presentation information on budgetary requirements, including targets for recruitment, training, judicial scheduling and performance standards for support activities;

6. Welcomes the actions taken so far to address the issue of dilatory motions and pleadings, which have the effect of lengthening trial proceedings, and encourages the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia to take further measures to improve the monitoring and oversight of defence counsel;

7. Endorses the recommendation of the Advisory Committee that judicial activities of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia should have priority over public relations activities and attendance at external meetings;

8. Decides to revert, at its resumed fifty-fifth session, to the consideration of resource requirements for the implementation of modifications to the statute of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, without prejudice to the nomination and election of the ad litem judges;

9. Decides also to appropriate to the Special Account for the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 a total amount of 108,487,700 United States dollars gross (96,443,900 dollars net) for 2001;

10. Decides further that the financing of the appropriation for 2001 under the Special Account shall take into account the unused unencumbered balance of 5,873,600 dollars gross (5,414,300 dollars net) for 1999, interest and miscellaneous income of 3,412,000 dollars recorded for the biennium 1998-1999, the estimated unencumbered balance of 2.5 million dollars gross (2,227,000 dollars net) for 2000 and the estimated income of 77,200 dollars for 2001, which shall be set off against the aggregate amount of the appropriation, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

11. Decides to apportion the amount of 48,312,450 dollars gross (42,695,300 dollars net) among Member States in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for 2001, as set out in its resolution 55/5 B of 23 December 2000;

12. Decides also to apportion the amount of 48,312,450 dollars gross (42,695,300 dollars net) among Member States in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to peacekeeping operations for 2001;

13. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 11 and 12 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the estimated staff assessment income of 11,234,300 dollars approved for the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for 2001.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on ICTY financing would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458) and that the Fifth Committee should continue consideration of the item at that session (decision 55/455).

ICTR

Reports of Secretary-General. In October [A/55/512 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted the proposed 2001 ICTR resource requirements, amounting to $95,056,600 gross ($86,616,600 net), reflecting an increase of $8,901,700 gross ($8,446,400 net) and 81 additional new posts.

In response to Assembly resolution 49/251 [YUN 1995, p. 1324], the Secretary-General, in November [A/55/622], submitted the fifth annual budget performance report of ICTR for the year ended 31 December 1999, including actual performance indicators. Expenditures for 1999 totalled $64,156,000 net, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $4,375,300 net, which consisted of reduced requirements of $3,525,600 net under the Registry and $918,400 net under the Office of the Prosecutor, offset by an overexpenditure of $68,700 under the Chambers.

In December [A/55/512/Add.1], the Secretary-General presented the supplementary resource requirements for 2001 arising from Security Council resolution 1329(2000) (see p. 1228), by which the Council approved the appointment of two additional judges to the Appeals Chambers of ICTR and ICTY. The estimated additional requirements amounted to $654,300 gross ($628,900 net), bringing the total resource requirements for 2001 to $95,710,900 gross ($87,245,500 net).

ACABQ action. In November [A/55/643], ACABQ reviewed ICTR financing and recommended that the General Assembly approve an appropriation of $93,520,500 gross ($85,178,700 net) for the operation of the Tribunal in 2001, representing a reduction of $1,536,100 gross ($1,437,900 net) from the estimate in the Secretary-General's proposal.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/692], adopted resolution 55/226 without vote [agenda item 128].

Financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the oral statement made by the Chairman of the Advisory Committee to the Fifth Committee on 6 December 2000,

Recalling its resolution 49/251 of 20 July 1995 on the financing of the International Tribunal for Rwanda and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which were resolutions 54/240 A of 23 December 1999 and 54/240 B of 15 June 2000,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the budget performance of the International Tribunal for Rwanda for 1999 and the comments of the Advisory Committee thereon in its report,

Taking note also of Security Council resolution 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000 concerning the election of two judges of the International Tribunal for Rwanda and the assignment of two of the judges elected or appointed in accordance with article 12 of the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda to be members of the Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Decides that the budget of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 shall be biennialized, on an experimental basis, for the period 2002-2003, also decides to keep the matter of the biennialization under review, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session on the results of the experiment and the impact on the functioning of the Tribunal;

3. Notes with satisfaction that the benefits of this provisional reform could include the use of two-year employment contracts at the International Tribunal for Rwanda;

4. Welcomes recent improvements in the functioning of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, and encourages continued efforts to address areas where improvement is needed;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide in his proposed budget, with the involvement of all organs of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, workload data for the budget period so as to give more justification for its resource requirements, and also requests the Secretary-General to include in his budget presentation information on budgetary requirements, including targets for recruitment, training, judicial scheduling and performance standards for support activities;

6. Welcomes the actions taken so far to address the issue of dilatory motions and pleadings, which have the effect of lengthening trial proceedings, and encourages the International Tribunal for Rwanda to take further measures to improve the monitoring and oversight of defence counsel;

7. Endorses the recommendation of the Advisory Committee that the judicial activities of the International Tribunal for Rwanda should have priority over public relations activities and attendance at external meetings;

8. Also endorses the recommendation of the Advisory Committee in paragraph 23 of its report, and requests the Secretary-General to undertake a study, with the involvement of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, to indicate whether it is possible to state the likely date or dates for the completion of the mandate of the Tribunal, and to report thereon in the context of the next proposed budget;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session a report on the likely long-term financial obligations of the United Nations with regard to the enforcement of sentences;

10. Approves the budgetary recommendations of the Advisory Committee as contained in paragraph 66 of its report and the additional budgetary recommendations of the Advisory Committee arising from Security Council resolution 1329(2000), as presented orally by the Chairman of the Advisory Committee to the Fifth Committee;

11. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 a total amount of 93,974,800 United States dollars gross (85,607,600 dollars net) for 2001;

12. Decides also that the financing of the appropriation for 2001 under the Special Account shall take into account the actual unencumbered balance of 2,937,000 dollars gross (1,988,700 dollars net) as at the end of 1999, and the estimated unencumbered balance of 2 million dollars gross (1,816,000 dollars net) which was taken into account in resolution 54/240 A, as well as the amount of 2,667,000 dollars gross (2,667,000 dollars net), being the interest and other miscellaneous income recorded for the biennium 1998-1999, which shall be set off against the aggregate amount of the appropriation, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

13. Decides further that the financing of the appropriation for 2001 under the Special Account shall also take into account an amount of 4,237,100 dollars gross (3,851,900 dollars net), being the estimated unencumbered balance as at the end of 2000, which shall also be set off against the aggregate amount of the appropriation, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

14. Decides to apportion the amount of 43,066,850 dollars gross (39,458,000 dollars net) among Member States in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for 2001, as set out in its resolution 55/5 B of 23 December 2000;

15. Decides also to apportion the amount of 43,066,850 dollars gross (39,458,000 dollars net) among Member States in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to peacekeeping operations for 2001;

16. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among

Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 14 and 15 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the estimated staff assessment income of 7,217,700 dollars approved for the International Tribunal for Rwanda for 2001.

Chapter III

Legal aspects of international political relations

Throughout 2000, the Preparatory Commission for the International Criminal Court, created by the 1998 United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court to make arrangements for the coming into operation of the Court, finalized the draft texts of the first instruments necessary for the Court's functioning, namely, the rules of procedure and evidence, and the elements of crimes. The General Assembly welcomed that accomplishment, requested that the Commission be reconvened in 2001 to continue its mandate and called on all States to sign, ratify or accede to the 1998 Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.

The International Law Commission kept under review topics suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law. The completed set of articles on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, which the Commission had presented in declaration form to the Assembly in 1999, could contribute to the future elaboration of a convention or other appropriate instrument, the Assembly acknowledged in 2000, and, in pursuit of that possibility, recommended its wide dissemination to Governments for their comments. The Assembly also established an ad hoc committee to further the Commission's work on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property.

In addition to existing anti-terrorist instruments, elaboration of the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism remained under consideration in the Ad Hoc Committee created by the Assembly for that purpose, and elaboration was begun in the Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee of a comprehensive convention on international terrorism. The Assembly condemned all terrorist acts as criminal and unjustifiable. The Security Council reiterated its own condemnation of such acts, irrespective of motive, as well as its readiness to take steps in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to counter terrorist threats to international peace and security.

Following its consideration of information transmitted by several States through the Secretary-General on acts of violence against their diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, the Assembly condemned such acts and urged their investigation and prevention, as well as enhancement of the protection and security of those missions.

Establishment of the International Criminal Court

Throughout 2000, the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1209] established the Court as a permanent institution with the power to exercise jurisdiction over persons for the most serious crimes of international concern—genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and the crime of aggression—remained open for signature at United Nations Headquarters, New York.

The Statute would enter into force after 60 States had become parties to it. As at 31 December, 139 States had signed it and 27 had become parties.

Preparatory Commission

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 54/105 [YUN 1999, p. 1227], the Preparatory Commission for the International Criminal Court, established by the 1998 United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209], held three sessions in New York in 2000: its fourth (13-31 March), fifth (12-30 June) and sixth (27 November-8 December), during which it continued drafting the instruments essential for the Court's functioning.

In March, the Preparatory Commission, in addition to holding consultations on the crime of aggression, devoted its efforts to completing the elaboration of the rules of procedure and evidence, and of the elements of crimes.

In June, the Commission adopted its report covering its work from the first to the fifth sessions [PCNICC/2000/1], with addenda containing the finalized draft texts of those two instruments [PCNICC/2000/1/Add.1,2]. To ensure linguistic consistency among the various language versions, the Commission agreed to allow delegations to submit only linguistic corrections to the Secretariat no later than 15 October 2000 for incorporation in the texts. In addition, the Commission took note of an oral report by the coordinator for the crime of aggression. It established a working group for each of the next three agenda items: the relationship agreement between the Court and the United Nations, the financial regulations of the Court, and the agreement on privileges and immunities of the Court. To facilitate its work, the Commission asked the Secretariat to prepare, for advanced distribution, purely technical drafts including only standard provisions for those instruments.

The Commission began its November/December session by appointing a coordinator for each of the three new items and ended it, on 8 December, by taking note of the coordinators' oral reports, including that by the coordinator for the item on the crime of aggression. The Commission also decided that the working group on the Court's financial regulations should consider issues relating to the composition, tasks and format of the committee on budget and finance of the Assembly of States Parties; rules dealing with drafting the Assembly's budget; establishment of trust funds and other funds; and elaboration of criteria for receiving and utilizing voluntary contributions. It designated contact points for the items on the rules of procedure for the Assembly of States Parties—for which it also appointed a working group and a coordinator—and a budget for the first financial year; and on the basic principles governing a relationship agreement to be negotiated between the Court and the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/55/612], adopted resolution 55/155 without vote [agenda item 162].

Establishment of the International Criminal Court

Recalling its resolutions 47/33 of 25 November 1992, 48/31 of 9 December 1993, 49/53 of 9 December 1994, 50/46 of 11 December 1995, 51/207 of 17 December 1996, 52/160 of 15 December 1997, 53/105 of 8 December 1998 and 54/105 of 9 December 1999,

Noting that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court was adopted on 17 July 1998 and is open for signature in New York at United Nations Headquarters until 31 December 2000, and taking note of the Final Act of the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court done at Rome on 17 July 1998,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted at the Millennium Assembly, in which heads of State and Government stressed the importance of the International Criminal Court,

Noting in particular that the Conference decided to establish a Preparatory Commission for the Court, and that the Commission held three sessions in 1999, from 16 to 26 February, 26 July to 13 August and 29 November to 17 December, and three sessions in 2000, from 13 to 31 March, 12 to 30 June and 27 November to 8 December,

Bearing in mind the mandate of the Preparatory Commission, as set out in resolution F adopted by the Conference, with regard to the preparation of proposals for practical arrangements for the establishment and coming into operation of the Court,

Recalling, with regard to future work of the Preparatory Commission and related working groups, the decision agreed upon by the Commission, referred to in paragraph 14 of the summary of the proceedings of its fifth session, to establish three new working groups, in addition to the working group on the crime of aggression,

Recognizing the continuing need for making available adequate resources and secretariat services to the Preparatory Commission in order to enable it to discharge its functions efficiently and expeditiously,

Emphasizing the need to make the necessary arrangements for the commencement of the functions of the International Criminal Court in order to ensure its effective operation,

Noting that a growing number of States have deposited their instruments of ratification and that a significant number of States have signed the Statute,

1. Reiterates the historic significance of the adoption of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

2. Calls upon all States to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, as appropriate, and encourages efforts aimed at promoting awareness of the results of the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court and of the provisions of the Statute;

3. Welcomes the important work accomplished by the Preparatory Commission in the completion of the part of the mandate relating to the draft texts of the rules of procedure and evidence and the elements of crimes, as required under resolution F, and notes in this respect the importance of the growing participation in the work of the working group on the crime of aggression;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to reconvene the Preparatory Commission, in accordance with resolution F, from 26 February to 9 March and from 24 September to 5 October 2001, to continue to carry out the mandate of that resolution and, in that connection, to discuss ways to enhance the effectiveness and acceptance of the Court;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to make available to the Preparatory Commission secretariat services, including the preparation of working documents if so requested by the Commission, to enable it to perform its functions;

6. Further requests the Secretary-General to invite, as observers to the Preparatory Commission, representatives of organizations and other entities that have received a standing invitation from the General Assembly, pursuant to its relevant resolutions, to participate in the capacity of observers in its sessions and work, and also to invite as observers to the Commission representatives of interested regional intergovernmental organizations and other interested international bodies, including the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda;

7. Notes that non-governmental organizations may participate in the work of the Preparatory Commission by attending its plenary and its other open meetings, in accordance with the rules of procedure of the Commission, receiving copies of the official documents and making available their materials to delegates;

8. Encourages States to make voluntary contributions to the trust funds established pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 51/207 and 52/160, the mandates of which were expanded pursuant to Assembly resolution 53/105, towards meeting the costs of the participation in the work of the Preparatory Commission of the least developed countries and of those developing countries not covered by the trust fund established pursuant to resolution 51/207;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Establishment of the International Criminal Court".

International Law Commission

The International Law Commission (ILC) held its fifty-second session in Geneva from 1 May to 9 June and from 10 July to 18 August. The thirty-sixth session of the International Law Seminar (10-28 July) was held during the session. It was attended by 24 participants, mostly from developing countries, who observed Commission meetings, attended specially arranged lectures and participated in working groups on specific topics.

At its session, ILC continued to consider the Special Rapporteurs' reports on proposals relating to draft articles or draft guidelines for the formulation of instruments on State responsibility, international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law (prevention of transboundary damage from hazardous activities), unilateral acts of States, diplomatic protection and reservations to treaties (see below for details under those topics). It was assisted by working groups and a Drafting Committee. Draft articles proposed by the Special Rapporteurs assigned to report on those topics were reproduced in ILC's report on the work of its 2000 session [A/55/10].

In furtherance of cooperation with other bodies concerned with international law, ILC continued traditional information exchanges with the Inter-American Juridical Committee, the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee, the European Committee on Legal Cooperation, the Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law of the Council of Europe, the International Court of Justice and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC).

As called for by Assembly resolution 54/111 [YUN 1999, p. 1229], ILC took measures to enhance its efficiency and productivity. On the basis of agreed criteria for the selection of topics for inclusion in its long-term programme of work, it adopted the Planning Group's report listing the following items for inclusion, together with the corresponding syllabuses describing their possible contents: responsibility of international organizations, effects of armed conflict on treaties, shared natural resources of States, expulsion of aliens, and risk ensuing from fragmentation of international law. To facilitate membership attendance, it decided to split each session of its next five-year mandate (2002-2006) into two half sessions of equal duration. In principle, ILC would continue to meet in Geneva; to enhance its relationship with the Sixth Committee, however, one or two half sessions could be held in New York towards the middle of the mandate period. Unless significant reasons required otherwise, the length of sessions in the initial years of its mandate should be 10 weeks and 12 in the final years.

ILC decided that its next session, the last of the current mandate, would be a 12-week split session, at the United Nations Office at Geneva, from 23 April to 1 June and from 2 July to 10 August 2001.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/609], adopted resolution 55/152 without vote [agenda item 159].

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-second session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-second session,

Emphasizing the importance of furthering the codification and progressive development of international law as a means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the desirability of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission for closer examination, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission to further enhance their contribution to the progressive development of international law and its codification.

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Welcoming the holding of the International Law Seminar, and noting with appreciation the voluntary contributions made to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar,

Stressing the usefulness of structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention to each of the main topics dealt with in the report,

Wishing to enhance further the interaction between the Sixth Committee as a body of governmental representatives and the International Law Commission as a body of independent legal experts, with a view to improving the dialogue between the two organs,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-second session;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at its fifty-second session, in particular with respect to the topic "State responsibility", and encourages the Commission to complete its work on this topic during its fifty-third session, taking into account the views expressed by Governments during the debates in the Sixth Committee at the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly, and any written comments that may be submitted by 31 January 2001;

3. Draws the attention of Governments to the importance for the International Law Commission of having their views on the various aspects involved in the topics on the agenda of the Commission, in particular on all the specific issues identified in chapter III of its report;

4. Reiterates its invitation to Governments, within the context of paragraph 3 above, to respond, to the extent possible, in writing by 28 February 2001 to the questionnaire and requests for materials on unilateral acts of States circulated by the Secretariat to all Governments on 30 September 1999 and 2 October 2000;

5. Also reiterates its invitation to Governments to submit the most relevant national legislation, decisions of domestic courts and State practice relevant to diplomatic protection in order to assist the International Law Commission in its work on the topic "Diplomatic protection";

6. Recommends that, taking into account the comments and observations of Governments, whether in writing or expressed orally in debates in the General Assembly, the International Law Commission continue its work on the topics in its current programme;

7. Notes with appreciation the work done by the International Law Commission at its fifty-second session on the topic "International liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law", and requests the Commission to resume consideration of the liability aspects of the topic as soon as the second reading of the draft articles on the prevention of transboundary damage from hazardous activities is completed, bearing in mind the interrelationship between the prevention and the liability aspects of the topic and taking into account developments in international law and comments by Governments;

8. Takes note of paragraphs 726 to 733 of the report of the International Law Commission with regard to its long-term programme of work, and the syllabuses on new topics annexed to the report;

9. Invites the International Law Commission to continue taking measures to enhance its efficiency and productivity;

10. Takes note of paragraphs 734 and 735 of the report with regard to the length, nature and place of future sessions of the International Law Commission, in which specific recommendations are made to continue to increase the efficiency and productivity of its work, to facilitate the attendance by its members and to enhance the relationship between the Commission and the Sixth Committee;

11. Also takes note of paragraph 736 of the report, and decides that the next session of the International Law Commission shall be held at the United Nations Office at Geneva from 23 April to 1 June and from 2 July to 10 August 2001;

12. Stresses the desirability of further enhancing the dialogue between the International Law Commission and the Sixth Committee, and in this context encourages, inter alia, the holding of informal discussions between the members of the Sixth Committee and those members of the Commission attending the fifty-sixth session of the General Assembly;

13. Reiterates its request in paragraph 11 of its resolution 54/111 of 9 December 1999, and emphasizes the need to implement cost-saving measures such as those described in paragraph 639 of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-first session;

14. Requests the International Law Commission to continue to pay special attention to indicating in its annual report, for each topic, any specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments, either in the Sixth Committee or in written form, would be of particular interest in providing effective guidance for the Commission in its further work;

15. Also requests the International Law Commission to continue the implementation of article 16, paragraph (e), and article 26, paragraphs 1 and 2, of its statute in order to further strengthen cooperation between the Commission and other bodies concerned with international law, having in mind the usefulness of such cooperation, and in that regard takes note with appreciation of comments made by the Commission in paragraphs 737 to 741 of its report;

16. Notes that consulting with national organizations and individual experts concerned with international law may assist Governments in considering whether to make comments and observations on drafts submitted by the International Law Commission and in formulating their comments and observations;

17. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and those concerning the summary records and other documentation of the International Law Commission;

18. Notes with appreciation the inclusion of information about the work of the International Law Commission on its web site;

19. Expresses the hope that the International Law Seminar will continue to be held in connection with the sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants, in particular from developing countries, will be given the opportunity to attend the Seminar, and appeals to States to continue to make urgently needed voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the International Law Seminar with adequate services, including interpretation, as required, and encourages him to continue considering ways to improve the structure and content of the Seminar;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly, together with such written statements as delegations may circulate in conjunction with their oral statements, and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate, following established practice;

22. Requests the Secretariat to circulate to States, as soon as possible after the conclusion of the session of the International Law Commission, chapter II of its report containing a summary of the work of that session and the draft articles adopted on either first or second reading by the Commission;

23. Recommends that the debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the fifty-sixth session of the General Assembly commence on 29 October 2001.

State succession

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 54/112 [YUN 1999, p. 1230], the item "Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States" was included in the agenda of the Assembly's fifty-fifth (2000) session to allow consideration of the final draft preamble and draft articles on that subject, which ILC had recommended for the Assembly's adoption in the form of a declaration in 1999 [ibid.].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/610], adopted resolution 55/153 without vote [agenda item 160].

Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter IV of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-first session, which contains final draft articles on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States,

Noting that the International Law Commission decided to recommend the draft articles to the General Assembly for their adoption in the form of a declaration,

Recalling its resolution 54/112 of 9 December 1999, in which it decided to consider at its fifty-fifth session the draft articles on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States with a view to their adoption as a declaration,

Considering that the work of the International Law Commission on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States would provide a useful guide for practice in dealing with this issue,

Acknowledging that the work of the International Law Commission on this topic could contribute to the elaboration of a convention or other appropriate instrument in the future, and reiterating its invitation, contained in its resolution 54/112, for Governments to submit comments and observations on the question of a convention on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for its valuable work on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States;

2. Takes note of the articles on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, presented by the International Law Commission in the form of a declaration, the text of which is annexed to the present resolution;

3. Invites Governments to take into account, as appropriate, the provisions contained in the articles in dealing with issues of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States;

4. Recommends that all efforts be made for the wide dissemination of the text of the articles;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States".

ANNEX

Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States

Preamble

Considering that problems of nationality arising from succession of States concern the international community,

Emphasizing that nationality is essentially governed by internal law within the limits set by international law,

Recognizing that in matters concerning nationality, due account should be taken both of the legitimate interests of States and those of individuals,

Recalling that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights of 1948 proclaimed the right of every person to a nationality,

Recalling also that the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights of 1966 and the Convention on the Rights of the Child of 1989 recognize the right of every child to acquire a nationality,

Emphasizing that the human rights and fundamental freedoms of persons whose nationality may be affected by a succession of States must be fully respected,

Bearing in mind the provisions of the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness of 1961, the Vienna Convention on Succession of States in Respect of Treaties of 1978 and the Vienna Convention on Succession of States in Respect of State Property, Archives and Debts of 1983,

Convinced of the need for the codification and progressive development of the rules of international law concerning nationality in relation to the succession of

States as a means for ensuring greater juridical security for States and for individuals,

Part I. General provisions

Article 1

Right to a nationality

Every individual who, on the date of the succession of States, had the nationality of the predecessor State, irrespective of the mode of acquisition of that nationality, has the right to the nationality of at least one of the States concerned, in accordance with the present articles.

Article 2

Use of terms

For the purposes of the present articles:

(a) "Succession of States" means the replacement of one State by another in the responsibility for the international relations of territory;

(b) "Predecessor State" means the State which has been replaced by another State on the occurrence of a succession of States;

(c) "Successor State" means the State which has replaced another State on the occurrence of a succession of States;

(d) "State concerned" means the predecessor State or the successor State, as the case may be;

(e) "Third State" means any State other than the predecessor State or the successor State;

(f) "Person concerned" means every individual who, on the date of the succession of States, had the nationality of the predecessor State and whose nationality may be affected by such succession;

(g) "Date of the succession of States" means the date upon which the successor State replaced the predecessor State in the responsibility for the international relations of the territory to which the succession of States relates.

Article 3

Cases of succession of States covered by the present articles

The present articles apply only to the effects of a succession of States occurring in conformity with international law and, in particular, with the principles of international law embodied in the Charter of the United Nations.

Article 4

Prevention of statelessness

States concerned shall take all appropriate measures to prevent persons who, on the date of the succession of States, had the nationality of the predecessor State from becoming stateless as a result of such succession.

Article 5

Presumption of nationality

Subject to the provisions of the present articles, persons concerned having their habitual residence in the territory affected by the succession of States are presumed to acquire the nationality of the successor State on the date of such succession.

Article 6

Legislation on nationality and other connected issues

Each State concerned should, without undue delay, enact legislation on nationality and other connected issues arising in relation to the succession of States consistent with the provisions of the present articles. It should take all appropriate measures to ensure that persons concerned will be apprised, within a reasonable time period, of the effect of its legislation on their nationality, of any choices they may have thereunder, as well as of the consequences that the exercise of such choices will have on their status.

Article 7

Effective date

The attribution of nationality in relation to the succession of States, as well as the acquisition of nationality following the exercise of an option, shall take effect on the date of such succession, if persons concerned would otherwise be stateless during the period between the date of the succession of States and such attribution or acquisition of nationality.

Article 8

Persons concerned having their habitual residence in another State

1. A successor State does not have the obligation to attribute its nationality to persons concerned who have their habitual residence in another State and also have the nationality of that or any other State.

2. A successor State shall not attribute its nationality to persons concerned who have their habitual residence in another State against the will of the persons concerned unless they would otherwise become stateless.

Article 9

Renunciation of the nationality of another State as a condition for attribution of nationality

When a person concerned who is qualified to acquire the nationality of a successor State has the nationality of another State concerned, the former State may make the attribution of its nationality dependent on the renunciation by such person of the nationality of the latter State. However, such requirement shall not be applied in a manner which would result in rendering the person concerned stateless, even if only temporarily.

Article 10

Loss of nationality upon the voluntary acquisition of the nationality of another State

1. A predecessor State may provide that persons concerned who, in relation to the succession of States, voluntarily acquire the nationality of a successor State shall lose its nationality.

2. A successor State may provide that persons concerned who, in relation to the succession of States, voluntarily acquire the nationality of another successor State or, as the case may be, retain the nationality of the predecessor State shall lose its nationality acquired in relation to such succession.

Article 11

Respect for the will of persons concerned

1. States concerned shall give consideration to the will of persons concerned whenever those persons are qualified to acquire the nationality of two or more States concerned.

2. Each State concerned shall grant a right to opt for its nationality to persons concerned who have appropriate connection with that State if those persons would otherwise become stateless as a result of the succession of States.

3. When persons entitled to the right of option have exercised such right, the State whose nationality they have opted for shall attribute its nationality to such persons.

4. When persons entitled to the right of option have exercised such right, the State whose nationality they have renounced shall withdraw its nationality from such persons, unless they would thereby become stateless.

5. States concerned should provide a reasonable time limit for the exercise of the right of option.

Article 12

Unity of a family

Where the acquisition or loss of nationality in relation to the succession of States would impair the unity of a family, States concerned shall take all appropriate measures to allow that family to remain together or to be reunited.

Article 13

Child born after the succession of States

A child of a person concerned, born after the date of the succession of States, who has not acquired any nationality, has the right to the nationality of the State concerned on whose territory that child was born.

Article 14

Status of habitual residents

1. The status of persons concerned as habitual residents shall not be affected by the succession of States.

2. A State concerned shall take all necessary measures to allow persons concerned who, because of events connected with the succession of States, were forced to leave their habitual residence on its territory to return thereto.

Article 15

Non-discrimination

States concerned shall not deny persons concerned the right to retain or acquire a nationality or the right of option upon the succession of States by discriminating on any ground.

Article 16

Prohibition of arbitrary decisions concerning nationality issues

Persons concerned shall not be arbitrarily deprived of the nationality of the predecessor State, or arbitrarily denied the right to acquire the nationality of the successor State or any right of option, to which they are entitled in relation to the succession of States.

Article 17

Procedures relating to nationality issues

Applications relating to the acquisition, retention or renunciation of nationality or to the exercise of the right of option, in relation to the succession of States, shall be processed without undue delay. Relevant decisions shall be issued in writing and shall be open to effective administrative or judicial review.

Article 18

Exchange of information, consultation and negotiation

1. States concerned shall exchange information and consult in order to identify any detrimental effects on persons concerned with respect to their nationality and other connected issues regarding their status as a result of the succession of States.

2. States concerned shall, when necessary, seek a solution to eliminate or mitigate such detrimental effects by negotiation and, as appropriate, through agreement.

Article 19

Other States

1. Nothing in the present articles requires States to treat persons concerned having no effective link with a State concerned as nationals of that State, unless this would result in treating those persons as if they were stateless.

2. Nothing in the present articles precludes States from treating persons concerned, who have become stateless as a result of the succession of States, as nationals of the State concerned whose nationality they would be entitled to acquire or retain, if such treatment is beneficial to those persons.

Part II. Provisions relating to specific categories of succession of States

Section 1. Transfer of part of the territory

Article 20

Attribution of the nationality of the successor State and withdrawal of the nationality of the predecessor State

When part of the territory of a State is transferred by that State to another State, the successor State shall attribute its nationality to the persons concerned who have their habitual residence in the transferred territory and the predecessor State shall withdraw its nationality from such persons, unless otherwise indicated by the exercise of the right of option which such persons shall be granted. The predecessor State shall not, however, withdraw its nationality before such persons acquire the nationality of the successor State.

Section 2. Unification of States

Article 21

Attribution of the nationality of the successor State

Subject to the provisions of article 8, when two or more States unite and so form one successor State, irrespective of whether the successor State is a new State or whether its personality is identical to that of one of the States which have united, the successor State shall attribute its nationality to all persons who, on the date of the succession of States, had the nationality of a predecessor State.

Section 3. Dissolution of a State

Article 22

Attribution of the nationality of the successor States

When a State dissolves and ceases to exist and the various parts of the territory of the predecessor State form two or more successor States, each successor State shall, unless otherwise indicated by the exercise of a right of option, attribute its nationality to:

(a) Persons concerned having their habitual residence in its territory; and

(b) Subject to the provisions of article 8:

(i) Persons concerned not covered by subparagraph (a) having an appropriate legal connection with a constituent unit of the predecessor State that has become part of that successor State;

- (ii) Persons concerned not entitled to a nationality of any State concerned under subparagraphs (a) and (b) (i) having their habitual residence in a third State, who were born in or, before leaving the predecessor State, had their last habitual residence in what has become the territory of that successor State or having any other appropriate connection with that successor State.

Article 23

Granting of the right of option by the successor States

1. Successor States shall grant a right of option to persons concerned covered by the provisions of article 22 who are qualified to acquire the nationality of two or more successor States.

2. Each successor State shall grant a right to opt for its nationality to persons concerned who are not covered by the provisions of article 22.

Section 4. Separation of part or parts of the territory

Article 24

Attribution of the nationality of the successor State

When part or parts of the territory of a State separate from that State and form one or more successor States while the predecessor State continues to exist, a successor State shall, unless otherwise indicated by the exercise of a right of option, attribute its nationality to:

- (a) Persons concerned having their habitual residence in its territory; and
- (b) Subject to the provisions of article 8:
  - (i) Persons concerned not covered by subparagraph (a) having an appropriate legal connection with a constituent unit of the predecessor State that has become part of that successor State;
  - (ii) Persons concerned not entitled to a nationality of any State concerned under subparagraphs (a) and (b) (i) having their habitual residence in a third State, who were born in or, before leaving the predecessor State, had their last habitual residence in what has become the territory of that successor State or having any other appropriate connection with that successor State.

Article 25

Withdrawal of the nationality of the predecessor State

1. The predecessor State shall withdraw its nationality from persons concerned qualified to acquire the nationality of the successor State in accordance with article 24. It shall not, however, withdraw its nationality before such persons acquire the nationality of the successor State.

2. Unless otherwise indicated by the exercise of a right of option, the predecessor State shall not, however, withdraw its nationality from persons referred to in paragraph 1 who:

- (a) Have their habitual residence in its territory;
- (b) Are not covered by subparagraph (a) and have an appropriate legal connection with a constituent unit of the predecessor State that has remained part of the predecessor State;
- (c) Have their habitual residence in a third State, and were born in or, before leaving the predecessor State, had their last habitual residence in what has remained part of the territory of the predecessor State or have any other appropriate connection with that State.

Article 26

Granting of the right of option by the predecessor and the successor States

Predecessor and successor States shall grant a right of option to all persons concerned covered by the provisions of article 24 and paragraph 2 of article 25 who are qualified to have the nationality of both the predecessor and successor States or of two or more successor States.

State responsibility

ILC, at its 2000 session [A/55/10], considered the comments and observations received from Governments on the draft articles on State responsibility provisionally adopted on first reading [YUN 1996, p. 1207] and the third report of the Special Rapporteur, James Crawford (Australia). That report continued the task, begun in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1213], of considering the draft articles in the light of comments by Governments and developments in State practice, judicial decisions and literature. It contained the Special Rapporteur's proposals for Part Two, Part Two bis and Part Four of the draft articles dealing, respectively, with the legal consequences of an internationally wrongful act of a State, the implementation of State responsibility and general provisions, with the recommendation that the Drafting Committee produce a complete text of the draft articles by the end of the session. He further recommended that Part Three, dealing with dispute settlement, be considered in general terms after adoption of the entire draft, since to include dispute settlement provisions would be pointless unless the draft was submitted to the General Assembly in the form of a convention.

ILC referred to the Drafting Committee the draft articles contained in: chapters I, II and III of Part Two, on general principles, forms of reparation and serious breaches of obligations to the international community as a whole, together with two footnote texts pertaining to chapter III; chapters I and II of Part Two bis, on invocation of the responsibility of a State and countermeasures; and Part Four. Having completed consideration of those chapters, the Drafting Committee provisionally adopted the entire set of draft articles. ILC took note of the Committee's report and requested transmittal of the provisionally adopted texts to Governments for their comments and observations, with a view to completing the second reading at its 2001 session.

International liability

In accordance with its 1999 decision to defer consideration of the question of international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law [YUN 1999, p. 1231], ILC, at its 2000 session [A/55/10], proceeded to consider the sub-topic of the prevention of transboundary damage from hazardous activities. It heard the oral report of the working group assigned to examine the comments and observations received from five Governments on the set of 17 draft articles on the sub-topic, adopted on first reading in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1214]. On the basis of the working group's discussion, the Special Rapporteur, Pemmaraju Sreenivasa Rao (India), presented his third report containing a draft preamble and a revised set of draft articles on prevention, along with the recommendation that they be adopted as a framework convention. It addressed questions such as the scope of the topic, its relationship with liability, the relationship between an equitable balance of interests among States concerned and the duty of prevention, as well as the duality of the regimes of liability and State responsibility. ILC referred the draft preamble and articles to the Drafting Committee.

Unilateral acts of States

ILC, at its 2000 session [A/55/10], examined the third report on unilateral acts of States by Special Rapporteur Victor Rodríguez Cedeño (Venezuela), who, in preparing his report, took into account the comments made in the working group on the subject. He proposed new draft articles as follows: 1, on the definition of unilateral acts, to supersede the previous draft article 1 on the scope of draft articles; 2, on the capacity of States to formulate unilateral acts; 3, on persons authorized to formulate unilateral acts on behalf of the State; 4, on subsequent confirmation of an act formulated by a person not authorized for that purpose; and 5, on the invalidity of unilateral acts. He also proposed deletion of previous draft article 6, on expression of consent, and examined the question of silence and unilateral acts. ILC decided to refer new draft articles 1 to 4 to the Drafting Committee and new draft article 5 to the working group.

In addition, ILC had before it the Secretary-General's report containing the replies received from Governments to the questionnaire circulated by the Secretariat pursuant to General Assembly resolution 54/III [YUN 1999, p. 1229] on their practice in respect of unilateral acts of States and their position on certain aspects of ILC's study of the topic. As only 12 States had replied, ILC agreed that the Secretariat should renew its appeal to Governments to respond to the questionnaire.

International State relations and international law

Jurisdictional immunities of States and their property

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 54/101 [YUN 1999, p. 1232], the open-ended working group of the Sixth Committee established under resolution 53/98 [YUN 1998, p. 1215] met in 2000 (New York, 6-10 November) to continue its work on the future form of the 1991 draft articles adopted by ILC on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property [YUN 1991, p. 829]. Among the documents before it were the 1991 draft articles, the related 1999 ILC report annexing its working group's report on the topic [YUN 1999, p. 1232], and comments submitted by Governments at the Assembly's invitation since 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 992], including those received from four Governments in 2000 [A/55/298].

The working group took up the outstanding substantive issues it had previously identified, namely: concept of a State for purposes of immunity; criteria for determining the commercial character of a contract or transaction; concept of a State enterprise or other entity in relation to commercial transactions; contracts of employment; and measures of constraint against State property. Discussions were based on an informal working paper containing a proposed text and alternative proposed texts for each of those issues. The working group Chairman issued his report on the group's deliberations in November [A/C.6/55/L.12], containing the revised draft article texts resulting from the exchange of views on the issues, suggestions for convening a more formal body to work towards a final document on the topic, as well as texts on the basic concepts and alternative articles that could serve as a basis for further discussions.

The Chairman also reported orally on the work accomplished by the group before the Sixth Committee during its consideration (15-16 November) of the Assembly's agenda item "Convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property".

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/607], adopted resolution 55/150 without vote [agenda item 157].

Convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property

*The General Assembly,
Recalling its resolution 54/101 of 9 December 1999,*

Having considered the report of the Working Group on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property of the International Law Commission, set forth in the annex to the report of the Commission on the work of its fifty-first session,

Having considered also the reports presented to the Sixth Committee by the Chairman of the open-ended working group of the Committee established under resolutions 53/98 of 8 December 1998 and 54/101,

Having considered further the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Working Group on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property of the International Law Commission, set forth in the annex to the report of the Commission on the work of its fifty-first session;

2. Urges States, if they have not yet done so, to submit their comments to the Secretary-General in accordance with General Assembly resolution 49/61 of 9 December 1994, and also invites States to submit in writing to the Secretary-General, by 1 August 2001, their comments on the reports of the open-ended working group of the Sixth Committee established under resolutions 53/98 and 54/101;

3. Decides to establish an Ad Hoc Committee on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property, open also to participation by States members of the specialized agencies, to further the work done, consolidate areas of agreement and resolve outstanding issues with a view to elaborating a generally acceptable instrument based on the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property adopted by the International Law Commission at its forty-third session, and also on the discussions of the open-ended working group of the Sixth Committee and their results;

4. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall meet for two weeks in March 2002;

5. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property".

International terrorism

Convention for suppression of nuclear terrorism

As decided by General Assembly resolution 54/110 [YUN 1999, p. 1238], the Ad Hoc Committee established by resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208] convened for its fourth session (New York, 14-18 February) [A/55/37] to continue to elaborate a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism and to address the question of convening a high-level conference under UN auspices to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations.

For the first item, the Committee had before it the 1998 revised draft text of the instrument [YUN 1998, p. 1216], as proposed by the Friends of the Chairman (composed of members of the Committee's Bureau). The coordinator of the consultations on the draft, who had conducted inter-session bilateral consultations on the remaining issues relating to the scope of the convention, felt that, since the delegations' positions were not sufficiently close, it was not yet time to convene open-ended informal consultations to reach agreement on a text. Several delegations supported holding a high-level conference under UN auspices as described, which could focus on strengthening the existing framework of international cooperation and on preventive measures. Doubt was expressed, however, as to the practical benefits of such a conference. Alternate forums were suggested, such as a special Assembly session, or part of an Assembly session set aside for the purpose and attended at a high level, for which the Ad Hoc Committee could serve as the preparatory committee.

While the question of the elaboration of a comprehensive international convention on international terrorism was not before the Committee for consideration, it was pointed out that work on that instrument would be facilitated by the early completion of the Committee's current two agenda items. Meanwhile, a revised text of the proposed draft convention had been informally circulated by India for delegations' comments.

Measures to eliminate terrorism

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report with later addendum [A/55/179 & Add.1], prepared in response to General Assembly resolution 50/53 [YUN 1995, p. 1330], the Secretary-General described measures to eliminate international terrorism. The report contained information received on measures taken at the national and international levels by 24 States and eight international organizations and UN agencies and bodies in implementation of the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, approved by resolution 49/60 [YUN 1994, p. 1294]. It listed 19 international instruments pertaining to terrorism, indicating the status of State participation in each. It provided information on workshops and training courses on combating crimes connected with international terrorism; texts of laws and regulations to prevent and suppress terrorism; and progress in the publication of a compendium of such texts.

Working group report. A working group of the Sixth Committee convened (New York, 25 September-6 October) to begin work on the elaboration of a comprehensive convention on international terrorism within a comprehensive legal framework of relevant conventions, in accordance with the Assembly's decision in resolution 54/110 [YUN 1999, p. 1238]. Documents before the group included the 1998 revised text of the draft convention on the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism, together with the Ad Hoc Committee's report on its 2000 session [A/55/37]; and the revised version of the working document entitled "Draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism" [A/C.6/55/1] submitted by India.

The group conducted a first reading of the preamble and articles 1 to 22 of the draft convention. Discussions of those texts led to oral and written amendments and further revisions of some of the draft articles, subsequently annexed to the group's report to the Sixth Committee [A/C.6/55/L.2]. The group recommended continuation of its work on the draft comprehensive convention and of the coordinator's consultations on the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism.

Communications. Submitted to the Sixth Committee were a number of communications circulated to the General Assembly and the Security Council by individual or groups of Member States drawing attention to, among other matters: the conflict in Afghanistan that had turned that country into a training ground for various terrorist groups [A/55/86-S/2000/604]; the 5 July Dushanbe Declaration confirming the parties' resolve jointly to combat international terrorism and to conduct training in methods of combating terrorism [A/55/133-S/2000/682]; the renewed commitment of the G-8 group of countries to fight all forms of terrorism, including hostage-taking [A/55/162-S/2000/715]; the fact that terrorism and banditry in Central Asia and Chechnya (Russia), and the political and military confrontation in Afghanistan were links in the same chain [A/55/326-S/2000/834]; inclusion of the question of creating an international anti-terrorism centre in the joint programme of action of the group of States comprising Azerbaijan, Georgia, the Republic of Moldova, Ukraine and Uzbekistan [A/55/434-S/2000/926]; the 3 October Declaration on Strategic Partnership between India and the Russian Federation, whereby the parties agreed to cooperate in the fight against terrorism [A/55/473 & Corr.1]; the 11 October Bishkek Statement urging the expeditious settlement of the Afghan conflict, the main source of instability in the Central Asian region [A/55/533-S/2000/1054]; the 18 September communiqué of the Organization of the Islamic Conference circulated under various Assembly agenda items, among them measures to eliminate international terrorism [A/55/541-S/2000/1067]; and two separate terrorist attacks in Jerusalem and near Kfar Darom, south of Gaza [A/55/540-S/2000/1065, A/55/634-S/2000/1108].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/614], adopted resolution 55/158 by recorded vote (151-0-2) [agenda item 164].

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling all General Assembly and Security Council resolutions on measures to eliminate international terrorism,

Convinced of the importance of the consideration of measures to eliminate international terrorism by the General Assembly as the universal organ having competence to do so,

Recalling the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Deeply disturbed by the persistence of terrorist acts, which have been carried out worldwide,

Stressing the need to strengthen further international cooperation between States and between international organizations and agencies, regional organizations and arrangements and the United Nations in order to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, in accordance with the principles of the Charter, international law and relevant international conventions,

Mindful of the need to enhance the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism, and of the proposals of the Secretary-General to enhance the role of the Organization in this respect,

Recalling the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to resolution 49/60 of 9 December 1994, wherein the General Assembly encouraged States to review urgently the scope of the existing international legal provisions on the prevention, repression and elimination of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, with the aim of ensuring that there was a comprehensive legal framework covering all aspects of the matter,

Taking note of the final document of the Thirteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Cartagena, Colombia, on 8 and 9 April 2000, which reiterated the collective position of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries on terrorism and reaffirmed the previous initiative of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, calling for an international summit conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, and other relevant initiatives,

Recalling its decision in resolution 54/110 of 9 December 1999 that the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996 should address the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Noting regional efforts to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, including through the elaboration of and adherence to regional conventions,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General, the report of the Ad Hoc Committee and the report of the Working Group of the Sixth Committee established pursuant to resolution 54/110,

1. Strongly condemns all acts, methods and practices of terrorism as criminal and unjustifiable, wherever and by whomsoever committed;

2. Reiterates that criminal acts intended or calculated to provoke a state of terror in the general public, a group of persons or particular persons for political purposes are in any circumstances unjustifiable, whatever the considerations of a political, philosophical, ideological, racial, ethnic, religious or other nature that may be invoked to justify them;

3. Reiterates its call upon all States to adopt further measures in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant provisions of international law, including international standards of human rights, to prevent terrorism and to strengthen international cooperation in combating terrorism and, to that end, to consider in particular the implementation of the measures set out in paragraphs 3 (a) to (f) of resolution 51/210;

4. Also reiterates its call upon all States, with the aim of enhancing the efficient implementation of relevant legal instruments, to intensify, as and where appropriate, the exchange of information on facts related to terrorism and, in so doing, to avoid the dissemination of inaccurate or unverified information;

5. Reiterates its call upon States to refrain from financing, encouraging, providing training for or otherwise supporting terrorist activities;

6. Reaffirms that international cooperation as well as actions by States to combat terrorism should be conducted in conformity with the principles of the Charter, international law and relevant international conventions;

7. Urges all States that have not yet done so to consider, as a matter of priority, becoming parties to relevant conventions and protocols as referred to in paragraph 6 of resolution 51/210, as well as the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings, and the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, and calls upon all States to enact, as appropriate, domestic legislation necessary to implement the provisions of those conventions and protocols, to ensure that the jurisdiction of their courts enables them to bring to trial the perpetrators of terrorist acts, and to cooperate with and provide support and assistance to other States and relevant international and regional organizations to that end;

8. Notes with appreciation and satisfaction that, during the fifty-fourth session of the General Assembly and the Millennium Assembly, a number of States became parties to the relevant conventions and protocols referred to in paragraph 7 above, thereby realizing the objective of wider acceptance and implementation of those conventions;

9. Reaffirms the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism contained in the annex to resolution 49/60 and the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism contained in the annex to resolution 51/210, and calls upon all States to implement them;

10. Welcomes the efforts of the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the Centre for International Crime Prevention in Vienna, after reviewing existing possibilities within the United Nations system, to enhance, through its mandate, the capabilities of the United Nations in the prevention of terrorism;

11. Invites States that have not yet done so to submit to the Secretary-General information on their national laws and regulations regarding the prevention and suppression of acts of international terrorism;

12. Invites regional intergovernmental organizations to submit to the Secretary-General information on the measures they have adopted at the regional level to eliminate international terrorism;

13. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996 shall continue to elaborate a comprehensive convention on international terrorism and shall continue its efforts to resolve the outstanding issues relating to the elaboration of a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism, as a means of further developing a comprehensive legal framework of conventions dealing with international terrorism, and that it shall keep on its agenda the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

14. Also decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall meet from 12 to 23 February 2001 to continue the elaboration of a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism, with appropriate time allocated to the continued consideration of outstanding issues relating to the elaboration of a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism, that it shall keep on its agenda the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, and that the work shall continue during the fifty-sixth session of the General Assembly between 15 and 26 October 2001, within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Ad Hoc Committee with the necessary facilities for the performance of its work;

16. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session in the event of the completion of the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism;

17. Also requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on progress made in the implementation of its mandate;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Measures to eliminate international terrorism".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 55/158:

In favour: Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Against: None.

Abstaining: Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic.

On 23 December, the General Assembly, by decision 55/458, decided that the agenda item on measures to eliminate international terrorism remained for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

Prior to the foregoing General Assembly action, the Security Council, in the first of two meetings it held on 6 December [meeting 4242], heard an oral presentation by Hans Corell, Under-Secretary-General for Legal Affairs and the Legal Counsel, underscoring the highlights of a briefing note he had provided to the Council two days earlier on the role of the Council, the Assembly and the UN Secretariat in the progressive development of international law on terrorism in the 1990s.

The most prominent cases of international terrorism dealt with by the Council, he noted, had been those involving the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Afghanistan and the Sudan. He drew attention to the Council's unequivocal condemnation, embodied in its resolution 1269(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 1240], of all terrorist acts, methods and practices, regardless of their motivation. He cited the Assembly's efforts that led to its adoption of the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism [YUN 1994, p. 1294], the 1997 International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings [YUN 1997, p. 1348] and the 1999 International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism [YUN 1999, p. 1233]. He said work was continuing on the drafting of additional anti-terrorism instruments, specifically, on nuclear terrorism, on the international community's organized response to all forms of terrorism and on a comprehensive convention.

Within the Secretariat, the Secretary-General reported annually on Member States' implementation of the 1994 Declaration, including the enactment of national laws and regulations to prevent and suppress international terrorism, and was preparing a compendium of such laws. In addition, the Office of Legal Affairs would soon submit for publication a compilation of global and regional anti-terrorism conventions. That Office shared the work of preventing and combating terrorism with the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention in Vienna, the former focusing on legal and normative matters and the latter on research and technical cooperation.

Mr. Corell pointed out that standing in the way of enhanced international cooperation in the fight against terrorism were the problem of defining "terrorism", the political element, the links between terrorist and organized crime groups, and the perceived relationship between religion and terrorism in some parts of the world.

Following Mr. Corell's presentation, the Council President, at the second meeting on 6 December [meeting 4243], made statement S/PRST/2000/38 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council takes note with appreciation of the briefing of Mr. Hans Corell, Under-Secretary-General for Legal Affairs, the Legal Counsel, regarding follow-up measures to resolution 1269(1999) of 19 October 1999.

The Council is deeply concerned by the increase, in many regions of the world, of acts of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. The Council reiterates its condemnation of all acts of terrorism, irrespective of motive, wherever and by whomever committed. It welcomes the efforts of the General Assembly and other organs of the United Nations in the field of combating international terrorism.

The Council calls upon all States that have not done so to consider, as a matter of priority, becoming party to the existing anti-terrorism conventions.

The Council reaffirms its resolution 1269(1999) and calls upon all States to implement its provisions fully and expeditiously.

The Council reiterates its readiness, including on the basis of the relevant reports of the Secretary-General, as provided for in its resolution 1269(1999), to take necessary steps in accordance with its responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations in order to counter terrorist threats to international peace and security.

The Council will remain seized of this matter.

Additional Protocols I and II to the 1949 Geneva Conventions

In response to General Assembly resolution 53/96 [YUN 1998, p. 1220], the Secretary-General submitted a July report and later addendum [A/55/173 & Corr.1,2 & Add.1] on the status of the two 1977 Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts [YUN 1977, p. 706], as well as on measures taken to strengthen the existing body of international humanitarian law with respect to, among other things, its dissemination and full implementation at the national level, based on information received from a total of 17 States and ICRC. Annexed to the report was a list of 158 States parties to one or both of the Protocols as at 31 May 2000.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/605], adopted resolution 55/148 without vote [agenda item 155].

Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 32/44 of 8 December 1977, 34/51 of 23 November 1979, 37/116 of 16 December 1982, 39/77 of 13 December 1984, 41/72 of 3 December 1986, 43/161 of 9 December 1988, 45/38 of 28 November 1990, 47/30 of 25 November 1992, 49/48 of 9 December 1994, 51/155 of 16 December 1996 and 53/96 of 8 December 1998,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Thanking Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross for their contribution to the report of the Secretary-General,

Convinced of the continuing value of established humanitarian rules relating to armed conflicts and the need to respect and ensure respect for these rules in all circumstances within the scope of the relevant international instruments, pending the earliest possible termination of such conflicts,

Stressing the possibility of making use of the International Fact-Finding Commission in relation to an armed conflict, pursuant to article 90 of Protocol I, and recalling that the International Fact-Finding Commission may, where necessary, facilitate, through its good offices, the restoration of an attitude of respect for the Geneva Conventions and the Protocol,

Stressing also the need for consolidating the existing body of international humanitarian law through its universal acceptance and the need for wide dissemination and full implementation of such law at the national level, and expressing concern about all violations of the Geneva Conventions and the two additional Protocols,

Noting with satisfaction the increasing number of national commissions and other bodies involved in advising authorities at the national level on the implementation, dissemination and development of international humanitarian law,

Mindful of the role of the International Committee of the Red Cross in offering protection to the victims of armed conflicts,

Noting with appreciation the continuing efforts of the International Committee of the Red Cross to promote and disseminate knowledge of international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Conventions and the two additional Protocols,

Recalling that the Twenty-sixth International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent endorsed the recommendations of the Intergovernmental Group of Experts on the Protection of War Victims, including the recommendation that the depositary of the Geneva Conventions should organize periodic meetings of States parties to the Conventions to consider general problems regarding the application of international humanitarian law,

Welcoming the adoption, at The Hague on 26 March 1999, of a second Protocol to the 1954 Hague Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict,

Noting the celebration in 1999 at The Hague and at St. Petersburg of the centennial of the first International Peace Conference which highlighted the importance of the Geneva Conventions for the protection of victims of armed conflicts and the additional Protocols,

Acknowledging the fact that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, adopted on 17 July 1998, includes the most serious crimes of international concern under international humanitarian law, and that the Statute, while recalling that it is the duty of every State to exercise its criminal jurisdiction over those responsible for such crimes, shows the determination of the international community to put an end to impunity for the perpetrators of such crimes and thus to contribute to their prevention,

Noting that international humanitarian law has been an important topic in the United Nations Decade for International Law, which came to an end in 1999, fifty years after the adoption of the Geneva Conventions, and acknowledging the usefulness of discussing in the General Assembly the status of international humanitarian law instruments relevant to the protection of victims of armed conflicts,

1. Appreciates the virtually universal acceptance of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, and notes the trend towards a similarly wide acceptance of the two additional Protocols of 1977;

2. Appeals to all States parties to the Geneva Conventions that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the additional Protocols at the earliest possible date;

3. Calls upon all States that are already parties to Protocol I, or those States not parties, on becoming parties to Protocol I, to make the declaration provided for under article 90 of that Protocol;

4. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the 1954 Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict and the two Protocols thereto, and to other relevant treaties on international humanitarian law relating to the protection of victims of armed conflict;

5. Calls upon all States parties to the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions to ensure their wide dissemination and full implementation;

6. Notes with appreciation the Plan of Action adopted by the Twenty-seventh International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, in particular the reiteration of the importance of universal adherence to treaties on humanitarian law and their effective implementation at the national level;

7. Affirms the necessity of making the implementation of international humanitarian law more effective;

8. Welcomes the advisory service activities of the International Committee of the Red Cross in supporting efforts undertaken by Member States to take legislative and administrative action to implement international humanitarian law and in promoting the exchange of information on those efforts between Governments;

9. Welcomes also the increasing numbers of national commissions or committees for the implementation of international humanitarian law and for promoting the incorporation of treaties on international humanitarian law into national law and disseminating the rules of international humanitarian law;

10. Welcomes further the adoption of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflicts;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session a report on the status of the additional Protocols relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts, as well as on measures taken to strengthen the existing body of international humanitarian law, inter alia, with respect to its dissemination and full implementation at the national level, based on information received from Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh session the item entitled "Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts".

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

As at 31 December 2000, the States parties to the following conventions relating to the protection of diplomats and diplomatic and consular relations were: 180 States parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations [YUN 1961, p. 512], 49 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 516] and 62 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.].

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] had 165 parties, the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 512] had 38 and the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.] had 45.

Parties to the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents [YUN 1973, p. 775], numbered 106.

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report with later addenda [A/55/164 & Add.1-3], the Secretary-General transmitted information on serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives. Prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 53/97 [YUN 1998, p. 1222], the report contained summaries of such information received from a total of nine States (one of which reported twice), together with the texts of their reports; the comments received from States on measures needed to enhance protection, security and safety, in response to Assembly resolution 42/154 [YUN 1987, p. 1068]; and the status of State participation in the relevant conventions named above.

The Secretary-General also issued two addenda to his 1999 report on the subject [A/INF/54/5/Add.1,2].

ILC consideration. ILC at its fifty-second session [A/55/10] took up the first report on diplomatic protection by the Special Rapporteur for the topic, Christopher John R. Dugard (South Africa). The report consisted of three parts: an introduction to diplomatic protection, which examined the history and scope of the topic; draft articles 1 to 8, with commentaries; and an outline of further articles. Draft articles 1 to 8 addressed definition and scope of the topic and the nature and conditions under which diplomatic protection might be exercised, in particular the requirement of nationality and the modalities of diplomatic protection. Articles 2 and 4 raised a number of controversial issues, as did articles 5 to 8, on which the Special Rapporteur required ILC's views to guide him in his future work. To follow up on the discussions and suggestions made in plenary, ILC referred articles 1, 3 and 6 to open-ended informal consultations chaired by the Special Rapporteur. Following consideration of the resulting report, ILC referred draft articles 1, 3 and 5 to 8 to the Drafting Committee. It deferred to 2001 consideration of the addendum to the Special Rapporteur's report, which dealt with article 9 on continuous nationality and transferability of claims.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/606], adopted resolution 55/149 without vote [agenda item 156].

Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General,

Conscious of the need to develop and strengthen friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Convinced that respect for the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations is a basic prerequisite for the normal conduct of relations among States and for the fulfilment of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Alarmed by the recent acts of violence against diplomatic and consular representatives, as well as against representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, which have endangered or taken innocent lives and seriously impeded the normal work of such representatives and officials,

Expressing sympathy for the victims of such illegal acts,

Recalling the Security Council resolutions and statements by the President of the Security Council in relation to flagrant violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as missions and representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations,

Concerned at the failure to respect the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Recalling that, without prejudice to their privileges and immunities, it is the duty of all persons enjoying such privileges and immunities to respect the laws and regulations of the receiving State,

Recalling also that diplomatic and consular premises must not be used in any manner incompatible with the diplomatic or consular functions,

Emphasizing the duty of States to take all appropriate measures as required by international law, including measures of a preventive nature, and to bring offenders to justice,

Welcoming measures already taken by States to this end in conformity with their international obligations,

Convinced that the role of the United Nations, which includes the reporting procedures established under General Assembly resolution 35/168 of 15 December 1980 and further elaborated in subsequent Assembly resolutions, is important in promoting efforts to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;

2. Strongly condemns acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as against missions and representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, and emphasizes that such acts can never be justified;

3. Also strongly condemns the recent acts of violence against such missions, representatives and officials, referred to in relevant reports under this item;

4. Urges States to strictly observe, implement and enforce the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations and, in particular, to ensure, in conformity with their international obligations, the protection, security and safety of the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above officially present in territories under their jurisdiction, including practical measures to prohibit in their territories illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts against the security and safety of such missions, representatives and officials;

5. Also urges States to take all necessary measures at the national and international levels to prevent any acts of violence against the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above and to ensure, with the participation of the United Nations where appropriate, that such acts are fully investigated with a view to bringing offenders to justice;

6. Recommends that States cooperate closely through, inter alia, contacts between the diplomatic and consular missions and the receiving State with regard to practical measures designed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives and with regard to the exchange of information on the circumstances of all serious violations thereof;

7. Urges States to take all appropriate measures, in accordance with international law, at the national and international levels, to prevent any abuse of diplomatic or consular privileges and immunities, in particular serious abuses, including those involving acts of violence;

8. Recommends that States cooperate closely with the State in whose territory abuses of diplomatic and consular privileges and immunities may have occurred, including by exchanging information and providing assistance to its juridical authorities in order to bring offenders to justice;

9. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

10. Also calls upon States, in cases where a dispute arises in connection with a violation of their international obligations concerning the protection of the missions or the security of the representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, to make use of the means for peaceful settlement of disputes, including the good offices of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General, when he deems it appropriate, to offer his good offices to the States directly concerned;

11. Requests all States to report to the Secretary-General in accordance with paragraph 9 of resolution 42/154 of 7 December 1987;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to issue a report on the item, in accordance with paragraph 12 of resolution 42/154, containing also an analytical summary of the reports received under paragraph 11 above, on an annual basis, as well as to proceed with his other tasks pursuant to the same resolution;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh session the item entitled "Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives".

Treaties and agreements

Reservations to treaties

ILC, at its 2000 session [A/55/10], considered the fifth report of Special Rapporteur Alain Pellet (France) on the law and practice relating to reservations to treaties. The first part contained draft guidelines dealing with procedural matters regarding the alternatives to reservations and interpretative declarations and the second part with procedural matters regarding the formulation, modification and withdrawal of reservations and interpretative declarations. The texts in the first part were referred to the Drafting Committee, following which ILC adopted on first reading the five draft guidelines pertaining to reservations made under exclusionary clauses, unilateral statements made under an optional clause, unilateral statements providing for a choice between the provisions of a treaty and alternatives to reservations and to interpretative declarations.

ILC deferred consideration of the second part of the fifth report.

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations [YUN 1986, p. 1006], which had not entered into force, had 32 parties as at 31 December 2000.

Registration and publication of treaties by the United Nations

During 2000, 1,047 international agreements and 1,215 subsequent actions were received by the Secretariat for registration or filing and recording. In addition, there were 709 registrations of formalities concerning agreements for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions. Twelve issues of the Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements were published.

Added to the Treaty Series, the UN publication of international agreements registered or filed and recorded in their original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary, were 112 volumes published during the year, covering such agreements through 1998. The Cumulative Index to the Treaty Series currently covered up to 1,600 volumes; volumes 26 to 28 were published in English and French in 2000.

Multilateral treaties

The UN Treaty Series (approximately 2,000 printed volumes) and the regularly updated status of multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General were available on the Internet at the UN Treaty Collection web site (<http://untreaty.un.org>).

New multilateral treaties concluded under UN auspices

The following treaties, concluded under UN auspices, were deposited with the Secretary-General during 2000:

Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety to the Convention on Biological Diversity, adopted in Montreal on 29 January 2000

European Agreement concerning the International Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Inland Waters (ADN), concluded at Geneva on 25 May 2000

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, adopted by the UN General Assembly on 25 May 2000

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict, adopted by the General Assembly on 25 May 2000

United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, adopted by the General Assembly on 15 November 2000

Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, adopted by the General Assembly on 15 November 2000

Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, adopted by the General Assembly on 15 November 2000

International Coffee Agreement 2001, concluded at London on 28 September 2000

Regulation No. 110. Uniform provisions concerning the approval of: I. Specific components of motor vehicles using compressed natural gas (CNG) in their propulsion system; II. Vehicles with regard to the installation of specific components of an approved type for the use of compressed natural gas (CNG) in their propulsion system, adopted in Geneva on 28 December 2000

Regulation No. 111. Uniform provisions concerning the approval of tank vehicles of categories N and O with regard to rollover stability, adopted in Geneva on 28 December 2000

Multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General

The number of multilateral treaties for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions was 530 at the end of 2000. During the year, 737 signatures were affixed to treaties for which he performed depositary functions and 1,073 instruments of ratification, accession, acceptance and approval were deposited. In addition, 1,100 communications containing observations or declarations and reservations were lodged upon signature, ratification or accession.

The following multilateral treaties in respect of which the Secretary-General acted as depositary came into force in 2000:

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted in New York on 6 October 1999

United Nations Convention on Independent Guarantees and Stand-by Letters of Credit, adopted in New York on 11 December 1995

Agreement concerning the Establishing of Global Technical Regulations for Wheeled Vehicles, Equipment and Parts which can be fitted and/or be used on Wheeled Vehicles, adopted in Geneva on 25 June 1998

Amendments to articles 3 (5) and 9 (8) of the Constitution of the Asia-Pacific Telecommunity, adopted in Colombo on 29 November 1991

Chapter IV

Law of the sea

During 2000, the United Nations continued to promote the universal acceptance of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and the two related Agreements. The three institutions created by the Convention—the International Seabed Authority, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf—held sessions during the year.

The United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea, established in 1999 to facilitate the General Assembly's review of developments in ocean affairs, held its first session in May/June. The Assembly, in October, established four voluntary trust funds in an effort to assist States, especially developing States, in applying the Convention and Agreements.

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratifications

In 2000, Luxembourg, Maldives and Nicaragua ratified the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), bringing the number of parties to 135. The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 178], closed for signature in 1984, having received 159 signatures, and entered into force on 16 November 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1301].

Meeting of States Parties. The tenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention (New York, 22-26 May) [SPLOS/60 & CORR.1] discussed the 1999 activities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea [YUN 1999, p. 1246], proposals concerning the Tribunal's 2001 budget and other budgetary and financial questions and a proposal to establish a trust fund to help States in proceedings before the Tribunal. Also discussed were the activities of the International Seabed Authority; matters relating to the continental shelf; the role of the Meeting of States Parties regarding the implementation of UNCLOS; and the rules of procedure of Meetings of States Parties, in particular rule 53, which dealt with decisions on questions of substance.

The States parties recommended that the General Assembly consider the establishment of a voluntary fund or funds to: assist States parties to meet their obligations under article 76 of the Convention; and provide training to developing countries for preparing their submissions to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf with respect to the limits of their continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles [SPLOS/59]. The States parties further recommended the establishment of a voluntary fund to meet the costs of participation of Commission members from developing countries in Commission meetings [SPLOS/58].

With regard to the Tribunal, the States parties recommended that the Assembly consider establishing a voluntary trust fund to assist States with their proceedings in the Tribunal [SPLOS/57].

The Assembly took action on those recommendations in resolution 55/7 of 30 October.

Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention

During 2000, the number of States parties to the Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention, which was adopted by the General Assembly in 1994 by resolution 48/263 [YUN 1994, p. 1301], reached 100. The Agreement, which entered into force on 28 July 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1215], was to be interpreted and applied together with the Convention as a single instrument and, in the event of any inconsistency between the Agreement and Part XI of the Convention, the provisions of the Agreement would prevail. Any ratification or accession to the Convention after 28 July 1994 represented consent to be bound by the Agreement as well. States that were parties to the Convention prior to the Agreement's adoption had to deposit an instrument of ratification or accession to the Agreement separately.

Agreement on the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks

As at 31 December 2000, the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks [YUN 1995, p. 1334] had been ratified or acceded to by 27 States. It would enter into force 30 days after the deposit of the thirtieth instrument of ratification or accession.

Institutions created by the Convention

International Seabed Authority

Through the International Seabed Authority, established by UNCLOS and the 1994 Implementing Agreement, States organized and conducted exploration and exploitation of the resources of the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction. As at 31 December 2000, the Authority had 135 members.

In 2000, the Authority held its sixth session in two parts (20-31 March and 3-14 July) in Kingston, Jamaica. The main achievement was the approval of the Regulations on Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Nodules in the Area.

A preliminary round of discussions between the Authority and the Government of Jamaica, host country to the Authority, on the transfer of the title of the headquarters building from the Government to the Authority took place in May.

Also in May, the Authority signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission concerning cooperation in promoting the conduct of marine scientific research in the international seabed area.

As at 31 December, the Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Seabed Authority, adopted in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1226], had 28 signatories and four ratifications/accessions. The Protocol would enter into force 30 days after the date of deposit of the tenth instrument of ratification or accession.

International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea held its ninth administrative session (6-17 March) and tenth session (18-29 September), both in Hamburg, Germany [SPLOS/63]. The Tribunal approved amendments to the Staff Rules, which were to enter into effect on 1 January 2001.

On 3 July, the official opening of the permanent premises of the Tribunal in Hamburg took place. The Tribunal started working from its permanent premises on 27 November.

In May, the tenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention approved the Tribunal's budget for 2001, which totalled $8,090,900.

Regarding the Tribunal's judicial work, judgments were delivered in the Camouco case between Panama and France on 7 February and in the Monte Confurco case between Seychelles and France on 18 December. In the M/V Saiga (No. 2) case between Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Guinea, the Tribunal received communications from Saint Vincent and the Grenadines on the issue of compliance with the judgement of the Tribunal of 1 July 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1246]. In the southern bluefin tuna case involving Australia and New Zealand, New Zealand informed the Tribunal of its unintentional overcatch of southern bluefin tuna during the 1998/99 fishing year and of the steps it had taken to reduce its catch for the 1999/2000 season. Australia submitted comments on the issue.

On 23 August, Chile requested the appointment of an arbitrator to sit on an arbitral panel to consider the dispute between Chile and the European Community concerning swordfish stocks in the south-eastern Pacific Ocean. Subsequently, both parties agreed to submit the case to a special chamber of the Tribunal and no further action was taken on Chile's request.

Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf

In 2000, the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf, established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1362], held its seventh (1-5 May) and eighth (31 August-4 September) sessions in New York [A/56/58]. The 21-member Commission considered data and other material submitted by coastal States concerning the outer limits of the continental shelf in areas where those limits extended beyond 200 nautical miles; made recommendations to its member States; and provided scientific and technical advice on request.

The Commission, which usually met in private (closed) sessions, held an open meeting on the first day of its seventh session to flag the most important and challenging issues related to the establishment of the continental shelf beyond 200 miles. The meeting was also intended to give policy makers and legal advisers insight into the benefits that a coastal State might derive from the resources of the extended continental shelf and to explain to experts in marine sciences involved in the preparation of submissions to the Commission how the Scientific and Technical Guidelines should be applied.

In its closed session, the Commission discussed the issue of training and requested the United Nations Division of Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea to prepare a cost estimate for a five-day training course with a view to aiding States, especially developing States, to further develop the knowledge and skills for preparing submissions to the Commission. On 1 September, the Commission adopted an outline for a five-day training course and noted that interested Governments could adapt the course to suit particular needs. The Commission also considered the proposals of the Committee on Confidentiality on the Rules of Procedure and adopted them with amendments.

Other developments related to the Convention

Report of Secretary-General. In March, the Secretary-General submitted his annual report on oceans and the law of the sea covering developments relating to the implementation of the Convention and the related Agreements [A/55/61]. As requested in General Assembly resolution 54/33 [YUN 1999, p. 994], the Secretary-General also submitted the report to the newly established Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (see below) in order to assist in its deliberations.

The report discussed progress made in implementing the Convention and Agreements and described the work of the three institutions created by the Convention: the International Seabed Authority, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf.

In addition to addressing questions of maritime space and States with special geographical characteristics, the Secretary-General dealt comprehensively with the shipping industry and navigation, an industry that had traditionally been self-regulating but had gained public attention due to projected increases in decommissioning, recycling and scrapping and their safety and environmental implications. In that connection, he gave an overview of the activities of the International Maritime Organization and the International Hydrographic Organization. With regard to crimes at sea, the Secretary-General stated that the maintenance of security against crimes at sea had placed a heightened demand on the enforcement capacity of States and posed a challenge that most States, especially developing and small island States, had not been able to meet. In that connection, he addressed piracy and armed robbery, drug trafficking, illegal traffic in hazardous wastes, smuggling of migrants and stowaways.

The Secretary-General went on to review the development and management of marine resources; the underwater cultural heritage; marine science and technology; the settlement of disputes; and capacity-building and information dissemination.

United Nations

Open-ended Consultative Process

The United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea, established by General Assembly resolution 54/33 [YUN 1999, p. 994], held its first meeting in New York from 30 May to 2 June 2000 [A/55/274]. The process was established to facilitate the Assembly's review of developments in ocean affairs by considering the foregoing report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea and by suggesting particular issues for the Assembly's consideration, with an emphasis on identifying areas where coordination and co-operation at the intergovernmental and inter-agency levels should be enhanced.

The major areas of concern identified at the meeting were responsible fisheries management and the prevention of marine pollution and degradation. Those two elements were among a list of issues that the meeting agreed deserved the Assembly's attention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 October [meeting 44], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/7 [draft: A/55/L.10 & Corr.1 & Add.1] by recorded vote (143-2-4) [agenda item 34].

Oceans and the law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/28 of 6 December 1994, 52/26 of 26 November 1997, 54/31 and 54/33 of 24 November 1999 and other relevant resolutions adopted subsequent to the entry into force of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention") on 16 November 1994,

Recalling also its resolution 2749(XXV) of 17 December 1970, and considering that the Convention, together with the Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 ("the Agreement"), provides the regime to be applied to the Area and its resources as defined in the Convention,

Emphasizing the universal and unified character of the Convention and its fundamental importance for the maintenance and strengthening of international peace and security, as well as for the sustainable use and development of the seas and oceans and their resources,

Reaffirming that the Convention sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out and is of strategic importance as the basis for national, regional and global action in the marine sector, and that its integrity needs to be maintained, as recognized also by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in chapter 17 of Agenda 21,

Conscious of the importance of increasing the number of States parties to the Convention and the Agreement in order to achieve the goal of universal participation,

Conscious also that the problems of ocean space are closely interrelated and need to be considered as a whole,

Convinced of the need, building on arrangements established in accordance with the Convention, to improve coordination at the national level and co-operation and coordination at both intergovernmental and inter-agency levels, in order to address all aspects of oceans and seas in an integrated manner,

Recognizing the important role that the competent international organizations have in relation to ocean affairs, in implementing the Convention and in promoting sustainable development of the oceans and seas and their resources,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, and reaffirming the importance of the annual consideration and review of developments relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea by the General Assembly as the global institution having the competence to undertake such a review,

Taking note also of the outcome of the first meeting of the United Nations open-ended informal consultative process ("the Consultative Process"), established by the General Assembly in its resolution 54/33 in order to facilitate the annual review by the Assembly of developments in ocean affairs,

Mindful of the importance of the oceans and seas for the earth's ecosystem and for providing the vital resources for food security and for sustaining economic prosperity and the well-being of present and future generations,

Bearing in mind the contribution that major groups, as identified in Agenda 21, can make to raising awareness of the goal of the sustainable development of the oceans and seas and their resources,

Underlining the essential need for capacity-building to ensure that all States, especially developing countries, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, are able both to implement the Convention and to benefit from the sustainable development of their marine resources, as well as to participate fully in global and regional forums and processes dealing with oceans and law of the sea issues,

Expressing serious concern at the increase in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, and recognizing the importance of strengthening cooperation to combat such activities, particularly through the relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements,

Recalling that the role of international cooperation and coordination on a bilateral basis and, where applicable, within a subregional, interregional, regional or global framework is to support and supplement the national efforts of coastal States to promote the integrated management and sustainable development of coastal and marine areas,

Expressing its deep concern at the degradation of the marine environment, particularly from land-based activities, and emphasizing the need for international co-operation and for a coordinated approach at the national level to this problem, bringing together the many different economic sectors involved and protecting the ecosystems, and in this context reaffirming the importance of ensuring full implementation of the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities,

Reiterating its concern at the degradation of the marine environment as a result of pollution from ships, in particular through the illegal release of oil and other harmful substances, and as a result of pollution by dumping of hazardous waste, including radioactive materials, nuclear waste and dangerous chemicals,

Recalling the importance of marine science in promoting the sustainable management of the oceans and seas, including in the assessment, conservation, management and sustainable use of fish stocks,

Emphasizing the need to ensure access of decision makers to advice and information on marine science and technology, as well as to the transfer of technology and support for the production and diffusion of factual information and knowledge for end-users, as appropriate,

Expressing concern once again at the continuing threat from piracy and armed robbery at sea, and in this context noting the letter from the Secretary-General of the International Maritime Organization to the Secretary-General of the United Nations drawing attention to the increasing number and seriousness of incidents of piracy and armed robbery at sea,

Reaffirming the importance of enhancing the safety of navigation, as well as the necessity for cooperation in this regard,

Emphasizing the importance of the protection of the underwater cultural heritage, and recalling in this context the provisions of article 303 of the Convention,

Noting the responsibilities of the Secretary-General under the Convention and related resolutions of the General Assembly, in particular resolutions 49/28 and 52/26, and in this context the expected increase in responsibilities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat in view of the progress in the work of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf ("the Commission") and the anticipated receipt of submissions from States,

1. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention and the Agreement;

2. Reaffirms the unified character of the Convention;

3. Calls upon States to harmonize, as a matter of priority, their national legislation with the provisions of the Convention, to ensure the consistent application of those provisions and to ensure also that any declarations or statements that they have made or make when signing, ratifying or acceding to the Convention are in conformity therewith and, otherwise, to withdraw any of their declarations or statements that are not in conformity;

4. Encourages States parties to the Convention to deposit with the Secretary-General charts and lists of geographical coordinates, as provided for in the Convention;

5. Urges the international community to assist, as appropriate, developing countries, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, in the acquisition of data and the preparation of charts or lists of geographical coordinates for publication under articles 16, 22, 47, 75 and 84 of the Convention and in the preparation of information under article 76 and annex II to the Convention;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to convene the eleventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention in

New York from 14 to 18 May 2001 and to provide the services required;

7. Notes with satisfaction the continued contribution of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea ("the Tribunal") to the peaceful settlement of disputes in accordance with Part XV of the Convention, underlines its important role and authority concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Agreement, encourages States parties to the Convention to consider making a written declaration choosing from the means set out in article 287 for the settlement of disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Agreement, and invites States to note the provisions of annexes V, VI, VII and VIII to the Convention concerning, respectively, conciliation, the Tribunal, arbitration and special arbitration;

8. Recalls the obligations of parties to cases before a court or a tribunal referred to in article 287 of the Convention to ensure prompt compliance with the decisions rendered by such court or tribunal;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to establish a voluntary trust fund to assist States in the settlement of disputes through the Tribunal, and to report annually to the Meeting of States Parties to the Convention on the status of the fund;

10. Invites States, intergovernmental organizations, national institutions, non-governmental organizations, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make voluntary financial contributions to the fund;

11. Encourages States that have not yet done so to nominate conciliators and arbitrators in accordance with annexes V and VII to the Convention, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to update and circulate lists of these conciliators and arbitrators on a regular basis;

12. Welcomes the adoption of the Regulations on Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Nodules in the Area by the Assembly of the International Seabed Authority ("the Authority") on 13 July 2000, and notes with satisfaction that the Authority is now in a position to proceed to issue contracts to the registered pioneer investors in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement and those Regulations;

13. Appeals to all States parties to the Convention to pay their assessed contributions to the Authority and the Tribunal in full and on time, and appeals also to all former provisional members of the Authority to pay any outstanding contributions;

14. Calls upon States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Tribunal and to the Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the Authority;

15. Notes the continuing progress in the work of the Commission, including the successful open meeting on 1 May 2000 aimed at assisting States in implementing the provisions of the Convention related to the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission by coastal States regarding the outer limits of their continental shelf;

16. Also notes that the Commission has issued a basic flow chart on the preparation of submissions and has adopted an outline for a five-day training course on the delineation of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and for the preparation of submissions, and encourages concerned States and relevant international organizations and institutions to consider developing and making available such training courses;

17. Recalls that under article 4 of annex II to the Convention, a State intending to establish the outer limits of its continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles is to submit particulars of such limits to the Commission within ten years of the entry into force of the Convention for that State;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to establish a voluntary trust fund to provide training for technical and administrative staff, and technical and scientific advice, as well as personnel, to assist developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, for the purpose of desktop studies and project planning, and preparing and submitting information under article 76 and annex II to the Convention in accordance with the procedures of the Scientific and Technical Guidelines of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf, and to report annually to the General Assembly on the status of the fund;

19. Invites States, intergovernmental organizations and agencies, national institutions, non-governmental organizations and international financial institutions as well as natural and juridical persons to make voluntary financial or other contributions to the fund;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to establish a voluntary trust fund for the purpose of defraying the cost of participation of the members of the Commission from developing States in the meetings of the Commission, and invites States to contribute to the fund;

21. Approves the convening by the Secretary-General of the ninth session of the Commission in New York from 21 to 25 May 2001 and a tenth session, if necessary, starting on 27 August 2001 of a duration of three weeks in the event of a submission being filed, or of one week, depending on the workload of the Commission;

22. Calls upon bilateral and multilateral donor agencies to keep their programmes under review to ensure the availability in all States, particularly in developing States, of the economic, legal, navigational, scientific and technical capacities and skills necessary for the full implementation of the Convention and the sustainable development of the oceans and seas and their resources nationally, regionally and globally, and in so doing to bear in mind the rights of landlocked developing States;

23. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the competent international organizations and programmes, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Labour Organization, the International Hydrographic Organization, the International Maritime Organization, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the World Meteorological Organization and the World Bank, as well as representatives of regional development banks and the donor community, to review the efforts being made to build capacity as well as to identify the duplications that need to be avoided and the gaps that may need to be filled for ensuring consistent approaches, both nationally and regionally, with a view to implementing the Convention, and to include a section on this subject in his annual report on oceans and the law of the sea;

24. Urges States to continue the development of an international plan of action on illegal, unregulated and unreported fishing for the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, as a matter of priority, and in this context recognizes the central role that regional and subregional fisheries organizations and arrangements will have in addressing this issue;

25. Emphasizes the importance of the implementation of Part XII of the Convention in order to protect and preserve the marine environment, including coastal areas, and its living marine resources against pollution and physical degradation;

26. Acknowledges the need to build national capacity for the integrated management of the coastal zone and for the protection of its ecosystem, and invites relevant parts of the United Nations system to promote these aims, including through the provision of the training and institutional support needed to achieve them;

27. Calls upon States to prioritize action on marine pollution from land-based sources as part of their national sustainable development strategies and local Agenda 21 programmes, in an integrated and inclusive manner, as a means of enhancing their support for the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities, and calls for their active collaboration to ensure that the 2001 intergovernmental review will enhance the implementation of the Global Programme of Action;

28. Calls upon United Nations agencies and programmes identified in General Assembly resolution 51/189 of 16 December 1996 to fulfil their roles in support of the Global Programme of Action and to provide information to Governments for their consideration at the 2001 intergovernmental review of the Global Programme of Action and to the Secretary-General for his annual report on oceans and the law of the sea on their action in this regard and on other steps which could be taken to protect the marine environment;

29. Invites the United Nations Environment Programme and the World Bank, as part of the preparations for the 2001 review of the Global Programme of Action, to consult with Governments, representatives of the private sector, financial institutions and bilateral and multilateral donor agencies to review their involvement in the implementation of the Global Programme of Action and to consider, inter alia, what international support is needed to help overcome the obstacles to the preparation and implementation of national and local action programmes and how they can participate actively in partnership-building with developing countries for the transfer of the requisite technology in accordance with the Convention and taking into account the relevant parts of Agenda 21, capacity-building and funding for the implementation of the Global Programme of Action;

30. Emphasizes the importance of ensuring that adverse impacts on the marine environment are taken into account when assessing and evaluating development programmes and projects;

31. Urges States to take all practicable steps, in accordance with the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto, to prevent pollution of the marine environment from ships and, in accordance with the 1972 Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter, to prevent pollution of the marine environment by dumping, and further calls upon States to become parties to and to implement the 1996 Protocol to the 1972 Convention;

32. Stresses the need to consider as a matter of priority the issues of marine science and technology and to focus on how best to implement the many obligations of States and competent international organizations under Parts XIII and XIV of the Convention, and calls upon States to adopt, as appropriate and in accordance with international law, the necessary national laws, regulations, policies and procedures to promote and facilitate marine scientific research and cooperation;

33. Urges all States, in particular coastal States, in affected regions to take all necessary and appropriate measures to prevent and combat incidents of piracy and armed robbery at sea, including through regional cooperation, and to investigate or cooperate in the investigation of such incidents wherever they occur and bring the alleged perpetrators to justice, in accordance with international law;

34. Calls upon States, in this context, to cooperate fully with the International Maritime Organization, including by submitting reports on incidents to the organization and by implementing its guidelines on preventing attacks of piracy and armed robbery;

35. Urges States to become parties to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and its Protocol, and to ensure its effective implementation;

36. Notes the continued work of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization towards a convention for the implementation of the provisions of the Convention, relating to the protection of the underwater cultural heritage, and re-emphasizes the importance of ensuring that the instrument to be elaborated is in full conformity with the relevant provisions of the Convention;

37. Invites Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute to the further development of the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship Programme on the Law of the Sea established by the General Assembly in resolution 35/116 of 10 December 1980 and to support the training activities under the TRAIN-SEA-COAST Programme of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat;

38. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the annual comprehensive report on oceans and the law of the sea, prepared by the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea, as well as for the other activities of the Division, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention and the mandate set forth in resolutions 49/28, 52/26 and 54/33;

39. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to carry out the responsibilities entrusted to him in the Convention and related resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolutions 49/28 and 52/26, and to ensure that appropriate resources are made available to the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea for the performance of such responsibilities under the approved budget for the Organization;

40. Reaffirms its decision to undertake an annual review and evaluation of the implementation of the Convention and other developments relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, taking into account resolution 54/33 establishing the consultative process to facilitate the review of developments in ocean affairs, and requests the Secretary-General to convene the second meeting of the Consultative Process in New York from 7 to 11 May 2001;

41. Recommends that, in its deliberations on the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea at its second meeting, the Consultative Process organize its discussions around the following areas:

(a) Marine science and the development and transfer of marine technology as mutually agreed, including capacity-building in this regard;

(b) Coordination and cooperation in combating piracy and armed robbery at sea;

42. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure more effective collaboration and coordination between the relevant parts of the Secretariat of the United Nations and the United Nations as a whole, in particular in ensuring the effectiveness, transparency and responsiveness of the Subcommittee on Oceans and Coastal Areas of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, and also requests the Secretary-General to include in his report suggestions on initiatives to improve coordination, in accordance with resolution 54/33, and encourages all United Nations bodies to help this process by drawing to the attention of the Secretariat and the Subcommittee those areas of their work which may, directly or indirectly, affect the work of other United Nations bodies;

43. Also requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of heads of intergovernmental organizations, the specialized agencies and funds and programmes of the United Nations engaged in activities relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, and the Subcommittee on Oceans and Coastal Areas of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, drawing their attention to paragraphs of particular relevance to them, and underlines the importance of their input for the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea and of their participation in relevant meetings and processes;

44. Invites the competent international organizations, as well as funding institutions, to take specific account of the present resolution in their programmes and activities, and to contribute to the preparation of the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea;

45. Requests the Secretary-General to establish a voluntary trust fund for the purpose of assisting developing countries, in particular least developed countries, small island developing States and landlocked developing States, in attending the meetings of the Consultative Process, and invites States to contribute to this fund;

46. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution, including other developments and issues relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, in connection with his annual comprehensive report on oceans and the law of the sea, and to provide the report in accordance with the modalities set out in resolution 54/33;

47. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea".

