Preface

1. The General Assembly, in its resolution 58/269 of 23 December 2003 on strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change, requested the Secretary-General to prepare, on a trial basis, for submission to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, a strategic framework to replace the four-year medium-term plan, which would comprise in one document:

(a) Part one: a plan outline, reflecting the longer-term objectives of the Organization;

(b) Part two: a biennial programme plan, to cover two years.

2. The General Assembly also affirmed in that resolution that the strategic framework should constitute the principal policy directive of the United Nations and should serve as the basis for programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation; decided to review, with a view to taking a final decision at its sixty-second session, the format, content and duration of the strategic framework, including the necessity of maintaining part one, and requested the Secretary-General to submit a report, through the Committee for Programme and Coordination, reviewing the experiences gained with the changes made in the planning and budgeting process. The Assembly also decided that the programme narratives of the programme budget fascicles should be identical to the biennial programme plan.

3. The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, through the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its forty-fourth session,¹ the proposed plan outline and biennial programme plan of the strategic framework for the period 2006-2007.² For its deliberations the Committee for Programme and Coordination also had before it conference room paper prepared by the Secretariat on the review of part two: biennial programme plan by the relevant sectoral, functional and regional bodies.

4. The General Assembly, in its resolution 59/275 of 23 December 2004 on programme planning, having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination,¹ endorsed the conclusions and recommendations contained therein with respect to the biennial programme plan for the period 2006-2007, those of the First Committee concerning programme 3, Disarmament (A/C.5/59/17), those of the Second Committee concerning programme 10, Trade and development (A/C.5/59/15), those concerning programme 19, Human rights (A/C.5/59/26), and those of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee) concerning programme 23, Public information (A/C.5/59/14). The Assembly decided to take no decision on the content of part one: plan outline.

5. In the same resolution, the General Assembly also requested the Secretary-General to issue in one document, before the forty-fifth session of the Committee for Programme and Coordination, only the priorities and the biennial programme plan as adopted. The content of the present document reflects that request.

Overall orientation

1.1 The overall objectives of this programme are: (a) to facilitate, through the provision of technical secretariat support and authoritative advice, the orderly and effective conduct of the deliberations and follow-up actions of the General Assembly, its General, First, Special Political and Decolonization (Fourth), Second and Third Committees and its various subsidiary organs, the Trusteeship Council, the Economic and Social Council and most of its subsidiary and ad hoc bodies, and special United Nations conferences and meetings dealing with disarmament, international security and economic, social and related matters; and to assist in the revitalization efforts of the General Assembly and other United Nations bodies; (b) to ensure, through integrated global management, the provision of high-quality conference-servicing support to all intergovernmental and expert bodies meeting at Headquarters and at the United Nations Office at Geneva, the United Nations Office at Vienna and the United Nations Office at Nairobi, and other conferences and meetings held under the auspices of the United Nations, taking into account the principle of equal treatment to be given to all established official languages in each organ of the Organization.

1.2 The basic mandates for this programme are contained in the rules of procedure of the main organs of the United Nations. Additional mandates are stipulated by resolutions of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, particularly resolutions on the reform and revitalization of the General Assembly, and on pattern of conferences. Overall intergovernmental direction concerning the organization and servicing of meetings is given by the General Assembly on the advice of the Committee on Conferences, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 43/222 B of 21 December 1988, which established the terms of reference of the Committee.

1.3 The Department for General Assembly and Conference Management at Headquarters and the conference-servicing organizational entities at the United Nations Office at Geneva, the United Nations Office at Vienna and the United Nations Office at Nairobi are responsible for the implementation of this programme and the achievement of its objectives. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 57/300 of 23 December 2000 and 58/250 of 23 December 2003, the strategic framework under this programme seeks to make further advancements in the area of integrated global management, the control and limitation of documents in accordance with legislative mandates and adding value to information. During the biennium, both technical secretariat and conference-servicing support will be provided to the intergovernmental and expert bodies serviced by the Department in a more proactive and synergetic manner to achieve full-system benefits across headquarters conference services duty stations. This, together with the extensive application of information technology, subject to related provisions of the above-mentioned General Assembly resolutions, will result in enhanced quality, productivity, timeliness and cost-effectiveness of the operations under this programme. Regular client surveys will be used as an important measurement of the performance of conference services in the headquarters locations.

Disarmament

Overall orientation

3.1 General and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control remains the ultimate goal of all efforts exerted in the field of disarmament. The main responsibilities for disarmament lie with Member States. The United Nations, in accordance with its Charter, has a central role and primary responsibility in supporting Member States in this area.

3.2 The mandate for the programme derives from the priorities established in relevant General Assembly resolutions and decisions in the field of disarmament, including the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament (resolution S-10/2). The programme is also guided by the United Nations Millennium Declaration (resolution 55/5) and takes into account other relevant resolutions of the United Nations. Weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, continue to be of primary concern to the Organization. Conventional disarmament, especially with regard to major weapons systems, small arms and light weapons and landmines, has received growing attention from the international community over the last few years.

3.3 Within the Secretariat, substantive responsibility for the programme is vested in the Department for Disarmament Affairs. The Department's strategy for implementing the programme is based on its role and responsibility for facilitating and encouraging, as appropriate, disarmament measures at all levels. The Department will continue to assist Member States in promoting, strengthening and consolidating multilaterally negotiated principles and norms in all areas of disarmament. Support will be given to efforts of Member States in the areas of disarmament and non-proliferation in order to help maintain international peace and security and to contribute to global efforts against terrorism. The Department will enhance its efforts aimed at promoting and facilitating the implementation of the Programme of Action adopted at the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, as well as practical disarmament measures. It will promote transparency, based on the principle of undiminished security for all, and confidence-building measures in the field of disarmament. It will continue to be a source of impartial and factual information on disarmament and security-related matters for Member States, organizations of the United Nations system, regional organizations and non-governmental organizations and will expand its educational outreach programmes. Through its regional centres for peace and disarmament, the Department will assist Member States in promoting regional approaches to disarmament and security. It will also continue to contribute to efforts to enhance disarmament expertise in Member States, particularly in developing countries.

