3. Global Volunteers*

(Special consultative status granted in 1999)

Founded in 1984, Global Volunteers is a private, nonprofit, nonsectarian, nongovernmental organization whose goal is to help establish a foundation for peace and promote justice through mutual international understanding. This goal is reached as volunteers work hand-in-hand with and learn from and about local people during one to three-week work projects in communities around the world. The organization was founded on the belief that outsider volunteers can provide catalytic assistance to local people in their pursuit of self-reliance and is grounded in the belief that local people must be in charge of their own community-driven development. Global Volunteers works closely with host organizations and community partners in nearly 100 communities in 20 countries (China, Cook Islands, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Ghana, Greece, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Mexico, Poland, Romania, Spain, Tanzania, UK, Ukraine, USA, and Vietnam.) Community partners and host organizations include a wide variety of associations including local development NGOs, health agencies, universities, town boards, village councils, religious institutions, cooperatives, city and county governments, and elementary and secondary schools. Each organization issues an invitation to Global Volunteers and local leadership provides direction throughout all volunteer work projects. One of Global Volunteers goals is to develop and maintain long-term relationships with local people and continues to send up to 20 teams of volunteers to each community annually. Global Volunteers works on projects based on the request of the local community partner in five major categories. Volunteers help teach conversational English in schools to students ranging from the elementary to university level. Volunteers help local people build and maintain essential community facilities such as schools, orphanages, community centers, libraries, and health clinics. Volunteers work with and care for at-risk children including infants and toddlers living in "failure-to-thrive" clinics, children and adolescents in orphanages and homeless shelters, children with disabilities, and those living in impoverished communities. Volunteers assist communities' efforts to protect the natural environment and avoid the adverse effects of unplanned development, natural disaster, or the invasion of foreign flora, fauna or predatory wildlife that threatens the ecosystem. Finally, volunteers share special professional skills in medicine, law, and business development with colleagues in local communities. Global Volunteers continues to generate most of its revenue from service program fees paid by volunteers. These fees cover all of the volunteers' basic expenses while participating on a service program, a financial and material contributions to the local community projects, and the general programmatic and administrative costs of Global Volunteers. The service program fee varies by location and length of program and is 100% tax deductible to U.S. Taxpayers.

Revenue earned from these fees constitutes over 95% of annual revenues. In FY 1999, Global Volunteers revenues totaled $2.5 million with approximately 1,300 volunteers in 16 countries around the world, including four states in the USA. In FY 2002 Global Volunteers' revenues were $2.6 million with over 1,400 volunteers serving in 18 countries, including eight states in the USA.

ACTION IN IMPLEMENTATION OF UNITED NATIONS RESOLUTIONS

IFFD educational programs for parents correspond to the calls for action contained in several recent action plans from the following recent UN meetings:

55/2 United Nations Millenium Declaration, section I. 2 states: ". . .we have a duty, in particular, to the children of the world.. ." IFFD has recently expanded the courses offered to cover the range of children's ages, from 2 months to 18 years, with an integrated program of 10 course offerings. IFFD is in the process of translating this broad range of courses to the principal languages of its FA'S, and is providing the know-how to begin the offering of the entire course syllabus throughout the world.

The Millennium Declaration states, in section 6; "Men and women have the right to live their lives and raise their children in dignity,, ." This fundamental right is supported by IFFD programs in 47 centers around the world, through the educational and cultural programs offered by volunteer organizers, assisted by the IFFD officers and staff.

International Plan of Action on Ageing 2002 POLITICAL DECLARATION

(Advanced unedited copy) Article 14 states: "We recognize the need to strengthen solidarity among generations, and intergenerational partnerships..." IFFD has recently completed the translation of a course entitled "Young Grandparents", designed to explore the complex but fruitful relationships across generations within an extended family environment, with the focus of improving the education and upbringing of the children in these settings. By providing such educational programs, IFFD is contributing to the improved education of the children and to the aspirations of the older generation for life long learning and opportunities to contribute to the future of the family.

S-27/2, A world fit for children states: "A world fit for children is one in which all children get the best possible start in life" and "The family is the basic unit of society and as such should be strengthened." The popular IFFD program "First Steps" is directed at the very first learning experiences of children within the family setting and provides practical mechanisms and know how to strengthen the family in its educational role.