ANNEX I

International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea Trust Fund

Terms of reference

Reasons for establishing the Trust Fund

1. Part XV of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention") provides for the settlement of disputes. In particular, article 287 specifies that States are free to choose one or more of the following means:

(a) The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea;

(b) The International Court of Justice;

(c) An arbitral tribunal;

(d) A special arbitral tribunal.

2. The Secretary-General already operates a Trust Fund for the International Court of Justice. The Permanent Court of Arbitration has established a Financial Assistance Fund. The burden of costs should not be a factor for States, in making the choices under article 287, in deciding whether a dispute should be submitted to the Tribunal or in deciding upon the response to an application made to the Tribunal by others. For these reasons, it was decided to create a Trust Fund for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea ("the Tribunal").

Object and purpose of the Trust Fund

3. This Trust Fund ("the Fund") is established by the Secretary-General in accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/7 and pursuant to the Agreement on Cooperation and Relationship between the United Nations and the Tribunal of 18 December 1997 (resolution 52/251, annex).

4. The purpose of the Fund is to provide financial assistance to States parties to the Convention for expenses incurred in connection with cases submitted, or to be submitted, to the Tribunal, including its Seabed Disputes Chamber and any other Chamber.

5. Assistance, which will be provided in accordance with the following terms and conditions, should only be provided in appropriate cases, principally those proceeding to the merits where jurisdiction is not an issue, but in exceptional circumstances may be provided for any phase of the proceedings.

Contributions to the Fund

6. The Secretary-General invites States, intergovernmental organizations, national institutions, non-governmental organizations, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make voluntary financial contributions to the Fund.

Application for assistance

7. An application for assistance from the Fund may be submitted by any State party to the Convention. The application should describe the nature of the case which is to be, or has been, brought by or against the State concerned and should provide an estimate of the costs for which financial assistance is requested. The application should contain a commitment to supply a final statement of account of the expenditures made from approved amounts, to be certified by an auditor acceptable to the United Nations.

Panel of experts

8. The Secretary-General will establish a panel of experts, normally three persons of the highest professional standing, to make recommendations on each request. The task of each panel is to examine the application and to recommend to the Secretary-General the amount of the financial assistance to be given, the phase or phases of the proceedings in respect of which assistance is to be given and the types of expenses for which the assistance may be used.

Granting of assistance

9. The Secretary-General will provide financial assistance from the Fund on the basis of the recommendations of the panel of experts. Payments will be made against receipts showing expenditures made in respect of approved costs. The latter may include:

(a) Preparing the application and the written pleadings;

(b) Professional fees of counsel and advocates for written and oral pleadings;

(c) Travel and expenses of legal representation in Hamburg during the various phases of a case;

(d) Execution of an Order of Judgment of the Tribunal, such as marking a boundary in the territorial sea.

Application of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations

10. The Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations will apply to the administration of the Fund, including the procedures for audit.

Reporting

11. An annual report on the activities of the Fund, including details of the contributions to and disbursements from the Fund, will be made to the Meeting of States Parties to the Convention.

Implementing office

12. The Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs is the implementing office for this Fund and provides the services for the operation of the Fund.

Offers of professional assistance

13. The implementing office also maintains a list of offers of professional assistance which may be made on a reduced fee basis by suitably qualified persons or bodies. If an applicant for assistance so requests, the implementing office will make the list of offers available to it for its consideration and decision; both financial and other assistance may be extended in respect of the same case or phase thereof.

Revision

14. The General Assembly may revise the above if circumstances so require.

ANNEX II

Trust fund for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf for developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, and compliance with article 76 of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea

Terms of reference, guidelines and rules

1. Reasons for establishing the Trust Fund

1. Promoting and developing the marine scientific and technological capacity of developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island

States, with a view to accelerating their social and economic development, is essential for the effective implementation of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 ("the Convention").

2. Coastal States intending to establish the outer limits of their continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles from the baseline from which the breadth of their territorial sea is measured are required by article 76 of the Convention to submit the relevant data and information to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf ("the Commission"). In accordance with article 4 of annex II to the Convention, the particulars of such limits should be submitted to the Commission within ten years of the entry into force of the Convention for that State. For some States a submission should be made by 16 November 2004.

3. Developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, may face difficulties in complying with the time limit for submissions to the Commission. The Trust Fund is intended to assist these States in complying with the requirements relating to a submission to the Commission.

4. Under article 3, paragraph 1 (b), of annex II to the Convention, the Commission may provide scientific and technical advice, if requested by the coastal States concerned, during the preparation of the data to be submitted in accordance with article 76.

5. The Commission has adopted an outline for a five-day training course in order to facilitate the preparation of submissions in accordance with its Scientific and Technical Guidelines. The course is to be developed and delivered by interested Governments, international organizations and institutions which possess the necessary expertise and facilities. The Commission has likewise prepared a basic flow chart illustrating the preparation of submissions by coastal States.

6. The delineation of the continental shelf of a coastal State in accordance with article 76 and annex II to the Convention and annex II to the Final Act of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea ("the Final Act") requires a programme for hydrographic and geoscientific surveying and mapping of the continental margin. The complexity and scale, and hence the costs involved, of such a programme will vary greatly from State to State according to the different geographical and geophysical circumstances. A first approach will always involve an assessment of the particular case at hand, followed by planning of appropriate projects for further data acquisition. Such projects require the contracting of high-level scientific/technical expertise and modern technology. By nature, the costs involved in such data acquisition projects are substantial. In addition to contributing to the Voluntary Fund herein established, the international community should make every effort to facilitate the full implementation of article 76 both financially and in any other possible way or capacity.

7. The initial assessment and the project planning itself will require qualifications in hydrography and geosciences in addition to a full understanding of the relevant provisions of the Convention. The final preparation of a submission to the Commission also requires high-level expertise in geosciences and hydrography.

8. The United Nations has extensive experience in providing assistance to countries for their industrial and economic development. This experience could be extended and utilized to assist States in implementing their rights and obligations under article 76 of the Convention.

2. Objects and purpose of the Trust Fund

9. The Secretary-General, under the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, establishes the present Trust Fund ("the Fund"). The object of the Fund is to enable developing States, in particular the least developed coastal countries and small island developing States, to make an initial assessment of their particular case, make appropriate plans for further investigations and data acquisition, and to prepare the final submission documents when the necessary data have been acquired.

10. The data acquisition campaigns themselves are not the object of the Fund.

11. An initial assessment of the nature of the continental shelf of a coastal State is often made in the form of a desktop study, which is a review and compilation of all existing data and information. Decisions for further action and/or planning for further data acquisition and mapping projects will be based on such a study.

12. The purpose of the Fund is to provide, in accordance with the terms and conditions specified in the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations:

(a) Training to the appropriate technical and administrative staff of the coastal State in question, in order to enable them to perform initial desktop studies and project planning, or at least to take full part in these activities;

(b) Funds for such studies and planning activities, including funds for advisory/consultancy assistance if needed.

13. The preparation of the final submission documents will have to meet the requirements of article 76 and annex II to the Convention (and for some States, annex II to the Final Act) and the Scientific and Technical Guidelines of the Commission. The training should take this into account and aim at enabling the State's personnel also to prepare most of these documents themselves. The preparation of the submission may induce costs that may be met by funds from the Fund (e.g. software and hardware equipment, technical assistance, etc.).

3. Contributions to the Fund

14. The Secretary-General invites States, intergovernmental organizations and agencies, national institutions, non-governmental organizations and international financial institutions as well as natural and juridical persons to make voluntary financial or other contributions to the Fund.

4. Application for financial assistance

15. An application for financial assistance from the Fund may be submitted by any developing State, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, who are Members of the United Nations and party to the Convention.

16. The purpose of the financial assistance applied for should be specified. Financial assistance may be sought for the following purposes:

(a) Training of technical and administrative staff;

(b) Desktop study or other means to make an initial assessment of the nature of the continental shelf and its limits;

(c) Working out of plans for the acquisition of necessary additional data and mapping projects;

(d) Preparation of final submission documents;

(e) Advisory/consultancy assistance related to the above points.

17. Detailed information under each of these purposes should be provided as follows:

(a) Training of technical and administrative staff:

The application shall be accompanied by:

(i) A specification of the goal of the training and which positions the trainees are intended to fill afterwards;

(ii) Information on the training institute(s) in question;

(iii) A copy of the training course(s);

(iv) The curriculum vitae of the trainees;

(v) An itemized statement of the estimated costs for which assistance is requested.

(b) Desktop study or other means to make an assessment of the nature of the continental shelf and its limits:

The application shall be accompanied by:

(i) A short description of the aim of the study;

(ii) An overview map of the area in question;

(iii) An overview, as complete as possible, of the database already available to the State;

(iv) An outline of how the work will be done and what tools are available (software and hardware);

(v) A specification of what will be done by the State's own staff, and what will be contracted for;

(vi) An itemized statement of the estimated costs for which assistance is requested.

(c) Working out of plans for the acquisition of necessary additional data and mapping projects:

The application shall be accompanied by:

(i) A summary of the status of knowledge of the continental margin, preferably based on a previous desktop study;

(ii) A preliminary assessment of the needs for specific additional data and/or information in accordance with the requirements of article 76 and annex II to the Convention, and annex II to the Final Act;

(iii) An itemized statement of the estimated costs for which assistance is requested.

(d) Preparation of final submission documents:

The application shall be accompanied by:

(i) A specification of what kind of assistance is needed;

(ii) An itemized statement of the estimated costs for which assistance is requested.

(e) Advisory/consultancy assistance related to the above points:

The application shall be accompanied by:

(i) A copy of the contract between the Government and the technical or scientific expert in question;

(ii) An itemized statement of the costs for which assistance is requested.

18. In all these cases the application shall be accompanied by an undertaking that the requesting State shall supply a final statement of account providing details of the expenditures made from the approved amounts, to be certified by an auditor acceptable to the United Nations.

5. Consideration of applications

19. Each request for financial assistance shall be considered by the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs ("the Division"), which acts as the secretariat of the Commission.

20. The Division may engage an independent panel of experts of the highest moral standing to assist in the examination of applications on the basis of section 4 above and to recommend the amount of financial assistance to be given. However, no sitting Commission member should serve on this panel of experts. The Division shall prepare and circulate to Member States a list of prospective members of the panel of experts. Any member of the expert panel opposed by a Member State should not be included in the panel. The Division shall on an annual basis provide a list of the panel of experts as an annex to the annual report of the Secretary-General.

21. In considering the application, the Division shall be guided solely by the financial needs of the requesting developing State and availability of funds, with priority given to least developed countries and small island developing States, taking into account the imminence of pending deadlines.

22. Travel expenses and subsistence allowance are payable to independent experts engaged by the Division to consider applications.

6. Granting of assistance

23. The Secretary-General will provide financial assistance from the Fund on the basis of the evaluation and recommendations of the Division. Payments will be made against receipts evidencing actual expenditures for approved costs.

7. Application of article 5 of annex II to the Convention

24. Nationals of the coastal State making the submission who are members of the Commission and any Commission member who has assisted a coastal State by providing scientific and technical advice with respect to the delineation shall not be a member of the subcommission dealing with that submission but has the right to participate as a member in the proceedings of the Commission concerning the said submission. In an effort to promote transparency and to give full effect to article 5 of annex II to the Convention there should be full disclosure by Commission members, Trust Fund recipients and training sponsors to the Division of any pre-submission contacts.

8. Reporting requirements for full disclosure

25. Interested Governments, international organizations and institutions who provide any training for which any costs are reimbursed by this Fund are strongly encouraged to provide the complete list of participants to the Division.

26. Commission members who participate in any activities pursuant to this Fund shall disclose this information to the Division.

27. Upon submission to the Commission of its information on the limits of its continental shelf pursuant to article 76 of the Convention, a coastal State that has received assistance from this Fund shall disclose this information, including the involvement of any Commission members.

9. Application of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations

28. The Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations shall apply to the administration of the Fund. The Fund shall be subject to the auditing procedures provided therein.

10. Reporting to the General Assembly

29. An annual report on the activities of the Fund, including details of the contributions to and disbursements from the Fund, will be made to the General Assembly.

11. Implementing office

30. The Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs is the implementing office for the Fund and will provide the services required for the operation of the Fund.

12. Revision

31. The General Assembly may revise the above if circumstances so require.

Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

During 2000, the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs continued to fulfil its role as the substantive unit of the Secretariat responsible for reviewing and monitoring all developments related to the law of the sea and ocean affairs, as well as for the implementation of the Convention and related General Assembly resolutions.

The Division undertook three major initiatives under its TRAIN-SEA-COAST (TSC) programme [YUN 1998, p. 1232], designed to build up in-country capacity to improve skills in integrated ocean and coastal management. It conducted the Fourth

Course Developers Workshop and Planning Meeting, at which participants learned how to apply the TSC pedagogic methodology in the course development process. As part of a second national-level initiative, the Rockefeller Brothers Fund provided support to the TSC programme in planning a course development unit in Indonesia and the training of one course developer. Also, in the South Pacific, the TSC programme began planning for the sixth TSC course development unit.

The fifteenth Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship, established in 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 139], was presented to Margaret N. Mwangi, Senior State Counsel in the Attorney-General's Office in Kenya, who intended to utilize the fellowship to pursue a programme of study in the control of marine pollution.

Chapter V

Other legal questions

In 2000, the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization pursued its consideration of proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security, the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, the future of the Trusteeship Council and, as a priority, the implementation of the Charter provisions on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII. The General Assembly requested the Committee to continue considering those proposals and ways to improve its working methods. It welcomed the Secretary-General's report on the findings of an ad hoc group on developing a methodology for assessing the consequences incurred by third States due to sanctions application.

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country, in a continuing effort to ensure harmonious relations between the UN diplomatic community and the host country (the United States), addressed complaints relating to the security of the permanent missions accredited to the United Nations and the safety of their personnel, the maintenance of conditions for the normal functioning of those missions, the movement, travel and visa applications of their personnel, and the implementation of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations. The Assembly hoped that the issues raised would continue to be resolved in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law.

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL), entrusted with furthering the progressive unification and harmonization of international trade law, made progress in preparing draft instruments or model or uniform laws and rules on several aspects of international commercial arbitration, notably on receivables financing. UNCITRAL's work on privately financed infrastructure projects, initiated in 1996, culminated in the adoption in 2000 of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects, an accomplishment which the Assembly commended.

In other action, the Assembly noted the continuing efforts of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee towards strengthening the role of the United Nations and its various organs, including the International Court of Justice, through programmes and initiatives undertaken by that Committee.

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

Special Committee on UN Charter

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 54/106 [YUN 1999, p. 1251], the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, during its meetings in New York from 10 to 20 April 2000 [A/55/33], continued to consider questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security, the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, the future of the Trusteeship Council, the improvement of the Committee's working methods and the publications Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council. It gave priority consideration to the implementation of the Charter provisions on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions (see p. 1269).

Discussion of the first item was based on current or previously submitted working papers by the Russian Federation on: the revised (2000) basic conditions and standard criteria for the introduction of sanctions and other coercive measures and their implementation, section I of which was examined paragraph by paragraph; the urgent need for the elaboration of a draft declaration on the basic principles and criteria for the work of UN peacekeeping missions and mechanisms for the prevention and settlement of crises and conflicts (1997); and fundamentals of the legal basis for UN peacekeeping operations in the context of Chapter VI (peaceful settlement of disputes) of the Charter (1998). The Russian Federation proposed that the Special Committees on the Charter and on Peacekeeping Operations hold a joint meeting, or set up a joint working group, to deliberate on the proposed key elements of the legal framework, thereby to arrive at a conclusion on the proposal.

Other working papers were submitted by Cuba (1998) on strengthening the role of the Organization and enhancing its effectiveness and by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya (1998) on strengthening the role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security. A draft resolution by Belarus and the Russian Federation (1999) recommended that an advisory opinion be requested from the International Court of Justice on the legal consequences of the resort to force by States, either without prior Security Council authorization or outside the context of self-defence.

For its consideration of peaceful dispute settlement, the Special Committee had before it a revised (1998) proposal by Sierra Leone on the establishment of a dispute prevention and early settlement service, and an informal (1999) paper by the United Kingdom on elements for a resolution on dispute prevention and settlement. Both countries subsequently introduced a joint revised (2000) informal working paper containing a draft resolution recalling existing mechanisms (fact-finding and good-will missions, special envoys, observers, good offices, mediators and conciliators), including those created by major multilateral treaties, and taking note of a Secretariat paper [A/AC.182/2000/INF/2] on mechanisms established by the Assembly in the context of dispute prevention and settlement. Additional revisions were suggested during a paragraph-by-paragraph discussion of the draft.

The debate on proposals regarding the future of the Trusteeship Council brought three main views to the fore: that the Council be reconstituted as a trustee and guardian of the common heritage and common concerns of mankind, as proposed by Malta (1996) in the light of Assembly resolution 50/52 [YUN 1995, p. 1342] and of the Secretary-General's proposal for a new concept of trusteeship [YUN 1998, p. 582]; that the status quo be maintained, since the Council's historic mission had yet to be fulfilled; or that it be abolished, its mandate having indeed been fulfilled. Views were also expressed in favour of considering the item in the context of the Charter's reform and biennially rather than annually.

Regarding improving the Committee's work methods, Japan introduced a working paper proposing, among other measures, maximum use of conference services, procedures for submitting proposals, the preliminary evaluation of new proposals, setting priorities, medium- and long-term work programmes, and holding periodic reviews of the Committee's work methods. Close contact was supported between the Special Committee and other bodies of the Organization dealing with various practical aspects of issues before the Committee, including holding joint meetings and information exchanges.

The Special Committee commended the Secretary-General's ongoing efforts to reduce or eliminate the backlog in the publication of the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council, the main sources of information on the Charter's implementation and on the work of its organs.

Report of Secretary-General. As called for by Assembly resolution 54/106, the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/55/340] describing the steps taken by the Secretariat to expedite the preparation of Supplements to the Repertory and the Repertoire, the up-to-date status of those publications, their placement on the Internet and action required to eliminate the current backlogs and prevent future ones. Also mentioned was the creation in May of a trust fund for updating the Repertoire with a generous contribution from the United Kingdom.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/55/613 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 55/156 without vote [agenda item 163].

Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its relevant resolutions adopted at subsequent sessions,

Recalling also its resolution 47/233 of 17 August 1993 on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

Recalling further its resolution 47/62 of 11 December 1992 on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council,

Taking note of the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council,

Recalling the elements relevant to the work of the Special Committee contained in its resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993,

Recalling also its resolution 51/241 of 31 July 1997 on the strengthening of the United Nations system and its resolution 51/242 of 15 September 1997, entitled "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace", by which it adopted the texts on coordination and the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations, which are annexed to that resolution,

Recalling further that the International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, and reaffirming its authority and independence,

Considering the desirability of finding practical ways and means to strengthen the Court, taking into consideration, in particular, the needs resulting from its increased workload,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 54/106 of 9 December 1999,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the work of its session held in 2000,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall hold its next session from 2 to 12 April 2001;

3. Requests the Special Committee, at its session in 2001, in accordance with paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 50/52 of 11 December 1995:

(a) To continue its consideration of all proposals concerning the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations and, in this context, to consider other proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security already submitted or which may be submitted to the Special Committee at its session in 2001;

(b) To continue to consider on a priority basis the question of the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter, taking into consideration the reports of the Secretary-General, the proposals submitted on this subject, the debate on the question which was held by the Sixth Committee at the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly and the text on the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations contained in annex II to Assembly resolution 51/242, and also the implementation of the provisions of Assembly resolutions 50/51 of 11 December 1995, 51/208 of 17 December 1996, 52/162 of 15 December 1997, 53/107 of 8 December 1998 and 54/107 of 9 December 1999;

(c) To continue its work on the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and, in this context, to continue its consideration of proposals relating to the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, including the proposal on the establishment of a dispute settlement service offering or responding with its services early in disputes and those proposals relating to the enhancement of the role of the International Court of Justice;

(d) To continue to consider proposals concerning the Trusteeship Council in the light of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/55 of 11 December 1995, the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Renewing the United Nations: a programme for reform" and the views expressed by States on this subject at the previous sessions of the General Assembly;

(e) To continue to consider, on a priority basis, ways and means of improving its working methods and enhancing its efficiency with a view to identifying widely acceptable measures for future implementation;

4. Takes note of subparagraphs (a) to (h) of paragraph 33 of the report of the Secretary-General, commends the Secretary-General for his continued efforts to reduce the backlog in the publication of the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs, and endorses the efforts of the Secretary-General to eliminate the backlog in the publication of the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council;

5. Invites the Special Committee at its session in 2001 to continue to identify new subjects for consideration in its future work with a view to contributing to the revitalization of the work of the United Nations, to discuss how to offer its assistance to the working groups of the General Assembly in this field and, in this regard, to consider ways and means of improving coordination between the Special Committee and other working groups dealing with the reform of the Organization, including the role of the Chairperson of the Special Committee for this purpose;

6. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at the fifty-sixth session;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

Assistance to third States affected by Chapter VII sanctions

Special Committee consideration. In the Special Committee debate on the implementation of the Charter provisions related to assistance to third States affected by sanctions [A/55/33], recognition was expressed for the Security Council's continuing efforts to enhance the vigilance of the application of sanctions, evaluate their humanitarian impact on vulnerable groups within the target States and on third States, streamline the working procedures of the sanctions committees and facilitate access to them by third States affected by the implementation of sanctions.

Attention was drawn to the 1998 ad hoc expert group proposals [YUN 1998, p. 1235] that obtained a large measure of support, namely: to draw up a list of potential effects of sanctions on third States; to prepare for the Council an assessment of the potential impact of sanctions on the targeted State and on third States; to entrust the Secretariat with monitoring the effects of sanctions and providing third States with technical assistance in preparing the explanatory materials to accompany their requests for consultations with the Council; and to appoint a special representative of the Secretary-General to undertake a full assessment of the consequences of sanctions incurred by the most severely affected third

States. It was suggested, however, that before embarking on a substantive discussion of the expert group's proposals, the Special Committee could benefit from the Secretary-General's forthcoming report to the General Assembly as to their political, financial and administrative feasibility.

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General's August report with later addendum [A/55/295 & Add.1] noted that, in implementation of the proposals in the Council President's 1999 note [YUN 1999, p. 1252], sanctions committees concerned with arms and other sanctions regimes in Africa had taken steps to open communication channels with relevant bodies of the UN system and with regional and subregional organizations to improve monitoring of sanctions implementation. Other committees began to consider ways to enhance arrangements for exemptions to sanctions on religious grounds. While the committees sought to increase transparency of their work through detailed briefings by their chairpersons, the Secretariat took steps to ensure the timely availability of summary records of their formal meetings.

The report noted that the chairpersons of the sanctions committees concerned with the situations in Angola, Sierra Leone and the Kosovo province of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia visited those countries to obtain first-hand accounts of the impact of sanctions regimes there; that, at the Council's request, the Secretary-General appointed expert bodies to collect information on the sources and methods of sanctions violations and to recommend measures to end them, such as the monitoring mechanism for the sanctions in Angola (see p. 158) and the panel of experts for Sierra Leone (see p. 204); and that the Sanctions Committee on Sierra Leone held public hearings to assess the role of diamonds in that country's conflict (see p. 203).

The Secretariat continued to provide support to ongoing efforts to facilitate the design of less blunt and more effective sanctions. Its capacity and modalities for implementing the intergovernmental mandates and recommendations of the 1998 ad hoc expert group were under review by several intergovernmental bodies concerned with assisting third States affected by the application of sanctions—a review on which the Secretary-General would base his views regarding the feasibility of implementing the expert group's recommendations. He concurred with the recommendation of the Office of Internal Oversight Services that, after intergovernmental agreement on a methodology for assessing the impact of sanctions on third States, the Department of Economic and Social Affairs and the Department of Political Affairs should review the required activities and capacity needed within the Secretariat. That review was to be the basis for proposed revisions to the medium-term plans of relevant intergovernmental bodies.

The report conveyed the views of the World Food Programme regarding the ad hoc expert group's report and related issues of international assistance; its addendum conveyed those of the United Nations Development Programme and the World Bank.

As to the continuing role of the Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) in assisting third States affected by the application of sanctions, the report cited Economic and Social Council action (see p. 879) and CPC's emphasis on the role of the Administrative Committee on Coordination in the implementation of the relevant intergovernmental mandates for mobilizing and monitoring economic assistance provided by the international community and the UN system to those States [A/55/16].

Security Council consideration. The Security Council President, by a January note [S/2000/27], announced the Council's agreement to elect chairpersons and vice-chairpersons of the following sanctions committees for a period running until 31 December 2000: Committee established by resolution 661 (1990) concerning the situation between Iraq and Kuwait; Committee established pursuant to resolution 748 (1992) concerning the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya; Committee established pursuant to resolution 751 (1992) concerning Somalia; Committee established pursuant to resolution 864 (1993) concerning the situation in Angola; Committee established pursuant to resolution 918 (1994) concerning Rwanda; Committee established pursuant to resolution 985 (1995) concerning Liberia; Committee established pursuant to resolution 1132 (1997) concerning Sierra Leone; Committee established pursuant to resolution 1160 (1998) concerning Kosovo; and Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267 (1999) concerning Afghanistan.

A further note of April by the President [S/2000/319] pointed to the Council's awareness of the existence of considerable recent scholarship on the subject of UN sanctions meriting its consideration, as well as of efforts by Canada, Germany, Switzerland and the United Kingdom, among others, in sponsoring reports and studies on specific aspects of UN sanctions. Taking account of the President's 1999 proposals for improving the work of the sanctions committees [YUN 1999, p. 1252], the Council decided to establish an informal working group to examine 11 issues from which to develop recommendations on how to improve the effectiveness of UN sanctions and to report by 30 November 2000.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/613 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 55/157 without vote [agenda item 163].

Implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions

The General Assembly,

Concerned about the special economic problems confronting certain States arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures taken by the Security Council against other States, and taking into account the obligation of Members of the United Nations under Article 49 of the Charter of the United Nations to join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council,

Recalling the right of third States confronted with special economic problems of that nature to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems, in accordance with Article 50 of the Charter,

Recognizing the desirability of the consideration of further appropriate procedures for consultations to deal in a more effective manner with the problems referred to in Article 50 of the Charter,

Recalling:

(a) The report of the Secretary-General entitled "An Agenda for Peace", in particular paragraph 41 thereof,

(b) Its resolution 47/120 A of 18 December 1992, entitled "An Agenda for Peace: preventive diplomacy and related matters", its resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993, entitled "An Agenda for Peace", in particular section IV thereof, entitled "Special economic problems arising from the implementation of preventive or enforcement measures", and its resolution 51/242 of 15 September 1997, entitled "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace", in particular annex II thereto, entitled "Question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations",

(c) The position paper of the Secretary-General entitled "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace",

(d) The statement by the President of the Security Council of 22 February 1995,

(e) The report of the Secretary-General prepared pursuant to the statement by the President of the Security Council regarding the question of special economic problems of States as a result of sanctions imposed under Chapter VII of the Charter,

(f) The annual overview reports of the Administrative Committee on Coordination for the period from 1992 to 2000, in particular the sections therein on assistance to countries invoking Article 50 of the Charter of the United Nations,

(g) The reports of the Secretary-General on economic assistance to States affected by the implementation of the Security Council resolutions imposing sanctions against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and General Assembly resolutions 48/210 of 21 December 1993, 49/21 A of 2 December 1994, 50/58 E of 12 December 1995, 51/30 A of 5 December 1996, 52/169 H of 16 December 1997 and 54/96 G of 15 December 1999,

(h) The reports of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization on the work of its sessions held in the years 1994 to 2000,

(i) The reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter,

(j) The report of the Secretary-General to the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations, in particular section IV.E thereof, entitled "Targeting sanctions",

(k) The United Nations Millennium Declaration, in particular paragraph 9 thereof,

Taking note of the most recent report of the Secretary-General, submitted in accordance with General Assembly resolution 54/107 of 9 December 1999,

Taking note also of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the in-depth evaluation of the United Nations programmes relating to global development trends, issues and policies, and global approaches to social and microeconomic issues and policies, and the corresponding subprogrammes in the regional commissions, in particular recommendation 3 contained therein, as approved by the Committee for Programme and Coordination, at its fortieth session,

Recalling that the question of assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions has been addressed recently in several forums, including the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and their subsidiary organs,

Recalling also the measures taken by the Security Council, in accordance with the statement by the President of the Security Council of 16 December 1994, that, as part of the effort of the Council to improve the flow of information and the exchange of ideas between members of the Council and other States Members of the United Nations, there should be increased recourse to open meetings, in particular at an early stage in its consideration of a subject,

Recalling further the measures taken by the Security Council in accordance with the note by the President of the Security Council of 29 January 1999 aimed at improving the work of the sanctions committees, including increasing the effectiveness and transparency of those committees,

Stressing that, in the formulation of sanctions regimes, due account should be taken of the potential effects of sanctions on third States,

Stressing also, in this context, the powers of the Security Council under Chapter VII of the Charter and the primary responsibility of the Council under Article 24 of the Charter for the maintenance of international peace and security in order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations,

Recalling that, under Article 31 of the Charter, any Member of the United Nations that is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected,

Recognizing that the imposition of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter has been causing special economic problems in third States and that it is necessary to intensify efforts to address those problems effectively,

Taking into consideration the views of third States which could be affected by the imposition of sanctions,

Recognizing that assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions would further contribute to an effective and comprehensive approach by the international community to sanctions imposed by the Security Council,

Recognizing also that the international community at large and, in particular, international institutions involved in providing economic and financial assistance should continue to take into account and address in a more effective manner the special economic problems of affected third States arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures taken by the Security Council under Chapter VII of the Charter, in view of their magnitude and of the adverse impact on the economies of those States,

Recalling the provisions of its resolutions 50/51 of 11 December 1995, 51/208 of 17 December 1996, 52/162 of 15 December 1997, 53/107 of 8 December 1998 and 54/107 of 9 December 1999,

1. Renews its invitation to the Security Council to consider the establishment of further mechanisms or procedures, as appropriate, for consultations as early as possible under Article 50 of the Charter of the United Nations with third States which are or may be confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures imposed by the Council under Chapter VII of the Charter, with regard to a solution of those problems, including appropriate ways and means for increasing the effectiveness of its methods and procedures applied in the consideration of requests by the affected States for assistance;

2. Welcomes the measures taken by the Security Council since the adoption of General Assembly resolution 50/51, most recently the note by the President of the Security Council of 17 April 2000, whereby the members of the Security Council decided to establish an informal working group of the Council to develop general recommendations on how to improve the effectiveness of United Nations sanctions, looks forward to the findings of the working group, in particular to those regarding the issues of unintended impacts of sanctions and assistance to States in implementing sanctions, and strongly recommends that the Council continue its efforts to further enhance the effectiveness and transparency of the sanctions committees, to streamline their working procedures and to facilitate access to them by representatives of States that find themselves confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of sanctions;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to pursue the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/51, 51/208, 52/162, 53/107 and 54/107 and to ensure that the competent units within the Secretariat develop the adequate capacity and appropriate modalities, technical procedures and guidelines to continue, on a regular basis, to collate and coordinate information about international assistance available to third States affected by the implementation of sanctions, to continue developing a possible methodology for assessing the adverse consequences actually incurred by third States and to explore innovative and practical measures of assistance to the affected third States;

4. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General containing a summary of the deliberations and main findings of the ad hoc expert group meeting on developing a methodology for assessing the consequences incurred by third States as a result of preventive or enforcement measures and on exploring innovative and practical measures of international assistance to the affected third States, and renews its invitation to States and relevant international organizations within and outside the United Nations system which have not yet done so to provide their views regarding the report of the ad hoc expert group meeting;

5. Renews its request to the Secretary-General to present to the General Assembly any further views that he may have, as appropriate, on the deliberations and main findings, including the recommendations, of the ad hoc expert group on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions, taking into account the views of States, the organizations of the United Nations system, international financial institutions and other international organizations, as well as the forthcoming report of the informal working group of the Security Council on general issues relating to sanctions;

6. Reaffirms the important role of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Committee for Programme and Coordination in mobilizing and monitoring, as appropriate, the economic assistance efforts by the international community and the United Nations system on behalf of States confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures imposed by the Security Council and, as appropriate, in identifying solutions to the special economic problems of those States;

7. Takes note of the decision of the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 2000/32 of 28 July 2000, to continue consideration of the question of assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions, invites the Council, at its organizational session for 2001, to make appropriate arrangements for this purpose within its programme of work for 2001, and decides to transmit the most recent report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions, together with the relevant background materials, to the Council at its substantive session of 2001;

8. Invites the organizations of the United Nations system, international financial institutions, other international organizations, regional organizations and Member States to address more specifically and directly, where appropriate, special economic problems of third States affected by sanctions imposed under Chapter VII of the Charter and, for this purpose, to consider improving procedures for consultations to maintain a constructive dialogue with such States, including through regular and frequent meetings as well as, where appropriate, special meetings between the affected third States and the donor community, with the participation of United Nations agencies and other international organizations;

9. Requests the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its session in 2001, to continue to consider on a priority basis the question of the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter, taking into consideration all of the related reports of the Secretary-General, in particular the 1998 report containing a summary of the deliberations and main findings of the ad hoc expert group meeting convened pursuant to paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 52/162, together with the most recent report of the Secretary-General on this question, the forthcoming report of the informal working group of the Security Council on general issues relating to sanctions, the proposals submitted on the question, the debate on the question in the Sixth Committee during the fifty-fifth session of the Assembly and the text on the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations contained in annex II to Assembly resolution 51/242, as well as the implementation of the provisions of Assembly resolutions 50/51, 51/208, 52/162, 53/107 and 54/107 and the present resolution;

10. Decides to consider, within the Sixth Committee, or a working group of the Committee, at the fifty-sixth session of the General Assembly, further progress in the elaboration of effective measures aimed at the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session, under the agenda item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

Cooperation with the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee

As requested by General Assembly resolution 53/14 [YUN 1998, p. 1241], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on the status of cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee (AALCC) [A/55/221] since his 1998 report. In keeping with the cooperation framework agreed upon by the two organizations, both routinely held consultations and exchanged documentation and information on matters of common interest in the field of international law, including economic, environmental and humanitarian law.

The report provided details of AALCC representation at UN meetings and conferences, and UN representation at AALCC sessions; AALCC contributions towards strengthening the role of the United Nations and implementing the programme of the United Nations Decade of International Law (1990-1999), in furthering the work of the Assembly's Sixth Committee, notably on environmental law, dispute settlement and jurisdictional immunities of States and their properties, and in promoting the ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea; and AALCC activities in international economic cooperation for development, including monitoring the work of the World Trade Organization, and in the development of refugee law. Other issues before AALCC were environment and development, legal protection of migrant workers, extraterritorial application of national legislation in relation to sanctions imposed against third parties, and the deportation of Palestinians and other Israeli practices.

In his statement before the Assembly on 25 October [A/55/PV.39], the AALCC Secretary-General affirmed AALCC's commitment to share responsibility in promoting the effective implementation of various international legal instruments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 25 October [meeting 39], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/4 [draft: A/55/L.12 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 22].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/38 of 18 November 1981, 37/8 of 29 October 1982, 38/37 of 5 December 1983, 39/47 of 10 December 1984, 40/60 of 9 December 1985, 41/5 of 17 October 1986, 43/1 of 17 October 1988, 45/4 of 16 October 1990, 47/6 of 21 October 1992, 49/8 of 25 October 1994, 51/11 of 4 November 1996 and 53/14 of 29 October 1998,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee,

Having heard the statement made by the Secretary-General of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee on the steps taken by the Consultative Committee to ensure continuing, close and effective cooperation between the two organizations,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Notes with satisfaction the continuing efforts of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee towards strengthening the role of the United Nations and its various organs, including the International Court of Justice, through programmes and initiatives undertaken by the Consultative Committee;

3. Also notes with satisfaction the commendable progress achieved towards enhancing cooperation between the United Nations and the Consultative Committee in wider areas;

4. Notes with appreciation the decision of the Consultative Committee to participate actively in the programmes of the United Nations Decade of International Law and programmes on environment and sustainable development, as well as in the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of the International Criminal Court;

5. Also notes with appreciation the initiative and efforts the Consultative Committee will undertake to promote the objectives and principles set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, including wider acceptance of multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session a report on cooperation between the United Nations and the Consultative Committee;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh session the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee".

Host country relations

At five meetings held in New York between 9 March and 1 November 2000 [A/55/26], the Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to consider the following aspects of relations between the UN diplomatic community and the United States, the host country: housing for diplomatic personnel; host country travel regulations; acceleration of immigration and customs procedures; and issues arising from the implementation of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations, contained in General Assembly resolution 169(II) [YUN 1947-48, p. 199]. Since there were no new developments regarding the use of diplomatic motor vehicles, parking and related matters, the working group established in 1997 to consider those issues [YUN 1997, p. 1376] did not meet in 2000, nor did the working group on indebtedness meet during the reporting period.

Housing for diplomatic personnel

On 9 March, the Committee Chairman indicated a likely problem with the landlord practice of requiring diplomats of permanent missions accredited to the United Nations to execute waivers of diplomatic immunity and, in the event of a systematic problem, suggested referring the matter to the working group on indebtedness. The Russian Federation asserted that such a demand was contrary to international law and tantamount to blackmail, adding that it would welcome state and federal assistance, particularly in respect of its difficulties in rebuilding its apartment complex in Riverdale (Bronx, New York). Expressing concern about reports that that practice was widespread, the United States urged Members to put allegations of discrimination in writing to enable investigation. Iraq confirmed that obtaining housing for its mission staff was problematic owing to the refusal of rental agencies to rent to them, even though Iraq had never had any problem with landlords. Malaysia echoed those difficulties.

Host country travel regulations

On 9 March, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya called on the host country to facilitate travel within the United States, saying that the announced easing of travel restrictions had not occurred. It moreover referred to the restrictions on the movement of its mission personnel, who were currently confined to New York's five boroughs. Protesting also the host country's single-entry-visa policy, it urged the issuance of multiple-entry visas. Cuba stated that it was subject to similar restrictions and to delays in the granting of visas, and that the lack of multiple-entry visas had impeded the work of its representative on the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ).

The host country pointed out that the restrictions on the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya were imposed in the proper exercise of national security, and that the visa application for Cuba's ACABQ representative had not been submitted to allow for the required 15-day processing period. Pursuant to the host Government's internal regulations, multiple-entry visas were available to citizens of some countries, not of all. The obligation of the host country was to issue visas to officials coming to the United Nations and the time or validity of their visas was for it to decide as it saw fit.

Cuba, referring to the written request required for the movement of its representatives 25 kilometres beyond the Headquarters district, said the host authorities' persistent invocation of national security did not reflect post-cold-war realities. The Russian Federation agreed that the outdated stereotypes used to justify claims of national security were unconvincing and placed too much weight on potential threats. The host country restated that it was not violating its obligations under the Headquarters Agreement or international law. Because the threat of international terrorism was real, concerns about national security should not be dismissed lightly. The United States maintained that it placed no impediments to the official business of missions or their staff; rejections were made only with respect to requests for personal travel.

The Committee urged the host country to remove the remaining travel restrictions in question as soon as possible.

Acceleration of immigration and customs procedures

In July, Iraq protested the late issuance of entry visas to its delegates, noting that such delay was particularly onerous with regard to special sessions and conferences. It referred to its 11 June complaint about the inhumane treatment of an Iraqi official applying for a visa, the United States response to which provided no satisfactory explanation. The host country expressed surprise over the allegation, pointing out that the official in question had declined the government visa offered as she was not representing the Government and had therefore been granted a tourist visa, which required her to be photographed and fingerprinted. Neither those procedures nor the area in which they were conducted was inhumane or reserved for criminals. The host country confirmed its sovereign right to decide on the eligibility and procedures for entry into its territory and said it was very careful to ensure that visas were issued on time, especially when applications had been submitted on time.

The Committee anticipated that the host country would ensure timely issuance of entry visas to representatives of Member States, including to attend official UN meetings.

Implementation of Headquarters Agreement

On 26 July, Argentina, on behalf of the Latin American and Caribbean Group, expressed indignation over the lack of courtesy of the New York City police engaged in carrying out security arrangements for the upcoming Millennium Summit (see p. 47) and called on the local authorities to issue instructions to all appropriate levels to respect the members of the diplomatic community. Cuba's position was that security measures should not interfere with the ability of the permanent missions to do their work. The host country confirmed that it would make every effort to maintain open and free access to UN Headquarters, but that it was also necessary to accept the measures required to ensure the safety and security of the more than 150 heads of State expected at the Summit. The Committee appreciated the host country's efforts in that regard and anticipated that it would continue to take all steps necessary to prevent any interference with the missions' functioning.

On 28 August, Cuba, observing that the host country's denial of entry visas was a recurring problem for it, lamented that the President of Cuba's National Assembly had been denied a visa to attend the Conference of Presiding Officers of National Parliaments, to be convened at Headquarters (30 August–1 September) by the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) in conjunction with the Millennium Assembly, because the Conference was not a UN meeting under the terms of the Headquarters Agreement. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya regarded the denial as a violation of that Agreement, while Iraq urged a broader interpretation of it. China, Costa Rica, France, Honduras, Hungary, Mali, Mexico, the Russian Federation and Spain appealed to the host country to reconsider its position, given the close link between the Conference and the Millennium Assembly. The host country reaffirmed its position that the Agreement did not apply to the Conference and thus it had no obligation to issue the visas. However, it had decided, in response to the Secretary-General's appeal, to issue visas to two of the four parliamentarians of the Cuban National Assembly and would consider the appeals made, but reiterated that it had no obligation to issue the visas.

At the Committee Chairman's request, the Assistant Secretary-General in charge of the Office of Legal Affairs, on 1 September, orally delivered the Legal Counsel's opinion on the status of the Conference and the host country's obligations relative to the issuance of visas to the participants. The Legal Counsel concluded that, as the Conference was convened by IPU and not by the United Nations, it could not be considered a UN meeting and thus could not be deemed to constitute "official United Nations business" within the meaning of section II of the Headquarters Agreement. The denial of entry visas to the Conference invitees would not therefore constitute a violation of the host country's obligations under the Agreement. However, in view of General Assembly resolutions 53/13 [YUN 1998, p. 1341], 54/12 [YUN 1999, p. 1357] and 54/281 (see p. 1367) and of the fact that the Conference was being held in conjunction with the Millennium Summit, the Conference was clearly a UN-related meeting. Thus, while the host country could not be called upon to issue the visas as a matter of legal obligation, the nexus between the Conference and the United Nations was such that the host country could be expected to do so as a matter of courtesy. Since the Agreement did not specifically cover UN-related meetings and since such meetings might become increasingly common as relations between the United Nations and other international and non-governmental actors expanded, the Committee might wish to consider recommending to the General Assembly that it include an appropriate request to the host country in the context of its future resolutions welcoming meetings and conferences at Headquarters related to or held in conjunction with its sessions and work.

In noting the foregoing opinion, the Committee recommended that the host country take it into consideration in the future.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/611 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 55/154 without vote [agenda item 161].

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations and the responsibilities of the host country,

Recalling also that, in accordance with paragraph 7 of General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971, the Committee should consider, and advise the host country on, issues arising in connection with the implementation of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

1. Endorses the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 62 of its report;

2. Notes that the Committee has taken note of the opinion of the Legal Counsel of 1 September 2000 concerning the issuance of visas to participants in United Nations-related meetings and that, in this connection, the Committee has recommended that the host country take that opinion into consideration in the future;

3. Considers that the maintenance of appropriate conditions for the normal work of the delegations and the missions accredited to the United Nations is in the interest of the United Nations and all Member States, and requests the host country to continue to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions;

4. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the host country, and hopes that the issues raised at the meetings of the Committee will continue to be resolved in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law;

5. Notes that during the reporting period the travel controls previously imposed by the host country on staff of certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities remained in effect, and requests the host country to consider removing such travel controls, and in this regard notes the positions of affected States, of the Secretary-General and of the host country;

6. Also notes that the Committee anticipates that the host country will continue to ensure the issuance, in a timely manner, of entry visas to representatives of Member States, pursuant to article IV, section 11, of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations, inter alia, for the purpose of their attending official United Nations meetings;

7. Requests the host country to continue to take steps to resolve the problem relating to the parking of diplomatic vehicles in a fair, balanced and non-discriminatory way, with a view to responding to the growing needs of the diplomatic community, and to continue to consult with the Committee on this important issue;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country;

9. Requests the Committee to continue its work in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI);

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

International economic law

---

Legal aspects of international economic law continued to be considered in 2000 by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

International trade law

At its thirty-third session (New York, 12 June–7 July), UNCITRAL considered privately financed infrastructure projects, electronic commerce, assignment in receivables financing, insolvency, implementation of the 1958 Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (New York Convention) [YUN 1958, p. 390], transport law, endorsement of texts of other organizations, case law on UNCITRAL texts, training and technical assistance, status and promotion of UNCITRAL texts, and relevant General Assembly resolutions on the Commission's work. The report on the session [A/55/17] described action taken on those topics and annexed a list of related documents.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/608], adopted resolution 55/151 without vote [agenda item 158].

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its thirty-third session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it created the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Reaffirming its conviction that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would contribute significantly to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Emphasizing the need for higher priority to be given to the work of the Commission in view of the increasing value of the modernization of international trade law for global economic development and thus for the maintenance of friendly relations among States,

Stressing the value of participation by States at all levels of economic development and from different legal systems in the process of harmonizing and unifying international trade law,

Having considered the report of the Commission on the work of its thirty-third session,

Concerned that activities undertaken by other bodies of the United Nations system in the field of international trade law without coordination with the Commission might lead to undesirable duplication of efforts and would not be in keeping with the aim of promoting efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law, as stated in its resolution 37/106 of 16 December 1982,

Stressing the importance of the further development of case law on United Nations Commission on International Trade Law texts in promoting the uniform application of the legal texts of the Commission and its value for government officials, practitioners and academics,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its thirty-third session;

2. Commends the Commission for the work on privately financed infrastructure projects, which culminated in the adoption of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects, as well as the important progress made in its work on receivables financing;

3. Appeals to Governments that have not yet done so to reply to the questionnaire circulated by the Secretariat in relation to the legal regime governing the recognition and enforcement of foreign arbitral awards and, in particular, to the legislative implementation of the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, done at New York on 10 June 1958;

4. Invites States to nominate persons to work with the private foundation established to encourage assistance to the Commission from the private sector;

5. Reaffirms the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field and, in this connection:

(a) Calls upon all bodies of the United Nations system and invites other international organizations to bear in mind the mandate of the Commission and the need to avoid duplication of effort and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law;

(b) Recommends that the Commission, through its secretariat, continue to maintain close cooperation with the other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law;

6. Also reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with training and technical assistance in the field of international trade law, such as assistance in the preparation of national legislation based on legal texts of the Commission;

7. Expresses the desirability for increased efforts by the Commission, in sponsoring seminars and symposia, to provide such training and technical assistance, and, in this connection:

(a) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for organizing seminars and briefing missions in Brazil, Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, Madagascar, Peru, the Russian Federation and South Africa;

(b) Expresses its appreciation to the Governments whose contributions enabled the seminars and briefing missions to take place, and appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Trust Fund for Symposia and, where appropriate, to the financing of special projects, and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in financing and organizing seminars and symposia, in particular in developing countries, and in the award of fellowships to candidates from developing countries to enable them to participate in such seminars and symposia;

8. Appeals to the United Nations Development Programme and other bodies responsible for development assistance, such as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, as well as to Governments in their bilateral aid programmes, to support the training and technical assistance programme of the Commission and to cooperate and coordinate their activities with those of the Commission;

9. Appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to make voluntary contributions to the trust fund for travel assistance to developing countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

10. Decides, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to continue, in the competent Main Committee during the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly, its consideration of granting travel assistance to the least developed countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to strengthen the secretariat of the Commission within the bounds of the resources available so as to ensure and enhance the effective implementation of the programme of the Commission;

12. Stresses the importance of bringing into effect the conventions emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law, and to this end urges States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to those conventions;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session a report on the implications of increasing the membership of the Commission, and invites Member States to submit their views on this issue;

14. Expresses its appreciation to Gerold Herrmann, Secretary of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law since 1991, who will retire on 31 January 2001, for his outstanding and devoted contribution to the process of unification and harmonization of international trade law in general and to the Commission in particular.

Also on 12 December, the Assembly, by decision 55/428, decided to resume consideration of the legal aspects of international economic relations at its fifty-eighth (2003) session and to include in the provisional agenda of that session the item entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order".

International commercial arbitration

Assignment in receivables financing

UNCITRAL began consideration of the draft articles of the 1999 draft convention on assignment in receivables financing [YUN 1999, p. 1264], postponing discussion of the title and preamble until it had considered the scope of the convention. The related documents before UNCITRAL included the report of the Working Group on International Contract Practices on its thirty-first session (Vienna, 11-22 October 1999), a compilation of comments by Governments and international organizations on the draft, and an article-by-article analytical commentary prepared by the Secretariat.

UNCITRAL requested a Secretariat drafting group to review draft articles 1 to 17 for consistency between the various language versions. Following its consideration of that group's report, UNCITRAL adopted articles 1 to 17 as revised, with the exception of the bracketed texts in those articles and of article 1, paragraph 5, and subject to consideration of certain issues in articles 7 and 17. It revised the title to read "Convention on Assignment of Receivables in International Trade", as well as the preamble. It was agreed that a commentary to the draft convention could explain that the term "international trade" was used in the widest possible sense and was intended to include trade, financial and consumer transactions.

In view of the changes made to articles 1 to 17, UNCITRAL referred the draft convention back to the Working Group with a request that it proceed expeditiously with considering all unsettled issues and effect purely drafting changes in those articles. The Working Group did so at its thirty-second session (Vienna, 11-22 December) and adopted the draft convention as a whole, with the exception of the bracketed texts, and submitted it to UNCITRAL for final review in 2001. It was noted that the draft convention as adopted by the Working Group would be distributed to all States and interested international organizations for their comments, and that the Secretariat would prepare an analytical compilation of those comments for distribution in advance of UNCITRAL's 2001 session, as well as a revised version of the commentary to the draft convention.

Privately financed infrastructure projects

At its June/July session [A/55/17], UNCITRAL conducted a final examination of the latest revised draft of a legislative guide on privately financed infrastructure projects, as contained in a report by the Secretary-General. On 29 June, UNCITRAL adopted the draft guide in its entirety, subject to a number of amendments, together with the notes to the recommendations, which the Secretariat was authorized to finalize in the light of the current session's deliberations. As finalized, the Guide consisted of chapters I to VII, with a total of 71 recommendations, published under the title "UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects". UNCITRAL asked the Secretariat to transmit the text to Governments and other interested bodies and to ensure its widest possible dissemination. It recommended that all States give it favourable consideration when revising or adopting legislation relevant to privately financed infrastructure projects.

The desirability or feasibility of preparing a model law or model legislative provisions on selected issues covered by the Legislative Guide was deferred to 2001. To assist UNCITRAL in making an informed decision on the matter, it was agreed that the Secretariat, in cooperation with other international organizations or financial institutions, should organize a colloquium to disseminate knowledge about the Legislative Guide or solicit the views of the widest possible spectrum of experts on the matter and report to UNCITRAL.

Electronic commerce

UNCITRAL considered the reports of the Working Group on Electronic Commerce on the work of its thirty-fifth (Vienna, 6-17 September 1999) and thirty-sixth (New York, 14-25 February 2000) sessions in preparation of draft uniform rules on electronic signatures. UNCITRAL noted that the Working Group had adopted the texts of articles 1 and 3 to 12, with some issues remaining to be clarified as a result of the Group's deletion of the notion of enhanced electronic signature from the rules. It expressed appreciation for the Group's efforts and the progress it had achieved. The Working Group was urged to complete work on the draft uniform rules at its thirty-seventh session and to review the draft guide to enactment to be prepared by the Secretariat.

In a preliminary exchange of views on future work in the field of electronic commerce, three possible topics were suggested: electronic contracting, considered from the perspective of the United Nations Sales Convention, which was generally felt to constitute a readily acceptable framework for online contracts dealing with the sale of goods; dispute settlement, to determine whether specific rules were needed to facilitate the increased use of online dispute settlement mechanisms; and dematerialization of documents of title, particularly in the transport industry. A study might be undertaken to assess the desirability and feasibility of establishing a uniform statutory framework to support the development of contractual schemes currently being set up to replace traditional paper-based bills of lading by electronic messages, which should not be restricted to maritime bills of lading but should also envisage other modes of transportation; outside the sphere of transport law, it might also deal with issues of dematerialized securities.

UNCITRAL agreed that the Working Group, upon completing its current task, would examine in 2001 some or all of the topics mentioned, as well as any additional topic, and make specific proposals for UNCITRAL's future work.

In view of the rapid development of electronic commerce, a considerable number of projects with a possible impact on that field were being planned or undertaken. The Secretariat was asked to carry out appropriate monitoring and to report to UNCITRAL as to how the function of coordination was being fulfilled to avoid duplication of work and to ensure harmony in the development of various projects. The area of electronic commerce was generally regarded as one in which UNCITRAL's coordination mandate could be exercised with particular benefit to the global community and deserved corresponding attention from the Working Group and the Secretariat.

Implementation of the 1958 New York Convention

UNCITRAL noted that, at the beginning of its June/July session, the Secretariat had received 59 replies to the questionnaire it had sent relating to the legal regime governing the recognition and enforcement of foreign awards in States parties to the 1958 Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (New York Convention) [YUN 1958, p. 390]. UNCITRAL called on the remaining States parties to submit their replies or to inform the Secretariat about any new developments since their previous replies to the questionnaire, and requested the Secretariat to present its findings based on an analysis of the information gathered.

UNCITRAL considered the report of the Working Group on Arbitration on its thirty-second session (Vienna, 20-31 March 2000), which began considering the priority items for future work in the area of international commercial arbitration entrusted to it in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1265] and exchanged preliminary views on other possible topics. UNCITRAL took note of the report and commended the work accomplished. It reaffirmed the Working Group's mandate to decide on the time and manner of dealing with those topics. It also called for coordination between the Working Group and the Advisory Group on the European Convention on International Commercial Arbitration of the Economic Commission for Europe and stated that the latter's work should not overlap UNCITRAL's work at the global level.

Case law on UNCITRAL texts

UNCITRAL noted the ongoing work under the system for the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT). It expressed appreciation to national correspondents for their valuable work in the collection of relevant decisions and arbitral awards and in the preparation of case abstracts, as well as to the Secretariat for compiling, editing, issuing and distributing case abstracts. It noted that, whereas 62 jurisdictions had appointed national correspondents, another 26 had not done so. Noting the importance of uniform reporting from all jurisdictions, UNCITRAL urged States that had not appointed a national correspondent to do so. Also noted was the significant increase in the number of States adhering to conventions or enacting legislation based on model laws drawn up by UNCITRAL. Concern was expressed that the resultant increase in the caseload would put the continuation of CLOUT at risk if the human and financial resources of the UNCITRAL secretariat were not correspondingly increased.

Transport law

UNCITRAL took note of a March report of the Secretary-General on possible future work in transport law, which described the progress of work carried out by the Comité maritime international (CMI) in cooperation with the Secretariat to solicit information, ideas and opinions as to problems in transport law arising in practice and possible solutions. It further took note of an oral report on behalf of CMI on the preliminary work accomplished and of a transport law colloquium being organized jointly by the Secretariat and CMI on 6 July in the context of the current UNCITRAL session. The colloquium's purpose was to gather ideas and expert opinions on problems arising in the international carriage of goods, in particular carriage by sea, for incorporation into a report to be presented in 2001, to allow UNCITRAL to take an informed decision on a course of action.

The Secretariat was requested to continue co-operating actively with CMI with a view to presenting at UNCITRAL's 2001 session a report identifying transport law issues for possible inclusion in UNCITRAL's work programme.

Endorsement of texts of other organizations

UNCITRAL had before it three reports by the Secretary-General requesting its endorsement for the worldwide use of the following: the new Rules on International Standby Practices (ISP98), sought by the Director of the Institute of International Banking Law and Practice, Inc., following endorsement of those rules by the Commission on Banking Technique and Practice of the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC); the ICC Uniform Rules for Contract Bonds (URCB); and Incoterms 2000, the official ICC rules for the interpretation of contractual trade terms. It was pointed out that in a number of countries not all of the ISP98 provisions would conform with existing legal rules. Nonetheless, it was agreed, in the context of legal instruments emanating from other international organizations, that "endorsement" should be interpreted as commendation of those instruments for use as a record of good international commercial practice; it should carry no implication, however, as to the instruments' conformity with existing law.

UNCITRAL adopted a decision endorsing the three instruments and commending their use in international trade and financing transactions.

Model law on corporate insolvency

UNCITRAL considered the report of the Working Group on Insolvency Law on the work of its twenty-second session (Vienna, 6-17 December 1999). As requested, the Group explored, in the light of current regulatory practices and laws, the feasibility of developing a universally acceptable model law or principles for insolvency regimes and sought to define the scope of issues to be included. To that end, the Group examined, among other aspects, the key objectives of an insolvency regime and core features of a national regime, as well as various possible forms that a model instrument might take.

UNCITRAL agreed with the Group's conclusion that a single model insolvency law was neither feasible nor necessary and, as recommended by the Group, mandated it to prepare a comprehensive statement of key objectives and core features for a strong insolvency, debtor-creditor regime, including consideration of out-of-court restructuring, and a legislative guide containing flexible approaches to the implementation of such objectives and features, including a discussion of the possible alternative approaches and the perceived benefits and detriments of such approaches. A legislative guide similar to that adopted by UNCITRAL for privately financed infrastructure projects would be useful and could contain model legislative provisions where appropriate. The Group should be mindful of the work under way or already completed by other organizations, including the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the Asian Development Bank, the International Federation of Insolvency Professionals (INSOL International) and the International Bar Association (IBA). In order to obtain the views and benefit from the expertise of those organizations, a colloquium would be held before the Group's next session, which INSOL International and IBA offered to organize with the Secretariat.

Security interests

UNCITRAL considered work undertaken by other organizations in the field of security interests on the basis of an April report by the Secretary-General, which discussed developments in the area of security interests law in the last 25 years, identified trends and problems and suggested possible areas for future work. Among the suggestions made in the discussion was that, in view of the divergent policies of States, a flexible approach aimed at the preparation of a set of principles with a guide, rather than a model law, would be advisable. Furthermore, to ensure optimal benefits from law reform, any efforts on security interests would need to be coordinated with those on insolvency law.

UNCITRAL requested the Secretariat to prepare a study discussing in detail the problems in the field of secured credit law and possible solutions for consideration by the Commission in 2001. The study should draw and build on the work carried out by other organizations and take into account the need to avoid duplication of effort.

Training and technical assistance

UNCITRAL had before it a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/473] indicating training and technical assistance activities undertaken since its 1999 session and the direction of future activities. It reported that 12 seminars and briefing missions were held, financed from the UNCITRAL trust fund for symposiums, and that, for the remainder of 2000, only some requests from Africa, Asia, Latin America and Eastern Europe could be met due to insufficient resources.

UNCITRAL recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to increase substantially the human and financial resources of its secretariat to enable it fully to implement its training and technical assistance programme aimed at promoting understanding of international commercial law conventions, model laws and other legal texts and at helping Member States with commercial law reform and adoption of UNCITRAL texts. UNCITRAL reiterated its appeal to all States, international organizations and other interested entities for contributions to its trust fund for that purpose and suggested encouraging the private sector to do the same, since it benefited considerably from UNCITRAL's overall work in international trade law.

Chapter I

Strengthening and restructuring of the United Nations system

In 2000, the United Nations introduced new measures to further the process of reform of the Organization, including the drafting of a human resources reform package, the elaboration of an information technology policy and the development of a capital master plan. In his report to the Millennium Summit of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General identified constraints preventing the Organization from being more modern and flexible. The Assembly, in the Summit Declaration, urged the Secretariat to make better use of its resources by adopting the best management practices and technology available.

The Secretary-General reported on the implementation of Assembly resolution 54/14 on measures adopted to improve procurement in the United Nations and in the field. He reviewed the work of the UN oversight bodies: the Office of Internal Oversight Services and the Joint Inspection Unit.

The Secretary-General reported some progress in the continuing discussions on increasing the membership of the Security Council within the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council. He made recommendations to further implement the resolutions of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields.

Programme of reform

General aspects

The Secretary-General continued to implement his programme for UN reform, first introduced in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1389]. In his annual report on the work of the Organization (see p. 3), he said that considerable progress had been made during 2000 towards achieving the goal of creating an organizational culture that was responsive and results-oriented. Important developments were the drafting of a human resources reform package, an information technology policy and a capital master plan.

The reform package in human resources proposed fundamental changes in accountability, mobility, recruitment, placement and promotion, and contractual mechanisms (see p. 1337). Other reforms called for improvements in human resource planning and performance management, the streamlining of rules and procedures, the enhancement of skills and competency development, better conditions of service and strengthening the administration of justice. The information technology policy addressed the introduction and management of new information technologies and their use as vehicles for the distribution and management of information. It would also allow for more effective dissemination of greater amounts of information within the United Nations. In that regard, the Department of Public Information implemented a range of innovations to increase the breadth and depth of communication about the United Nations and its work, especially the millennium promotional campaign under the theme "The United Nations Works", which explained how the Organization was addressing the main challenges of the twenty-first century (see p. 572). The long-term capital master plan advanced possible solutions and financing options for dealing with major repairs and refurbishment of the Headquarters complex (see p. 1405).

In other areas, efforts continued to improve the Organization's productivity in terms of the quality, impact and cost-effectiveness of UN programmes, central to which was efficient management. Efficiency and transparency in the procurement process increased. The process of simplifying and streamlining the rules and procedures of the Organization continued, as did preparations to shift to results-based budgeting (see p. 1295). However, the greatest challenge to improving management and productivity over the past three bienniums continued to be financial constraints.

In his March report to the Millennium Summit (see p. 55), entitled "We the peoples: the role of the United Nations in the twenty-first century" [A/54/2000], the Secretary-General said that, were the international community to create a new United Nations, its make-up would have to be different from the current one, whose structure reflected decades of mandates conferred by Member States and, in some cases, the legacy of political disagreements. While there was widespread consensus on the need to make the United Nations more modern and flexible, unless Member States were willing to contemplate real structural reform, severe limits to what the Organization could achieve would continue. UN resources were not commensurate with its global tasks, given the continuing stagnant budgets, non-payment of dues and imposition of new mandates without additional resources for their execution. The United Nations could not do its job in many areas, because disagreements among Member States precluded the consensus needed for effective action. Moreover, the intrusive and detailed oversight that Member States exercised over programme activities made it difficult to maximize efficiency or effectiveness. To reduce the built-in bias towards institutional inertia afflicting the Organization's work and to facilitate the strategic redeployment of resources, the Secretary-General proposed time limits or "sunset provisions" for initiatives involving new organizational structures or major commitment of funds. A more people-oriented United Nations had to be more results-based, in both staffing and resource allocation.

The General Assembly, by decision 54/489 of 5 September, included in the draft agenda of its fifty-fifth (2000) session the sub-item entitled "United Nations reform: measures and proposals".

The Assembly, in the Millennium Declaration adopted by resolution 55/2 on 8 September (see p. 49), resolved to ensure that the Organization was provided on a timely and predictable basis with the resources needed to carry out its mandates. It urged the Secretariat to make the best use of those resources by adopting the best management practices and technologies available and by concentrating on those tasks reflecting the agreed priorities of Member States.

By decision 55/458 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on UN reform should remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Managerial reform and oversight

Procurement

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/14 [YUN 1999, p. 1271], the Secretary-General in February reissued his 1999 report [ibid., p. 1273] to revise the definition of "exigency needs" as it pertained to procurement reform. As revised, the term meant "an exceptional compelling and emergent need, not resulting from poor planning or from concerns over the availability of funds, that will lead to serious damage, loss or injury to property or persons if not addressed immediately" [A/54/650].

By decision 54/468 of 7 April, the Assembly endorsed the revised definition, with the insertion of the words "or management" between the words "poor planning" and "or from concerns".

Also in response to resolution 54/14, the Secretary-General submitted a May report on measures to improve procurement in the field (see p. 111), consideration of which the Assembly, by decision 54/462 B of 15 June, deferred to its fifty-fifth (2000) session. He further submitted a July report on procurement reform [A/55/127], detailing Secretariat initiatives in response to the concerns expressed in the same resolution. Most of those initiatives, which had been implemented and had produced the desired results, were aimed mainly at increasing transparency and evaluation objectivity in the bidding process, encouraging greater vendor participation from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, and increasing the cost-effectiveness of the Secretariat's procurement activities. The Secretary-General remained committed to ensuring that those positive developments were sustained and advanced.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, in an October report [A/55/458], encouraged the Secretary-General to include information on such initiatives in subsequent reports, as well as an indication of areas where further improvements could be achieved. The Procurement Division should ensure that its human and financial resources were adequate to allow full compliance with resolution 54/14.

Oversight

Internal oversight

The Secretary-General, in transmitting a report on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) (see p. 1288), concurred that OIOS was recognized as an objective source of reliable information and as an agent of change in the Organization, in particular with regard to strengthening internal controls and management performance. He noted the continuing efforts of OIOS to improve relationships with management and Member States and to coordinate its programme with other oversight bodies, including the Board of External Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU).

By decision 54/320 of 2 March, the General Assembly, on the proposal of the Secretary-General [A/54/109], appointed Dileep Nair (Singapore) Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services for one five-year fixed term, effective 24 April 2000.

In April, during its resumed fifty-fourth session, the Assembly considered OIOS reports on the following: the review of the programme and administrative practices of the secretariat of the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO (United Nations Conference on Trade and Development/World Trade Organization) [YUN 1997, p. 1400] and related JIU comments [YUN 1998, p. 1259]; investigation into the alleged conflict of interest in the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) [YUN 1997, p. 1099] and JIU's comments thereon [YUN 1998, p. 1259]; the audits of the regional commissions [ibid., p. 918]; the review of programme management in the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Division [ibid., p. 1035]; audit of the second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements [ibid., p. 1022]; review of the procurement of Lysol by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) [A/52/887]; inquiry into allegations of insufficient use of expertise in procurement planning of aviation services in peacekeeping missions [YUN 1998, p. 59]; audit of the commercial insurance programmes [ibid., p. 1363]; audit of the UN health insurance programme [ibid.]; investigation into allegations of theft of funds by an UNCTAD staff member (see p. 1318); review of common services in the United Nations [YUN 1999, p. 1376] and JIU's comments [ibid., p. 1377]; review of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) and JIU's comments [ibid., p. 828]; investigation into the field office in Lebanon of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (see p. 450); management audit of the conference centres at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific [ibid., p. 1380]; and investigation into allegations concerning an electronic commerce project at UNCTAD [ibid., p. 911].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 April [meeting 95], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/54/511/Add.2], adopted resolution 54/257 without vote [agenda item 118].

Reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 and 54/244 of 23 December 1999,

1. Takes note of the following reports:

(a) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of the commercial insurance programmes;

(b) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audits of the regional commissions;

(c) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of the second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements;

(d) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of the United Nations health insurance programme;

(e) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the investigation into allegations of theft of funds by a staff member of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development;

(f) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of common services in the United Nations and the comments of the Joint Inspection Unit thereon;

(g) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the investigation into the field office in Lebanon of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East;

(h) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the management audit of conference centres at the Economic Commission for Africa and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific;

(i) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the investigation into allegations concerning an electronic commerce project at the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development;

(j) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the procurement of Lysol by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

(k) Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the inquiry into allegations of insufficient use of expertise in procurement planning of aviation services in peacekeeping missions;

2. Takes note also of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and the comments of the Joint Inspection Unit thereon;

3. Requests that, in future, the appropriate legislative mandates relating to the work of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs be included in the reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and also requests that the appropriate legislative mandates be included as well in other future published reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

4. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the programme and administrative practices of the secretariat of the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO and the comments of the Unit thereon, reaffirming that the merging of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and the International Trade Centre has not been approved by the pertinent legislative bodies;

5. Takes note also of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of programme management in the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Division, reaffirming that the discontinuation of mandates on crime prevention and criminal justice is within the prerogative of the pertinent legislative bodies;

6. Takes note further of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the investigation into the alleged conflict of interest in the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) and the comments of the Unit thereon, reaffirming that the approval of amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations and the ratification of amendments to the Staff Rules are the prerogative of Member States.

By decision 54/478 of the same date, the Assembly deferred consideration of the item on the report of the Secretary-General on OIOS activities until its fifty-fifth (2000) session.

Report of Secretary-General. In October, the Secretary-General transmitted the sixth annual report of OIOS covering its activities from 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000 [A/55/436].

OIOS issued 16 reports to the General Assembly during the reporting period. Those transmitted in 2000 were on: follow-up review of the programme and administrative practices of Habitat [A/54/764]; audit of contingent-owned equipment procedures and payments to troop-contributing countries [A/54/765 & Corr.1]; follow-up to the 1996 review of the programme and administrative practices of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) [A/54/817]; audit of the Human Rights Field Operation in Rwanda [A/54/836]; strengthening the role of evaluation findings in programme design, delivery and policy directives [A/55/63]; programme performance of the United Nations for the 1998-1999 biennium [A/55/73]; and ways in which the full implementation and quality of mandated programmes and activities could be ensured and could be better assessed by and reported to Member States [A/55/85].

A continuing focus of OIOS was the full implementation of its recommendations. It thus maintained consultations with clients before finalizing its recommendations to ensure their usefulness and during implementation. During the reporting period, the Audit and Management Consulting Division issued 825 recommendations, of which 50 per cent were implemented; the Investigations Section had a 50 per cent implementation rate for its 106 recommendations; and, of the 37 recommendations of the Central Monitoring and Inspections Unit, 24 per cent were implemented. The Central Evaluation Unit issued 37 recommendations.

OIOS identified and recommended $17 million in cost savings and recoveries, and realized savings and recoveries amounting to $5.3 million, compared to $37.8 million and $23.5 million, respectively, in the previous reporting period. The decline was due to a heavier audit focus on policy and programmatic issues, compared to the previous reporting period, when a large portion of the savings and recoveries resulted from audits of the liquidation of large peacekeeping missions in Angola and the former Yugoslavia.

The report gave an overview of activities of the oversight priority areas for the reporting period: peacekeeping, humanitarian and related activities, human resources management and procurement. Besides expanding the audit coverage of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, OIOS conducted audits at 11 field missions and of contingent-owned equipment procedures and payments to troop-contributing countries, of the global vehicle procurement project and of mission liquidations. The audit of the liquidation of peacekeeping operations revealed that the Department's field asset control system had not been fully implemented, leaving no common recording system for assets. It also needed to improve inventory controls, reassess policy for asset transfer to other missions or to the United Nations Logistics Base in Brindisi, Italy, and standardize procedures for the commercial disposal of assets.

The audits of UNHCR centred on programme management by UNHCR and its implementing partners, as well as its field office administration and finance. OIOS noted that the delayed closure of the previous year's projects remained an issue of concern. It found that, while some level of assurance could be obtained as to the completeness and accuracy of financial reports submitted to UNHCR by its implementing partners, that was not always the case. In many instances, the partners realized significant exchange-rate gains not properly reported in UNHCR project accounts or disclosed in financial reports. The lack of pertinent documentation in the field relating to the programme activities of international non-governmental organizations (NGOs) was a continuing problem for the auditors. The triennial review of OCHA showed that progress had been made in addressing gaps in the response to emergencies and in the advocacy of humanitarian concerns. However, rapid response to emergencies was still hindered by the absence of special UN administrative and financial rules and procedures suited to emergency situations. Audits of the Office of the Iraq Programme included those of the financial and administrative procedures and operational arrangements of the Office of the Humanitarian Coordinator in Iraq. Through a market survey of vendors in northern Iraq, OIOS found that the amounts paid by the Office were on average 61 per cent higher than the quotes obtained by OIOS. It further found only limited coordination of programme planning, and insufficient review and independent assessment of project implementation activities. As to its review of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, OIOS noted not only the need to improve administrative support services, but also the lack of criteria for determining the number of security staff, for hiring such staff or for monitoring their performance.

A follow-up audit of the recruitment process indicated that the Office of Human Resources Management had made progress towards reducing the recruitment timeline by one third, improving the management of the national competitive examination programme and updating the roster of candidates, introducing an electronic recruitment tracking system, and including core values and competencies in the vacancy announcement and interview process. Key recommendations for further improvement included establishing overall recruitment goals and strategies, provision of guidance to programme managers regarding gender balance and geographical distribution, and further refinement of benchmarks for monitoring recruitment activities.

Given the significance of procurement expenditures, a separate unit was established within the OIOS Audit and Management Consulting Division as the focal point for procurement audits. A second follow-up audit of procurement reform was carried out to verify that the recommendations of the group of high-level experts on procurement reform [YUN 1995, p. 1457] had been satisfactorily implemented.

As part of its oversight function, the Audit and Management Consulting Division started 148 audit assignments, issued 82 audit reports to senior management and provided five reports for the General Assembly. In addition, it issued 453 audit observations. Key audit recommendations related to programme/project management, cash management, personnel, payroll and travel, financial accounting/reporting, procurement, property management, information technology systems, and general administration and management.