3.4 The Department will seek to achieve the objectives of the programme by facilitating the process of multilateral deliberation and negotiation. Programme 4

Peacekeeping operations

A. Peacekeeping operations

Overall orientation

4.1 The purpose of the programme is to support the maintenance of peace and security through the deployment of peacekeeping operations in accordance with and by authority derived from the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations. The mandates of the programme are provided in resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly.

4.2 The programme closely coordinates five interdependent and complementary subprogrammes (Operations, Mission support, Military, Civilian police and Mine action coordination) and integrates cross-cutting responsibilities. Programme strategies are based on the development of capacities to address a wide variety of conflict situations and the need to plan, establish, manage and direct peacekeeping operations. A rapid and effective response to Security Council and General Assembly mandates is crucial for supporting the implementation of peace agreements between the parties to a conflict. Peacekeeping mandates may include the monitoring of ceasefires and buffer zones; disarming, demobilizing and reintegrating ex-combatants; reforming military establishments; training, advising, and monitoring police forces; creating security conditions conducive to the return of refugees and internally displaced populations; promoting electoral and judicial reform and assisting civil administrations; facilitating political processes to consolidate peace and legitimate government authority; coordinating economic rehabilitation and mine-clearance programmes; and facilitating the delivery of humanitarian assistance. Missions may also be mandated to maintain law and order and assume responsibility for a transitional administration or executive law enforcement, including criminal justice functions. The programme serves as the lead department in the implementation of integrated mandates, including multisectoral assistance operations, and provides logistical and administrative support, in addition to demining coordination. Regional approaches to peacekeeping, in terms of peacekeeping capacity, political strategies and common support to multiple operations, will be pursued when appropriate.

4.3 The programme will inform Member States on all phases of peacekeeping operations, paying particular attention to the requirements of troop and police contributors, which need to make informed decisions on their participation in peacekeeping missions. Special attention will be given to the safety and security of peacekeepers in the field. Careful consideration will also be given to gender and geographical balance in the staffing of peacekeeping operations.

4.4 Meeting the complex and evolving challenges of modern peacekeeping requires an integrated approach and greater coordination within the United Nations system and with external peacekeeping partners, including international financial institutions and regional organizations, to enhance the ability of the international community to maintain peace and security. To increase the programme's effectiveness, the research, analysis, review and application of peacekeeping best practices and lessons learned will continue, as will continued emphasis on proper conduct and tailored training for all peacekeeping personnel. In addition, the Department of Peacekeeping Operations will continue its gender mainstreaming strategy, aimed at providing better policies and programmes that take fully into account the impact of peacekeeping operations on women, men, girls and boys. This will entail the incorporation of gender perspectives in all peacekeeping activities, from the initial planning stages to the liquidation of a mission, as well as ensuring adequate gender expertise at Headquarters and in the field.

4.5 The programme will provide substantive and technical support to the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations, including follow-up on decisions related to peacekeeping operations taken by the Security Council and the General Assembly. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations will implement the recommendations of the Special Committee, as endorsed by the General Assembly.

Subprogramme 1 Operations

Objective of the Organization: Effective implementation of Security Council mandates to plan, establish, and manage peacekeeping operations

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Provision of timely, informed advice and recommendations on issues related to peacekeeping to the Security Council, the General Assembly, other intergovernmental bodies and troop-contributing and other contributing countries	(a) Security Council resolutions incorporate recommendations for establishing new, or adjusting existing, peacekeeping operations
(b) Effective and efficient direction and support for peacekeeping operations	(b) (i) Relevant benchmarks of mission or mandate implementation are met (ii) Number of successful structural arrangements with regional organizations as judged by mandate fulfilment

Strategy

4.6 The Office of Operations will continue to perform its core functions of providing timely advice and analysis to the Security Council, the General Assembly, intergovernmental bodies and troop-contributing and other contributing countries on peacekeeping issues and on the integrated planning, effective direction of and support for peacekeeping operations through, inter alia, the provision of policy and operational guidance, security management and gender mainstreaming.

4.7 The United Nations faces increased challenges in planning for and effectively implementing the complex mandates that are often called for in peacekeeping operations today and in meeting the planning demands of surges in operational activity. The Office of Operations will seek to coordinate a fully integrated mission-planning process across all stakeholders within the United Nations system, producing a mission concept of operations and component plans that are fully understood, integrated and owned, both at Headquarters and in the field. Best practices and lessons learned will be incorporated into the design, planning and implementation of new and existing missions. The safety and security of personnel working in peacekeeping operations will be accorded the highest priority, and to that end appropriate attention, both at Headquarters and in the field, will be given to information management, security assessment and risk and threat analysis. In addition, the Office of Operations will seek to promote regional peacekeeping capacity and organizational relationships and focus on partnerships to address cross-cutting issues.

Subprogramme 2

Mission support

Objective of the Organization: To staff, finance and equip United Nations peacekeeping and related operations to fulfil their mandates efficiently and effectively, as authorized by the Security Council and the General Assembly.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Reduction of the time required to plan, rapidly deploy and establish peacekeeping and other operations in response to Security Council mandates	(a) (i) A fully functional mission of up to 5,000 personnel within 90 days of a Security Council mandate (ii) 100 per cent readiness of strategic deployment stocks
(b) Increased efficiency and effectiveness of peace operations	(b) (i) Average mission vacancy rates of less than 7 per cent for international staff and less than 5 per cent for national staff (ii) 95 per cent of all planned immediate operational requirements are achieved on the target date (iii) Number of applicable and effective support models that are used in support of peace operations (iv) 100 per cent of international civilian staff have been given pre-deployment training, in-mission training and appropriate training and development (v) High percentage of senior staff present in the field at the commencement of the mission (vi) Streamlined process of civilian recruitment and reduction of waiting times

4.8 Within the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the substantive responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Office of Mission Support. The activities of the Office include ongoing support to peacekeeping and other operations in the areas of personnel, finance, logistics and communications. The subprogramme will enable missions to sustain themselves effectively and efficiently for the fulfilment of their mandates, respond to changing circumstances on the ground or changes in mandate and provide assistance and services when missions are unable to do so themselves. The subprogramme will continually monitor and provide policy guidance and oversight to the delivery of mission support. The subprogramme will also work towards the effective management of field missions.

