Statement of qualifications

Her Majesty Queen Rania Al-Abdullah

Her Majesty Queen Rania Al-Abdullah (formerly Rania Al-Yasin) was born in Kuwait on August 31, 1970 to a notable Jordanian family of Palestinian origin.

She completed her primary and secondary education in Kuwait, and in 1991 obtained a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration from the American University in Cairo.

Upon her graduation from university, Queen Rania returned to Jordan and pursued a career in banking, followed by a brief career in the field of Information Technology.

His Majesty King Abdullah bin Al-Hussein (then Prince) married Queen Rania on June 10, 1993. They have three children: HRH Prince Hussein, born June 28, 1994; HRH Princess Iman, born September 27, 1996; and HRH Princess Salma, born September 26, 2000.

After her marriage to then Prince Abdullah, Queen Rania channelled her energies behind initiatives that aim to improve the livelihood of Jordanians from various sectors of society.

As First Lady, Queen Rania's activities encompass issues of national concern, such as the environment, health, youth, and human rights, among others. She also has a special interest in several core issues: the development of income-generating projects and the advancement of best practices in the field of microfinance; the improvement of the quality of life of the family unit including the protection of children from violence and the promotion of Early Childhood Development; the incorporation of Information Technology into the educational system; and the promotion of tourism and the preservation of Jordan's heritage.

Encouraging income-generation and microfinance

In 1995, Queen Rania established the Jordan River Foundation (JRF), a non-governmental organization working at the grassroots level to motivate low-income Jordanian families to participate in microfinance and income-generating initiatives. The Foundation's projects include Jordan River Designs, Wadi Al-Rayan, and Bani Hamida. These initiatives not only assist women in creating additional sources of income to support their families, but are also designed to empower women to become decision-makers within their family unit, and to be skilled contributors to the Jordanian economy. Additionally, these projects have contributed to the revival of a heritage of craft production and tribal rug-weaving.

In 1998, and under the direction of Queen Rania, the Jordan River Foundation embarked on a project that aims to deliver non-financial business support and training to microentrepreneurs in order to assist them in launching, expanding, and improving their businesses. This initiative, focusing on long-term sustainability and the adoption of best practices, is an extension of the Queen's recognized involvement in microfinance in the international arena.

Improving the quality of life of the family unit

In 1998, Queen Rania oversaw the launching of JRF's Child Safety Program, which aims to comprehensively address the immediate needs for protecting children at risk of abuse, and to adopt a long-term campaign to increase public awareness about violence against children. "Dar Al-Aman", the Child Safety Center — the first of its kind in the Arab region — became operational in August 2000, offering protection and rehabilitation to abused and neglected children and counsel to their families.

Queen Rania heads the National Council for Family Affairs, which was established by law in September 2001 to contribute to improving the quality of life of all Jordanian families. The Council aims to ensure the right policy environment to support the development of family protection and unity, and to identify and implement mechanisms for increased coordination between Jordanian public institutions and civil society organizations working in the field of family affairs. It also collects data and information, contributes to policy developments, monitors, and shares information on the well-being of children and families.

The Council's establishment as an umbrella organization came as a fruition of concrete national efforts to promote the well-being of Jordanian families since the Queen assumed her new responsibilities. The National Team for Family Safety, which she chaired, had been set up in 2000 to safeguard women and children in particular from domestic violence and abuse, and to establish a unified policy on preventing, managing, and treating cases of abuse. The Queen also headed the National Team for Early Childhood Development, founded in 2000 to draw up a national strategy to comprehensively tackle the issue of Early Childhood Development in Jordan.

In March 2000, Queen Rania was appointed by the Jordanian Government to chair the Royal Commission on Human Rights.

Queen Rania is also establishing the first interactive children's museum in the Kingdom.

Encouraging the use of IT, tourism, and the preservation of Jordan's heritage

King Abdullah and Queen Rania have launched a nationwide initiative to introduce computers and Information Technology into schools across Jordan, and to incorporate their use into the educational system. This initiative complements King Abdullah's IT initiative.

Queen Rania also actively supports the development of Jordan's tourism sector, backing initiatives such as the International Center of Excellence Project that aims to develop and maintain Jordan's hospitality services. Through her involvement, the Queen is helping to highlight Jordan as a safe, comfortable, and first-class tourism destination that offers modernity and top-notch services on the one hand, with authenticity and heritage on the other.

On the cultural front, Queen Rania supports numerous events that promote Jordan's heritage, arts, and cultural diversity. The Queen currently heads the Higher National Committee of the Declaration of Amman the Arab Cultural Capital 2002.

She heads the Higher National Committee of the Jordan Song Festival, and also annually lends her patronage to the Jordanian Festival for the Arab Child Song.