The Investigations Section received 287 cases, compared to 247 in the previous reporting period, a 16 per cent increase. Thirty-eight cases were presented for administrative or disciplinary action, 22 of which were recommended for criminal prosecution by national law enforcement authorities. Of the 194 open cases as at 30 June, 25 per cent were located at UN Headquarters, 27 per cent in Africa, 28 per cent in Europe, 8 per cent in the Middle East and Asia and 4 per cent in the United States outside UN Headquarters. New inspections were carried out at OCHA, Habitat and UNEP, as well as an inspectorial visit to ECA.

In-depth evaluations were undertaken of global development trends, issues and policies, and global approaches to social and microeconomic issues and policies, and the corresponding subprogrammes in the regional commissions [E/AC.51/2000/2], and of the advancement of women programme [E/AC.51/2000/3]. Triennial reviews were conducted on the implementation of the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its thirty-seventh session [YUN 1997, p. 1487] on the evaluations of the Department of Humanitarian Affairs [E/AC.51/2000/5] and the statistics programme [E/AC.51/2000/4].

OIOS investigation rules and procedures

Responding to General Assembly resolution 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], the Secretary-General submitted an October report on rules and procedures to be applied for the investigation functions performed by OIOS [A/55/469]. The Secretary-General said that the OIOS Investigations Section operated in conformity with the United Nations Staff Rules and Regulations, as well as the provisions of Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 and the provisions of the Secretary-General's bulletin of 7 September 1994 [ST/SGB/273] and the OIOS Manual, which together constituted the OIOS mandate. The Section adhered to that mandate with due regard for fairness and objectivity and commitment to the concept of accountability. If evidence showed that a staff member had violated laws or standards of ethical behaviour or was culpable of misconduct, waste, abuse or mismanagement, the Section would make recommendations to the concerned programme manager, which might include referral to a national jurisdiction for criminal prosecution and/or to the Office of Human Resources Management for disciplinary action. The Section would also work to exonerate staff wrongly or incorrectly accused. Investigative activities were conducted in such a way as to ensure the confidentiality of those making reports, the rights of staff members involved, protection from reprisals of those who contacted the Section and the interests of the Organization. Direction and supervision by the OIOS Under-Secretary-General also ensured the accountability of the Section's work.

On 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on the report of OIOS remained for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458) and that the Fifth Committee should continue consideration of the item at that session (decision 55/455).

External oversight

Strengthening external oversight mechanisms

By decision 54/469 of 7 April, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report on the views of the Board of Auditors on improvement of oversight functions of the United Nations [YUN 1994, p. 1365], and a JIU note containing its updated and additional views on the strengthening of external oversight mechanisms [YUN 1996, p. 1265].

Joint Inspection Unit

On 7 April, the General Assembly, in resolution 54/255, stressed the importance for the Joint Inspection Unit to use the most recent data available in its reports and called on the Secretary-General and the executive heads of UN system organizations to provide timely data to JIU. The Secretary-General should ensure the timely issuance of JIU reports and his related comments and those of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) to enable the Assembly and all the governing bodies to take prompt action thereon. The Assembly asked JIU to continue to improve its reports consistent with the requirements of its follow-up system.

In its thirty-second report to the General Assembly [A/56/34 & Corr.1], JIU gave an overview of its activities in 2000, during which it issued reports on: the administration of justice at the United Nations [A/55/57]; the use of consultants in the United Nations [A/55/59]; senior-level appointments in the United Nations, its programmes and funds [A/55/423]; review of management and administration in the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization [JIU/REP/2000/4]; UN system common services at Geneva, part II, case studies (International Criminal Court, Joint Medical Service, Training and Examination Section, Diplomatic Pouch Service, Joint Purchase Service) [A/55/856]; delegation of authority for management of human and financial resources in the UN Secretariat [A/55/857]; young Professionals in selected organizations of the UN system: recruitment, management and retention [A/55/798]; review of management and administration in the Registry of the International Court of Justice [A/55/834]; and strengthening the investigative function in the UN system organizations [JIU/REP/2000/9].

JIU continued to enhance further its functioning and impact. It established internal measures to expedite the preparation of its reports for issuance in advance of meetings of the legislative organs of participating bodies. That goal, however, was often hindered by, among other reasons, the tardiness of some of those bodies in providing JIU with requested information and/or comments. In its proposed 2002-2003 biennium programme budget, JIU introduced a new approach aimed at improving its research capacity by reallocating its professional post resources and by allowing more flexibility in the use of required expertise under short-term contracts.

The Secretary-General, in an August note [A/54/960], transmitted to the Assembly JIU's 2000 work programme and preliminary list of potential reports for 2001 and beyond.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/532], adopted resolution 55/230 without vote [agenda item 116].

Reports of the Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/16 of 29 October 1999,

1. Takes note of the annual report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 1999;
2. Also takes note of the programme of work of the Unit for 2000 and the preliminary list of potential reports for 2001 and beyond;
3. Stresses the importance of timely consideration of the reports of the Unit by all participating organizations;
4. Looks forward to the report requested in paragraph 6 of its resolution 54/16 concerning progress made in the implementation of the system of follow-up to the recommendations of the Unit;
5. Recognizes the critical role of legislative bodies, their secretariats and the Unit in the success of the implementation of the system;
6. Takes note of paragraphs 19 and 20 of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 1998 and reaffirms article 20 of the statute of the Unit and paragraph 182 of General Assembly resolution 54/249 of 23 December 1999, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to submit the report of the Administrative Committee on Coordination on the budget proposals made by the Unit as required by the statute;
7. Invites the Unit to continue to develop interaction with other United Nations oversight bodies and to intensify relations with the oversight bodies of other participating organizations with a view to achieving better coordination and sharing best practices;
8. Decides to consider the annual reports of the Unit on an annual basis.

Intergovernmental machinery

Strengthening of the UN system

By decision 54/490 of 5 September, the General Assembly included in the draft agenda of its fifty-fifth (2000) session the item entitled

"Strengthening of the United Nations system". By decision 55/458 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item should remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

By decision 54/491 of 5 September, the General Assembly included in the draft agenda of its fifty-fifth session the item entitled "Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly". By decision 55/458 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item should remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

United Nations/private sector partnership

The Secretary-General, in a January note [A/54/700], transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report analysing the lines along which a new partnership between the UN system and the private sector could be developed and how areas of mutual interest and benefit could translate into actions to improve understanding so as to better serve the goals of the Organization.

According to the report, the increasing interest by the two parties in each other was based on the recognition by the business community of the Organization's significant contribution to the creation of a favourable environment for private sector activities and UN acceptance of that sector's role as an essential partner in supporting economic growth and sustainable development. The private sector was already actively engaged in many UN activities. UN agencies, funds and programmes were trying to maximize the benefits from that engagement, while protecting themselves from its inherent risks. Those precautions, however, were not uniform throughout the system, and inconsistencies in their nature and application could undermine the image, credibility, integrity and legal immunity of the UN system. While the specificity of each agency, fund and programme might not allow for the establishment of system-wide guidelines, JIU believed that an increased information exchange and harmonization of procedures were required.

To that end, JIU recommended that participating organizations set realistic objectives and expectations for their partnership with the private sector, which their governing bodies should clearly enunciate, publicize and endorse. Their secretariats should carry out outreach programmes targeting the private sector, and designate a focal point or identify accessible units to serve the business community's information and assistance needs. Organizations should also ensure a UN presence at relevant business events, organize joint encounters and encourage wide private sector participation in their relevant activities, with special attention to enterprises in developing countries and/or those in transition.

The working group established by the Secretary-General's Senior Management Group to develop policy proposals should draft guidelines governing relations with the private sector, drawing on work already undertaken by some funds and programmes. UN agencies that had not done so should also adopt guidelines, taking account of the working group's activities; they should include a statement of principles and procedures for dealing with the private sector.

The United Nations should ensure the implementation of staff rule 101.6 relating to outside activities and interests of staff members, including the feasibility of extending rules for financial disclosures. Other participating organizations should examine whether their respective staff rules and regulations guaranteed that staff members did not hold a financial interest in commercial enterprises with which a partnership was envisaged. They should also ensure that bureaucratic procedures and lengthy response time did not discourage private sector initiatives. Mechanisms for sharing information and best practices with regard to relations with the private sector should be established to ensure consistency of policy and harmonization of relevant procedures throughout the UN system.

In June [A/54/700/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly ACC's comments on the JIU report.

The Assembly, in resolution 55/215 of 21 December, invited the Secretary-General to seek the views of relevant partners, in particular the private sector, on how to enhance their cooperation with the United Nations.

Review of Security Council membership and related matters

The Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council submitted a report on its work during five substantive sessions held between 6 March and 21 July [A/54/47]. At those sessions, discussion continued on the items under cluster I: decision-making, including the veto, the Council's expansion and periodic review of the enlarged Council; and those under cluster II: the Council's working methods and transparency of its work. Before the Group were conference room papers on each cluster, prepared by its Bureau.

The Working Group adopted its work programme and completed a reading of the paper on cluster II at the first session (6-15 March). At the second (3-5 April), it continued consideration of that cluster on the basis of a revised consolidated paper incorporating paragraphs provisionally agreed and proposals made on the paper's 1999 version; it began reading the paper on cluster I, which, owing to that paper's inadequacies, was subsequently revised and considered at the third session (2-12 May). At the fourth session (12-14 June), the Group completed a reading of the revised cluster II paper; it was briefed by Secretariat officials regarding the time required for the preparation and processing of the Council's annual report to the General Assembly. At the fifth session (10-21 July), Italy submitted legal observations on the notion of permanent membership on the Council. The Group further revised the papers on clusters I and II. It also considered its report to the Assembly.

The Assembly, by decision 54/488 of 5 September, took note of the Working Group's report. It welcomed progress so far achieved, as provisional agreement had been recorded on a large number of issues, and urged the Working Group to continue efforts during its fifty-fifth (2000) session to achieve progress on all aspects of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and other related matters.

The Assembly also decided to continue consideration of the subject during its fifty-fifth session and that the Working Group should continue its work, taking into account the progress achieved during the Assembly's forty-eighth (1993) to fifty-fourth (1999) sessions, as well as the views to be expressed at the fifty-fifth session, and report before the end of that session, including any agreed recommendations.

By decision 55/458 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item should remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

The Secretary-General submitted a report, in June [A/55/180-E/2000/67 & Corr.1], on restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields and co-operation between the United Nations and the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund). It described progress in the implementation of

General Assembly resolutions 50/227 [YUN 1996, p. 1249] and 52/12 B [YUN 1997, p. 1392] and Economic and Social Council resolutions 1998/46 [YUN 1998, p. 1262] and 1999/51 [YUN 1999, p. 1281].

To promote further implementation of the Assembly resolutions, the Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly's Second (Economic and Financial) and Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committees extend the practice of organizing a dialogue, when starting to consider an agenda item, with the heads of substantive departments, offices or agencies responsible for reporting requirements under that item; that ways of strengthening cooperation between those two Committees should continue to be explored, including the holding of joint panels on common issues and more frequent meetings of their two bureaux; that the Assembly discuss the Economic and Social Council report in plenary; and that the Second Committee's Bureau review the provisional agenda and further rationalize the methods of work of the Committee, including further clustering of agenda items, reducing the number of meetings, and adopting more omnibus or integrated resolutions.

The Secretary-General also recommended that the Council, in implementation of its resolutions, should further reflect on how it could better organize its debate on the functional commissions' reports and make its own report to the Assembly more amenable to review. It should request the commission bureaux to ensure the sharing of reports and documents among the commissions. The Council's Bureau might, when opportune, convene meetings of the functional commission chairpersons to exchange views on the direction of the commissions' work programmes and on issues of common interest. The Council might reiterate its request that the commissions ensure complementarity among their work programmes, which should take account of major UN events. To that end, the Secretary-General should submit to the commissions' next sessions background notes on those programmes, including proposals for possible linkages among them.

Other suggestions were for the Council to: hold informal dialogue on cross-cutting themes in order to benefit from the expertise of delegates attending a commission session and to broaden that commission's perspective on inter-related issues; examine ways to facilitate the participation of specialized NGOs not in consultative status with the Council in commission sessions of direct interest to their work; invite the functional commission bureaux to propose ways on how the commissions could contribute to efforts to assist

African countries and the least developed countries, particularly in the framework of the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries in 2001 (see p. 808) and the review of the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s in 2002; and reiterate its call to the functional commissions to report to it on the follow-up.

On cooperation between the United Nations and the Bretton Woods institutions, the Council should involve in its future joint meetings the chairpersons of the relevant functional commissions and of the Executive Boards of UN funds and programmes. It might extend similar partnership with the World Trade Organization and discuss the modalities for such cooperation and closely involve UNCTAD in that process.

By decision 54/492 of 5 September, the Assembly decided to include in the draft agenda of its fifty-fifth (2000) session the item entitled "Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields". By decision 55/458 of 23 December, it decided that the item would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Chapter II

United Nations financing and programming

The improved United Nations financial situation of 1999 was not sustained in 2000, which saw a return to lower cash balances, higher unpaid assessments and increased debt owed to Member States contributing troops for peacekeeping operations. Unpaid assessments at the end of 2000 stood at $2.2 billion, compared to $1.8 billion at the end of 1999, despite the increase in the number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full and on time, which rose to 137 in 2000. The Secretary-General considered the situation worrisome, especially in the light of proposed new expenditures for peacekeeping, personnel safety and security and the capital master plan for refurbishing the United Nations Headquarters complex.

The General Assembly adopted revised budget appropriations totalling $2,533,125,400 for 2000-2001, compared to the approved initial appropriations of $2,535,689,200. It noted the Secretary-General's budget outline for 2002-2003 and invited him to prepare his proposed programme budget on the basis of a preliminary estimate of $2,515.3 million at revised 2000-2001 rates. The Assembly considered the experience of UN system organizations with results-based budgeting and decided that the measures proposed by the Secretary-General to enhance responsibility and accountability in implementing programme budgets should be put in place in a gradual and incremental fashion.

The Committee on Contributions continued to review the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments of Member States' contributions to the UN budget, as well as new proposals for arriving at the rates of assessments for non-member and new Member States. It also considered a number of measures to encourage the timely, full and unconditional payment of assessed contributions. On the Committee's recommendation, the Assembly granted a number of exemptions under Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations.

The Assembly accepted the financial reports and audited financial statements of the Board of Auditors for the 1998-1999 biennium. It reviewed UN programme performance for 1998-1999 and endorsed the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) for improving programme evaluation. It noted CPC's and the Secretary-General's recommendations on ways in which the full implementation and the quality of mandated programmes and activities could be better ensured and assessed. It also adopted the proposed medium-term plan for 2002-2005.

Financial situation

By decision 54/495 of 5 September, the General Assembly included in the draft agenda of its fifty-fifth (2000) session the item entitled "Improving the financial situation of the United Nations".

In October [A/55/504], the Secretary-General reported that the turnaround in the Organization's financial situation evidenced in 1999 did not continue in 2000. Despite the increased number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full, the year-end cash position remained dependent on one Member State. The budgets and unpaid assessments for the two international tribunals (for Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia) were increasing annually and the larger unpaid assessments for peacekeeping operations limited the availability of cash, while the debt owed to troop-contributing Member States for troops and contingent-owned equipment remained intractable. That was worrisome, in the light of the Secretary-General's proposed expansion of peacekeeping field operations, backstopping support for better security protection for UN staff and the approval of a capital master plan for the United Nations Headquarters complex.

As at 30 September, unpaid assessments for the regular budget, peacekeeping and the international tribunals totalled just over $3 billion, up 23 per cent from the previous year: $533 million for the regular budget, $2,500 million for peacekeeping ($676 million more than in 1999), and $54 million for the international tribunals ($19 million more than in 1999). The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full continued to increase, rising, as at 20 October, to 137 Member States in respect of their 2000 assessments.

In an end-of-year review of the financial situation [A/55/504/Add.1], the Secretary-General confirmed that the Organization had failed to meet the forecasts based on the positive results of the previous year: cash was lower, unpaid assessments rose and debt owed to Member States increased. Aggregate cash amounted to $1 billion, almost $100 million lower than in 1999.

Unpaid assessments totalled $2.2 billion, reflecting an increase of about $500 million over the previous year's figure. Of that total, $222 million was for the regular budget (of which 89 per cent was owed by three Member States and the remaining 11 per cent by 43 others); $1,989 million for peacekeeping and $47 million for the tribunals. Debt to Member States for troops and contingent-owned equipment increased to $917 million, exceeding the levels of the preceding four years.

On 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda items on improving the financial situation of the United Nations and on the review of the efficiency of its administrative and financial functioning would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458), and that the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee should continue to consider those items at that session (decision 55/455).

UN budget

Results-based budgeting

In November [A/55/543], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) examined the Secretary-General's 1999 reports and that of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on results-based budgeting [YUN 1999, p. 1284]. ACABQ concluded that for many years it had found the budget presentation to be of uneven quality. While its financial aspects had been highly developed and refined, the same was not true on the programme side. The Secretary-General's proposals on results-based budgeting contained in his 1999 report attempted to build upon and strengthen the existing process of programme budgeting.

As to whether the Secretary-General's proposals were driven by financial constraints, ACABQ believed that the UN financial situation should not be the impetus to change budget methodology, practice and process. The introduction of new budget procedures should not be a means to reduce the budget or achieve savings, nor should it encourage the arbitrary setting of budgetary ceilings. Furthermore, the Secretary-General's proposals should not be so interpreted as to diminish his responsibility to justify fully the financial aspects of his budget proposals. Since those proposals incorporated much of current practice, ACABQ saw no immediate need to amend the financial regulations or the rules governing programme planning. Nor would its role or that of the Fifth Committee change in the consideration of the financial aspects of budget proposals. What was needed were improved planning, with the formulation of specific objectives and precise performance indicators; clear identification of external factors influencing UN operations; and giving priority to expanding and developing information technology and cost accounting systems to support new requirements adequately.

ACABQ observed that the Secretary-General's proposals could not be applied equally to all sections and activities of the programme budget. Modified techniques would have to be developed for performance analysis to remain valid and relevant. The basic terms employed in the proposals should be fully and precisely defined and consistently applied. Terminology should be harmonized with other UN entities, a comprehensive training programme in techniques to be developed should be organized, and staff should be given the opportunity to contribute to the budgeting system's further development. The process of budget innovation would be incremental, with refinement based on experience.

ACABQ recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposal that the General Assembly request him to continue to develop performance indicators for use in all substantive and support programmes and to include them in all sections of the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium. It also recommended approval of his amended proposal that the programme performance report for that biennium should contain, in addition to the current method of output measurement, an assessment of the Organization's performance in terms of expected accomplishments, using the achievement indicators to be included in the proposed 2002-2003 programme budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/532/Add.1 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 55/231 without vote [agenda item 116].

Results-based budgeting

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 52/12 B of 19 December 1997 and 53/205 of 18 December 1998,

Recalling also the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on results-based budgeting and the related addenda,

Having also considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the report of the Secretary-General

Having further considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on the experience of United Nations system organizations with results-based budgeting techniques, as well as the comments of the Secretary-General thereon,

Bearing in mind the intergovernmental, multilateral and international character of the United Nations,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986;

2. Also reaffirms the role of the General Assembly in carrying out a thorough analysis and approval of posts and financial resources, of resource allocation to all sections of the programme budget and of human resources policies, with a view to ensuring full and efficient implementation of all mandated programmes and activities and the implementation of policies in this regard;

3. Further reaffirms the respective mandates of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Committee for Programme and Coordination in the consideration of the proposed programme budget;

4. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

5. Notes that the measures proposed by the Secretary-General and recommended by the Advisory Committee are intended to provide, in essence, a management tool that should enhance responsibility and accountability in the implementation of programmes and budgets;

6. Decides that these measures, as approved by the General Assembly in the present resolution, should be implemented in a gradual and incremental manner, in full compliance with the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation and the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement are directly and clearly linked to the objectives of the programmes and in accordance with the different nature of the activities of the programmes, taking into account rules 104.7 (a) and 105.4 (a) of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that expected accomplishments, indicators of achievement and objectives are defined, bearing in mind the direct link between inputs and outputs, and that inputs are commensurate with the needs of programmes, and taking into consideration the international character of the United Nations, the purposes of its Charter and its legislative mandates, as well as the fact that the objectives of the Organization may not be realized in one medium-term plan only;

9. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, in presenting the programme budget, expected accomplishments and, where possible, indicators of achievement are included to measure achievements in the implementation of the programmes of the Organization and not those of individual Member States;

10. Stresses in this regard the need for continued improvement in the formulation of objectives, expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement with the full involvement of the relevant intergovernmental bodies;

11. Decides that the design of programme objectives in the context of the medium-term plan and in the programme budget should be enhanced as a key element of results-based budgeting, in order to reflect in a more accurate manner the mandates, policy objectives, orientation and priorities of the Organization, taking into account regulation 4.2 and rule 104.7 (e) of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the definition of terms and guidelines under review and to bring the question of definitions to the attention of the Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, with a view to obtaining the views and comments of the appropriate bodies of the United Nations system of organizations in order to arrive at an agreed set of key terms and guidelines pertaining to the results-based format of the budget within the United Nations system;

13. Stresses that external factors specific to the objectives and expected accomplishments should be identified in the proposed programme budget and that assessment of performance should reflect, and not be distorted by, the impact of unforeseen external factors;

14. Decides that significant external factors should also be identified in the context of future medium-term plans in order to illustrate their impact on the achievements obtained by the different programmes;

15. Also decides that the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003 shall contain input data at the same level of detail as that provided in the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001, in keeping with the responsibility of the Secretary-General to provide complete information in support of the financial aspects of his budget proposals;

16. Notes the observation of the Advisory Committee, in paragraph 16 of its report, that the Secretary-General already enjoys delegation of authority in programme delivery, in particular in the transfer of resources within sections of the budget;

17. Decides that any transfer of resources between post and non-post objects of expenditure would require the prior approval of the General Assembly;

18. Stresses that the use of indicators of achievement in the proposed programme budget and assessment of the performance of the Organization in terms of all the expected accomplishments should not constitute a method by which to adjust the level of approved resources, or of staff, and that requested resources should continue to be justified in terms of the requirements of output delivery;

19. Emphasizes that resources proposed by the Secretary-General should be commensurate with all mandated programmes and activities to ensure their full, effective and efficient implementation;

20. Notes that, in order to implement the present resolution, no revisions to the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations or to the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation are currently required, and, in this regard, also notes that the application of rule 105.6 (a) of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning should continue to reflect the understanding that approval of the medium-term plan and the programme budget constitutes the reaffirmation of mandates reflected therein;

21. Recognizes the difficulty of achieving the results of complex and long-standing political activities within specific time frames;

22. Reaffirms that, in accordance with rule 104.7 (b) of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, when an objective for Secretariat action cannot be achieved by the end of the plan period, both this longer-term objective and more specific objectives to be achieved within the plan period shall be set;

23. Emphasizes the need for the Secretariat to continue to improve its programme evaluation capacity, in order to implement fully the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning by, inter alia, strengthening standard evaluation methodologies in accordance with article VII of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning;

24. Stresses that any proposals for additional flexibility in managing inputs during budget implementation, if approved by the General Assembly, should always be accompanied by increased accountability;

25. Also stresses that flexibility in terms of the use of resources should be exercised with strict respect for the norms and decisions established by the General Assembly and the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, in particular in regard to the limits imposed by the General Assembly in the allocation of resources for every section, the staffing table and the rules and procedures for personnel matters;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake a detailed analysis of the information, management control and evaluation systems required to implement the proposals contained in his report, and of the capacity and limitations of existing systems, and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly, through the Advisory Committee, at the time of submitting his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003;

27. Stresses that the intention of the Secretary-General to focus the evaluation of programme delivery on expected accomplishments should be implemented in a manner that is flexible and complementary to the existing evaluation system;

28. Invites the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to develop on a continuous basis and to implement an adequate training programme to ensure that staff, as appropriate, are proficient in the concepts and techniques, including the formulation of expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement, as described in his report.

Budget for 1998-1999

By decision 55/458 of 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on the programme budget for the 1998-1999 biennium would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Budget for 2000-2001

Appropriations

By decision 54/481 of 15 June, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's 1997 report [YUN 1997, p. 1416] concerning additional expenditures referred to in paragraphs 10 and 11 of annex I to resolution 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024] and the relevant ACABQ report [YUN 1997, p. 1416]. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to keep it informed on issues pertaining to inflation and currency fluctuations in the context of the budget performance reports.

In the first performance report on the 2000-2001 programme budget [A/55/645 & Corr.1], submitted on 24 November, the Secretary-General identified adjustments to the budget owing to variations in inflation and exchange rates and in standards assumed in the calculation of the initial appropriations. Those adjustments yielded a reduction in expenditure of $40.5 million and an increase in income of $18.3 million. The revised estimates for the 2000-2001 biennium amounted to $2,115,575,400, compared to $2,174,390,300 approved in Assembly resolution 54/250 A [YUN 1999, p. 1303].

The performance report also took into account unforeseen and extraordinary expenses ($10,987,900) and decisions of policy-making organs ($3,633,700).

Those estimates were further revised in December [A/55/645/Add.1] to take into account notable changes in currency exchange rates. The revised estimates for the 2000-2001 biennium amounted to $2,120,651,100 (providing for a decrease in expenditure of $34,624,200 and an increase in income of $19,097,000).

ACABQ [A/55/7/Add.5 & Corr.1] recommended approval of the revised requirements of $2,501,047,000 under the expenditure sections and $380,395,900 under the income sections, resulting in net revised requirements of $2,120,651,100.

Also in December [A/C.5/55/35], the Secretary-General provided recosting of $90.7 million for outstanding items, and recommended that the related adjustments to the expenditure and income sections be reflected in the revised appropriations for the 2000-2001 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/713], adopted resolutions 55/239 A-C without vote [agenda item 117].

Financing of the appropriations for the year 2001

The General Assembly

Resolves that, for the year 2001:

1. Budget appropriations totalling 1,265,280,800 United States dollars and consisting of 1,267,844,600 dollars, being half of the appropriations initially approved for the biennium 2000-2001 in its resolution 54/250 C of 23 December 1999, less 2,563,800 dollars, being the reduction approved by the General Assembly in resolution A above, shall be financed in accordance with regulations 5.1 and 5.2 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations as follows:

(a) 51,899,313 dollars, consisting of:

- (i) 21,193,700 dollars, being half of the estimated income other than income from staff assessment approved for the biennium 2000-2001 by the Assembly in its resolution 54/250 B of 23 December 1999;
- (ii) Plus 5,310,100 dollars, being the increase approved by the Assembly in resolution B above;
- (iii) 25,395,513 dollars, being the balance in the surplus account as at 31 December 1999;
- (b) 1,213,381,487 dollars, being the assessment on Member States in accordance with its resolution 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 on the scale of assessments for the year 2001;

2. There shall be set off against the assessment on Member States, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the total amount of 179,097,566 dollars, consisting of:

- (a) 159,455,750 dollars, being half of the estimated staff assessment income approved by the Assembly in its resolution 54/250 B;
- (b) Plus 14,213,700 dollars, being the estimated increase in income from staff assessment approved by the Assembly in resolution B above;
- (c) Plus 5,428,116 dollars, being the increase in income from staff assessment for the biennium 1998-1999 compared with the revised estimates approved by the Assembly in its resolution 54/247 B of 23 December 1999.

Other questions related to the 2000-2001 programme budget

In its deliberations on the agenda item on the 2000-2001 programme budget, the Fifth Committee considered a number of special subjects, among them the revised estimates in respect of Security Council matters and resulting from Economic and Social Council resolutions and decisions; the budget section of the International Court of Justice (ICJ); the capital master plan; a subvention to the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR); the first performance report on the 2000-2001 budget; the contingency fund; and the recosting of outstanding statements of programme budget implications and revised estimates (see sections below).

Other subjects concerned the report of the Panel on United Nations Peace Operations (the Brahimi report); UN personnel safety and security; full-time officials, other than those of the Secretariat, serving the General Assembly; the Information Systems Coordination Committee; and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/713], adopted resolution 55/238 without vote [agenda item 117].

Questions relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001

The General Assembly,

I

Report of the Panel on United Nations Peace Operations

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on resource requirements for implementation of the report of the Panel on United Nations Peace Operations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Taking full account of the report of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations on the comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects and General Assembly resolution 55/135 of 8 December 2000, endorsing the proposals, recommendation and conclusions of the Special Committee contained in its report,

Recalling its resolutions 45/258 of 3 May 1991, 47/218 A of 23 December 1992, 48/226 A of 23 December 1993, 48/226 B of 5 April 1994, 48/226 C of 29 July 1994, 49/250 of 20 July 1995, 50/11 of 2 November 1995, 50/221 A of 11 April 1996, 50/221 B of 7 June 1996, 51/226 of 3 April 1997, 51/239 A of 17 June 1997, 51/239 B and 51/243 of 15 September 1997, 52/220 of 22 December 1997, 52/234 and 52/248 of 26 June 1998, 53/12 A of 26 October 1998, 53/208 B of 18 December 1998, 53/12 B of 8 June 1999, 54/243 A of 23 December 1999 and 54/243 B of 15 June 2000 and its decisions 48/489 of 8 July 1994, 49/469 of 23 December 1994 and 50/473 of 23 December 1995,

Recalling also its resolutions 54/249 and 54/250 of 23 December 1999,

Recalling further its resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, by which it adopted the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

1. Reaffirms rule 153 of its rules of procedure;
2. Agrees with the views expressed by the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations in paragraphs 34 and 35 of its report on the comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects;
3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;
4. Decides to appropriate an additional amount of 363,000 United States dollars under section 3, Political affairs, 37,200 dollars under section 27, Management and central support services, and 19,200 dollars under section 32, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount (19,200 dollars) under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001;
5. Approves the support account post and non-post requirements in the amount of 9,190,200 dollars gross (8,741,600 dollars net) for the period from 1 July 2000 to 30 June 2001;
6. Agrees with paragraph 36 of the report of the Special Committee relating to proper representation of troop-contributing countries in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat;

7. Underscores the importance of consultation with troop-contributing countries from the early stages of mission planning;

8. Expresses deep concern over the delay in reimbursement of troop contributors, which can cause hardship to all troop- and equipment-contributing countries, and requests the Secretariat to expedite the processing of all claims and present a progress report in this regard during the first part of the resumed fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly;

9. Notes that the related resource requirements presented by the Secretary-General in his report on resource requirements for implementation of the report of the Panel on United Nations Peace Operations have been described by him as an emergency request, whereas, in terms of paragraph 11 of the report of the Advisory Committee, it was acknowledged that not all the proposals in the report of the Secretary-General on resource requirements for implementation of the report of the Panel could be classified as emergency requests;

10. Regrets that the report of the Secretary-General on resource requirements for implementation of the report of the Panel was not presented in accordance with rule 153 of its rules of procedures and with established practices, as pointed out in paragraph 3 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to comply strictly with those rules in the future;

11. Notes that the report of the Secretary-General on resource requirements for implementation of the report of the Panel has not been issued in compliance with the six-week rule;

12. Takes note of the intention of the Secretary-General to submit future reports to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth sessions on the implementation of the recommendations in the report of the Panel, including the comprehensive review, requested by the Special Committee, of the management, structure, recruitment processes and interrelationships of all relevant elements within the Secretariat that play a role in peacekeeping operations;

II

Safety and security of United Nations personnel

Reaffirming its resolutions 54/249 and 54/250 of 23 December 1999 and its other relevant resolutions,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on safety and security of United Nations personnel, in particular its administrative and budgetary aspects, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Endorses the recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions set forth in the present section;
2. Decides to consider the reclassification of the post of Deputy Security Coordinator from the D-1 level to the D-2 level in the context of its review of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003;
3. Also decides to establish, effective 1 January 2001, eight additional Professional posts (two P-5 and six P-4) in the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator at Headquarters;
4. Further decides to establish, effective 1 January 2001, eight additional security officer (Field Service) posts (four P-4 and four P-3) and sixteen additional Local level posts;

5. Decides to appropriate the amount of 2,210,000 dollars under section 30, Special expenses, and the amount of 238,400 dollars under section 32, Staff assessment, to be offset by an equivalent amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001, for the Secretary-General to undertake the immediate measures for the strengthening of the security management system of the United Nations;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, to develop, in coordination with executive heads of the United Nations specialized agencies, funds and programmes, an effective mechanism for cost-sharing arrangements and, in this connection, to ensure that in future the costs of the security management system are included in the regular budget, to be managed by the United Nations, contingent upon a formal arrangement with the concerned agencies, funds and programmes for participation in the funding of security arrangements and reimbursement to the United Nations for services provided, under income section 2, General income, of the programme budget, and to submit proposals thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session through the Advisory Committee, and decides that, in the meantime, the established cost-sharing arrangements between the United Nations and its specialized agencies, funds and programmes will remain in place until the Assembly decides otherwise;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General, when presenting future reports under these agenda items, to continue to ensure that separate reports are presented;

III

Revised estimates in respect of matters of which the Security Council is seized

Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates in respect of matters of which the Security Council is seized, and concurs with the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in paragraph 7 of its related report;

IV

Capital master plan

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the capital master plan;

2. Also takes note of the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and endorses the observations and recommendations contained therein;

3. Authorizes the Secretary-General, without prejudice to a final decision by the General Assembly on this issue, to proceed with the preparation of a comprehensive design plan and detailed cost analysis for the capital master plan, and decides to appropriate an amount of 8 million dollars under section 31, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, of the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001 for this purpose;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the outcome of the comprehensive design plan and detailed cost analysis to the General Assembly as soon as possible, including details of measures designed to protect the Organization from cost overruns;

5. Calls upon the Secretary-General to ensure that the preparation of a comprehensive design plan and detailed cost analysis for the capital master plan will identify all viable alternatives in the most cost-effective and efficient manner;

V

International Court of Justice

1. Approves an additional appropriation of 591,900 dollars under section 7, International Court of Justice, of the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001 and an additional appropriation of 128,800 dollars under section 32, Staff assessment, offset by the same amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment;

2. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit to expedite its report on the review of the management and administration of the International Court of Justice and to submit it, together with the comments of the Court thereon, for consideration by the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-fifth session;

VI

Request for a subvention to the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research resulting from the recommendations of the Board of Trustees of the Institute on the programme of work of the Institute for 2001

Approves the recommendation for a subvention of 213,000 dollars for 2001 from the regular budget of the United Nations, on the understanding that no additional appropriation would be required under section 4, Disarmament, of the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001;

VII

Conditions of service and compensation for officials, other than Secretariat officials, serving the General Assembly: full-time members of the International Civil Service Commission and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Conditions of service and compensation for officials, other than Secretariat officials, serving the General Assembly: full-time members of the International Civil Service Commission and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions", and approves the suggestions outlined in paragraphs 8 to 10 and in paragraph 19 of the report;

2. Decides to undertake a detailed examination of the issue of compensation relativity in the context of the next five-year review of the conditions of service and compensation for the three officials;

3. Reaffirms the principle that the conditions of service of the three officials should be separate and distinct from those of the Secretariat;

VIII

Review of the Information Systems Coordination Committee

Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the review of the Information Systems Coordination Committee, and concurs with the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraph 9 of its related report;

IX

First performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001

Having considered the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Reaffirms the budgetary process as approved in its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986 and as reaffirmed in its subsequent resolutions;

2. Reaffirms also its resolution 54/249 of 23 December 1999;

3. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001 and the related report and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

4. Notes the higher than budgeted vacancy rate relative to the rate approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 54/249, and requests the Secretary-General to take all appropriate measures to rectify this situation in an expeditious manner;

5. Approves a net decrease of 34,642,200 dollars in the appropriation approved for the biennium 2000-2001 and a net increase of 19,097,000 dollars in the estimates of income for the biennium, to be apportioned among expenditure and income sections, as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General;

X

Contingency fund

Notes that a balance of 224,300 dollars remains in the contingency fund;

XI

Recosting of outstanding statements of programme budget implications and revised estimates

Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on recosting of outstanding statements of programme budget implications and revised estimates, and decides that the recosting and the related adjustments should be reflected in the revised appropriation for the biennium 2000-2001.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the programme budget for 2000-2001 would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-first (2001) session (decision 55/458) and that the Fifth Committee would continue consideration of the item at that session (decision 55/455).

Contingency fund

The contingency fund, established by General Assembly resolution 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024], accommodated additional expenditures relating to each biennium that derived from legislative mandates not provided for in the proposed programme budget or from revised estimates. Guidelines for its use were annexed to Assembly resolution 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098].

Reports of Secretary-General. In his reports of March [A/C.5/54/46] and December [A/C.5/55/34] to the Fifth Committee, the Secretary-General submitted consolidated statements of programme budget implications and revised estimates chargeable against the fund. The first statement, totalling $2,737,300, was superseded by the second, which totalled $16,138,400; the itemized amounts corresponded to those that the Committee had previously recommended. The Secretary-General indicated that the fund's balance for the biennium 2000-2001, as noted by Assembly resolution 54/251 [YUN 1999, p. 1305], was $16,362,700 as at 23 December 1999. Therefore, should the Committee recommend to the Assembly appropriation of the required amounts under the relevant sections of the programme budget, it should also request the Assembly to note that a balance of $224,300 would remain in the fund.

The Assembly, by decision 54/480 of 15 June, deferred consideration of the relationship between the treatment of perennial activities in the programme budget and the use of the contingency fund until its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Revised estimates in respect of matters of which the Security Council was seized

In March [A/C.5/54/52], the Secretary-General submitted estimated resource requirements of $6,154,600 for two political missions to be charged against the $90,387,200 provided for special political missions, approved by General Assembly resolution 54/250 A [YUN 1999, p. 1303]. The ACABQ Chairman, in an oral report to the Committee [A/54/7/Add.1-14, annex], recommended approval of the proposed charge.

By decision 54/477 A of 7 April, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report and the related ACABQ oral report, and approved the charge of $6,154,600 for the United Nations Peace-building Support Office in Guinea-Bissau and the United Nations Peace-building Support Office in the Central African Republic against the provision for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the 2000-2001 programme budget. The Assembly noted that, consequently, the utilization of the provision for special political missions amounted to $61,517,700, leaving an uncommitted balance of $28,869,500.

The Secretary-General submitted further estimated resource requirements on 18 April [A/C.5/54/53] of $3,846,300 and on 3 May [A/C.5/54/57] of $710,600 relating to the mandate of the United Nations Office in Angola (UNOA), also chargeable against the provision for special political missions. ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve those charges [A/54/7/Add.1-14].

By decision 54/477 B of 15 June, the Assembly noted the Secretary-General's reports, endorsed ACABQ's observations and recommendations and asked the Secretary-General to bring them to the attention of the Security Council President. It approved the charge of $4,556,900 for UNOA's extension against the provision for special political missions of the 2000-2001 programme budget, and noted that, consequently, the utilization of the provision amounted to $66,074,600, leaving an unallocated balance of $24,312,600.

In December [A/C.5/55/30], the Secretary-General sought an additional appropriation of $4,162,500 for five political missions relating to actions taken by the Council on the basis of requests from Governments and/or recommendations of the Secretary-General. ACABQ [A/55/7/Add.6] recommended an additional appropriation in that amount under section 3, Political affairs, of the 2000-2001 programme budget.

Revised estimates resulting from Economic and Social Council action

By a November report to the Fifth Committee [A/C.5/55/25 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted revised cost estimates totalling $1,858,300 resulting from Economic and Social Council resolutions and decisions adopted in 2000 to be financed from existing provisions of the 2000-2001 programme budget. He drew attention to the additional requirement of $114,800 entailed by resolution 2000/22 for the annual meeting of a permanent forum on indigenous issues to be established in Geneva (see p. 731), for which no provision had been made in the 2000-2001 programme budget. Should the meeting take place in 2001 and in line with General Assembly resolution 40/243 [YUN 1985, p. 1256], which reaffirmed that UN bodies should meet at their respective headquarters, an appropriation in that amount, representing a charge against the contingency fund, should be made under section 22, Human rights, of the programme budget.

In a December addendum [A/C.5/55/25/Add.1], the Secretary-General requested further additional resource requirements totalling $770,400 under section 2, General Assembly affairs and conference services ($28,800), and section 22 ($741,600), arising from Council decision 2000/311, which established a human rights inquiry commission on violations of human rights in the occupied Palestinian territories (see p. 776).

ACABQ orally agreed before the Fifth Committee on 18 December [meeting 41] that $114,800 be authorized for the forum meeting and recommended acceptance of the amounts of $28,800 and $741,600 to be appropriated under sections 2 and 22, respectively, for the implementation of decision 2000/311 and to be charged against the contingency fund.

By decision 55/456 of 23 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's reports on the revised estimates resulting from the Council's resolutions and decisions adopted at its 2000 substantive session and, with respect to the related ACABQ recommendations made orally, authorized the Secretary-General to enter into commitments not exceeding $856,400 for implementing the Council's resolutions and decisions. It requested him to report thereon to the fifty-sixth (2001) session of the Assembly in the context of its consideration of the second performance report on the 2000-2001 programme budget.

International Court of Justice

The Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee in November [A/C.5/55/21] a proposal for an additional appropriation of $606,100 under section 7, International Court of Justice, of the 2000-2001 programme budget, owing to the dramatic and unexpected increase in the Court's caseload. Should the General Assembly approve the proposal, an additional appropriation of $131,200 would be required under section 32, Staff assessment, offset by the same amount under section 1, Income from staff assessment. ACABQ recommended Assembly approval of those proposals [A/55/7/Add.2].

Subvention to UNIDIR

In October [A/C.5/55/15], the Secretary-General transmitted for the General Assembly's approval a request for a subvention of $213,000 from the UN regular budget to UNIDIR, resulting from the recommendations of the Institute's Board of Trustees on the 2001 work programme.

Programme budget outline for 2002-2003

Report of Secretary-General. In July [A/55/186], the Secretary-General presented the proposed programme budget outline for 2002-2003, indicating a preliminary estimate of resources; sectoral priorities; real growth, positive or negative, compared with the previous budgets; and the size of the contingency fund expressed as a percentage of the overall level of resources. The preliminary estimate for the 2002-2003 biennium, expressed at 2000-2001 prices, amounted to $2,475.4 million.

The full biennial provision for posts partially funded in the current (2000-2001) biennium, namely, new posts at the Professional level and above and those approved for the Integrated Management Information System (IMIS) at offices away from Headquarters, would require an additional $13.2 million. One-time costs of $13.4 million in 2000-2001 relating to the secretariat of the Millennium Assembly, the special General Assembly sessions and related plenary meetings, a number of UN conferences, and the costs of the final development phase of IMIS would not be required. New resource requirements for 2002-2003 were projected at $30.1 million. In the light of the ongoing review of recommendations arising from the Brahimi report (see p. 83), no provision had yet been made for special political missions or for strengthening the security and safety of UN system personnel (see p. 1345). Those issues and their effects on the budget outline would be addressed at the Assembly's fifty-fifth (2000) session, when the relevant reports were available. To maximize output effectiveness of the resources committed, the Secretary-General intended to subject the proposed 2002-2003 programme budget to the most intensive review within the Secretariat, focusing on expected accomplishments with the resources committed.

The preliminary estimate before adjustment for the non-inclusion of special political missions represented an increase of $30.1 million, or 1.2 per cent compared with the initial appropriation for the 2000-2001 biennium. Once account was taken of that amount, the total preliminary estimate would represent a decrease of $60.3 million, or 2.4 per cent compared with the initial appropriation for 2000-2001.

Noting that the size of the contingency fund was set at 0.75 per cent of the overall resource level, the Secretary-General recommended that the fund level be set at $18.6 million for the 2002-2003 biennium.

CPC report. Having considered the proposed programme budget outline at the second part (21-29 August) of its fortieth session [A/55/16 & Corr.1,2], the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) recommended that the Assembly further consider all aspects of the outline, taking into account: the preliminary estimate's adequacy for the full implementation of all mandated programmes and activities, including projects initiated in the 2000-2001 biennium; that full information on the preliminary estimate was not available in the outline; that Assembly resolution 53/206 [YUN 1998, p. 1284] requiring the inclusion of a provision in the budget outline for expenditures for special political missions related to peace and security expected to be extended or approved in the course of the biennium; that the Secretary-General's review of possible obsolete activities should remain within the context of relevant Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation; that Member States should demonstrate their commitment to the United Nations by meeting their financial obligations in full, on time and without conditions; CPC's recommended approval of the priorities in the 2002-2003 programme budget outline; and that the size of the contingency fund should be 0.75 per cent of the budget outline.

ACABQ report. ACABQ [A/55/685 & Corr.1], noting the omission of the requirements for special political missions in the proposed 2002-2003 programme budget outline, pointed out that, had the Secretary-General included a provision of $93.7 million at revised 2000-2001 rates, the preliminary estimates for the 2002-2003 biennium would have amounted to $2,515.3 million. ACABQ therefore recommended that, for the 2002-2003 biennium, the Assembly adopt a total preliminary estimate of $2,515,300 million at revised 2000-2001 rates.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/532/Add.1 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 55/233 without vote [agenda item 116].

Proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2002-2003

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986 in which it, inter alia, requested the Secretary-General to submit in off-budget years an outline of the proposed programme budget for the following biennium,

Reaffirming also section VI of its resolution 45/248 B of 21 December 1990,

Recalling its resolution 53/214 of 18 December 1998,

Reaffirming rule 153 of its rules of procedure,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2002-2003, the related recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the report and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Reaffirms that the proposed programme budget outline shall contain an indication of the following:

(a) Preliminary estimate of resources to accommodate the proposed programme of activities during the biennium;

(b) Priorities reflecting general trends of a broad sectoral nature;

(c) Real growth, positive or negative, compared with the previous budget;

(d) Size of the contingency fund expressed as a percentage of the overall level of resources;

3. Also reaffirms that the budget outline should provide a greater level of predictability of resources required for the following biennium, promote greater involvement of Member States in the budgetary process and thereby facilitate the broadest possible agreement on the programme budget;

4. Notes that the budget outline is a preliminary estimate of resources;

5. Endorses the recommendation of the Advisory Committee contained in paragraph 8 of its report, that provision should be made in the budget outline for expenditures for special political missions related to peace and security expected to be extended or approved in the course of the biennium;

6. Decides that the preliminary estimate of resources for the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003 should therefore include a provision for special political missions, in the amount of 93.7 million United States dollars at revised 2000-2001 rates, which should be reflected in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003, and that additional requirements shall continue to be treated in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 41/213;

7. Notes that the preliminary estimates of the Secretary-General for the proposed programme budget did not include provision for the requirements for the biennium 2002-2003 for the implementation of the report of the Panel on United Nations Peace Operations, that those requirements remain under discussion by the General Assembly and that the requirements pertinent to the regular budget should be reflected in the programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003, subject to approval by the Assembly;

8. Notes also that the preliminary estimates of the Secretary-General for the proposed programme budget did not include provision for the requirements for the biennium 2002-2003 for safety and security of personnel, that those requirements remain under discussion by the General Assembly, and that the requirements pertinent to the regular budget should be reflected in the programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003, subject to approval by the Assembly;

9. Invites the Secretary-General to prepare his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003 on the basis of a total preliminary estimate of 2,515.3 million dollars at revised 2000-2001 rates;

10. Decides that the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003 shall contain provisions for recosting on the basis of the existing methodology;

11. Decides also that the priorities for the biennium 2002-2003 are the following:

(a) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(b) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

12. Requests the Secretary-General, having considered his preliminary indicative estimates contained in the proposed budget outline, when presenting the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003, to reflect the priorities as outlined in paragraph 11 above;

13. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to submit, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003, the total amount of resources that he should have at his disposal, from all sources of financing, in order to implement fully all mandated programmes and activities;

14. Decides that the contingency fund shall be set at the level of 0.75 per cent of the preliminary estimate, namely at 18.9 million dollars, and that this amount is in addition to the overall level of the preliminary estimate and is to be used in accordance with the procedures for the use and operation of the contingency fund.

Contributions

According to the Secretary-General's March report [A/55/504/Add.1], unpaid assessed contributions from Member States to the UN budget at the end of 2000 totalled $2.2 billion ($500 million more than the 1999 figure); unpaid regular budget assessments totalled $222 million ($22 million less than at the end of 1999); outstanding peacekeeping arrears totalled $2 billion (some $600 million more than in 1999); and unpaid assessments to the international tribunals were $166 million (compared with $32 million in 1999).

The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessment in full continued to grow, rising to 141 Members by the end of 2000, 15 more than the previous year.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses

Under specific circumstances, the Secretary-General was authorized by the General Assembly to enter into commitments for activities of an urgent nature, without reverting to it for approval.

In his first performance report on the 2000-2001 programme budget [A/55/645 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that, under the terms of resolution 54/252 [YUN 1999, p. 1309] on unforeseen and extraordinary expenses, he had entered into commitments totalling $10,987,900, of which $7,233,400 was for activities he had certified as relating to the maintenance of peace and security; $3,396,500 for commitments agreed to by ACABQ in respect of Security Council decisions; $345,000 for commitments certified by the ICJ President; and $13,000 for inter-organizational security measures.

Assessments

Assessment methodology

In March, the General Assembly, pursuant to decision 54/455 B [YUN 1999, p. 1313], resumed consideration of the agenda item on the scale of assessments and apportionment of expenses of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 April [meeting 95], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/54/685/Add.1], adopted resolution 54/237 D without vote [agenda item 125].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

I

Recalling its previous resolutions and decisions on the scale of assessments, in particular resolution 52/215 A of 22 December 1997,

Recalling also paragraph 1 of its resolution 48/223 C of 23 December 1993,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Contributions on the work of its fifty-ninth session,

Reaffirming Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations and rule 160 of its rules of procedure,

1. Reaffirms the obligation of all Member States to bear the expenses of the United Nations, as apportioned by the General Assembly, in conformity with Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Also reaffirms the fundamental principle that the expenses of the Organization should be apportioned among Member States, broadly according to capacity to pay, as established in rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that Permanent Missions are furnished in good time with copies of the national accounts questionnaire to enable them to provide for the appropriate follow-up;

4. Requests the Committee on Contributions to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session twelve proposals for a scale of assessments for the period 2001-2003 as follows:

(a) A proposal based on the methodology used in preparing the scale of assessments for 2000, including the phasing out of the scheme of limits in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 48/223 B of 23 December 1993 and 52/215 A;

(b) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:

(i) Data on gross national product;

- (ii) A statistical base period of six years;
- (iii) Conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where that would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the income of some Member States, when price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed, taking due account of General Assembly resolution 46/221 B of 20 December 1991;
- (iv) Debt burden adjustment based on the total debt stock;
- (v) A low per capita income adjustment with a threshold per capita income limit of the average world per capita income for the statistical base period and a sliding gradient;
- (vi) Redistribution of the adjustment to all Member States, consistent with the practice before 1979;
- (vii) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent;
- (viii) A maximum assessment rate of 25 per cent;
- (ix) A maximum assessment rate for the least developed countries of 0.01 per cent;
- (c) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
  - (i) Estimates of gross national product;
  - (ii) A statistical base period of six years;
  - (iii) Conversion rates as recommended by the Committee on Contributions, and as earlier spelled out in General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
  - (iv) Debt burden adjustment based on the total debt stock;
  - (v) A low per capita income adjustment with a per capita income limit of the current threshold used by the World Bank for high-income countries (9,361 United States dollars), and a gradient of 80 per cent;
  - (vi) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent;
  - (vii) A ceiling rate of 25 per cent;
  - (viii) Individual rates of assessment for the least developed countries, not to exceed the current level of 0.01 per cent;
  - (d) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
    - (i) Gross national product as the base;
    - (ii) A statistical base period of three years, with automatic annual recalculation;
    - (iii) Debt burden adjustment based on actual principal repayments (debt flow);
    - (iv) Conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where that would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the income of some Member States, when price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed, taking due account of General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
    - (v) A two-tiered gradient for relief of Member States with a low per capita income; a gradient of 80 per cent for least developed countries and a gradient of 70 per cent for other Member States with a per capita income below the world average;
    - (vi) To address discontinuity, a phase-in mechanism, that is divided equally over the period 2001-2003, for the redistribution of points received from the low per capita income adjustment for Member States that cross the threshold from one scale period to the next (example: all other

- things being equal, if the assessment of a Member State was 1.000 per cent when it was below the threshold, in the next scale period it would increase to 1.067 per cent, 1.134 per cent and 1.200 per cent over three years instead of going directly to 1.200);
- (vii) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent and a maximum rate for the least developed countries of 0.01 per cent;
  - (viii) A ceiling rate of 25 per cent;
- (e) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
- (i) Gross national product as the base;
  - (ii) A statistical base period of three years, with automatic annual recalculation;
  - (iii) Debt burden adjustment based on actual principal repayments (debt flow);
  - (iv) A two-tiered gradient for relief of Member States with a low per capita income; a gradient of 80 per cent for least developed countries and a gradient of 70 per cent for other Member States with a per capita income below the world average;
  - (v) Conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where that would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the income of some Member States, when price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed, taking due account of General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
  - (vi) To address discontinuity, a phase-in mechanism, that is divided equally over the 2001-2003 period, for the redistribution of points received from the low per capita income adjustment for Member States that cross the threshold from one scale period to the next (example: all other things being equal, if the assessment of a Member State was 1.000 per cent when it was below the threshold, in the next scale period it would increase to 1.067 per cent, 1.134 per cent and 1.200 per cent over three years instead of going directly to 1.200);
  - (vii) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent and a maximum rate for the least developed countries of 0.01 per cent;
  - (viii) A ceiling rate of 20 per cent;
- (f) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
- (i) Estimates of gross national product;
  - (ii) A statistical base period of six years;
  - (iii) Conversion rates as recommended by the Committee on Contributions, and as earlier spelled out in General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
  - (iv) Debt burden adjustment based on the total debt stock;
  - (v) A low per capita income adjustment with a threshold per capita income limit of the average world per capita income for the statistical base period, and a gradient of 80 per cent without discrimination among Member States;
  - (vi) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent and no ceiling;
  - (vii) A maximum assessment rate for the least developed countries, not to exceed the current level of 0.01 per cent;
  - (viii) To limit to 25 per cent, for developing countries previously benefiting from its application, the effect of the end of the scheme of limits on an annual basis for the first four years of the post-transition period;
- (g) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
- (i) Use of gross national product data as a first approximation of capacity to pay;
  - (ii) A statistical base period of three years, with automatic annual recalculation;
  - (iii) Conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where that would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the income of some Member States, when price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed, taking due account of General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
  - (iv) No debt burden adjustments;
  - (v) A low per capita income adjustment with a threshold per capita income limit of the average world per capita income for the statistical base period, and a gradient of 75 per cent;
  - (vi) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent;
  - (vii) A maximum assessment rate of 25 per cent;
  - (viii) A maximum assessment rate for the least developed countries of 0.01 per cent;
  - (ix) No scheme of limits;
- (h) A proposal to include the elements and criteria in subparagraphs (i) to (viii) and a response to subparagraph (ix) below:
- (i) Estimates of gross national product;
  - (ii) A statistical base period of six years;
  - (iii) Conversion rates as recommended by the Committee on Contributions, and as earlier spelled out in General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
  - (iv) Debt burden adjustment based on the total debt stock;
  - (v) A low per capita income adjustment with a threshold per capita income limit of the average world per capita income for the statistical base period, and a gradient of 80 per cent;
  - (vi) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent and a maximum assessment rate of 25 per cent;
  - (vii) A maximum assessment rate for the least developed countries not to exceed the current level of 0.01 per cent;
  - (viii) To limit to 25 per cent, for developing countries previously benefiting from its application, the effect of the end of the scheme of limits on an annual basis for the first four years of the post-transition period;
  - (ix) To examine the long-term implications of the present criteria for determining the threshold of the low per capita income adjustment, and to recommend possible alternatives with a view to maintaining in the long run the overall benefit for all developing countries and to avoiding the continuous exclusion of middle-income developing countries from the benefit of the adjustment;
- (i) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
- (i) Data on gross national product as a first approximation of capacity to pay;
  - (ii) A constant statistical base period of three years;

- (iii) Conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where that would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the income of some Member States, when price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed, taking due account of General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
- (iv) Debt burden adjustment based on actual principal payments;
- (v) A low per capita income adjustment with a threshold per capita income limit of the average world per capita income for the statistical base period, and with gradients based on the gross national product share of each eligible country as follows:
  - a. A gradient of 70 per cent for countries with a gross national product share of less than 1 per cent;
  - b. A gradient of 40 per cent for countries with a gross national product share of 1 per cent or more but less than 3 per cent;
  - c. A gradient of 10 per cent for countries with a gross national product share of 3 per cent or more;
- (vi) Non-eligibility of the States permanent members of the Security Council for a low per capita income adjustment;
- (vii) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent;
- (viii) A maximum assessment rate of 25 per cent;
- (ix) A maximum assessment rate for the least developed countries of 0.01 per cent;
- (j) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
  - (i) The methodology used in preparing the scale of assessments for 2000, including the phasing out of the scheme of limits in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 48/223 B and 52/215 A, except for the provisions in subparagraph (ii) below;
  - (ii) A maximum assessment rate of 22 per cent, with the points arising from the reduction of the maximum assessment rate from 25 per cent to be distributed only among Member States other than members of the Group of 77 and China;
  - (k) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
    - (i) Data on gross national product;
    - (ii) A statistical base period of three years;
  - (iii) Conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where that would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the income of some Member States, when price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed, taking due account of General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
  - (iv) Debt burden adjustment based on actual principal payments;
  - (v) A low per capita income adjustment with a threshold per capita income limit of the average world per capita income for the statistical base period, and with gradients based on the gross national product share of each eligible country as follows:
    - a. A gradient of 80 per cent for countries with a gross national product share of less than 1 per cent;
  - b. A gradient of 50 per cent for countries with a gross national product share of 1 per cent or more;
  - (vi) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent;
  - (vii) A maximum assessment rate of 22 per cent;
  - (viii) A maximum assessment rate for the least developed countries of 0.01 per cent;
  - (l) A proposal to include the following elements and criteria:
    - (i) Data on gross national product;
    - (ii) A statistical base period of three years;
  - (iii) Conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where that would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the income of some Member States, when price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed, taking due account of General Assembly resolution 46/221 B;
  - (iv) A low per capita income adjustment with a threshold per capita income limit of the average world per capita income for the statistical base period and a gradient of 70 per cent;
  - (v) A minimum assessment rate of 2.5 per cent for the permanent members of the Security Council;
  - (vi) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent;
  - (vii) A maximum assessment rate of 22 per cent;
  - (viii) A maximum assessment rate for the least developed countries of 0.01 per cent;

II

5. Requests the Committee on Contributions, in the context of and with a view to improving the current methodology, to examine and report to the General Assembly the consequences of the sharply depressed levels of primary commodity prices in the international markets on commodity-dependent economies, and also the impact on those countries whose economies have the burden of hosting refugees;

6. Also requests the Committee on Contributions:

(a) To follow up on paragraph 30 of its report and to provide suggestions to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session on how to address the combined effects of the loss of the low per capita income adjustment and having to contribute to the adjustment for Member States still below the threshold;

(b) To provide suggestions to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session on how to deal with the effect of discontinuities experienced by Member States moving up through the low per capita income and the Member States just above the threshold;

(c) To examine the long-term implications of the present criteria for determining the threshold of the low per capita income adjustment, and to report on possible alternatives to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session;

7. Welcomes the agreement of the Committee on Contributions to consider more systematic criteria for and approaches to deciding when market exchange rates should be replaced for the purposes of preparing the scale of assessments, and looks forward to further reports.

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions, at its sixtieth session (New York, 5-30 June) [A/55/11], considered measures to encourage the timely, full and unconditional payment of assessed contributions, the application of Article 19 of the Charter, whereby a Member would lose its vote in the Assembly if the amount of its arrears equalled or exceeded the amount of contributions due from it for the preceding two full years; the scale of assessments for 2001-2003; and the assessment of non-member and new Member States.

The Committee decided to review further in 2001 measures to encourage payment of assessed contributions, including the possible indexation of or interest on arrears, multi-year payment plans and the new assessed fund proposed at its 1999 session [YUN 1999, p. 1310]. It agreed that the multi-year payment plan could be a useful tool in reducing arrears for those Member States seeking a re-scheduling of arrearage payments. Specific plans, which required Assembly approval, could be arranged between the Member States concerned and the Secretariat within guidelines established by the Assembly. The Committee asked the Secretary-General to submit a report on those questions, including additional measures to encourage the timely, full and unconditional payment of assessed contributions.

The Committee deferred further consideration of the tightening of the application of Article 19 pending policy guidance from the Assembly.

Following its examination of requests from seven Members for exemption under that Article, the Committee determined that the failure to pay arrears by Burundi, Georgia (whose intention to eliminate its arrears by 2007 was duly noted), Kyrgyzstan and the Republic of Moldova were due to conditions beyond their control and therefore recommended that they be permitted to vote in the Assembly until 30 June 2001.

Noting that it did not consider the failure of the Comoros, Sao Tome and Principe, and Tajikistan, which had benefited from exemption since 1996, to pay the required amount to avoid application of Article 19 as being beyond their control, the Committee stated that it was not in a position to recommend their further exemption.

Reservations expressed in the case of Sao Tome and Principe concerned its serious debt problem and the accumulation of arrears during the period of its over-assessment. Reservations were also expressed as to the overall consistency of the recommendations, since all seven Governments faced conditions over which they had limited control; a more relevant recommendation for them would have been for multi-year payment plans, subject to the Assembly's approval.

At the conclusion of the Committee's session, 35 Member States were in arrears in the payment of their assessed contributions under Article 19. Of that number, 30 had no vote in the Assembly: Burundi, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Gambia, Grenada, Guinea, Haiti, Iraq, Kyrgyzstan, Liberia, Madagascar, Mauritania, Niger, Republic of Moldova, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Togo, Turkmenistan, Vanuatu, Yemen and Yugoslavia. The other five Members—the Comoros and Tajikistan; the Congo and Guinea Bissau; and Georgia—had been permitted to vote until 30 June 2000, pursuant to, respectively, Assembly resolution 53/36 F [YUN 1999, p. 1312] and decisions 53/406 C [ibid., p. 1310] and 54/455 B [ibid., p. 1313].

The Committee noted that, in 1999, five Members had availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by Assembly resolution 52/215 A [YUN 1997, p. 1442] of paying the equivalent of $1.7 million in currencies other than United States dollars.

In reviewing the 12 proposals for a scale of assessments for the period 2001-2003, which the Assembly requested be presented at its fifty-fifth session, based on elements and criteria outlined in paragraphs 4 (a) to (l) of resolution 54/237 D (see p. 1306), the Committee observed a number of common elements among the proposals: they were based on gross national product (GNP), with a floor assessment rate of 0.001 per cent and a ceiling of 0.01 per cent for the least developed countries; and the provisions for conversion rates, although formulated differently, were consistent with the general approach it had recommended for the current (1998-2000) scale and used in the preparation of the machine scales. The Committee further observed that, of the 12 proposals, 10 included a debt-burden adjustment, using either the debt-stock or the debt-flow approach, 11 set the threshold for the low per capita income adjustment at the average level of total per capita GNP, while 10 provided explicitly or implicitly for the complete phase-out of the scheme of limits, and 11 had a ceiling: seven at 25 per cent, three at 22 per cent and one at 20 per cent. The results of the application of the proposals were set out in annexes to the Committee's report [A/55/11].

For those proposals and related provisions that the Committee had difficulty interpreting, it applied the relevant element from the current methodology in preparing the machine scales in annexes IV to XV to its report. It noted a representation from the Bahamas that clarified the nature of the sliding gradient referred to in paragraph 4 (b) of resolution 54/237 D. As to the phase-in mechanism contained in paragraphs 4 (d) and (e) for countries crossing the threshold between scale periods, the Committee assumed that points picked up by a Member State from the low per capita income adjustment as a result of being above the threshold should be divided into three equal parts. That Member's assessment would increase by one part each year. The Committee determined that the intention with regard to the phasing out of the scheme of limits was that the provisions of subparagraphs 4 (f) (viii) and 4 (h) (viii) would apply to the six developing countries that in 2000 had benefited from the provisions of paragraph 1 (j) of Assembly resolution 52/215 A [YUN 1997, p. 1442].

The Committee also considered elements of the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments, including the base period, low per capita income adjustment, the floor and ceilings, and the annual recalculation of the scale.

The Committee decided to examine further the question of the system of assessment of non-member States [YUN 1999, p. 1311] in 2001. It authorized its Chairman to bring to the Assembly's attention the assessment of Tuvalu in the event that the Assembly admitted that country into the United Nations before adopting the assessments scale for 2001-2003.

The Assembly President, on 17 July [A/C.5/55/2], transmitted to the Fifth Committee Chairman a 30 June letter from the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions submitting sections of its report on requests for exemption under Article 19 of the Charter and the corresponding recommendations.

Reports of Secretary-General. During the year, the Secretary-General reported to the Assembly President on payments made by certain Member States to reduce their level of arrears below that specified in Article 19, so that they could vote in the Assembly. As at 31 January [A/54/730], 52 Member States remained below the gross amount assessed for the preceding two full years (1998-1999). By 14 June [A/54/915], that number had been reduced to 35, and on 1 September [A/55/345], it stood at 26. As at 17 October [A/ES-10/38], only 16 Member States were in arrears under Article 19.

Communications. On 26 September [A/C.5/55/12], the Assembly President transmitted to the Fifth Committee Chairman a letter from Tajikistan requesting postponement of the implementation of Article 19 to the end of the Assembly's fifty-fifth session and enclosing a plan for a 10-year (2001-2010) phased reduction of its arrears, which, as at 1 August 2000, amounted to $1,356,443.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 26 October [meeting 41], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/521 & Add.1], adopted resolution 55/5 A and, on 23 December [meeting 89], resolutions 55/5 B-F, all without vote [agenda item 122].

Scale of assessments for apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

A

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 52/215 B of 22 December 1997, 53/36 C of 18 December 1998 and 54/237 C of 23 December 1999,

Having considered the letter dated 17 July 2000 from the President of the General Assembly to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee transmitting a letter dated 30 June 2000 from the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions regarding the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions,

Having also considered the letter dated 26 September 2000 from the President of the General Assembly to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee transmitting a letter dated 25 September 2000 from the Permanent Representative of Tajikistan to the United Nations appending a letter from the Prime Minister of the Republic of Tajikistan,

Reaffirming the obligation of Member States under Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations to bear the expenses of the Organization as apportioned by the General Assembly,

1. Reaffirms its role in accordance with the provisions of Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations and the advisory role of the Committee on Contributions in accordance with rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

2. Urges all Member States to pay their assessed contributions in full, on time and without imposing conditions, in order to avoid difficulties being experienced by the United Nations;

3. Decides that Burundi, the Comoros, Georgia, the Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe and Tajikistan should be permitted to vote in the General Assembly until 30 June 2001;

4. Decides also that Kyrgyzstan would be permitted to vote from 1 January until 30 June 2001 should it fall at that time in arrears under Article 19 of the Charter;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to ensure the sound financing of the Organization, to review the implications of the calculation of assessed contributions in arrears for the purpose of the application of Article 19 of the Charter at the beginning of each calendar year and at the beginning of the financial peacekeeping period on 1 July of each year, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at the first part of its resumed fifty-fifth session;

6. Decides, subject to the outcome of negotiations in the General Assembly on the report of the Secretary-General and the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions thereon, as requested in paragraph 5 above, at the main part of its fifty-sixth session and subject to further decision on its implementation by the General Assembly, to compare arrears with the amount actually assessed and payable for the preceding two full years for the purpose of the application of Article 19 of the Charter;

7. Requests the Committee on Contributions to consider further the indexation of arrears, interest on arrears, multi-year payment plans, early reimbursement to troop-contributing countries and further suggestions for measures to encourage the timely, full and unconditional payment of assessed contributions, taking into account the experience with incentives and sanctions for the payment of assessed contributions of other United Nations organizations and other multilateral and regional organizations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session;

8. Calls upon the Committee on Contributions to give more detailed information and adequate reasons and rationale when making its recommendations.

B

The General Assembly,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which the Assembly resolved, inter alia, to ensure that the Organization is provided on a timely and predictable basis with the resources it needs to carry out its mandates,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Contributions,

1. Decides that the scale of assessments for the period 2001-2003 shall be based on the following elements and criteria:

(a) Estimates of the gross national product;
(b) Average statistical base periods of six and three years;

(c) Conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where that would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the income of some Member States, when price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed, taking due account of General Assembly resolution 46/221 B of 21 December 1991;

(d) The debt-burden approach employed in the scale of assessments for the period 1995-1997;

(e) A low per capita income adjustment of 80 per cent, with the threshold per capita income limit of the average per capita gross national product of all Member States for the statistical base periods;

(f) A minimum assessment rate of 0.001 per cent;

(g) A maximum assessment rate for the least developed countries of 0.01 per cent;

(h) A maximum assessment rate of 22 per cent;

2. Decides also that the elements of the scale of assessments contained in paragraph 1 above will be fixed until 2006, subject to the provisions of resolution C below, in particular paragraph 2 of that resolution, and without prejudice to rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

3. Notes that the application of the methodology outlined in paragraph 1 above will lead to a substantial increase in the rate of assessment of some Member States;

4. Decides to apply transitional measures to address those substantial increases;

5. Notes that the United States of America has decided to pay to the United Nations in 2001 an amount equal to 3 per cent of the amount assessed on Member States pursuant to General Assembly resolution 55/239 of 23 December 2000;

6. Decides, as an exceptional measure and notwithstanding the provisions of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, that this amount should be credited against the assessed contributions of the other Member States for the programme budget for 2001, as reflected in annex I to the present resolution;

7. Resolves that the scale of assessments for the contribution of Member States to the regular budget of the United Nations for the years 2001, 2002 and 2003 shall be as contained in annex II to the present resolution;

8. Resolves also that:

(a) Notwithstanding the terms of financial regulation 5.5, the Secretary-General shall be empowered to accept, at his discretion and after consultation with the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions, a portion of the contributions of Member States for the calendar years 2001, 2002 and 2003 in currencies other than United States dollars;

(b) In accordance with financial regulation 5.9, States which are not Members of the United Nations but which participate in certain of its activities shall be called upon to contribute towards the 2001, 2002 and 2003 expenses of the Organization on the basis of the following rates:

Holy See	0.001
Switzerland	1.274

These rates represent the basis for the calculation of the flat annual fees to be charged to non-member States in accordance with General Assembly resolution 44/197 B of 21 December 1989.

C

The General Assembly,

Noting that the financial burdens resulting from the reformed scale of assessments for the regular budget for calendar year 2001 will be borne in part by a voluntary donation from the major contributor,

Urging and expecting all Member States currently in arrears to fulfil their duties under international law and to settle those arrears promptly and in full,

1. Establishes, as from 1 January 2001, a reduced ceiling of 22 per cent for the assessed contribution of any individual Member State;

2. Decides to review the position at the end of 2003 and, depending on the status of contributions and arrears, to determine all appropriate measures to remedy the situation, including adjustments of the ceiling in keeping with its resolution 52/215 A to D of 22 December 1997;

3. Stresses that the reduction of the maximum assessment rate referred to in paragraph 1 of resolution B above shall apply to the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations and should have no automatic implication for the apportionment of the expenses of the specialized agencies or the International Atomic Energy Agency.

D

The General Assembly,

Recalling the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions contained in its reports on its fifty-ninth and sixtieth sessions,

1. Takes note of the decision of the Committee on Contributions to consider the system of assessment of non-member States further at its sixty-first session;

2. Decides that, from 2001, the flat annual fee percentage for the Holy See should be set at 25 per cent of the approved notional rate of assessment.

E

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 47/217 of 23 December 1992, 51/218 E of 17 June 1997, 55/1 of 5 September 2000 and 55/12 of 1 November 2000,

Recalling also the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions with respect to the assessment of Tuvalu as a non-member State,

1. Decides that the rate of assessment for Tuvalu, admitted to membership in the United Nations on 5 September 2000, should be 0.001 per cent for the year 2000;

2. Decides also that the rate of assessment for the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, admitted to membership in the United Nations on 1 November 2000, should be 0.026 per cent for the year 2000;

3. Decides further that the contributions of Tuvalu and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia for the regular budget and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, for the year 2000 should be calculated on the basis of one twelfth of their relevant rates of assessment for the year 2000 per full calendar month of membership;

4. Decides that Tuvalu should be credited with a corresponding proportion of its non-member State assessment for the year 2000;

5. Decides also that the contributions of Tuvalu and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia for the year 2000 should otherwise be applied to the same basis of assessment as for other Member States, except that, in the case of appropriations or apportionments approved by the General Assembly for the financing of peacekeeping operations, the contributions of Tuvalu and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, as determined by the group of Member States to which they may be assigned by the Assembly, should be calculated in proportion to the calendar year;

6. Decides further that the assessments of Tuvalu and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia for the year 2000 should be taken into account as miscellaneous income in accordance with regulation 5.2 (c) of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

7. Decides that, in accordance with financial regulation 5.8, the advances of Tuvalu and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to the Working Capital Fund should be calculated by the application of their rates of assessment for the year 2000 to the authorized level of the Fund and should be added to the Fund, pending their incorporation in a 100 per cent scale for the Fund for 2002-2003;

8. Notes that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia can be said to have a share in the Peacekeeping Reserve Fund, established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 47/217;

9. Notes also that, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 47/217, the assessment of Tuvalu for the Peacekeeping Reserve Fund should be calculated by the application of its first rate of assessment for peacekeeping operations to the authorized level of the Fund.

F

The General Assembly

1. Decides to continue the review of other matters to be considered at the sixty-first session of the Committee on Contributions during the resumed fifty-fifth session;

2. Decides also to continue consideration of the proposal for the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Intergovernmental Working Group on the Implementation of the Principle of Capacity to Pay during its resumed fifty-fifth session.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458) and that the Fifth Committee would continue consideration of the item at that session (decision 55/455).

Accounts and auditing

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-fourth (2000) session, considered the report of the Board of Auditors on UN peacekeeping operations from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999 [A/54/5, vol. II], the related ACABQ report [A/54/801] and the Secretary-General's report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations

[A/54/748]. On 15 June, the Assembly, by resolution 54/13 C, accepted the Board's report and approved all its recommendations and conclusions (see p. 106).

Board of Auditors report. The Chairman of the Board of Auditors transmitted to the General Assembly the financial reports and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 1999 on the United Nations [A/55/5, vol. I], and on the following UN entities: the International Trade Centre [A/55/5, vol. III], the United Nations University (UNU) [A/55/5, vol. IV], the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) [A/55/5/Add.1], the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) [A/55/5/Add.2], the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) [A/55/5/Add.3 & Corr.1], the United Nations Institute for Training and Research [A/55/5/Add.4], the voluntary funds administered by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) [A/55/5/Add.5], the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme [A/55/5/Add.6], the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) [A/55/5/Add.7], the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation [A/55/5/Add.8], the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP) [A/55/5/Add.9], the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS) [A/55/5/Add.10], the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 [A/55/5/Add.11], and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 [A/55/5/Add.12].

Introducing the reports in the Fifth Committee, the Chairman of the Board explained that the Board had had to qualify and restrict the scope of its audit opinion on the financial statements of UNDP, UNFPA, UNDCP and UNU: in the case of the first three because it had been unable to obtain sufficient evidence from Governments and non-governmental organizations that funds advanced for national execution projects had been expended for the purposes intended; in the case of UNDP, because of uncertainty over unidentified amounts of $11.1 million arising from bank reconciliations; and in UNU's case, because UNU had not made a provision against long-standing unpaid pledged contributions (some $10 million of which had been outstanding for more than five years). The Board welcomed ACABQ's recommendation that the Assembly defer action on the financial statements of UNDP, UNDCP and UNFPA, pending certification by the Board that the issues noted had been resolved or that satisfactory progress was being made to resolve them.

Regarding the Board's previous recommendations, 69 per cent had been fully implemented by the organizations, 25 per cent were being implemented and only 6 per cent had yet to be implemented.

In the United Nations, IMIS Release 3 had not yet been fully developed to enable the consolidated financial statements to be prepared or to provide an adequate audit trail. Moreover, in four procurement-related arbitration cases, the United Nations had been judged liable to pay compensation totalling $12.2 million to contractors, mainly owing to deficiencies in the formulation, interpretation and implementation of contracts. In one contract for legal representation by an outside counsel, the level of the fee cap had been increased from $590,000 to $2,460,000 over approximately two years. On the other hand, the Board was pleased with the progress made by the secretariat of the International Civil Service Commission in implementing its previous recommendations.

In UNDP, the Board found that problems related to the implementation of IMIS had led to weaknesses in financial control, seriously delaying finalization of the Board's report. The same was true of UNFPA's financial reports. UNDP had also experienced liquidity problems, its total expenditure from regular resources having exceeded its total income by $188 million.

In UNRWA, the value of land and buildings had not been capitalized and had therefore not been included in the statement of assets and liabilities and fund balances as at 31 December 1999. The Board had decided, however, not to qualify its audit opinion pending the outcome of the revision of UNRWA's Financial Regulations.

In UNHCR, the decline in voluntary contributions from donor countries posed a liquidity risk, and in UNICEF, the financial regulations had been changed to reflect the new definition of programme expenditure approved by the Executive Board in September 1999.

In UNFPA, the Board of Auditors found that regular resource expenditure ($575.9 million) had exceeded income by some $51 million, causing the operational reserve to fall from $63 million to $24 million during the 1998-1999 biennium. In addition, the proportion of national execution expenditure covered by audit reports had decreased from 70 per cent in 1996-1997 to 50 per cent in 1998-1999. The Board was concerned about the deteriorating financial position of the Fund. It noted that ACABQ had strongly disagreed with UNFPA's intention to amend the rules governing the audit reports of executing agencies, agreeing with ACABQ that such a step would make the situation worse, as larger expenditures could be incurred without supporting audit reports.

The Board further found that UNDCP had neither received nor followed up audit reports covering the $17.9 million expenditure incurred on nationally executed activities during the 1996-1997 biennium; and, in respect of UNOPS, that the cost of relocating its headquarters was considerably higher than estimated ($16.8 million in June 2000 compared with the 1998 estimate of $7.3 million), in addition to finding weaknesses in internal control and delays in the preparation of its financial statements due to problems in the implementation of IMIS.

The Chairman said the Board wanted the foregoing findings highlighted because of their implications for the effective management of UN programmes in good economic conditions. He noted, however, that a number of the organizations cited had made progress in certain significant areas, proving that implementing the Board's recommendations could lead to substantial improvements in the organizations' financial situation.

In its report on the United Nations [A/55/5, vol. I], the Board noted that cases of fraud or presumptive fraud, involving a total sum of $568,752, had come to its notice during the 1998-1999 biennium. Three cases pertained to the United Nations Office at Nairobi and one to United Nations Headquarters. In two cases there was no loss to the Organization.