To that end, the subprogramme will enhance resource planning and improve project management techniques and processes, including the development of a repertoire of replicable support models for a variety of strategic conditions in launching, sustaining and liquidating missions. The subprogramme will also work towards ensuring operational readiness and will prioritize the timely deployment of financial, personnel and material resources, as well as enhance its capacity rapidly to deploy a fully effective mission to areas of operation. It will strengthen and support the operational capacities of the Department by managing and coordinating training and career development for civilian staff in field missions. Concerted efforts will be made to improve gender balance and geographical distribution in the staffing of field missions.

Military

Objective of the Organization: To implement the military aspects of Security Council mandates effectively.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Reduction of the time required to plan, rapidly deploy and establish the military component of peacekeeping operations in response to Security Council mandates	(a) (i) Deployment of military components within the timelines planned for specific operations (ii) Increased commitments by Member States for capacities to enable force deployment and sustainment
(b) Increased efficiency and effectiveness of the military components of peacekeeping operations	(b) (i) Increase in the number of standardized interfaces in use with peacekeeping partners (ii) All military observers and staff officers complete Department of Peacekeeping Operations or nationally recognized training prior to deployment to field missions

Strategy

4.9 Within the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the substantive responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Military Division. To meet the objectives, operational plans must be in place for the military components of potential and current peacekeeping operations, as must be appropriately trained and rapidly deployable personnel and other military resources. The activities of the subprogramme will include: the preparation of operational plans for military components of peacekeeping operations, such as contingency plans for potential, ongoing or closing operations; the generation of military forces, observers and Headquarters staff for deployment, including pre-deployment assessments, coordination of deployments and rotations of the military components of missions; daily monitoring of and support to the military components of peacekeeping operations; and the conduct and coordination of peacekeeping training activities for deploying uniformed personnel of Member States. Consideration to relevant gender dimensions will be given in undertaking these activities.

4.10 The subprogramme will provide military advice to peacekeeping partners within and outside the programme and will develop closer linkages with regional organizations, including the African Union, the European Union, the Economic Community of West African States, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and others, on all military peacekeeping issues. The subprogramme will produce policies and papers on the employment of military capability in support of peacekeeping objectives and will liaise closely with peacekeeping partners to standardize approaches. To enhance the Organization's capacity to respond to conflicts, effective rapid deployment mechanisms and the immediate availability of military contingents and personnel to deploy to new operations is essential. A review of the United Nations standby arrangements mechanisms will therefore be ongoing.

Civilian police

Objective of the Organization: To support and enable national police institutions in post-conflict societies to develop sustainable police services in accordance with accepted international standards.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement

Strategy

4.11 Within the Department, the substantive responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Civilian Police Division. In a post-conflict society the re-establishment of the rule of law and strengthening of the national internal security apparatus and institutions are paramount for the creation of an environment for lasting peace. In this regard, the Division develops, together with the Department's judicial and corrections experts, comprehensive police plans for peacekeeping operations that consider the judicial and correctional systems in place; the interrelation between the police, judiciary and corrections institutions; the nature of criminal procedures and laws in effect; and the relevant gender dimensions. With other relevant parts of the Department, the Division engages in partnerships, particularly with the United Nations Development Programme and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, for the development of national policing institutions and judicial and correctional systems. Through the standardization of mission oversight, the provision of strategic advice and guidance and the engagement of partners at Headquarters, the Civilian Police Division assists missions with the implementation of mandates that range from monitoring, training, mentoring, assisting and advising local police, as well as performing executive policing functions, when mandated.

4.12 Through the active engagement of Member States, the Division will continue to refine the recruitment process and to ensure that police officers with the required skills, including female officers, are recruited according to the needs of each mission. The Division will also ensure that police-contributing countries are provided with comprehensive training programmes for delivery at national police training institutions, as well as pre-deployment training materials. The Division will consider how to further enhance efficient planning and early implementation of mandates.

4.13 The Civilian Police Division will act as a repository for civilian police peacekeeping issues. To enhance the development of institutional memory and expertise and the dissemination of lessons learned and best practices, the Division will actively engage regional and subregional organizations on all aspects of policing issues. It will also strengthen its engagement with Member States and regional peacekeeping training centres on current training practices, policing standards, training policy and material. In addition, the Division will continue to develop partnerships with police services, police colleges, research and academic institutions, police associations and others.

Strategy

4.14 The substantive responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the United Nations Mine Action Service, which is the coordinating body in the United Nations for mine action. The Service will work with other United Nations and non-governmental organization partners to assist affected nations to develop local mine action capacity; develop and manage mine action programmes in support of peacekeeping missions or in humanitarian emergencies, when appropriate; develop policies and promulgate lessons learned in the areas of mine clearance, mine risk education, victim assistance, advocacy and stockpile destruction; and coordinate the mobilization and administration of resources for mine action. It will also undertake assessment missions and surveys to establish priorities. The Mine Action Service will continue to oversee the development and implementation of internationally agreed standards that will provide a framework for efficient, effective and safer mine action activities and provide guidance and coordination for the development of new mine action technologies. It will produce, gather and disseminate information to aid mine action and to raise awareness of mine related issues. Moreover, it will coordinate the implementation of the United Nations mine action advocacy strategy so as to strengthen the normative framework for the mine and explosive remnants of war problem, as well as the rights of survivors of mines and explosive remnants of war; to promote the integration of mine action throughout the work of the United Nations system; and to promote compliance by non-State actors with obligations and commitments on matters related to mines, explosive remnants of war and survivors' rights. Consideration will be given to relevant gender dimensions in undertaking these activities.

Programme 5

Peaceful uses of outer space

Overall orientation

5.1 The overall purpose of the programme is the promotion of international cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space for economic, social and scientific development. The need for international cooperation in space activities and the importance of using outer space exclusively for peaceful purposes were first recognized by the General Assembly in its resolution 1348 (XIII) of 13 December 1958. By its resolution 1472 A (XIV) of 12 December 1959, the General Assembly established the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space. The direction of the programme is provided in resolutions of the General Assembly and decisions of the Committee, its Legal Subcommittee and Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and their subsidiary bodies. Recommendations of particular relevance for the work to be undertaken under this programme are contained in the resolution entitled “The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development”, adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III) and endorsed by the Assembly in its resolution 54/68 of 6 December 1999.