Other Activities related to United Nations

BPW federations within the countries that have UNIFEM national committees directly support the work of UNIFEM. Many of them, such as Australia, New Zealand, and United Kingdom, raised funds for UNIFEM. BPW has followed through its survey on Violence Against Women, by implementing programs to alleviate the problem and to educate communities on the issues. We worked with UNIFEM to implement policies and have as our current triennial theme, "A World of Peace" which includes as a sub theme, dealing with violence in the community and in the workplace.

BPW International worked with UNCTAD in training women in South America through the IMPROTEC program. Our representative helped disseminate information about ILO Training Center courses in Turin and many women have been sponsored to attend these courses by BPW chapters in their countries. Our representative also presented a paper "Strengthening Association of Women Entrepreneurs" at ILO Training Center Technical program for women and men on Enterprise Development.

In addressing the issue of the Girl Child, BPW International took initiatives and disseminating a Girls' Bill of Rights through the BPW Network. BPW Italy organized the seminar on the theme of Girl Child at ILO Training Center in Turin in year 2000 and 2001. Our affiliates also have projects to help girls, such as building a hostel for girls to enable them to go to school in Cameroon, building a training center to teach Northern hill tribe girls in dress making in Thailand, etc. BPW Moldova conducted several children-related projects with support from representatives of UNESCO and UNICEF in Moldova.

Following the publication of "Bus to 42nd Street", which details the life of Esther Hymer and her association with the UN, BPW has established the Esther Hymer BPW UN Training Award to provide a scholarship for a young woman to attend a meeting at the UN and learn about its functions. The first scholar was an Italian lawyer, who attended CSW in 2001. The funds for the scholarship are provided by the profits from the book. Conversely, we also involved UN officials as speakers at our conferences and congress. At our Asia-Pacific Regional Conference in August 2001, Chief of Women in Development Section of UN ESCAP spoke on "United Nations ESCAP Collaboration and support for Women NGOs". Regional Program Director of UNIFEM East and Southeast Asia Regional Office spoke on "How to Get Funding for Women-related projects" and "UNIFEM Roles and Collaboration with Women NGOs". We typically have a UN panel and speakers from the UN at our International Congresses. In 2002, a spokesperson for UNIFEM spoke on UN Security Council Resolution 1325 on Peace at our Congress in Melbourne, Australia.

Theme for the next Triennium

The new theme for BPW International in 2002-2005 is "A World of Peace". BPW has participated in a Peace seminar for Women in Sham El Sheikh, initiated by Her Excellency Mrs Suzanne Mubarek and is committed to actively support the resultant peace initiative. We also encourage our members to lobby their governments to implement this resolution.

9. World Association of Industrial and Technological Research Organizations*

(Special consultative status granted in 1991)

1.0 Introduction

The World Association of Industrial and Technological Research Organizations (WAITRO) is an international non-governmental network of 200 corporate research and technology organizations (RTOs) spread over 73 countries. WAITRO was founded in 1970 at the initiative of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) in order to promote international co-operation in the application of technological research to sustainable industrial development.

During the reporting period WAITRO experienced a large increase in its membership following the admission of several research institutes from the countries of Central and Eastern Europe. There was also a substantial increase in membership from developing countries while the number from industrialised countries remained stable or suffered a slight decline. The current distribution of members is as follows: Africa (31%), Asia and the Pacific (14%), Central and Eastern Europe (1 1%), Latin America and Caribbean (18%), Middle East and North Africa (12%). North America (4%), Western Europe (10%).

In 1994 WAITRO initiated an international collaborative project aimed at improving management practices in research and technology organizations (RTOs). The project was funded by the Danish International Development Assistance (Danida) and the International Development Research Centre of Canada (IDRC). As part of the project, nearly 200 organizations were surveyed for their management practices and 60 of these were selected for a detailed benchmarking study. The project led to the development of a management model for RTOs and several workshops, seminars and consultancy visits were conducted to disseminate the results of the study. The project received close attention and cooperation from a number of United Nations agencies including UNCTAD, UNIDO, UNESCO, UNECE and HABITAT.

WAITRO also undertook a number of joint research projects primarily funded by the European Union aimed at capability building among its members in the developing countries in the field of food technology. Several African countries were assisted through the projects to build capability in the study of locally fermented food products. Particular attention was paid to measures for enhancing food safety and quality as well as pilot schemes to introduce semi-industrial scale processing. Scientists involved in these projects were trained in new methods for the application of molecular techniques in their laboratories as well as food quality systems.