By a September note [A/55/364], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a summary of the Board's principal findings, conclusions and recommendations, classified by audit area. He also submitted the first report [A/55/380 & Add.1] on measures taken or to be taken to implement the Board's recommendations on the accounts for the biennium ended 31 December 1999, as well as for the biennium ended 31 December 1997 [A/55/80 & Add.1]. The Assembly also had before it ACABQ's comments on the Board's reports [A/55/487].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/689], adopted resolution 55/220 A without vote [agenda item 115].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 50/222 of 11 April 1996, 51/218 E of 17 June 1997, 52/212 B of 31 March 1998, 53/204 of 18 December 1998, 53/221, section VIII, of 7 April 1999 and 54/13 B of 23 December 1999,

Having considered, for the period ended 31 December 1999, the financial reports and audited financial statements of the United Nations, the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO, the United Nations University, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, the United Nations Office for Project Services, the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors, the concise summary of principal findings, conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports prepared by the Board of Auditors on the audit of the accounts, the reports of the Secretary-General on the measures taken to implement the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors regarding the above-mentioned organizations, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, with the exception of the financial statements of the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme;

2. Approves all the recommendations and conclusions contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors, and endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Decides to defer action on the financial statements of the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme for the period ended 31 December 1999, pending certification by the Board of Auditors that satisfactory progress is being made towards removing the reasons for the qualified opinions or that the matter has been resolved, and decides to revert to this matter at its resumed fifty-fifth session;

4. Commends the Board of Auditors for the quality of its reports, in particular with respect to its comments on the management of resources;

5. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations to present their financial statements on time so that the Board of Auditors can audit them and submit its reports to the General Assembly in accordance with the six-week rule;

6. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors;

7. Notes that the first report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 1999 did not comply with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 54/248 of 23 December 1999 regarding the inclusion of a footnote giving the reason for the late submission of a report;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to review the question of the term of office of the Board of Auditors and to report to the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-fifth session under the item entitled "Review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations";

9. Decides to consider the reports of the Board of Auditors on the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 also under the agenda items relating to the financing of the Tribunals;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare the financial reports and audited financial statements for the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in line with their budget cycles;

11. Calls upon the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations to improve their procurement practices, as appropriate, using the Procurement Division of the Office of Central Support Services of the Secretariat as a model in such areas as the posting of bids on the Internet and inviting all registered suppliers to bid;

12. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations, in conjunction with the Board of Auditors, to continue to evaluate what financial information should be presented in the financial statements and schedules and what should be presented in annexes to the statements in accordance with the United Nations accounting standards.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item entitled "Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458) and that the Fifth Committee should continue consideration of the item at that session (decision 55/455).

Common accounting standards

The General Assembly, by decision 54/479 of 15 June, took note of the Secretary-General's 1999 report on the Guidelines for Internal Control Standards [YUN 1999, p. 1314].

Internal control and accountability

Management irregularities causing financial losses

OIOS report. In June, the General Assembly had before it a note by the Secretary-General [A/53/811] transmitting the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the investigation into allegations of theft of funds by a senior officer of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD). The investigation proved that the official had used his position to perpetrate at least 59 separate instances of theft between 1987 and 1996, without triggering any meaningful alarm. The illegal activities were discovered by accident when the officer was on sick leave in mid-1996. Of the nearly 730,000 Swiss francs (SwF) involved, SwF 495,000, or 68 per cent, was recovered. Since the officer's trial and conviction by the Swiss Court, efforts had been made to determine lapses within the United Nations Office at Geneva and UNCTAD that may have contributed to the longevity of the scheme, including deficiencies in management and operations, leading to the enactment of changes by both entities. OIOS also included in its report recommendations to enable them to recognize and identify fraud indicators so as to minimize the risk of repetition.

By decision 54/462 B of 15 June, the Assembly deferred consideration of the OIOS report.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 53/225 [YUN 1999, p. 1315], the Secretary-General submitted a follow-up report on management irregularities causing financial losses to the Organization [A/54/793]. The report outlined procedures being developed by the Secretary-General for determining gross negligence and for the effective implementation of staff rule 112.3 for financial recovery. Those procedures called for the preliminary investigation of any alleged gross negligence by heads of departments/offices (or OIOS) and for proven gross negligence to be dealt with under revised Joint Disciplinary Committee procedures with an expanded Committee mandate and revised composition. The report also described recently introduced measures to make for a more effective accountability mechanism, including: a programme management plan to be submitted yearly by senior managers, identifying their goals, along with measurable performance indicators; an Accountability Panel to advise the Secretary-General on accountability matters; and a strengthened monitoring of delegated authority by the Department of Management. Measures to improve internal control had also been introduced. The Secretary-General believed that a comprehensive approach to accountability, backed up by those measures, would contribute significantly to detecting and preventing management irregularities.

Having considered the Secretary-General's report, ACABQ [A/55/499] pointed out that an efficiently functioning system for the administration of justice, as well as the successful implementation of a comprehensive system of accountability (see p. 1337) would be key to the eventual positive impact of the procedures.

By decision 54/462 B of 15 June, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report on management irregularities causing financial losses to the Organization.

Administrative and budgetary coordination

ACC report. In October, the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) submitted the sixth statistical report [A/55/525] on the budgetary and financial situation of the organizations in the UN system. The report compared data from the United Nations and 12 intergovernmental organizations, as well as six voluntarily funded bodies.

The tabulated data were grouped under: approved regular budget and assessed contributions for 1992-2001, including the percentage of assessments for 2000-2001; assessments voted and received for 1998-1999, and collection of assessed contributions for 1998-1999; working capital funds for 2000-2001; and expenditures from and receipts of voluntary contributions in 1998-1999.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in its first report on its activities during the General Assembly's fifty-fourth session [A/55/7], stated that the reforms witnessed during its 1998 meetings with the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) had intensified. There was greater emphasis on planning for results and personnel management reform, as well as focus on priority-setting, a better definition of objectives, performance monitoring and evaluation. Except for the World Intellectual Property Organization, the agencies had hardly had any real increase in their budgets. However, resources for development had decreased dramatically, including those managed by UNDP, while resources for emergency and humanitarian operations had increased. ACABQ noted that the planning and budgeting processes in some agencies were being reformed extensively, but cautioned that such reforms should not bring new rigidities or a lack of transparency or make those processes more costly. Regarding the reported difficulties of many agencies in establishing performance measurement standards, ACABQ said that, unless those standards were carefully identified and realistically set, reforms could lead to confusion, excessive reporting and high cost.

Noting that the effect of extensive budgetary constraints on a number of agencies had led to a search for efficiencies and reductions in support services, ACABQ warned that there was a limit to reducing those services without negatively impacting on programme implementation. Such reductions might lead to greater expenditure in the future, as in the case of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and UN Headquarters buildings, for which estimated rehabilitation costs had reached more than $400 million and $1 billion, respectively. It pointed out that emphasis on giving greater flexibility to programme managers should not compromise the need for accountability.

ACABQ also noted that less than full receipt of assessed and voluntary contributions rendered the implementation of plans and realization of objectives more difficult. It stressed the need for agencies to collaborate and learn from each other in the reform process, a first step being the harmonization of terminologies relating to planning, budgeting and human resources reform, especially in the area of results-based budgeting (see p. 1295). Agencies also needed to share lessons learned and experiences in the development of management information systems to implement, monitor, evaluate and report on programmes and other operations. Lack of coordination in that regard could lead to potentially costly duplicate systems. Evidence pointed to some systems that were developed and later abandoned or considerably modified, demonstrating inadequate identification of needs prior to system design and implementation, as well as underestimation of related costs and unrealistic investment in information technology, leading to more expenditure in attempts to correct those mistakes.

As to delegation of authority to the field, ACABQ said that to succeed, it had to be accompanied by central capacity to monitor field performance, using new technologies to avoid excessive paper reporting and attendant bureaucracy. Field offices should be provided with new equipment and technologies and qualified staff.

ACABQ also examined results-based budgeting, human resources reform and training, cooperation in the field for peacekeeping and humanitarian operations and UN offices and programmes.

By decision 55/451 of 23 December, the Assembly took note of the ACABQ report and requested the Secretary-General to bring it to the attention of the executive heads of the specialized agencies and funds and programmes concerned.

On the same date, the Assembly decided that the item on the administrative and budgetary coordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and IAEA would remain for consideration during the resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458) and that the Fifth Committee should continue consideration of the item at that session (decision 55/455).

Programme planning

Medium-term plan

Rules and regulations governing programme planning

By decision 54/474 of 7 April, the General Assembly took note of the additional paragraph in rule 105.4 of the revised Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, contained in the Secretary-General's 1999 note [YUN 1999, p. 1316], and recommended that the Secretary-General, in promulgating the rule, add the following sentence at the end of the paragraph: "Expected accomplishments shall be objective, feasible and pertinent to the nature of, and work carried out by, each subprogramme."

Medium-term plan 2002-2005

The Secretary-General's proposed medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005 [A/55/6/Rev.1], as a translation of legislative mandates into programmes and subprogrammes, provided the principal policy directives of the United Nations and served as a framework for the formulation of the biennial programme budgets within the plan period and for the evaluation of programmes. The plan comprised two parts: the first noted the challenges to be faced in the plan period, the plan's policy orientation and strategy, its methodology and format, and its priorities; the second set out the 25 programmes under the responsibility of UN offices.

In his introduction to the plan, the Secretary-General said the broad range of challenges posed by globalization required an integrated, action-oriented response from the Organization, for which effective planning was essential. In his medium-term plan, the programmes and subprogrammes foreseen under peace and security were those aimed at the prevention, control and peaceful resolution of conflicts, in tandem with humanitarian and human rights programmes; disarmament; post-conflict peacekeeping operations through special political missions in support of peace-building activities, including electoral assistance where appropriate; and ensuring a smooth transition from humanitarian relief to reconstruction and development.

Economic and social programmes would continue to address development, environmental, financial, gender, human rights, poverty, population, technological and trade issues in the context of globalization. Follow-up action to the high-level international intergovernmental event on financing for development, envisaged for 2001, and action resulting from the General Assembly's consideration of "Globalization and interdependence", could provide impetus and guidance for a better handling of globalization and related development issues. Continuing work was foreseen for the regional commissions, UNCTAD and the Department of Economic and Social Affairs to assist in the integration of developing countries and countries with economies in transition into the world economy. Also reflected in the plan was an increased awareness of the need for gender-sensitive programmes, projects and activities; the interests, experiences, priorities and needs of both women and men had been taken into account in designing the subprogrammes, facilitating the eventual design of the activities to be implemented at the operational level of the programme budgets.

A theme common to most of the programmes was the intent to make maximum use of technological developments to enhance the effectiveness of UN activities. A number of programmes, among them the public information and humanitarian programmes, were already making extensive use of the Internet. The humanitarian programme had developed ReliefWeb as a major tool for coordinating humanitarian aid. To meet the growing incidence and devastating impact of natural disasters, the plan provided for programmes in the areas of disaster prevention and mitigation, humanitarian response and post-disaster recovery and rehabilitation.

The plan sought to improve the presentation of programmes by maintaining consistency in their structure and coherence in the formulation of their components so as to overcome the difficulties in assessing the degree of programme implementation and achievement stemming from the failure to distinguish true objectives from activities at the planning stage.

The priority areas identified by the Secretary-General for 2002-2005 were the same as those for 1998-2001: maintenance of international peace and security; promotion of sustained growth and sustainable development; development of Africa; promotion of human rights; effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts; promotion of justice and international law; disarmament; and drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations.

CPC consideration. At the first part of its fortieth session (New York, 5 June-1 July) [A/55/16], CPC, having examined the Secretary-General's proposed 2002-2005 medium-term plan, recommended that the Assembly adopt the introduction to the plan, subject to a number of observations. Among them were that the priorities for 2002-2005 should be as recommended by the Secretary-General; that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to report on the implications of the plan's new format on the cycle of planning, programming, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation in the context of the next biennial report on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations; that indicators of achievement be included in the plan, where possible, and that a number of expected accomplishments and achievement indicators needed to be re-elaborated, explicitly to reflect their relation to the objectives and the distinctive nature of the programme activities; that the distinct responsibilities of the Secretariat and of Member States in relation to the expected accomplishments and achievement indicators be identified to illustrate the different natures of the programme objectives and to identify clearly some of the elements having a direct impact on the accomplishment of their objectives; that all mandates and activities pertinent to the programmes be included in the plan; and that the Assembly ensure the relevance of the legislative mandates with the respective programmes.

CPC presented conclusions and recommendations on 23 of the 25 proposed programmes.

Following completion of its consideration of paragraph 7.37 (e) of programme 7, Economic and social affairs, and of programme 19, Human rights, at the second part of its fortieth session (New York, 21-29 August), CPC recommended to the Assembly approval of programme 7, with certain modifications, and a careful review of programme 19.

Programme performance

In a May report on the programme performance of the United Nations for the 1998-1999 biennium [A/55/73], the Secretary-General analysed programme performance in terms of the implementation of outputs identified in the 1998-1999 budget narrative. He reflected modifications to the programme of work during implementation, including the introduction of new activities by legislative bodies and the Secretariat, provided explanations for the non-implementation of outputs and reviewed resources utilized broken down by sources of funding.

Under the 1998-1999 programme budget, a total of 27,098 outputs were committed for implementation, including 22,830 programmed quantifiable outputs, 457 carried over from the previous biennium, 2,079 added by legislative bodies and 1,732 initiated by the Secretariat. Of that total, 24,025 outputs were implemented, 1,148 outputs were postponed to the following biennium and 1,925 were terminated. Implementation utilized 34,589 work-months, comprising 70 per cent of all work-months available to the Secretariat, with the remaining 30 per cent devoted to international cooperation, inter-agency coordination and liaison and technical cooperation activities. The average implementation rate was 88 per cent, ranging from 68 per cent to 100 per cent among budget sections.

The Secretary-General said that the overall implementation rate of 88 per cent for all mandated outputs, the highest level in the past decade, was one of the tangible outcomes of the resolve to promote managerial efficiency and accountability in the ongoing implementation of his reform measures. OIOS believed that the strengthening of accountability through the performance planning and appraisal system, and the institutionalization of computerized programme performance monitoring and reporting systems at the departmental level, contributed to improved programme implementation.

The implementation rates also pointed to more flexibility and resourcefulness in programme management. While implementation of mandated outputs increased by 8 percentage points to 88 per cent compared to the previous biennium, the ratio of all implemented outputs to those initially programmed increased by 9 percentage points to 105 per cent. Three departments attained implementation rates as high as 144, 146 and 172 per cent, pointing to the strengthened managerial ability to respond to unforeseen programmatic demands and to mobilize resources efficiently to attain higher programme delivery.

Despite those positive results, performance management and monitoring could be improved, particularly by applying performance measurements in assessing the achievement of stated objectives, and providing sound information on resource utilization. A structured and more informative qualitative assessment of programme performance needed to be carried out. The timing, substance and impact of the performance report as a feedback mechanism for future programme planning and budgeting should be reviewed to enhance its value to overall programme performance. Best practices in performance monitoring would be strengthened as a managerial decision-making tool, supporting electronic-based monitoring systems would be further developed, and remaining redundancies and duplications would be identified and eliminated.

The Secretary-General noted that the acceptance of and expertise in reporting on programme performance varied considerably between departments and offices. OIOS would have to provide more guidance and training support to departments and offices, which could be translated into a detailed plan of action to assure that the programme performance report for the next biennium would be more informative, comprehensive and prepared more cost-effectively.

CPC consideration. CPC, in August [A/55/16], noted the high implementation rate achieved by the Secretariat and requested reporting entities that had not yet done so to establish viable and compatible monitoring systems. The Committee also noted that some of the qualitative assessments were too general and thus not very helpful in determining whether activities had resulted in expected outcomes. It looked forward to the further refinement of future programme performance reports, including ways in which full implementation and the quality of mandated programmes and activities could be ensured, and better assessed by and reported to Member States.

Evaluation and programme planning

OIOS reports. By an April note [A/55/63], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly an OIOS report that reviewed in-depth evaluations and self-evaluation activities during 1998-1999, highlighting several developments in UN evaluation practices. OIOS found that the situation had improved significantly compared to that described two years earlier [YUN 1998, p. 1294]. It noted in particular the high-level ad hoc examinations of the fall of the safe area of Srebrenica in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1995 [YUN 1999, p. 327], the operation and functioning of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and UN actions during the 1994 genocide in Rwanda [YUN 1994, p. 281]. Those reviews represented a deepening of the commitment at the highest levels of the Organization to learning lessons of experience through an objective and authoritative scrutiny of how the United Nations operated. The evaluation function was well established for large-scale field operations, such as those involving peacekeeping and refugees. In the political, economic and social and public information fields, solid evaluation work was being conducted on a wider scale than in previous bienniums. Conference and support services had also instituted more critical reviews and assessments.

CPC consideration. CPC, in June/July [A/55/16], recommended that future OIOS reports on evaluation should be more analytical, should assess whether the evaluation function was being effectively carried out, and should consider how it might be improved, in particular strengthening its role in programme design, delivery and policy directives. It stressed the need for the internal evaluation system to benefit from the work of existing external evaluation mechanisms so as to allow for more effective, independent and critical evaluations.

Other OIOS reports transmitted to CPC by the Secretary-General included: the in-depth evaluation of global development trends, issues and policies, and global approaches to social and microeconomic issues and policies, and the corresponding subprogrammes in the regional commissions [E/AC.51/2000/2]; the in-depth evaluation of the advancement of women programme [E/AC.51/2000/3]; and the triennial reviews of the implementation of CPC's recommendations made at its thirty-seventh (1997) session on the evaluations of the statistics programme [E/AC.51/2000/4] and of the Department of Humanitarian Affairs [E/AC.51/2000/5]. CPC's comments and recommendations on those reports were contained in the report of its fortieth session [A/55/16].

By decision 54/475 of 7 April, the Assembly endorsed the conclusions and recommendations contained in CPC's report on the work of its thirty-ninth session [A/54/16] regarding evaluation, the reports of JIU and improving CPC's working methods and procedures. It decided to review further the electoral assistance programme in the context of its consideration of CPC's report on the work of its fortieth session on the relevant programme of the 1998-2001 medium-term plan.

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 53/207 [YUN 1998, p. 1294], the Secretary-General reported in June [A/55/85] on ways in which the full implementation and the quality of mandated programmes and activities could be ensured and better assessed by and reported to Member States. To ensure a more effective use of the programme performance report, a number of measures were proposed with respect to that report's format, content and timing. Additionally, programme managers were urged to use computerized monitoring systems for tracking the timely and effective implementation of their work and to establish assessment criteria for measuring expected accomplishments. The 2000-2001 performance report should provide systematic reporting on the qualitative aspects of programme performance, building on the experience reflected in the 1998-1999 report, including a presentation of achievement indicators of expected accomplishments set out in the 2000-2001 programme budget. Besides continuing to provide information on the delivery of programmed outputs, the programme performance report should focus mainly on the extent to which outputs implemented had led to the attainment of the expected accomplishments, thereby providing CPC with substantive information to assist it in its consideration of future programme budgets. It should also be presented using the measures proposed regarding format, content and timing; CPC would review that procedure with a view possibly to utilizing it over the period of the 2002-2005 medium-term plan (see p. 1320).

As requested by CPC (see p. 1321), the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee an October report [A/C.5/55/14] on the impact of the format of the medium-term plan on the programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation cycle. He indicated that, since the different phases of the programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation cycle were closely connected, the changed format of the proposed 2002-2005 medium-term plan would provide for effective implementation of the subsequent phases of the cycle.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/710], adopted resolution 55/234 without vote [agenda item 118].

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 38/227 A of 20 December 1983, 41/213 of 19 December 1986 and 51/219 of 18 December 1996,

Having examined the proposed medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005,

Having considered the views expressed by Member States in the context of the review by the Main Committees of the General Assembly of the relevant programmes of the proposed medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005,

Having also considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its fortieth session,

Having further considered the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 1998-1999, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on strengthening the role of evaluation findings in programme design, delivery and policy directives, the report of the Secretary-General on ways in which the full implementation and the quality of mandated programmes and activities could be ensured and could be better assessed by and reported to Member States, as well as the report of the Secretary-General on the impact of the format of the medium-term plan on the programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation cycle,

I

Medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005

1. Reaffirms that the medium-term plan is the principal policy directive of the United Nations and shall serve as the framework for the next biennial programme budget;

2. Also reaffirms the importance of ensuring that the medium-term plan reflects all mandated programmes and activities;

3. Stresses the importance of ensuring that all legislative mandates are accurately translated into programmes;

4. Also stresses the need to continue considering the impact of the new format of the medium-term plan for 2002-2005 on the rest of the cycle;

5. Notes that some of the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its thirty-ninth session, as adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 54/236 of 23 December 1999, regarding revisions to the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation had not been fully reflected in the Secretary-General's bulletin containing the revised edition of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, in presenting the medium-term plan, expected accomplishments and, where possible, indicators of achievement are included to measure achievements in the implementation of the programmes of the Organization, not those of individual Member States;

7. Stresses that the Secretary-General, in formulating the strategy components of future medium-term plans, should clearly present the approach that will be taken, the type of activities to be carried out and the course of action proposed to achieve the objective desired and to ensure that in subsequent programme budgets planned activities are programmed and reflected in the outputs to be produced;

8. Adopts the proposed medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005, together with the relevant recommendations of the Committee and the additional conclusions and recommendations contained in the annex to the present resolution;

II

Programme performance report

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 1998-1999;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination regarding the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 1998-1999;

3. Takes note of the recommendations of the Committee on the report of the Secretary-General on ways in which the full implementation and the quality of mandated programmes and activities could be ensured and could be better assessed by and reported to Member States;

4. Recognizes the need for clear statements of objectives, expected accomplishments and corresponding indicators of achievement in future medium-term plans and programme budgets in order to ensure better assessment of the implementation of programmes in the context of the biennial programme performance reports, in accordance with the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning;

III

Other conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination

Endorses all other conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its fortieth session.

ANNEX

Conclusions and recommendations on the proposed medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005

Programme 19 should read as follows:

Programme 19

Human rights

Overall orientation

19.1 The purpose of the United Nations human rights programme is to promote universal enjoyment of all human rights by giving practical effect to the will and resolve of the world community as expressed by the United Nations. Its mandate derives from Articles 1, 13 and 55 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993 and subsequently endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 48/121 of 20 December 1993, the mandate of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights as defined in Assembly resolution 48/141 of the same date, international human rights instruments adopted by the United Nations and the resolutions and decisions of policy-making bodies. The programme is based on the principles and recommendations of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action.

19.2 The programme is under the responsibility of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, who performs her or his functions under the direction and authority of the Secretary-General in accordance with resolution 48/141. Its objectives are to provide the leading role on human rights issues and to emphasize the importance of human rights on the international and national agendas; to promote international cooperation for human rights; to stimulate and coordinate action across the whole United Nations system; to promote universal ratification and implementation of international standards and to assist in the development of new norms; to support human rights organs and treaty-monitoring bodies; to anticipate serious violations and react to violations; to emphasize preventive human rights action and to promote the establishment of national human rights infrastructures; to undertake human rights field activities and operations; and to provide education, information, advisory services and technical assistance in the field of human rights.

19.3 By the end of the period covered by the present medium-term plan, it is expected that the following will have been accomplished:

(a) A significant enhancement and strengthening of international cooperation in the field of human rights leading to increased effectiveness of international machinery, improved respect for human rights at the national level, through, inter alia, universal ratification of all international human rights treaties, the incorporation of those standards into the domestic legislation of States and the continuing adaptation of the United Nations human rights machinery to current and future needs in the promotion and protection of human rights, as reflected in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action;

(b) Major strengthening of coordination for human rights across the United Nations system, leading to a comprehensive and integrated approach to the promotion and protection of human rights based on the contribution of each of the United Nations organs, bodies and specialized agencies whose activities deal with human rights and on improved inter-agency cooperation and coordination;

(c) The adoption and implementation of an integrated and multidimensional strategy for the promotion and protection of the right to development, accompanied by a significant enhancement of support from relevant United Nations bodies for that purpose;

(d) Provision of the appropriate assistance by the Secretariat and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to ensure that the promotion and protection of all human rights are guided by the principles of impartiality, objectivity and non-selectivity, in the spirit of constructive international dialogue and cooperation;

(e) Compliance by the Office of the High Commissioner with the paramount consideration of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity, and with due regard to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible, bearing in mind that the principle of equitable geographical distribution is compatible with the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity;

(f) A significant increase in the recognition of economic, social and cultural rights and in activities for their protection, including the integration of economic, social and cultural rights as human rights into the strategies and programmes of international organizations, agencies and financial and developmental institutions, the identification of measures of achievement showing success in respecting those rights and the adoption of a communication procedure relating to non-compliance with economic, social and cultural rights;

(g) The adoption and progressive implementation of an improved treaty-monitoring system dealing with multiple reporting obligations and based on a comprehensive national approach;

(h) The implementation of a strengthened system of special procedures based on harmonization and rationalization of work;

(i) The reinforcement of the United Nations as the unique worldwide forum for the discussion and resolution of human rights matters of international concern, with the participation of all relevant actors;

(j) The adoption of more efficient methods within the United Nations to promote and protect human rights, including by preventing human rights violations throughout the world and removing obstacles to the full realization of human rights;

(k) The implementation of a comprehensive United Nations programme to assist States, at their request, in developing and implementing national human rights plans of action strengthening, inter alia, national structures having an impact on democracy and the rule of law; to establish national institutions to give effect to the right to development and economic, social and cultural rights; and to assist States, at their request, within the respective mandates of the Secretariat and the Office of the High Commissioner, in the process of ratifying United Nations human rights instruments;

(l) Fulfilment of the mandates given to the Secretariat for giving appropriate assistance, according to the resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights, to treaty bodies, intergovernmental and expert bodies, as well as the existing relevant voluntary trust funds;

(m) The full integration of the human rights of women and the girl child into the activities of the United Nations system as a whole and its human rights machinery in particular;

(n) The implementation of effective measures to promote equality, dignity and tolerance, to fight racism and xenophobia and to protect minorities, indigenous populations, migrant workers, the disabled and others, taking into account also the outcome of the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, to be held in 2001;

(o) The establishment of effective programmes of education and public information and the strengthened contribution of non-governmental organizations, national institutions, grass-roots organizations and civil society in United Nations human rights activities at all levels, according to the legislative mandates in effect regarding these issues;

(p) The provision to States, United Nations bodies, experts and the academic community of high-quality research and analysis on human rights issues, including that dealing with emerging problems and the development of new standards and instruments.

Subprogramme 1

Right to development, research and analysis

Objectives and strategy

19.4 The primary objectives of this subprogramme will include the promotion and protection of the right to development. In this regard, the objectives will be to develop an integrated and multidimensional strategy for the implementation, coordination and promotion of the right to development in accordance with the Declaration on the Right to Development and subsequent mandates and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, aimed at facilitating action to be taken by relevant bodies of the United Nations system, including treaty bodies, international development and financial institutions and non-governmental organizations, for the implementation of the right to development as an integral part of fundamental human rights, ensuring the realization of the right to development across the human rights programme and by specialized agencies and United Nations treaty bodies; to promote national implementation of the right to development through coordination with State-appointed officials; to identify obstacles at the national and international levels; and to promote awareness about the content and importance of the right to development, including through information and educational activities.

19.5 With regard to research and analysis, the objectives will be to strengthen respect for human rights by increasing knowledge, awareness and understanding of human rights issues through data collection, research and analysis. These objectives will be pursued within the framework of the indivisibility, interdependence and interrelatedness of all human rights and will be aimed at facilitating the implementation of standards, the work of treaty bodies, special rapporteurs and other bodies and the preparation of new standards; ensuring the recognition on the national and international levels of economic, social and cultural rights; promoting democracy and strengthening national human rights institutions and procedures for the rule of law; contributing to the elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and new forms of discrimination; and strengthening the recognition of the human rights of women and children and the protection of vulnerable groups such as minorities, migrant workers and indigenous people.

Expected accomplishments

19.6 Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat would include:

(a) Wider integration and/or inclusion of the promotion and protection of the right to development, in particular across the human rights programme and the relevant programmes of work of the United Nations departments and/or offices and specialized agencies and of major international organizations and forums related to this issue;

(b) Major strengthening of coordination for human rights across the United Nations system, leading to a comprehensive and integrated approach to the promotion and protection of human rights based on the contribution of each of the United Nations organs, bodies and specialized agencies whose activities deal with human rights and also based on improved inter-agency cooperation and coordination;

(c) Strengthened efforts which will contribute to the elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

(d) Enhanced awareness, knowledge and understanding of all human rights, including the right to development;

(e) Wider recognition of the rights of women, children and persons belonging to minorities, migrant workers, indigenous people and persons with disabilities, and strengthening the protection of vulnerable groups.

Measurements of achievement

19.7 Measures of achievement are elements used as tools for determining, where possible, the extent to which the objectives and/or expected accomplishments have been achieved.

19.8 Measures of achievement of the Secretariat would include:

(a) The extent to which the right to development had been included in the work programmes of the departments and offices of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and other relevant intergovernmental organizations, providing compiled examples of concrete steps in that regard;

(b) The extent to which the mandates given to the Secretariat contained in resolutions and decisions adopted by the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights, had been fulfilled;

(c) The holding of seminars and workshops organized by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in accordance with the relevant resolutions and decisions adopted by the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights, or in cooperation with the Office of the High Commissioner, and the extent to which they contributed to the fulfilment of the objectives of the subprogramme;

(d) The extent to which the activities of the Office of the High Commissioner contributed to increasing knowledge, awareness and understanding in order to advance the full realization of the right to development, in accordance with the Declaration on the Right to Development;

(e) Increased number of visitors to the web site of the Office of the High Commissioner;

(f) The number of new publications of the Office of the High Commissioner as well as their distribution, and the assessment by users of their quality and usefulness.

Subprogramme 2

Supporting human rights bodies and organs

Objectives and strategy

19.9 The objectives are to support the United Nations human rights bodies and organs and to facilitate their deliberations by ensuring and enhancing their effective functioning; to contribute to increasing the knowledge, expanding the awareness and promoting the importance of all international human rights treaties; to improve existing procedures through rationalization and streamlining, and the coordination of the participation of Governments, experts, specialized agencies, other international organizations, national institutions and non-governmental organizations in their work; and to ensure the analytical capacity of human rights treaty bodies for the review of State party reports under international treaties and for the processing of communications.

Expected accomplishments

19.10 Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat would include:

(a) The timely delivery of required and appropriate support to intergovernmental bodies, expert bodies and treaty bodies, inter alia, in order to contribute to reducing the backlog in the consideration by the reviewing mechanisms of the States parties' reports;

(b) The timely delivery of required and appropriate support to intergovernmental bodies, expert bodies and treaty bodies, inter alia, in order to contribute to reducing the backlog in the consideration by the reviewing mechanisms of complaints.

Measurements of achievement

19.11 Measures of achievement are elements used as tools for determining, where possible, the extent to which the objectives and/or expected accomplishments have been achieved.

19.12 Measures of achievement of the Secretariat would include:

(a) The quality and timeliness of services provided by the Office of the High Commissioner;

(b) A reduction in the time lag between the submission of a State party report and its examination by the relevant treaty body;

(c) A reduction in the time lag between the submission of a complaint and its review, as appropriate, by the relevant mechanisms;

(d) The number of reports prepared by the Secretariat in accordance with resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights, and the extent to which they were presented in a timely manner, in compliance with the six-week rule for the issuance of documentation, for consideration by organs dealing with human rights.

Subprogramme 3

Advisory services, technical cooperation, support to human rights fact-finding procedures and field activities

Objectives and strategy

19.13 In the area of advisory services and technical cooperation, the objectives are to assist countries, at their request, in developing comprehensive national plans of action to promote and protect human rights and to provide advice and support to specific projects to promote respect for human rights; to develop a comprehensive and coordinated United Nations programme to help States in building and strengthening national structures for human rights promotion and protection; and to raise awareness and promote specialized knowledge about human rights through the organization of training courses, seminars and workshops, and the production of a wide range of educational, training and information material.

19.14 In the area of support to fact-finding bodies, the objectives are to ensure the effective functioning of human rights monitoring mechanisms by assisting special rapporteurs and representatives, experts and working groups mandated by policy-making bodies, including through the preparation of information regarding alleged violations and situations for review and the provision of support for missions and meetings; and to enhance the efficiency of action by policy-making bodies by providing analytical information on human rights situations.

19.15 With respect to field activities, the objective is to ensure the efficiency of field missions and presences through the maintenance of contacts with Governments, appropriate sectors of the United Nations system, international and regional organizations and others by supporting and developing such activities through the development of training programmes and materials for human rights field staff and training in human rights for the appropriate components of other United Nations field operations.

Expected accomplishments

19.16 Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat would include:

(a) Provision of advisory services and technical and financial assistance, at the request of the State concerned and, where appropriate, the regional human rights organizations, with a view to supporting actions and programmes in the field of human rights;

(b) Fulfilment of the mandates given to the Office of the High Commissioner in resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights to support human rights monitoring mechanisms, such as special rapporteurs/representatives and expert and working groups mandated by policy-making bodies;

(c) Enhanced awareness, knowledge and understanding of all human rights, including the right to development.

Measurements of achievement

19.17 Measures of achievement are elements used as tools for determining, where possible, the extent to which the objectives and/or expected accomplishments have been achieved.

19.18 Measures of achievement of the Secretariat would include:

(a) The number of seminars, workshops and training courses held or supported by the Office of the High Commissioner; and the number of persons trained, participants in seminars and workshops and fellowships granted, as well as data on their geographical distribution, and the extent to which they contributed to the fulfilment of the objectives of the subprogramme;

(b) The number of requests from Member States and, where appropriate, from the regional human rights organizations, received and fulfilled by the Office of the High Commissioner for the provision of advisory services and technical and financial assistance, with a view to supporting actions and programmes in the field of human rights;

(c) The timeliness, significance and relevance of the advisory services and technical cooperation.

UN International Partnership Fund

Pursuant to General Assembly decision 53/475 [YUN 1999, p. 1318], the Secretary-General reported on the status of the United Nations Fund for International Partnership (UNFIP) [A/55/763 & CORR.1], established in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1297] to manage the process of grant allocations through the United Nations Foundation (UNF), a public charity founded by Robert Edward Turner to channel a gift to the United Nations of 18 million shares of Time Warner stock valued at some $1 billion. The report provided data on the outcome of the three funding cycles for operations in 2000 and information on progress in each programmatic focus area.

The three UNF-approved funding rounds of grants were: the sixth round, approved on 23 March, totalling more than $17 million for 23 projects; the seventh round, approved on 24 July, totalling $42 million for 29 projects; and the eighth round, approved on 20 December, totalling $16 million for 13 projects, bringing the grants programmed for 2000 to some $75 million. By sector, grants were awarded for projects as follows: $43 million for population and women; $17 million for the environment; $9 million for peace, security, human rights and institutional capacity-building; and $7 million for children's health. Total funding since inception of the UNFIP-UNF partnership to the end of 2000 amounted to $312 million for some 169 projects.

Responding to comments by the Board of Auditors, UNFIP took the following steps to reduce delays in the submission of project documents: it streamlined the project approval and signature process, replacing the current two-step process with a single project document; and introduced a sunset clause to enter into effect 60 days after project approval, with funding to be withdrawn for failure to submit a project document for UNFIP's signature within 120 days following Board approval.

The Secretary-General provided additional information on UNFIP activities in respect of the programme framework on children's health [A/54/664/Add.1], on population and women [A/54/664/Add.2] and on biodiversity [A/54/664/Add.3].

Chapter III

United Nations staff

In 2000, the General Assembly, through the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), maintained continuous review of the conditions of service of the staff of the UN common system. It adopted a number of ICSC recommendations updating conditions of service, among them the base/floor salary scale, the common staff assessment scale, the post adjustment system, dependency allowances and the education grant. The Assembly took note of progress made in finalizing the draft standards of conduct for the international civil service and welcomed the adoption by ICSC of the integrated framework for human resources management.

The Secretary-General kept the Assembly abreast of the proposed review of ICSC as part of his ongoing programme for UN reform and reported on developments related to staff composition, the use of gratis personnel, consultants, individual contractors and retirees, the status of women in the Secretariat, regulations governing the status, rights and duties of the Secretary-General, non-Secretariat officials and experts on mission, and adherence to regulations governing standards of accommodation for air travel of UN officials.

The Office of Internal Oversight Services audited the Secretariat's recruitment process, while the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) examined the process of senior-level appointments, assessed the implementation of delegation of authority to department and office heads and reviewed the machinery for the administration of justice in the United Nations, following which the Assembly amended the Statute of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal.

In the face of increasing threats and attacks against UN and associated personnel serving in the field, the Security Council and the Assembly stressed that the responsibility for the security and safety of such personnel lay primarily on the host Governments, which were strongly urged to take protective measures and to prosecute the perpetrators of such acts. In addition, the Secretary-General appointed a United Nations Security Coordinator to assist him in fulfilling his obligation to ensure the security of UN personnel.

The Assembly established the United Nations System Staff College, with effect from 1 January 2001, making it a system-wide knowledge management, training and learning establishment.

In other action, the Assembly approved changes to the pension adjustment system and amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund.

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), a 15-member body established in 1974 by General Assembly resolution 3357(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 875], continued in 2000 to regulate and co-ordinate the conditions of service of the UN common system of salaries and allowances. The United Nations and 12 related organizations had accepted the ICSC statute: the International Labour Organization (ILO); the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO); the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization; the World Health Organization; the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO); the Universal Postal Union; the International Telecommunication Union; the World Meteorological Organization; the International Maritime Organization; the World Intellectual Property Organization; the United Nations Industrial Development Organization; and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). One other organization, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, had not formally accepted the statute but participated fully in ICSC work.

ICSC held its fifty-first (Vienna, 3-20 April) and its fifty-second (New York, 17 July-4 August) sessions in 2000. At those sessions, it considered, in addition to organizational matters, the conditions of service applicable to both Professional and General Service categories of staff and those pertaining specifically either to the Professional and higher categories or to the General Service and other locally recruited categories.

The deliberations, recommendations and decisions of ICSC on those matters were detailed in its twenty-sixth annual report to the Assembly [A/55/30] (see sections below).

In a November statement on the administrative and financial implications of ICSC decisions and recommendations [A/55/629] for the 2000-2001 programme budget, the Secretary-General estimated the resultant increased requirements at $5,736,846, net of staff assessment.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/55/709], adopted resolution 55/223 without vote [agenda item 124].

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Civil Service Commission for the year 2000 and the statement submitted by the Secretary-General on the administrative and financial implications of the decisions and recommendations contained in the report of the Commission,

Reaffirming its commitment to a single unified United Nations common system as the cornerstone for the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Convinced that the common system constitutes the best instrument to secure staff of the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity for the international civil service, as stipulated under the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the central role of the Commission in the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Reaffirming also the statute of the Commission,

I

Conditions of service applicable to both categories of staff

A. Framework for human resources management

Recalling its resolutions 51/216 of 18 December 1996, 52/216 of 22 December 1997, 53/209 of 18 December 1998 and 54/238 of 23 December 1999,

1. Welcomes with appreciation the work of the Commission with regard to the integrated framework for human resources management, which would assist organizations of the common system to carry forward human resources management reforms;

2. Endorses the conclusions of the Commission as contained in paragraph 19 of its report;

3. Requests the Commission to use the integrated framework as a guide to its future programme of work as contained in paragraph 18 of its report;

4. Encourages the organizations of the United Nations common system to use the integrated framework as a basis for their future work in human resources policies and procedures and to bring it to the attention of their governing bodies;

B. Standards of conduct for the international civil service

Recalling its resolutions 52/252 of 8 September 1998 and 54/238,

Takes note of the decisions of the Commission contained in paragraph 31 of its report, urges organizations to reach consensus on the draft standards of conduct for the international civil service in sufficient time so as to enable the Commission to finalize the text to be submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session, and emphasizes that the proposed standards should ensure that the staff uphold the principles of integrity, impartiality and independence;

C. Review of pay and benefits system

Recalling its resolutions 51/216, 52/216 and 53/209,

1. Takes note of the work of the Commission in respect of the review of the pay and benefits system in the context of the integrated framework for human resources management;

2. Takes note also of the decision of the Commission to move forward with the review of the pay and benefits system in accordance with the modalities described in annex III to its report;

D. Recognition of language knowledge

Recalling section II.E of its resolution 48/224 of 23 December 1993 and section II.B of its resolution 53/209,

Takes note of the decision of the Commission to address the issue of recognition of language knowledge within the context of the comprehensive review of the pay and benefits system;

E. Education grant

Recalling section III.C of its resolution 54/238, by which it requested the Commission to complete the review of the methodology for the education grant and report the results to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session,

1. Takes note of the decisions and recommendations of the Commission in respect of the review of the methodology for the education grant as contained in paragraph 81 of its report;

2. Urges the organizations of the United Nations common system to harmonize their rules and regulations to ensure that the education grant is treated as a benefit payable to internationally recruited staff with expatriate status only;

3. Approves increases in the maximum reimbursement levels in five currency areas, as well as other adjustments to the management of expenses under the education grant, as contained in paragraph 93 of its report;

4. Takes note of the decisions of the Commission as contained in paragraphs 94 and 95 of its report;

F. Common scale of staff assessment

Recalling its resolutions 48/225 of 23 December 1993 and 51/216,

Takes note of the decisions of the Commission as contained in paragraph 102 of its report;

II

Conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories

A. Noblemaire principle and its application

Recalling its resolution 44/198 of 21 December 1989 and other relevant resolutions,

1. Reaffirms the continued application of the Noblemaire principle;

2. Also reaffirms the need to continue to ensure the competitiveness of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system;

B. Grade equivalencies between the United States federal civil service and the United Nations common system

Recalling section I.A of its resolution 50/208 of 23 December 1995,

1. Takes note of the updated grade equivalency study undertaken in 2000 by the Commission with the United States federal civil service;

2. Also takes note of the decisions of the Commission in respect of the grade equivalency study undertaken in 2000 with the comparator civil service as contained in paragraph 149 of its report;

C. Evolution of the margin

Recalling section I.B of its resolution 52/216 and the standing mandate from the General Assembly, in which the Commission is requested to continue its review of the relationship between the net remuneration of the United Nations staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York and that of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service) employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as "the margin"),

Recalling also section IX, paragraph 3, of its resolution 46/191 A of 20 December 1991, in which it requested the Commission to include in its work a review of the differences between the United Nations and the United States net remuneration at individual grade levels,

1. Notes that the margin between the net remuneration of United Nations staff in grades P-1 to D-2 in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service for 2000 is 113.3, based on the results of the grade equivalency study between the United Nations and the United States carried out in 2000;

2. Also notes from annex V to the report of the Commission that the United Nations/United States remuneration ratios range from 119.9 at the P-2 level to 105.5 at the D-2 level, and considers that this imbalance should be addressed in the context of the overall margin considerations established by the General Assembly;

D. Base/floor salary scale

Recalling section I.H of its resolution 44/198, by which it established a floor net salary level for staff in the Professional and higher categories by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service),

1. Approves, with effect from 1 March 2001, the revised base scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories, contained in the annex to the present resolution;

2. Requests the Commission, in the context of the review of the pay and benefits system, to review the firm linkage between the base/floor salary scale and the mobility and hardship allowance;

E. Dependency allowances

Recalling section II.F, paragraph 2, of its resolution 47/216 of 23 December 1992, in which it noted that the Commission would review the level of dependency allowances every two years,

Recalling also section I.F, paragraph 4, of its resolution 53/209, in which it requested the Commission to examine the methodology, rationale and scope of the allowances,

Noting that the review of dependency allowances carried out by the Commission reflected relevant changes in tax abatement and social legislation at the seven headquarters duty stations since 1998,

1. Takes note of the decision of the Commission with regard to the methodology, rationale and scope of the allowances;

2. Approves, with effect from 1 January 2001, an increase of 11.89 per cent in the children's allowance, including that for disabled children, and in the secondary dependant's allowance;

3. Takes note of the updated list of hard-currency duty stations for which the allowances are specified in local currency, as contained in annex VIII to the report of the Commission;

4. Notes that dependency allowances payable to eligible United Nations common system staff should be reduced by the amount of any direct payments received from a Government in respect of dependants;

F. Post adjustment matters

Recalling its request in section II.G of its resolution 48/224 regarding the conduct of place-to-place surveys at headquarters duty stations,

1. Welcomes the review of the operation of the post adjustment system carried out by the Commission;

2. Takes note of the decisions reached by the Commission as contained in paragraph 157 of its report;

III

Conditions of service of the General Service and other locally recruited categories

A. Survey of best prevailing conditions of employment in New York and Montreal

Recalling section II.A of its resolution 52/216, in which it reaffirmed that the Flemming principle should continue to serve as the basis for determining the conditions of service of the General Service and related categories and endorsed the revised methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment for these categories,

Takes note of the results of the salary surveys conducted in New York and Montreal, as reported in chapter V of the report of the Commission;

B. Review of the headquarters salary survey methodology: decisions of the International Labour Organization Administrative Tribunal regarding the phasing out of the language factor in Rome and Vienna

Recalling section III, paragraph 2, of its resolution 47/216 and section II.E of its resolution 48/224,

Takes note of the decision of the Commission with regard to the treatment of the language factor, as contained in paragraph 192 of its report;

IV

Strengthening the international civil service

Decides to defer consideration of the reports of the Secretary-General with a view to taking a decision on strengthening the international civil service at the first part of its resumed fifty-fifth session.

*This scale will be implemented in conjunction with a consolidation of 5.1 per cent of post adjustment. There will be consequential adjustments in post adjustment indices and multipliers at all duty stations effective 1 March 2001. Thereafter, changes in post adjustment classifications will be implemented on the basis of the movements of the consolidated post adjustment indices.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the UN common system would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458) and that the Fifth Committee should continue to consider it at that session (decision 55/455).

Functioning of ICSC

Review of ICSC

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/238 [YUN 1999, p. 1321], the Secretary-General submitted, in October [A/55/526], a report identifying the specific reasons for the proposed review of ICSC [YUN 1998, p. 1300], its objectives and desired impact on the UN common system, the outcomes of previous reviews and the particular problems to be addressed.

The Secretary-General stated that the proposed review was an integral part of the current reform processes under way in all organizations of the common system to strengthen that system's capacity to meet effectively new and complex challenges facing it and the international civil service. Its goal was to reinforce and modernize the system and to determine how to maximize ICSC's contribution to those objectives. The review would examine specifically ICSC's mission, membership and functioning and reappraise the complex network of relationships built into its statute. Although the provisions of the ICSC statute had stood the test of time, it was important to keep them under review to ensure the continued fulfilment of their intent and their adaptability to changing needs and circumstances. The review should be an independent one. It should serve to enhance the Assembly's role as the legislative organ for the common system and ICSC's role in maintaining the strength of the system, as well as to ensure the capacity and technical expertise of ICSC to provide timely advice and guidance to its constituents on matters impacting on organizational change.

The Secretary-General invited the Assembly to proceed with the proposed review at its current session, in consultation with Member States, ICSC and its interlocutors.

Remuneration issues

Pursuant to the standing mandate in General Assembly resolution 52/216 [YUN 1992, p. 1055] and to resolution 54/238 [YUN 1999, p. 1321], ICSC continued to review the relationship between the net remuneration of UN staff in the Professional and higher categories (grades P-1 to D-2) in New York and that of the current comparator, the United States federal civil service employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as the margin).

Whereas a remuneration margin of 113.8 was forecast for 2000, based on current grade equivalencies, the five-yearly grade equivalency study undertaken by ICSC during the year with the comparator civil service showed an agreement rate of 92 per cent and resulted in a revised margin of 113.3. As shown by annex V to the ICSC report, the net remuneration margin calculation, based on the incorporation of the study's results, yielded relatively high margin levels at lower common system grades and relatively low margin at higher grades. Following its consideration of the views of the common system's organizations and staff representatives and its review of specific issues related to the grade equivalencies and resultant remuneration comparisons, ICSC endorsed the results of the 2000 equivalency exercise for remuneration purposes and requested its secretariat to review the current methodology, with a view to streamlining the process so as to reduce administrative costs without jeopardizing the quality of future grade equivalency studies.

In view of the upward movement of the comparator civil service salaries as at 1 January 2000, ICSC recommended that, with effect from 1 March 2001, the current base/floor salary scale for the Professional and higher categories in the UN common system should be increased by 5.1 per cent through standard consolidation procedures, on a no-loss/no-gain basis. The proposed revised base/floor salary scale and associated staff assessment scale were set out in annexes VI and VII to the ICSC report [A/55/30].

On the basis of the 1997 revised methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment at Headquarters and non-Headquarters duty stations [YUN 1997, p. 1453], ICSC conducted a survey of best prevailing conditions of service for General Service and other locally recruited categories of staff at the ICAO duty station in Montreal, with a reference date of November 1999. The survey resulted in the recommendation of a new ICAO salary scale, as reproduced in annex IX to the ICSC report, and of revised rates for dependency allowances.

ICSC also conducted surveys of employment conditions for staff in the General Service, Language Teachers, Public Information Assistant, Trades and Crafts and Security Service categories in New York, with a reference date of 1 May 2000. The surveys resulted in increases of 2.92 per cent for the General Service and Public Information Assistant categories and of 7.66 per cent for the Security Service category. Accordingly, ICSC recommended revised salary scales for those categories, as reflected in annex X to its report. Since, based on available data, a valid salary comparison for the Trades and Crafts category was not possible, ICSC instructed its secretariat to continue data collection to permit meaningful analysis.

As a result of the application of the 1993 revised methodology for surveys of the best prevailing employment conditions at headquarters duty stations [YUN 1993, p. 1228] to the 1994 survey of General Service salaries at FAO and to the 1996 survey at IAEA, ICSC decided that the 4 per cent language factor previously applied to those duty stations should be phased out at an annual rate of 1 per cent. The FAO survey was challenged by some staff in the ILO Administrative Tribunal, as was the IAEA survey. The Tribunal had set aside FAO's implementation of the 1995 ICSC decision approving the FAO survey insofar as that decision reduced the language factor.

In its Judgement 1915 of 2 February 2000 pertaining to the IAEA complaint, the Tribunal, referring to the Flemming principle on which the survey methodologies were based, stated that what Flemming ordained was that General Service staff should have pay and other terms of employment that matched the best on offer at their duty station; and that it was right to adjust pay by a language factor when jobs that did not require proficiency in a second language were matched with jobs that did, but wrong when the matching was with outside posts requiring but not compensating proficiency in a second language. The Tribunal subsequently dismissed the two complaints.

In the light of the Tribunal Judgement, ICSC, on the proposal of its secretariat, decided that, at the next survey at duty stations where the local language was not a working language of the organization, employers should be carefully surveyed to find out what bonus or other payments, if any, were made to staff members required to work in a working language of the organization; and that the results of that determination should be appropriately reflected in the pay scales established by the survey.

Common staff assessment scale

In keeping with a 1997 recommendation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for a biennial update of the common staff assessment scale for all staff categories, for the determination of pensionable remuneration levels, ICSC, at its fifty-second session, conducted an examination of tax changes at the seven duty stations between 1997 and 1999. Finding only minimal tax increases or decreases at the relevant income levels, ICSC recommended the continued application of the current scale and its review during the next comprehensive review of pensionable remuneration, which, for work programme reasons, was postponed from 2002 to 2004.

Post adjustment

ICSC continued at its fifty-first session to review the operation of the post adjustment system. It considered the report of its Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions on the subject and approved its recommendations on the methodology to be applied in the 2000 round of cost-of-living (place-to-place) surveys at headquarters duty stations, Berne (Switzerland) and Washington, D.C. Those recommendations related to the simplification of the post adjustment index structure; updating the list of items and specifications for the basket of goods and services; the procedures for the establishment of expenditure weights; the treatment of United States dollar-driven expenditures and housing data collected from staff; the procedures for price collection at headquarters duty stations; the selection of outlets; and the timetable for the place-to-place surveys.

Other remuneration issues

Conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials serving the General Assembly

In accordance with the schedule established by General Assembly resolution 35/221 [YUN 1980, p. 1173], the Secretary-General submitted a December report [A/C.5/55/29] on the five-year review of the conditions of service of the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) and of the ICSC Chairman and Vice-Chairman. The report noted that, as at 1 January 2000, the annual net compensation of the ACABQ and ICSC Chairmen represented 90.4 per cent of the annual net salaries of the referenced senior Secretariat officials' level, as against 97 per cent obtaining at the last comprehensive review in 1996. To restore that compensation relativity, the Secretary-General recommended, in addition to the cost-of-living increase due on 1 January 2001, a 3.1 per cent increase in the current remuneration levels of the three officials, with a corresponding adjustment to their pensionable remuneration.

Therefore, based on the estimated 7 per cent movement in the consumer price index for New York and the recommended 3.1 per cent adjustment, the pensionable remunerations of the ACABQ and ICSC Chairmen should be revised from $176,400 to $194,599 and, of the ICSC Vice-Chairman, from $166,950 to $184,174, as from 1 January 2001.

By resolution 55/238, section VII (see p. 1300), of 23 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report, approved his suggestions and decided to examine the issue of compensation relatively in the context of the next five-year review.

Dependency allowances

In the light of its biennial review of dependency allowances for the Professional and higher categories conducted in 2000, ICSC examined the methodology for those allowances and their basic rationale and scope [A/55/30]. It recommended to the General Assembly an increase in the children's allowance and in the secondary dependant's allowance to reflect the 11.89 per cent increase in the value of tax abatements and social legislation payments that occurred between January 1998 and January 2000. Thus, the revised annual amounts for duty stations in the United States and in countries where dependency allowances were fixed in United States dollars would be: $1,936 for the children's allowance and $3,872 for the disabled children's allowance; and $693 for the secondary dependant's allowance, all effective 1 January 2001. The current list of duty stations where those allowances were payable in local currencies was to be maintained. The financial implications of those recommendations were estimated at $2.8 million.

Education grant

ICSC action. As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 54/238 [YUN 1999, p. 1321], ICSC reviewed the methodology for determining the education grant levels and the issue of harmonizing other organizations' education grant practices with those of the United Nations.

ICSC recommended to the Assembly to continue the education grant as a benefit payable to internationally recruited staff with expatriate status; to ask the organizations to draw to the attention of their governing bodies the issue of harmonizing the staff rules and regulations governing education grant payments along the lines of those of the United Nations; and that further consideration of the grant's scope and purpose be conducted under the ongoing overall review of the pay and benefits system.

ICSC further recommended that, in areas where education-related expenses were incurred in Belgian francs, Irish pounds, Italian lire, Swiss francs and United States dollars in the United States, the levels of maximum admissible expenses and the maximum grant should be set as shown in table 1 of annex IV to the ICSC report

[A/55/30]; the maximum amount of admissible expenses and the maximum grant should remain at the current levels for the following currencies: Austrian schilling, deutsche mark, Danish krone, Finnish markka, French franc, Japanese yen, Netherlands guilder, Norwegian krone, pound sterling, Spanish peseta, Swedish krona and United States dollar for expenses incurred in educational institutions outside the United States; the flat rates for boarding to be taken into account within the maximum admissible educational expenses and the additional amounts for reimbursement of boarding costs over and above the maximum grant payable to staff members at designated duty stations should be revised as shown in table 2 of annex IV; and the amount of the special education grant for each disabled child should be equal to 100 per cent of the revised amounts of maximum allowable expenses for the regular grant. All of the foregoing measures were to be applicable as from the school year in progress on 1 January 2001.

ICSC maintained the two separate United States dollar areas and the special measures for China and Indonesia, which would allow organizations to reimburse 75 per cent of actual expenses up to and not exceeding the maximum expenditure level in force for the United States dollar/inside the United States. It would review the trigger point for adjusting the education grant during the review of the methodology for determining the grant level.

ICSC noted that the system-wide cost implications of the proposed increases were estimated at approximately $860,000 per year in respect of the increase in maximum admissible expenditure level and $186,000 per year in respect of the increase in boarding costs.

OIOS report. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], the Secretary-General transmitted, in September [A/55/352 & Corr.1], a report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on its proactive investigation of the education grant entitlement. The report noted that, of 16 cases of alleged fraudulent education grant claims brought to the attention of OIOS between 1995 and 1999, 10 were substantiated and resulted in the termination of five staff members, in the administrative or disciplinary action of three others and in the resignation of two. Two cases were unsubstantiated, with the staff involved fully cleared, and four were still under investigation. The cases of fraud involved the misappropriation of UN funds totalling $265,000, with the individual cases ranging from several thousand dollars to over $69,000 in one case.

The report also noted that, in 1998, some 1,300 United Nations Headquarters staff members submitted education grant claims for some 3,300 dependants. In that year, payments exceeded $25 million, or an average of some $19,000 per staff member.

The investigation indicated that the education grant entitlement was an area for potential fraud, and its administration prone to error and open to opportunistic behaviour.

OIOS therefore recommended that serious consideration be given to providing the entitlement on a lump-sum basis for each country in which a school was located, making for a streamlined processing of claims, reduced administrative costs and the risk of fraud, and more time for spot checks. Alternatively, claims processing could be centralized in one office at each of the duty stations. Other recommendations called for staff members to be required to produce proof of a private-tuition instructor's competence; and for an examination of the rule permitting staff to receive a special education grant for a disabled child attending a regular educational institution and not receiving specialized instruction for his or her disability.

Personnel policies

Human resources management

ICSC action. At its fifty first session, ICSC reviewed the draft framework for human resources management, which was completed by the working group created in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1309] for that purpose. The framework identified the internal and external forces impacting on human resources strategies. It contained six major human resources areas: ethics and standards of conduct for the international civil service, compensation and benefits, employment, career management, good governance and human resources information management. It had been strengthened by the definitions developed for each area, the identification of core and non-core areas, the linkages to other components and the underlying guiding principles. Core areas were those that bound the UN family together in order to avoid competition in the employment of staff resulting from differences in the compensation package, promote common values of the international civil service and facilitate staff mobility across the system.

ICSC adopted the framework, set out in annex II to its report [A/55/30], as a guide for its future work programme. It recommended that the framework be drawn to the attention of the governing bodies of common system organizations and serve as the basis of their future work on human resources policies and procedures.

Reports of Secretary General. Responding to General Assembly resolutions 53/221 [YUN 1999, p. 1324] and 54/248 [ibid., p. 1368], the Secretary-General submitted a 1 August report [A/55/253 & Corr.1] setting out a comprehensive human resources management implementation programme, constituting the next step to his 1997 reform initiatives [YUN 1997, p. 1389] for strategic change to strengthen the Organization's management systems. The report described work in progress and actions taken or envisaged to realize the goal set for each of the following areas: human resources planning; streamlined rules and procedures; recruitment, placement and promotion; mobility; contractual arrangements; the administration of justice; competencies and continuous learning; performance management; career development; and conditions of service. Also described were measures to enhance accountability mechanisms, monitoring and control procedures integral to the proposed reforms.

The Secretary-General requested specific Assembly action in support of his proposed reform initiatives on recruitment, placement and promotion; mobility; and the amendment to the staff rule covering central review bodies, as set out, respectively, in annexes II, III and X of his report.

In a 3 August report [A/55/270], the Secretary-General delineated the continuum between responsibility, authority and accountability and presented the elements of an integrated accountability system. He outlined the measures taken to address the concerns regarding the overall system, as highlighted in his 1994 report [YUN 1994, p. 1358]. They included: improvements in planning and budgeting to clarify responsibility and performance expectations; revision and streamlining of regulations, rules and administrative issuances; improvements in the procurement process; issuance of new bulletins on organizational structure; implementation of updated regulations and rules governing the conduct of staff; the creation of the Senior Management Group and other coordination mechanisms, and of OIOS; development of information systems, such as the Integrated Management Information System (IMIS), and updating of programme monitoring tools; implementation of the Performance Appraisal System (PAS); improved management training; the introduction of a performance management plan for departmental heads focusing on planned programme and management objectives, expected performance standards and a review of achievements; strengthened monitoring by the Department of Management and by OIOS; and the creation of an accountability panel to advise the Secretary-General on accountability matters from a systemic perspective.

The Secretary-General said the Assembly might wish to take note of the mechanisms in place since 1994, including those discussed in the report, which together constituted the comprehensive accountability system for the Organization.

ACABQ report. Having reviewed the Secretary-General's reports (see above), ACABQ, in October [A/55/499], recommended: giving priority to the systematic rejuvenation of the Secretariat by retaining younger staff in the light of the Organization's age profile, and to the full development of the Human Resources Management Information System at Headquarters and in the field, since many of the proposed reforms depended on system-wide information dissemination; taking the importance of institutional memory and expertise into account when implementing staff mobility; giving staff requested to remain on mission assignment longer than two years the same guarantees concerning returning to posts as for absences of up to two years; discontinuing 11-month contracts to meet continuing needs and instituting strict controls to prevent the future misuse of general temporary assistance funds; and, when ICSC proposals were before the Assembly, taking account of the indispensability of a competitive package of conditions of service to the successful achievement of mobility and recruitment goals. ACABQ urged the Secretary-General to move expeditiously forward with his proposal to transfer operational and transactional processes from the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) to programme managers and to include in annex I to the Secretary-General's 3 August report dealing with measures to ensure accountability an additional element, namely, access to an impartial, fair system of international administration of justice.

The General Assembly, by decision 54/460 B of 7 April, deferred consideration of the agenda item entitled "Human resources management" until its fifty-fifth (2000) session. On 23 December, it decided that the item remained for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458) and that the Fifth Committee should continue to consider it at that session (decision 55/455).

Draft standards of conduct for the international civil service

At its fifty-first session [A/55/30], ICSC reviewed the draft standards of conduct for the international civil service, as updated by a working group, with the full participation of the Coordinating Committee for International Staff Unions and Associations of the United Nations System (CCISUA) and the Federation of International Civil Servants' Associations (FICSA). Following further ICSC revisions to the draft and subject to final comments from the legal advisers of the common system's organizations, to ensure consistency of those revisions with their legal instruments and legislative frameworks, ICSC adopted the draft as revised and circulated it to the organizations and staff associations for their comments. However, in view of the request by the Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions for an opportunity to present the organizations' comments, ICSC postponed finalizing the draft to 2001.

Staff composition

In his September annual report on the Secretariat's staff composition [A/55/427 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General updated information on changes in the desirable range of posts for Member States and described measures taken to ensure equitable representation at the senior and policy-making levels. As at 30 June 2000, Secretariat staff numbered 13,164, fewer by 1,155 than at 30 June 1999, due to the reclassification of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund as an inter-organizational body and thus to the separate listing of its staff and to the discontinuance of reporting on locally recruited General Service staff holding indefinite special mission appointments.

Of the 13,164 Secretariat staff, 4,390 were in the Professional and higher categories, 7,977 were in the General Service and related categories and 797 were project personnel; 7,470 were paid from the regular budget and 5,694 from extrabudgetary sources.

Staff in posts subject to geographical distribution numbered 2,389, of whom 936 were female (an increase of 1.1 per cent compared to 1999). Twenty-one Member States remained unrepresented in all staff categories and eight were underrepresented (compared to 24 and 13, respectively, in 1999). Appointments to posts subject to geographical distribution between 1 July 1999 and 30 June 2000 totalled 141. Of those, 9 (6.4 per cent) were nationals of unrepresented Member States, 32 (22.7 per cent) of underrepresented Member States, 97 (68.8 per cent) of within-range Member States and 3 (2.1 per cent) of over-represented Member States. Changes in represensation status were the result of appointments or separations from service, adjustments to desirable ranges due to an increase or decrease in the number of posts subject to geographical distribution and changes in the number of Member States, in the scale of assessments, in population and in the status of individual staff members.

The report also detailed information on the demographic profile, as well as on Secretariat staff movement from 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000, racial discrimination and forecasts of anticipated retirements in 2000-2004.

Gratis personnel

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 51/243 [YUN 1997, p. 1469], the Secretary-General submitted four quarterly reports on the status of types I and II gratis personnel accepted by the United Nations, indicating, inter alia, their nationality, functions and duration of service. The periods covered were 1 October-31 December 1999 [A/C.5/54/51], 1 January-31 March [A/C.5/54/54], 1 April-30 June [A/C.5/55/13] and 1 July-30 September 2000 [A/55/728], which included the annual report for the period from 1 October 1999 to 30 September 2000.

Type I gratis personnel, serving under an established regime, included interns, associate experts, technical cooperation experts obtained on non-reimbursable loans, and gratis personnel who served with the United Nations Special Commission (UNSCOM) and, as at 17 December 1999, with the United Nations Monitoring, Verification and Inspection Commission (UNMOVIC), which replaced UNSCOM. Among the type II gratis personnel were a commander, economists, forensic investigation and anthropology officers, inspectors and investigators, laboratory technicians, logistics and medical officers, a nurse and a technical adviser on water resources.

In the annual report, the Secretary-General indicated that between 30 September 1999 and 30 September 2000, the overall number of type I gratis personnel decreased from 629 to 412 (34.5 per cent). During that period, all type I gratis personnel serving with UNMOVIC (25 on 1 January) were phased out; secretariat-wide associate experts decreased from 290 to 250 (14 per cent); the number of interns fell from 296 to 151 (49 per cent); and the number of technical cooperation experts decreased from 18 to 11 (39 per cent). Information on associate and technical cooperation experts and interns, formerly reported separately, were currently consolidated under IMIS.

During the same period, the number of type II gratis personnel decreased from 101 to 43, a reduction of 57 per cent, and 68 per cent if compared with 1998 data. The bulk of type II gratis personnel engaged during September 1999 to September 2000 were with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY). At the end of December 1999, the 92 forensic experts engaged by ICTY for deployment in the Kosovo province of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia were phased out. However, in response to the Tribunal's request, the Secretary-General, in January [A/54/734], authorized ICTY to accept gratis personnel to complete all forensic investigations. As at September 2000, the number of such experts engaged numbered 41. All type II gratis personnel (20, including the 15 who had been extended and not reported) engaged by the Field Administration and Logistics Division of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) were separated by 1 June 2000. The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development engaged two gratis personnel from 1 October 1999 to 30 September 2000, both of whom were extended for another year. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia retained one type II gratis personnel.

Annexed to the report were tables providing information on the number of engagements and separations of type II gratis personnel, their distribution as at 30 September 2000, compared to the previous year, by number, nationality and duration of service, the nature of the functions performed by department or office and the ratio of gratis personnel to regular staff in departments or offices that engaged them. Information was also provided on the evolution of type I gratis personnel.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Following receipt of the Secretary-General's last 1999 quarterly report [A/C.5/54/51], the General Assembly, by decision 54/471 of 7 April 2000, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/54/827], deferred consideration of the question of gratis personnel provided by Governments and other entities until the second part of its resumed fifty-fourth (2000) session.

On 15 June [meeting 98], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/54/827/Add.1], adopted resolution 54/264 without vote [agenda items 118 & 164].

Gratis personnel provided by Governments

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 51/243 of 15 September 1997, 52/234 of 26 June 1998 and 53/218 of 7 April 1999,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Endorses the observations of the Advisory Committee in its report, in particular paragraphs 2 and 4, and requests that all future proposals by the Secretary-General on gratis personnel and the subsequent implementation of legislative mandates be in full compliance with relevant General Assembly resolutions and fully respect the relevant policies, procedures and regulations of the United Nations;

3. Stresses the need for an effective monitoring system in the Office of Human Resources Management of the Secretariat with regard to delegation of authority for gratis personnel to offices away from Headquarters;

4. Notes with concern the inaccurate information provided in paragraph 8 of the report of the Secretary-General and clarified in paragraph 7 of his subsequent report with regard to the type II gratis personnel not reported previously by the United Nations Environment Programme;

5. Recalls the existing mandates under the relevant General Assembly resolutions on gratis personnel;

6. Reaffirms that the circumstances in which the Secretary-General can accept gratis personnel shall be in strict compliance with the provisions of its resolution 51/243, in particular paragraphs 4 and 9, and its resolution 52/234, in particular paragraph 10;

7. Expresses its concern that detailed and comprehensive information on the use of gratis personnel in the case of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 was not provided, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to submit all future reports on gratis personnel in strict compliance with the provisions of paragraph 15 of its resolution 52/234;

8. Decides to continue, at the main part of its fifty-fifth session, its consideration of the question of gratis personnel provided by Governments.

Consultants and individual contractors

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to section VIII of General Assembly resolution 53/221 [YUN 1999, p. 1328], the Secretary-General submitted his annual report, in August [A/55/321], on the hiring and use of consultants and individual contractors in 1999. The report expanded on the format of previous reports, in accordance with requests in resolution 51/226, section VI [YUN 1997, p. 1463].

The Secretary-General noted that, while data were available for Headquarters, it had not been possible to present information that was comparable on a worldwide basis regarding the type and nature of contracts of consultants and individual contractors because such data would not be available until the full deployment in 2001 of IMIS (Release III) at all duty stations. The nine statistical tables presented in the annex to the report provided an overview of the use of such persons in terms of their status as retired or not retired, gender, educational levels, the numbers engaged, nationality, purpose of engagement, the number and duration of contracts, fees, the contracting department or office, occupational grouping, performance evaluations and aggregate data for each duty station on institutional or corporate contractors engaged under contracts or subcontracts entered into directly with the employer institution. In 1999, 2,382 consultants and 886 individual contractors were engaged, accounting for 3,220 and 1,643 separate contracts, respectively. Fees for both totalled $28.9 million, a decrease of $2.6 million from the total reported for 1998.

JIU report. The Secretary-General, by a March note [A/55/59], transmitted to the General Assembly the JIU report on the effective implementation of Assembly policy directives on the use of consultants in the United Nations. Among its conclusions, JIU stated that there was no mechanism to facilitate the implementation of at least two out of seven basic principles contained in the administrative instruction governing the use of consultants [ST/AI/1997/7]; that the programme budget was the proper vehicle through which to address Member States' concerns, as well as problems identified and solutions recommended by external and internal oversight bodies; and that ACABQ and the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) could significantly contribute to the process if provided with comprehensive information on the planned and past use of consultancy.

Pending the suggested expedition of the consolidated database on the inventory of staff skills and development of an electronic information system covering all UN substantive programmes, JIU recommended that, in the interim, the Secretary-General should instruct OHRM and the Office of Programme Planning, Budget and Accounts (OPPBA) to review all consultancy requests, OHRM to ascertain if the required expertise was available in the Secretariat and advise department and office heads accordingly, and OPPBA to advise them of cases of duplication with Secretariat work already completed or in progress. He should include in his introduction to the proposed programme budget information on the level of resources requested under "consultants and experts" compared with previous bienniums and establish clear operational procedures for the treatment of consultants' travel expenses, whether as a sub-item of consultancy appropriations or as part of the travel budget of a given organizational unit, to prevent distorting geographical balance when awarding contracts. ACABQ and CPC should include in their reports on the programme budget a detailed assessment of the situation as to the level of regular budget and extrabudgetary resources for consultants.

Other recommendations called on the Secretary-General to study different methodologies to achieve geographical balance in the use of consultants and, pending its outcome, the Assembly should ask him to use the desirable ranges for Professional staff financed through the regular budget as a norm for the geographical distribution of consultancies. The Secretary-General should include in his annual report on consultants certain comparative data and data breakdown by developing countries and/or regional groups, as well as separate data sets for participants in advisory meetings. He should ensure the timely availability to the permanent missions to the United Nations of information on planned consultancy requirements. The Assembly was to review and evaluate all aspects of policy and practice based on either an expanded report of the Secretary-General to be presented to its fifty-seventh (2002) session or an in-depth review by the OIOS Central Evaluation Unit.

In his comments on the JIU recommendations [A/55/59/Add.1], the Secretary-General said OHRM was in the second phase of implementing the skills inventory project. A specific monitoring mechanism would be required for the recommended electronic information system, regarding which management would conduct a needs assessment study. Closer scrutiny of consultancy requests would require OPPBA to establish a new monitoring mechanism whose cost could outweigh its benefits. The programme budget presentation, which included separating resource requirements for consultants and experts, was under constant review by the Secretariat, ACABQ and the Assembly. It would have been helpful if JIU had further addressed the issue of assessing the situation as to the level of resources for consultants. The suggested mechanisms for handling consultants' travel expenses could only provide information on the basis of which geographical distribution could be monitored and would not constitute an operational procedure. The Secretariat would continue to make every effort to recruit consultants from as wide a geographical area as possible. Efforts would be made to disseminate information on consultancy needs directly to Member States. In addition to noting the recommendations on data presentation in his annual reports on consultants, the Secretary-General said it would have been helpful if JIU had given some specifics for the recommended omnibus reporting in 2002.

Status of women in the Secretariat

In his January report to the Commission on the Status of Women [E/CN.6/2000/4], the Secretary-General provided a statistical update as at 30 November 1999 of the gender distribution of staff at the Professional and higher levels in the UN Secretariat and in the organizations of the UN common system. He also outlined his strategy for achieving gender equality in the Secretariat, indicating that the 2000 work programme would assign priority to the elaboration and implementation of gender action plans in individual departments and offices.

Responding to General Assembly resolution 54/139 [YUN 1999, p. 1334], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/55/399 & Corr.1] reviewing the status of women in the Secretariat. According to the report, the number of women on appointments subject to geographical distribution increased significantly at the D-1 level, from 16 (6.8 per cent) in June 1990 to 73 (35.8 per cent) in June 2000; and at the P-5 level, from 73 (15.8 per cent) to 151 (33.1 per cent), a more-than-double increase. Nonetheless, women's overall representation in the Professional and higher categories had been modest: 936 women (39.2 per cent) out of 2,389 staff on appointments subject to geographical distribution as at 30 June 2000, compared to 919 (38.1 per cent) out of 2,410 as at 30 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1333]. The increase was consistent with the average annual rate of 1 per cent at which women's representation had increased over the preceding 10 years.

The number of women on appointments of one year or more had increased from 1,542 (35.8 per cent) on 30 June 1999 to 1,601 (36.5 per cent) on 30 June 2000, only a 0.7 per cent increase. The largest increase had been at the P-5 level, rising from 212 (30 per cent) to 242 (32.6 per cent). The highest concentration of women remained at the P-3 level, followed by those at the P-4 level. Gender balance was finally realized at the P-2 level, where the percentage of women had risen from 48.2 per cent on 30 June 1999 to 50.1 per cent on 30 June 2000. While the percentage at the D-1 level neared a critical mass at 29.3 per cent, the overall increase at the senior and policy-making levels (D-1 and above) had been slight, from 24.4 per cent to only 24.7 per cent. The slowdown since the Secretary-General's 1999 report [YUN 1999, p. 1333] was cause for concern, particularly as the number of staff appointed and promoted to those levels had increased. Although the number of women at the P-4 and D-2 levels had increased slightly (from 454 to 458 and from 19 to 21, respectively), the overall percentage of women at those levels had declined since June 1999 (from 33.7 per cent to 33.5 per cent and from 21.6 per cent to 20.8 per cent, respectively) owing to the significantly greater increase in the number of men at those levels.

The Secretary-General asked for the co-operation of department and office heads in further elaborating the gender component of the 1999-2001 departmental action plans on human resources management. He emphasized that the managers' record in improving gender balance should be a critical factor in the appraisal of their performance. The Steering Committee for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat also monitored the progress of departments and offices in meeting the goal of 50/50 gender distribution in the staffing of Professional and higher-level posts. OHRM had been working with a number of departments and offices to develop and implement programmes on various gender-related issues, including training on gender sensitivity and mainstreaming. Issues currently being addressed were the development of common policies on retaining women staff, especially through spousal employment assistance, the introduction of flexible working time and workplace arrangements, and the designation of focal points for women in UN peacekeeping missions.

Elements of the Secretary-General's strategy to be accorded priority in 2001 included the identification of sources of women candidates for vacancies in departmental action plans, the evaluation of progress made in improving women's representation based on the implementation of gender action plans, the refinement of strategies to increase the supply of suitably qualified women candidates and the examination of factors impeding Professional and General Service staff mobility. Increasing attention would be paid to implementing the work/family agenda and designing measures for enhancing the career development of General Service staff, the majority of whom were women. The Secretary-General warned, however, that progress in achieving gender equality would continue to be slow without the sustained support of Member States in proposing national recruitment sources for women candidates.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/55/595 & Corr.1,2], adopted resolution 55/69 without vote [agenda item 107].

Improvement of the status of women in the United Nations system

The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 1 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations, as well as Article 8, which provides that the United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs,

Recalling also the goal, contained in the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, of the achievement of overall gender equality, particularly at the Professional level and above, by the year 2000,

Recalling further its resolution 54/139 of 17 December 1999 on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2000/46 of 20 April 2000 on integrating the human rights of women throughout the United Nations system, in particular paragraph 11, in which the Commission recognizes that gender mainstreaming will strongly benefit from the enhanced and full participation of women, including at the higher levels of decision-making in the United Nations system,

Taking note also of the recommendations made by the women heads of State and Government and women heads of United Nations agencies at their meeting, held on 5 September 2000, just prior to the Millennium Summit of the United Nations, to improve female representation within the United Nations system, especially at senior levels,

Welcoming the decision of the Secretary-General to include, in the performance appraisal of managers, information on the opportunities presented for the selection of women candidates and on progress made in improving women's representation, including efforts made to identify women candidates,

Taking into account the continuing lack of representation or under-representation of women from certain countries, in particular from developing countries, including least developed countries and small island developing States, and from countries with economies in transition,

Taking note with appreciation of those departments and offices that have achieved the goal of gender balance, as well as of those departments that have met or exceeded the goal of 50 per cent in the selection of women candidates for vacant posts in the past year,

Welcoming progress made in improving the representation of women at some levels of the Secretariat, but expressing concern that progress in improving the representation of women at the senior and policy-making levels has slowed, that the percentage of women appointed and promoted to one particular level has declined, and also expressing concern at the slow incremental pace at which the overall representation of women in the Secretariat has increased,

Expressing concern that there are currently no women acting as special representatives or envoys,

Noting that the statistics on the representation of women in the organizations of the United Nations system are not fully up to date,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General and the actions contained therein;

2. Reaffirms the urgent goal of achieving 50/50 gender distribution in all categories of posts within the United Nations system, especially at the senior and policy-making levels, with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, and also taking into account the continuing lack of representation or under-representation of women from certain countries, in particular developing countries and countries with economies in transition;

3. Welcomes:

(a) The ongoing personal commitment of the Secretary-General to meeting the goal of gender equality and his assurance that gender balance will be given the highest priority in his continuing efforts to bring about a new management culture in the Organization, including full implementation of the special measures for the achievement of gender equality;

(b) The pledge of the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations system to intensify their efforts to meet the gender equality goals set out in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action;

(c) The actions agreed upon by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", to ensure the full and equal participation of women at all levels of decision-making in the United Nations system;

(d) The inclusion of the objective of improving gender balance in action plans on human resources management for individual departments and offices, and encourages further cooperation between heads of departments and offices, the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women and the Office of Human Resources Management of the Secretariat in the implementation of these plans, which include specific targets and strategies for improving the representation of women in individual departments;

(e) The designation of focal points for women in United Nations peacekeeping operations, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the focal points are designated at a sufficiently high level and enjoy full access to senior management in the mission area;

(f) The continued provision of specific training programmes on gender mainstreaming and gender issues in the workplace, tailored to meet the special needs of individual departments, commends those heads of departments and offices who have launched gender training for their managers and staff, and strongly encourages those who have not yet organized such training to do so by the end of the biennium;

4. Regrets that the goal of 50/50 gender distribution will not be met by the end of the year 2000, and urges the Secretary-General to redouble his efforts to realize significant progress towards this goal in the near future;

5. Expresses concern that, in five departments and offices of the Secretariat, women still account for less than 30 per cent of staff, and encourages the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts to meet the goal of gender balance within all departments and offices of the Secretariat;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, in order, inter alia, to achieve the goal of 50/50 gender distribution with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter:

(a) To identify and attract suitably qualified women candidates, in particular in developing countries and countries with economies in transition, in other Member States that are unrepresented or under-represented in the Secretariat and in occupations in which women are under-represented;

(b) To continue to monitor closely the progress made by departments and offices in meeting the goal of gender balance and to ensure that the appointment and promotion of suitably qualified women will be no less than 50 per cent of all appointments and promotions until the goal of 50/50 gender distribution is met, inter alia, through full implementation of the special measures for women and the further development of monitoring and assessment mechanisms to meet targets for improving women's representation;

(c) To enable the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women to monitor effectively and facilitate progress in the implementation of the departmental action plans for the achievement of gender balance and the special measures for women, inter alia, by ensuring access to the information required to carry out that work;

(d) To intensify his efforts to create, within existing resources, a gender-sensitive work environment supportive of the needs of his staff, both women and men, including the development of policies for flexible working time, flexible workplace arrangements and child-care and elder-care needs, as well as the provision of more comprehensive information to prospective candidates and new recruits on employment opportunities for spouses and the expansion of gender-sensitivity training in all departments, offices and duty stations;

(e) To strengthen further the policy against harassment, including sexual harassment, inter alia, by ensuring the full implementation of the guidelines for its application at Headquarters and in the field;

7. Strongly encourages the Secretary-General to appoint more women as special representatives and envoys to pursue good offices on his behalf, especially in matters related to peacekeeping, peace-building, preventive diplomacy and economic and social development, as well as in operational activities, including appointment as resident coordinators, and to appoint more women to other high-level positions;

8. Encourages the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations system to continue to develop common approaches for retaining women, inter-agency mobility and the improvement of career development opportunities;

9. Strongly encourages Member States:

(a) To support the efforts of the United Nations and the specialized agencies to achieve the goal of 50/50 gender distribution, especially at senior and policy-making levels, by identifying and regularly submitting more women candidates for appointment to intergovernmental, judicial and expert bodies, by identifying and proposing national recruitment sources that will assist the organizations of the United Nations system in identifying suitable women candidates, in particular from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, and by encouraging more women to apply for positions within the Secretariat, the specialized agencies, funds and programmes and the regional commissions, including positions in areas in which women are under-represented, such as peacekeeping, peace-building and other non-traditional areas;

(b) To identify women candidates for assignment to peacekeeping missions and to improve the representation of women in military and civilian police contingents;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the present resolution, inter alia, by providing up-to-date statistics on the number and percentage of women in all organizational units and at all levels throughout the United Nations system, and on the implementation of departmental action plans for the achievement of gender balance, to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fifth session and to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session.

Regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of the Secretary-General, non-Secretariat officials and experts on mission

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/252 [YUN 1998, p. 1318], the Secretary-General submitted for the Assembly's approval proposed draft regulations [A/54/695] governing the status, basic rights and duties of officials other than Secretariat officials performing services for the United Nations on a substantially full-time basis and experts on mission (annex I). The draft regulations were to form part of the terms of appointment of such officials, appointed through Assembly action or by other representative bodies. Also annexed were the draft regulation texts, together with a commentary to serve as an official guide on the scope and application of the individual regulations (annex II).

The report cited the relevant provisions of the 1946 Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, adopted by Assembly resolution 22 A (I) [YUN 1946-47, p. 100], as the basis for the special status of the above-described officials and revised article I of the Staff Regulations of the United Nations and chapter I of the 100 series of the Staff Rules, as revised with effect from 1 January 1999, as the bases for the proposed draft regulations.

Also in response to resolution 52/252, the Secretary-General submitted a February 2000 report [A/54/710] regarding the previously proposed development of a separate set of regulations and rules applicable to the Secretary-General of the United Nations. He stated that, in reviewing the Charter of the United Nations for that purpose, it had become apparent that, with the exception of the oath of office, the Charter provisions relating to the Secretary-General appropriately addressed his status, basic rights and duties. In view of those provisions and with the understanding that the Secretary-General would continue orally to make the declaration of office currently contained in staff regulation 1.1 (b) at a public Assembly meeting, the Secretary-General believed that there was no need for additional regulations and rules as had been proposed.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Following receipt of the Secretary-General's report [A/54/695] during its resumed fifty-fourth (2000) session, the General Assembly, by decision 54/472 of 7 April 2000, deferred consideration of the question of the proposed regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of officials other than Secretariat officials and experts on mission until its fifty-fifth (2000) session.

On 23 December [meeting 89], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/690], adopted resolution 55/221 without vote [agenda items 116 & 123].

Proposed regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of officials other than Secretariat officials and experts on mission and regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of the Secretary-General

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the proposed regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of officials other than Secretariat officials and experts on mission and on the regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of the Secretary-General,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake consultations on the proposed regulations with the officials referred to in paragraph 1 (a) of his report on proposed regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of officials other than Secretariat officials and experts on mission, in particular those who are elected by the General Assembly and its subsidiary organs, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its resumed fifty-fifth session, including on the following elements:

(a) The compatibility of the proposed regulations with the statutes governing the officials referred to above;

(b) The possible impact, if any, of the proposed regulations on the independence of those expert bodies;

(c) The accountability mechanisms envisaged to enforce the proposed regulations;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General, in the context of the report mentioned in paragraph 1 above, to submit additional information on whether the proposed regulations ensure the impartiality, neutrality, objectivity and accountability of the personnel referred to in paragraph 1 (b) of the report.

Staff rules and regulations

In accordance with staff regulation 12.3 providing that the full text of provisional staff rules and amendments should be reported annually to the General Assembly, the Secretary-General did so in his July report [A/55/168], which set out in an annex the amendments to the 100 and 200 series of the Staff Rules. The rationale for the amendments, which were of a technical nature, was also provided. The amendments to the 100 series related to the official travel of staff members on family visits, on separation from service, and authorized for medical, safety or security reasons or in other appropriate cases; official travel of a staff member's eligible family members; commutation of accrued annual leave; and last day for pay purposes. The amendments to the 200 series related to sick leave, official travel of project personnel, official travel of family members, family visit travel and appeals.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly take note of the amendments, which he proposed to implement as from 1 January 2001.

Safety and security

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 9 February [meeting 4100], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2000/4 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council is gravely concerned at continued attacks against United Nations and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel, which are in violation of international law, including international humanitarian law.

The Council recalls its resolution 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999, and reaffirms the statements by its President of 31 March 1993, on the safety of United Nations forces and personnel deployed in conditions of strife, of 12 March 1997, on condemnation of attacks on United Nations personnel, of 19 June 1997, on the use of force against refugees and civilians in conflict situations, and of 29 September 1998, on protection for humanitarian assistance to refugees and others in conflict situations. The Council also recalls General Assembly resolution 54/192 of 17 December 1999, on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel.

The Council further recalls the report of the Secretary-General on the strengthening of the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations, and the addendum thereto, on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel, and looks forward to the report of the Secretary-General pursuant to resolution 54/192 to be submitted to the General Assembly in May 2000, which should contain a detailed analysis and recommendations addressing the scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994.

The Council notes with satisfaction the entry into force of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, recognizes its importance for addressing the security of such personnel and recalls the relevant principles contained therein. The Council encourages all States to become party to and respect fully their obligations under the relevant instruments, including the above-mentioned Convention.

The Council recalls that, on a number of occasions, it has condemned attacks and the use of force against United Nations and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel. It strongly deplores the fact that incidents of violence have continued, leading to a rising toll of casualties among United Nations, associated and humanitarian personnel. The Council strongly condemns the acts of murder and various forms of physical and psychological violence, including abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention to which such personnel have been subjected, as well as acts of destruction and looting of their property, all of which are unacceptable.

The Council also recalls that the primary responsibility for the security and protection of United Nations and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel, lies with the host State. The Council urges States and non-State parties to respect fully the status of United Nations and associated personnel, and to take all appropriate steps, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the rules of international law, to ensure the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel, and underlines the importance of unhindered access to populations in need.

The Council urges States to fulfil their responsibility to act promptly and effectively in their domestic legal systems to bring to justice all those responsible for attacks and other acts of violence against such personnel, and to enact effective national legislation as required for that purpose.

The Council will continue to stress in its resolutions the imperative for humanitarian assistance missions and personnel to have safe and unimpeded access to civilian populations and, in this context, is prepared to consider taking all appropriate measures at its disposal to ensure the safety and security of such personnel.

The Council welcomes the inclusion as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission, as long as they are entitled to the protection given to civilians under the international law of armed conflict, and notes the role that the Court could play in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law.

The Council expresses the view that improving the security of United Nations and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel, may require, inter alia, the development and strengthening of all aspects of the current safety and security regime in place, as well as the adoption of effective action to address the impunity of those who commit crimes against such personnel.

The Council recognizes the importance of issuing clear, appropriate and feasible mandates for peacekeeping operations, to ensure that they are applied in a timely, efficient and objective manner, and of ensuring that all new and ongoing United Nations field operations, include appropriate modalities for the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel. The Council underscores the fact that United Nations personnel have the right to act in self-defence.

The Council encourages the Secretary-General to complete the process of conducting a general and comprehensive review of security in peacekeeping operations, with a view to elaborating and undertaking further specific and practical measures to increase the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel.

The Council considers it important that a comprehensive security plan be developed for every peacekeeping and humanitarian operation and that, during early elaboration and implementation of that plan, Member States and the Secretariat cooperate fully in order to ensure, inter alia, an open and immediate exchange of information on security issues.

The Council, bearing in mind the need to reinforce the responsibility of the host State for the physical security of United Nations and associated personnel, also underlines the importance of including in each status-of-forces agreement and status-of-missions agreement specific and practical measures based on the provisions of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel.

The Council recalls the obligations of all United Nations personnel and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel, to observe and respect the national laws of the host State in accordance with international law and the Charter.

The Council believes it is essential to continue to strengthen security arrangements, to improve their management, and to allocate adequate resources to the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel, and humanitarian personnel.

The Council President, by a November note [S/2000/1133], circulated a 24 October letter from the CCISUA and FICSA presidents, transmitting a petition signed by over 12,000 staff members asking for a special Council meeting to address safety and security problems faced by UN staff and associated personnel, especially on mission assignments.

Reports of Secretary-General (May and October). In response to General Assembly resolution 54/192 [YUN 1999, p. 1336], the Secretary-General issued a note in May [A/C.5/54/56], a report in October [A/55/494] and another in November (see p. 1347). In May, he proposed the establishment, under the regular budget, of a full-time post of United Nations Security Coordinator at the Assistant Secretary-General level, to respond to the most immediate needs for strengthening the security and safety of UN system personnel in the field. He would report on the associated cost requirements in the context of the budget performance report for the 2000-2001 biennium and submit to the Assembly a comprehensive plan for strengthening personnel security and safety in due course.

The Assembly, by decision 54/462 B of 15 June, deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's note on strengthening UN security coordination to its fifty-fifth session.

In October, the Secretary-General cited incidents of threats against UN and associated personnel that had occurred between 1 July 1999 and 30 June 2000, and gave a comprehensive account of the existing security management structure at Headquarters, at UN system organizations and in the field, as well as of recent initiatives for improvement.

The Secretary-General said the threats against UN personnel took the form of murder, physical assault and verbal abuse; abductions and hostage-taking; illegal arrests and detentions; storming and occupation of UN premises; and destruction and seizure or looting of UN vehicles and other property. Threats to life and of bodily injury were posed also by mines and unexploded ordnance. In addition, staff were subjected to routine denial of visas and the imposition of travel restrictions on certain of them based on nationality. To date, only three of the 177 cases of violent death of UN personnel had been brought to justice. The report's annex II listed 26 civilian personnel who had lost their lives since 1 July 1999, indicating their nationality, the employing UN agency, and the date, place and cause of death. Annex III chronologically listed 40 staff members who remained under arrest and detention or were missing as at 30 June 2000; the first on the list had been missing since 20 April 1980.

The responsibilities of the Coordinator's Office encompassed all security-related policy and procedural matters, including: ensuring a coherent UN response to any emergency in UN areas of operation; formulating recommendations for safeguarding UN staff and eligible dependants; coordinating, planning and implementing inter-agency security and safety programmes and training; acting as focal point for inter-agency co-operation on security matters; consulting organizations whose field operations would be affected by a security decision; assessing, on a continuing basis, the extent to which UN operations worldwide were vulnerable to security problems; and reviewing security plans for duty stations to ensure that each had an adequate state of preparedness.

The Coordinator's Office was also responsible for deciding on the relocation or evacuation of staff and their dependants from insecure areas; managing the malicious acts insurance policy, covering 30,000 staff in 78 duty stations; dealing with incidents of hostage-taking, arrest and detention of staff; developing and conducting security stress management training; investigating cases of staff deaths under suspicious circumstances; and coordinating security at 150 duty stations with 70,000 civilian staff and their dependants.

The operating budget of the Coordinator's Office was funded through cost-sharing arrangements among the organizations participating in the UN security management system, with the UN regular budget bearing approximately 18 per cent of the costs totalling $650,880 for 1999. A trust fund for voluntary contributions, set up in 1998, supplemented existing inter-agency funding mechanisms. As at 1 August 2000, the fund had received a total of only $1,210,500 and pledges from four countries.

The Secretary-General reported the appointment of the UN Security Coordinator, currently a senior official at the Under-Secretary-General level. Pending submission of proposals for the full requirements of the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator for the 2002-2003 biennium, he proposed, as an interim measure, the strengthening of that Office at Headquarters and in the field, effective 1 January 2001, through specific resource requirements within the 2000-2001 programme budget amounting to $2,776,900, as detailed in annex I to the report.

Security arrangements of UN system organizations involved the appointment of a focal point responsible for security management within each organization, regular contact with its field offices and joint inter-agency security assessment missions, and liaising with the Coordinator's Office.

At field duty stations, the country-specific security plan was the primary tool for security preparedness. Each plan, updated annually, defined security responsibilities and actions to be taken in response to a security crisis, and provided for the internal relocation of locally recruited staff and their dependants to a safe area.

ACABQ report. Having examined the Secretary-General's October report [A/55/494], ACABQ, in December [A/55/658], pointed to the lack of information on lessons learned and measures taken to ensure accountability. It recommended against the proposed establishment of an Assistant Secretary-General post, as well as the support General Service post, and that consideration be given to relocating the Security Coordinator's Office within the Office of Central Support Services. In the context of the review of the proposed 2002-2003 programme budget, consideration might be given to upgrading the post of Deputy Security Coordinator from D-1 to D-2. ACABQ supported the interim proposals for the establishment, effective 1 January 2001, of two P-5 and six P-4 level posts, with appropriate support staff at Headquarters; and six P-4, four P-3 and 20 local level posts for the field. It recommended that the request for 10 additional field security officers and 20 additional local level posts, which lacked supporting detail, be considered in the context of the proposed 2002-2003 programme budget. Consequently, the corresponding reduction in requirements would amount to $1,005,700.

In view of the foregoing, ACABQ recommended approval of an additional appropriation of $646,000 under section 30, Special expenses, of the 2000-2001 programme budget, and an additional appropriation of $95,600 under section 32, Staff assessment, to be offset by an equivalent amount under income section I, Income from staff assessment.

(For General Assembly action on the foregoing Secretary-General's report and related ACABQ comments, see resolution 55/238, section II (p. 1300).)

Report of Secretary-General (November).

The Secretary-General, in November [A/55/637], analysed the scope of legal protection under the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, adopted by General Assembly resolution 49/59 [YUN 1994, p. 1289], which entered into force in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1336], as it applied in practice to UN operations, UN and associated personnel, and humanitarian and locally recruited personnel, and underscored the Convention's limitations. He recalled that, in his 1999 report to the Council [A/54/619-S/1999/957], he had pointed to the emerging consensus among Member States on the Convention's inadequacies and had recommended the development of a protocol extending the scope of its legal protection to all UN and associated personnel not currently covered.

Pending the conclusion of such a protocol, which might or might not be ratified by some or all of the States parties to the Convention, the Secretary-General suggested three measures for the Assembly's consideration, which, within the parameters of the Convention, would strengthen its protective regime and give it full effect. They included: a procedure to initiate a declaration by the Security Council or the Assembly of an exceptional risk to the safety of UN personnel, to bring within the ambit of the Convention's protective regime all UN operations conducted in risky, dangerous or volatile environments; designating the Secretary-General as the certifying authority for purposes of attesting to the fact of a "declaration" or an "agreement", and to the status of any of the UN and associated personnel; and incorporating the key provisions of the Convention in the status-of-forces or status-of-mission agreements concluded between the United Nations and States in whose territories peacekeeping operations were deployed.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 86], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/175 [draft: A/55/L.64 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 20].

Safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 on strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 53/87 of 7 December 1998 and 54/192 of 17 December 1999 on safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel, as well as resolutions 52/167 of 16 December 1997 on safety and security of humanitarian personnel and 52/126 of 12 December 1997 on protection of United Nations personnel,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on protection of civilians in armed conflicts, and of Security Council resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000 and the recommendations made therein, as well as the statements by the President of the Security Council of 30 November 1999 on the role of the Security Council in the prevention of armed conflicts, of 13 January 2000 on humanitarian assistance to refugees in Africa, of 9 February 2000 on protection of United Nations personnel, associated personnel and humanitarian personnel in conflict zones, and of 9 March 2000 on humanitarian aspects of issues before the Security Council, and in this context also noting the range of views expressed during all open debates of the Security Council on these issues,

Taking note also of the report of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations on the report of the Panel on United Nations Peace Operations and the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the report of the Panel,

Reaffirming the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international humanitarian law,

Deeply concerned by the growing number of complex humanitarian emergencies in the past few years, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, which have dramatically increased the loss of human lives, in particular of civilians, the suffering of victims, flows of refugees and internally displaced persons, as well as material destruction, which disrupt the development efforts of the countries affected, in particular those of developing countries,

Concerned by the increasingly difficult context in which humanitarian assistance takes place in some areas, in particular the continuous erosion, in many cases, of respect for the principles and rules of international humanitarian law,

Deeply concerned by the dangers and security risks faced by humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel at the field level, and mindful of the need to improve the current security management system in order to improve their safety and security,

Strongly deploring the rising toll of casualties among national and international humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations,

Strongly condemning the acts of murder and other forms of violence, rape and sexual assault, intimidation, armed robbery, abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention to which those participating in humanitarian operations are increasingly exposed, as well as attacks on humanitarian convoys and acts of destruction and looting of their property,

Strongly condemning also all recent incidents in many parts of the world in which humanitarian personnel have been deliberately targeted, and expressing profound regret at the deaths of all United Nations and other personnel involved in the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Recalling that primary responsibility under international law for the security and protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel lies with the Government hosting a United Nations operation conducted under the Charter of the United Nations or its agreements with relevant organizations,

Urging all other parties involved in armed conflicts, in compliance with their obligations under the 1949 Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocols thereto, of 8 June 1977, to ensure the security and protection of all humanitarian and United Nations and its associated personnel,

Expressing concern that the occurrence of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel is a factor that increasingly restricts the ability of the Organization to provide assistance and protection to civilians in fulfilment of its mandate and Charter,

Welcoming the inclusion of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, adopted on 17 July 1998, and noting the role that the Court could play in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law,

Noting that the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which entered into force on 15 January 1999, has been ratified by 46 Member States as at the present date,

Reaffirming the fundamental requirement that appropriate modalities for the safety and security of humanitarian and United Nations and its associated personnel be incorporated into all new and ongoing United Nations field operations,

Emphasizing the need to give further consideration to the safety and security of locally recruited humanitarian personnel, who account for the majority of casualties, and United Nations and its associated personnel,

Commending the courage and commitment of those who take part in humanitarian operations, often at great personal risk,

Guided by the relevant provisions on protection contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations of 13 February 1946, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies of 21 November 1947, the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, the Fourth Geneva Convention of 12 August 1949 and the Additional Protocols, and Amended Protocol II to the Convention on Prohibitions and Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects of 10 October 1980,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary General on safety and security of United Nations personnel;

2. Urges all States to take the necessary measures to ensure the full and effective implementation of the relevant principles and rules of international humanitarian law, as well as relevant provisions of human rights law related to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel;

3. Also urges all States to take the necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel and to respect and ensure respect for the inviolability of United Nations premises, which are essential to the continuation and successful implementation of United Nations operations;

4. Calls upon all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, in countries in which humanitarian personnel are operating, in conformity with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, to cooperate fully with the United Nations and other humanitarian agencies and organizations and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel in order to allow them to perform efficiently their task of assisting the affected civilian population, including refugees and internally displaced persons;

5. Strongly condemns any act or failure to act which obstructs or prevents humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel from discharging their humanitarian functions, or which entails being subjected to threats, the use of force or physical attack frequently resulting in injury or death, and affirms the need to hold accountable those who commit such acts and, for that purpose, the need to enact national legislation, as appropriate;

6. Urges all States to ensure that any threat or act of violence committed against humanitarian personnel on their territory is fully investigated and to take all appropriate measures, in accordance with international law and national legislation, to ensure that the perpetrators of such acts are prosecuted;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation and to continue to consider ways and means in which to strengthen the protection of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation, notably by seeking the inclusion, in negotiations of headquarter and other mission agreements concerning United Nations and its associated personnel, of the applicable conditions contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies and the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

8. Calls upon all States to provide adequate and prompt information in the event of arrest or detention of humanitarian personnel or United Nations personnel, to afford them the necessary medical assistance and to allow independent medical teams to visit and examine the health of those detained, and urges them to take the necessary measures to ensure the speedy release of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation who have been arrested or detained in violation of their immunity, in accordance with the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law;

9. Calls upon all other parties involved in armed conflicts, in compliance with their obligations under the 1949 Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocols thereto, to ensure the safety and protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, to refrain from abducting or detaining them in violation of their immunity under relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law, and speedily to release, without harm, any abductee or detainee;

10. Calls upon all States to consider signing and ratifying the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

11. Reaffirms the obligation of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel to observe and respect the national laws of the country in which they are operating, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations;

12. Calls upon all States to promote a climate of respect for the security of United Nations and humanitarian personnel;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures, falling within his responsibilities, to ensure that security matters are an integral part of the planning for existing and newly mandated United Nations operations and that such precautions extend to all United Nations and its associated personnel;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure that United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation are properly informed about the conditions under which they are called to operate, including relevant customs and traditions in the host country, and the standards that they are required to meet, including those contained in relevant domestic and international law, and that adequate training in security, human rights and humanitarian law is provided so as to enhance their security and effectiveness in accomplishing their functions, and reaffirms the necessity for all other humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

15. Stresses the need to ensure that all United Nations staff members receive adequate security training prior to their deployment to the field, the need to attach a high priority to the improvement of stress counselling services available to United Nations staff members, including through the implementation of a comprehensive security and stress management training programme for United Nations staff throughout the system, and the need to make available to the Secretary-General the means for this purpose;

16. Encourages all States to contribute to the Trust Fund for Security of Staff Members of the United Nations System;

17. Reaffirms the need to strengthen the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator, and in this regard expresses its appreciation for the recommendation of the Secretary-General to appoint a full-time Security Coordinator so as to enable the Office to enhance its capacity in the discharge of its duties, in consultation with the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat and appropriate agencies within the Inter-Agency Standing Committee, and calls for expeditious consideration of the recommendation;

18. Recognizes the need for a strengthened and comprehensive security management system for the United Nations system, both at headquarter and field level, and requests the United Nations system, as well as Member States, to take all appropriate measures needed to that end;

19. Encourages all States to become parties to and respect fully their obligations under the relevant international instruments, including the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

20. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, and decides that the Sixth Committee shall consider the report at the fifty-sixth session of the General Assembly, under an item entitled "Scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel";

21. Calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to and to respect fully their obligations under the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies, which have been ratified so far by 140 States and 106 States, respectively;

22. Recalls the essential role of telecommunication resources in facilitating the safety of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, calls upon States to consider signing and ratifying the 1998 Tampere Convention on the Provision of Telecommunication Resources for Disaster Mitigation and Relief Operations, and encourages them, pending the entry into force of the Convention, to facilitate, consistent with their national laws and regulations, the use of communications equipment in such operations;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to it at its fifty-sixth session a comprehensive, updated report on the safety and security situation of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel and on the implementation of the present resolution, including an account of the measures taken by Governments and the United Nations to prevent and respond to all individual security incidents that involve United Nations and its associated personnel.

ACC consideration. The Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC), at its first regular session in 2000 (Rome, 6-7 April) [ACC/2000/4], reaffirmed that host Governments had the primary responsibility for UN personnel safety and security. It requested Governments that had not yet done so to ratify the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel and the statute of the International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209]. It endorsed the intention to achieve a more stable security funding system and called for the expeditious implementation of priority security measures, including those relating to field security officers, training and communications.

At its second regular session (New York, 27-28 October) [ACC/2000/20], ACC adopted a statement on staff security in which it expressed full support for the proposals and initiatives outlined in the Secretary-General's October report [A/55/494], particularly those designed to reinforce the Coordinator's Office. It also expressed concern at the brutal deaths of six UN staff over the previous six months. ACC acknowledged the need for stress counselling and agreed that no staff should be assigned to the field without security training.

Personnel practices and policies

Delegation of authority

JIU report. The Secretary-General, by a March note [A/55/857], transmitted a JIU report assessing progress in the delegation of authority for the management of human and financial resources in the United Nations Secretariat. JIU observed that, over the preceding few years, delegation of such authority appeared to be implemented on an ad hoc basis rather than according to a well thought-out strategy. Measures to decentralize administrative tasks had been presented as delegation, when, in many cases, managers had not been given additional decision-making powers and lacked effective guidance and support services.

JIU thus recommended that an overall action plan for delegation of authority be drawn up, based on a systematically developed concept that defined those areas of responsibility requiring retention of central authority and those where authority could be delegated. The action plan should contain the elements spelled out in the JIU recommendations calling for: clarity in the formulation of policies and procedures and instructions promulgated through the Secretary-General's bulletins and administrative instructions; the promulgation of an updated administrative instruction on delegation for the administration of the Staff Regulations and Rules to reflect the current situation, of revised Financial Regulations and Rules and of individual delegation orders; the establishment of a culture of clarity, transparency and communication; the empowerment of managers through specialized training and briefings, and adequate support services; access to information; monitoring capacity by which to gauge progress in the exercise of delegated authority; mechanisms for the performance evaluation of officials to whom authority was delegated and the establishment of an accountability system; and consultations with staff representatives.

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in his April comments on the report of JIU [A/55/857/Add.1], stated that events had overtaken many of its recommendations, and a number of reform initiatives affecting the delegation of financial management authority appeared to have been overlooked, among them the results-based budgeting process (see p. 1295) and the Secretariat's efforts to review and adjust administrative budgetary and programming procedures to reflect the new management culture resulting from the introduction of results-based budgeting.

While the Secretary-General generally agreed with the first recommendation, his 1 August report on human resources management reform (see p. 1337) contained elements of an overall plan that included the Performance Appraisal System (PAS) and the programme management plan, a new instrument requiring department heads to define clearly the goals and results to be achieved, together with measurable performance indicators. The measures described in his 1994 comprehensive system of accountability [YUN 1994, p. 1358] had been carried out and, where necessary, refined and improved. His 3 August report (see p. 1337) on accountability and responsibility underlined progress made since then, and highlighted recent changes supplementing existing accountability mechanisms to allow for the effective functioning of the currently established comprehensive system of accountability.

The Secretary-General concurred with the need to update his 1976 bulletin on the administration of the Staff Regulations and Rules [ST/SGB/151] and stated that a thorough review of the Financial Regulations and Rules was in progress. Steps towards establishing a Secretariat-wide culture of transparency and communication had been incorporated into the human resources management strategy. He shared the view that delegation of authority should be made generic through the issuance of bulletins or instructions. The provisions for delegating authority to programme managers were contained in his 1997 bulletin [ST/SGB/1997/5]. It would merely require an amendment of the applicable rules to expand the existing structure. The Secretary-General endorsed the thrust of the recommended specialized training of managers, recognizing that they all needed constant and immediate access to relevant information. IMIS and the Integrated Monitoring and Documentation Information System, combined with the Internet, contributed towards meeting that need. To facilitate monitoring, a computerized tracking system was being developed for the departmental human resources action plan, as was an automated system of recruitment, placement and promotion. He concurred with the imperative for full and meaningful consultations with staff representatives, but stressed constructive and results-oriented dialogue.

Recruitment process

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], the Secretary-General, in September [A/55/397], transmitted a report by OIOS assessing progress made towards reforming and refining specific elements of the UN recruitment process identified in its 1996 audit of the management of that process. While acknowledging the many OHRM reform initiatives, OIOS believed that those initiatives should be integrated into a strategic plan aimed at meeting evolving staffing needs and transforming the current cumbersome and time-consuming process into one more proactive and flexible. That need was urgent, given the increased number of retirements expected in the next few years.

Apart from pointing to the need for OHRM to address the policy issue of establishing overall recruitment goals and strategies, OIOS proposed specific actions to expedite and improve the management of the recruitment process. Key among them were to provide operational guidance to programme managers for implementing human resources targets in order to achieve geographic distribution and gender balance; to integrate individual recruitment approaches and monitor their achievement; to refine further the benchmarks for performance monitoring of recruitment; to conduct in-depth analyses of human resources statistics as a basis for strategic planning; to improve operational efficiency and effectiveness, particularly regarding roster management and circulation of vacancy announcements; and to evaluate the effectiveness of the current national competitive examination programme.

OIOS also made a preliminary assessment of OHRM's recent reform proposal on recruitment, promotion and placement, which addressed managerial accountability and empowerment and outlined a streamlined recruitment process, but many of whose operational details had not been developed at the time of audit. OIOS supported the approach and encouraged OHRM to pursue adoption of that proposal.

Senior-level appointments

By a September note [A/55/423], the Secretary-General transmitted a JIU report on senior-level appointments in the United Nations, its programmes and funds, proposing measures to improve the selection of candidates, recruitment transparency, the geographical distribution of senior-level posts and the streamlining of related policies and procedures. The report noted that senior echelon officials included the Deputy Secretary-General (DSG), equivalent in rank with the executive heads of the specialized agencies and major UN programmes and funds, department and office heads at the Under-Secretary-General (USG) and Assistant Secretary-General (ASG) levels, officials performing diplomatic or special-representative functions for the Secretary-General, Directors (D-2s) and Principal Officers (D-1s). Appointments to those positions fell under the Secretary-General's discretionary power and no standard recruitment or promotion procedures applied. Table 1 of the report showed that, between 30 June 1995 and 30 June 1998, the regional distribution of senior-level posts were: 82 (10 USGs and ASGs) for Western Europe, 64 (4 USGs and ASGs) for North America and the Caribbean, 58 (5 USGs and ASGs) for Africa, 50 (10 USGs and ASGs) for Asia and the Pacific, 27 (8 USGs and ASGs) for Latin America, 18 (1 USG) for the Middle East and 13 (1 USG) for Eastern Europe.

Distribution among countries in 1999 indicated that only 18 Member States (less than 10 per cent of the UN membership) encumbered 182 (57.6 per cent) of the total 316 senior-level posts; 70 others encumbered the remaining 134 (42.4 per cent). Ninety-seven Members (more than half of the UN membership, the majority of which were developing countries and those with economies in transition) held no senior-level post. In comparing the 1999 data with those of 1995, the report concluded that, in the previous five years, the geographical distribution of senior-level posts had been stable but could hardly be regarded as positive. Moreover, although the number of women at the D-1 level and above had increased by 61.4 per cent, from 57 to 92, between 1 July 1995 and 30 June 1999, the representation of women from developing countries and those with economies in transition continued to be inadequate.

While none of the top echelon appointments had been officially acknowledged as a mistake or failure, authoritative UN analysts recognized that their performance over the years had been uneven. Table 2 on senior staff appraisal suggested that, since the implementation of the PAS, only one USG and one ASG had been appraised. A general conclusion that might be drawn was that the PAS was far from being universally applied.

In its examination of senior-level staff in major UN programmes and funds, the report observed an uneven geographical distribution, as well as diversity in appointment modalities, but saw no compelling reason to recommend uniformity in that regard.

The report's recommendations called on the Secretary-General to consult widely with Member States and to inform them of vacancies and required credentials before making appointments at the USG and ASG levels, and, in his report on the composition of the Secretariat, to provide information on D-2 appointments made, including nationality, gender and type of contract; to amend staff regulation 4.5 relating to the appointments of senior-level officials earlier described; to appoint candidates for D-2 posts according to four modalities outlined in the report; to ensure adequate representation of developing countries in senior-level posts; to heed the repeated General Assembly statements that no post should be considered the exclusive preserve of any Member State or group; to improve gender balance in USG and ASG appointments and to lay emphasis on better representation of women from developing countries and those with economies in transition; to exert efforts to select candidates for the positions of special representative, envoy and related positions based on geographical and gender balance; to report biannually to the Assembly on the application of the PAS to senior-level officials; and to call on the executive heads of UN programmes and funds to ensure senior-level recruitment on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Employment of retirees

The Secretary-General, in October, submitted his 1998-1999 report [A/55/451] on the use of retired personnel. Prepared in response to General Assembly decision 51/408 [YUN 1996, p. 1329], the report described the guidelines and the 27 May 1999 administrative instruction [ST/AI/1999/5] governing retiree re-employment; general conditions and contractual arrangements; restrictions concerning former staff in receipt of a pension benefit, including remuneration limits; and monitoring by OIIRM to ensure compliance by departments and offices.

The report provided statistical data on persons who had retired after the age of 60 and 62 years, excluding those engaged by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, which, since its reclassification as an inter-organizational body, was no longer included in reports on the Secretariat. The report indicated the number of retirees engaged, the type and category of engagement, the departments or offices involved, the retirees' nationality, gender, functions, age group, days worked and fees or salaries.

The report noted that retiree fees and salaries in 1998-1999 totalled $10.3 million, of which language services accounted for nearly $6.7 million. The average cost for each retiree increased from $17,620 in 1996-1997 to $18,642 in 1998-1999. As to the possible revision of the limits on the annual earnings of retirees (currently $22,000 and $40,000 for language-services staff), the Secretary-General would continue to monitor the impact of ceilings on the delivery of services, particularly in respect of language services, a field where retirees were the main source of expertise. He observed that any revision had to be weighed against the corresponding increase in the regular budget.

Compared to 1996-1997 figures, the number of separate engagements (contracts) in 1998-1999 rose to 551 (a 1.3 per cent increase); the number of retirees engaged rose to 342 (a 4.3 per cent increase). Over 47 per cent of those engaged were in the Professional and higher categories; 17 per cent were in the Field Service and General Service categories. Special service agreements for consultants and individual contractors made up over one third of the engagements.

The language services of the Secretariat's Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services was the largest user of retired staff, accounting for 121 (or 31 per cent) of the total engagements for the biennium. Retirees engaged in language services worked 5,065 more days in 1998-1999 (a 33 per cent increase) than in 1996-1997; their fees and salaries rose to $4.4 million in 1998-1999 from $3.4 million during 1996-1997.

By nationality, the United States accounted for 58 engagements, followed by France (44), the United Kingdom (31), Egypt (27), Chile (23), Spain (21) and Argentina (10). By gender, 35 per cent of the retirees engaged were female. By function, 214 retirees were engaged in language-related services, 106 in administrative services and 64 in political, economic, social, environmental, humanitarian, advisory and technical assistance services. Forty-three per cent of the retirees engaged were in the 60-to-65 age group and some 35 per cent were in the 65-to-70 age group.

Staff College

In his October report on the United Nations Staff College project [A/55/369], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that, in accordance with resolution 54/228 [YUN 1999, p. 1340], he had established a three-member team that undertook an evaluation of the College project in Turin, Italy, and made recommendations for its future status, funding and operations upon concluding its pilot phase in December 2000.

The team's report, transmitted as an addendum to the Secretary-General's report [A/55/369/Add.1], provided previously reported background information on the College project [YUN 1999, p. 1339], the methodology used and the evaluation results. The team's assessment covered the relevance, quality and impact of the training and learning programmes and workshops conducted by the College; directions as to its future role; relationships with other training institutions; methodologies to create maximum impact in addressing new cross-sectoral challenges; future status and functioning; and governance and requirements. The assessment provided a positive basis for the continuation of the College, especially in the light of the growing demand for its services.

The team recommended that: the Staff College be accorded legal status, to be embodied in a statute approved by the Assembly, as a permanent system-wide institution, subject to review after three years, and be renamed the United Nations System Staff College; a system of governance to make the College accountable to a Governing Board be put in place and a three-year operational strategy be followed to phase out, reorient and realign programmes and activities; the College facilitate the creation of a cohesive management culture by positioning itself as a management and leadership development centre and a catalyst for change in the system through learning and knowledge management; and the College take a proactive leadership role in open and distance learning.

The Secretary-General endorsed the team's recommendations to institutionalize the College as a system-wide establishment, as did ACC. Subsequent inter-agency consultations, however, concluded that a sharper definition of the functions and programme of the College, as well as agreement on specific modalities of governance and funding, should be reached at the outset of its new proposed status. Accordingly, an inter-agency working group was being created to address the matter.

In the meantime, the Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly establish the United Nations System Staff College, with effect from 1 January 2002, as a system-wide knowledge management and learning institution for the UN system staff; and request submission of the final draft statute for the College for its review in 2001, to reflect the outcome of the further inter-agency consultations. Thereafter, a biennial report should be submitted to the Assembly on the work, activities and accomplishments of the College, including its collaboration with relevant UN institutions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 87], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/55/584], adopted resolution 55/207 without vote [agenda item 97].

United Nations Staff College in Turin, Italy

The General Assembly,

Recalling the decision taken by the Secretary-General in January 1996 to establish in Turin, Italy, the United Nations Staff College project for an initial period of five years,

Recalling also its resolution 54/228 of 22 December 1999,

Reaffirming the importance of a coordinated United Nations system-wide approach to research and training based on an effective coherent strategy and an effective division of labour among the relevant institutions and bodies,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the Independent Evaluation Team,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the work of the United Nations Staff College project, in particular with regard to strengthening the performance of the United Nations in the areas of economic and social development and international peace and security and in promoting a common United Nations management culture;

2. Expresses its deep appreciation to the International Labour Organization for the technical, logistical and administrative contributions provided by its International Training Centre in Turin;

3. Decides to establish the United Nations System Staff College, as at 1 January 2002 after the approval of its statute, as an institution for system-wide knowledge management, training and learning for the staff of the United Nations system, aimed, in particular, at the areas of economic and social development, peace and security and internal management of the system;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations on an urgent basis with the Administrative Committee on Coordination and relevant United Nations organizations and to submit, as early as possible, a final draft of the statute for the College, reflecting, as appropriate, the outcome of those consultations on functions, governance and funding for review and approval by the General Assembly, preferably at its fifty-fifth session;

5. Decides that, after the establishment of the Staff College, a biennial report should be submitted to the General Assembly on the work, activities and accomplishments of the College, including its collaboration with other relevant United Nations institutions.

UN Joint Staff Pension Fund

In 2000, the number of participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF) increased from 68,935 to 74,432 (8 per cent); the number of periodic benefits in award increased from 46,200 to 48,069 (4 per cent). On 31 December, the breakdown of the periodic benefits in award was: 15,129 retirement benefits; 10,165 early retirement benefits; 6,498 deferred retirement benefits; 7,336 widows' and widowers' benefits; 8,069 children's benefits; 829 disability benefits; and 43 secondary dependants' benefits. In the course of the year, 4,150 lump-sum withdrawal and other settlements were paid.

The Fund was administered by the 33-member United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, which held its fiftieth session (Geneva, 5-14 July) [A/55/9] to consider actuarial matters, including the twenty-fifth actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 1999; management of the Fund's investments and reports on the investment strategy and performance for the two-year period ending 31 March 2000; longer-term administrative arrangements of the Fund; entitlement to survivors' benefits for spouses and former spouses; reviews of several features of the pension adjustment system; and status of the proposed agreement between the Fund and the Government of the Russian Federation concerning the pension-related claims of former Fund participants from the former USSR. The Board also examined and approved the financial statements and schedules for the year ended 31 December 1999 and considered the report of the Board of Auditors on the accounts and operations of the Fund, a report on the internal audits of the Fund and, pursuant to the Board's observations, possible penalties in cases of fraud by participants and beneficiaries. In addition, the Board considered a proposed transfer agreement between the Fund and the World Trade Organization; an ICSC review of the common scale of staff assessment for pensionable remuneration purposes; the size and composition of the Pension Board and of its Standing Committee; and a change in the pension adjustment system consequent to a judgement of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal.

ACABQ, commenting on the Board's report in October [A/55/481], concurred with the Board that the current contribution rate of 23.7 per cent of pensionable remuneration be retained; and with its decision to confirm its two 1998 conditional decisions reported to the General Assembly: to change the interest rates applicable to lump-sum commutations of periodic benefits from 6.5 to 6 per cent with respect to contributory service performed as from 1 January 2001, and to reduce the threshold for effecting cost-of-living adjustments of pensions in award from 3 to 2 per cent, effective from the adjustment due on 1 April 2001. As to the Board's decision to establish a tripartite Working Group to review the Fund's benefit provisions, ACABQ hoped that the Group would focus on specific issues so as to be able to make precise recommendations.

ACABQ agreed with the Board's recommendations to add new subparagraphs (e) to article 35 bis and (h) to article 34 and revise article 45 of the Regulations of the Fund relating, respectively, to the divorced surviving spouse's benefit, continuation of surviving spouse's benefit after remarriage and establishment of a payment facility for meeting family maintenance obligations. It further agreed with the Board's decision relating to the Administrative Tribunal's judgement involving the application of the cost-of-living differential factor on an applicant's deferred retirement benefit, as well as with its consequent recommendation to amend paragraphs 4 and 5 of the UNJSPF pension adjustment system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/703], adopted resolution 55/224 without vote [agenda item 125].

United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/217 of 18 December 1996 and 53/210 of 18 December 1998, and section V of its resolution 54/251 of 23 December 1999,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 2000 to the General Assembly and to the member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the Fund and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

Actuarial matters

Recalling section I of its resolution 53/210,

Having considered the results of the valuation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund as at 31 December 1999 and the observations thereon of the Consulting Actuary of the Fund, the Committee of Actuaries and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the improvement in the actuarial situation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, from an actuarial surplus of 0.36 per cent of pensionable remuneration as at 31 December

1997 to an actuarial surplus of 4.25 per cent of pensionable remuneration as at 31 December 1999, and, in particular, of the opinions provided by the Consulting Actuary and the Committee of Actuaries, as reproduced in annexes IV and V, respectively, to the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board;

2. Takes note of the decision of the Board, in accordance with article 11 (a) of the Regulations of the Fund, to lower the interest rate used to determine lump-sum commutations, from the current 6.5 per cent to 6 per cent, with respect to contributory service performed as from 1 January 2001;

3. Takes note also that the Board has established a working group to undertake a fundamental review of the benefit provisions of the Fund, taking into account developments in staffing and remuneration policies in the member organizations and in pension arrangements at the national and international levels, and to make proposals to the Standing Committee of the Board in 2001 and subsequently to the Board in 2002, on the future long-term needs of the Fund and its constituent groups, for eventual submission by the Board to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

4. Takes note further of the observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in paragraph 8 of its report;

5. Concurs with the Transfer Agreement with the World Trade Organization, approved by the Board under article 13 of the Regulations of the Fund, with a view to securing continuity of pension rights between the Fund and the World Trade Organization, as set out in annex VII to the report of the Board;

6. Takes note of the intention of the Board and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development to pursue a new transfer agreement in the light of the changes made in the pension plan of the Bank and of the interim procedures that will be followed until a new agreement is concluded;

II

Pension adjustment system

Recalling section II of its resolution 53/210,

Having considered the reviews carried out by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, as set out in paragraphs 186 to 200 of its report, of various aspects of the pension adjustment system,

1. Takes note of the results of the monitoring of the costs/savings of recent modifications of the two-track feature of the pension adjustment system and the intention of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to continue to monitor those costs/savings every two years, on the occasion of the actuarial valuations of the Fund;

2. Approves changes in the pension adjustment system, as set out in annex I to the present resolution:

(a) To lower the threshold for implementing cost-of-living adjustments of pensions in award from 3 per cent to 2 per cent, with effect from the adjustment due on 1 April 2001;

(b) To modify, provisionally, paragraphs 4 and 5 of the provisions of the pension adjustment system, in order to implement Judgement No. 942 of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal, as described in section X, paragraphs 263 to 272, of the report of the Board, pending possible future proposals made by the Board to the General Assembly for changes in the pension adjustment system as regards adjustments of deferred retirement benefits;

III

Financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and report of the Board of Auditors

Having considered the financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 1999, the audit opinion and report of the Board of Auditors thereon, the information provided on the internal audits of the Fund and the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board,

1. Notes with satisfaction that the report of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 1999 indicated that the financial statements presented fairly, in all respects, the financial position of the Fund and that the transactions tested as part of the audit were, in all significant respects, in accordance with the Financial Regulations of the United Nations and legislative authority;

2. Takes note of the observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in paragraph 13 of its report;

IV

Longer-term administrative arrangements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Recalling section VII of its resolution 51/217, section V of its resolution 52/222, section V of its resolution 53/210 and section V of its resolution 54/251 concerning the administrative arrangements and expenses of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund,

Having considered section VI of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, on the longer-term administrative arrangements of the Fund,

1. Takes note of the information, set out in paragraphs 117 to 154 of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, on the strategic plan for the operations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, which addresses computer systems, process re-engineering and technological improvements, the progress report on the enhancement of the role of the Geneva office of the Fund, the delegation of personnel and procurement decisions to the Fund and office space needs;

2. Welcomes the efforts under way to effect improvements in the administrative operations of the Fund through greater use of the latest developments in information technology, including electronic exchanges of information between the Fund and its member organizations, as well as with participants and beneficiaries of the Fund, using Internet/Intranet web sites;

3. Requests the Standing Committee of the Board, in submitting the budget proposals of the Fund for the biennium 2002-2003 and, if necessary, revised estimates for the current biennium, to provide detailed information on the costs and benefits related to phase I and phase II of the project, including timetables and the prioritizing of the various initiatives;

V

Entitlement to survivors' benefits for spouses and former spouses

Recalling paragraph 4 of section VIII of its resolution 51/217 and section VI of its resolution 53/210,

Having considered the further review undertaken by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board of issues related to the pension entitlements of spouses and former spouses, as set out in paragraphs 155 to 185 of its report,

1. Approves the amendment to article 35 bis of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, which would extend the provision for a divorced surviving spouse's benefit to divorced spouses of former participants who separated before 1 April 1999 and who meet all the other eligibility conditions in subparagraph (b) of article 35 bis;

2. Also approves the amendment to article 34 of the Regulations of the Fund, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, which would restore the surviving spouse's benefit that had been eliminated for those who had remarried prior to 1 April 1999, subject to recovery (with interest) of the lump-sum payment made at the time of remarriage;

3. Further approves an amendment to article 45 of the Regulations of the Fund, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, which would modify the payment facility approved in resolution 53/210 along the lines set out in paragraphs 172 to 177 of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board;

4. Approves, with effect from 1 April 2001, the amendment to article 34 (b) of the Regulations of the Fund, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, which would eliminate the partial commutation option for participants electing to receive a deferred retirement benefit for the reasons set out in paragraphs 178 to 183 of the report of the Board;

5. Takes note of the responses to the arrangements approved in resolution 53/210 for the optional purchase of surviving spouses' benefits, on cost-neutral terms, in respect of marriage after separation from service;

6. Requests the Board to continue to monitor the experience with these issues and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

7. Also requests the Board to replace the study of benefits for domestic partnerships, as referred to in paragraphs 184 and 185 of its report, with a study on the existing rules and practices governing entitlements to survivors' pension benefits in international organizations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

VI

Status of the proposed agreement between the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board and the Government of the Russian Federation

Recalling section IV of its resolution 51/217 and section III of its resolution 53/210,

Noting the information provided by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board in paragraphs 201 to 232 of its report and the additional information contained in official communications from the Government of the Russian Federation to the Chief Executive Officer of the Fund after the fiftieth session of the Board,

1. Takes note of the information provided by the Government of the Russian Federation on internal solutions being prepared with a view to addressing the concerns of Russian former participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund;

2. Appreciates the efforts of the Board in addressing this issue;

VII

Other matters

1. Takes note of the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, as set out in paragraphs 233 to 240 of its report, on the review and conclusions reached by the International Civil Service Commission on the changes in average tax rates at the seven headquarters duty stations which formed the basis for the development of the current common scale of staff assessment for pensionable remuneration;

2. Also takes note of the review of the size and composition of the Board and the Standing Committee of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board and, in particular, the provisional allocation of the seat vacated by the former Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization effected upon the termination of its membership in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund as at 31 December 1998, as described in paragraphs 241 to 252 of the report of the Board;

3. Notes that a further review of the size and composition of the Board and the Standing Committee will be undertaken in the first instance by the Standing Committee in 2001 and subsequently by the Board in 2002, addressing the issues set out in paragraph 252 of the report of the Board;

4. Approves, with effect from 1 January 2001, an amendment to article 6 of the Regulations of the Fund, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, which would set the terms of office for the elected members and alternate members of the United Nations Staff Pension Committee at four years, instead of the current three years;

5. Also approves, with effect from 1 January 2001, an amendment to article 14 of the Regulations of the Fund, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, which would set the frequency for audits of the operations of the Fund to be annual and for audit reports on the accounts of the Fund by the Board of Auditors to be submitted to the General Assembly every two years, instead of annually;

6. Further approves, with effect from 1 January 2001, an amendment to article 43 of the Regulations of the Fund, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, which would provide for the recovery of indebtedness to the Fund pursuant to observations made by the Board of Auditors and to the comments thereon by the Board, for the reasons given in paragraphs 257 to 262 of the report of the Board;

7. Takes note of the consequent amendment that would be made to administrative rule J.9 (a) of the Fund, as set out in paragraph 261 of the report of the Board;

VIII

Investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as well as the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board thereon in its report;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General and to the members of the Investments Committee for the investment performances of the Fund, which contributed significantly to the actuarial surplus of the Fund as at 31 December 1999;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore investment possibilities by the Fund in the developing countries, taking into consideration General Assembly resolutions 36/119 A to C of 10 December 1981, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

4. Takes note of the observations of the Board of Auditors on the outstanding tax refunds due to the Fund from some Member States in respect of direct taxes imposed on the investment income of the Fund, as set out in paragraphs 20 to 24 of its report, which is reproduced in annex III to the report of the Board;

5. Urges once again those Member States which have outstanding balances on foreign tax accounts receivable to provide the reimbursement due to the Fund;

6. Reiterates its request to those Member States which do not grant tax exemptions to make all possible efforts to do so as soon as possible.

ANNEX I

Changes in the pension adjustment system of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

1. At the beginning of paragraph 4, after the words "Except as otherwise noted", add the following phrase within parentheses: "(e.g., in paragraphs 5 (d), 10 and 27 below with regard to deferred retirement benefits)."

2. In paragraph 5, add the following new subparagraph (d):

"(d) The cost-of-living differential factor in subparagraph 5 (b) (i) above shall not apply to deferred retirement benefits."

3. In paragraph 18, replace the words "3 per cent" with the words "2 per cent".

ANNEX II

Amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Article 6

Staff pension committees

In paragraph (b), replace the words "three years" with the words "four years."

Article 14

Annual report and audit

Replace paragraph (b) with the following:

"(b) There shall be annual audits of the operations of the Fund, in a manner agreed between the United Nations Board of Auditors and the Board. An audit report on the accounts of the Fund shall be made every two years by the United Nations Board of Auditors; a copy of the audit report shall be included in the report under (a) above."

Article 3

Deferred retirement benefit

Replace paragraph (c) with the following:

"(c) The benefit may be commuted by the participant into a lump sum if the rate of the benefit at the normal retirement age is less than 300 dollars. Such commutation shall be equivalent to the full actuarial value of the benefit."

Article 34

Widow's benefit

1. In paragraph (b), delete the following phrase at the end of the paragraph:

“, or had commuted a deferred retirement benefit under article 30 (c)”.

2. Add the following new paragraph (h):

“(h) Notwithstanding the provisions of (a) and (f) above, with respect to a surviving spouse who had remarried prior to 1 April 1999 the benefit under (a) above shall be payable as from 1 January 2001, subject to recovery (with interest) of the lump sum payment that had been made to that surviving spouse upon remarriage, as provided for in the Regulations then in effect.”

Article 35 bis

Divorced surviving spouse's benefit

Add the following new paragraph (e):

“(e) The divorced spouse of a former participant who separated before 1 April 1999 and, in the opinion of the Chief Executive Officer of the Fund, met all the other eligibility conditions in (a) and (b) above shall be entitled as from 1 April 1999 to a benefit equal to twice the minimum surviving spouse's benefit under article 34 (c), subject to the proviso that the amount of such benefit cannot exceed the amount payable to a surviving spouse of the former participant.”

Article 43

Recovery of indebtedness to the Fund

Add the following text at the end of the article:

“, including interest and costs, where appropriate.”

Article 45

Non-assignability of rights

Replace the text of article 45 with the following:

“(a) A participant or beneficiary may not assign his or her rights under these Regulations. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Fund may, to satisfy a legal obligation on the part of a participant or former participant arising from a marital or parental relationship and evidenced by an order of a court or by a settlement agreement incorporated into a divorce or other court order, remit a portion of a benefit payable by the Fund to such participant for life to one or more former spouses and/or a current spouse from whom the participant or former participant is living apart. Such payment shall not convey to any person a benefit entitlement from the Fund or (except as provided herein) provide any rights under the Regulations of the Fund to such person or increase the total benefits otherwise payable by the Fund.

“(b) To be acted upon, the requirement under the court order must be consistent with the Regulations of the Fund, as determined by the Chief Executive Officer of the Fund to be beyond any reasonable doubt, and on the basis of the available evidence. Once implemented, the assignment shall normally be irrevocable; however, a participant or former participant may request, upon satisfactory evidence based on a court order or a provision of a settlement agreement incorporated into a court decree, a new decision by the Chief Executive Officer that would alter or discontinue the payment or payments. Furthermore, such payment or payments shall cease following the death of the participant or former participant. If a designee predeceases the participant or former participant, the payments shall not commence, or if they have commenced, shall cease upon the designee's death. In the event that the payment or payments have been diminished, discontinued, or have failed to commence or have ceased, the amount of the benefit payable to the participant or former participant shall be duly adjusted.”

Also on 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 55/458, decided that the agenda item on the UN pension system would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Pension Fund investments

The market value of UNJSPF assets as at 31 December 2000 was $24.1 billion, a decrease of $1.8 billion from the previous year. For the year ending 31 December 2000, UNJSPF had a one-year annualized real rate of return of -6.2 per cent compared to -7.4 per cent for the benchmark. After adjustment for a 3.6 per cent rise in the consumer price index, the Fund's real rate of return was -9.6 per cent. Over periods of three and five years, it had a total return of 10.1 per cent and 10.5 per cent, while the benchmark had returns of 8.3 per cent and 8.9 per cent, respectively.

At the end of 2000, the Fund had 64.4 per cent of its assets in equities, 24.4 per cent in bonds, 4.5 per cent in real estate and 6.7 per cent in short-term assets and reserves. The book value of development-related investments was $1,101 million.

In September [A/C.5/55/3], the Secretary-General described the economic conditions prevailing in the reporting period ended 31 March 2000 and presented statistical information on the Fund's investment returns and diversification, including development-related investments. The figures were based on the audited financial statements for 1998 and 1999 and the unaudited appraisals up to 31 March 2000. Some of the data were updated to 30 June 2000 in order to provide the General Assembly with timely information.

Travel-related matters

In October, the Secretary-General submitted his annual report on standards of accommodation for air travel [A/55/488], which listed exceptions to those standards from 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000.

During the period under review, the Secretary-General authorized 46 cases of first-class and 30 of business-class air travel as exceptions to the standards of accommodation. Included in the first group were the Deputy Secretary-General, the President of the General Assembly's fifty-fourth session and the Secretary-General's personal aide/security officer. The Secretary-General noted that, while continuous administrative oversight had kept exceptions at a minimum, they were unavoidable in certain cases.

Administration of justice

JIU report. By a June note [A/55/57], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report on the administration of justice in the United Nations. It reviewed the UN machinery for the administration of justice, from its legal foundation to its functioning and impact, with a view to making recommendations to adjust it to the new management requirements.

Although its mandate exclusively concerned the United Nations, JIU considered that the issue demanded further consideration from a system-wide perspective. It found the UN justice system slow, costly and cumbersome, and, in several significant ways, far less effective than it could or should be. The system featured some informal procedures and two stages of formal recourse: the first stage involved the review of claims by internal joint bodies of staff members' peers whose role was advisory; the second was recourse to the United Nations Administrative Tribunal, whose decisions were binding. JIU noted that a high proportion of the internal bodies' advice was rejected by administrators so that deliberations served only to lengthen the procedure. Flaws in the system were compounded by the fact that the international civil service was not subject to any domestic legal system and thus might fail to benefit from dynamic labour legislation. Important international instruments were not incorporated into UN internal regulations and rules.

JIU recommended the creation of an office for the settlement of disputes and the administration of justice so as to increase the independence of the UN justice system. It should include an ombudsman function to replace the Panel on Discrimination and Other Grievances so as to strengthen the system's capacity for informal conciliation, mediation and negotiation. It further recommended amending article 9 of the Tribunal's Statute to eliminate restrictions on its authority, especially with regard to ordering the rescission of a contested decision and to deciding on the appropriate compensation amount; replacing the Joint Disciplinary Committee by a Committee for Professional Responsibility; and strengthening the Office of the Coordinator of the Panel of Counsel to enhance the availability of legal advice and staff representation. Recommended options for higher appeals included giving further consideration to reviving the advisory functions of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) in the internal recourse procedure and forging closer relationships between the Tribunal and other major tribunals in the UN system.

Report of Secretary-General. In his comments issued in August [A/55/57/Add.1] on the JIU report, the Secretary-General stated his belief that all relevant basic labour standards enshrined in the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by General Assembly resolution 217 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 535], were fully reflected in the UN conditions of service; the standards set out in ILO instruments were generally not developed to address conditions of service of individuals working for Governments or international organizations. The Secretary-General stated that the recommendation on the creation of an office for the settlement of disputes and the administration of justice needed further clarification on how the specific change would improve the current system. He agreed that replacing the Panel on Discrimination with an ombudsman appeared to be an effective means of strengthening the informal mediation process. However, to accept the recommendation to allow the Tribunal to order specific performance and unlimited compensation would seriously restrict his authority as the Organization's chief administrative officer; in any case, the matter would require General Assembly consideration for subsequent amendment of the Tribunal's Statute. He said there was unanimous agreement that nominees for the Tribunal should possess high professional qualifications and relevant experience. The proposal to add a post of Deputy Secretary in the Tribunal secretariat due to the increasing workload needed supporting quantitative data and analysis to establish sufficient justification for such a recommendation to the Assembly.

The Secretary-General said it was not clear why JIU called for greater emphasis on the ethical aspects of cases by suggesting the replacement of the Joint Disciplinary Committee, since that Committee's mandate was to advise on disciplinary, not ethical, questions arising from staff misconduct. Nor did it identify the specific problems with the Committee that required remedy. As to the concern over the lack of some form of appellate mechanism which led to the suggestion to revive the advisory functions of ICJ, it was not clear why the Assembly's decision in resolution 50/54 [YUN 1995, p. 1422] to cease recourse to ICJ should be reversed.

On the need to strengthen the Office of the Coordinator of the Panel of Counsel, the Secretary-General acknowledged that providing legal backstopping to the Office seemed appropriate, adding that related proposals were being put forward as part of the ongoing human resources management reform. However, responsibility for determining resource requirements to improve the provision of legal advice and staff representation rested with the Secretary-General.

ACABQ report. Following its consideration of the JIU report and the Secretary-General's comments, ACABQ, in October [A/55/514], observed that the system for administering justice should be considered in the context of the Secretary-General's overall human resources management reform. While agreeing with the need for an independent Tribunal secretariat, ACABQ felt that that did not solve the problem and suggested that the Secretary-General revisit the issue. In the meantime, ACABQ requested the Tribunal's comments on the JIU report, on the Secretary-General's related comments and on the relevant section of his report on human resources reform [A/55/253] for transmittal to the Fifth Committee. ACABQ was of the opinion that the Tribunal's inability to order performance of an obligation seriously limited the staff's right to redress; the time had come to close that gap, existent since the Tribunal's inception. It expressed serious doubts as to the appropriateness of involving ICJ in staff disputes. On the suggested additional posts for the Tribunal and the Office of the Coordinator of the Panel of Counsel, ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General make such staffing proposals in the context of his proposed programme budget for 2002-2003, based on updated supporting workload indicators.

Communication. The General Assembly President transmitted to the Fifth Committee a letter of 11 December [A/C.5/55/33] from Guinea-Bissau expressing deep concern over the treatment to which its only national on the Secretariat staff had been subjected by the Departments of Public Information and of Management. It requested that the Committee ask the Department of Management to review carefully the case of its national. Alternatively, it would urge that Department to meet with the staff member in question and his representatives to discuss the facts surrounding the decision being contested, in the presence of the Committee, ACABQ, JIU and Staff Committee representatives.

UN Administrative Tribunal

In its annual note to the General Assembly [A/INF/55/5], the United Nations Administrative Tribunal reported in December, through the Secretary-General, that it had delivered 46 judgements during 2000, relating to cases brought by staff against the Secretary-General or the executive heads of other UN bodies to resolve disputes involving terms of appointment and related issues and regulations. The Tribunal met in plenary in New York on 22 November and held two panel sessions (Geneva, 3 July-4 August; New York, 23 October-22 November).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/55/615], adopted resolution 55/159 without vote [agenda item 165].

Review of the Statute of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal

The General Assembly,

Acknowledging with gratitude the important contribution which the United Nations Administrative Tribunal ("the Tribunal") has made to the functioning of the United Nations system, and commending the members of the Tribunal on their valuable work,

Desiring to assist the Tribunal in carrying out its future work as effectively as possible,

Taking note of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on the administration of justice at the United Nations,

Noting the need to consider the appropriateness of the establishment of an appeals mechanism in relation to the decisions of the Tribunal,

Recognizing that, in appointing members of the Tribunal, the General Assembly should take into account the need to ensure adequate representation on the Tribunal of the principal legal systems of the world and fair geographical representation, and bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to amend the Statute of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal ("the Statute"), with effect from 1 January 2001, as follows:

(a) Article 3, paragraph 1, shall be amended to read as follows:

"The Tribunal shall be composed of seven members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State. Members shall possess the requisite qualifications and experience, including, as appropriate, legal qualifications and experience. Only three members shall sit in any particular case";

(b) Article 3, paragraph 2, shall be amended to read as follows:

"The members shall be appointed by the General Assembly for four years and may be reappointed once. A member appointed to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his or her predecessor's term, and may be reappointed once";

(c) A new article shall be inserted as article 8, to read as follows:

"Where the three members of the Tribunal sitting in any particular case consider that the case raises a significant question of law, they may, at any time before they render judgement, refer the case for consideration by the whole Tribunal. The quorum for a hearing by the whole Tribunal shall be five members";

(d) Former articles 8 to 13 of the Statute shall be renumbered 9 to 14, and references to those articles shall be amended accordingly;

(e) The pronouns "he" and "his", wherever they appear in the Statute, shall be amended to read "he or she" or "his or her", respectively;

(f) In article 7, paragraph 7, and in renumbered article 11, paragraph 4, references to "five official languages" shall be amended to read "six official languages";

2. Also decides that members serving on the Tribunal as at 1 January 2001 shall have their current term of office extended by one year, and that thereafter, provided that they have not served on the Tribunal for more than seven years, they may be reappointed once;

3. Further decides that the Statute, with effect from 1 January 2001, shall read as it appears in the annex to the present resolution.

ANNEX

Statute of the Administrative Tribunal of the United Nations

Article 1

A Tribunal is established by the present Statute to be known as the United Nations Administrative Tribunal.

Article 2

1. The Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement upon applications alleging non-observance of contracts of employment of staff members of the Secretariat of the United Nations or of the terms of appointment of such staff members. The words "contracts" and "terms of appointment" include all pertinent regulations and rules in force at the time of alleged non-observance, including the staff pension regulations.

2. The Tribunal shall be open:

(a) To any staff member of the Secretariat of the United Nations even after his or her employment has ceased, and to any person who has succeeded to the staff member's rights on his or her death;

(b) To any other person who can show that he or she is entitled to rights under any contract or terms of appointment, including the provisions of staff regulations and rules upon which the staff member could have relied.

3. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Tribunal has competence, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Tribunal.

4. The Tribunal shall not be competent, however, to deal with any applications where the cause of complaint arose prior to 1 January 1950.

Article 3

1. The Tribunal shall be composed of seven members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State. Members shall possess the requisite qualifications and experience, including, as appropriate, legal qualifications and experience. Only three members shall sit in any particular case.

2. The members shall be appointed by the General Assembly for four years and may be reappointed once. A member appointed to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his or her predecessor's term, and may be reappointed once.

3. The Tribunal shall elect its President and its two Vice-Presidents from among its members.

4. The Secretary-General shall provide the Tribunal with an Executive Secretary and such other staff as may be considered necessary.

5. No member of the Tribunal can be dismissed by the General Assembly unless the other members are of the unanimous opinion that he or she is unsuited for further service.

6. In case of a resignation of a member of the Tribunal, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Tribunal for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 4

The Tribunal shall hold ordinary sessions at dates to be fixed by its rules, subject to there being cases on its list which, in the opinion of the President, justify holding the session. Extraordinary sessions may be convoked by the President when required by the cases on the list.

Article 5

1. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall make the administrative arrangements necessary for the functioning of the Tribunal.

2. The expenses of the Tribunal shall be borne by the United Nations.

Article 6

1. Subject to the provisions of the present Statute, the Tribunal shall establish its rules.

2. The rules shall include provisions concerning:

(a) Election of the President and Vice-Presidents;

(b) Composition of the Tribunal for its sessions;

(c) Presentation of applications and the procedure to be followed in respect to them;

(d) Intervention by persons to whom the Tribunal is open under paragraph 2 of article 2, whose rights may be affected by the judgement;

(e) Hearing, for purposes of information, of persons to whom the Tribunal is open under paragraph 2 of article 2, even though they are not parties to the case; and generally,

(f) Other matters relating to the functioning of the Tribunal.

Article 7

1. An application shall not be receivable unless the person concerned has previously submitted the dispute to the joint appeals body provided for in the Staff Regulations and the latter has communicated its opinion to the Secretary-General, except where the Secretary-General and the applicant have agreed to submit the application directly to the Administrative Tribunal.

2. In the event of the joint body's recommendations being favourable to the application submitted to it, and insofar as this is the case, an application to the Tribunal shall be receivable if the Secretary-General has:

(a) Rejected the recommendations;

(b) Failed to take any action within thirty days following the communication of the opinion;

(c) Failed to carry out the recommendations within thirty days following the communication of the opinion.

3. In the event that the recommendations made by the joint body and accepted by the Secretary-General are unfavourable to the applicant, and insofar as this is the case, the application shall be receivable, unless the joint body unanimously considers that it is frivolous.

4. An application shall not be receivable unless it is filed within ninety days reckoned from the respective dates and periods referred to in paragraph 2 above, or within ninety days reckoned from the date of the communication of the joint body's opinion containing recommendations unfavourable to the applicant. If the circumstance rendering the application receivable by the Tribunal, pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 3 above, is anterior to the date of announcement of the first session of the Tribunal, the time limit of ninety days shall begin to run from that date. Nevertheless, the said time limit on his or her behalf shall be extended to one year if the heirs of a deceased staff member or the trustee of a staff member who is not in a position to manage his or her own affairs files the application in the name of the said staff member.

5. In any particular case, the Tribunal may decide to suspend the provisions regarding time limits.

6. The filing of an application shall not have the effect of suspending the execution of the decision contested.

7. Applications may be filed in any of the six official languages of the United Nations.

Article 8

Where the three members of the Tribunal sitting in any particular case consider that the case raises a significant question of law, they may, at any time before they render judgement, refer the case for consideration by the whole Tribunal. The quorum for a hearing by the whole Tribunal shall be five members.

Article 9

The oral proceedings of the Tribunal shall be held in public unless the Tribunal decides that exceptional circumstances require that they be held in private.

Article 10

1. If the Tribunal finds that the application is well founded, it shall order the rescinding of the decision contested or the specific performance of the obligation invoked. At the same time, the Tribunal shall fix the amount of compensation to be paid to the applicant for the injury sustained should the Secretary-General, within thirty days of the notification of the judgement, decide, in the interest of the United Nations, that the applicant shall be compensated without further action being taken in his or her case, provided that such compensation shall not exceed the equivalent of two years' net base salary of the applicant. The Tribunal may, however, in exceptional cases, when it considers it justified, order the payment of a higher indemnity. A statement of the reasons for the Tribunal's decision shall accompany each such order.

2. Should the Tribunal find that the procedure prescribed in the Staff Regulations or Staff Rules has not been observed, it may, at the request of the Secretary-General and prior to the determination of the merits of the case, order the case remanded for institution or correction of the required procedure. Where a case is remanded, the Tribunal may order the payment of compensation, which is not to exceed the equivalent of three months' net base salary, to the applicant for such loss as may have been caused by the procedural delay.

3. In all applicable cases, compensation shall be fixed by the Tribunal and paid by the United Nations or, as appropriate, by the specialized agency participating under article 14.

Article 11

1. The Tribunal shall take all decisions by a majority vote.

2. Subject to the provisions of article 12, the judgements of the Tribunal shall be final and without appeal.

3. The judgements shall state the reasons on which they are based.

4. The judgements shall be drawn up, in any of the six official languages of the United Nations, in two originals, which shall be deposited in the archives of the Secretariat of the United Nations.

5. A copy of the judgement shall be communicated to each of the parties in the case. Copies shall also be made available on request to interested persons.

Article 12

The Secretary-General or the applicant may apply to the Tribunal for a revision of a judgement on the basis of the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgement was given, unknown to the Tribunal and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence. The application must be made within thirty days of the discovery of the fact and within one year of the date of the judgement. Clerical or arithmetical mistakes in judgements, or errors arising therein from any accidental slip or omission, may at any time be corrected by the Tribunal either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties.

Article 13

The present Statute may be amended by decision of the General Assembly.

Article 14

1. The competence of the Tribunal shall be extended to the staff of the Registry of the International Court of Justice upon the exchange of letters between the President of the Court and the Secretary-General of the United Nations establishing the relevant conditions.

2. The Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement upon applications alleging non-observance of the regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund arising out of the decision of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board submitted to the Tribunal by:

(a) Any staff member of a member organization of the Pension Fund which has accepted the jurisdiction of the Tribunal in Pension Fund cases who is eligible under article 21 of the regulations of the Fund as a participant in the Fund, even if his or her employment has ceased, and any person who has acceded to such staff member's rights upon his or her death;

(b) Any other person who can show that he or she is entitled to rights under the regulations of the Pension Fund by virtue of the participation in the Fund of a staff member of such member organization.

3. The competence of the Tribunal may be extended to any specialized agency brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Articles 57 and 63 of the Charter upon the terms established by a special agreement to be made with each such agency by the Secretary-General of the United Nations. Each such special agreement shall provide that the agency concerned shall be bound by the judgements of the Tribunal and be responsible for the payment of any compensation awarded by the Tribunal in respect of a staff member of that agency and shall include, inter alia, provisions concerning the agency's participation in the administrative arrangements for the functioning of the Tribunal and concerning its sharing the expenses of the Tribunal.

4. The competence of the Tribunal may also be extended, with the approval of the General Assembly, to any other international organization or entity established by a treaty and participating in the common system of conditions of service, upon the terms set out in a special agreement between the organization or entity concerned and the Secretary-General of the United Nations. Each such special agreement shall provide that the organization or entity concerned shall be bound by the judgements of the Tribunal and be responsible for the payment of any compensation awarded by the Tribunal in respect of a staff member of that organization or entity and shall include, inter alia, provisions concerning its participation in the administrative arrangements for the functioning of the Tribunal and concerning its sharing the expenses of the Tribunal.

Chapter IV

Institutional and administrative matters

A number of institutional and administrative matters were reviewed by the United Nations in 2000. The General Assembly held its fifty-fifth session, designated the "Millennium Assembly of the United Nations", during which it held a Millennium Summit (6-8 September), attended by heads of State or Government. Earlier in the year, the Assembly resumed its fifty-fourth session, convened its twenty-third and twenty-fourth special sessions and resumed its tenth emergency special session. The Assembly granted observer status to the Economic Community of Central African States and the Inter-American Development Bank. Two States were admitted to United Nations membership, bringing the total number to 189.

During the year, the Security Council held 167 formal meetings to deal with regional conflicts, peacekeeping operations and a wide variety of other issues related to the maintenance of international peace and security.

The Economic and Social Council held its 2000 organizational session in New York in January and February and a resumed organizational session between 28 February and 16 June. It also held a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions in April, its substantive session in New York in July and a resumed substantive session in October and November. The Council decided to establish as a subsidiary organ a permanent forum on indigenous issues, consisting of eight members to be nominated by Governments and elected by the Council, and eight members to be appointed by the Council President.

UN bodies concerned with administrative and coordination matters, including the Administrative Committee on Coordination, the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Joint Inspection Unit, also continued their work during the year.

The Committee on Conferences examined requests for changes to the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2000, and again recommended measures to improve the use of conference-servicing resources. The Committee commended the efforts of the Department of Public Information in developing the UN web sites, noting also that it had become necessary for consideration to be given to Internet activity as an integral part of the Organization's work programme.

Progress was reported on the development of the Integrated Management Information System and the United Nations common system. Proposals were also made for improving facilities management of UN property worldwide and for a capital master plan for the renovation and refurbishing of the Headquarters facilities.

Admission to UN membership

During 2000, two States, Tuvalu and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, were admitted to the United Nations, bringing the total membership to 189.

Admission of Tuvalu

On 17 February [meeting 4103], the Security Council considered the application of Tuvalu for United Nations membership [A/54/699-S/2000/5]. China, speaking before the vote, stated that it attached great importance to Tuvalu's desire to join the United Nations, but in considering the application the most important thing was upholding the principles and purposes of the Charter and implementation of General Assembly resolution 2758(XXVI) [YUN 1971, p. 136]. On the basis of that principled position, although China could not support the Council's recommendation to the Assembly, it would not block it. It hoped that, after joining the United Nations, Tuvalu would strictly abide by the Charter and implement resolution 2758(XXVI).

The Council, acting on the recommendation of the Committee on the Admission of New Members [S/2000/70], adopted resolution 1290(2000) by vote (14-0-1).

The Security Council,

Having examined the application of Tuvalu for admission to the United Nations,

Recommends to the General Assembly that Tuvalu be admitted to membership in the United Nations.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1290(2000):

In favour: Argentina, Bangladesh, Canada, France, Jamaica, Malaysia, Mali, Namibia, Netherlands, Russian Federation, Tunisia, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: None.

Abstaining: China.

Following the adoption of the resolution, the Council President made statement S/PRST/2000/6 congratulating Tuvalu on behalf of the Council members, who had taken note of Tuvalu's commitment to uphold the UN Charter and fulfil all of its obligations.

The Assembly, in resolution 55/1 of 5 September, admitted Tuvalu to UN membership.

Admission of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia

On 31 October [meeting 4215], the Security Council, acting on the application of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia [A/55/528-S/2000/1043], adopted resolution 1326(2000) without vote. The draft [S/2000/1051] was prepared by the Committee on the Admission of New Members.

The Security Council,

Having examined the application of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia for admission to the United Nations,

Recommends to the General Assembly that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia be admitted to membership in the United Nations.

Following the adoption of the resolution, the Council President made statement S/PRST/2000/30 congratulating the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia on behalf of the Council members, who had taken note of its commitment to uphold the UN Charter and fulfil all of its obligations.

The General Assembly, in resolution 55/12 of 1 November, admitted the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to membership in the United Nations.

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 55/458, decided that the item on the admission of new Members to the United Nations remained for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

General Assembly

The General Assembly met throughout 2000; it resumed and concluded its fifty-fourth session and held the major part of its fifty-fifth session, which was designated the "Millennium Assembly of the United Nations". The fifty-fourth session was resumed in plenary meetings on 1 February, 2, 10, 14 and 15 March, 3 and 7 April, 10 and 25 May, 15 June, 11 August and 5 September. The fifty-fifth session opened on 5 September and continued until its suspension on 23 December. As part of that session, a Millennium Summit was held from 6 to 8 September (see p. 47).

The Assembly also held its twenty-third special session on "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century" from 5 to 10 June (see p. 1082), and the twenty-fourth special session on social development from 26 June to 1 July (see p. 1011). It resumed the tenth emergency special session on 18 and 20 October to discuss "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory" (see p. 421).

Organization of Assembly sessions

2000 sessions

On 11 September, by decision 55/401, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/55/250 & Corr.1], adopted a number of provisions concerning the organization of its fifty-fifth session.

The General Committee's recommendations covered rationalization of the Assembly's work; closing date of the session; schedule of meetings; general debate; explanations of vote, right of reply, points of order and length of statements; records of meetings; concluding statements; resolutions; documentation; questions related to the programme budget; observances and commemorative meetings; special conferences; and meetings of subsidiary organs. The Committee made observations and proposals on the organization of future Assembly sessions and recommendations concerning the agenda.

The Assembly in resolution 53/239 [YUN 1999, p. 1270] had decided that its fifty-fourth session should close on 5 September, in the morning, and that the fifty-fifth session should open on the same date, in the afternoon. The Assembly also decided that the Millennium Summit should begin on 6 September.

The Assembly authorized the following bodies to meet during its fifty-fifth session: the Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), and the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (decision 55/403 A of 5 September); the Committee on Relations with the Host Country, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the Preparatory Committee for the High-level International Intergovernmental Event on Financing for Development (decision 55/403 B of 11 September); and the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations and its Working Group (decision 55/403 C of 25 October).

Millennium Summit

At its resumed fifty-fourth session, the General Assembly took a number of actions relating to the organization of the Millennium Summit (New York, 6-8 September).

On 15 March [meeting 93], the Assembly adopted resolution 54/254 [draft: A/54/L.81/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 49 (b)].

Millennium Summit of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/202 of 17 December 1998, by which it decided, inter alia, to designate the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly "The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations" and to convene, as an integral part of the Millennium Assembly, a Millennium Summit of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 53/239 of 8 June 1999, by which it decided, inter alia, that the Millennium Summit should begin on 6 September 2000,

Reiterating that the year 2000 constitutes a unique and symbolically compelling moment to articulate and affirm an animating vision for the United Nations in the new era, and in this context endorsing the proposal of a co-chairmanship of the Millennium Summit,

Reiterating also that a Millennium Assembly would provide an opportunity to strengthen the role of the United Nations in meeting the challenges of the twenty-first century,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled "The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations: thematic framework for the Millennium Summit",

Mindful of the need for appropriate organizational preparations for the holding of the Millennium Summit,

1. Decides that the Millennium Summit shall be held from 6 to 8 September 2000 in New York under the overall theme "The role of the United Nations in the twenty-first century";

2. Also decides that the Millennium Summit will be composed of plenary meetings and of four interactive round-table sessions, with each interactive session to be held in concurrence with a plenary meeting;

3. Further decides that, owing to the unique symbolic moment of the Millennium Summit, the country of the President of the fifty-fourth session of the General Assembly and the country of the President of the fifty-fifth session of the Assembly will jointly preside over the Summit;

4. Requests the President of the General Assembly to hold consultations with all Member States in an open-ended process with a view to taking decisions on all outstanding issues relating to the Millennium Summit, including its outcome.

On 10 May [meeting 96], the Assembly adopted resolution 54/261 [draft: A/54/L.83/Rev.1, as orally revised] without vote [agenda item 49 (b)].