5.2 In the Vienna Declaration, the importance of space science and technology and their applications to the enhancement of environmental monitoring, the management of natural resources, disaster management, weather and climate forecasting, health, fundamental knowledge of the universe, education and health, as well as the contributions of global navigation satellite systems to the promotion of sustainable development and of satellite communications to bridging the digital divide was recognized. Additionally, the Declaration stressed the importance of providing girls and women with opportunities to participate in and benefit from space activities. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 56/51, 57/116 and 58/89, efforts continue to be made to bring the benefits of the use of space technology to the attention of the conferences organized within the United Nations system to address global issues relating to social, economic and cultural development. Particular emphasis is placed on promoting the use of space science and technology in implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration, the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Action of the World Summit on the Information Society.

5.3 Through implementation of the programme, strengthened efforts at the international, regional and national levels will also be made to integrate space-based services and systems, in particular into the infrastructure of developing countries, so as to maximize the benefits of space science and technology and their applications for sustained economic and social development and the enhancement of human development and welfare. These efforts would be achieved through the promotion of universal adherence to international space law and by expanding international cooperation among countries with the involvement of entities of the United Nations system and space-related international entities, including non-governmental organizations and industry, as appropriate.

Objective of the Organization: To deepen the understanding of the international community with respect to the contributions of space science and technology and their applications to achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Action of the World Summit on the Information Society, taking into account their correlation with the strategy contained in the Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development, adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III).

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Greater adherence by the international community to the international legal regime established by the United Nations to govern outer space activities	(a) Increased number of States having ratified the five major United Nations treaties governing outer space activities
(b) Increased support for developing countries in using space applications in the priority areas of sustainable development, as identified by the World Summit on Sustainable Development	(b) Increased number of entities that support the capacity-building activities and technical advisory services of the Office for Outer Space Affairs
(c) Strengthening of mechanisms within more countries to coordinate their space-related policy matters and space activities	(c) Increased number of countries that have established, with the assistance of the Office for Outer Space Affairs, coordination mechanisms within their Governments for matters relating to space activities

Economic and social affairs

Overall orientation

7.1 The overall orientation of the programme is to support and advance international cooperation in the pursuit of sustained economic growth, poverty eradication and sustainable development through an integrated approach encompassing economic, social, environmental, gender and population dimensions.

7.2 The programme is guided by the comprehensive policy framework for poverty eradication and development provided by the United Nations conferences of the 1990s, the Millennium Summit, the International Conference on Financing for Development and the World Summit on Sustainable Development, and seeks to promote integration and coordination in the implementation of their outcomes and their follow-up. While focused on global policy development, the programme's activities are geared to promoting mutual reinforcement between global policies and regional and national policies and actions.

7.3 Thus oriented, the programme undertakes four main types of activity. Firstly, it compiles a wide range of economic, social and environmental data and information and analyses them with a view to identifying trends and taking stock of policy options. Secondly, it reviews development issues and policies to deepen the international community's understanding of global challenges in the economic and social spheres and to assist Member States to reach consensus on the most appropriate responses to those challenges. Thirdly, it advises Member States on the ways and means to translate globally agreed policies into country-level action and, through technical cooperation, helps build national capacities. Fourthly, it provides a central capacity within the Secretariat to promote policy and programme coherence among the economic and social sectors of the Organization, and to orient and organize cooperation and coordination, between the United Nations and the specialized agencies and within the United Nations system as a whole, in the economic and social area, particularly in support of the central intergovernmental bodies.

7.4 In 2006-2007, the programme will build on the outcomes of the first comprehensive review of the follow-up to the Millennium Declaration and the 2005 event provided for in General Assembly resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003, on the results of the renewed attention that the Economic and Social Council is currently giving to the integrated follow-up to conferences and on the conference follow-up reviews in its functional commissions, as well as on the outcomes of the reform initiatives under way during the current biennium at both the intergovernmental and the Secretariat level. On this basis, the programme proposes to further sharpen its orientation towards implementation and further reinforce its contribution to this end, particularly in relation to accelerating progress in the implementation of internationally agreed development goals and to supporting implementation of the reform measures that will be agreed upon during the current biennium to further this objective.

7.5 This will be done, in the first instance, by strengthening the programme's knowledge-management capacities and its role in the global policy dialogue, particularly by enhancing the quality and relevance of its publications and other analytical products. The programme will also seek to further strengthen the quality and coherence of its support for the central intergovernmental bodies, particularly relating to the implementation of measures that may be agreed upon by those bodies to enhance their functioning and affect international policy-making and to the treatment of key issues, such as the eradication of poverty and hunger, that cut across the outcomes of the conferences and the disciplines covered by the programme. Finally, the programme will seek to further reinforce the integration of its normative, analytical and operational activities so that its role in the creation of knowledge and the deepening of Member States' understanding of policy choices and their outcomes in the areas it covers, and its contribution to the generation of norms, standards and legislation, may enhance its support for Member States through operational work. Such work, and the insights it generates in key areas of the programme's mandate, such as sustainable development, social development, public administration, population, statistics and gender, should become a source of increasing enrichment for its normative and analytical activities.

7.6 In relation to both analytical activities and operational work, multidisciplinary approaches will be strengthened as one of the main components of the programme's comparative advantage in advancing the implementation of conference outcomes. With regard to technical cooperation, the programme's comparative advantage lies not only in its substantive capacities relating to areas of global concern, but in its capacity to bring to the country level the experience of other regions by means of advisory services, training and electronic technical cooperation.

Programme 8

Least developed countries, landlocked developing countries and small island developing States

Overall orientation

8.1 The legislative authority for the programme derives from General Assembly resolution 55/279 of 12 July 2001, by which the Assembly endorsed the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010 adopted at the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries in Brussels in May 2001, and 56/227 of 24 December 2001 whereby the Assembly decided to establish the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States in accordance with the recommendations of the Secretary-General contained in his report of 23 November 2001 (A/56/645 and Add.1 and Add.1/Corr.1 and 2).