In tribute to His Majesty the Late King Hussein, and on the first anniversary of his passing away, Queen Rania produced "The King's Gift" — a children's book about the Late King. Proceeds of the book go the benefit of underprivileged children across Jordan.

Working internationally

Queen Rania is currently President of the Arab Women's Summit, a rotating position she will assume until November 2004. The Queen assumed presidency during the Second Arab Women's Summit held in Amman in November 2002, which brought together Arab First Ladies as well as experts and activists committed to the advancement of women across the Arab World, to openly discuss the challenges and aspirations of women in the region and to further activate their role in the sustainable development of their communities.

In September 2002, Queen Rania accepted an invitation by the World Economic Forum (WEF) Foundation Board to join as a member. In January 2003, the Queen attended her first meeting as the only serving member from the Arab World. The Queen was invited to become a member of the Board in recognition of her concern for the state of the world and her commitment to engaging in collaborative efforts to meet the challenges of this century.

In November 2000, in recognition of her commitment to the cause of children and youth, the United Nations Children's Fund invited Queen Rania to join its Global Leadership Initiative. The Queen is working alongside other world leaders, including former South African President Nelson Mandela, in a global movement seeking to improve the welfare of children.

In 2001, Queen Rania became a member of the Board of Directors of The Vaccine Fund, a non-profit organization harnessing resources that seek to provide children in the poorest countries of the world with access to life-saving vaccines. She joins world-famous personalities including UN High Commissioner for Human Rights Mary Robinson, among others, to call attention to the need to vaccinate every child, everywhere.

In early 2002, Queen Rania joined the Board of Directors of the International Youth Foundation, based in Baltimore, Maryland in the United States. She joins a distinguished group of business, government, and civil society leaders from across the globe to support the work of one of the world's largest public foundations helping young people learn basic life skills and get the education, training, and opportunities they need to succeed.

Queen Rania is Honorary Chair of the Board of Governors of the "Pacem in Terris" Institute of La Roche College, which offers scholarships to outstanding students from developing countries. Some of Jordan's brightest students are recipients of this prestigious award.

She is Honorary President of the Arab Academy for Banking and Financial Sciences (AABFS), a pioneering institute in the region offering technical and academic training in banking and financial services.

She is also Honorary President of the Arab Women Labor Affairs Committee of the Arab Labor Organization.

The Queen is Patron of the International Osteoporosis Foundation (IOF), and in October 2001 was awarded the prestigious Italian Government-sponsored Life Achievement Award in recognition of her efforts for the international cause of osteoporosis.

She is President of the Jordan Society for Organ Donation and the Jordan Cancer Society.

On July 12, 2001, Queen Rania was awarded an Honorary Doctor of Laws (LLD) degree from the University of Exeter in the United Kingdom.

She is fluent in Arabic and English, as has a working knowledge of French.

B. Mr. Tadeusz Mazowiecki (Poland)

Note verbale dated 9 September 2003 from the Permanent Mission of Poland to the United Nations addressed to the Legal Counsel of the United Nations

[Original: English]

The Permanent Representative of the Republic of Poland presents his compliments to the Legal Counsel of the United Nations and has the honour to inform him of the decision of the Government of the Republic of Poland to nominate Mr. Tadeusz Mazowiecki, former Prime Minister of the Republic of Poland, to the Board of Directors of the Victims Trust Fund of the International Criminal Court.

Mr. Mazowiecki is an eminent statesman and a person of extremely high moral character, impartiality and integrity and possesses competence in the assistance to victims of serious crimes.

The curriculum vitae of Mr. Mazowiecki is attached to the present note.

Statement of qualifications

Mr. Tadeusz Mazowiecki

Tadeusz Mazowiecki was born in Plock, Poland, on 18 April 1927. Since the second half of the 1940s he has been an independent Catholic activist. In 1956 Mazowiecki established the Warsaw "Catholic Intelligentsia Club". He was one of the founders of the monthly "Wież" and the Catholic Intelligentsia movement "Znak".

In 1961 Mazowiecki was elected to the Parliament as a representative of Catholic opposition circles. On 7 March 1968 he was one of the authors of a motion submitted by the "Znak" Parliamentary Group in protest against the persecution of the student movement and against the anti-semitic campaign started by the communist authorities. After the December 1970 massacre in Poland's coastal towns he demanded in vain that a special Parliamentary Committee be formed to investigate the events. In 1976 Mazowiecki organized a hunger strike in St. Martin Church in defence of imprisoned workers and KOR (Committee for Workers' Defence) members.

In 1980, when strikes broke out on the coast, he drafted a letter, later on signed by 61 intellectuals, which called on the authorities to find a political solution to the conflict. He joined the striking workers and became the Chairman of the Experts Council which was supporting the Striking Committee.