Establishment of the list of speakers and organization of the round tables for the Millennium Summit of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/202 of 17 December 1998, in which it decided, inter alia, to designate the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly "The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations" and to convene, as an integral part of the Millennium Assembly, a Millennium Summit of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 54/254 of 15 March 2000, in which it:

(a) Decided that the Millennium Summit should be held from 6 to 8 September 2000 in New York under the overall theme "The role of the United Nations in the twenty-first century",

(b) Decided that the Millennium Summit would be composed of plenary meetings and four interactive round-table sessions, with each interactive session to be held in concurrence with a plenary meeting,

(c) Decided that, owing to the unique symbolic moment of the Millennium Summit, the country of the President of the fifty-fourth session of the General Assembly and the country of the President of the fifty-fifth session of the Assembly would jointly preside over the Summit,

(d) Requested the President of the General Assembly to hold consultations with all Member States in an open-ended process with a view to taking decisions on all outstanding issues relating to the Millennium Summit, including its outcome,

Reiterating that a Millennium Summit would provide an opportunity to strengthen the role of the United Nations in meeting the challenges of the twenty-first century,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled "The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations: thematic framework for the Millennium Summit",

Bearing in mind the presentation by the Secretary-General of his report entitled "We the peoples: the role of the United Nations in the twenty-first century",

1. Decides that the Millennium Summit shall consist of a total of six meetings, on the basis of two meetings a day, as follows:

Wednesday, 6 September 2000, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.;

Thursday, 7 September 2000, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.;

Friday, 8 September 2000, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.;

2. Decides also that the Millennium Summit shall hold four interactive round-table sessions, as follows:

Wednesday, 6 September 2000, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.;

Thursday, 7 September 2000, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.;

Friday, 8 September 2000, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.;

3. Decides further that the list of speakers for the Millennium Summit and the modalities for the round tables shall be established in accordance with the procedure set forth in the annex to the present resolution.

ANNEX

Establishment of the list of speakers and organization of the round tables for the Millennium Summit of the United Nations

A

1. The list of speakers for the Millennium Summit will be established on the basis of six meetings. At the opening meeting, on Wednesday, 6 September 2000, the first speakers will be the two Co-Chairpersons of the Millennium Summit, the Secretary-General and the head of State or head of the delegation of the host country of the Organization. Therefore, the opening meeting will have 32 speaking slots. The morning meetings of Thursday, 7 September 2000, and Friday,

8 September 2000, will have 40 speaking slots. The Wednesday and Thursday afternoon meetings will have 30 speaking slots. The Friday afternoon meeting will have 20 speaking slots since the last hour will be devoted to the closing of the Millennium Summit.

2. The list of speakers for the Millennium Summit will be established initially as follows:

(a) The representative of the Secretary-General will draw one name from a box containing the names of all Member States, the Holy See and Switzerland, in their capacity as observer States, and Palestine, in its capacity as observer. This procedure will be repeated until all names have been drawn from the box, thus establishing the order in which participants will be invited to choose their meetings and select their speaking slots;

(b) Consultations will continue regarding the possible participation of one or more representatives of intergovernmental organizations, parliaments and civil society;

(c) Six boxes will be prepared, each one representing a meeting and each one containing numbers corresponding to speaking slots at that meeting;

(d) Once the name of a Member State, observer State, or Palestine, in its capacity as observer, has been drawn by the representative of the Secretary-General, that Member State, observer State, or Palestine, in its capacity as observer, will be invited first to choose a meeting and then to draw from the appropriate box the number indicating the speaking slot in the meeting.

3. The establishment of the initial list of speakers for the Millennium Summit as outlined in paragraph 2 above will take place at a meeting to be scheduled as soon as possible during the month of May 2000.

4. Subsequently, the list of speakers for each meeting will be rearranged in accordance with the established practice of the General Assembly when organizing each category of speakers, following the order resulting from the selection process outlined in paragraph 2 above:

(a) Heads of State will thus be accorded first priority, followed by heads of Government; vice-presidents, crown princes/princesses; the highest-ranking official of the Holy See and Switzerland, in their capacity as observer States, and Palestine, in its capacity as observer; ministers; and permanent representatives;

(b) In the event that the level at which a statement is to be made is subsequently changed, the speaker will be moved to the next available speaking slot in the appropriate category at the same meeting;

(c) Participants may arrange to exchange their speaking slots in accordance with the established practice of the General Assembly;

(d) Speakers who are not present when their speaking turn comes will be automatically moved to the next available speaking slot within their category.

5. In order to accommodate all speakers at the Millennium Summit, statements should be limited to five minutes, on the understanding that this will not preclude the distribution of more extensive texts.

B

6. The four round tables will have at least 40 seats each and will be chaired by a head of State or Government.

7. The chairpersons of three of the round tables will be from the three regions not represented by the two Co-Chairpersons of the Millennium Summit. Those three chairpersons will be selected by their respective regional groups in consultation with the President of the General Assembly. The choice of chairperson of the fourth round table will be subject to further consultations.

8. Following the selection of the chairpersons of the round tables, each regional group will determine which of its members will participate in each round table, ensuring that equitable geographical distribution will be maintained, allowing for some flexibility. The chairpersons of the regional groups will communicate to the President of the General Assembly the list of countries from their respective regions that will participate in each round table. Member States are encouraged to be represented at the round tables at the level of heads of State or Government.

9. All four round tables will cover the same overarching theme and sub-themes.

On 11 August [meeting 99], the Assembly adopted resolution 54/281 [draft: A/54/L.87, as orally revised] without vote [agenda item 49 (b)].

Organization of the Millennium Summit of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/202 of 17 December 1998, by which it decided, inter alia, to designate the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly "The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations" and to convene, as an integral part of the Millennium Assembly, a Millennium Summit of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 54/254 of 15 March 2000, in which it:

(a) Decided that the Millennium Summit should be held from 6 to 8 September 2000,

(b) Decided also that the Millennium Summit would be composed of plenary meetings and four interactive round-table sessions, with each interactive session to be held in concurrence with a plenary meeting,

(c) Decided further that, owing to the unique symbolic moment of the Millennium Summit, the country of the President of the fifty-fourth session of the General Assembly and the country of the President of the fifty-fifth session of the Assembly would jointly preside over the Summit,

(d) Requested the President of the General Assembly to hold consultations with all Member States in an open-ended process, with a view to taking decisions on all outstanding issues relating to the Millennium Summit, including its outcome,

Recalling further its resolution 54/261 of 10 May 2000, in which it:

(a) Decided that the Millennium Summit shall consist of a total of six meetings, on the basis of two meetings a day,

(b) Decided also that the Millennium Summit shall hold four interactive round-table sessions, the modalities for which shall be established in accordance with the following procedure:

(i) The four round tables will have at least forty seats each and will be chaired by a head of State or Government,

(ii) The chairpersons of three of the round tables will be from the three regions not represented by the two Co-Chairpersons of the Millennium Summit. Those three chairpersons will be selected by their respective regional groups in consultation with the President of the General Assembly. The choice of chairperson of the fourth round table will be subject to further consultations,

- (iii) Following the selection of the chairpersons of the round tables, each regional group will determine which of its members will participate in each round table, ensuring that equitable geographical distribution will be maintained, allowing for some flexibility. The chairpersons of the regional groups will communicate to the President of the General Assembly the list of countries from their respective regions that will participate in each round table. Member States are encouraged to be represented at the round tables at the level of heads of State or Government,
- (iv) All four round tables will cover the same overarching theme and sub-themes,

Bearing in mind that the list of speakers for the plenary meetings was established by the drawing of lots in accordance with the provisions contained in resolution 54/261,

Decides that the Millennium Summit shall be organized in accordance with the procedure set forth in the annex to the present resolution.

ANNEX Organization of the Millennium Summit of the United Nations

1. Owing to the unique symbolic moment of the Millennium Summit, the two Co-Chairpersons, the head of State of the country of the President of the fifty-fourth session of the General Assembly (Namibia) and the head of State of the country of the President of the fifty-fifth session of the Assembly (Finland), will jointly preside over the Summit. The podium in the General Assembly Hall will have three seats to accommodate the two Co-Chairpersons and the Secretary-General. In the absence of one of the heads of State of these countries, the highest-ranking official in the delegation of these countries will sit instead.

2. The overarching theme of the Millennium Summit, "The role of the United Nations in the twenty-first century", will also be the agenda of the round tables. The heads of State and heads of Government would be free to discuss any sub-themes proposed in the report of the Secretary-General, those raised during the consultations, or any other matter they wish to address.

3. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 54/261, it has been agreed that one of the four round tables will be chaired by the Group of African States. Thus, the four round tables will be chaired by the following four regional groups:

- (a) African States;
- (b) Asian States;
- (c) Eastern European States;
- (d) Latin American and Caribbean States.

4. Each head of State or head of Government or head of delegation attending the round tables may be accompanied by two advisers.

5. The composition of the four round tables will be subject to the principle of equitable geographical distribution. Thus, for each regional group, the distribution of its members for participation in each round table will be done in the following manner:

(a) For the round table to be held on Wednesday, 6 September, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.:

- (i) African States: fifteen Member States;
- (ii) Asian States: fifteen Member States;
- (iii) Eastern European States: seven Member States;
- (iv) Latin American and Caribbean States: ten Member States;
- (v) Western European and other States: nine Member States;

(b) For the round table to be held on Thursday, 7 September, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.:

- (i) African States: fifteen Member States;
- (ii) Asian States: fifteen Member States;
- (iii) Eastern European States: seven Member States;
- (iv) Latin American and Caribbean States: ten Member States;
- (v) Western European and other States: nine Member States;

(c) For the round table to be held on Thursday, 7 September, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.:

- (i) African States: fifteen Member States;
- (ii) Asian States: fifteen Member States;
- (iii) Eastern European States: seven Member States;
- (iv) Latin American and Caribbean States: ten Member States;
- (v) Western European and other States: nine Member States;

(d) For the round table to be held on Friday, 8 September, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.:

- (i) African States: fifteen Member States;
- (ii) Asian States: fifteen Member States;
- (iii) Eastern European States: seven Member States;
- (iv) Latin American and Caribbean States: ten Member States;
- (v) Western European and other States: nine Member States.

6. The round tables will be chaired in the following manner:

(a) The round table to be held on Wednesday, 6 September, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m., will be chaired by His Excellency Mr. Goh Chok Tong, Prime Minister of the Republic of Singapore;

(b) The round table to be held on Thursday, 7 September, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., will be chaired by His Excellency Mr. Aleksander Kwasniewski, President of the Republic of Poland;

(c) The round table to be held on Thursday, 7 September, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m., will be chaired by His Excellency Mr. Hugo Rafael Chávez Frías, President of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela;

(d) The round table to be held on Friday, 8 September, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., will be chaired by His Excellency Mr. Abdelaziz Bouteflika, President of the People's Democratic Republic of Algeria.

7. Member States that are not members of any of the regional groups may participate in different round tables to be determined in consultation with the President of the General Assembly. The Holy See and Switzerland, in their capacity as observer States, and Palestine, in its capacity as observer, as well as the intergovernmental organizations listed in paragraph 11 below, may also participate in different round tables to be determined also in consultation with the President of the General Assembly.

8. The list of participants in each round table will be made available as soon as possible.

9. The round tables would be closed to the media and the general public. Accredited delegates and observers will be able to follow the proceedings of the round tables via a closed-circuit television in the overflow room.

10. Summaries of the deliberations of the four round tables will be presented orally by the chairpersons of the round tables, individually or collectively, during the concluding plenary meeting of the Millennium Summit.

11. Pursuant to resolution 54/261, one or more representatives of intergovernmental organizations, parliaments and civil society may participate in the plenary meetings of the Millennium Summit, time permitting. In this connection, and without prejudice to other organizations which have observer status in the General Assembly, a representative of each of the following may be included in the list of speakers for the plenary meetings of the Summit:

- League of Arab States
- Organization of African Unity
- European Commission
- Organization of the Islamic Conference
- Conference of Presiding Officers of National Parliaments
- Millennium Forum.

12. In addition, a representative of the International Committee of the Red Cross and a representative of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta may also be included in the list of speakers for the plenary meetings of the Millennium Summit, time permitting.

13. Other than for Member States, the list of speakers for the plenary meetings of the Millennium Summit will be closed on Wednesday, 16 August 2000.

Credentials

The Credentials Committee, at its first meeting, on 1 November [A/55/537 & Corr.1], had before it a memorandum by the Secretary-General indicating that, as at 31 October, 134 Member States had submitted the formal credentials of their representatives. The Assistant Secretary-General for Legal Affairs said the Secretary-General would report later on the representatives of those Member States whose formal credentials had not yet been received.

The Committee also examined the credentials of Afghanistan, from which it had received two sets of credentials: a communication signed by Burhanuddin Rabbani, "President of the Islamic State of Afghanistan", presenting a delegation whose leader was described as "Permanent Representative to the United Nations"; and a communication signed by Mulla Mohammad Rabbani, "Chairman of the Ministers Council of the Islamic Emirate of Afghanistan", presenting a delegation led by a "Deputy Foreign Minister". The Committee deferred a decision on those credentials on the understanding that the current representatives of the country accredited to the United Nations would continue to participate in the work of the Assembly.

The Committee adopted a resolution accepting the credentials received and recommended to the Assembly a draft resolution for adoption. On 6 November, the Assembly, by resolution 55/16 A, approved the first report of the Credentials Committee.

At its second meeting, on 4 December [A/55/537/Add.1], the Credentials Committee considered a 1 December memorandum by the Secretary-General indicating that formal credentials had been received from an additional 28 Member States. Information had also been communicated to the Secretary-General concerning representatives of 27 other Member States.

The Committee accepted the credentials received and recommended to the Assembly a draft resolution for adoption. On 6 December, the Assembly, by resolution 55/16 B, approved the second report of the Credentials Committee.

Agenda

During its resumed fifty-fourth session, the General Assembly took a number of actions relating to its agenda, which were listed in decision 54/402 B: it decided to consider, in plenary, a sub-item on the appointment of members of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) in order to consider expeditiously the Secretary-General's note [A/54/101/Rev.1/Add.1]; to include an additional item on the financing of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; to consider an item on the implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women, in plenary, so as to consider two draft decisions [A/54/L.77, A/54/L.78]; to include an additional item on the review of the problem of HIV/AIDS in all its aspects in plenary; to reopen the item on cooperation between the United Nations and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization; to consider the items on social development, including questions relating to the world social situation and to youth, ageing, disabled persons and the family, in plenary, in order to consider a draft resolution [A/54/L.85], and on human rights questions, in plenary, so as to consider a draft resolution [A/54/L.84]; to examine the sub-item "High-level international intergovernmental consideration of financing for development" in plenary so as to act on a draft resolution [A/54/L.82]; and to reopen debate on the sub-item "Renewal of the dialogue on strengthening international economic cooperation for development through partnership" in plenary to enable it to consider a letter from the Chairman of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/54/952].

On 15 March, the Assembly, by decision 54/467, decided to reconsider the question of accreditation of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to the twenty-third special session on women.

On 5 September, the Assembly decided to include the following in the draft agenda of its fifty-fifth session: a sub-item entitled "United Nations reform: measures and proposals" (decision 54/489); and items on strengthening of the UN system (decision 54/490), revitalization of the work of the General Assembly (decision 54/491), restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields (decision 54/492), the question of Cyprus (decision 54/493), improving the financial situation of the United Nations (decision 54/495), financing of the United Nations Operation in Somalia II (decision 496), financing of the United Nations Operation in Mozambique (decision 54/497), financing of the United Nations Mission in Haiti (decision 54/498), financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Liberia (decision 54/499), financing of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda (decision 54/500), cooperation between the United Nations and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (decision 54/501), and armed aggression against the Democratic Republic of the Congo (decision 54/502).

On 15 June, by decision 54/462 B, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, deferred until its fifty-fifth session consideration of: management irregularities causing financial losses to the Organization; improving the working methods of the Fifth Committee; UN security coordination; information technologies; reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS); and measures taken to improve procurement activities in the field.

On 7 April, the Assembly deferred consideration of the question of improving the Fifth Committee's working methods (decision 54/470), and gratis personnel provided by Governments and other entities (decision 54/471) until the second part of its resumed fifty-fourth session; and the proposed regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of officials other than Secretariat officials and experts on mission until its fifty-fifth session (decision 54/472).

On 7 April (decision 54/478), the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report on the activities of OIOS, and, on 15 June, it deferred a decision on the question of the relocation of South Africa to the group of Member States set out in paragraph 3 (c) of Assembly resolution 43/232 [YUN 1989, p. 793] (decision 54/486).

On 11 September, by decision 55/402 A, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/55/250 & Corr.1], adopted the agenda [A/55/251] and the allocation of agenda items [A/55/252] for the fifty-fifth session to the plenary or appropriate Main Committee. It deferred the questions of the Comorian island of Mayotte and of the Malagasy islands of Glorieuses, Juan de Nova, Europa and Bassas da India and included them in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session.

On 28 September, by the same decision, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/55/250/Add.1], included in the agenda of its fifty-fifth session the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Economic Community of Central African States" and decided to consider it in plenary, as well as the item on crime prevention and criminal justice.

On 17 October, by the same decision, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/55/250/Add.2], the Assembly decided to include the following additional items and to consider them in plenary: cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons; follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit; and peace, security and reunification on the Korean peninsula. On 16 November, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/55/250/Add.3], included an additional item on observer status for the Economic Community of Central African States in the Assembly and allocated it to the Sixth (Legal) Committee.

On 14 December, the Assembly deferred the item "Implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations" and included it in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth (2001) session (decision 55/433).

On 23 December, the Assembly decided to retain 80 items for consideration during the resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session (decision 55/458).

Second, Third and Fifth Committees

The General Assembly, by decision 55/423 of 4 December, approved the organization of work of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee and its 2001-2002 biennial programme of work.

The Assembly, by decision 55/449 of 20 December, approved the biennial programme of work of the Second Committee for 2001-2002 and, by decision 55/454 of 23 December, approved the biennial programme of work of the Fifth Committee for 2001-2002.

Amendment to Assembly's rules of procedure

On 3 November [meeting 51], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/14 [draft: A/55/L.19] without vote [agenda item 61].

Amendment to rule 1 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 51/241 of 31 July 1997, by which it adopted the recommendations of the Open-ended High-level Working Group on the Strengthening of the United Nations System as contained in the annex to the resolution,

Recalling in particular paragraph 17 of the annex to resolution 51/241, in which it decided, inter alia, that the plenary meetings of the General Assembly should be formally opened every year on the first Tuesday following 1 September,

Noting that the Monday immediately preceding the first Tuesday following 1 September falls on a United Nations holiday at Headquarters,

Mindful that, for practical reasons, the closing of the regular sessions of the General Assembly should be on a Monday, which should not be a holiday, and the opening of the regular sessions should be on the following day, that is to say, on a Tuesday,

Recalling its resolutions 52/232 of 4 June 1998, 53/224 of 7 April 1999 and 53/239 of 8 June 1999, by which it took ad hoc decisions concerning the opening and/or closing dates of the fifty-second, fifty-third, fifty-fourth and fifty-fifth sessions of the General Assembly,

Recalling also paragraph 2 of resolution 52/232, in which it decided that the International Day of Peace would continue to be observed on the opening day of the regular sessions,

1. Decides to amend rule 1 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly to read: "The General Assembly shall meet every year in regular session commencing on the Tuesday following the second Monday in September";

2. Also decides that this amendment shall take effect as from 2001 and that, therefore, for that year, the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly shall close on Monday, 10 September 2001, and the fifty-sixth session of the Assembly shall open on Tuesday, 11 September 2001.

Security Council

The Security Council held 167 formal meetings in 2000, adopted 50 resolutions and issued 41 presidential statements. It considered 49 agenda items (see APPENDIX IV). In September [A/55/366], the Secretary-General, in accordance with Article 12, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations and with the consent of the Council, notified the General Assembly of 36 matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security that the Council had discussed since his previous annual notification [YUN 1999, p. 1346]. The Secretary-General also listed 65 matters that the Council had not discussed since then. On 16 October, the Assembly, by decision 55/405, took note of the Secretary-General's note.

By decision 55/406 of 19 October, the Assembly took note of the Security Council's report for the period 16 June 1999 to 15 June 2000 [A/55/2].

By decision 55/458 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the report of the Security Council remained for consideration during its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Documentation

Working methods and procedures

In February [S/2000/155], the Council President reported that new Council members would, at their request, be invited to observe the Council's informal consultations for one month immediately preceding their term of membership (i.e., with effect from 1 December) to acquaint themselves with the Council's activities. Each delegation should be represented at the level of permanent representative or deputy permanent representative.

In April [S/2000/319], the Council President reported the establishment, on a temporary basis, of an informal working group of the Council to develop general recommendations on how to improve the effectiveness of sanctions. The working group should report its findings to the Council by 30 November 2000.

Membership

The General Assembly continued to examine the question of expanding the Security Council's membership. It considered the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council [A/54/47], established by Assembly resolution 48/26 [YUN 1993, p. 212].

On 5 September, the Assembly, by decision 54/488, took note of the Working Group's report and decided that it should continue its work and report before the end of the Assembly's fifty-fifth session.

In June [A/54/909], Belarus said that an increase in the Council's membership was a pivotal element of reform, and proposed measures and principles it said would facilitate the correction of the current imbalance in regional representation on the Council.

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 55/458, decided that the item on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Council and related matters remained for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council held its organizational session for 2000 on 27 January and 1 and 4 February, a resumed organizational session on 28 February, 9 March, 3, 10 and 12 May and 16 June, and a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund (IMF)) on 18 April, all in New York. The Council held its substantive session from 5 to 28 July and a resumed substantive session on 18 and 30 October and 22 November, also in New York.

On 27 January, the Council elected five members of its bureau for 2000—the President and four Vice-Presidents (see APPENDIX III). It also adopted the agenda of its organizational session [E/2000/2 & Add.1]. On 21 July (decision 2000/225), the Council suspended rule 22 of its rules of procedure and requested Felix Mbayu, Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Cameroon, to preside over the general segment of the Council in lieu of Martin Belinga-Eboutou, Vice-President of the Council, who was unable to preside due to circumstances beyond his control.

On 4 February, the Council adopted the provisional agenda of its substantive session [E/2000/1] (decision 2000/202) and decided on the working arrangements for that session (decision 2000/204).

On 5 July, the Council adopted the agenda of its 2000 substantive session [E/2000/100] and approved the programme of work of the session [E/2000/L.6]; on 7 July, it approved requests by NGOs to be heard [E/2000/82] (decision 2000/223).

(For agenda lists, see APPENDIX IV.)

Sessions and segments

During 2000, the Economic and Social Council adopted 35 resolutions and 117 decisions. By decision 2000/204 of 4 February, the Council decided that the high-level segment of its substantive session should be held from 5 to 7 July; the operational activities segment from 10 to 13 July; the coordination segment from 14 to 18 July;

the humanitarian affairs segment from 19 to 21 July; and the general segment from 21 to 28 July. It decided that 31 July should be devoted to the finalization of all outstanding matters and documents, while the session would conclude on 1 August with the adoption of proposals. By decision 2000/205 of the same date, the Council decided that the high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions should be held on 18 April.

By decision 2000/217 of 3 May, the Council changed the schedule of the substantive session: the coordination segment would take place from 10 to 12 July and the operational activities segment from 13 to 18 July, with the high-level meeting on operational activities taking place on 17 July.

The work of the Council in 2000 was summarized in its report to the General Assembly [A/55/3/Rev.1]. On 4 (decision 55/424), 19 (decision 55/436) and 20 (decisions 55/448 and 55/450) December, the Assembly took note of various chapters of the report.

2000 and 2001 sessions

On 4 February, the Council decided that the theme of the humanitarian affairs segment of the 2000 substantive session should be "Strengthening the coordination of humanitarian response and the role of technology in mitigating the effects of natural disasters and other humanitarian emergencies, including conflicts, with particular reference to the displacement of persons arising therefrom" (decision 2000/206); for the item on regional cooperation, the theme would be "Follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits: exchange of regional experiences" (decision 2000/207).

By decision 2000/303 of 18 October, the Council agreed on the following themes for the 2001 substantive session: the high-level segment would be devoted to "The role of the United Nations system in supporting the efforts of African countries to achieve sustainable development", and the coordination segment would be devoted to "The role of the United Nations in promoting development, particularly with respect to access to and transfer of knowledge and technology, especially information and communication technologies, inter alia, through partnerships with relevant stakeholders, including the private sector".

Work programme

On 4 February, the Economic and Social Council considered its basic programme of work for 2000 and 2001 [E/2000/1]. By decision 2000/203, the Council took note of the list of questions for inclusion in the programme of work for the 2001 substantive session.

Restructuring issues

The Economic and Social Council continued consideration of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/227 [YUN 1996, p. 1249] and 52/12 B [YUN 1997, p. 1392] on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields. It had before it the Secretary-General's reports on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields and cooperation with the Bretton Woods institutions [A/55/180-E/2000/67 & Corr.1]; an informal summary of the special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions [E/2000/79]; and the consolidated report on the work of the Council's functional commissions in 2000 [E/2000/85].

On 24 July, the Council deferred consideration of the matter to its resumed session of 2000.

Coordination, monitoring and cooperation

Institutional mechanisms

ACC activities

During 2000, the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) considered ways to advance the goals and targets of the UN Millennium Declaration (see p. 49), adopted at the Millennium Summit of the General Assembly. In its annual overview report for 2000 [E/2001/55], ACC stated that the effective follow-up to the Declaration should be a key priority for the advocacy, policy development and operational activities of the system as a whole. The system-wide effort should encompass a strengthening and refinement of instruments for the sharing of information and for monitoring and measuring progress.

ACC continued consideration of the UN system response to the challenges of globalization. It recognized that all UN system organizations were actively engaged in addressing different dimensions of globalization and underscored the need to understand better interlinkages among those dimensions and to develop more integrated approaches among system organizations, as well as promote such approaches among Member States and in the international community. ACC also considered the health and social dimensions of globalization, including the role of civil society and bridging the digital divide. ACC agreed to strengthen arrangements for a continuous exchange of information on experiences concerning interaction with civil society and to draw lessons from best practices. It agreed to pursue a wide range of ideas for bridging the digital divide and to update the ACC statement on universal access to basic communication and information services [YUN 1997, p. 566].

ACC also considered inter-agency follow-up to UN conferences and summits and UN response to long-term food security in the Horn of Africa. It endorsed the recommendations of a task force on the scope of the UN response to the challenge of eliminating food insecurity, including a strategy of broadening opportunities for sustainable livelihoods protecting the most needy and creating an enabling environment for reducing food insecurity and poverty.

Preparations for a number of major events of system-wide importance were also reviewed. The issue of staff security and safety remained high on the ACC agenda. It issued a statement [ACC/2000/20] supporting the Secretary-General's proposals for achieving more stable and secure funding of security expenditures and ensuring adequate levels of staff to manage security.

Also discussed were measures for the reform and renewal of ACC's own functioning. As part of those reforms, two new high-level committees (High-level Committee on Programmes and High-level Committee on Management) were established and mandated, in the first instance, to review ACC's subsidiary bodies. It also consolidated different secretariat capacities into a single secretariat, with co-locations in New York and Geneva. In October, the executive heads concluded that a new name for ACC would highlight both its function as a board concerned with fostering the unity of the entire UN system and its capacity of bringing together all its member organizations at the highest executive level. They therefore proposed, subject to the Economic and Social Council's concurrence, to modify its name to "United Nations System's Chief Executives Board (C.E.B.)."

ACC also considered assistance to countries invoking Article 55 of the Charter on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions.

ACC held two regular sessions during the year (Rome, Italy, 6-7 April; New York, 27-28 October). Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows:

Organizational Committee (Rome, 8-10 March, 10 April; New York, 2-4 and 30 October); Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (Personnel and General Administrative Questions), ninety-second (Vienna, 29-31 March) and ninety-third (Geneva, 22-23 June, and New York, 17 July) sessions;

High-level Committee on Management, first session (New York, 11-12 December); Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (Financial and Budgetary Questions), ninety-first session (Montreal, Canada, 28 August-1 September); Consultative Committee on Programme and Operational Questions, sixteenth (Geneva, 29 February-2 March) and seventeenth (New York, 20-22 September) sessions.

Bodies on specific subjects met as follows:

Subcommittee on Oceans and Coastal Areas, eighth (The Hague, Netherlands, 19-21 January) and ninth (London, 26-28 July) sessions; Subcommittee on Nutrition, twenty-seventh session (Washington, D.C., 10-14 April); Inter-Agency Committee on Sustainable Development, fifteenth (New York, 24-25 January) and sixteenth (Geneva, 18-19 September) meetings; Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality, fifth session (New York, 23-25 February); Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on Security (Bonn, Germany, 16-18 May); Subcommittee on Demographic Estimates and Projections, twenty-first session (Geneva, 27-29 June); Joint United Nations Information Committee, twenty-sixth session (Geneva, 11-13 July); Subcommittee on Statistical Activities, thirty-fourth session (Washington, D.C., 20-22 September); Subcommittee on Drug Control, eighth session (Vienna, 28-29 September); Subcommittee on Water Resources, twenty-first session (Bangkok, Thailand, 16-20 October); Information Systems Coordination Committee, eighth session (Geneva, 25-27 October).

Report for 1999

ACC's annual overview report for 1999 [E/2000/53] was considered on 22 June by the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), which concurred with the approach pursued in its preparation. CPC recommended that ACC, while continuing to address the HIV/AIDS epidemic in Africa, should give attention to other geographical regions, particularly Asia, where it also took note of the Secretary-General's initiative. CPC noted the attention ACC continued to give to improving staff security. It emphasized the need for an intergovernmental process to study cooperation between the United Nations and the private sector. It stressed ACC's important role in mobilizing and monitoring economic assistance to States with special economic problems arising out of measures imposed by the Security Council and in supporting efforts of States affected by the developments in the Balkans for their economic recovery, structural adjustment and development.

The Committee recommended that ACC report on progress in the implementation of relevant intergovernmental mandates and that it review elements of its 2000 programme of work as they did not conform with legislative decisions.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2000/291 of 28 July, took note of the ACC report.

Programme coordination

The Committee for Programme and Coordination held an organizational meeting on 2 May and its fortieth session from 5 June to 1 July and from 21 to 29 August, all in New York [A/55/16].

The Committee considered the programme performance of the United Nations for the 1998-1999 biennium and ways in which the full implementation and quality of mandated programmes and activities could be ensured and better assessed by and reported to Member States; the proposed medium-term plan for 2002-2005; an outline of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003; evaluation; coordination questions, including ACC's annual report for 1999 (see above), the UN System-wide Special Initiative for the Implementation of the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s (see p. 877), and the advancement of the women's programme (see p. 1123); a Joint Inspection Unit report entitled "Private sector involvement and cooperation with the United Nations system"; improving the working methods and procedures of the Committee; the provisional agenda for the forty-first session; and adoption of the report on its fortieth session.

By decision 2000/292 of 28 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of CPC's report on the first part of its fortieth session.

Joint Inspection Unit

The Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) submitted its thirty-first report to the General Assembly covering 1 January to 31 December 1999 [A/55/34]. The report examined measures to further JIU's functioning and impact, relations and cooperation with participating organizations and other oversight bodies and follow-up on its reports and recommendations. Within the context of enhancing the functioning and impact of the Unit, the report noted that improvement in the handling of its reports by participating organizations was important. The Unit considered that serious consideration should be given in the future to providing it with adequate resources so as to allow it better to discharge its mandate. To remain relevant to its participating organizations, JIU recognized the need for keeping abreast of developments in their governing bodies, while gaining a better knowledge of the functioning of their secretariats. The Unit wanted to ensure that it was not perceived as a foreign mechanism. Its statutory role would therefore need to be stressed more forcefully. In that regard, it had embarked on a series of meetings with the secretariats of its participating organizations, which had proved useful in showing JIU's commitment to a mutually fruitful dialogue and to ensuring a better understanding and appreciation of its relevance.

The Unit intended to have in place as soon as possible a tracking system as part of the follow-up system approved by the General Assembly in resolution 54/16 [YUN 1999, p. 1277] and to include in its annual reports on a system-wide basis the status of approved recommendations that had not been implemented. Information compiled for reports produced during 1994-1999 showed that, although the majority of participating organizations submitted JIU reports regularly or fairly frequently to their legislative bodies, they were often taken up one to three years after their publication and there had not been many instances of those bodies making specific decisions on the recommendations contained in the reports. JIU stressed that it was vital for legislative organs of participating organizations to take specific action on each of the relevant recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 April [meeting 95], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/54/511/Add.2], adopted resolution 54/255 without vote [agenda item 118].

Reports of the Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/66 of 16 December 1999 on the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Review of the Administrative Committee on Coordination and its machinery",

Having considered the report of the Unit and the note by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments and those of the Administrative Committee on Coordination thereon,

Having considered also the report of the Unit entitled "The United Nations system common services at Geneva, part I, Overview of administrative cooperation and coordination" and the note by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments and those of the Administrative Committee on Coordination thereon, as well as the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of common services in the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Review of the Administrative Committee on Coordination and its machinery" and the comments of the Secretary-General and the Administrative Committee on Coordination thereon contained in the note by the Secretary-General, with the exception of paragraph 42;

2. Endorses the recommendations of the Unit contained in its report entitled "The United Nations system common services at Geneva, part I, Overview of administrative cooperation and coordination" and the comments of the Secretary-General and the Administrative Committee on Coordination thereon;

3. Stresses that pursuit of common services at Geneva should be one of many tools available to organizations and managers to obtain goods and services in the most efficient and effective manner;

4. Invites the Unit to continue to examine common services at other duty stations where the United Nations system offices and agencies are established, where feasible, and to report thereon to the General Assembly;

5. Stresses the importance for the Unit of using the most recent data available in its reports and, in this regard, calls upon the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations system to provide timely data to the Unit;

6. Calls upon the Secretary-General, in coordination with the Unit, to ensure the timely issuance of the reports of the Unit and the related comments of the Secretary-General and the Administrative Committee on Coordination, in order to enable the General Assembly and all the governing bodies to take prompt action thereon;

7. Encourages the Secretary-General and the Administrative Committee on Coordination to take concrete steps to enhance common services, and invites legislative organs of other organizations to take similar action on the basis of the present resolution;

8. Requests the Unit to continue to improve its reports consistent with the requirements of its follow-up system approved by the General Assembly in resolution 54/16 of 29 October 1999, in particular the provisions of paragraph 4 of annex I to its annual report for the period from 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the measures taken in connection with paragraph 7 above.

Other coordination matters

Follow-up to international conferences

The Economic and Social Council, at its coordination segment in July, discussed the coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies and other bodies of the UN system related to the assessment of the progress made within the UN system, through the conference reviews, in the promotion of an integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to major UN conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields.

The Council had before it a May report of the Secretary-General [E/2000/57], which assessed the progress made. It examined lessons learned from the five-year conference reviews and proposed ways to further improve those reviews in the light of the upcoming 10-year reviews. It also discussed progress in developing an integrated approach to conference implementation and ways to deepen UN system collaborative efforts in achieving common conference goals.

The report stated that the modalities and scope of the five-year reviews varied considerably. Their coverage was too wide-ranging, allowing insufficient time for functional commissions and preparatory committees to negotiate the draft outcomes. There was a temptation in some reviews to reopen agreed issues and, in a number of areas, the five-year span proved too short for adequate assessment. However, they did identify a number of issues to be addressed, such as the problem of resources and the HIV/AIDS epidemic, the need for collective action to offset globalization's negative social and economic consequences, the increasing inequality within and between countries, the importance of rehabilitating the public sector and the impact of conflicts and crises on social development.

The five-year reviews also addressed common themes and overarching conference goals, new challenges posed by globalization and HIV/AIDS, information technology and armed conflicts. According to the report, they did not build on each other, and their outcomes often repeated one another and were contradictory in approaches. In addition, guidance developed by the Council since 1995 on many cross-cutting themes had not always been fed into the reviews.

In terms of progress in developing an integrated approach to conference implementation, the five-year reviews showed that there continued to be strong political will towards that effort. However, much remained to be done to bring about real integration among policies and programmes, at the national level and in international development cooperation. Greater effort was needed to translate the integrated approach into effective action plans and strategies to implement conference outcomes. The reviews did not give very clear indications as to the extent to which Governments had developed "cross-sectoral" strategies. National strategies focused by and large on individual conferences and on such overarching goals as gender, poverty, the environment, health and education. Overall, the main challenges to integrated conference implementation continued to be the need to effectively incorporate economic, social and environmental concerns in the design of policies nationally and internationally, and to foster an enabling environment for development at national and international levels, particularly ensuring greater consistency among macroeconomic, trade, aid, financial, social and environmental policies, so that all supported agreed development goals.

On 27 July, the Council, in agreed conclusions 2000/2, noted that major UN conferences and summits of the 1990s had contributed towards the development of an integrated framework and a global partnership for development. It noted the progress made by the UN system to support an integrated and coordinated follow-up to major UN conferences and summits and encouraged the system to further strengthen its efforts in that regard. The Council was committed to ensuring that the upcoming reviews were effectively coordinated and would lead to substantial progress in the implementation of their goals, building on lessons learned and taking into account the outcome of earlier reviews.

The Council was of the view that a number of options, including those proposed by the Secretary-General, could be considered for ensuring an effective and comprehensive review and invited the relevant functional commissions to consider them and other possible options and to inform the Council in 2001 of the outcome of their discussion. It asked the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report on the different options, including the views of the functional commissions, which, with other intergovernmental bodies, should identify the agenda and scope of the reviews for which they had primary responsibility. The reviews should ascertain lessons learned, constraints encountered and ways of overcoming them and the impact of new developments and challenges. The outcome document should be action-oriented and concise. The regional commissions should also be involved in the reviews. The Council reiterated the importance of relevant, accurate and timely statistics and indicators for evaluating the implementation of outcomes. UN system organizations should limit the information requested from Governments and prepare harmonized and simplified formats for use by Governments in preparing information on a single subject or cluster of subjects. The governing bodies of specialized agencies and organizations should be extensively involved in the review processes and ACC should bring to the attention of the Council coordination issues and common challenges to conference follow-up. ACC and its subsidiary bodies should also continue to broaden the task-manager approach in promoting integrated and coordinated follow-up to major UN conferences and summits, including reporting on cross-cutting themes. Ways should be examined for improving the participation of civil society in the review process. The Council encouraged further progress to integrate conference outcome implementation into country assistance programmes. National reports on conference follow-up should be used in determining programmes in countries. The Council encouraged the building of partnerships and networks in pursuit of conference goals, called on Governments to mobilize resources for implementing conference and summit goals and urged donor countries to strive to fulfil the agreed target of 0.7 per cent of their gross national product for overall official development assistance.

The Council, on 27 (decision 2000/234) and 28 (decision 2000/290) July, took note of the Secretary-General's report on the progress made in implementation of and follow-up to major UN conferences.

Conference indicators

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/55 [YUN 1999, p. 1353], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2000/60] on progress made on basic indicators for the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to major UN conferences and summits at all levels. It provided details of progress achieved in networking and exchange of relevant information and metadata; further development of indicators as a means of implementation; harmonization and rationalization of conference indicators; identification of commonly used indicators and mobilization of resources to support national statistical capacity-building in developing countries; and coordination of statistical capacity-building programmes.

According to the report, the UN Statistics Division played an active role in promoting networking among relevant institutions with regard to statistics and basic indicators. At its thirty-first session (see p. 1200), the Statistical Commission agreed to the programme of activities for the newly created Statistical Development and Analysis Section of the Division to follow up on resolution 1999/55, work with other organizations in harmonizing common indicators and analyse the statistical requirements created by the monitoring needs of recent international conferences and summits. The ACC Subcommittee on Statistical Activities and the Division established an indicator web page, which would contain metadata on all conference indicators of international organizations and would constitute an analytical tool for identifying overlap, inconsistencies and gaps. Methodological work had been initiated in the development of standards for measuring such issues as poverty and the informal sector, highlighted by conferences and summits. Also, IMF, with the support of the Statistics Division, had initiated work on data quality. Regarding the identification of a limited number of commonly used indicators, work on the various existing indicator lists had progressed and there was a tendency towards convergence. The common country assessment (CCA) indicator framework, developed by the United Nations Development Group as the most recent and comprehensive indicator framework following UN conferences and summits, was currently working in over 100 countries and would produce practical experience at the country level on the validity of the indicator list and help address some of the concerns voiced by countries. It was intended to feed back those country experiences into future review processes of the CCA indicator framework to design an indicator list that was useful and implementable.

Regarding statistical capacity-building, the report noted the creation of the PARIS21 initiative—the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the Twenty-first Century—which shared global knowledge and best practices and encouraged South-South cooperation in statistical capacity-building. The UN Secretariat, UN funding and specialized agencies and the Bretton Woods institutions had been active in a number of initiatives to support statistical capacity-building. However, the resources engaged for statistical capacity-building were still insufficient to face the problems of data gaps and data quality.

In conclusion, the Secretary-General stated that, although it would take some time for resolution 1999/55 to be fully implemented, some encouraging signs had emerged. There was widespread acceptance among international agencies of the need for better coordination, existing frameworks were being reviewed and there was a trend towards greater harmonization. The United Nations Development Assistance Framework-CCA indicator framework provided a unique basis for moving towards a core indicator set, as it was based on the outcome of all UN conferences and summits. However, it still had to be re-examined and validated in cooperation with national Governments and specialized agencies. Although international efforts to achieve better coordination would alleviate some of the problems related to basic indicators, the most pressing issue remained the lack of a sufficient development information infrastructure, and building national statistical capacity was the only way to address that problem in the long run.

By decision 2000/290 of 28 July, the Council took note of the Secretary-General's report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2000/27 [draft: E/2000/L.30] without vote [agenda item 6].

Basic indicators for the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits at all levels

*The Economic and Social Council,
Recalling its decision 1998/290 of 31 July 1998 on basic indicators for the integrated and coordinated im-* plementation of and follow-up to the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields and section II of its resolution 1999/55 of 30 July 1999 on integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on progress on basic indicators for the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits at all levels;

2. Reaffirms the important role that the functional commissions play in the integrated and coordinated follow-up to and evaluation of the implementation of the outcome of major United Nations conferences and summits;

3. Also reaffirms the recommendations contained in section II of its resolution 1999/55 and the importance of national efforts to build statistical capacity in all countries, including through statistical training, and of effective international support in this context for developing countries;

4. Urges countries, the United Nations funds and programmes, the Secretariat, bilateral funding agencies, the Bretton Woods institutions and regional funding agencies to work closely together to implement these recommendations and to mobilize the required resources and coordinate their efforts to support national statistical capacity-building in developing countries, in particular in least developed countries;

5. Emphasizes that the indicators used by the Secretariat in the context of the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits should be developed with the full participation of all countries and approved by the relevant intergovernmental bodies;

6. Calls upon the United Nations funds and programmes, functional and regional commissions and specialized agencies to keep under review the full range of indicators used in their reports and information networks with full participation and ownership of Member States, with a view to avoiding duplication, as well as ensuring the transparency, consistency and reliability of these indicators;

7. Requests the executive boards of the United Nations funds and programmes, with the support of the Statistics Division of the Secretariat, to review as a matter of urgency the common country assessment indicator frameworks and report thereon to the Council at its substantive session of 2001;

8. Invites the Statistical Commission to serve as the intergovernmental focal point for the review of the indicators used by the United Nations system for the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits at all levels, and the methodologies employed in formulating them, including in the context of the elaboration of the common country assessment, and to make recommendations with a view to facilitating future consideration by the Council;

9. Reiterates its invitation to the Statistical Commission, with the assistance of the Statistics Division of the Secretariat and in close cooperation with other relevant bodies of the United Nations system, including the Administrative Committee on Coordination, and, as appropriate, other relevant international organizations, to review, with a view to facilitating future consideration by the Council, the work undertaken in harmonizing and rationalizing basic indicators in the context of the follow-up to United Nations conferences and summits, taking fully into account the decisions taken in other functional and regional commissions and, in that process, to identify a limited number of common indicators from among those currently accepted and widely used by the States Members of the United Nations, in order to lessen the data provision burden on Member States, bearing in mind the work done so far in this area;

10. Stresses the need further to develop indicators on means of implementation to evaluate progress towards conference goals in creating an enabling environment for development;

11. Urges the Secretariat, in particular the Statistics Division, to accelerate, with the support of the Subcommittee on Statistical Activities of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, the promotion of networking among national and international institutions in the area of statistics and in the development and application of indicators agreed to in the relevant intergovernmental bodies relating to the follow-up to the United Nations conferences and summits, in the context of its role as the focal point in the United Nations system in this regard, as well as to facilitate the exchange of relevant information and metadata between the United Nations system and Member States;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a progress report on the implementation of section II of resolution 1999/55 and the present resolution, for consideration by the Council at its substantive session of 2002.

The UN and other organizations

---

Cooperation with organizations

Economic Cooperation Organization

In a July report [A/55/122], the Secretary-General described cooperation between the Economic Cooperation Organization and various UN bodies during 1999 and 2000. The Assembly took action on the report in resolution 55/42 (see p. 941).

Council of Europe

In July [A/55/191], Italy requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-fifth session of a supplementary item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe". Annexed to the letter was an explanatory memorandum, describing the Council's mandate, structure and membership, as well as the background and legal basis for its cooperation with the United Nations and current cooperation arrangements. The memorandum said that the Council was in a position to make a substantial contribution to the United Nations in meeting an increasing number of challenges.

The Assembly took action on the question of cooperation with the Council of Europe in resolution 55/3 (see p. 410).

Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee

An August report of the Secretary-General [A/55/221] outlined the various activities of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee in support of the work of the United Nations (see p. 1273).

The Assembly, in resolution 55/4, took action on that report.

Organization of the Islamic Conference

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/7 [YUN 1999, p. 1358], the Secretary-General submitted a September report on cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference [A/55/368]. The two organizations continued consultations on political matters, especially ongoing peacemaking efforts, which had become an important dimension in their cooperation. A Vienna meeting of their secretariats from 11 to 13 July covered a number of topics, including the development of science and technology, trade and development, assistance to refugees, food security and agriculture, and investment mechanisms and joint ventures. They also considered proposals to enhance cooperation between them.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 October [meeting 44], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/9 [draft: A/55/L.17] without vote [agenda item 24].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/4 of 22 October 1982, 38/4 of 28 October 1983, 39/7 of 8 November 1984, 40/4 of 25 October 1985, 41/3 of 16 October 1986, 42/4 of 15 October 1987, 43/2 of 17 October 1988, 44/8 of 18 October 1989, 45/9 of 25 October 1990, 46/13 of 28 October 1991, 47/18 of 23 November 1992, 48/24 of 24 November 1993, 49/15 of 15 November 1994, 50/17 of 20 November 1995, 51/18 of 14 November 1996, 52/4 of 22 October 1997, 53/16 of 29 October 1998 and 54/7 of 25 October 1999,

Recalling also its resolution 3369(XXX) of 10 October 1975, by which it decided to invite the Organization of the Islamic Conference to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly and of its subsidiary organs in the capacity of observer,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference,

Taking into account the desire of both organizations to continue to cooperate closely in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural and technical fields and in their common search for solutions to global problems, such as questions relating to international peace and security, disarmament, self-determination, decolonization, fundamental human rights and economic and technical development,

Recalling the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage the activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Noting the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations, its funds and programmes and specialized agencies and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, its subsidiary organs and its specialized and affiliated institutions,

Noting also the encouraging progress made in the ten priority areas of cooperation between the two organizations, as well as in the identification of other areas of cooperation between them,

Convinced that the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its organs and institutions contributes to the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Welcoming the results of the general meeting of the organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions, held in Vienna from 11 to 13 July 2000,

Noting with appreciation the determination of both organizations to strengthen further the existing cooperation by developing specific proposals in the designated priority areas of cooperation, as well as in the political field,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Takes note of the conclusions and recommendations adopted by the organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions;

3. Notes with satisfaction the active participation of the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the work of the United Nations towards the realization of the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Requests the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference to continue to cooperate in their common search for solutions to global problems, such as questions relating to international peace and security, disarmament, self-determination, decolonization, fundamental human rights, social and economic development and technical cooperation;

5. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference to continue to strengthen cooperation between the two organizations in areas of common concern and to review the ways and means for enhancing the actual mechanisms of such cooperation;

6. Welcomes with appreciation the continuing cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the field of peacemaking and preventive diplomacy, and takes note of the close cooperation between the two organizations in continuing the search for a peaceful and lasting solution to the conflict in Afghanistan;

7. Welcomes the efforts of the secretariats of the two organizations to strengthen information exchange, coordination and cooperation between them in areas of mutual interest in the political field and their ongoing consultations with a view to developing the modalities of such cooperation;

8. Also welcomes the periodic high-level meetings between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, as well as between senior secretariat officials of the two organizations, and encourages their participation in important meetings of the two organizations;

9. Encourages the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to expand their cooperation with the subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, particularly by negotiating cooperation agreements, and invites them to multiply the contacts and meetings of the focal points for cooperation in priority areas of interest to the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference;

10. Urges the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system, especially the lead agencies, to provide increased technical and other forms of assistance to the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions in order to enhance cooperation;

11. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his continued efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions to serve the mutual interests of the two organizations in the political, economic, social and cultural fields;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the state of cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference".

League of Arab States

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/9 [YUN 1999, p. 1355], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/55/401] on cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States (LAS). The report summarized follow-up action on proposals agreed to at meetings between organizations of the UN system and LAS. A sectoral meeting on youth and employment between the United Nations and LAS was held in Beirut, Lebanon, from 23 to 25 May. A number of working papers were discussed and recommendations made for future action. Informal consultations were held on cooperation between the political affairs departments of the two organizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 October [meeting 44], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/10 [draft: A/55/L.18 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 25].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States,

Recalling article 3 of the Pact of the League of Arab States, which entrusts the Council of the League with the function of determining the means whereby the League will collaborate with the international organizations which may be created in the future to guarantee peace and security and organize economic and social relations,

Noting the desire of both organizations to consolidate, develop and enhance further the ties existing between them in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural, technical and administrative fields,

Taking into account the report of the Secretary-General entitled "An Agenda for Peace", in particular section VII, concerning cooperation with regional arrangements and organizations, and the "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace",

Convinced of the need for more efficient and coordinated utilization of available economic and financial resources in order to promote the common objectives of the two organizations,

Acknowledging the need for closer cooperation between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in achieving the goals and objectives of the two organizations,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Commends the continued efforts of the League of Arab States to promote multilateral cooperation among Arab States, and requests the United Nations system to continue to lend its support;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the follow-up action taken by him to implement the proposals adopted at the meetings between the representatives of the secretariats of the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, including the sectoral meeting on youth and employment held in Beirut from 23 to 25 May 2000;

4. Requests the Secretariat of the United Nations and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States, within their respective fields of competence, to intensify further their cooperation for the realization of the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations, the strengthening of international peace and security, economic and social development, disarmament, decolonization, self-determination and the eradication of all forms of racism and racial discrimination;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and other organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in order to enhance their capacity to serve the mutual interests and objectives of the two organizations in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural and administrative fields;

6. Calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system:

(a) To continue to cooperate with the Secretary-General and among themselves, as well as with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, in the follow-up of multilateral proposals aimed at strengthening and expanding cooperation in all fields between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations;

(b) To strengthen the capacity of the League of Arab States and of its institutions and specialized organizations to benefit from globalization and information technology and to meet the development challenges of the new millennium;

(c) To step up cooperation and coordination with the specialized organizations of the League of Arab States in the organization of seminars and training courses and in the preparation of studies;

(d) To maintain and increase contacts and improve the mechanism of consultation with the counterpart programmes, organizations and agencies concerned regarding projects and programmes in order to facilitate their implementation;

(e) To participate whenever possible with organizations and institutions of the League of Arab States in the execution and implementation of development projects in the Arab region;

(f) To inform the Secretary-General, not later than 30 June 2001, of the progress made in their cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations and, in particular, of the follow-up action taken on the multilateral and bilateral proposals adopted at the previous meetings between the two organizations;

7. Also calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to increase their cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in the priority sectors of energy, rural development, desertification and green belts, training and vocational education, technology, environment and information and documentation;

8. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations, in cooperation with the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States, to encourage periodic consultation between representatives of the Secretariat of the United Nations and of the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States in order to review and strengthen coordination mechanisms with a view to accelerating implementation of, and follow-up action on, the multilateral projects, proposals and recommendations adopted at the meetings between the two organizations;

9. Recommends that the United Nations and all organizations of the United Nations system make the greatest possible use of Arab institutions and technical expertise in projects undertaken in the Arab region;

10. Reaffirms that, in order to enhance cooperation and for the purpose of review and appraisal of progress, a general meeting between representatives of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States should be held once every two years and that joint inter-agency sectoral meetings should also be convened on a biennial basis to address priority areas of major importance to the development of the Arab States, on the basis of agreement between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations;

11. Also reaffirms the importance of holding the next general meeting on cooperation between the representatives of the secretariats of organizations of the United Nations system and of the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations during 2001;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States".

Organization of American States

In July [A/55/184], the Secretary-General reported on cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of American States (see p. 258).

The General Assembly took action on that report in resolution 55/15.

Caribbean Community

The Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/55/215] on cooperation between the United Nations and the Caribbean Community (see p. 259).

The General Assembly took action on that report in resolution 55/17.

Inter-Parliamentary Union

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/12 [YUN 1999, p. 1357], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/55/409] describing the action taken by the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) to secure parliamentary input to major UN events, as well as the parliamentary action, coordinated by IPU, to support or complement UN work in peace and security, economic and social development, international law and human rights, democracy, governance and gender issues. The report also highlighted the variety and scope of the cooperation between the two organizations, demonstrating the potential for a greater contribution by national parliaments, through IPU, to UN work and to disseminating an understanding of that work and ensuring the requisite follow-up. IPU held its first meeting of Presiding Officers of National Parliaments in New York from 30 August to 1 September as a prelude to the Millennium Summit. In its final declaration, which was submitted to the Summit, the Conference confirmed the need for increasing parliamentary contribution to the work of the UN system (see p. 65).

Working relations between the UN Secretariat and that of IPU had been strengthened, and several practical arrangements had been institutionalized in the course of the year to improve information sharing, logistical support and policy coordination. Reciprocal access to documentation and meeting information was facilitated. The UN Department of Public Information worked closely with the IPU secretariat to issue press releases and other products to promote joint initiatives between the two organizations. The Secretary-General expressed the hope that the increasingly close and productive relationship between them might soon be recognized through a new, strengthened and formalized relationship between IPU and the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 November [meeting 55], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/19 [draft: A/55/L.20 & Add.1, as orally revised] without vote [agenda item 26].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/12 of 27 October 1999, in which it expressed the wish that the cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union be strengthened further,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General, which takes stock of such cooperation over the last twelve months,

Noting with appreciation the resolutions adopted by the Inter-Parliamentary Union and its activities during the past year in support of the United Nations, as well as the recommendation contained in the aforementioned report that the increasingly close and productive relationship between the two organizations be recognized through a new and formalized relationship between the Inter-Parliamentary Union and the General Assembly,

Welcoming the Conference of Presiding Officers of National Parliaments which was held at United Nations Headquarters from 30 August to 1 September 2000 and which concluded with the unanimous adoption of the Declaration entitled "The Parliamentary vision for international cooperation at the dawn of the third millennium",

Recalling with satisfaction the United Nations Millennium Declaration in which Member States resolved to strengthen further cooperation between the United Nations and national parliaments through their world organization, the Inter-Parliamentary Union, in various fields, including peace and security, economic and social development, international law and human rights and democracy and gender issues,

Recalling the unique inter-State character of the Inter-Parliamentary Union,

1. Welcomes the efforts made by the Inter-Parliamentary Union to provide for a greater parliamentary contribution and enhanced support to the United Nations, and calls for the cooperation between the two organizations to be consolidated further;

2. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with Member States and with the Inter-Parliamentary Union, to explore ways in which a new and strengthened relationship may be established between the Inter-Parliamentary Union, the General Assembly and its subsidiary organs, and to report thereon to the Assembly by May 2001;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the various aspects of cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union".

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 55/458, decided that the item on cooperation between the United Nations and IPU would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Economic Community of Central African States

In September [A/55/233], Equatorial Guinea requested the inclusion of an additional item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Economic Community of Central African States" in the agenda of the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly. An explanatory memorandum annexed to the letter detailed the activities of the organization (see p. 232). The Assembly, in resolution 55/22, requested the Secretary-General to establish cooperation between the two organizations.

Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe

The Secretary-General submitted a report on cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe [A/55/98] (see p. 407). The General Assembly, by resolution 55/179, took action on the report.

Organization of African Unity

The Secretary-General submitted a report [A/55/498] on activities undertaken in various areas to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity (see p. 230).

The General Assembly took action on the report in resolution 55/218.

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization

On 20 December [meeting 87], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/55/587], adopted resolution 55/211 without vote [agenda item 100].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/5 of 8 October 1999, by which it granted observer status to the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization,

Recalling also that one of the purposes of the United Nations is to achieve international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social or humanitarian nature,

Recalling further the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind that the Charter signed at the summit meeting at Yalta, Ukraine, on 5 June 1998, which transformed the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization into a regional economic organization with a legal identity on the international scene, and the Istanbul Summit Declaration, adopted on 17 November 1999 by the heads of State or Government of the States members of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization, confirmed the commitment of the Organization to the promotion of effective economic, social and democratic reforms in the region by application of the pragmatic concept that economic cooperation is an effective confidence-building measure,

Convinced that the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization contributes to the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the Istanbul Summit Declaration adopted on 17 November 1999 by the heads of State or Government of the States members of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization and of the desirability expressed therein of strengthening cooperation between the United Nations Secretariat and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization;

2. Invites the Secretary-General of the United Nations to undertake consultations with the Secretary-General of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization, with a view to promoting cooperation and coordination between the two Secretariats;

3. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to cooperate with the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization in order to initiate consultations and programmes with that Organization and its associated institutions for the attainment of their objectives;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh session an item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization".

Observer status

Inter-American Development Bank

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/616], adopted resolution 55/160 without vote [agenda item 171].

Observer status for the Inter-American Development Bank in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-American Development Bank,

1. Decides to invite the Inter-American Development Bank to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

Economic Community of Central African States

On 12 December [meeting 84], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/55/648], adopted resolution 55/161 without vote [agenda item 184].

Observer status for the Economic Community of Central African States in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Economic Community of Central African States,

1. Decides to invite the Economic Community of Central African States to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance

On 14 August [A/55/226], Sweden requested the inclusion of an item entitled "Observer status for the International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance in the General Assembly". In an explanatory memorandum, it stated that the objective of the Institute was to promote and advance sustainable democracy worldwide. An important feature of its democratization assistance was its partnership with other international organizations, including UNDP. It believed that increased cooperation with the United Nations in democracy and conflict management, the relationship between democratization, sustainable development and poverty eradication, democracy as a human right and capacity-building would be crucial. The Institute therefore considered it desirable to consolidate and strengthen links with the United Nations and that observer status in the General Assembly would be mutually beneficial.

By decision 55/429 of 12 December, the Assembly deferred a decision on the request for observer status for the Institute until its fifty-sixth (2001) session.

Participation of organizations in UN work

Intergovernmental organizations

On 3 May, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2000/213, having considered the applications of the Asian and Pacific Development Centre and the Inter-American Development Bank, decided that the organizations might participate on a continuing basis, without the right to vote, in the deliberations of the Council on questions within the scope of their activities.

Private sector cooperation with UN system

A January note by the Secretary-General transmitted a report of JIU on private sector involvement and cooperation with the UN system [A/54/700]. The report analysed the lines along which a new partnership between the UN system and the private sector could be developed and how areas of mutual interests and benefits could translate into actions to better serve the goals of the Organization as a whole. The report noted that the private sector was already actively engaged in many UN activities, based on the recognition by the business community of the UN's contribution to the establishment of a favourable environment for private sector activities and a thorough understanding and acceptance by all UN Member States of the private sector as a partner in supporting economic growth and sustainable development. However, the objectives and nature of the partnership needed to be further clarified. The report also described how UN agencies, funds and programmes were trying to maximize the benefits to be drawn from private sector engagement, while protecting themselves from the risks inherent in it. Those precautions were not uniform throughout the system and the inconsistencies in their nature and how they were applied could undermine the image, credibility, integrity and legal immunity of the UN system.

JIU recommended that UN system organizations should set realistic objectives and expectations for their private sector partnership; carry out programmes targeting the private sector; each designate a focal point or easily accessible units to serve and assist the business community; ensure a UN presence at relevant business events; and encourage private sector participation in their relevant activities. The working group established by the Secretary-General's Senior Management Group should draft guidelines on relations with the private sector. Taking into consideration the working group's deliberations, UN agencies that had not done so should adopt guidelines, which should include a statement of principles and procedures for dealing with the private sector. The United Nations should ensure the implementation of Staff Rule 101.6, including the feasibility of extending rules for financial disclosures. Other participating organizations should examine whether their respective staff rules and regulations were sufficient to guarantee that staff did not hold financial interest in commercial enterprises with which a partnership was envisaged. Participating organizations should ensure that bureaucratic procedures and lengthy response time did not discourage initiatives from the private sector, and mechanisms for sharing information and best practices should be established, using the ACC structure, to ensure consistency of policy and harmonization of procedures throughout the UN system.

In June [A/54/700/Add.1], ACC submitted its comments on the JIU report, endorsing the general thrust of JIU's recommendations.

Non-governmental organizations

Committee on NGOs

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations, at its resumed 1999 session (New York, 17-28 January 2000) [E/1999/109/Add.2 (Part I & Corr.1 & Part II)], considered new applications for consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, including applications deferred from its 1998 and 1999 regular sessions, as well as requests for reclassification. It recommended 62 organizations for consultative status, 11 for reclassification and one to maintain its current status. The Committee took note of 43 quadrennial reports covering the periods 1994-1997 and 1995-1998, with two reservations. It recommended three draft decisions for action by the Council.

The Committee also considered implementation of Council decision 1996/302 [YUN 1996, p. 1368] on NGOs on the Roster, reviewed its working methods as they related to implementation of Council resolution 1996/31 [ibid., p. 1360], including the process of accreditation of NGO representatives, and Council decision 1995/304 [YUN 1995, p. 1445] on arrangements for consultation with NGOs.

On 3 May (decision 2000/216), the Council noted the Committee's report on its resumed 1999 session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its 2000 session. On the same date (decision 2000/214), the Council granted general consultative status to two NGOs and special consultative status to 61 NGOs. It reclassified six organizations from special to general consultative status and five organizations from the Roster to special consultative status. The Council noted that the Committee did not recommend granting consultative status to three organizations and that it had closed its consideration of the application of the International Committee of Peace and Human Rights. Also on 3 May (decision 2000/215), the Council approved the request of 15 NGOs on the Roster for the purposes of the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development to expand their participation into other fields of the Council's work.

At its 2000 session (New York, 15-19 May and 12-23 June) [E/2000/88 (Part I & Part II & Corr.1)], the Committee recommended 37 organizations for consultative status, deferred consideration of 72 applications and recommended that one organization be reclassified from special to general consultative status. It adopted four draft decisions for action by the Council. The Committee also decided to suspend the consultative status of two organizations—the International Council of the Associations for Peace in the Continents (ASO-PAZCO) and the Transnational Radical Party—for three years each.

The Committee resumed consideration of the items it had discussed at its 1999 resumed session (see above). Concerning its working methods, the Committee noted that several of the mechanisms put in place did not function as smoothly as anticipated. In view of the various incidents reported involving abuses of the accreditation procedure, the Committee emphasized the importance of the Secretariat continuing to hold training sessions to better inform NGOs about accreditation procedures and the principles of consultative status set out in resolution 1996/31. The Secretariat should distribute guidelines and other informative materials related to the work of the Council and its subsidiary bodies, including rules for NGOs to follow, and organizations should limit the number of representatives they accredited to meetings. On the issue of national clearance, clarification was sought regarding cases of national NGOs registered in one country yet active in another, raising the question as to whether nationality would apply to the country of registration or to the one in which it aimed its work. The Committee, noting that current procedure left the determination of its classification to the organization itself, agreed on the necessity of establishing an objective definition to distinguish between national and international organizations. It also decided that, since not all NGO representatives could afford the financial expenses of an extended stay in New York, it would consider hearing those representatives with the longest distance to travel at the beginning of each session.

The Committee approved the provisional agenda of its 2001 session.

On 20 (decision 2000/224 A) and 25 (decision 2000/224 B) July, the Council authorized the Committee to hold a resumed 2000 session for a half day on 21 and 27 July, respectively, to consider replies from those NGOs whose consultative status was recommended for suspension.

The Committee, at its resumed 2000 session (21 and 27 July) [E/2000/88 (Part I/Add.1 & Part II/Add.1)], considered a submission from ASO-PAZCO but was unable to reach a consensus that the response provided enough grounds for the Committee to reconsider its earlier decision. By a roll-call vote of 9 against, 4 in favour and 2 abstentions, a motion to reconsider the Committee's proposal to the Council to suspend ASO-PAZCO's consultative status was defeated. In the case of the Transnational Radical Party, the Committee invited it to submit a comprehensive response by 16 September and recommended that the Council authorize it to hold a 2000 resumed session during the week of 25 September to consider that response. The Committee recommended a draft decision to the Council for adoption.

On 28 July (decision 2000/294), the Council decided to take action on 18 October on the four draft decisions contained in the report of the Committee on the first and second parts of its 2000 session, on the understanding that no other meeting requiring the attendance of the experts dealing with NGOs, in particular those experts from the General Assembly's Third Committee, would be convened on the same date. It also decided, pending a decision to be taken at its resumed substantive session, that the privileges enjoyed by ASO-PAZCO should be temporarily suspended.

On the same date (decision 2000/295), the Council approved the Committee's request to meet for one day during the week of 25 to 29 September to consider the Transnational Radical Party's response. At that meeting, held on 27 September [E/2000/88 (Part II/Add.2)], the Committee, having considered the comprehensive response provided by the Transnational Radical Party, rejected by a roll-call vote (12-5-2) the proposal to reconsider its earlier recommendation to the Council to suspend the organization's consultative status.

On 18 October (decision 2000/307), the Council suspended for three years the special consultative status of ASOPAZCO as of 28 July. On the same date (decision 2000/306), it granted special consultative status to 34 NGOs and Roster status to three NGOs. It reclassified one organization from special to general consultative status and decided not to grant consultative status to five organizations and to close consideration of the application of the Council for the Defence of Human Rights and Freedom. It requested the Hague Appeal for Peace and Dominicans for Justice and Peace to resubmit their applications when they would have fulfilled the mandatory qualifying period (two years), as well as Safari Club International, which should reapply under the name Safari Club International Foundation.

Also on the same date, the Council authorized the Committee to hold a resumed session from 15 to 26 January 2001 to complete the work of its 2000 session (decision 2000/308), and took note of the Committee's report on the first and second parts of its 2000 session and approved the provisional agenda for the 2001 session (decision 2000/309).

Requests for hearing

On 23 June, the Committee on NGOs heard requests from NGOs in consultative status to address the Economic and Social Council in connection with items on its agenda [E/2000/82]. The Committee recommended that certain specified NGOs should be heard, on behalf of other specified organizations, during the Council's high-level segment.

Participation of NGOs not in consultative status

By decision 2000/310 of 18 October, the Economic and Social Council, as an interim measure, invited those NGOs accredited to the twenty-third and/or the twenty-fourth special sessions of the General Assembly to attend the forty-fifth (2001) session of the Commission on the Status of Women and the thirty-ninth (2001) session of the Commission for Social Development, provided they had started the process of applying for consultative status in accordance with Council resolution 1996/31 [YUN 1996, p. 1360].

Strengthening the Secretariat's NGO Section

In May [A/54/520/Add.1], the Secretary-General submitted a report outlining the human resources requirements of the Secretariat's NGO Section, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 54/249 [YUN 1999, p. 1289]. The Secretary-General stated that those resources funded by the regular budget included five Professional and four General Service posts, and were supplemented by the service of volunteers equivalent to some 60 work-months annually (20 at the Professional and 40 at the General Service level). An annual increase of the current staff resources by 12 work-months at both the Professional and General Service levels would be required to enable the Section to carry out its work efficiently and optimize the NGO contribution and participation in UN work.

The Section had obtained some temporary relief through redeployment of staff from other areas in 2000 and efforts in that regard were continuing, but the assistance provided by volunteers and short-term staff had reached the point of having serious negative effects on the Section's work. The Secretary-General therefore proposed that the Section be strengthened by the establishment of one Professional (P-4) and one General Service post at an additional cost of $105,600 under section 9, Economic and social affairs, of the 2000-2001 programme budget.

Also in May [A/54/868], ACABQ recommended that the two new posts be established on a temporary basis in the 2000-2001 biennium and that the proposal be resubmitted in the context of the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium. ACABQ reiterated its view that the Secretariat should submit a comprehensive report on the administrative and management implications of the large increase in NGOs involved in UN work, particularly on the impact of the growth on the UN programme budget, so as to allow ACABQ to ascertain the extent to which optimum use was made of current resources, as well as to evaluate such additional resources as might be proposed for the various units of the Secretariat working with NGOs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 June [meeting 98], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/54/691/Add.2], adopted resolution 54/265 without vote [agenda item 121].

Analysis of the organizational structure and the personnel and technical resources of the Non-Governmental Organizations Section of the Secretariat of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/249 of 23 December 1999, in particular paragraph 93,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on an analysis of the organizational structure and the personnel and technical resources of the Non-

Governmental Organizations Section of the Secretariat of the United Nations, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions.

Conferences and meetings

The Committee on Conferences held organizational meetings on 27 April and 25 July and its substantive session from 7 to 9 August [A/55/32]. The Committee examined requests for additions and changes to the approved calendar of conferences and meetings for 2000 [A/AC.172/2000/2] and the draft revised calendar for 2001. It considered the utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities, requests for exceptions to General Assembly resolution 40/243 [YUN 1985, p. 1256], documentation- and publication-related matters, translation- and interpretation-related matters, information technology and its working methods. The Committee approved a request from the International Civil Service Commission to convene its fifty-first session from 3 to 20 April in Vienna rather than New York, and noted the decision of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme to convene its sixth special session from 29 to 31 May in Malmö, Sweden. It also approved requests of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters to convene its thirty-fifth session from 5 to 7 July in Geneva rather than New York, of the Commission on the Status of Women to hold a one-day resumed session and of the Preparatory Committee for the special session of the General Assembly on social development to convene a resumed session in June.

The Committee recommended that the Assembly adopt the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2001 and authorize the Committee to make adjustments to the calendar as a result of Assembly actions. The Committee noted that the Secretariat had taken into account the arrangements referred to in Assembly resolution 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368] regarding the inclusion of Id al-Adha and Id al-Fitr in the list of official holidays and that no UN meetings should be held on those days, and concerning Orthodox Good Friday. It recommended that, when planning the calendar of conferences and meetings, every effort should be made to avoid simultaneous peak periods at the various duty stations. It requested the Secretariat to avoid scheduling meetings of intergovernmental bodies too closely to each other.

On 8 May [A/C.5/54/62], the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences proposed that the Committee's 2000 session be held in Nairobi as requested in Assembly resolution 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368]. The Fifth Committee considered the request in May and June [A/54/690/Add.2], including a draft resolution [A/C.5/54/L.83], by which the Assembly would have authorized the holding of the session in Nairobi and the payment of travel expenses for one representative of each Member State of the Committee. The Fifth Committee postponed consideration of the draft resolution pending receipt of a statement on programme budget implications and a report from ACABQ.

The Assembly, by decision 54/482 of 15 June, took note of the report of the Fifth Committee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/702], adopted resolution 55/222 without vote [agenda item 121].

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 40/243 of 18 December 1985, 43/222 A to E of 21 December 1988, 47/202 A to D of 22 December 1992, 48/222 A and B of 23 December 1993, 49/221 A to D of 23 December 1994, 50/11 of 2 November 1995, 50/206 A to F of 23 December 1995, 51/211 A to E of 18 December 1996, 52/214 of 22 December 1997, 53/208 A to E of 18 December 1998 and 54/248 of 23 December 1999 and its decisions 38/401 of 23 September 1983 and 52/468 of 31 March 1998,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences, the reports of the Secretary-General and the note by the Secretariat on the distribution of documentation,

Having also considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

Calendar of conferences and meetings

1. Notes with appreciation the work of the Committee on Conferences, and takes note of its report, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Approves the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2001, as submitted by the Committee on Conferences, also subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make adjustments to the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2001 that may become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session;

4. Reaffirms its decision that the headquarters rule shall be adhered to by all bodies, and decides that waivers to the headquarters rule shall be granted solely on the basis of the calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations recommended by the Committee on Conferences for adoption by the General Assembly;

5. Requests the Committee on Conferences and the Secretary-General, when planning the calendar of conferences and meetings, to avoid simultaneous peak periods at the various duty stations and to avoid scheduling meetings of related intergovernmental bodies too close together;

6. Notes with satisfaction that the Secretariat took into account the arrangements referred to in General Assembly resolutions 53/208 A and 54/248 concerning Orthodox Good Friday and the official holidays of Id al-Fitr and Id al-Adha, and requests all intergovernmental bodies to observe those decisions when planning their meetings;

7. Reaffirms the provisions established by the General Assembly in its resolution 50/11 and reaffirmed in its resolution 54/64 of 6 December 1999 regarding multilingualism;

II

Utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities

1. Reiterates its request to the Committee on Conferences to consult with those bodies that consistently utilized less than the applicable benchmark figure of their allocated resources for the past three sessions with a view to making appropriate recommendations in order to achieve the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources;

2. Requests duty stations away from Headquarters to keep statistics of requests for servicing of meetings;

3. Reiterates that meetings of Charter and mandated bodies must be serviced as a priority;

4. Decides to include all necessary resources in the budget for the biennium 2002-2003 to provide interpretation services for meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States upon request by those groups, on an ad hoc basis, in accordance with established practice, and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session, through the Committee on Conferences, a report on the implementation of this decision;

5. Notes the importance of meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States for the smooth functioning of the sessions of intergovernmental bodies, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, as far as possible, all requests for conference services for meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States are met;

6. Notes with appreciation, in particular in view of the increased requests for meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States, that services were provided for 84 per cent of the meetings requested by those groups, in spite of the difficulties experienced in the meetings programme in 2000, and that 100 per cent of the requests for facilities only were met;

7. Notes with concern the difficulties experienced by some Member States owing to the lack of conference services for some meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States;

8. Urges intergovernmental bodies to spare no effort at the planning stage to take into account meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States, to make provision for such meetings in their programmes of work and to notify the conference services, well in advance, of any cancellations so that unutilized conference-servicing resources may, to the extent possible, be reassigned to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide information on meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States not serviced by conference services in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, when preparing budget proposals for conference services, to ensure that the level of resources proposed for temporary assistance is commensurate with the full demand for services, estimated on the basis of current experience;

11. Notes the initial steps taken by the Secretariat to establish a permanent interpretation service at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, and reaffirms that its decisions in section B, paragraph 24, of resolution 54/248 and in paragraph 180 of resolution 54/249 of 23 December 1999 should be fully implemented by January 2001;

12. Notes with satisfaction that the creation of a permanent interpretation service at Nairobi offers great potential for Nairobi as a venue for United Nations conferences and meetings, and takes note with appreciation of the efforts being made by the United Nations Office at Nairobi to attract more meetings to its facilities;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report on the utilization rates of interpretation services and conference facilities at all duty stations;

14. Takes note of the information in paragraphs 20 and 21 of the report of the Secretary-General concerning the improved utilization of conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and the successful experience with respect to the events and meetings held there in April and May 2000;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to consider improving and modernizing the conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi in order to accommodate adequately major meetings and conferences, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session, through the Committee on Conferences;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to issue a revision of administrative instruction ST/AI/342 on the guidelines for the preparation of host government agreements falling under General Assembly resolution 40/243 prior to the substantive session of the Committee on Conferences in 2001, and to take into account administrative arrangements with respect to the United Nations Office at Nairobi;

17. Welcomes the fact that, despite various constraints, steps have been taken to increase the utilization of conference centres at the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific and the Economic Commission for Africa, and notes the plans for the future in this regard;

18. Notes with concern the lack of sufficient operational guidance in the management of the conference centres at the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific and the Economic Commission for Africa;

19. Notes with deep concern the inadequate staff structure and the insufficient financial resources allocated for the marketing of the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore all possible options to increase further the utilization of the conference centres at the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific and the Economic Commission for Africa, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session, through the Committee on Conferences;

III

Documentation- and publication-related matters

1. Notes with deep concern the low rate of compliance with the six-week rule for the issuance of documentation, and encourages the Secretary-General, in view of the impact of late submissions on the timely issuance of documents, to intensify recent efforts with respect to planning meetings and forecasting documentation;

2. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that documentation is available in accordance with the six-week rule for the distribution of documents simultaneously in the six official languages of the General Assembly;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to strengthen accountability and responsibility measures, where applicable, as requested in section C, paragraph 11, of its resolution 54/248, to correct the alarming situation concerning the submission of documentation consistent with the six-week rule, and requests him to submit a report thereon to the Assembly at its fifty-sixth session;

4. Invites intergovernmental bodies, during their organizational sessions or other appropriate periods before the commencement of their substantive work, to review with author departments the question of the availability of documentation for the proper functioning of those bodies, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session through the Committee on Conferences;

5. Decides that there should not be any exemption to the rule that documents must be distributed in all official languages, and emphasizes the principle that all documents must be distributed simultaneously in all official languages before they are made available on United Nations web sites;

6. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General direct all departments to include, where appropriate, the following elements in reports originating in the Secretariat:

(a) A summary of the report;

(b) Consolidated conclusions, recommendations and other proposed actions;

(c) Relevant background information;

7. Reiterates that all documents submitted to legislative organs by the Secretariat and expert bodies for consideration and action should have conclusions and recommendations in bold print;

8. Reiterates its request to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to submit its reports in accordance with paragraph 12 of General Assembly resolution 53/208 B;

9. Reaffirms its decision that, if a report is issued late, the reasons for the delay should be indicated when the report is introduced;

10. Reiterates its decision that, if a report is submitted late to conference services, the reasons therefor should be included in a footnote to the document;

11. Encourages chairpersons of intergovernmental bodies to institute time limits, when appropriate, for the introduction of standard documents by the Secretariat;

12. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that the texts of all new public documents, in all six official languages, and information materials of the United Nations are made available through the United Nations web site daily and are accessible to Member States without delay;

13. Also reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to publish, prior to the fifty-sixth session of the General Assembly, an updated version of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations in the six official languages of the Organization;

14. Further reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to publish, as a matter of priority, the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations in the six official languages of the Organization, once their consolidation has been completed;

15. Welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to eliminate the backlog in the publication of the Reper-toire of the Practice of the Security Council, and requests him to publish the current and future issues of the Reper-toire in all six official languages;

16. Notes the recent progress in reducing delays in the issuance of summary records, and requests the Secretary-General to consider means, including increased cooperation within the Secretariat, to continue efforts to accelerate their issuance;

17. Notes with concern the comments of the Committee on Conferences contained in paragraph 112 of its report, and requests the Secretary-General to implement, as a matter of priority, the provision contained in paragraph 45 of annex II to its resolution 52/220 of 22 December 1997 and reiterated in paragraph 7 of its resolution 54/259 of 7 April 2000, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session;

IV

Translation- and interpretation-related matters

1. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to continue the efforts to utilize new technologies, such as computer-assisted translation, remote translation, terminology databases and speech recognition, in the six official languages so as to enhance further the productivity of conference services, and to keep the General Assembly informed of the introduction and use of any other new technology;

2. Also reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that training opportunities in the six official languages are equally available to all language staff, including those at duty stations away from Headquarters;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in exceptional cases where an interpreter is assigned to an interpretation booth for which he or she has not passed the requisite competitive examination of the Interpretation Service, to set up an internal examination with standards similar to those of the competitive examinations of the Interpretation Service, which the interpreter must pass before such assignment;

4. Reiterates its understanding that the introduction of remote interpretation is not intended to replace traditional interpretation systems without the explicit approval of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirms its decision that, in the absence of a decision of the General Assembly to the contrary, the use of remote interpretation shall not constitute an alternative to the current institutionalized system of interpretation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that trials of remote interpretation are not confined to specific duty stations and that each duty station is considered as both recipient and provider;

7. Reaffirms its decision that the use of remote interpretation should not affect the quality of interpretation or in itself lead to any further reduction in language posts, nor will it affect the equal treatment of the six official languages;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that future reports on the question of remote interpretation include an analysis of all costs of any proposed system, its impact on the working conditions of interpreters, the level of service provided to delegates, the satisfaction of delegations with the interpretation and the technical aspects of this method of interpretation;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that efforts continue to be made to improve the quality control of language services at all duty stations;

10. Takes note of the technical difficulties and timing problems, referred to in paragraph 9 of the report of the Advisory Committee, regarding remote interpretation, and requests the Secretary-General to clarify further the technical issues involved;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to comply with paragraphs 33 to 36 of its resolution 53/208 A, and also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Assembly at its fifty-sixth session, through the Committee on Conferences and the Advisory Committee, a report on possible measures to alleviate the excessive vacancy rates in language services at some duty stations and to ensure the required quality of conference services Secretariat-wide;

12. Urges the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to implement the system of incentives to attract language staff to duty stations with high vacancy rates, and requests him to submit a comprehensive report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session analysing problems relating to recruitment in language services at all duty stations and proposing actions to address them;

13. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that translation, in principle, reflects the specificity of each language;

14. Also reiterates its request to the Secretary-General, in order to improve further the quality of translation of documents issued in the six official languages, to ensure continuous dialogue between translation staff and interpretation staff, among United Nations headquarters at New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi, and between translation divisions and Member States with regard to the standardization of the terminology used;

15. Further reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to hold informational meetings in order to brief Member States periodically on the terminology used;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to conduct consultations, with Member States concerned, on the improvement of translation services;

V

Information technology

1. Urges the Secretary-General to fill expeditiously the three official posts in the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat relating to web sites in Arabic, Chinese and Russian, in accordance with paragraph 151 of General Assembly resolution 54/249;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on policy issues regarding the translation of non-parliamentary and public information material into all official languages and the possibility of providing those materials on the United Nations web site in all official languages;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the implementation of the new re-engineered optical disk system, referred to in paragraph 9 of his report;

VI

1. Reaffirms its decision 38/401 concerning the prohibition of smoking in small conference rooms and the discouragement of smoking in large conference rooms;

2. Calls upon representatives of Member States to abide strictly by its decision 38/401, and strongly encourages all users of United Nations conference facilities to refrain from smoking in order to avoid exposing non-smokers to involuntary passive smoking;

3. Strongly discourages smoking in the immediate vicinity of conference rooms.

By decision 55/458 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item "Pattern of conferences" would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session.