8.2 The mandate of the programme covers four main elements:

(a) Mobilization and coordination of international support for the effective implementation of: (i) the Brussels Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010; (ii) the Almaty Programme of Action: Addressing the Special Needs of Landlocked Developing Countries within a New Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation for Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries; and (iii) the Barbados Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of the Small Island Developing States;

(b) Enhanced monitoring and follow-up to the three Programmes of Action;

(c) Advocacy and promotion of global awareness with respect to the three groups of countries (least developed countries, landlocked developing countries and small island developing States);

(d) Reporting at the global level on the implementation of the Brussels and Almaty Programmes of Action as effective tools for reaching the international development goals for the concerned countries.

8.3 In this context, the programme will also contribute to the implementation of the relevant and related internationally agreed development goals concerning the three groups of countries, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992. The programme will mobilize international support in favour of its constituencies in the areas of capacity-building and increased technical and financial resources in promoting sustained growth and sustainable development. Gender is an important dimension in the implementation of the three Programmes of Action.

8.4 The overall programme of work of the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States is designed around three interdependent and complementary subprogrammes, namely, subprogramme 1, Least developed countries, subprogramme 2, Landlocked developing countries, and subprogramme 3, Small island developing States.

8.5 With a view to addressing the objectives in each of the three main areas of endeavour, the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States will use a combination of the following approaches and strategies:

(d) Working with the United Nations system and other international organizations, including the regional organizations, the donor community and civil society, to ensure proper mainstreaming of priorities identified in each of the three Programmes of Action;

(e) Monitoring of all seven specific commitments of the Brussels Programme of Action: (i) fostering a people-centred policy framework, (ii) good governance at national and international levels, (iii) building human and institutional capacities, (iv) building capacities to make globalization work for least developed countries, (v) enhancing the role of trade in development, (vi) reducing vulnerability and protecting the environment, and (vii) mobilizing financial resources;

(f) Supporting the effective participation of the least developed countries in intergovernmental processes;

(g) Building partnerships towards the implementation of the Almaty Programme of Action by establishing coordinating mechanisms for its implementation at national, subregional and global levels;

(h) Monitoring and coordinating implementation of specific actions and initiatives aimed at establishing efficient transit transport systems in landlocked and transit developing countries;

Programme 9

United Nations support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development

Overall orientation

9.1 The programme was established following the final review and appraisal of the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s (UN-NADAF) in 2002. As a result of that review, the General Assembly adopted its resolution 57/7, which brought to a close UN-NADAF and endorsed the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD)³ as the framework for international community support to Africa's development. In its resolution 57/7 the Assembly also outlined the substantive areas and modalities for providing such support. More specifically, it underscored the need for a structure in the Secretariat in New York to review and report on support provided by the United Nations system and the international community for the New Partnership and on the coordinated implementation of outcomes of summit meetings and conferences as they relate to Africa, as well as coordinate global advocacy in support of the New Partnership. In addition, it welcomed the actions being taken at the regional level by the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) to organize the activities of the United Nations system around thematic clusters covering the priority areas of the New Partnership and, in this regard, urged the strengthening of this process as a means of enhancing the coordinated response of the United Nations system in support of the New Partnership. Finally, it called upon the United Nations system to enhance its advocacy role and public information activities in support of Africa's development. Subsequent to resolution 57/7, in its resolution 57/300, the Assembly endorsed the creation of the Office of the Special Adviser on Africa and entrusted to the Special Adviser the role of coordinating reports and advocacy in support of NEPAD.

9.2 It is pertinent to note that there is a commitment in NEPAD to achieving several of the Millennium Development Goals and this represents an important linkage with the United Nations Millennium Declaration. In addition, NEPAD fully reflects the priorities on meeting the special needs of Africa in the Millennium Declaration, namely: supporting the political and institutional structures of emerging democracies in Africa; building peacekeeping capacity further, in cooperation with regional organizations; taking special measures to address the challenges of poverty reduction and sustainable development by increasing official development assistance, enhancing private capital flows and building capacities for trade; and helping Africa build its capacity to tackle the spread of HIV/AIDS and other infectious diseases. From the foregoing, it is clear that NEPAD is the framework for achieving the Millennium Development Goals and the aims of the Millennium Declaration in Africa. Consequently, through its support to NEPAD, this programme will contribute to the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals in Africa.

³ NEPAD was formally adopted by the Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-seventh ordinary session, held in Lusaka in July 2001.

9.3 One of the reasons for the current situation in Africa is the incidence of armed conflict and insecurity in the region. Although the link between conflict and development was well known, it was not until 1998 that the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa (A/52/871) spelled out in detail the historical legacies, the internal and external factors and the economic motives that are the causes of conflict in Africa, outlined the implications of such conflict for Africa's development and made concrete recommendations, which are still valid, to address peacemaking, peacekeeping and humanitarian assistance and for building durable peace and promoting economic growth. Since 1998, a number of United Nations actions in Africa have been in line with the recommendations of the report, although a lot still needs to be done. In recognition of this, the General Assembly, in its resolution 58/235 called on the Secretary-General to continue to monitor progress in the implementation of the recommendations.

9.4 In accordance with the mandate provided in the General Assembly resolutions, the programme aims to: (a) mobilize the support and galvanize the efforts of the international community for African peace and development; (b) ensure that the development of Africa remains one of the priorities of the international community; (c) promote a supportive framework for Africa's development efforts; (d) promote a coordinated and effective response by the United Nations system at the policy and operational levels in support of Africa's development; and (e) strengthen and enhance South-South cooperation.

9.5 The Office of the Special Adviser for Africa provides overall coordination and leadership of the programme, which will be under the joint responsibility of the Office of the Special Adviser for Africa, ECA and the Department of Public Information.

Programme 10

Trade and development

Overall orientation

10.1 The main objective of the programme, implemented by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO (ITC), is to maximize the trade and development opportunities of developing countries and to assist them in their integration into the world economy in a manner that enhances the development opportunities offered by the globalization process, while helping to shape international economic relations in the twenty-first century.