On 13 December 1981 Mazowiecki was interned. He was let out in December 1982. Since 1985 he edited the underground journal "21" and took part in preparing the Solidarity report entitled "Five Years after August". In 1987 he became the chief adviser to the underground National Executive Committee of Solidarity.

During the “round table” talks in 1989 he chaired the committee working on trade union pluralism and coordinated the work of all the committees on the opposition side.

In September 1989 he became the first non-communist Prime Minister of Poland. In October 1990 he ran in the Presidential Election. After the defeat Mazowiecki created a political party, The Democratic Union, which later became the Union for Freedom, and until April 1995 he was a chairman of that party. In the 1991, 1993 and 1997 elections Mazowiecki was elected to the Parliament. Tadeusz Mazowiecki was a member of the Parliamentary Constitutional Committee, a member of the Parliamentary Defence Committee and, in the last term, the Chairman of the EU-Poland Joint Parliamentary Committee.

At present he is the Chairman of The Polish Robert Schuman Foundation.

Since August 1992 he worked in the capacity of Special Rapporteur on the United Nations Commission on Human Rights on the Territory of the former Yugoslavia. Within his mandate, Mazowiecki travelled to the former Yugoslavia several times. These travels were aimed at gathering first-hand eyewitness evidence concerning conditions prevailing in prisoners’ camps, food, medical and other shortages, etc. Following each inspection, exhaustive reports were drawn up, containing the collected factual material as well as conclusions and suggestions. In July 1995, after the fall of Srebrenica, one of the “safe havens” in Bosnia, Mazowiecki resigned his mandate of Special Rapporteur not being able to “continue to participate in the pretence of the protection of human rights”.

Tadeusz Mazowiecki has been awarded an honorary doctorate title by the University of Leuven in 1990, the University of Genoa in 1991, the University of Giessen in 1993, University of Poitiers in 1994 and University of Exeter in 1998. He has also received many Polish and other awards such as the Freedom Award of the American Jewish Congress in 1990, the Giorgio La Pira Award of Peace and Culture in 1991, Premio Napoli Award in 1992, Polish-German Award in 1994 and St. Adalbert Award in 1995, Order of White Eagle 1995.

Mazowiecki authored a number of articles and essays as well as four books: Crossroads and Values, Return to the Simplest Questions, Internment and The Other Face of Europe. He is also co-author of several books, e.g. Christians and Human Rights etc.

C. Archbishop Desmond Tutu

Note verbale dated 9 September 2003 from the Permanent Mission of South Africa to the United Nations addressed to the Legal Counsel of the United Nations

[Original: English]

The Permanent Mission of the Republic of South Africa to the United Nations presents its compliments to the Legal Counsel of the United Nations and has the honour to inform him that the Government of the Republic of South Africa has decided to nominate Archbishop Desmond Tutu for membership of the Board of Directors of the Victims Trust Fund of the International Criminal Court.

The Permanent Mission of the Republic of South Africa, on behalf of its Government, is proud to nominate Archbishop Tutu, former Chairman of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission in South Africa and Nobel Peace Prize Laureate, to this position. The Government of the Republic of South Africa believes that Archbishop Tutu is a person with impeccable credentials and the utmost integrity and impartiality who will make a valuable contribution to the aims and goals of the Victims Trust Fund.

The Permanent Mission of the Republic of South Africa wishes to inform the Legal Counsel that the candidacy of Archbishop Tutu has been endorsed by the African Group of the Assembly of States Parties to the Statute of the International Criminal Court.

The Permanent Mission of the Republic of South Africa is transmitting herewith to the Legal Counsel a brief biography of Archbishop Desmond Tutu.

Statement of qualifications

Desmond Tutu was born in Klerksdorp, South Africa, in 1931, son of a schoolteacher and a domestic worker. At the age of 12 he met Anglican cleric, Father Trevor Huddleston, in the Johannesburg township of Sophiatown. Trevor Huddleston was an outspoken early critic of apartheid and was to have a profound impression on the young Desmond Tutu.

After matriculating from the Johannesburg Bantu High School, Bishop Tutu followed in his father's footsteps and chose a career in teaching. He took his teacher's diploma at the Pretoria Bantu Normal College and studied for his Bachelor of Arts degree at the University of South Africa. He taught at the Johannesburg Bantu High School for a year and then moved to Munsieville High School, Krugersdorp, for three years. It was here that he married his wife, Leah. They have three daughters, a son and several grandchildren.

In 1958, following the introduction of Bantu education, Bishop Tutu decided to enter the ministry in the Church of the Province of Southern Africa and became an ordinand at St. Peter's Theological College, Rosettenville. He received his Licentiate in Theology in 1960 and was ordained to the priesthood in Johannesburg in 1961.