Intergovernmental meetings

At the request of host Governments, the main documents of intergovernmental conferences held in 2000 were transmitted to the Secretary-General for circulation to the General Assembly, the Security Council or both, as follows:

Thirteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries (Cartagena, Colombia, 8-9 April) [A/54/917-S/2000/580]; South Summit of the Group of 77 (Havana, Cuba, 10-14 April) [A/55/74]; Authority of Heads of State and Government of the Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa (Mauritius, 17-19 May) [A/55/325]; Tenth Summit of the Heads of State and Government of the Group of Fifteen (Cairo, Egypt, 19-20 June) [A/55/139-S/2000/93]; seventy-second ordinary session of the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) (Lomé, Togo, 6-8 July) and thirty-sixth ordinary session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of OAU (Lomé, 10-12 July) [A/55/286]; meeting of Foreign Ministers of G-8 countries (Miyazaki, Japan, 13 July) [A/55/162-S/2000/715]; summit meeting of G-8 countries (Okinawa, Japan, 21-23 July) [A/55/257-S/2000/766]; Summit of Heads of State or Government of the Southern African Development Community (Windhoek, Namibia, 6-7 August) [A/55/287]; meeting of heads of State of the Commonwealth of Independent States (Yalta, Ukraine, 18 August) [A/55/330]; twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Group of 77 (New York, 15 September) [A/55/459]; annual coordination meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 18 September) [A/55/541-S/2000/1067]; 103rd Inter-Parliamentary Conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Union (Amman, Jordan, 27 April-6 May) [A/54/968]; meeting of heads of State and Government and representatives of the 16 States members of the Pacific Island Forum (Tarawa, Kiribati, 27-30 October) [A/55/536]; ninth session of the Islamic Summit Conference (Doha, Qatar, 12-14 November) [A/55/716-S/2000/1236]; meeting of the heads of Government of the member States of the Central European Initiative (Budapest, Hungary, 25 November) [A/55/668].

Use of conference services

The Secretary-General submitted to the Committee on Conferences a July report on improved utilization of conference-servicing resources, including meeting statistics of UN organs for 1999 [A/AC.172/2000/3/Rev.1].

The Committee noted that the overall utilization factor for 1999 exceeded the benchmark of 80 per cent. For Vienna it remained at 88 per cent, in Geneva it decreased by three percentage points to 84 per cent, and in New York it increased by two percentage points to 79 per cent. The Committee noted, however, that only 59 per cent of the bodies sampled utilized 80 per cent or more of their available conference-servicing resources. It requested its Chairperson to continue to consult with the chairpersons of those bodies that had consistently utilized less than the applicable benchmark figure (80 per cent) of their allocated resources for the past three sessions and to make recommendations to achieve optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources. The Committee noted the new format for reporting on the utilization of conference services and that statistics for Nairobi were incorporated in the analytical tables.

Documents control

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368], the Secretariat submitted a note [A/AC.172/2000/6] containing six proposals to improve the timely issuance of pre-session documentation. The first two proposals, which required action by the Secretariat, stipulated that three months prior to the opening of a session, the servicing secretariat, the substantive department and the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services should meet to review documentation forecasts, bearing in mind the 10-week rule and the requirement to report on the status of documentation; and substantive departments should prepare forecasts of the volume of documentation under preparation and be required to keep within those limits.

The other proposals, which required action by intergovernmental organizations, called for the rescheduling of the processing of documents by a particular intergovernmental organization in order to accommodate late submissions by that body; intergovernmental bodies should review their reporting cycles with a view to changing the periodicity to quarterly or biannual reports instead of annual reporting; they should authorize the submission of reports for processing in accordance with the 10-week rule even if all relevant information was not available, with subsequent addenda to the parent document; and in cases of recurrent late submissions, they should adjust the proposed programme of work, reorder agenda items and delay or postpone consideration of items or documents.

Those proposals were intended to serve as a basis for the formulation of more elaborate and refined recommendations to enable conference services to process documents and distribute them in a timely manner.

In August, the Committee on Conferences supported the implementation of the proposals requiring action by the Secretariat and recommended to the Assembly that the other recommendations be reformulated as recommendations to intergovernmental bodies. It asked the Secretariat to prepare guidelines on procedures for effective and efficient use of conference services and to continue to draft proposals for improving the timely issuance of pre-session documentation.

The Committee, having considered a conference room paper on compliance with the regulations regarding page limits, noted that, although the number and proportion of documents issued in accordance with those limits had increased, compliance continued to be only partial. It further noted that documents that were significantly in excess of the page limit, especially when submitted late, created an additional burden for the processing services and could jeopardize timely issuance and compromise quality. Efforts to further reduce the length of documents should therefore be concentrated on those cases in which page limits were applicable or desirable.

Optical disk system

In his May report on information technologies [A/54/849], the Secretary-General indicated that, since its establishment as the electronic repository of UN documents, the optical disk system (ODS) had ensured simultaneous retrieval in the six official languages. Disparities between languages, due partially to lags in the development of software for some languages by the computer industry, and affecting the Arabic and Russian versions, had been eliminated.

All language units of the Text-Processing Section were currently fully equipped to operate with MS Word. Updated macros had been developed and staff training was about to be completed. The frequency of use of MS Word was increasing daily and full production in it of all new documents in all languages would be achieved shortly.

In addition to facilitating retrieval, bringing all languages to the same level of technological advancement would allow for easier conversion of all language versions of documents to other formats. Moreover, ODS was being re-engineered to operate on more current technology based on magnetic disks, rather than optical platters, and Notes Domino. The implementation of that new system, to be completed by the end of 2000, would provide concurrent access to a much higher number of users than currently.

Cost-effectiveness of UN publications

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-fourth (2000) session, considered a JIU report entitled "United Nations publications: enhancing cost-effectiveness in implementing legislative mandates" [YUN 1997, p. 1504], a note by the Secretary-General containing his comments on the report [ibid.], the relevant chapter of the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its thirty-eighth session [YUN 1998, p. 1352] and a report of ACABQ on UN publications [ibid.].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 April [meeting 95], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/54/690/Add. 1], adopted resolution 54/259 without vote [agenda item 124].

United Nations publications: enhancing cost-effectiveness in implementing legislative mandates

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "United Nations publications: enhancing cost-effectiveness in implementing legislative mandates", the note by the Secretary-General containing his comments thereon, the relevant chapter of the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its thirty-eighth session and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on United Nations publications,

Recalling paragraph 1 of section D of its resolution 52/214 of 22 December 1997, and taking into account the fact that the General Assembly has not taken any decision on the question of a cost-accounting system,

1. Endorses recommendations 2, 3, 10 and 16 to 18 contained in the report of the Joint Inspection Unit;

2. Also endorses recommendations 4 and 6 contained in the report of the Unit, subject to the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination contained in paragraph 350 of its report;

3. Further endorses recommendations 13 and 15 contained in the report of the Unit, as modified by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraphs 19 and 21, respectively, of its report;

4. Endorses recommendation 14 contained in the report of the Unit, without prejudice to the traditional distribution of printed publications, taking into account paragraph 20 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

5. Concurs with paragraphs 22 and 23 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

6. Looks forward to the conclusions of the study mentioned in paragraph 43 of the note by the Secretary-General;

7. Regrets that the provision contained in paragraph 45 of annex II to its resolution 52/220 of 22 December 1997 has not been implemented, and requests the Secretary-General to implement this provision as a matter of priority and to report to it at its fifty-fifth session in the context of the item entitled "Pattern of conferences";

8. Requests that additional efforts be made to improve the linguistic quality and content of United Nations publications concomitantly in all six official languages;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, at its fifty-sixth session, a report on the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution.

Regional and other major groupings

Report of Secretary-General. In July [A/55/182], the Secretary-General, responding to General Assembly resolution 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368], reported on the provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States. For the period 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000, 100 per cent of requests for conference services to regional and other major groupings were met in Geneva and New York. Eighty-four per cent of requests for the provision of interpretation services were met.

Committee action. The Committee on Conferences took note of the Secretary-General's report. It urged intergovernmental bodies to spare no effort at the planning stage to take into account meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States, to make provision for such meetings in their programmes of work and to notify conference services well in advance of any cancellations. It requested the Chairperson to write to the chairpersons of intergovernmental organizations, bringing to their attention the need to anticipate requests for meetings of regional and other major groupings during their sessions.

ACABQ report. In September [A/55/430], ACABQ, in its comments on the Secretary-General's report, noted that among the difficulties preventing the Secretariat from meeting all the requests for interpretation services was the reduction in the proposed 2000-2001 programme budget of temporary assistance funds. It was of the opinion that the issue of general temporary assistance should be addressed in the context of the preparation of the 2002-2003 programme budget and that the time had come to assess the implementation of General Assembly resolution 49/221 C [YUN 1994, p. 1404] endorsing the Secretary-General's report on the comprehensive study on conference services [ibid., p. 1403].

Improved coordination of conference services

The Committee on Conferences considered an oral report on improved coordination of conference services. The Committee was told that the high level of enthusiasm of the staff and close coordination between various departments at the UN Office at Nairobi contributed to its conference centre's success, and the proposal to separate conference services from administration at the Office would further enhance the profile of conference services. The workload trend of various meeting services in Vienna, including translation and interpretation services, was generally upward. However, the potential for further efficiency gains had been mostly exhausted and there were concerns about the need to find the right balance between budgetary resources and workload. Constraints identified included uneven workload distribution, late requests, an unfavourable post structure that did not offer attractive career prospects to staff and the imbalance between workload and personnel and budgetary resources.

Concerning the vacancy rates for UN language professionals, it was suggested that the problem should be viewed in terms of supply and demand. Interpreters, particularly those interpreting from Russian into English and French, were in very short supply and the Organization should urgently consider mounting its own training programmes to ensure a steady supply of suitable candidates.

The Committee noted the oral report on improved coordination of conference services and encouraged efforts to promote a more coordinated approach aimed at providing services from all duty stations more effectively and efficiently.

It requested the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report as soon as possible analysing such problems as recruitment in language services at all duty stations and proposals for addressing them. He should implement the system of incentives to attract language staff to duty stations with high vacancy rates and report on measures to develop further such a system. The Committee looked forward to the revision of administrative instruction ST/AI/324 on guidelines for the preparation of host government agreements falling under Assembly resolution 40/243 [YUN 1985, p. 1256] and, in that regard, asked the Secretary-General to take into account the administrative arrangements with respect to the UN Office at Nairobi.

Improved utilization of regional conference facilities

Bangkok and Addis Ababa

In August, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368], the Committee on Conferences heard an oral report by the Secretariat on measures to increase utilization of regional conference centres, including the constraints that had affected the utilization of the centres in Bangkok, Thailand, and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and action taken to improve the situation.

The Committee, while noting the oral report, regretted that the written report requested was not yet available and agreed to keep the matter under review.

In September [A/55/410], the Secretary-General, in his written report, said that greater utilization of both centres beyond their current use to meet the conference requirements of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) and the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) had been constrained by several factors. Among them was uncertainty about the appropriate use of the facilities, particularly as venues for private sector and commercial events. Other related factors were the legal and administrative restrictions imposed on the use of UN premises vis-à-vis the invitation to the Secretary-General in section II of Assembly resolution 52/220 [YUN 1997, p. 1421] to develop new income-generating measures, and the request of the Committee on Conferences that the Secretariat prepare proposals for increased utilization of the conference facilities, including by non-UN entities. Other constraints included the very limited opportunities for re-routing meetings included in the UN calendar of conferences, inadequate staffing structures for the management of the centres, lack of funds for marketing and promotional activities and regional instability.

However, ESCAP and ECA had taken steps to staff and manage the centres more adequately and to provide resources for marketing operations. Promotional campaigns were being launched to attract more users, mainly among UN agencies, national institutions and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, but also private sector entities.

The Secretary-General concluded that the two facilities were relatively new and it would be reasonable to allow some five years for awareness of the centres to be built up and their reputation to be established. He noted that the utilization of both centres was increasing and estimated that, with support from the UN system and the provision of the necessary staff and financial resources, utilization should improve considerably in the foreseeable future.

Nairobi

In August [A/55/259], the Secretary-General submitted a report on improved utilization of conference facilities at the UN Office at Nairobi, Kenya, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368]. The report contained the first results of the policy decisions set out in that resolution for Nairobi as a venue for UN conferences and meetings. It examined meeting activity, including statistical information, in Nairobi in 1999 and 2000 and projections for 2001 and projected the effect of the creation of a permanent interpretation service as a factor in attracting more meeting activity to the Office from 2001 onwards.

The number of meetings with interpretation held in Nairobi in 1999 was 254, compared to 140 in 1998 and 166 in 1997. Of that number, 32 were meetings of calendar bodies, while the remaining 222 were meetings of intergovernmental and expert groups related both to the United Nations and other organizations. The number of events held without interpretation was much higher—354. The number of UN meetings held in Nairobi from January to July 2000 was 52. If the trend of the year 2000 continued, the report said, the number of meetings with interpretation should not be less than 320—a utilization rate of 21 per cent. During the same period, 10 meetings were held at locations outside Nairobi, 8 of which were provided with interpretation.

The decision to create a permanent interpretation service in Nairobi would have a dramatic impact on meeting activities there. Information on the expected availability of interpretation as of 2001 had been circulated to all clients and there was strong indication that interest existed not only from Nairobi-based UN agencies, but also from non-UN entities. The creation of the service was well under way and the Secretary-General had approved the creation of a separate Division of Conference Services at Nairobi to manage the new interpretation service and the conference facilities and to be accountable for their efficient utilization.

In the first part of 2000, the UN Office at Nairobi hosted a series of major environmental events, which put to the test its ability to handle conferences not previously held there and to cope with unprecedented massive participation of NGOs, press and governmental delegations and observers. To make it possible to use the centre as a regular venue for major meetings, the project for modernizing the conference facilities should be reviewed in the light of that successful experience.

The Secretary-General concluded that the effect of the creation of an interpretation service at the UN Office at Nairobi from 1 January 2001 could be evaluated as the potential interpreter utilization rate against meetings held in Nairobi in 2000 with interpretation, meetings held outside Nairobi with interpretation, and Committee of Permanent Representatives meetings held in Nairobi over a 12-month period in English, which in future would be held with six-language interpretation. The figure was 300, the report said. It added that the creation of a permanent interpretation service offered great potential for Nairobi as a venue for UN conferences and meetings.

In August, the Committee on Conferences noted the potential for Nairobi as a venue for UN conferences and meetings and commended the close cooperation between the UN Office at Nairobi and the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services. It also took note of the efforts of the Office to attract more meetings to its facilities.

In September [A/55/430], ACABQ, in its comments on the Secretary-General's report, requested that the Fifth Committee be provided with a breakdown of the costs associated with the establishment of the team of interpreters for the creation of the permanent interpretation service in January 2001 as compared with interpretation costs in 1999.

UN web sites

The Committee on Conferences, having considered the Secretary-General's report on the multilingual development, maintenance and enrichment of UN web sites [A/AC.198/2000/7-A/AC.172/2000/4] (see p. 576), noted that it had become necessary to consider Internet activity as an integral part of the Organization's programme of work. Each content-providing office should make available web-specific content on the web sites as part of its regular programme of activity, as well as the necessary budgetary provisions. The Committee took note of the electronic display of the meetings programme at Geneva and encouraged the Secretariat to develop it at other duty stations.

In a May report on information technologies [A/54/849], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that, in accordance with resolution 54/249 [YUN 1999, p. 1289], steps were under way to fill the three Professional posts in the Department of Public Information relating to the web sites in Arabic, Chinese and Russian, which had been converted from general temporary assistance posts to regular budget posts. There would then be a Professional-level web site coordinator for the management and coordination of the web site in each of the official languages. Though that would not resolve the issue of parity treatment of languages, it was a first step in that direction. The fundamental issue of content creation on an equal basis in the six official languages would have to be revisited so as to decide on policy issues regarding the rendering of non-parliamentary and public information material into all official languages. Requiring parity in the official languages on the web site would also require that the concept of working languages in the Secretariat be reviewed.

Interpretation and translation matters

Remote interpretation

In July [A/55/134], the Secretary-General, responding to General Assembly resolution 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368], reported on preparations for the second remote interpretation experiment, to be conducted between Geneva and Nairobi in 2000. The experiment, to be conducted during a full-scale intergovernmental meeting in all six official languages, was intended to build on the first one organized in 1999 between Geneva and Vienna [ibid., p. 1367] and to gather missing information on relevant technical, financial and human resources issues. It had been scheduled to take place from 8 to 12 May during the first substantive session of the Preparatory Committee for the Assembly's special session for the review and appraisal of the Habitat Agenda. However, because of technical, financial and logistic considerations, by 14 March it was concluded that making substantial financial commitments and further technical and staffing preparations were not prudent, since the technical set-up risked not being in place in time. With no other planned meetings in Nairobi suitable for the experiment, preparations were suspended. Moreover, the establishment of a full-fledged interpretation service in Nairobi as of January 2001 (see p. 1394) had changed one of the basic considerations for the experiment—the relative availability of interpreters in different conference centres. Consideration would be given to setting up an experiment in Nairobi when a full team of interpreters was available there.

The Committee on Conferences took note of the Secretary-General's report and requested that it be kept informed of future activities in remote interpretation. The Committee reiterated its understanding that the introduction of remote interpretation was not intended to replace traditional systems without the explicit approval of the Assembly. It requested that future reports on the matter include an analysis of the cost of any proposed system and of its impact on the working conditions of interpreters. The Committee recommended that remote interpretation not be confined to specific duty stations, that each duty station be considered both as recipient and provider and that the Secretariat explore every opportunity for its introduction.

ACABQ, in a September report [A/55/430], expressed regrets that the experiment did not take place and urged the Secretariat to clarify the technical issues involved as quickly as possible.

New technologies

In August [A/AC.172/2000/5], the Secretary-General reported on the utilization of new technologies in translation and interpretation. He stated that the computer-assisted translation (CAT) project had entered its operational phase, which involved the selection of suitable documents to be processed simultaneously in all translation languages. Initial findings and potential benefits of CAT implementation indicated that the impact of its usage would become clear only after a longer period of operation, and the method of validation of translation memories consisting of material subject to revision after CAT processing might have cost implications. Its expansion would also require that all stages of document processing upstream of translation be performed electronically. However, whether or not CAT was expanded, the introduction of translation-memory technology would have had a positive impact in speeding up the transition from hard-copy-based referencing of translation jobs to electronic referencing, thus enhancing the efficiency of the process, allowing more thorough and comprehensive search and retrieval, eliminating the need to make thousands of photocopies for inclusion in reference folders and facilitating the provision of reference material to remote contractual translators.

Remote translation, initiated five years earlier, had become the norm at Headquarters, Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna. The technology used for remote translation had evolved and the transmission of files over the Internet was increasingly being replaced with transmission to and from a dedicated File Transfer Protocol (FTP) server, which offered greater speed and reliability. The possibility of transmitting files in Portable Document Format was currently being studied. Remote translation had resulted in considerable savings on travel and daily subsistence costs, allowed more flexibility and efficient use of staff resources and speedier delivery of translations if the time difference between the meeting and servicing locations was favourable. Drawbacks included delays in processing translations or the need to establish special shifts at the servicing location when the time difference was unfavourable and lack of direct contact with delegations and the substantive secretariat of the remotely serviced meeting. The Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services was reviewing guidelines governing the allocation of responsibilities between major conference-servicing centres for the servicing of meetings away from such centres, with a view to replacing the current system, and consideration was being given to remotely translating material needed by an organ or body meeting in a major conference-servicing centre other than the location of its established headquarters.

Speech recognition technology, successfully tested in 1999 in Geneva, had been deployed at Headquarters in the Translation and Editorial Division and the Verbatim Reporting Service. Benefits of the introduction of the technology would accrue downstream of the translation process in text-processing units, where the transcription of translations, summary and verbatim records recorded on audio cassettes still constituted a significant portion of the total workload. Savings in overtime costs might be expected in the medium term.

Centrally maintained databases of terminology resources were held at all duty stations. The application of new technologies to the management of those terminology resources raised concerns about the need to convert selected databases to the format required for inclusion in CAT dictionaries and to ensure the widest possible access to all terminology resources at all duty stations. The digital recording of meeting proceedings had been implemented by the Verbatim

Reporting Service to allow easy and speedy transmission of recordings of meetings proceedings, in the form of digital sound files playable on personal computers to remote freelance verbatim reporters, together with relevant reference material. The system, developed in-house at no significant cost, had significantly reduced the need to bring on board costly internationally recruited freelance verbatim reporters. A portable version of the system was recently developed and successfully tested. As an extension of the project, audio cassettes had been phased out as a means of distribution "takes" to in-house verbatim reporters. A similar approach was being contemplated for the distribution to précis-writers and translators of recorded proceedings of meetings of bodies entitled to summary records.

The Committee on Conferences encouraged the Secretary-General to continue efforts to introduce new technologies in conference services and welcomed the proposal to extend the service of dedicated FTP sites to other conference centres.

Review of Information Systems Coordination Committee

In November [A/55/619], the Secretary-General reported on the review of the ACC Information Systems Coordination Committee, as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 54/249 [YUN 1999, p. 1289]. The report summarized the state of the review of the Committee's role being carried out within the framework of the reform of the ACC machinery and presented the Secretary-General's views on the Committee's usefulness and future role. The Secretary-General considered that strengthened coordination of information and communications technology activities was essential for enabling the UN system to perform more efficiently and for ensuring that it was best equipped to mobilize that technology for development. The role envisaged, within the reform of ACC activities, for the new High-level Committee on Management and for the coordination mechanism, based on the work of the Information Systems Coordination Committee, confirmed the commitment of the executive heads of UN system organizations to take full advantage of those critical technologies. The limited resources of the United Nations made it essential that the coordination of information and communications technology activities be strengthened, and play a key role in the transformation of the organizations of the UN system into knowledge-based entities.

The Secretary-General fully endorsed the strengthening of UN system coordination activities being pursued within the ACC framework. The arrangements made would capitalize on the work done so far by the Committee and would be based on a prioritization of the existing work programmes of the Committee and new initiatives. Continuation of the Committee's activities was indispensable, the cost of which in the 2000-2001 programme budget amounted to $1,380,300. Taking into account the fact that each initiative would impact on the UN system at large, the Secretary-General considered that the level of expenditure and the related UN contribution were fully justified. He pointed out that the overall cost of coordinating information technology activities had remained stable over the past bienniums and the limited resources available for coordination were a major reason for the apparent limited progress. The Secretary-General recommended the continued funding of the UN contribution to the Committee for the 2000-2001 biennium and indicated his intention to reflect the appropriation adjustments in the first performance report for the biennium.

ACABQ, in a December report [A/55/7/Add.3], recommended the approval of the proposal to reinstate funding of the UN share of the Information Systems Coordination Committee in the budget for 2000-2001. It trusted, however, that the Secretary-General would set out clearly the Committee's programme of work, as well as its accomplishments, in the proposed programme budget for 2002-2003.

On 23 December, the General Assembly, by resolution 55/238, section VIII, took note of the Secretary-General's report and concurred with ACABQ's observations and recommendations.

International cooperation on informatics

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/58 [YUN 1999, p. 1372], the Secretary-General submitted a July report on international cooperation in the field of informatics [E/2000/94], summarizing activities carried out by the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics. A major focus of discussion during the past year had been the use of information technology to provide services to the permanent missions to the United Nations without placing undue burden on the smaller missions. The Working Group alerted Member States to the year 2000 computer rollover problem and was kept informed regularly on the steps taken by the Secretariat and the UN system at large to achieve compliance. The Working Group, in cooperation with the Information Technology Services Division, as well as with other agencies in the UN system, continued to improve and expand electronic information services to Member States and permanent missions and to assure that the technologies employed were abreast with technological development. The report also contained information on the various activities in the field of informatics carried out by Secretariat departments and UN funds and programmes.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2000/28 [draft: E/2000/L.20] without vote [agenda item 7 (e)].

The need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States

The Economic and Social Council,

Aware of the interest of Member States in taking full advantage of information and communications technologies for the acceleration of economic and social development,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the need to harmonize and improve United Nations information systems for optimal utilization and access by all States, with due regard to all official languages,

Welcoming the report presented by the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics on the progress achieved so far in fulfilling the mandate of the Working Group,

1. Reiterates once again the high priority that it attaches to easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access for States Members of the United Nations, observers and non-governmental organizations accredited to the United Nations to the computerized databases and information systems and services of the United Nations, provided that the unhindered access of non-governmental organizations shall not prejudice the access of Member States and that it shall not impose an additional financial burden for the use of databases and other systems;

2. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to convene the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics for one more year to enable it to carry out, from within existing resources, its work of facilitating the successful implementation of the initiatives being taken by the Secretary-General with regard to the use of information technology and of continuing the implementation of measures required to achieve its objectives; in this regard, the Working Group is requested to continue:

(a) To improve electronic connectivity via the Internet for all Member States in their capitals and at major United Nations locations, inter alia, through the enhanced connectivity of permanent missions to the Internet and United Nations databases;

(b) To improve the access of Member States to a wider range of United Nations information on economic and social, development and political issues and other substantive programming areas, and to have all official documents available via the Internet;

(c) To improve electronic links among Member States, the United Nations and the specialized agencies;

(d) To provide training for the staff of permanent missions to enable them to take advantage of the facilities being developed for Member States, in particular electronic mail and Internet web sites;

(e) To enhance the capacity of Member States to access United Nations data online, using low-cost telecommunications links or providing other modalities, for example, CD-ROM, whereby Member States can have access to specialized databases not available on the Internet;

(f) To make arrangements, as appropriate, to provide permanent missions of developing countries with the hardware platform to utilize Internet technology;

(g) To use videoconferencing to further communication and interaction between the United Nations, permanent missions and academic institutions;

(h) To intensify contacts with the private sector so as to bring its wealth of experience to bear on the work of the Working Group;

3. Notes with appreciation the fact that the efforts of the Working Group to draw the attention of Member States to the threat posed by the millennium bug were successful and that, as a result, international co-operation to address the problem of the millennium bug was also successful;

4. Supports the efforts of the Working Group to keep intact the network of national focal points that was established in connection with the millennium bug initiative, as a vehicle for the diffusion of best practices and lessons learned, in particular for the exchange of information on locally and regionally appropriate solutions, and in this regard appeals to countries and other sources to provide the extrabudgetary resources necessary to maintain the mailing list of the national focal points;

5. Reiterates the request made in paragraph 18 of the Ministerial Declaration entitled "Development and international cooperation in the twenty-first century: the role of information technology in the context of a knowledge-based global economy", adopted on 7 July 2000 at the high-level segment of its substantive session of 2000, that the Working Group make recommendations regarding the proposal contained in paragraph 11 of the report of the high-level panel of experts on information and communications technology, convened from 17 to 20 April 2000, that the United Nations create a task force on information and communications technologies;

6. Requests the Working Group to make recommendations to the Bureau of the Council on how the Council can carry out the tasks specified in paragraph 15 of the Ministerial Declaration for the enhancement of the United Nations role in promoting synergies and coherence of all efforts directed towards expanding the development impact of information and communications technologies;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to extend full co-operation to the Working Group and to give priority to implementing its recommendations;

8. Calls upon the Secretary-General to report to the Council at its substantive session of 2001 on the follow-up action taken on the present resolution, including the findings of the Working Group.

Year 2000 computer problem

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/114 [YUN 1999, p. 1373], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/55/387] that evaluated the outcome of the steps taken within the UN system and with Member States to resolve the year 2000 computer rollover problem. It also contained summaries of the submissions of the organizations within the UN system on their activities in that respect.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 November [meeting 58], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/21 [draft: A/55/L.28 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 44].

Global implications of the year 2000 date conversion problem of computers

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 52/233 of 26 June 1998, 53/86 of 7 December 1998 and 54/114 of 15 December 1999 on the global implications of the year 2000 date conversion problem of computers,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on the evaluation of the outcome of the steps taken within the United Nations system and with Member States to resolve the year 2000 problem,

Recognizing that the effective operation of Governments, companies and other organizations was threatened by the year 2000 date conversion problem of computers, or "millennium bug",

Recognizing also the serious impact that the year 2000 problem could have had in all countries whose economies are increasingly interdependent,

Appreciating the establishment of a trust fund by the World Bank to assist in the efforts to resolve the year 2000 problem and the voluntary contributions made to it by the Member States,

Appreciating also the efforts of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics of the Economic and Social Council in raising the level of awareness of the year 2000 problem,

Noting that, as a result of the concerted international effort, the "millennium bug" caused no serious destruction of critical services on a national, regional or global level,

1. Expresses its satisfaction with the efforts of all Member States to solve the year 2000 problem before the rollover date of 31 December 1999, including by working to ensure that the private sector was fully engaged in addressing the problem and by tackling it in those systems under their own control;

2. Commends the unprecedented international co-operation which contributed to the successful outcome and the interest in providing mutual assistance so that all could succeed, created by the realization of the interdependence among nations;

3. Also commends the public-private partnerships that were forged and which showed that, faced with a threat that affected entire industries, private and public interest converged;

4. Urges the international community to draw lessons from the experience of the initiative to address the year 2000 problem in dealing with complex global technical problems.

Integrated Management Information System

By decision 54/473 of 7 April, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's eleventh progress report on the Integrated Management Information System (IMIS) [YUN 1999, p. 1375], the project's revised completion date and the activities planned until then. It endorsed ACABQ's comments on the report [ibid., p. 1376] and asked the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive final report on the project's implementation, including a full analysis of lessons learned and experience gained. It should also address a long-term strategy for further developing the system for consideration by the Assembly in 2001.

In his twelfth progress report on IMIS [A/55/632], the Secretary-General said that, with the successful implementation of payroll in September at Headquarters, and that of additional functions over the past 12 months, the development phase of IMIS—as per the initial plan—had been completed. Progress had been made on the implementation of the finance applications at offices away from Headquarters with the successful installation of that application at the UN offices in Geneva, Santiago and Nairobi. The usage of the system had increased at all duty stations, with more than 500 users a day on average. Improvements to the system to better meet the needs of offices away from Headquarters had been introduced, and major efforts had been made to strengthen the training facilities. Agreement had been reached in principle for the establishment of an IMIS common service for the long-term operation of the system, in cooperation with UNDP, UNFPA, UNICEF and the UN Office for Project Services. As recommended by ACABQ, IMIS was progressively being integrated into the Information and Technology Services Division. The system was exclusively maintained by the United Nations, as the main contractor had been completely phased out by the end of October. The overall expenditures remained within the approved budget of $77.6 million. The IMIS team was reviewing, in consultation with users, the areas in which to concentrate its efforts for further improvement of the system. Work had been initiated for upgrading of the technological platform to make the system more accessible through the World Wide Web. Other projects to be undertaken included research for a new tool for the reporting application, the consolidation of data, a review of requirements of peacekeeping missions for systematic application and archiving of the IMIS data.

Other matters

Common services

JIU and OIOS reports. At its resumed fifty-fourth session, the General Assembly considered the JIU report entitled "The United Nations system common services at Geneva, part I, Overview of administrative cooperation and coordination" [YUN 1999, p. 1376] and the Secretary-General's note transmitting his comments and those of ACC [A/54/635], as well as the OIOS report on the review of common services in the United Nations [YUN 1999, p. 1376] and JIU comments thereon [ibid., p. 1377].

On 7 April, the Assembly, in resolution 54/255 (see p. 1375), endorsed the JIU recommendations and the comments of the Secretary-General and ACC thereon and invited JIU to continue to examine common services at other duty stations. By decision 54/257 of the same date, it noted the OIOS report and the JIU comments thereon.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Assembly resolution 54/249 [YUN 1999, p. 1289], the Secretary-General, in October [A/55/461], reported on a review of common services in the UN system carried out by the Task Force on Common Services, established in the context of reform [YUN 1997, p. 1389]. The Task Force, convened by the Assistant Secretary-General for Central Support Services, in his capacity as Executive Coordinator for Common Services, included representatives of Secretariat departments and UN funds and programmes. Eleven working groups were established in the areas of archives and records management, facilities management, financial services, IMIS, information technology and telecommunications, printing, personnel, procurement, security and safety, and travel and transportation services. The Task Force focused its attention on New York and worked closely with the United Nations Development Group (UNDG) on common services in country offices, the Inter-Agency Procurement Working Group and other inter-agency forums, as well as with JIU. Considerable progress had been made with major accomplishments evident in procurement, travel and transport services, human resources and IMIS.

According to the report, the most significant achievement of the Task Force was the creation of a culture of collaboration and an atmosphere conducive to common services. It had fostered a demand-driven approach that emphasized best practices, which, in turn, had led to concrete action and tangible results. The Task Force had also sought to build on common interests and concerns, and to harmonize policies and practices of the participating organizations.

A workshop on the common services evaluation framework was conducted in February to identify criteria for measuring performance in the implementation of common services. Work on developing performance measurements had begun and was focused on measuring performance with respect to the achievement of quality and standards specified, volume of services, the extent to which services were meeting expectations and cost-effectiveness. The travel and transport working group issued in July a draft set of generic performance indicators that were considered applicable to the participating organizations.

Future work would be aimed at the establishment of a joint UN archives and research centre and the harmonization of policies and procedures related to archives and record-keeping; new arrangements for shared accounting services, continuation of efforts to establish a common treasury support unit or an alternative mechanism, and improvements in the current inter-agency accounting mechanisms; the development and implementation of the remaining releases of IMIS, implementation of effective long-term joint governance mechanisms and field connectivity; simplification of financial rules and regulations on procurement, adoption of the value-for-money concept and codes of conduct for procurement, continued coordination with the Inter-Agency Procurement Working Group/the Inter-Agency Procurement Services Office in common procurement training and professional certification; harmonization of other staff entitlements, particularly with respect to hardship duty stations; and periodic service reviews of travel agency services, adoption of innovative best practices with respect to staff entitlements and harmonization of staff travel entitlements.

The practice of disseminating information updates to Vienna, Geneva, the regional commissions, the specialized agencies and UN offices away from New York, including the United Nations University, would be further broadened. Efforts would be made to establish concrete collaboration with UNDG in the development of common services at the country office level. Emphasis would be placed on ensuring policy and procedural coherence with actions taken at Headquarters and on supporting ongoing field-based common services efforts.

Participating organizations agreed to establish a two-year project, starting in September on a cost-shared basis, for a Common Services Support Unit in New York.

Notwithstanding that development, the Task Force on Common Services was at a crossroads. It would require a new mandate if tangible results beyond those identified for its future work were to be achieved, including the realization of the originally conceived common services facilities. Accordingly, the Task Force had introduced a two-year phase-out arrangement for the jointly funded Common Services Support Unit, without prejudice to its possible extension or expansion.

ACABQ recommended in November [A/55/7/Add.1, para. 29] that the General Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report and that it request him to report at its fifty-seventh session in 2002 on the progress made and decisions taken on the future of the Task Force.

UN insurance programmes

The General Assembly, by resolution 54/257 of 7 April, took note of OIOS reports on the audits of the UN commercial insurance programmes and of UN health insurance programmes and JIU comments thereon [YUN 1998, p. 1363].

Outsourcing practices

The General Assembly considered an OIOS report on a review of outsourcing practices in the United Nations [YUN 1997, p. 1511] and a JIU report on the challenge of outsourcing for the UN system [ibid.], as well as ACC comments thereon [YUN 1998, p. 1364]. It also considered a report of the Secretary-General on outsourcing practices [YUN 1999, p. 1377] and the related report of ACABQ [ibid.].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 April [meeting 95], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/54/511/Add.2], adopted resolution 54/256 without vote [agenda item 118].

Outsourcing practices in the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of outsourcing practices at the United Nations, the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "The challenge of outsourcing for the United Nations system" and the comments of the Administrative Committee on Coordination thereon, and the report of the Secretary-General on outsourcing practices in the United Nations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that programme managers are guided by the basic reasons for outsourcing, as indicated in paragraph 4 of his report, and the goals, as indicated in paragraph 13 of the report;

2. Endorses the United Nations guidelines on outsourcing set out in the report of the Secretary-General, pending consideration of the report requested in paragraph 3 below;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to define, in a more detailed way and with justification, the criteria for decisions on which activities and services should or should not be outsourced, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session.

In response to the above resolution, the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/55/301] on outsourcing practices containing four specific criteria that might be considered when evaluation was made of whether or not an activity of the Organization was suitable for outsourcing. The criteria related to cost-effectiveness and efficiency, safety and security, maintaining the international character of the Organization, and maintaining the integrity of procurement procedures and process. The Secretary-General said that an activity might be outsourced only if it was demonstrated that all four criteria were met and the practice was in the overall interest of the Organization.

ACABQ, in its comments on the Secretary-General's report [A/55/479], said that it did not receive an adequate reply to a clarification it had sought on the scope of application covered by the report; that clarification should be provided to the Assembly's Fifth Committee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/532/Add.1 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 55/232 without vote [agenda item 116].

Outsourcing practices

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/256 of 7 April 2000,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on outsourcing practices and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that programme managers are guided by the following four basic reasons for outsourcing:

(a) To acquire technical skills not readily available within the Organization, including accessing state-of-the-art technologies and expertise or acquiring needed flexibility to meet quickly changing circumstances;

(b) To achieve cost savings;

(c) To provide a source more effectively, efficiently or expeditiously;

(d) To provide an activity or service not needed on a long-term basis;

2. Affirms that at least the following three significant goals must be considered with regard to the use of outsourcing by the United Nations:

(a) To respect the international character of the Organization;

(b) To avoid a possible negative impact on staff;

(c) To ensure appropriate management and/or control over the activities or services that have been outsourced;

3. Affirms also the firm commitment of the United Nations to provide fair treatment on as wide a geographical basis as possible to all participants involved in United Nations procurement activities, including outsourcing;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to consider outsourcing actively in accordance with the guidance and goals mentioned above and to ensure that programme managers satisfy all of the following criteria in their assessment of whether or not an activity of the Organization could be fully, or even partially, outsourced:

(a) Cost-effectiveness and efficiency: this is considered to be the most basic criterion; unless it can be adequately demonstrated that an activity can be done significantly more economically and, at the very least, equally efficiently, by an external party, outsourcing may not be considered;

(b) Safety and security: activities that could compromise the safety and security of delegations, staff and visitors may not be considered for outsourcing;

(c) Maintaining the international character of the Organization: outsourcing may be considered for activities where the international character of the Organization is not compromised;

(d) Maintaining the integrity of procedures and processes: outsourcing may not be considered if it will result in any breach of established procedures and processes;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session on the following:

(a) Progress achieved with regard to the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution, including information on the location and type of outsourced activities and the reason therefor;

(b) The activities outsourced during the years 1999-2000, by providing similar detailed information as mentioned in paragraph 5 (a) of the present resolution;

6. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit to conduct a management audit review of outsourcing in the United Nations and the United Nations funds and programmes in accordance with existing practice and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session.

Use of private management consulting firms

The Secretary-General transmitted a JIU report entitled "Policies and practices in the use of the services of private management consulting firms in the organizations of the United Nations system" [A/54/702]. The report examined the policies and practices governing their use to determine what practical advantages and disadvantages had resulted and to draw conclusions regarding system-wide standards, guidelines and procedures, paying due regard to internal and external oversight services as a primary source of expertise in management, and to formulate recommendations for improving current policies and practices with a view to regulating the use of such firms.

The Inspectors concluded that it was a sound practice for the organizations to use outside expertise in support of their mandated programmes when such expertise was not available in-house. Management consulting firms, in particular, helped to gather experience, identified best practices and introduced new technologies. Organizations should first make every effort to ascertain that the expertise required was not available internally or that it was indeed more economical to have recourse to consulting firms, which were, as a rule, very costly. Noting that organizations in many cases appeared to choose firms from mostly Western countries, the report said firms from other countries and regions, including developing countries, should be given equal opportunity to bid for consulting contracts.

The report laid out elements that it said should be reflected in guidelines for subcontracting, feasibility studies, procedures and checklists for the call for bids and methods for evaluating potential consulting firms. The organizations should ensure adequate means to monitor as closely as possible the performance of management consulting firms, including their transfer of new management skills, and so as to ensure creation and preservation of institutional memory. They should conduct ex post facto evaluations of the performance and extent of implementation of the recommendations of those firms, especially cost-effective benefits and the impact of their work within the organization, and should share the results of such evaluations with other organizations. Organizations should also reinforce system-wide cooperation and coordination in using such firms by, among other things, sharing rosters of cost-effective firms with UN experience; guarding against possible conflicts of interest when awarding contracts or when hiring former agents or personnel of those firms; adopting a policy of rotating management consulting firms to ensure they derived the broadest possible benefits; and advertising for international biddings in as many official languages and in as many countries as possible.

Internal and external printing

In response to section X of General Assembly resolution 54/251 [YUN 1999, p. 1378], the Secretary-General submitted a comprehensive report on the Organization's internal and external printing practices [A/55/132]. The report provided quantitative information on the total cost of operating all printing facilities in New York and Geneva; the capacity of all the plants; the organizations' printing workload; the printing programme that was contracted out; and the comparative costs for in-house and external printing. It also contained information on measures taken to achieve economies of scale, including through the development of common services; those taken to ensure that outputs were measured in the same way throughout the system; and the potential for reducing the budget for printing as a result of reductions in hard-copy output. There were also data on printing activities at UN Headquarters in New York and in Geneva and information supplied by certain UN funds and programmes.

The report concluded that there had been a steady reduction in the Organization's internal and external printing programme at Headquarters and in Geneva over the last three bienniums. Internal printing had been reduced by 31 per cent in physical terms (page impressions) and by some 20 per cent in costs, while the external jobs were down by 35 per cent in dollar terms. The report said that reductions had resulted in better management of the Organization's publication activities and closer monitoring of requirements on the part of the users. Extensive introduction of modern technologies for the electronic storage of documentation and desktop publishing had also contributed to the reduction of paper output. The Secretariat would further streamline its printing practices to respond to the needs of the Organization and its Member States, as well as to General Assembly guidelines.

ACABQ urged the Secretary-General to continue to make the UN printing services an attractive option for the Organization's funds and programmes, which were also urged not to arbitrarily rule out recourse to them [A/55/7/Add.1]. ACABQ requested that it be kept informed about measures taken to improve the in-house publishing capacities of the UN Office at Geneva (UNOG) so that UN specialized agencies located in the city could increasingly use them. It suggested an independent technical evaluation of printing practices at UNOG, the costs of internal printing and outsourcing.

Measures to increase profitability of UN commercial activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/220 [YUN 1997, p. 1421], the Secretary-General submitted a November report [A/55/546], which identified a number of measures the Secretariat could take to boost sales and revenues, as well as attract more customers for UN commercial services. The report, largely based on an independent assessment conducted by a private consulting firm contracted by the Secretariat, covered the work of the UN Postal Administration, the guided tours, the UN Bookshop/publications, the Gift Centre, catering services and the newsstand. The report observed that the overall outlook and approach to the management of commercial activities at the United Nations needed to be changed if their profitability was to be increased. Those activities should be distinct from the Secretariat's core work and the Organization's overall non-commercial nature. It was also noted that the proposal for a new UN visitors' experience would lead to an increase in the number of visitors as well as the attendance registered by the various commercial activities. A strategic plan would be developed to communicate clearly the long-term vision in the planning of commercial activities and to coordinate efforts across those activities. New, adjusted management practices would be undertaken jointly by the Department of Public Information and the Office of Central Support Services, to which UN commercial entities currently reported, with a view to ensuring consistency and maximizing effectiveness and efficiency.

Marketing activities for each commercial area were extremely limited in financial as well as human resources, and there was a need for planned promotional coordination throughout the commercial operations. That process would include market research and development, product pricing and market placement, as well as order fulfilment and efficient product delivery mechanisms. The management of each commercial activity needed to carry out customer surveys, provide customer service training to staff and improve the services delivered. The Secretariat intended to look into the economic and substantive viability of outsourcing market research and client feedback from Member States, with a view to conducting those activities regularly. The mix of products available for sale, their presentation and the method of sales would all be redefined based on the information accessed through such surveys.

More systematic promotion of commercial activities by tour guides would be introduced, as would simple upgrading of the current signage to make it more user-friendly and easy to follow. During the next biennium, the Commercial Activities Service would look into developing web-based sales to boost sales and better promote the UN image. Management changes would be introduced to ensure that revenue and other financial information became available as required, thereby laying the foundation for better strategic management and planning. Those changes would be accompanied by a continued effort to address the issue of creating a service-oriented culture and raising the overall level of professionalism within those units directly involved in managing commercial services, while preserving the non-commercial nature of the United Nations.

The report also contained specific recommendations for the UN Postal Administration, the guided tours, the UN Bookshop/publications, the Gift Centre and the catering services.

ACABQ, in November [A/55/7/Add.1], said it intended to revert to the matter, since the Secretary-General suggested that the report should be reviewed in conjunction with his forthcoming report on the proposed new visitors' experience.

UN premises and property

Facilities management

ACABQ, in November [A/55/7/Add.1], considered the Secretary-General's report [YUN 1999, p. 1379] updating information on principal properties occupied by the United Nations worldwide. It welcomed the Secretary-General's efforts in exploring ways of coordinating a common approach to the management of UN buildings and land valued at some $5,186,900,000. ACABQ agreed with his approach towards the coordinating role of Headquarters in the overview of all UN facilities, and shared his view that the postponement, due to lack of resources, of preventive maintenance often increased the overall need for resources for emergency repairs at a later date. In that regard, it was of the view that the current level for major maintenance expenditures at UN-owned buildings was well below the minimum recommended industry standards. ACABQ indicated its intention to review the subprogramme, which would be fully detailed in the capital master plan (see p. 1405) and proposed programme budget for 2002-2003 and would make its recommendations accordingly.

Overseas Properties Management Information Exchange Network

The Secretary-General, in August [A/55/210], proposed the establishment of an Overseas Properties Management Information Exchange Network (OPMIEN) to facilitate the coordination of common concerns related to UN property and facilities worldwide, as recommended by the pilot seminar held in New York from 31 January to 8 February. It would be composed of an Organization-wide team of professionals from each duty station. The team would network and exchange information on best practices, common approaches and policy directives that would enhance the safety, reliability, efficiency and operations of the facilities, while integrating into the buildings infrastructure evolving technological innovations. The Office of Central Support Services, in collaboration with the team, would provide a coordinating role for monitoring information exchange and policy dissemination with respect to locations outside Headquarters. The report gave details of the functions of OPMIEN, its terms of reference, membership and budgetary, manpower and other resources.

The Secretary-General said that OPMIEN would develop and maintain a database of all land, buildings and property values, office and conference spaces and guidelines for consistent operations, environmental controls, facilities planning and budgeting. It would meet once a year at one of the duty stations. The funding and other resources required by it would be included in the regular budgets of the offices at each of the duty stations. Integrated alterations, improvements, major maintenance and construction programmes would be projected over a long-range planning period (10 to 15 years). Medium-term plans and biennial programme budget proposals would continue to be presented in the four- and two-year cycles, but with greater emphasis on the coordination and integration of programme elements and on budgetary consistency over longer periods. The Secretary-General would report to the General Assembly periodically on the specific activities and accomplishments of OPMIEN.

In November [A/55/7/Add.1], ACABQ stressed the importance of reliable and comprehensive databases in all major areas of facilities management. It stated that membership of the proposed OPMIEN should be organized in a way that would ensure efficiency.

Asbestos problem

In March [A/54/779], the Secretary-General submitted a report entitled "Review assessment and management of the asbestos problem at United Nations Headquarters", pursuant to General Assembly resolution 54/249 [YUN 1999, p. 1289]. According to the report, the UN Headquarters buildings were constructed when the use of asbestos-containing materials (ACMs) was common for thermal insulation of piping and ductwork, fireproofing/acoustic treatment of walls and ceilings, strengthening vinyl floor tiles and electrical insulation. The UNDC-I and UNDC-II buildings did not contain any ACMs since they were constructed when the use of such materials was already discouraged. All leased spaces in other Headquarters buildings were inspected for ACMs and proper abatement or containment procedures were followed prior to occupancy. All known ACMs in Headquarters buildings were currently maintained in a non-friable, or encapsulated, state by inspections, testing and engineering controls. Any ACMs that might become friable during maintenance, alteration or construction were removed or encapsulated, on an as-needed basis, in accordance with proper safety, monitoring and control measures.

There had been adequate funding in the 2000-2001 ($1 million) and previous bienniums to manage the required asbestos management and control programme. Industry standards and guidelines indicated that the practice of removing asbestos materials only when a planned or unplanned activity could disturb the material and leaving the rest of encapsulated ACMs alone was the recommended option for occupied buildings and had been found to pose minimum risk to the health and safety of occupants. Under the proposed extensive buildings renovation programme in the capital master plan (see p. 1405), when staff would be relocated from multiple floors, complete removal of all ACMs from occupied spaces would be undertaken.

ACABQ, in March [A/54/7/Add.12], recommended that information be provided on buildings in Geneva, Vienna, Nairobi and the locations of the regional commissions.

By decision 54/476 of 7 April, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report and endorsed ACABQ's recommendation.

In response to that recommendation, the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/55/135], which provided an assessment of the existing conditions with regard to ACMs at UN buildings located in Addis Ababa, Bangkok, Beirut, Geneva, Nairobi, Santiago and Vienna. The assessment showed that the United Nations Office at Nairobi, and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon, had no ACMs in their buildings, infrastructure elements and equipment, and hence no further action was required at those locations. Asbestos was used to different degrees in buildings at the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna, and at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) headquarters in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean headquarters in Santiago, Chile, and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific headquarters in Bangkok, Thailand.

For all those facilities, applicable regulations of the host country were followed with regard to monitoring, engineering controls, removal and disposal of ACMs. The emphasis at all those facilities had been to conduct regular inspections, testing and indoor air quality monitoring to ensure that all ACMs remained encapsulated and did not become friable, and that the fibre count in the air remained well below industry-established safe threshold limits. Adequate engineering control measures were in place to make sure that the safety and health of the staff, delegates and visitors were not adversely affected by the presence of ACMs. In addition, any ACM that could become friable by maintenance, alterations, improvement or other activities was either removed or encapsulated by following established safety, monitoring and control measures.

There had been no known or documented cases of asbestos contamination or known adverse health effects from the release of asbestos fibres. All facilities had developed or were developing a programme of phased removal of ACMs over a multi-year period, consistent with safety, operations, space availability and budgetary considerations.

ACABQ, in November [A/55/7/Add.1], said it intended to review the asbestos problem at the UN Office at Vienna and to inform the Assembly accordingly. It expressed concern that no tests had been performed to determine the type of ACMs in Addis Ababa, but noted that a programme of bulk samples testing to determine the extent of the asbestos problem was being developed in co-ordination with Headquarters to commence in 2001.

Addis Ababa conference facilities

The Secretary-General submitted an October annual progress report [A/55/493] on the construction of conference facilities at ECA in Addis Ababa, which had begun on 29 April 1991. The project was closed and capitalized in the Organization's books on 30 June 2000, and no further reports on it would be submitted. The construction costs totalled $114,937,567. The uncommitted balance of $290,927 remained on the construction-in-progress account, which totalled $7,702,600 as of 30 June. The Secretary-General recommended retention of those funds, pending consideration of all related matters.

ACABQ recommended the acceptance by the General Assembly of the Secretary-General's requests [A/55/7/Add.7].

Capital master plan

A June report of the Secretary-General [A/55/117] reviewed the long-term capital master plan developed for the United Nations Headquarters complex in New York in accordance with the budget appropriation for the 1998-1999 biennium. The plan, which covered the buildings and land owned by the United Nations in New York, with the exception of the residence of the Secretary-General, reviewed the current condition of the facilities and assessed their requirements over a 25-year period. The master plan was based on several assumptions, including the fact that UN Headquarters would remain in its current New York location, and that the Headquarters complex should be energy efficient, free of hazardous materials and compliant with host city building, fire and safety codes and should provide full accessibility to all persons. Other assumptions were that Headquarters should meet all reasonable, modern-day security requirements and the most cost-effective and technologically viable method of implementation selected for all repair and refurbishment. The current condition of the Headquarters complex was unacceptable for continued use over the long term. The capital master plan outlined the work required to rectify the situation and provide a safe, secure, appropriate and energy-efficient facility for carrying out the vital business of the Organization.

The estimated cost for the capital master plan ranged from $875 million for a three-year option for the planned programme to $1,054 million for a 12-year option, exclusive of any financing or maintenance costs. Each option had advantages and disadvantages in terms of costs and the impact that the refurbishment programme would have on operations at Headquarters. The Secretary-General believed that the most practical and desirable approach was a six-year option, at an estimated cost of $964 million, under which 33 per cent of the Headquarters facility would be under construction at the same time and would require the availability of swing space at an estimated cost of between $62 million and $91 million. The Secretary-General also examined the option of complete demolition and reconstruction of the Headquarters buildings, which would cost an estimated $992 million. There would be additional costs for relocating the entire Secretariat staff for up to five years at an estimated $218 million, bringing the total cost to $1,210 million. In addition, there would be further costs for convening all meetings away from UN Headquarters, which would be substantial for the Organization. The report suggested three possible sources of funding for the capital master plan: special assessments; the programme budget; and voluntary contributions, in cash or in kind, from public and private sources.

The Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly endorse in principle the proposed six-year plan; approve a special assessment of $8 million to cover the costs of the initial schematic design for the plan, including the swing space requirement to provide a detailed basis for its implementation; and request the Secretary-General to continue exploring all financing options for meeting the plan's costs, including its amortization over a 25-year period, and to submit no later than 2001 a comprehensive schedule and financing plan.

An ACABQ report [A/55/7/Add.4] welcomed the Secretary-General's report, stating that it expected that there would be close coordination with local authorities regarding health and safety requirements at all stages of the capital master plan. It recommended that the Secretary-General be authorized to proceed with the preparation of the comprehensive design plan and cost analysis and that an additional $8 million be appropriated under section 31, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, of the 2000-2001 programme budget. The General Assembly might wish to encourage the active participation of the host Government, as well as state and local authorities, in the project of comprehensive renovation of the UN Headquarters complex, including its funding. ACABQ required that the Secretariat provide information on the participation of host Governments and local authorities in maintaining UN assets in their respective countries. In response to that request, the Secretary-General submitted an addendum to his report [A/55/117/Add.1] containing the required information.

On 23 December, the Assembly, in resolution 55/238, section IV (see p. 1301), took note of the Secretary-General's report and approved the recommendations of ACABQ.

Security

The Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on Security (Bonn, Germany, 16-18 May) [ACC/2000/10] made a number of recommendations to ACC covering security training, communications, residential security measures, hostage incident management, security management in the field and the use of technology. It also discussed policy issues. The Meeting urged continuation of the "mobile training team" concept implemented by the Office of the UN Security Coordinator, and welcomed the proposal by the Office to establish four regional training centres. It requested UNICEF to establish a working group on communications and to review proposals made previously on minimum communications standards. It called for systematic implementation of UN policy on hostage incident management by all UN agencies, and urged the Office of the UN Security Coordinator to take the lead role as the focal point for handling those questions. The Meeting also called on the Office to develop guidelines on the Organization's role as an intermediary. UN system agencies were advised to bring cases of domestic violence affecting staff to the attention of the Designated Official, the Field Security Officer or Agency Security Officer and, as appropriate, to the Office of the UN Security Coordinator.

Security arrangements in Geneva

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/249 [YUN 1999, p. 1289], the Secretary-General submitted an October report on security arrangements at the UN Office at Geneva [A/55/511]. The report stated that, in the light of the demonstrated vulnerability of the Palais des Nations, considerable efforts had been made to improve the efficiency of the security and to upgrade the level of protection in the most vulnerable areas. Some $767,800 in the 1998-1999 biennium and budgetary provision of $746,000 in the 2000-2001 biennium had been or were being utilized to improve overall security. Further security reinforcement work programmed for 2000 and 2001 included the installation of additional cameras for the video control system, additional remote-controlled metal shutters, the extension of the electronic access control system and reinforcement of further sections of the perimeter fencing and entrance gates.

However, the penetration of the compound by a well-organized group and its occupation of a conference room underscored the need to devise a joint security strategy with the Swiss authorities. Consequently, a task force comprising security specialists representing the Swiss Federal and Cantonal authorities and the UN Office at Geneva recommended close cooperation among the security services of both sides and the preparation of a jointly defined and coordinated response scenario for all types of incidents. It also proposed a security concept for the Office compound, which would include a reinforced perimeter, an intermediate buffer zone and providing the buildings proper with reinforced protection against forced entry. The estimated portion of funding the security concept, which was to borne by both sides, was some $2.7 million, which was $2 million higher than the amounts spent or allocated in the 1998-1999 and 2000-2001 bienniums. The Secretary-General intended to address the requirements for upgrading the security of the UN compound at Geneva in the context of the 2002-2003 programme budget.

Chapter I

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

In 2000, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued to act as a catalyst for the development and transfer of peaceful nuclear technologies; to build and maintain a worldwide nuclear safety regime; and to assist in efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

The forty-fourth session of the IAEA General Conference (Vienna, 18-22 September) adopted resolutions on: strengthening international cooperation in nuclear, radiation and waste safety, and IAEA's technical activities; the safety of radioactive waste management and nuclear research reactors; strengthening the effectiveness of the safeguards system and application of the 1997 Model Protocol Additional to Safeguards Agreements [YUN 1997, p. 1519]; application of IAEA safeguards in the Middle East; safeguards inspections in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and Iraq; the safety of transport of radioactive materials; measures against illicit trafficking in nuclear and other radioactive sources; and the production of potable water.

In 2000, IAEA membership remained at 130.

Activities

Nuclear safety

IAEA continued to provide nuclear safety services and assistance worldwide. In 2000, the Agency published safety requirements and safety guides for the design and operation of nuclear power plants and provided safety services regarding their siting, design and operation, the safety of research reactors and the regulatory aspects of nuclear safety. Safety missions were undertaken to the Czech Republic, France, Spain, Switzerland, Ukraine and the United States. Safety review missions to research reactors under project and supply agreements were carried out in Colombia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Indonesia, Malaysia, Morocco, the Philippines, Thailand and Viet Nam. Overall, IAEA reviews indicated a general improvement in the operational safety of nuclear power plants throughout the world, but the safety of research reactors continued to cause concern, prompting an expanded range of IAEA activities in that area.

IAEA launched the Review of Accident Management Programmes service and developed guidelines for the Peer Review of Operating Safety Performance Experience service. During the year, countries participating in the Incident Reporting System, operated jointly with the Nuclear Energy Agency of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD/NEA), submitted 68 reports concerning unusual events at nuclear power plants, as well as actual and potential safety problems.

In 2000, the European Atomic Energy Community (EURATOM) acceded to the 1994 Convention on Nuclear Safety [YUN 1994, pp. 925 & 1417], bringing the total number of parties to 53.

Radiation safety

IAEA's radiation safety programme continued to focus on the development of a unified set of safety standards and their application; implementation of the Agency's radiation protection rules; and the provision of advice and services to member States. Peer reviews of national radiation safety infrastructure were conducted in 24 member States during 2000. Through the technical cooperation Model Project on strengthening radiation and waste-safety infrastructures, IAEA provided technical support and assistance to more than 50 States. Implementation of the action plan on the safety of radiation sources and the security of radioactive materials continued. A system for categorizing radiation sources was established and a new international Code of Conduct on the Safety and Security of Radioactive Sources was developed. An international conference of national regulatory bodies was organized by the Agency in Buenos Aires, Argentina, in December. IAEA, with other UN agencies, received requests for assessments of areas with possible residues of radioactive material in the Balkans and in the Middle East.

Nuclear power

In 2000, the nuclear power programme reflected the growing economic competitiveness arising from the liberalization of electricity markets around the world. A number of documents were published and databases further expanded, containing guidance on engineering and management practices for achieving improved safety, reliability and economic cost-effectiveness of nuclear power plants. IAEA launched the project on Innovative Nuclear Reactors and Fuel Cycles, which would build upon programme activities on new technologies and applications, including small and medium-sized reactors, high temperature modular gas-cooled reactors and desalination applications. IAEA provided technical support for preparations for nuclear plant projects in Africa, Asia, Europe and Latin America; life management of power plants in Europe and Latin America; personnel training and qualification in the Commonwealth of Independent States; and modernization of instrumentation and control in Europe and Latin America. During the year, two large regional projects were completed in Europe on improving operations management and inspection of WWER-440/100 nuclear reactors.

Nuclear fuel cycle

In 2000, IAEA and OECD/NEA published Uranium 1999: Resources, Production and Demand, considered to be the foremost world reference on uranium. It provided substantial new information from all major uranium-producing centres throughout the world, and analysed industry statistics and worldwide projections of nuclear energy growth and uranium requirements and supply. During the year, IAEA activities focused on uranium resources and production, including environmental issues, and on spent fuel technologies. In October, an international symposium in Vienna addressed the uranium production cycle and its impact on the environment.

Radioactive waste management

The radioactive waste management programme in 2000 emphasized waste minimization and facility decommissioning; the implementation of waste management initiatives, with a greater focus on disposal issues; technology transfer and information exchange; and international cooperation in the geological disposal of high-level and long-lived wastes. A scientific forum on waste management, organized during IAEA's General Conference in September, agreed that public acceptance of the technological solutions to the safe management of radioactive waste was critical. Other IAEA activities and documents focused on the application of waste management technologies and options for recycling waste.

Marine environment and water resources

Activities in the marine environment continued to focus on protection of the oceans and coastal seas through radioactivity monitoring and assessment, and the use of nuclear and isotopic techniques for understanding pollutant behaviour. The work programme emphasized capacity-building, quality assurance activities and education and training in marine environmental protection. The IAEA Marine Environment Laboratory in Monaco continued to serve as a focal point for training and research studies on the transfer of nuclear and non-nuclear contaminants in contrasting marine ecosystems. During the year, IAEA and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) launched the Joint International Isotopes in Hydrology Programme, designed to integrate isotope hydrology techniques into the water sector activities of member States.

Food and agriculture

Under its food and agriculture programme, IAEA transferred, through technical cooperation, techniques and strategies that resulted in a number of achievements in the area of food security. They included advances in controlling fruit flies through the use of the sterile insect technique (SIT); eradicating rinderpest with the help of immunoassay techniques; introducing better crop varieties developed through radiation and more efficient nitrogen-fixing tree species for improving soil fertility and crop production; and adopting food irradiation to improve food safety and securing plant health. Progress was also made in identifying new opportunities for harnessing nuclear techniques. A Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)/IAEA symposium (Vienna, October) addressed the use of nuclear techniques in integrated plant nutrient, water and soil management. IAEA also continued research and training activities related to improved plant breeding, animal production, pest control, and food and environmental protection.

Human health

In 2000, IAEA's human health programme focused on the prevention of malnutrition, detection of contaminant levels affecting humans, and diagnosis and management of cancer and nutritional, infectious and genetic disorders. In particular, it concentrated on the validation of new nuclear tools for diagnosing drug-resistant strains of malaria and tuberculosis and the use of nuclear techniques to screen newborns for thyroid deficiency. Radiotherapy techniques for the treatment of cancer were made more accessible, and the Agency assisted several member States in verifying the quality of radiation measurements.

Technical cooperation

In 2000, IAEA continued to implement its 1999-2000 technical cooperation programme and approved the programme for 2001-2002. Expenditure on technical cooperation totalled $11,435,725. Programme implementation in 2000 was higher than in 1999, with new obligations totalling $66 million.

IAEA's technical cooperation activities included helping Ethiopia to create a 12-year groundwater assessment programme, using isotope hydrology applications; similar work was ongoing in other countries. The Agency signed an agreement with the Organization of African Unity to combat jointly the tsetse fly using SIT, and supported the World Health Organization (WHO) in its initiatives against tuberculosis and malaria. In collaboration with WHO and national disease control programmes, IAEA embarked on a three-year project in 11 African countries to evaluate new diagnostic tools for drug-resistant strains of tuberculosis and malaria. The Agency also supported new applications for nuclear and isotope technologies, such as a project in Europe on humanitarian demining.

Safeguards responsibilities

All information available to IAEA in 2000 led to the conclusion that nuclear material and other items placed under safeguards remained in peaceful nuclear activities or were otherwise accounted for. Over 900 facilities and locations were under Agency safeguards or contained safeguarded material. As at 31 December, 224 safeguard agreements with 140 States (and with Taiwan Province of China) were in force. Safeguards agreements that satisfied the requirements of the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2373(XXII) [YUN 1968, p. 17], were in force in 128 States. Protocols Additional to safeguards agreements [YUN 1997, p. 1519] for 57 States were approved by the Board of Governors. Eighteen such Protocols were in force.

During the year, 2,467 safeguard inspections were performed. However, IAEA was unable to fulfil its safeguards mandates in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and Iraq (see PART ONE, Chapter IV).

Nuclear information

In January 2000, the Agency convened an industry forum in Vienna with the aim of broadening and enhancing its contacts with non-traditional partners. The forum allowed private sector representatives to exchange views with the IAEA secretariat on the future prospects for nuclear power and related applications. IAEA continued to increase user access to information in electronic formats and posted a series of information pages on its WorldAtom web site. IAEA published some 163 books, reports, journal issues and leaflets and distributed some 800 video products. Regional public information seminars were held in Brazil, Finland, Hungary, Romania and Thailand.

The International Nuclear Information System, with 122 participating members (103 countries and 19 international organizations), continued to collect and distribute bibliographic information on nuclear literature published in member States, as well as on texts not readily available through commercial channels.

Secretariat

At the end of 2000, IAEA secretariat staff totalled 2,173, including 912 in the Professional and higher categories and 1,261 in the General Service category.

Budget

The 2000 regular budget amounted to $199.3 million, of which $191 million was from assessed contributions by member States, $4 million from income from reimbursable work and $4.3 million from miscellaneous income. Actual budget expenditure amounted to $196.4 million. A total of $38.7 million in extrabudgetary funds was provided by member States, the United Nations, international organizations and other sources.

NOTE: For further information, see Annual Report 2000, published by IAEA.

Chapter II

International Labour Organization (ILO)

In 2000, the International Labour Organization (ILO) continued to promote social justice and economic stability and improve labour conditions. ILO's strategic objectives were to promote and realize fundamental principles and rights at work; create greater opportunities for women and men to secure decent employment and income; enhance the coverage and effectiveness of social protection; and strengthen tripartism and social dialogue.

In 2000, ILO membership increased to 175 with the admission of Kiribati.

Meetings

The eighty-eighth session of the International Labour Conference (ILC) (Geneva, 30 May–15 June) adopted a new international Maternity Protection Convention (No. 183), revising the Maternity Protection Convention (No. 103) and its accompanying Recommendation No. 95. The Conference took action to compel the Government of Myanmar to comply with the ILO Forced Labour Convention (No. 29).

Sectoral and other meetings convened in Geneva during 2000 included: Meeting of Experts on Safety in the Use of Insulation Wools (17–26 January); Symposium on Information Technologies in the Media and Entertainment Industries: Their Impact on Employment, Working Conditions and Labour-Management Relations (28 February–3 March); Joint Meeting on Lifelong Learning in the Twenty-first Century: The Changing Roles of Educational Personnel (10–14 April); Tripartite Meeting on the Social and Labour Impact of Globalization in the Manufacture of Transport Equipment (8–12 May); Tripartite Meeting on Moving to Sustainable Agricultural Development through the Modernization of Agriculture and Employment in a Globalized Economy (18–22 September); and Tripartite Meeting on Labour Practices in the Footwear, Leather, Textiles and Clothing Industries (16–20 October).

International standards

ILO activities with regard to Conventions and Recommendations during 2000 included standard-setting and the supervision and promotion of the application of standards. Supervisory bodies reviewed existing procedures and standard-setting policy.

In June, ILC adopted a new international Maternity Protection Convention (No. 183) and Recommendation (No. 191).

ILO standards covered a broad spectrum of work-related issues, ranging from social security and occupational health and safety to basic workers' rights, such as the abolition of forced labour and child labour, and equality and freedom of association.

Employment and development

ILO continued in 2000 to help constituents combat unemployment and poverty through the creation of employment opportunities and improvement of existing jobs. ILO also provided advice and guidance to constituents on employment and labour market policies, as well as on their labour market information and statistical systems. Activities to promote employment included support to constituents to develop entrepreneurship through the creation of cooperatives and small and micro-enterprises, particularly by vulnerable groups.

Regarding human resources development, ILO emphasized the adaptation of training policy and delivery to the rapidly changing skill requirements and the special needs of vulnerable groups. It also responded to the needs of countries affected by conflict.

Field activities

In 2000, extrabudgetary expenditure on operational activities totalled $82.5 million compared to $78.2 million in 1999. The leading field of activity in terms of annual expenditure (representing 46 per cent of total expenditure) was the employment sector ($37.7 million), followed by the standards and fundamental principles and rights at work sector (28 per cent), and social protection- and social dialogue-related activities (9 and 13 per cent, respectively). Interregional and global activities accounted for some $19 million.

In terms of regional distribution, Africa accounted for 31 per cent of total expenditure ($25.5 million), Asia and the Pacific for 23 per cent ($19.3 million), and Latin America and the Caribbean for 15 per cent ($12.6 million). Expenditure in Europe showed a decrease of 14 per cent, to $4.5 million, and the Arab States programme decreased 49 per cent, to $1.5 million in 2000.

Educational activities

The Turin Centre and the International Institute for Labour Studies, both autonomous institutions, reported to the ILO Governing Body. The Centre continued to carry out training and related activities in a wide range of technical areas as an integral part of ILO technical cooperation activities. The Institute continued to carry out research, encouraged networking related to emerging labour policy issues and acted as a catalyst for future ILO programme development. Institute activities on labour policy issues focused on an analysis of the relationships between social exclusion, labour institutions and poverty, and an exploration of the changing global organization of production and its social implications at the local level.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, ILO employed a total of 2,259 full-time staff. Of those, 971 were in the Professional and higher categories and 1,288 were in the General Service category.

Budget

In June 1999, ILC adopted a budget of $467 million for the 2000-2001 biennium.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to work towards the achievement of sustainable global food security by raising levels of nutrition and standards of living, improving agricultural productivity and advancing the condition of rural populations.

At its one hundred and nineteenth session (Rome, Italy, 20-25 November), the 49-member FAO Council decided to convene in November 2001 a world food summit to review progress towards the goal of the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129] of reducing the number of hungry in the world from 800 million to 400 million by 2015. As lead agency in preparations for the International Year of Mountains in 2002, declared by the General Assembly in resolution 53/24 [YUN 1998, p. 994], FAO continued to work with other UN agencies, Governments and non-governmental organizations to increase international awareness of the global importance of mountain peoples and ecosystems.

The FAO Director-General established the Panel of Eminent Experts on Ethics in Food and Agriculture to advise on issues related to accelerating technological development, changes in the resource base, and market and economic developments, in the context of their relevance to food security and sustainable rural development.

In 2000, FAO membership remained at 180 countries, plus the European Community.

World food situation

World cereal production in 2000 fell to 1,852 million tonnes, some 2 per cent below the previous year's level and below the average for the preceding five years. Factors contributing to the contraction in output ranged from natural disasters and low prices to government policies aimed at cutting excess supply. Global wheat production fell slightly to 586 million tonnes, mostly due to severe droughts in parts of Europe and North Africa and in several countries in Asia. Global output of coarse grains registered a 2 per cent drop to 869 million tonnes, mostly because of weather damage in parts of Asia and Europe. World rice output fell to 397 million tonnes, down by almost 3 per cent compared with 1999; however, it was still the second highest on record. The contraction was primarily due to diversification of crops in response to weak rice prices.

FAO's Global Information and Early Warning System, in cooperation with the World Food Programme (WFP), fielded an increasing number of crop and food supply assessment missions and issued 43 special alerts about impending food shortages. In response, some 29 emergency operations worth about $1.4 billion were jointly approved by FAO and WFP for food assistance to affected populations. The Inter-Agency Task Force on the Horn of Africa adopted a new strategy to break the cycle of chronic food insecurity in the region, which proposed ways to protect rural people from external shocks by broadening their livelihoods and enhancing their resilience.

Activities

Emergency assistance

FAO's Special Relief Operations Service (TCOR) continued to provide assistance to rehabilitate agriculture devastated by natural or human-induced calamities. In 2000, TCOR obtained $65 million to fund 114 projects in 42 countries, and $403 million for the execution of the agricultural component of the oil-for-food programme in Iraq (see p. 302).

Field programmes

Through its field programmes, FAO provided technical advice in food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry and rural development. Expenditures for the year totalled $353 million ($180 million for its emergency agricultural rehabilitation programme and $173 million for development and technical support). Thirty projects, prepared with assistance from the FAO Investment Centre, were approved for financing for total investments of $1.6 billion, including supporting loans of $1 billion from financing institutions.

The Special Programme for Food Security (SPFS) assisted developing countries, particularly low-income food-deficit countries, to improve national and household food security on an economically and environmentally sustainable basis. By October, SPFS was in operation in 61 countries in Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America and Oceania.

Crops and livestock

FAO continued in 2000 to participate in activities related to plant biological diversity; crop management and diversification; seed production and improvement; crop protection; agricultural engineering; prevention of food losses; and food and agricultural industries. It also contributed to the development of animal production and health programmes through better resource utilization, improved processing and commercialization, and better control of animal diseases. Through the Global Rinderpest Eradication Programme, FAO tracked down the last pockets of the virus in Africa and Asia as part of its goal to eliminate the livestock disease by 2010.

Forestry

The FAO Forestry Department continued its work in forest resource management, forest policy and planning, and forest products. In 2000, the Global Forest Resources Assessment 2000, the most comprehensive collection of data on the state of the world's forest resources, was released. FAO also intensified support for national forest programmes and for international processes to promote sustainable forest management, including the United Nations Forum on Forests (see p. 979).

Fisheries

The FAO fisheries programme promoted sustainable development of responsible fisheries and contributed to food security through activities in fishery resources, policy, industries and information. Priorities included implementation of the FAO Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries.

Food standards and nutrition

In 2000, the Codex Alimentarius Commission, responsible for implementing the Joint FAO/World Health Organization Food Standards Programme, began developing standards for genetically modified foods. The Commission also continued to develop standards, guidelines and other recommendations to protect consumer health and ensure fair practices in the food trade.

Environment and natural resources management

FAO continued activities aimed at achieving more productive and efficient use of the Earth's natural resources to meet current and future food and agricultural needs in a sustainable manner, concentrating on six main areas: natural resources assessment and planning; farming systems development; plant nutrition development and management; water development, management and conservation; soil management, conservation and reclamation; and sustaining the potential of natural resources.

Plant and animal genetic resources

FAO provided technical assistance in plant breeding, the safe movement of germ plasm and associated systems. It assisted its members to comply with the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights as it related to plant varieties, animal breeds, related technology and germ plasm.

Information

FAO continued to function as an information centre, collecting, analysing, interpreting and disseminating information through various media. The World Agricultural Information Centre provided immediate access to FAO's bibliographical information, documents and multimedia resources through the Internet and on CD-ROM.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, FAO had a full-time staff of 3,442, of whom 1,350 were in the Professional or higher categories, and 2,092 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The regular programme budget for the 2000-2001 biennium was $650 million.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) continued in 2000 to promote cooperation in education, science, culture and communication among its member States.

The General Conference, which met biennially to decide on policy, programmes and budgetary matters, was scheduled to hold its thirty-first session in 2001. The 58-member Executive Board held its one hundred and fifty-ninth (9-26 May) and one hundred and sixtieth (9-25 October) sessions, both at UNESCO headquarters in Paris.

UNESCO membership remained at 188 in 2000.

Activities

Education

UNESCO, together with the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the World Bank, convened the World Education Forum (Dakar, Senegal, 26-28 April). The Forum adopted the Dakar Framework for Action, in which participants reaffirmed their commitment to achieving education for all by 2015, and entrusted UNESCO with the overall responsibility of coordinating international partners and sustaining their collaborative momentum. The Forum was the culmination of the Education for All 2000 Assessment, an in-depth evaluation of basic education. The World Education Report 2000: The Right to Education: Towards Education for All throughout Life focused on education as a basic human right, the underlying principle of the Dakar Framework for Action.

An International Expert Meeting in Goa, India, led to the preparation of policy guidelines and an action plan for socio-culturally relevant science and technology education. The Joint International Labour Organization/UNESCO Committee of Experts on the Application of the Recommendations concerning Teaching Personnel (Geneva, 11-15 September) made several recommendations for improving the status of teachers worldwide. UNESCO contributed to the International Year for the Culture of Peace (2000) (see p. 634) through its educational activities, and provided assistance for the elaboration of strategies to strengthen the teaching of human rights. UNESCO also addressed the development of technical and vocational education, the prevention of HIV/AIDS and drug abuse, and civics education.

In 2000, the Associated Schools Project network continued to expand, promoting activities such as experimentation in 130 countries. The programme involved 7,000 schools in 171 countries.

Sciences

Under its programme of sciences in the service of development, UNESCO continued to promote the advancement, sharing and transfer of knowledge. It emphasized the fostering of synergies between the exact and natural sciences and the social and human sciences.

Natural sciences

In 2000, UNESCO's activities continued to focus on the advancement, sharing and transfer of scientific and technological knowledge, the training of scientists and the provision of advisory services and training programmes on science and technology policy-making and planning. As the clearing house for follow-up activities to the 1999 World Conference on Science [YUN 1999, p. 1393], UNESCO worked towards the implementation of the Conference's recommendations.

Through the Abdus Salam International Centre for Theoretical Physics, operated jointly with the International Atomic Energy Agency, UNESCO provided research opportunities and advanced training in physics and applied mathematics to some 1,500 scientists from developing countries.