10.2 In the four years since the tenth session of UNCTAD, the Bangkok Plan of Action has served as a comprehensive blueprint for the work of UNCTAD and will continue to guide its work in the years to come. The eleventh session of UNCTAD was an opportunity to identify new developments and issues in the area of trade and development that had arisen since the previous session and to generate greater understanding of the interface and coherence between international processes and negotiations on the one hand and the development strategies and policies that developing countries need to pursue on the other. UNCTAD can play an important role in helping to ensure such coherence.

10.3 Since its inception, UNCTAD has consistently offered a perspective that looks closely at the trade- and development-related challenges of developing countries, as well as countries with economies in transition. Through its three major pillars, namely, consensus-building, research and policy analysis, and technical assistance, it has fostered a better understanding of the development process and the factors contributing to uneven economic growth in developing countries. Coordination and synergies among these three areas of work will continue and be enhanced. The independent analytical capacity of UNCTAD will be enhanced to ensure the high quality of research and analysis necessary to address key issues of importance to developing countries. The results of such analysis will support and reinforce its activities in consensus-building and technical cooperation. In all these areas of work, particular consideration will be given to the needs of the least developed countries. UNCTAD technical cooperation activities should also be strengthened through the implementation and follow-up of the technical cooperation strategy approved by the Trade and Development Board at its fiftieth session.

10.4 As the focal point of the United Nations for the integrated treatment of trade and development and interrelated issues in the areas of finance, technology, investment and sustainable development, UNCTAD is expected to make substantial contributions with respect to the implementation of the outcomes of recent global conferences. It will also contribute to the implementation of international development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and to the follow-up of the comprehensive review of the progress made in that regard, to be held in 2005. It will contribute to the implementation of and take specific actions requested in the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation adopted at the World Summit on Sustainable Development, the Declaration of Principles and Plan of Action adopted at the first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society, the Almaty Programme of Action: Addressing the Special Needs of Landlocked Developing Countries within a New Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation for Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, including the outcome of its review, to be held in Mauritius in 2005. It should also contribute to furthering the implementation of internationally agreed goals contained in the Doha Ministerial Declaration adopted at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization (WTO) and other relevant decisions.

10.5 ITC will complement the work of its parent bodies, UNCTAD and WTO, by focusing its technical cooperation activities on supporting the efforts of developing countries and countries with economies in transition, most particularly their business sectors, to build the capacities needed to realize their full potential for developing exports and improving import operations so that they can compete in the international marketplace. Capacity-building support is provided through information dissemination, training and advisory services. The principal clients of such technical assistance are public and private sector institutions and institutional networks that extend specialized trade support services to the export community in partner countries. Its principal technical cooperation partners are national networks of trade support institutions concerned with the international competitiveness of the small-scale enterprise sector. Priority is given to Africa and the least developed countries.

10.6 UNCTAD will be responsible for subprogrammes 1 to 5, while ITC will be responsible for subprogramme 6.

Programme 11

Environment

Overall orientation

11.1 In the 2006-2007 biennium, the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) will continue to pursue a focused approach in the implementation of its role as “the leading global environmental authority that sets the global environmental agenda that promotes the coherent implementation of the environmental dimension of sustainable development within the United Nations system and that serves as an authoritative advocate for the global environment” (Nairobi Declaration, 1997).

11.2 The mandate for the programme derives from General Assembly resolution 2997 (XXVII) of 15 December 1972, which established the Governing Council of UNEP, the Environment Secretariat and the Environment Fund. The Governing Council, in its decision 19/1 of 7 February 1997, redefined and clarified the role and mandate of UNEP in the Nairobi Declaration on the Role and Mandate of UNEP. By its resolution S/19-2 of 28 June 1997, the Assembly endorsed the new mandate of UNEP. The Assembly elaborated further on the mandate of the Programme in its resolution 53/242 of 28 July 1999.

11.3 In line with its functional institutional structure and results-oriented approach to programme implementation, the broader international policy environment will be of particular relevance. In this regard, the Doha Ministerial Declaration of the World Trade Organization, which gave renewed attention to trade and environment issues, the third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, which acknowledged the inextricable link between environment, development and poverty, as well as the outcome of the International Conference on Financing for Development, held at Monterrey, Mexico, provide reference points, while the goals identified in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and other outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development, including on international environmental governance, provide a clear and targeted road map for implementation of the programme.

11.4 The Malmö Ministerial Declaration, in which the international community stated that the root causes of global environmental degradation are embedded in social and economic problems, such as pervasive poverty, unsustainable production and consumption patterns and inequity in distribution of wealth, and the debt burden, continues to provide the broader context within which the environmental perspective must be grounded.

11.5 The programme is based on strong interlinkages between the seven subprogrammes, namely, environmental assessment and early warning; policy development and law; policy implementation; technology, industry and economics; regional cooperation and representation; environmental conventions, and communication and public information. These strong interlinkages will be reflected in the close cooperation between the respective seven divisions, as well as with the Division of Global Environment Facility Coordination.

11.6 Environmental assessment and early warning will continue to underpin UNEP efforts and keep under review the state of the global environment and ensure that emerging environmental issues are brought to the attention of Governments. In this regard, further efforts to strengthen the scientific basis of UNEP and the credibility of environmental data by supporting the development of improved data systems and the development of scientific capacity at the national and regional levels will be essential to develop authoritative environmental assessments and provide early warning for appropriate consideration by Governments.

11.7 The translation of scientific information and data into broad policy-based decisions requires a strong policy development component which builds on the consensus on the international environmental governance achieved at the World Summit on Sustainable Development. The emphasis will be on ensuring that UNEP supports the inclusion of environmental considerations in the broader intergovernmental policy processes, facilitates the development of coordinated approaches to environmental priorities within the United Nations system, i.e., through the Environmental Management Group, and develops innovative approaches to the broader involvement of all stakeholders in the implementation of intergovernmentally approved priorities.

11.8 A major thrust of the science-based initiatives and policy development work of UNEP will be to support implementation at the national level of intergovernmentally agreed environmental policies, particularly through greater and more coordinated efforts to develop the capacity of developing countries and countries with economies in transition.