Shortly afterwards the Archbishop furthered his studies at the University of London, United Kingdom, where he obtained his Bachelor of Divinity Honours and Master of Theology degrees whilst a part-time curate in a local parish. In 1967 he returned to South Africa and joined the staff of the Federal Theological Seminary in Alice and became chaplain at the University of Fort Hare.

In 1970 he moved to the University of Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland where he held the post of lecturer in the Department of Theology. This step was followed by a further spell in the United Kingdom as Associate Director of the Theological Education Fund of the World Council of Churches, based in Kent.

Tutu became Dean of St. Mary's Cathedral, Johannesburg, in 1975, but shortly thereafter was elected Bishop of Lesotho. By this time South Africa was in turmoil, in the wake of the Soweto uprising of 1976, and Bishop Tutu was persuaded to leave the Diocese of Lesotho to take up the post of General Secretary of the South African Council of Churches (SACC). It was in this position, a post he held from 1978 to 1985, that Bishop Tutu became a national and international figure.

The SACC represented all the major Christian churches in South Africa, apart from the Dutch Reformed Church and the Catholic Church (the latter is, however, an accredited observer of the SACC). The SACC is committed to the cause of ecumenism and to fulfilling the social responsibility of the Church. Justice and Reconciliation feature prominently among its priorities. As General Secretary, Bishop Tutu pursued these goals with vigour and commitment. Under his guidance, the SACC became an important institution in South African spiritual and political life that voiced the ideals and aspirations of millions of Christians. The SACC was instrumental in providing assistance to the victims of apartheid.

Inevitably Bishop Tutu became heavily embroiled in controversy as he spoke out against the injustices of the apartheid system. For several years he was denied a passport to travel abroad, but in 1982 the South African Government withdrew this restriction in the face of national and international pressure. The name of Bishop Tutu became synonymous with that of the SACC as he became the leader of the crusade for justice and racial conciliation in South Africa. In 1984, his contribution to the cause of racial justice in South Africa was recognized when he received the Nobel Peace Prize.

In 1985 Bishop Tutu was elected Bishop of Johannesburg. In this capacity he did much to bridge the chasm between black and white Anglicans in South Africa. His office as Bishop of Johannesburg was of short duration, as in 1986 he was elected Archbishop of Cape Town. In electing him, the Anglican Church placed its trust in him as its spiritual leader and showed its confidence in his pursuit of racial justice in South Africa. In 1987 he was elected as President of the All Africa Conference of Churches. In the same year he was also elected a Fellow of Kings College, London, and became Chancellor of the University of the Western Cape, a post that he still holds today.

Before the unbanning of the African National Congress and other political organizations in 1990, there were many critics of Archbishop Tutu who, despite his protestations to the contrary, predicted that he would enter political life. But he has not sought a political position. Instead, he became a principal mediator and conciliator in the transition to democracy.

In 1995 President Nelson Mandela appointed Archbishop Tutu to chair South Africa's Truth and Reconciliation Commission, the body set up to probe gross human rights violations between 1960 and the President's inauguration in 1994. Archbishop Tutu and his fellow Commissioners presented the Commission's Report to the President in October 1998.

Bishop Tutu retired from office as Archbishop of Cape Town in June 1996, but was named Archbishop Emeritus (an honorary title) from July 1996. In October 1998 he took a sabbatical at Emory University, Atlanta, where he was invited as the William R. Cannon Professor of Theology at the Candler School of Theology, a position he held until July 2000.

Archbishop Tutu has officially retired and set up a private office in Cape Town near his home.

He holds honorary degrees from a large number of universities, including Harvard, Oxford, Cambridge, Columbia, Yale, Emory, the Ruhr, Kent, Aberdeen, Sydney, Fribourg (Switzerland), Cape Town, Witwatersrand and the University of South Africa. He has received many prizes and awards in addition to the Nobel Peace Prize, most notably the Order for Meritorious Service Award (Gold) presented by President Mandela, the Archbishop of Canterbury's Award for Outstanding Service to the Anglican Communion, the Prix d'Athene (Onassis Foundation), the Family of Man Gold Medal Award, the Mexican Order of the Aztec Medal (Insignia Grade), the Martin Luther King Jr. Non-Violent Peace Prize and the Sydney Peace Prize.

Before 1990, Archbishop Tutu's vigorous advocacy of social justice rendered him a controversial figure. Today he is seen as an elder statesman with a major role to play in reconciliation, and as a leading moral voice. Archbishop Tutu has become an icon of hope far beyond the Church and Southern Africa.

His latest book, No Future Without Forgiveness, was honoured with the Book of the Year Award by the Association of Theological Booksellers of the United States of America. December 2001 saw the same book receive the Sandro Onofri Prize, bestowed by the Council of Rome, Italy.

Archbishop Tutu accepted an invitation from The Episcopal Divinity School, Cambridge, Massachusetts, to be Visiting Professor January-May 2002.