In the environmental sciences, UNESCO pursued activities related to natural disasters, terrestrial ecosystems, biological diversity, desertification, oceans, coastal areas and small islands, and marine, terrestrial and freshwater resources, as well as environmental education. The Man and Biosphere Programme, in partnership with the secretariat of the 1992 Convention on Biological Diversity [YUN 1992, p. 683], continued to promote the Ecosystem Approach. During 2000, the biosphere reserves network expanded, bringing the number of reserves to 391 in 94 countries; new reserves were nominated in India, Malawi and Pakistan. In 2000, UNESCO hosted the secretariat of the World Water Assessment Programme. Through its Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC), UNESCO continued to play a key role in coordinating UN activities in ocean and coastal issues. The IOC Committee on International Oceanographic Data and Information Exchange, which included 57 national oceanographic data centres and designated national authorities, held its sixteenth session (Lisbon, Portugal, 30 October–9 November) to define new directions for the programme.

Social and human sciences

Activities in the social and human sciences included strengthening research and training capacities, mainly through the establishment of UNESCO chairs, networks and other mechanisms for inter-university cooperation, and building bridges between social scientists and decision makers under the programme called Management of Social Transformations. As part of its future-oriented studies, UNESCO established a Council on the Future, an advisory network for gathering views and recommendations from leading experts in the field. In addition, in a new report, The World Ahead: Our Future in the Making, UNESCO addressed issues such as population, water, desertification, poverty, development, women, cities, education, new technologies, the future of languages and Africa tomorrow. The organization also continued efforts to increase awareness about issues related to women and a culture of peace; tolerance and non-violence; human rights education; and the ethics of scientific knowledge and technology.

UNESCO promoted a culture of peace at the national, regional and international levels. As part of its observance of the International Year of Culture (see p. 634), it organized the Asian Women for a Culture of Peace Conference (Hanoi, Viet Nam, 6–9 December), in cooperation with Viet Nam and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific. The Conference was part of the preparations for the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World (2001–2010), for which UNESCO had been designated as the lead agency by the General Assembly in resolution 55/47 (see p. 635).

Culture

In 2000, UNESCO's cultural development activities included a meeting of the Committee of Experts on the Strengthening of UNESCO's Role in Promoting Cultural Diversity in the Context of Globalization (Paris, 21–22 September); an international training workshop on the Living Human Treasures System (Seoul, South Korea, November); and several intercultural projects as part of preparations for the United Nations Year of Dialogue among Civilizations, 2001, declared by the General Assembly in resolution 53/22 (YUN 1998, p. 1031).

UNESCO continued to promote international and national standards for better protection of moveable and immovable cultural heritage. The Third Meeting of Governmental Experts on the Draft Convention on the Protection of Underwater Cultural Heritage was held at UNESCO headquarters in July. On 15 November, UNESCO marked the thirtieth anniversary of the 1970 Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property. In addition, UNESCO published the International Code of Ethics for Dealers in Cultural Property and launched a fund for the return and restitution of cultural property.

A further 61 sites were inscribed on the World Heritage List, bringing the number of sites protected under the Convention for the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage to 690 in 122 States.

Communication

UNESCO promoted activities in favour of press freedom, notably through the worldwide celebration of World Press Freedom Day on 3 May. The UNESCO/Guillermo Cano World Press Freedom Prize was awarded in 2000 to Nizzar Nayyoub, a journalist from the Syrian Arab Republic recently released from prison. The organization supported independent media in areas of conflict, as well as in countries undergoing transition from an authoritarian to a democratic regime.

The need for greater affordable access to information, especially in developing countries, was highlighted during INFOethics 2000, UNESCO's third Congress on the challenges of cyberspace. UNESCO established a new Information Programme for All to bridge the gap between the information-rich and information-poor, and its communications advocacy, training and capacity-building activities in developing countries assisted a variety of media outlets and communications professionals.

The International Consultation Meeting of UNESCO Chairs in Communication (Mexico City, 10–11 July) agreed on a new medium-term plan of action, which called for research on the uses of new technologies in developing countries, information exchange over the Internet and public access to new communications technologies in Latin America and their impact on development.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, UNESCO had a full-time staff of 2,348, of whom 1,090 were in the Professional or higher categories and 1,258 in the General Service category, drawn from 153 nationalities.

Budget

The UNESCO General Conference, at its 1999 session, approved a budget of $544,367,250 for the 2000-2001 biennium.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

In 2000, the World Health Organization (WHO) adopted a new corporate strategy that focused on reducing excess mortality and disability; reducing risk to human health; developing health systems that equitably improved health outcomes; and placing health at the centre of economic and development policy. The strategy also identified WHO's core functions: advocacy for health; information management; technical support; partnership-building; innovation; and the development and monitoring of norms and standards.

The World Health Assembly, WHO's governing body, at its fifty-third session (Geneva, 15-20 May), adopted resolutions on HIV/AIDS; the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunization; the draft framework convention on tobacco control (see p. 1170); the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases; the Stop Tuberculosis Initiative; and food safety. The issue of HIV/AIDS in Africa and its impact on peace and security was debated by the Security Council (see p. 81). WHO played a leading role in launching the global strategy to combat HIV/AIDS worldwide.

The one hundred and fifth session of the WHO Executive Board (Geneva, 24-29 January) endorsed the organization's new corporate strategy, recommended several resolutions for adoption by the World Health Assembly, and, among other things, took action regarding collaboration with non-governmental organizations and several other financial and management matters. At its one hundred and sixth session (Geneva, 22-23 May), the Board discussed smallpox eradication, the Roll Back Malaria Initiative, and the 2002-2003 programme budget as a key tool for implementation of the new corporate strategy, in addition to other management and financial matters.

The World Health Report 2000—Health Systems: Improving Performance offered new approaches to the analysis of health systems. The report focused on the essential functions and performance of health systems, including their responsiveness to people's needs and the equality of health financing.

In 2000, WHO membership remained at 191, with two associate members and four observers.

Health policy

During the year, WHO worked with national health authorities around the world to formulate better health-care policies, design more efficient health systems and deliver better health care, especially to those in greatest need. In March, the organization merged its programmes on non-communicable disease and social change and mental health into a single cluster covering chronic health conditions, accidents, disabilities, violence and mental health. WHO also launched a global strategy on mental health, as well as its global strategy on non-communicable diseases, and initiated its first world report on violence and health to raise awareness regarding the public health aspects of violence.

Health and development

In 2000, WHO established the Commission on Macroeconomics and Health, which brought together a group of the world's leading economists and economic policy makers to assess the linkages between health and development and between poverty and disease, with the aim of identifying the potential for better health as a contributor to human well-being and prosperity. The urgency of targeting the causes and consequences of health conditions that affected the poor and perpetuated poverty was also emphasized at the Third International Conference on Priorities in Health Care (Amsterdam, Netherlands, 22-24 November).

Disease trends and control efforts

New initiatives launched in 2000 by WHO to improve the health of poor people included: Roll Back Malaria; the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunization; Stop Tuberculosis; the International Partnership against AIDS in Africa (see p. 1166); Kick Polio Out of Africa; and Making Pregnancy Safer. Those new ventures brought in new WHO partners, broadening international efforts to improve global public health. As a result of those efforts, more than 190 countries and territories were expected to be polio-free by the end of 2000. WHO also succeeded in its global elimination target for leprosy by the end of 2000.

Secretariat

At the end of 2000, WHO employed a staff of 3,486, including 1,293 posts at the Professional and higher categories and 2,065 in the General Service category.

Budget

The World Health Assembly, in 1999, adopted a budget of $842,654,000 for the 2000-2001 biennium.

NOTE: For further details of WHO activities, see the World Health Report 2000 and 2001, published by the organization.

Chapter VI

World Bank (IBRD and IDA)

The World Bank consisted of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) and the International Development Association (IDA) (see below). Collectively, the following five institutions were known as the World Bank Group: IBRD, IDA, the International Finance Corporation, the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA) and the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID).

In fiscal 2000 (1 July 1999–30 June 2000), the World Bank continued to promote sustainable economic development by providing loans, guarantees and related technical assistance for projects and programmes in developing nations. Within the context of the Bank's central objective of poverty reduction, key focal points of its assistance were economic management and private and financial sector development. Special attention was also given to human development, including the strengthening of health services, education and social protection, and environmental management.

IBRD began working with countries interested in piloting the Comprehensive Development Framework (CDF) [YUN 1999, p. 1398], which recognized the multidimensional nature of the challenges in poverty reduction and the need for extensive partnerships. The Bank's framework and strategies for poverty reduction were outlined in The World Development Report 2000/2001.

At the end of fiscal 2000, IBRD membership remained at 181.

Lending operations

Gross disbursement by IBRD totalled $13.3 billion, a decrease of nearly 25 per cent from fiscal 1999. The Bank's loan commitment also decreased to $10.9 billion for 97 new operations in 41 countries, a more than 50 per cent reduction from the previous fiscal year. Having reached peak levels in the wake of the 1997/98 financial crises, demand for IBRD funds subsided in 2000 as global financial markets recovered and emerging market economies regained access to private capital flows. Lending to IBRD "crisis borrowers"—Argentina, Brazil, Indonesia, the Republic of Korea, the Russian Federation and Thailand—which accounted for $13 billion in fiscal 1999, was down to $1.8 billion in fiscal 2000.

Compared to the preceding two fiscal years, the regional composition of commitments in fiscal 2000 shifted away from East Asia and slightly more towards Eastern Europe, Central Asia and Latin America. The five largest borrowers were Turkey ($1.8 billion), China ($1.7 billion), Brazil ($1.3 billion), Mexico ($1.2 billion) and Colombia ($941 million). Lending focused on strengthening the financial sector ($1.6 billion), improving public sector management ($1.5 billion) and meeting infrastructure needs ($1.8 billion).

International Development Association

Established in 1960 as the Bank's concessional lending arm, IDA provided interest-free loans and other services to low-income countries to reduce poverty and improve the quality of life. In 2000, 81 countries were eligible for IDA assistance. IDA credits to those countries totalled $4.4 billion.

At the end of 2000, IDA membership had increased to 161 countries.

Fiscal 2000 was the first of the three years of the twelfth replenishment of IDA (IDA-12), which provided resources for new financing commitments during fiscal 2000–2002. The IDA-12 replenishment of $20.5 billion included $11.6 billion of new donor funds, $8 billion of its own resources and IBRD's contribution of $0.9 billion. As at 30 June, available IDA-12 resources totalled 7.4 billion special drawing rights.

In fiscal 2000, total IDA lending commitments reached $4.4 billion for 126 operations in 52 countries, compared to $6.8 billion in the previous fiscal year. The size of new IDA operations averaged under $35 million in fiscal 2000, compared to $55 million for 1990–1999. The decline in IDA lending commitments in fiscal 2000 reflected the confluence of country-specific factors, especially policy and institutional performance and conflict situations in Africa and Asia, as well as an increasing focus on selectivity and aid effectiveness. The largest commitments were to India ($867 million), the United Republic of Tanzania ($330 million) and Viet Nam ($286 million). New IDA commitments to the Africa region stood at $2 billion, about the same as for fiscal 1999, but they constituted a higher share of total IDA lending and approached the 50 per cent target set by donors. Overall, sub-Saharan Africa accounted for almost half of IDA commitments.

The majority of IDA lending went to support for human development ($1.6 billion), followed by economic reform, recovery and private-sector development, largely in Africa ($0.7 billion), infrastructure needs ($0.6 billion) and assistance for agriculture and the environment ($0.5 billion).

Although IDA was legally and financially distinct from IBRD, it shared the same staff, and the projects it supported had to meet the same criteria as those supported by IBRD.

International Centre for

Settlement of Investment Disputes

ICSID, established in 1966, continued to encourage foreign investment by providing international facilities for conciliation and arbitration of investment disputes. In 2000, 12 new cases were registered with the Centre. ICSID also undertook research and publishing activities in arbitration and foreign investment law.

In 2000, ICSID's membership totalled 131.

Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency

MIGA, established in 1988, continued to encourage the flow of foreign direct investment to its developing member countries by providing investment guarantees against non-commercial risks. The Agency also provided technical assistance to help developing countries disseminate information on investment opportunities. MIGA had its own operating and legal staff, but drew on the Bank for administrative and other services. In 2000, MIGA had 152 members.

In fiscal 2000, MIGA issued $1.6 billion in guarantee coverage for a cumulative total of $7.1 billion.

World Bank Institute

In 2000, the World Bank Institute reached some 30,000 participants in nearly 150 countries through some 500 training activities. It scaled up its programmes through distance learning, global knowledge networks, extended partnerships, and by harnessing the newest learning technologies. A new initiative, the Global Development Learning Network (GDLN), provided clients with new learning opportunities through videoconferencing, the Internet and peer exchanges; 13 GDLN centres were operational and over 50 countries had expressed interest in the initiative. Demand for assistance in developing knowledge strategies was also expanding, as countries, such as China and Viet Nam, sought to use global and domestic knowledge more effectively in support of economic and social development.

Co-financing

In fiscal 2000, co-financing amounted to $9.3 billion, a decrease of $2.1 billion compared to the previous year. Official bilateral and multilateral partners continued to be the largest source of co-financing, accounting for 59 per cent of the total share. Major co-financing partners included the Inter-American Development Bank ($2.6 billion); private sponsors ($2.2 billion); the Andean Development Corporation ($900 million); the Montreal Protocol Investment Fund ($230 million); the Global Environment Facility ($197 million); and European Union institutions ($165 million). By region, the majority of co-financing went to Africa (47 per cent), followed by Latin America and the Caribbean (41 per cent), East Asia and the Pacific (5 per cent), Europe and Central Asia (3 per cent), the Middle East and North Africa (2 per cent) and South Asia (2 per cent).

Financing activities

During fiscal 2000, IBRD raised $15.8 billion in medium- and long-term debt, compared to $22.4 billion the previous year. The majority of new funding continued to be initially swapped into floating rate United States dollars, with conversion to other currencies or fixed-rate funding being carried out subsequently in accordance with funding requirements.

As at 30 June 2000, outstanding borrowings totalled $114 billion, after swaps. The currency composition continued to be concentrated in United States dollars, with its share as at 30 June 2000 rising to 80 per cent of the borrowing portfolio, compared to 79 per cent as at 30 June 1999. Borrowing was carried out in 13 currencies, resulting in 148 transactions.

Capitalization

As at 30 June 2000, the total subscribed capital of IBRD was $188.6 billion, or 98 per cent of its authorized capital of $190.8 billion. Outstanding loans and callable guarantees totalled $120.1 billion, or 57 per cent of IBRD's statutory lending limit.

Income, expenditures and reserves

IBRD's gross revenues totalled $10 billion in fiscal 2000, compared with $9.8 billion in fiscal 1999. Net income amounted to $1.99 billion, up from $1.52 billion in fiscal 1999. Expenses decreased to $8.1 billion, compared to $8.2 billion a year earlier. Administrative costs fell to $935 million, from $965 million in 1999. At the end of fiscal 2000, the Bank's liquidity totalled $24.2 billion, a decrease of $5.8 billion compared to 1999. Its equity-to-loan ratio rose to 21.23 per cent as a result of higher net income and the increase in reserves.

Secretariat

As at 30 June 2000, IBRD's regular, fixed-term and long-term consultants, and long-term temporary staff in Washington, D.C., and local offices numbered approximately 8,000.

NOTE: For further details regarding the Bank's activities, see The World Bank Annual Report 2000.

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

The International Finance Corporation (IFC), part of the World Bank Group, continued in fiscal 2000 (1 July 1999–30 June 2000) to promote growth in developing countries by financing private sector investments, helping to mobilize capital in the international financial markets and providing technical assistance and advice to Governments and businesses. To address concerns about the environment and the social consequences of development, IFC made corporate responsibility a top priority in its investment and advisory activities.

In the aftermath of the global financial crises of the late 1990s, the Corporation helped companies to restructure and use capital more effectively. IFC increased its gross investment approvals by more than 10 per cent in fiscal 2000 and expanded investments in new sectors, such as information technology. Nearly 70 per cent of project approvals were for financial and infrastructure projects.

During fiscal 2000, IFC membership remained at 174.

Financial and advisory services

In fiscal 2000, IFC's Board of Directors approved a total of $5.8 billion in financing for 259 new projects in 81 countries, compared with 255 projects in 77 countries in fiscal 1999. Total project cost of the enterprises supported by IFC amounted to more than $21 billion, compared with $15.6 billion the previous year. In 2000, IFC approved investments in six countries for the first time: Armenia, Chad, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, the Syrian Arab Republic and Turkmenistan.

Organizational changes were undertaken during the fiscal year to ensure that IFC's investment, portfolio management and advisory operations were more closely aligned with strategic priorities. Several World Bank/IFC jointly managed departments, known as Global Product Groups, were created, with a focus on mining, oil, gas and chemicals, information and communication technologies, private sector advisory services, and small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs).

Cumulative contributions to the IFC-managed technical assistance trust funds totalled $525 million in fiscal 2000, compared with a cumulative total of $451 million at the end of fiscal 1999. Projects supported by the funds during the year included a study of industries and the convening of a private sector development conference in the West Bank and Gaza; an environment audit for a gold company in Tajikistan; the conversion of a not-for-profit organization to a microfinance bank in Cambodia; and a project aimed at turning small Moldovan banks into effective financing sources for SMEs.

Regional projects

IFC approved 259 projects in 81 countries and regions in fiscal 2000. It also reconfigured its regional structure.

In sub-Saharan Africa, IFC's priorities focused on support for private infrastructure development, expanding and strengthening financial institutions, and assisting indigenous entrepreneurs in building competitive businesses. It approved 80 projects in 25 countries in fiscal 2000, compared to 80 projects in 26 countries in fiscal 1999. As at 30 June 2000, IFC's committed portfolio, including loans and investments, totalled $1.48 billion, up from $1.33 billion in fiscal 1999.

In Asia and the Pacific, IFC continued to rehabilitate corporate and financial sectors in market economies and assisted the development of market institutions in transition economies. IFC initiated a programme to enhance the capital and technological base of existing clients and new ventures, and strengthened commercial banks and other financial intermediaries. In addition, it developed trade finance facilities to increase exports, and supported new venture funds. In fiscal 2000, IFC approved 54 projects in 12 countries of the region, compared to 33 projects in 8 countries in fiscal 1999. Its committed portfolio totalled $6.7 billion.

In the Middle East and North Africa, IFC focused on reducing constraints on private enterprise in order to foster economic development. It increased the capacity of its field offices in Cairo, Egypt, and the West Bank to undertake investment work. The Corporation approved 16 projects for 10 countries in fiscal 2000, compared to 22 projects in 8 countries in fiscal 1999. IFC's committed portfolio totalled $877 million.

In Europe and Central Asia, IFC was mainly active in Georgia, the Russian Federation and Ukraine where it built grass-roots programmes to help create and strengthen private enterprises through technical assistance in corporate governance, leasing and self-sustaining business centres. IFC activities aimed to attract further foreign investment throughout the region and build support for market reforms. Although the need for IFC as an investor was declining rapidly in Central Europe, it would continue to provide advice on the challenges facing private sector development and help countries prepare for integration into the European Union. Southern Europe presented a major development challenge, with only Croatia and Turkey reporting a per capita gross national product of more than $1,500. Significant progress was made on small-scale privatization in Central Asia, but results in the privatization of larger enterprises and in the financial sector were mixed. IFC approved 47 projects in 19 countries in fiscal 2000, compared with 61 projects in 19 countries the previous year. Its committed portfolio totalled $3.67 billion.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, lack of credit had created an unprecedented demand for multilateral development banks like IFC to provide investment financing to the private sector. IFC's regional strategy was aimed at helping private firms develop environmentally and socially responsible frontier sectors that previously had been in the hands of Governments, such as housing finance, transportation, water and sanitation, health and education. IFC also concentrated on building the domestic financial sector and directly supported middle-market firms in agribusiness, manufacturing and services. In fiscal 2000, IFC approved 58 projects in 15 countries, compared to the same number of projects in 16 countries in fiscal 1999. Its committed portfolio totalled $8.83 billion, compared to $8.23 billion in fiscal 1999.

Foreign Investment Advisory Service

The Foreign Investment Advisory Service (FIAS), jointly operated by IFC and the World Bank, continued to advise Governments on policies, law, regulations and procedures to increase inflows of productive foreign direct investment.

In fiscal 2000, FIAS completed 50 advisory projects, of which 16 were projects requiring a simple approval process and involving a small amount of resources. Twelve projects dealt with investment law reviews, four served groups of countries trying to coordinate investment policies and promotion activities, and eight dealt with the reduction of barriers to investment.

Financial performance

In fiscal 2000, IFC's net income increased to $380 million from $249 million in fiscal 1999. The loan portfolio generated net income of $67 million, while the net income from the equity and quasi-equity portfolios recovered to $188 million, after falling to $76 million in fiscal 1999, mainly because of lower loss provisioning in fiscal 2000. Net income from IFC's invested net worth and treasury activity totalled $153 million.

IFC's committed portfolio at the end of the fiscal year was $13.5 billion, up from $12.9 billion in fiscal 1999. The portfolio consisted of loans, equity investments, risk management products and guarantees in 1,333 companies in 113 countries.

Capital and retained earnings

As at 30 June 2000, IFC's net worth reached $5.8 billion, compared to $5.3 billion at the end of fiscal 1999.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, IFC employed 1,875 staff, of whom 1,182 were in the Professional or higher categories and 693 were in the General Service category.

NOTE: For further details of IFC activities, see International Finance Corporation 2000 Annual Report, published by the Corporation.

Chapter VIII

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

During 2000, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) promoted currency exchange stability; assisted in the establishment of a multilateral payments system; made its general resources temporarily available to members experiencing balance-of-payment difficulties; and helped to shorten the duration and lessen the degree of disequilibrium in members' international balances of payments. The IMF Executive Board acted during the year to transform its operation by increasing the transparency of members' policies and of IMF activities; developing and strengthening international standards of good practice; helping member countries strengthen their financial systems; involving the private sector in preventing and resolving financial crises; transforming the former enhanced structural adjustment facility into the poverty reduction and growth facility (PRGF), which made poverty reduction a key element of a growth-oriented strategy; and enhancing the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative to provide faster and broader debt relief.

During fiscal 2000 (1 May 1999–30 April 2000), IMF membership remained at 182.

IMF facilities and policies

IMF reassessed its lending policies and facilities in fiscal 2000 to ensure that they met member country needs, introduced new safeguards to protect its resources from potential misuse by member countries and to forestall instances of misreporting by its members, and discussed ways to help them adopt sound practices of external reserve management, as part of the broader effort to strengthen the global financial system.

The IMF Executive Board eliminated the buffer stock financing facility, the contingency element of the compensatory and contingency financing facility (CCFF), and supported currency stabilization funds and commercial bank debt and debt-service reduction operations. At the same time, the Board recommended modifications to other facilities, particularly the design of contingent credit lines and other precautionary facilities, to encourage greater efforts at crisis prevention.

The Fund provided concessional financial support to low-income countries under PRGF and through the HIPC Initiative.

Financial assistance

Demands for IMF financial support fell substantially during fiscal 2000, due to improved global economic and financial conditions and a return of investor confidence in many emerging market countries. Members' drawings of IMF general resources amounted to 6.3 billion special drawing rights (SDR) compared with SDR 21.4 billion in fiscal 1999.

Drawings consisted of SDR 5.7 billion under standby and extended arrangements; SDR 0.4 billion in emergency assistance for natural disasters and post-conflict countries; and SDR 0.2 billion under CCFF. Drawings under PRGF for poor countries fell to SDR 0.5 billion, compared with SDR 0.8 billion in fiscal 1999.

As at 30 April, 16 standby arrangements, 11 extended arrangements, and 31 PRGF arrangements were in effect with members, while outstanding IMF credit amounted to SDR 50.4 billion, compared with SDR 67.2 billion a year earlier.

Liquidity

The Fund's liquidity position improved substantially in 2000 as a result of increases in members' quotas under the Eleventh General Review [YUN 1999, p. 1404], and improved global economic and financial conditions.

As at 30 April, IMF's usable resources totalled SDR 108.2 billion, an increase of SDR 42.5 billion from fiscal 1999. Net uncommitted usable resources totalled SDR 74.8 billion at the end of fiscal 2000, compared with SDR 56.7 billion in fiscal 1999.

The Fund's liquid liabilities totalled SDR 48.8 billion, compared with SDR 63.6 billion a year earlier, while the ratio of the Fund's net uncommitted resources to its liabilities increased to 153 per cent at the end of April 2000 from 89.2 per cent a year earlier, reaching levels that prevailed before the onset of the 1997 Asian financial crisis.

SDR activity

In fiscal 2000, total transfers of SDRs declined to SDR 22.9 billion, from a peak of SDR 49.1 billion in fiscal 1999. That decline could be attributed largely to payments of Eleventh Review quota increases and delays in a number of large disbursements under arrangements with members during fiscal 2000.

Transfers of SDRs among participants and prescribed holders fell to SDR 7.8 billion in 2000, from SDR 19.4 billion a year earlier, mainly due to substantial decreases in transactions by agreement, and in the use of the same-day SDR borrowing facility by members paying the reserve asset portion of their Eleventh Review quota increases.

Transfers from participants to the general resources account (GRA) declined to SDR 7.1 billion from SDR 16.2 billion in fiscal 1999, reflecting a fall in quota payments, lower use of SDRs in repayments of IMF credit and a decline in charges. Drawings from IMF in SDRs amounted to SDR 3.6 billion during fiscal 2000, representing the largest category of transfers from the GRA, followed by remuneration payments of SDR 1.7 billion to members with creditor positions. Other transfers included the termination of the second special contingent account in December 1999, which led to the distribution of SDR 1 billion from the GRA to participants.

IMF's holdings of SDRs in the GRA declined to SDR 2.7 billion at the end of fiscal 2000, from SDR 3.6 billion a year earlier. Participants' holdings of SDRs increased correspondingly to SDR 18.1 billion as at 30 April, from SDR 17.4 billion a year earlier. The SDR holdings of industrial countries relative to their net cumulative allocations increased to 95 per cent at the end of fiscal 2000, from 94.6 per cent a year earlier; those of non-industrial countries increased to 62.5 per cent of their cumulative allocations, from 52.5 per cent a year earlier. The SDR holdings of prescribed holders also increased during fiscal 2000.

Policy on arrears

Total overdue financial obligations to IMF increased slightly during fiscal 2000 to SDR 2.32 billion, from SDR 2.3 billion a year earlier. No new cases of protracted arrears emerged in fiscal 2000, nor were any of the existing cases resolved, leaving seven member countries (Afghanistan, Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, Iraq, Liberia, Somalia, Sudan) in protracted arrears.

As at 30 April, four countries (DRC, Liberia, Somalia, Sudan) were ineligible to use the Fund's general resources. Declarations of non-cooperation, a further step under the strengthened cooperative arrears strategy, were in effect with respect to the DRC and Liberia; a declaration of non-cooperation regarding the Sudan issued in September 1990 was lifted in August 1999.

Technical assistance and training

In fiscal 2000, technical assistance and training accounted for some 19 per cent of IMF's total administrative expenses. Demand for such assistance remained strong and continued to focus on the monetary, fiscal, statistical and legal aspects of macroeconomic management.

The IMF Institute continued to expand its training in different parts of the world. In 2000, it established the Joint China-IMF Training Programme and for the first time delivered a distance-learning course on financial programming and policies. The Institute also delivered several courses on financial sector issues.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, IMF employed 2,455 staff members, of whom 1,727 were Professional staff and 728 assistant staff.

In March, the Executive Board named Horst Köhler (Germany) as Managing Director to succeed Michel Camdessus (France).

Budget

The Fund's administrative budget for fiscal 2000 was approved at $575.8 million and revised by a supplementary appropriation in January 2000 to $585.1 million. For the capital budget, $67.3 million was approved for projects beginning in fiscal 2000. Actual administrative expenses during the fiscal year totalled $583 million and capital project disbursements totalled $39.3 million, including $8.5 million for major building projects.

Chapter IX

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) continued in 2000 to promote the safety and efficiency of civil air transport by prescribing standards and recommending practices and procedures for facilitating civil aviation operations. Its objectives were set forth in annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation, adopted in Chicago, Illinois, United States, in 1944, known as the Chicago Convention.

In 2000, domestic and international scheduled traffic of the world's airlines increased to some 401 billion tonne-kilometres. The airlines carried about 1.65 billion passengers and some 30.2 million tonnes of freight. The passenger load factor on scheduled services in 2000 increased slightly to 71 per cent. Airfreight increased by 8.2 per cent to 117.6 billion tonne-kilometres, and air-mail traffic increased by 5.4 per cent to 6 billion tonne-kilometres. Overall passenger/freight/mail tonne-kilometres increased by some 8 per cent and international tonne-kilometres by some 9 per cent.

The Council of ICAO held three regular sessions in 2000. In March, it appointed Renato Cláudio Costa Pereira (Brazil) as Secretary-General of ICAO for a second three-year term, effective 1 August 2000. The Council decided to convene, in 2001, a diplomatic conference to consider a draft Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment and an Aircraft Protocol thereto, which had been recommended by the ICAO Legal Committee. In June, the Council adopted revised text for ICAO's Strategic Action Plan. The Council in December adopted ICAO's Policies on Charges for Airports and Air Navigation Services.

Additionally, an ICAO task force began an implementation programme on an agreement reached in September by the Civil Aviation Administrations of China and Viet Nam. The agreement concerned the trial application of a revised route structure and airspace organization in the South China Sea area for a period of three years. Also in September, the Agreement of Co-operation between ICAO and the International Mobile Satellite Organization was signed in Montreal, Canada.

In 2000, ICAO membership remained at 185 countries.

Activities

Air navigation

ICAO continued to update and implement international specifications and regional plans, with particular emphasis on the introduction of communications, navigation and surveillance/air traffic management (CNS/ATM) systems. The specifications consisted of International Standards and Recommended Practices (SARPs) contained in 18 technical annexes to the 1944 Chicago Convention and Procedures for Air Navigation Services (PANS). Regional plans covered air navigation facilities and services required for implementation of CNS/ATM systems and other international air navigation elements in ICAO regions.

Five air navigation meetings, convened in Montreal, made recommendations to amend ICAO specifications. The Continuing Airworthiness Panel (10-21 January) developed provisions concerning the type certification process and re-structured annex 8 to provide up-to-date broad aircraft design requirements upon which a detailed code of airworthiness could be based. The Aeronautical Telecommunication Network (ATN) Panel (7-18 February) developed amendments relating to ATN systems management, security and directory service. The Aeronautical Mobile Communications Panel (22-30 March) formulated provisions for aeronautical mobile satellite services, and proposals for the next-generation satellite communications systems. The Review of the General Concept of Separation Panel (8-19 May) proposed provisions relating to lateral and longitudinal separation of 55.5 kilometres and procedures for the use of automatic dependent surveillance for air traffic management. The Secondary Surveillance Radar Improvements and Collision Avoidance Systems Panel (11-22 September) recommended amendments concerning secondary surveillance radars with discrete addressing, associated data links and enhancements to the airborne collision avoidance system. The Council also adopted amendments to four technical annexes to the Chicago Convention and approved an amendment to one PANS document.

Other projects that were given special attention in 2000 included accident investigation; accident and incident data reporting; accident prevention; aerodromes; aerodrome rescue and fire fighting; aeronautical electromagnetic spectrum; aeronautical information services; assistance to civil aviation accident victims and their families; audio-visual aids; aviation environmental matters; aviation medicine; bird strikes to aircraft; CNS/ATM systems; controlled flight into terrain; flight safety and human factors; licensing/certification of aerodromes; aeronautical meteorology; personnel licensing and training; safety oversight; the TRAINAIR programme; and year 2000 planning.

Air transport

ICAO's air transport programmes were directed towards economic analysis, economic policy, forecasting and economic planning, collection and publication of air transport statistics, airport and route facility management, economic and organizational aspects of CNS/ATM systems, economic and coordination aspects of environmental protection and the promotion of greater facilitation in international air transport.

The Conference on the Economics of Airports and Air Navigation Services (Montreal, 19-28 June) adopted 30 recommendations, which revised guidance material on the management and operation of airports and air navigation services. The results of two studies, on cost recovery for search and rescue services and on the privatization of the provision of airport and air navigation services, were presented at the Conference.

The Technical Advisory Group on Machine Readable Travel Documents (Montreal, 6-8 September) adopted new specifications for machine readable passports. The Asia/Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 22-26 May) and the Caribbean/South American (Lima, Peru, 17-21 July) Traffic Forecasting Groups supported planning of air navigation services in their regions. Five workshops in the areas of air transport regulatory policy, forecasting and economic planning, economic aspects of planning and implementing CNS/ATM systems, and statistics, two seminars on air transport regulatory policy and a Facilitation Panel meeting were also held during the year.

ICAO participated in the review process launched by the World Trade Organization of the air transport services annex in the General Agreement on Trade in Services.

ICAO continued to provide secretariat services to three independent regional civil aviation bodies—the African Civil Aviation Commission, the European Civil Aviation Conference and the Latin American Civil Aviation Commission. It also maintained responsibilities for the administration of the Danish and Icelandic Joint Financing Agreements, to which 23 Governments were contracting parties in 2000. The two agreements were concerned with the provision in Greenland and Iceland of air traffic control, communications and meteorology facilities and services to North Atlantic flights.

The Aviation Security Panel (Montreal, 11-14 April) conducted a comprehensive review of annex 17 to adjust its structure and relevancy of SARPs and examined the problem of unruly passengers.

Legal matters

The ICAO Legal Committee's Subcommittee on International Interests in Mobile Equipment (aircraft equipment) held a third joint session (Rome, 20-31 March) with the Committee of Governmental Experts of the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law (UNIDROIT), which concluded examination of the texts of a draft Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment and a Protocol thereto. The texts were reviewed by the Legal Committee (Montreal, 28 August-8 September) and submitted to the ICAO Council with a recommendation to convene a diplomatic conference for their adoption. The Council decided to convene a diplomatic conference in 2001 under the joint auspices of ICAO and UNIDROIT.

At the third and fourth meetings of the Secretariat Study Group on Unruly Passengers (Montreal, 10-11 February, 26-27 October) a draft List of Offences and a draft Jurisdiction Clause were finalized and incorporated into a draft Model Legislation on Offences Committed on Board Civil Aircraft by Unruly or Disruptive Passengers.

Ratification of or adherence or succession to conventions and protocols on international air law concluded under ICAO auspices were registered in 2000.

Technical cooperation

In 2000, ICAO undertook 127 technical cooperation projects in 78 countries. The technical cooperation programmes, financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), trust funds, management service agreements and the Civil Aviation Purchasing Service, had total expenditures of $56.9 million. Some 36 per cent of that amount was provided by Governments to fund their own projects on the basis of cost sharing with UNDP.

ICAO had resident missions in 36 countries. A total of 565 fellowships were awarded in 2000, of which 526 were implemented. ICAO employed 364 experts from 43 countries, of whom 134 were on assignments under UNDP and 230 worked in trust fund projects. There were 87 Governments and organizations registered with ICAO in 2000 under its Civil Aviation Purchasing Services. Equipment purchases in 2000 totalled $20.5 million.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, ICAO employed a total of 778 staff members, including 336 in the Professional and higher categories and 442 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

Appropriations for the ICAO budget in 2000 were $53,765,000.

NOTE: For further details on the activities of ICAO in 2000, see Annual Report of the Council, 2000.

Chapter X

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

In 2000, the Universal Postal Union (UPU) continued to promote a fast and reliable universal postal service at affordable prices through international collaboration among its member countries. UPU activities focused on postal reform and the future development of the Union, with special attention placed on the specific needs of developing countries.

UPU's 189 member countries remained the largest physical distribution network in the world, with some 6 million postal employees working in more than 700,000 post offices worldwide.

Activities of UPU organs

Universal Postal Congress

The Universal Postal Congress, UPU's supreme legislative authority, met every five years. It last convened in 1999 for the twenty-second Congress, held in Beijing, China [YUN 1999, p. 1408]. In 2000, the 25-member High-Level Group (HLG), established by the Congress to propose changes in UPU's structure, met four times; it was expected to make recommendations by the end of 2001. An Advisory Group, also established by the Congress and open to regional postal unions, non-governmental organizations and a number of postal administrations, met twice during the year, focusing on HLG's work.

Council of Administration

The Council of Administration, which ensured the continuity of the Union's work between Congresses and studied regulatory, administrative, legislative and legal issues of concern to the Union, held its annual session from 11 to 20 October at UPU Headquarters in Berne, Switzerland. It adopted several resolutions and recommendations, prepared a memorandum on principles and obligations for providing universal postal services, and signed a cooperation agreement with the World Savings Banks Institute.

Postal Operations Council

The Postal Operations Council (POC), which dealt with the operational, economic and commercial aspects of international postal services, assisted postal services to modernize and upgrade their products, including letter post, express mail service, parcels and postal financial services. At its annual session (Berne, 1-10 May), POC adopted decisions on the basic airmail conveyance rate, the supply of international reply coupons, the UPU initiative on e-business development, and the statutes and structural framework of the Quality of Service Fund, authorized by the 1999 Congress [YUN 1999, p. 1408] to help developing countries raise their quality of service pending the introduction of a new terminal dues system.

International Bureau

The International Bureau, under the supervision of the Council of Administration, was the area of the UPU secretariat that provided support, liaison, information and consultation to the postal administrations of member countries. It continued to act as a clearing house for the settlement of various inter-administration charges related to the exchange of postal items and international reply coupons. The Bureau undertook studies on developments in the postal environment, monitored the quality of postal service on a global scale and published information and statistics on international postal services.

A group of postal administration experts, after carrying out a six-month study, recommended that the Bureau be reorganized under seven centres of expertise. The proposed changes were accompanied by a number of proposals to reform management methods. The Council of Administration was informed of the Bureau's decisions and preparations were made to introduce the new structure early in 2001.

As at 31 December 2000, the permanent staff members of the Bureau numbered 151, of whom 60 were in the Professional and higher categories and 91 were in the General Service category.

Budget

Under the Union's self-financing system, contributions were payable in advance by member States based on the following year's budget. At its 2000 session, the Council of Administration approved a budget of 71.4 million Swiss francs for the 2001-2002 biennium.

Chapter XI

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

The International Telecommunication Union (ITU) continued in 2000 to promote development and efficient operation of telecommunication systems and to provide technical assistance.

At its annual session, the ITU Council (Geneva, 19-28 July) discussed, among other things, international telecommunication regulations, and adopted several resolutions and decisions covering the Union's reform process and a variety of financial and institutional matters.

During the year, the Union staged ITU TELECOM AMERICAS 2000 (Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 10-15 April), the fourth telecommunication exhibition and forum for the Americas. It also organized the ITU TELECOM ASIA 2000 (Hong Kong, China, 4-9 December), the fifth telecommunication exhibition and forum for Asia and the Pacific.

ITU membership remained at 189 in 2000.

Radiocommunication Sector

ITU's Radiocommunication Sector (ITU-R) developed operational procedures and technical characteristics for terrestrial and space-based wireless services and systems, established the global framework for managing the radio-frequency spectrum, and facilitated coordination of the frequencies and orbits used by communication, broadcasting and meteorological satellites.

In 2000, ITU-R organized two major radiocommunication meetings. The World Radiocommunication Conference (Istanbul, Turkey, 8 May-2 June), an international treaty-making forum, normally convened every two or three years, elicited widespread consensus on key issues. They included allocation of additional channels for broadcasting in Africa, Asia, Australasia and Europe; agreement on spectrum allocation for a new European satellite positioning service; finalization of spectrum-sharing arrangements between geostationary and non-geostationary satellite systems; and new allocations for emerging point-to-point and point-to-multipoint broadband wireless access technologies.

The Radiocommunication Assembly (Istanbul, 1-5 May) approved a number of recommendations on radio interface specifications and related spectrum requirements for International

Mobile Telecommunications 2000, which would provide a new global standard for harmonizing regional cellular systems as a basis for so-called "third generation" services, including fast data access, unified messaging and broadband multimedia in the form of new interactive services.

Telecommunication Standardization Sector

In 2000, the Telecommunication Standardization Sector (ITU-T) continued to foster seamless interconnection of the world's communication network and systems by developing internationally agreed technical and operating standards. ITU-T's work programme encompassed rapid developments in the global information infrastructure, including Internet Protocol networks and multimedia-based communications.

The four-yearly World Telecommunication Standardization Assembly (Montreal, Canada, 27 September-6 October) took a number of decisions designed to further streamline ITU's standards development process. New working methods were also adopted, as well as targets and deadlines for the transition to cost-oriented international settlement rates. In addition, the 14 ITU-T study groups, composed of experts from the public and private sectors, continued to develop technical specifications and operating parameters for equipment and systems covering every aspect of network operations.

Telecommunication Development Sector

The Telecommunication Development Sector (ITU-D) continued to promote investment and foster expansion of telecommunication infrastructure in developing countries. The Telecommunication Development Advisory Group, which advised ITU's Director in reviewing the priorities and strategies of ITU-D's activities, met twice in 2000, in March and October. At its first meeting, it discussed various issues, including the operational plan for 2000, study group matters and ITU-D reform. At its second meeting, it reviewed policy and strategic matters, such as Internet development. The Task Force on Gender Issues carried out its work on the main projects under implementation, including the development of a training curriculum on gender perspectives in telecommunication policy. The Telecommunication Development Bureau (BDT), the administrative arm of ITU-D, continued to provide assistance to countries in restructuring their telecommunication sectors by fostering institutional and organizational capacity through improved human resources development and management, using a range of cost-effective tools, such as tele-education and computer-based training. Major projects undertaken in 2000 included the Management Development for Telecommunications project, a public/private sector partnership programme comprising a series of workshops ranging from business planning to marketing, aimed at providing senior managers with the latest management techniques. In addition, BDT established five new Telecommunication Centres of Excellence to provide senior-level training in policy, management and technology in the developing world. During the year, ITU-D's workshops focused on the areas of fixed-mobile interconnection and Internet Protocol Telephony. The first development symposium for regulators was held to consider the emerging challenges prompted by the evolution of national, regional and global markets.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, ITU had 769 staff members, comprising 5 elected officials, 301 in the Professional and higher categories and 463 in the General Service category.

Budget

The ITU budget for the 2000-2001 biennium amounted to 332,621,000 Swiss francs.

Chapter XII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

The World Meteorological Organization (WMO), which celebrated its fiftieth anniversary in 2000, continued to facilitate cooperation in the generation and exchange of meteorological and hydrological information and the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, water problems, agriculture and other activities. WMO also promoted operational hydrology and encouraged research and training in meteorology.

The WMO Executive Council, at its fifty-second session (Geneva, 16-26 May), reviewed WMO programmes and activities, including coordination in the UN system of geosciences and their applications for the benefit of humankind; free and unrestricted exchange of international meteorological and hydrological data and products; climate matters; hydrology and water resources; and the role and operation of national meteorological and hydrological services.

WMO membership remained at 179 States and six Territories in 2000.

World Weather Watch Programme

The World Weather Watch Programme (WWW), the backbone of WMO scientific and technical programmes, provided meteorological data and products needed by member States to run their meteorological services efficiently. WWW offered up-to-the-minute worldwide weather information through its Global Observing System, the Global Telecommunication System, the Global Data-processing System, and data management and system support activities, collectively known as the basic systems. WWW also included the Tropical Cyclone Programme, the Instruments and Methods of Observation Programme and WMO satellite and environmental emergency response activities.

World Weather Watch implementation

During the year, WWW's main activities focused on assessing the impact of the observing systems, particularly radiosondes, on numerical weather predictions; surveying the use of the Internet by national meteorological services; international exchange of meteorological data and products; and further implementation of advanced telecommunication technology for the collection and distribution of data. The twelfth session of the WWW Commission for Basic Systems (Geneva, 29 November-8 December) reviewed the effectiveness of its new working structure.

Instruments and methods of observation

In 2000, activities were carried out to better meet users' needs regarding instrumentation and methods of observation. In August, the International Organizing Committee for the WMO Intercomparison of Global Positioning System Radiosondes met in Brasilia, Brazil, to prepare for a radiosonde test to be carried out in early 2001. The ninth International Pyrheliometer Comparison was held jointly with Regional Pyrheliometer Comparisons at the World Radiation Centre (Davos, Switzerland, 25 September-13 October). In all, 85 absolute pyrheliometers of various types were successfully calibrated. The WMO Technical Conference on Meteorological and Environmental Instruments and Methods of Observation (Beijing, China, 23-27 October) discussed a wide range of observing methodology issues.

Tropical Cyclone Programme

During the year, all the five regional tropical cyclone centres in Miami, Florida (United States), Nadi (Fiji), New Delhi (India), Réunion and Tokyo (Japan) accelerated the implementation of their respective regional cooperation programmes. Progress was made in implementing coordinated technical plans for tropical cyclone disaster mitigation, including training tropical cyclone forecasters. The booklet Twenty years of progress and achievement of the WMO Tropical Cyclone Programme (1980-1999) was published.

World Climate Programme

In 2000, as part of its responsibilities within the UN system, WMO contributed to a broad range of climate and environmental activities. As one of the UN agency task managers for the implementation of Agenda 21 [YUN 1992, p. 672], WMO, together with the United Nations Environment Programme, prepared a progress report on achievements of objectives regarding the protection of the atmosphere.

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, at its sixteenth session (Montreal, Canada, 1-8 May), completed three reports on land use change and forestry, emissions scenarios, and methodological and technological issues in technology transfer. It also completed a report on good practice guidance and uncertainty management for national greenhouse gas inventories.

During the year, the World Climate Applications and Services Programme focused on climate applications and services related to human health and energy. Support was provided for a World Health Organization seminar and workshop on climate change, variability and human health for small island States in Apia, Samoa. WMO co-sponsored the World Clean Energy Conference 2000 (Geneva, 24-28 January), and a number of regional climate outlook forums were held in many parts of the world.

World Climate Research Programme

The World Climate Research Programme, undertaken jointly by WMO, the International Council of Scientific Unions and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC) of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), continued studies to provide the scientific basis for predictions of global and regional climate variations on all time-scales and made projections of the magnitude and rate of human-induced climate change. One of its principal projects was the climate variability and predictability study, which included a focused investigation of the variability of the American monsoon system. The Global Energy and Water Cycle Experiment continued the collection of global climatological datasets of key climate parameters.

Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme

The Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme continued to coordinate and encourage research in atmospheric and related sciences. The development of those activities was the responsibility of the Commission for Atmospheric Sciences (CAS). Programme activities in 2000 included an international workshop on long-range forecasting and its applications (Cairo, Egypt, 23-27 January); the fifth international cloud modelling workshop (Breckenridge, Colorado, United States, 7-11 August); the third session of the Science Steering Committee for the World Weather Research Programme (Vancouver, Canada, 7-12 September); and the twentieth session of the European Community Panel of Experts/CAS Working Group on Physics and Chemistry of Clouds and Weather Modification Research (Geneva, 20-24 November).

The Global Atmosphere Watch continued to focus on improving data quality, availability and the overall performance of its global and regional measuring stations, which monitored atmospheric composition and the presence of greenhouse gases, ozone and harmful pollutants in support of international conventions on protecting the ozone layer and climate change. In 2000, a successful international Dobson spectrophotometer intercomparison was staged for the first time in Africa and a series of ozonesonde intercomparisons was conducted in Germany.

Applications of meteorology

Agricultural meteorology

In 2000, the Commission for Agricultural Meteorology held two meetings: on the impacts of agrometeorological applications for sustainable management of farming systems, forestry and livestock (Geneva, 11-14 September) and on communication of agrometeorological information (Geneva, 20-23 November). WMO co-sponsored international workshops on automated weather stations for applications in agriculture and water resources management: current use and future perspective (Lincoln, Nebraska, United States, 6-10 March) and on carbon sequestration, sustainable agriculture and poverty alleviation (Geneva, 30 August-1 September), as well as expert group meetings on early warning systems for drought preparedness and drought management (Lisbon, Portugal, 5-7 September) and on software for agroclimatic data management (Washington, D.C., 16-20 October). Roving seminars were held on geographical information systems and agro-ecological zoning (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 8-19 May) and on agrometeorological data management and applications (Pretoria, South Africa, 19-30 June).

Aeronautical meteorology

In 2000, the Aeronautical Meteorology Programme held training events related to, among other things, the application of numerical weather prediction products to aviation and to the recovery of costs for aeronautical meteorological services. By year's end, more than 200 satellite broadcast terminals had been installed in nearly 150 countries.

Marine meteorology

In 2000, under the Marine Meteorology and Associated Oceanographic Activities Programme, it was agreed to establish a subset of the voluntary observing ships to provide the data and metadata necessary for climate observation, as a contribution to the Global Ocean Observing System/Global Climate Observing System ocean climate module. In June, the second transition planning meeting for the joint WMO/IOC Technical Commission for Oceanography and Marine Meteorology, established to provide the institutional umbrella for all existing and future operational marine-related activities of WMO and IOC/UNESCO, was held at UNESCO headquarters in Paris.

Public weather services

The Public Weather Services Programme continued to assist WMO members in the observation, monitoring and prediction of weather patterns. In 2000, a project was developed to make national meteorological services' warnings available to the media. Several training seminars and workshops were organized in different regions of the world with the objective of improving participants' national public weather services.

Hydrology and water resources

In 2000, the Hydrology and Water Resources Programme focused on promoting worldwide cooperation in the evaluation of water resources and the development of hydrological networks and services, including data collection and processing, hydrological forecasting and warnings, and the supply of meteorological and hydrological data for the design and management of water projects. A new associated programme of flood management was launched in collaboration with the Global Water Partnership. The WMO Commission for Hydrology held its eleventh session (Abuja, Nigeria, 6-16 November).

Technical cooperation

In 2000, WMO technical assistance, valued at $16.56 million, was financed by trust funds (32.6 per cent), the WMO Voluntary Cooperation Programme (47 per cent), the United Nations Development Programme (15.4 per cent) and the WMO regular budget (5.1 per cent).

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, the number of full-time staff employed by WMO totalled 264. Of those, 120 were in the Professional and higher categories and 144 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The WMO Executive Council, in 1999, approved a regular budget of 126,150,000 Swiss francs (SwF) for the 2000-2001 biennium. The Thirteenth World Meteorological Congress, also in 1999, approved a maximum expenditure of SwF 252,300,000 for the thirteenth financial period (2000-2003).

Chapter XIII

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

In 2000, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) continued to improve the safety of international shipping and to prevent marine pollution from ships. Its governing body, the IMO Assembly, held its most recent biennial session in 1999.

During the year, IMO membership increased to 158, with the admission of Tonga.

Activities in 2000

The IMO Council awarded the International Maritime Prize for 1999 to Ian Mills Williams, former manager for IMO relations at the Australian Maritime Safety Authority. The Prize was awarded annually to the person, organization or other entity judged to have done the most to advance IMO objectives.

Prevention of pollution

In March, IMO adopted a new Protocol on Preparedness, Response and Cooperation to Pollution Incidents by Hazardous and Noxious Substances, which aimed at providing a global framework for international cooperation in combating major incidents or threats of marine pollution from ships carrying hazardous and noxious substances, such as chemicals.

The Marine Environment Protection Committee, at its forty-fifth session in October, achieved the first, formal step towards a global timetable for accelerated phasing out of single-hull oil tankers. The Committee approved proposed amendments to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto (MARPOL 73/78), paving the way for the adoption of a revised regulation of MARPOL in April 2001.

IMO's Legal Committee, at its eighty-second session in October, adopted amendments to the 1992 Protocol to the International Convention on Civil Liability for Oil Pollution Damage and to the 1992 Protocol to the International Convention on the Establishment of an International Fund for Compensation for Oil Pollution Damage. The amendments raised the limits of compensation payable to victims of pollution by oil from oil tankers.

Ship security and safety at sea

On 1 January, a revised annex to the International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue (SAR Convention), which was adopted in 1998, entered into force. It clarified the responsibilities of Governments, emphasizing a regional approach and coordination between maritime and aeronautical SAR operations.

A harmonized system of survey and certification covering international shipping regulations entered into force on 3 February. The system covered survey and certification requirements of the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1974 (SOLAS), the International Convention on Load Lines, 1966, and MARPOL 73/78, as well as the International Code for the Construction and Equipment of Ships Carrying Dangerous Chemicals in Bulk, the Code for the Construction and Equipment of Ships Carrying Dangerous Chemicals in Bulk and the Code for the Construction and Equipment of Ships Carrying Liquefied Gases in Bulk.

At its seventy-third session in December, the Maritime Safety Committee adopted draft amendments to SOLAS. The amendments included a revised chapter on safety of navigation, which required passenger ships and ships other than passenger ships of 3,000 gross tonnage and upwards constructed on or after 1 July 2002 to carry voyage data recorders to assist in accident investigations; an updated High-Speed Craft Code 2000; a revised SOLAS chapter on fire protection, fire detection and fire extinction, and a new International Code for Fire Safety Systems; a new regulation that prohibited the new installation of materials which contained asbestos on all ships; and amendments to a 1988 SOLAS Protocol on the details of navigational systems and equipment referred to in the records of equipment.

The Committee approved the first list of countries deemed have given "full and complete effect" to the revised International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers, 1978. As at December, the list included 71 countries and one IMO associate member.

Secretariat

As at 31 December, IMO had 274 staff members; 113 were in the Professional and higher categories and 161 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The IMO Assembly, in 1999, approved budgetary appropriations of 36,612,200 pounds sterling for the 2000-2001 biennium, of which 18,155,000 pounds was for 2000 and 18,457,200 pounds was for 2001.

Chapter XIV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

The World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) continued development cooperation, norm-setting and registration activities to promote respect for the protection and use of intellectual properties. The organization's main areas of work continued to focus on strengthening the intellectual property systems of developing countries; promoting new or revised norms for the protection of intellectual property at the national, regional and multilateral levels; and facilitating the acquisition of intellectual property protection through international registration systems.

The governing bodies of WIPO and the Unions administered by the organization held their thirty-fifth series of meetings (Geneva, 25 September–3 October).

During 2000, WIPO membership increased to 175 States, with the accession of Belize and the Dominican Republic to the 1967 Convention establishing WIPO, amended in 1979. The number of States adhering to treaties administered by WIPO also increased: as at 31 December 2000, there were 160 States parties to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, 147 to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works, and 109 to the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT).

Activities in 2000

Development cooperation

The primary focus of WIPO's work in 2000 was assisting developing countries in building infrastructures, developing human resources and implementing laws that enabled them to utilize effectively the intellectual property system for their economic, social and cultural development. To help bring developing countries into compliance with international standards, in particular the Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement) administered by the World Trade Organization, WIPO prepared 38 draft laws for 25 developing countries or regional organizations.

During the year, eight new nationally focused action plans (NFAPs) were launched. Established jointly between individual Governments and WIPO, NFAPs were aimed at helping developing countries to reach a significantly higher level of efficient management and use of the national intellectual property system.

In 2000, WIPO created a new programme to focus specifically on the intellectual property needs of small and medium-sized enterprises, which produced four fifths of all goods and services worldwide. In addition, an ad hoc Advisory Panel on Privatization was established by WIPO to help ensure that intellectual property considerations were part of national privatization efforts in developing countries and countries in transition.

The WIPO Worldwide Academy, an Internet-based nine-module course established in 1998, continued to provide teaching, training and research services in intellectual property. In 2000, the Academy trained some 2,300 men and women and cooperated with the University of Turin, Italy, in launching the first postgraduate specialization course in intellectual property, and with the Raoul Wallenberg Institute and the University of Lund, Sweden, in a new joint master's degree programme in intellectual property and human rights.

Intellectual property law

In October 2000, the Advisory Committee on Enforcement of Industrial Property Rights met for the first time to consider the challenges faced by member States in enforcing those rights, and to develop recommendations for WIPO on how to promote more effective enforcement measures. The Committee agreed on several priorities for its future work, including the identification of difficulties, training needs and best practices in the enforcement of industrial property rights.

More than five years of negotiations in the Standing Committee on the Law of Patents culminated in the adoption of the Patent Law Treaty in June 2000, with the aim of reducing the cost of patent protection in multiple countries.

The Standing Committee on Copyright and Related Rights organized a Diplomatic Conference on the Protection of Audiovisual Performances (Geneva, 7–20 December). At the end of the Conference, the aim of which was to create a new international treaty safeguarding the rights of performers against unauthorized use of their performances in audiovisual media, negotiators from over 120 countries provisionally agreed on 19 of the 20 legal provisions of the treaty. Agreement could not be reached on the issue relating to the right of transfer, namely the question of how the performers' rights were acquired by the producers, whether by law or agreement.

The Standing Committee on the Law of Trademarks, Industrial Designs and Geographical Indications agreed on a set of measures to simplify and harmonize procedures relating to trademark licences. Discussions also continued on the protection of marks on the Internet.

Arbitration and Mediation Centre

The WIPO Arbitration and Mediation Centre continued to provide less expensive and speedier alternatives to costly court proceedings in commercial disputes involving intellectual property rights. In 2000, the Centre administered some 1,840 disputes, involving parties from 74 countries. In addition to its frequent workshops, the Centre also organized the International Conference on Dispute Resolution in Electronic Commerce (Geneva, 6-7 November). Some 300 participants discussed how electronic commerce was changing the ways in which business and the legal profession approached dispute resolution.

International registration activities

PCT. In 2000, just under 100,000 international applications were filed, representing an increase of 23 per cent over the total number for 1999 and the equivalent of some 8.5 million national patent applications.

Madrid Agreement. In the trademark system under the Madrid Agreement concerning the International Registration of Marks and its 1989 Protocol, the number of international registrations reached almost 23,000 in 2000, a 15 per cent increase compared with 1999.

Hague Agreement. Under the Hague Agreement concerning the International Deposit of Industrial Designs, the number of international deposits and renewals rose to 7,300 in 2000, an 8 per cent increase compared to 1999.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, WIPO employed 783 staff members representing 84 countries; 264 were in the Professional or higher categories and 519 in the General Service category.

Budget

WIPO's principal sources of income in 2000 were fees paid by private sector users of the international protection services (85 per cent); sales of WIPO publications, fees for arbitration and mediation services and interest earnings (9 per cent); and contributions paid by member States (6 per cent). Budgeted income for the 2000-2001 biennium was 410 million Swiss francs (SwF). In 2000, the organization's budgeted income amounted to some SwF 260 million and budgeted expenditures totalled SwF 222 million.

NOTE: For further information on the organization, see WIPO Annual Report 2000, published by WIPO.

Chapter XV

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) continued in 2000 to promote the economic advancement of the rural poor, by improving the productivity of on- and off-farm activities and by designing and implementing innovative, cost-effective and replicable programmes.

The twenty-third session (Rome, 16-17 February) of the Governing Council approved the 2000 budget. The Executive Board held three regular sessions in 2000 (May, September, December); it approved loans for 27 projects and programmes, 22 grants and 11 contributions to debt reduction within the framework of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative. The Board approved a programme of work for 2001 in the amount of $394 million for loans and grants under the Regular Programme. It also recommended that an administrative budget for 2001 totalling $53.3 million be transmitted to the twenty-fourth (2001) session of the Governing Council for approval.

As at 31 December 2000, IFAD membership remained at 161 countries, of which 22 were in List A (developed countries), 12 in List B (oil-exporting developing countries) and 127 in List C (other developing countries); 49 were in Sub-List C1 (Africa), 47 in Sub-List C2 (Europe, Asia and the Pacific) and 31 in Sub-List C3 (Latin America and the Caribbean).

Resources

The Consultation to Review the Adequacy of the Resources Available to IFAD recommended a fifth replenishment to support the Fund's operations in 2000-2002. As at December 2000, member States had pledged about $383 million. The fifth replenishment was to become effective during 2001 and could range from $460 million to $569 million.

Activities in 2000

Loans approved in 2000 and financed through IFAD totalled $409 million; another $32.8 million was in grants. The total cost of the 27 projects was estimated at $1,012.5 million, of which $276 million would be provided by other external financiers and $326.7 million by financiers in the recipient countries—primarily the Governments.

Regular Programme lending was distributed as follows: Asia and the Pacific, $127.5 million for six projects in 21 countries (31.2 per cent); Western and Central Africa, $83.2 million for seven projects in 24 countries (20.3 per cent); Eastern and Southern Africa, $73.3 million for five projects in 20 countries (17.9 per cent); Latin America and the Caribbean, $64 million for four projects in 28 countries (15.7 per cent); and the Near East and North Africa, $60.9 million for five projects in 22 countries (14.9 per cent).

During 2000, 36 projects were completed; thus the number of effective projects at the end of the year was 197.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, the IFAD secretariat comprised 290 staff, including 132 staff in the Professional and higher categories and 158 in the General Service category.

Income and expenditure

The annual total of IFAD loans and grant operations at the end of 2000 was $52.7 million. IFAD's income on investments was minus $47 million and on loans it was $44.3 million, representing an annual income of minus $2.7 million. The total operating and administrative expenses for the year totalled $47.1 million.

NOTE: For further details on IFAD activities in 2000, see Annual Report 2000, published by the Fund.

Chapter XVI

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)

The United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) continued to promote the sustainable industrial development of developing countries and countries with economies in transition. As a global forum on industrialization, UNIDO facilitated the spread of industrial information, knowledge, technology and investment.

The Industrial Development Board (IDB), at its twenty-second session (Vienna, 30-31 May), considered the financing, impact and status of implementation of UNIDO's integrated technical cooperation programmes in developing countries. At its twenty-third session (Vienna, 14-16 November), IDB discussed, among other things, UNIDO's integrated programmes, field representation, global forum activities, operational activities for development, the Global Environment Facility and other programme and budget matters. The ninth session of UNIDO's General Conference was scheduled for November 2001.

During the year, UNIDO membership increased to 169, with the admission of South Africa.

Global forum activities

In 2000, UNIDO, through its global forum activities, continued to offer industry policy advice; help build institutional capacity at the country and sectoral levels; provide industrial information through networking; act as a repository for industrial statistics; and provide advice and support in the areas of quality, standardization and metrology. Those activities included initiatives to understand the dynamics of the industrial development process and disseminate lessons learned through specialized meetings and publications covering a variety of industry-related issues. Special attention was placed on technology foresight, a policy-making tool aimed at harnessing technological innovation to support the strategic priorities of society. A UNIDO-organized meeting on the theme "Marginalization versus prosperity" was held in Venice, Italy, in September. Among other activities, a joint programme with the University of Oxford (United Kingdom) to fund research on African economic performance became operational in April 2000. Following the success of that programme, UNIDO drew up an agreement with France's National Centre for Scientific Research to fund a number of industrial development activities in developing and transition economy countries. UNIDO also joined forces with the global telecommunications company Ericsson in an effort to introduce digital communications to small and rural industries in the world's poorest countries.

UNIDO co-sponsored the Asia-Pacific Forum on Industrial Development (Shanghai, China, 4-5 December), which reviewed the potential impact of China's entry into the World Trade Organization.

Integrated programmes

UNIDO provided technical cooperation through its integrated programmes, the major components of which were training, investment promotion, quality and standardization, and activities promoting cleaner industrial production and waste management. As at 31 December, 40 programmes and three country services were approved. Some 40 per cent of the programmes were for sub-Saharan Africa, 26 per cent for the Arab region and the remaining 34 per cent for programmes in Asia, Central and Eastern Europe and Latin America.

Investment promotion and institutional capacity-building

During the year, the Investment Promotion and Institutional Capacity-building Division focused on adding value to its services to developing countries and those with economies in transition through quality management, further integration of its branches' expertise and targeting of strategic alliances. Industrial policy formulation and implementation efforts focused on a mix of global forum and technical cooperation activities. To provide Internet-based access to information and knowledge on global trends and policy issues related to the dynamics of industrialization, UNIDO initiated construction of a knowledge base on industrial policies, strategies and best practices throughout the world. It also provided a wide range of industrial development policy advice to Ghana, Indonesia, Nigeria, Oman and Sri Lanka. UNIDO's International Technology Centres continued to act as outreach technology arms for services and international frameworks for cooperation in technology areas with cross-sectoral and wide economic impact. New programmes were launched with their assistance to support national efforts in technology upgrading of industrial sectors and capacity-building through North-South and South-South technology transfer and partnership. UNIDO also promoted the development of small and medium-sized enterprises with new programmes in Eritrea, Iran, Nepal and the United Republic of Tanzania, which focused specifically on women's entrepreneurship development strategies.

Environmental sustainability

In 2000, UNIDO's Sectoral Support and Environmental Sustainability Division established and reinforced partnership links with international conventions and funds, particularly in areas related to environment and energy.

As at 31 December, UNIDO was implementing 654 projects in 59 countries, valued at approximately $220 million, under the 1987 Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer [YUN 1987, p. 686]. Those activities corresponded to a phase-out of over 28,000 tons of ozone-depleting pollutants, of which 17,109 tons had already been eliminated. Three new National Cleaner Production Centres were established in Ethiopia, Kenya and Mozambique, bringing to 19 the total number of centres established since 1994.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2000, UNIDO employed a total of 655 staff members: 260 were in the Professional or higher categories, 388 were in the General Service category and 7 were national officers.

Budget

The eighth (1999) session of the UNIDO General Conference approved the organization's 2000-2001 regular budget in the amount of $167.7 million. In 2000, new project approvals amounted to $76.9 million, compared with $81.6 million in 1999.

Chapter XVII

World Trade Organization (WTO)

In 2000, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the legal and institutional foundation of the multilateral trading system, continued to oversee the rules of international trade, settle trade disputes between Governments and organize trade negotiations.

During the year, WTO launched new negotiations on trade in agricultural products and services; adopted new measures to assist its least developed members; and made progress on issues arising from the Third (1999) WTO Ministerial Conference [YUN 1999, p. 1442], including renewed efforts to launch a comprehensive round of multilateral trade negotiations. The Fourth WTO Ministerial Conference, the organization's highest authority, was scheduled to take place in November 2001.

WTO's General Council, the body overseeing WTO's work between Conferences, continued to monitor the implementation and operation of the multilateral trading system embodied in the WTO Agreement [YUN 1995, p. 1515]. It examined, among other things, the internal transparency and effective participation of member States; and mandated negotiations on agriculture and services, accessions and electronic commerce.

During the year, WTO membership increased to 140 with the admission of Albania, Croatia, Georgia, Jordan and Oman.

General activities

The three working groups set up by the 1996 Ministerial Conference [YUN 1996, p. 1441] met during 2000. The Working Group on the Relationships between Trade and Investment, in June, October and November, examined the implications of the relationship between trade and investment for development and economic growth; and stocktaking and analysis of related international instruments and activities. The Working Group on Transparency in Government Procurement, in June and September, studied the definition and scope of government procurement; procurement methods; publication of information on national legislation and procedures; information on procurement opportunities; contract awards; bribery and corruption; dispute settlement procedures; technical cooperation; and special and differential treatment for developing countries. The Working Group on the Interaction between Trade and Competition Policy, in June, October and November, discussed the relevance of WTO principles of national treatment, transparency and most-favoured-nation treatment to competition policy and vice versa; promoting technical cooperation; and the contribution of competition policy to achieving WTO objectives.

During the year, the Trade Policy Review Body carried out reviews of Bahrain, Bangladesh, Brazil, Canada, the European Union, Iceland, Japan, Kenya, Liechtenstein, Norway, Peru, Poland, the Republic of Korea, Singapore, Switzerland and the United Republic of Tanzania.

WTO continued to provide technical cooperation and training to developing countries and economies in transition to widen understanding of trade policy matters, the multilateral trading system, international law and other trade and development issues.

Trade in goods

The Council for Trade in Goods approved requests for and extensions of waivers from members in connection with the transposition of their schedules into the Harmonized Systems. It reviewed the operation of the Trade-related Investment Measures Agreement; adopted terms of reference under which 10 regional agreements were to be examined in the Committee on Regional Trade Agreements; and continued exploratory and analytical work on trade facilitation.

The Committee on Agriculture reviewed progress in the implementation of commitments under the Uruguay Round agriculture reform programme or resulting from WTO accession negotiations in market access, domestic support, export subsidies and export restrictions. Since 1995, the Committee had reviewed 1,033 notifications from member States. In 2000, the Committee commenced negotiations under article 20 of the Agreement on Agriculture on the continuation of the reform process.

The Committee on Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures monitored implementation of the Agreement on the Application of Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures, which set out the rights and obligations of members to ensure food safety, protect human health from plant- or animal-spread diseases, or protect plant and animal health from pests and diseases. In 2000, the Committee discussed trade concerns of members and considered the difficulties faced by developing countries, especially recognition of equivalence and the need for differential treatment. It developed guidelines on acceptable levels of health protection and monitored use of international standards.

Trade in services

In 2000, the Council for Trade in Services launched negotiations under article XIX of the General Agreement on Trade in Services, addressing, among other subjects, negotiating guidelines and procedures, assessment of trade in services, tourism services and modalities for the treatment of autonomous liberalization.

Intellectual property

The WTO Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) provided for minimum international standards of protection in copyright, trademarks, geographic indications, industrial designs, patents, layout designs of integrated circuits and undisclosed information. During the year, the Council for TRIPS discussed the establishment of a multilateral system of notification and registration of geographical indications for wines and issues relevant to such a system for spirits; the extension of additional protection for geographical indications to products other than wines and spirits; exclusion from patentability of plants and animals other than micro-organisms; biological processes for the production of plants or animals other than non-biological and microbiological processes; and the scope and modalities for non-violation complaints and e-commerce.

Regional trade agreements

In 2000, the Committee on Regional Trade Agreements completed factual examination of 62 of the 86 regional trade agreements under its purview.

Trade and development

The Committee for Trade and Development, in 2000, examined special and differential treatment in favour of developing countries and their participation in world trade; implementation of WTO Agreements; technical cooperation and training; concerns and problems of small economies; the development dimension of electronic commerce; and market access for least developed countries.

Plurilateral agreements

The Committee on Government Procurement continued negotiations on the expansion of the coverage of the Agreement on Government Procurement, its simplification and improvement, especially adaptation related to advances in information technology, and elimination of discriminatory measures and practices that distorted open procurement.

The Agreement on Trade in Civil Aircraft eliminated all customs duties and other charges on imports of civil aircraft products and repairs, bound them at zero level, and required adaptation of end-use customs administration. Although part of the WTO Agreement, it remained outside the WTO framework. In 2000, signatories were unable to adopt a draft protocol rectifying the Agreement.

International Trade Centre

The International Trade Centre (ITC), operated jointly by WTO and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (see p. 900), continued to undertake technical cooperation activities as a follow-up to the Uruguay Round Agreements. ITC was also responsible for the management of the Integrated Technical Assistance Programme in Selected Least Developed Countries and Other African Countries.

Budget

The WTO budget for 2000 amounted to 125,386,460 Swiss francs.

Secretariat

At the end of 2000, WTO staff numbered 534.

<sup>2</sup>Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together—following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations; it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name of Egypt on 2 September 1971.

<sup>3</sup>Through accession of the German Democratic Republic to the Federal Republic of Germany on 3 October 1990, the two German States (both of which became United Nations Members on 18 September 1973) united to form one sovereign State. As from that date, the Federal Republic of Germany has acted in the United Nations under the designation Germany.

<sup>4</sup>On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. By a telegram of 19 September 1966, it notified the Secretary-General of its decision to resume participation in the activities of the United Nations. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

<sup>5</sup>On 16 September 1963, Sabah (North Borneo), Sarawak and Singapore joined with the Federation of Malaya (which became a United Nations Member on 17 September 1957) to form Malaysia. On 9 August 1965, Singapore became an independent State and on 21 September 1965 it became a Member of the United Nations.

<sup>7</sup>Tanganyika was admitted to the United Nations on 14 December 1961, and Zanzibar, on 16 December 1963. Following ratification, on 26 April 1964, of the Articles of Union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two States became represented as a single Member: the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar; it changed its name to the United Republic of Tanzania on 1 November 1964.

<sup>8</sup>Yemen was admitted to the United Nations on 30 September 1947 and Democratic Yemen on 14 December 1967. On 22 May 1990, the two countries merged and have since been represented as one Member.

Appendix II

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971 and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;
2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;
3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion; and
4. To be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

Article 2

The Organization and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles:

1. The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.
2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.

3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.

4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations.

5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.

6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.

7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of 1 January 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Chapter III ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations: a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an International Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.

2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs.

Chapter IV THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations.

2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and Powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or both on any such questions or matters.

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.

2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.

3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security.

4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, shall notify the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

- promoting international co-operation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;
- promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph 1 (b) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provisions of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.
2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.
2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.
3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

Voting

Article 18

1. Each member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent members of the Security Council, the election of the members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1 (c) of Article 86, the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.
3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two-thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

Procedure

Article 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session.

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Chapter V

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

Composition

Article 23<sup>1</sup>

1. The Security Council shall consist of fifteen Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect ten other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.
2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members after the increase of the membership of the Security Council from eleven to fifteen, two of the four additional members shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.
3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and Powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.
2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII and XII.
3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

Voting

Article 27<sup>2</sup>

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.
2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.
3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations.

Chapter VI

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.
2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their dispute by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute, or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.
3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.
2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties.
3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.
2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

Chapter VII

ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE, AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION

Article 39

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures. These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.

3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to provide armed forces in fulfilment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement or agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.

2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.

3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorization of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional sub-committees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.

2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

If preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defence shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Chapter VIII

REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.

3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.

4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorization of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organization may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Chapter IX

INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CO-OPERATION

Article 55

With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, the United Nations shall promote:

- a. higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- b. solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- c. universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

Article 56

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 57

1. The various specialized agencies, established by inter-governmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.

2. Such agencies thus brought into relationship with the United Nations are hereinafter referred to as specialized agencies.

Article 58

The Organization shall make recommendations for the co-ordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies.

Article 59

The Organization shall, where appropriate, initiate negotiations among the states concerned for the creation of any new specialized agencies required for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 60

Responsibility for the discharge of the functions of the Organization set forth in this Chapter shall be vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council, which shall have for this purpose the powers set forth in Chapter X.

Chapter X

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Composition

Article 61<sup>3</sup>

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of fifty-four Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from twenty-seven to fifty-four members, in addition to the members elected in place of the nine members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, twenty-seven additional members shall be elected. Of these twenty-seven additional members, the term of office of nine members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of nine other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

Functions and Powers

Article 62

1. The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

2. It may make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

3. It may prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence.

4. It may call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

Article 63

1. The Economic and Social Council may enter into agreements with any of the agencies referred to in Article 57, defining the terms on which the agency concerned shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. Such agreements shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. It may co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations.

Article 64

1. The Economic and Social Council may take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies. It may make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly.

2. It may communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Article 65

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and shall assist the Security Council upon its request.

Article 66

1. The Economic and Social Council shall perform such functions as fall within its competence in connexion with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly.

2. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.

3. It shall perform such other functions as are specified elsewhere in the present Charter or as may be assigned to it by the General Assembly.

Voting

Article 67

1. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 68

The Economic and Social Council shall set up commissions in economic and social fields and for the promotion of human rights, and such other commissions as may be required for the performance of its functions.

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies.

Article 71

The Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within its competence. Such arrangements may be made with international organizations and, where appropriate, with national organizations after consultation with the Member of the United Nations concerned.

Article 72

1. The Economic and Social Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Economic and Social Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Chapter XI

DECLARATION REGARDING NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories and, to this end:

- a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- c. to further international peace and security;
- d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and
- e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

Chapter XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- a. to further international peace and security;
- b. to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
- c. to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- d. to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

- a. territories now held under mandate;
- b. territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
- c. territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.

2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79 and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties.

2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the Security Council.

2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas.

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.

2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

Chapter XIII

THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Composition

Article 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:

- a. those Members administering trust territories;
- b. such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
- c. as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.

2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and Powers

Article 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- a. consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- b. accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;
- c. provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- d. take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

Voting

Article 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

Chapter XIV

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.
2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.
2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

Chapter XV

THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.
2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.
2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.
3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Chapter XVI

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.
2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations.

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfilment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfilment of its purposes.
2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connexion with the Organization.
3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

Chapter XVII

TRANSITIONAL SECURITY ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration, signed at Moscow, 30 October 1943, and France, shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of that Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

Chapter XVIII

AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109<sup>1</sup>

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Chapter XIX

RATIFICATION AND SIGNATURE

Article 110

1. The present Charter shall be ratified by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

2. The ratifications shall be deposited with the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the signatory states of each deposit as well as the Secretary-General of the Organization when he has been appointed.

3. The present Charter shall come into force upon the deposit of ratifications by the Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, and by a majority of the other signatory states. A protocol of the ratifications deposited shall thereupon be drawn up by the Government of the United States of America which shall communicate copies thereof to all the signatory states.

4. The states signatory to the present Charter which ratify it after it has come into force will become original Members of the United Nations on the date of the deposit of their respective ratifications.

Article 111

The present Charter, of which the Chinese, French, Russian, English, and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatory states.

IN FAITH WHEREOF the representatives of the Governments of the United Nations have signed the present Charter.

DONE at the city of San Francisco the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

[1] Amended text of Article 23, which came into force on 31 August 1965.

(The text of Article 23 before it was amended read as follows:

1. The Security Council shall consist of eleven Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect six other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid in the first instance to the contributions of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members, however, three shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.)

[2] Amended text of Article 27, which came into force on 31 August 1965.

(The text of Article 27 before it was amended read as follows:

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.

3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.)

[3] Amended text of Article 61, which came into force on 24 September 1973.

(The text of Article 61 as previously amended on 31 August 1965 read as follows:

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of twenty-seven Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, nine members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from eighteen to twenty-seven members, in addition to the members elected in place of the six members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, nine additional members shall be elected. Of these nine additional members, the term of office of three members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of three other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.)

[4] Amended text of Article 109, which came into force on 12 June 1968.

(The text of Article 109 before it was amended read as follows:

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.)

Statute of the International Court of Justice

Article 1

The International Court of Justice established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Chapter I

ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state.

2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions.

2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the Court.

2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.

2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.

2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.

3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.

2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.

3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.

4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

2. No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of enquiry, or in any other capacity.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the Court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labour cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy dispatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.

2. The Rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.

2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.

3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.

4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.

5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.
2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.
3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.

4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.

5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.

6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.

7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their travelling expenses refunded.

8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

Chapter II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.

2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.

3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.

2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.

3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.

2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

- the interpretation of a treaty;
- any question of international law;
- the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
- the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.

4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.

5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.

6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:

- a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
- b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
- c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
- d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.

2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex aequo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

Chapter III PROCEDURE

Article 39

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.

2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.

3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.
3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.
2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.
2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.
2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.
3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.
4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.
5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.
2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.
2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

Chapter IV

ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorized by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.
2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.
2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.
3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.
4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

Chapter V

AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.

Indexes

USING THE SUBJECT INDEX

To assist the researcher in reading and searching the Yearbook index, three typefaces have been employed.

ALL BOLD CAPITAL LETTERS are used for major subject entries, including chapter topics (e.g., DEVELOPMENT, DISARMAMENT), as well as country names (e.g., TAJIKISTAN), region names (e.g., AFRICA) and principal UN organs (e.g., GENERAL ASSEMBLY).

CAPITAL LETTERS are used to highlight major sub-topics (e.g., POVERTY), territories (e.g., MONTSERRAT), subregions (e.g., CENTRAL AMERICA) and official names of specialized agencies (e.g., UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION) and regional commissions (e.g., ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR EUROPE).

Regular body text is used for single entries and cross-reference entries, e.g., armed conflict, juvenile detention, social development.

1—An asterisk (*) next to a page number indicates the presence of a text (reproduced in full) of General Assembly, Security Council or Economic and Social Council resolutions and decisions, or Security Council presidential statements.

2—Entries, which are heavily cross-referenced, appear under key substantive words, as well as under the first word of official titles.

3—United Nations bodies are listed under major subject entries and alphabetically.