11.9 UNEP will further enhance the ability of countries and stakeholders to integrate environmental considerations in their decision-making structures and develop policies, strategies and practices that are environmentally sound, building on an integrated and partnership approach to sustainable development. This will include efforts to develop more sustainable patterns of consumption and production, more efficient use of natural resources and strategic approach to management of chemicals and contribute to developing mutually supportive environment, trade and development strategies.

11.10 Increased policy dialogue and cooperation at the regional and subregional levels will support the integration of global environmental policy concerns with emerging priorities and issues at these levels. The work of UNEP with the regional and subregional ministerial forums on the environment provides a crucial link between its policy and programme development and the actual concerns in the regions. In the delivery of UNEP programmes, therefore, greater attention is being paid to addressing the concerns and emerging priorities of regions and subregions, especially those in the developing world, in particular Africa.

11.11 Emphasis will be given to developing more integrated and interlinked approaches to the implementation of international legal agreements that are fundamental to the achievement of environmentally sound development, as mandated by the Governing Council. In this work, special attention will be given to complementarity between the poverty-alleviating objectives of the multilateral environmental agreements and their interlinkages with the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992.

11.12 An essential ingredient of success in ensuring the implementation of environmental policy is to further increase the general understanding of critical environmental issues at all levels. In this regard, in the development of partnerships with major groups, further efforts will be made to ensure that environmental issues are adequately covered by the international media, and that access to environmental information and encouragement of greater public participation in environmental management are met through environmental awareness-raising campaigns.

11.13 As an implementing agency of the Global Environment Facility, UNEP will continue promoting Facility-eligible activities in accordance with its mandate, as well as agreed strategic priorities for the third phase of the Facility (2002-2006). UNEP will continue assisting all eligible countries to develop and implement projects falling within the six Facility focal areas and strive to enhance the capacity of the most vulnerable countries to implement their commitments under the Global Environment Facility-related conventions, and in this regard, special attention will be devoted to the African countries through the UNEP/Global Environment Facility New Partnership for Africa's Development initiative, least developed countries and small island developing States.

11.14 The 2006-2007 programme represents a forward-looking programme of action for UNEP based on the lessons learned in the last 30 years and the clearly articulated needs of member States, and takes as its departure point the international consensus embodied in the recent international conferences and the necessity of a results-oriented approach. This approach embodies the understanding that environmental problems must be addressed in their social and economic context. While it is recognized that there is a need for further policy development and guidance, there is consensus that the future emphasis of the work of UNEP must be focused on implementation, taking into account the gender perspective.

Human settlements

Overall orientation

12.1 Responsibility for human settlements is vested in the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), which serves as the focal point for implementation of the programme. Under the overall development mission of reducing urban poverty and social exclusion, the goal of UN-Habitat is to improve the living and working environment in human settlements around the world. The main substantive mandate of UN-Habitat is derived from the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), whose goals are adequate shelter for all and the development of sustainable human settlements in an urbanizing world. The mandate of the programme also derives from General Assembly resolutions 3327 (XXIX), by which the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation was established, 32/162, by which the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) was established, and 56/206 of 21 December 2001, by which the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) was elevated to the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) under the intergovernmental guidance of a Governing Council, which reports to the Assembly through the Economic and Social Council. Important recent mandates derive from the Millennium Declaration goal of achieving a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by the year 2020, and the target on water and sanitation of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation. In addition, mandates come from relevant legislative bodies regarding Agenda 21 (chaps. 7, 21 and 28) and relevant resolutions of the Governing Council of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme.

12.2 World urban population is currently expanding at the rate of about 70 million people per year. It is estimated that most of these people will live in overcrowded urban slums where the main challenges are inadequate housing, lack of secure tenure, uncertain employment and lack of basic services, especially safe water and sanitation. Rapid urbanization in most developing countries has caused deterioration in shelter conditions for the urban poor while conflicts and disasters are compounding the daunting task of creating sustainable human settlements. Central to meeting the challenge of urban poverty is replacing policies that encourage social and physical exclusion with policies that recognize and respect the rights of all, especially women and people living in poverty and those belonging to vulnerable and disadvantaged groups, to an adequate standard of living, for themselves and their families, including adequate food, clothing, housing, water and sanitation, and to the continuous improvement of living conditions. In consultation with Governments, UN-Habitat develops and strengthens mechanisms for monitoring the impact of human settlements policies and programmes on the lives and work of women in cities, especially those in low-income areas and slums.

12.3 The strategy of UN-Habitat in meeting its objectives rests upon four pillars that have been translated into the four UN-Habitat subprogrammes: (a) advocacy of agreed norms for improving the lives of slum-dwellers, using as vehicles the two campaigns on secure tenure and good urban governance (Subprogramme 1: Shelter and sustainable human settlements development); (b) information generation and knowledge management, without which there can be no assessment of progress in implementing the Habitat Agenda or understanding of either the extent and condition of the world's slums or the trends in slum formation and changes in the lives of slum-dwellers (Subprogramme 2: Monitoring the Habitat Agenda); (c) field operations that tie the advocacy function to a learning process whereby technical assistance and capacity-building projects are designed to test methods and concepts that may be scaled up and transferred and to provide feedback to policy makers at all levels (Subprogramme 3: Regional and technical cooperation); and (d) facilitating financing of housing, infrastructure and other development requirements that will improve the lives of slum-dwellers on a large scale (Subprogramme 4: Human settlements financing).

12.4 The work of UN-Habitat is concentrated in developing countries, countries with economies in transition and countries where sustainable human settlements are necessary for post-conflict and post-disaster recovery (e.g., Sierra Leone, Liberia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Sudan, Mozambique, Kosovo, Afghanistan and Iraq). UN-Habitat works directly with Governments and other Habitat Agenda partners in implementing its plan of work, including the following programmes and agencies, within their respective mandates: the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Economic Commission for Africa, the Economic Commission for Europe, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Office for Project Services, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Environment Programme, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the World Health Organization, the World Bank, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the Global Environment Facility, the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

Strategy

12.5 The responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Shelter and Sustainable Human Settlements Development Division (Global Division). The subprogramme's main strategy will be global advocacy, focusing on two global campaigns: the Global Campaign for Secure Tenure and the Global Campaign on Urban Governance. The two campaigns will be aligned with efforts to implement the goals of the Millennium Declaration as set forth in resolution 55/2, particularly on achieving significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by the year 2020 as well as reducing by half the proportion of people without access to safe drinking water by the year 2015. The campaigns will mobilize all Habitat Agenda partners in pursuit of these goals in order to achieve sustainable human settlements. There shall be an effort to enhance the global visibility of the campaigns.

12.6 The global programmes entailing normative, capacity-building and knowledge management activities on secure tenure, shelter and housing and property rights, urban environment, water and sanitation, shelter and HIV/AIDS, post-conflict and post-disaster management and safer cities will be carried out within the context of the campaigns, thereby assisting in translating normative work into practical real life processes at the national and community levels. Global programmes will, therefore, support national campaign launches and the implementation of national campaign action plans through the development of new policies and tools. The capacity at the national and local levels to contribute to planning, management and delivery of shelter, land, infrastructure and services will be supported by a dedicated capacity-building programme, at the request of Governments. A special feature of the strategy will be to focus on the role of women as active participants and beneficiaries in the efforts to improve shelter conditions and urban governance.

International drug control, crime prevention and criminal justice

Overall orientation

13.1 In the United Nations Millennium Declaration the General Assembly established the achievement of sustainable development as an aim of the Organization. Sustainable development has many dimensions. It requires that the resources of the planet be shared so as to promote human dignity. It further requires good stewardship of those resources so that future generations may inherit a better world. It is also important to free individuals from the burden of “uncivil” behaviour in order to safeguard their survival, dignity and livelihood. This aspect is at the core of the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), which is mandated to assist Member States in their struggle against illicit drugs, crime and terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. In the Millennium Declaration, Member States also resolved to intensify efforts to fight transnational crime in all its dimensions, to redouble the efforts to implement the commitment to counter the world drug problem and to take concerted action against international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations.

13.2 Actions against the world drug problem, global criminal activity and terrorism in all its forms and manifestations are a common and shared responsibility that must be addressed in a multilateral setting and require an integrated and balanced approach.

13.3 The policy directions of UNODC are grounded in: (a) the international drug control conventions, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the universal legal instruments against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations; (b) the Millennium Declaration; (c) key resolutions of legislative organs, in particular General Assembly resolution 46/152 of 18 December 1991, establishing the crime prevention and criminal justice programme, and resolutions 45/179 of 21 December 1990 and 46/185 C of 20 December 1991 on the drug control programme; (d) the twentieth special session of the General Assembly on countering the world drug problem; and (e) the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, adopted by the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (General Assembly resolution 55/59, annex), the related plans of action (General Assembly resolution 56/261, annex) and the recommendations resulting from the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (to be held in Bangkok in April 2005).

13.4 The three pillars of the UNODC work programme are:

(a) Research and analytical work to increase knowledge and understanding of drug, crime and terrorism issues and to expand the evidence base for making policy and operational decisions;

(b) Normative work to assist States in the ratification and implementation of international treaties, the development of domestic legislation on drugs, crime and terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and the provision of secretariat and substantive services to the relevant treaty-based and governing bodies;

(c) Field-based technical cooperation projects, upon request, to enhance the capacity of Member States to counteract illicit drugs, crime and terrorism.

13.5 Globalization has created an environment where illicit drugs, crime and terrorism in all its forms and manifestations can flow easily across borders. The gains to be had from open trade and the free flow of public goods are offset, however, by the globalization of threats to the survival, dignity and livelihood of individuals. The interventions of UNODC are therefore designed to contribute to the following outcomes:

(a) Governments will be better equipped to fulfil and implement their obligations under the international treaties, in particular through effective judicial cooperation, prevention and countermeasures against illicit drug production, trafficking and abuse, human trafficking and other forms of organized crime, money-laundering, corruption and terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

(b) Decisions by policy makers will be more evidence-based, relying on more extensive and intensive knowledge of issues related to illicit drugs, crime and terrorism;

(c) Civil society and public opinion will be more firmly committed to action against the illicit drug and crime problems, relying on greater awareness and understanding of the issues.

13.6 In pursuing its objectives, UNODC will make every effort to integrate and mainstream the gender perspective, particularly in its projects on prevention, the provision of alternative livelihoods and human trafficking.

Programme 14

Economic and social development in Africa

Overall orientation

14.1 The overall objective of the programme is to enhance the capacity of African member States and their development organizations to formulate and implement appropriate policies and programmes for accelerated and sustained growth for poverty reduction, in line with the goals and priorities of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) and the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992.

14.2 The mandate for the programme derives from Economic and Social Council resolution 671 A (XXV) of 29 April 1958, by which the Council established the Economic Commission for Africa. This mandate has been further elaborated in a number of resolutions of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council as well as in resolutions 718 (XXVI), 726 (XXVII), 779 (XXIX) and 809 (XXXI) of the Economic Commission for Africa.

14.3 African countries have made significant progress in economic and social development in recent years. Nevertheless, the rate of poverty remains intolerably high and it is not likely that the continent will attain Millennium Development Goal 1 of reducing poverty by half by 2015 at current rates of growth. Therefore, poverty reduction has emerged as the major challenge and ultimate goal of every development intervention in Africa.

14.4 In order to address the overall long-term challenge of poverty reduction in Africa, there are several related challenges of a medium-term nature, requiring immediate and compelling action. Key among these are:

- (a) Achieving higher, sustained and equitable economic growth;
- (b) Investing in the social sector to target and reach the poor, including through education, health and employment programmes;
- (c) Improving stewardship of environmental and ecological resources for sustainable development, including enhancing agricultural productivity;
- (d) Improving governance systems to strengthen state capacity; bridging the digital divide; and harnessing information and communication technologies for development;
- (e) Accelerating regional integration and cooperation, with particular emphasis on infrastructure development, in order to increase market size;
- (f) Mainstreaming trade policy into national development strategies; achieving structural diversification; and enhancing competitiveness;
- (g) Ensuring gender equality and addressing the gender perspective of poverty; and building and strengthening human and institutional capacities for addressing development priorities.

14.5 The Economic Commission for Africa will respond to these challenges by implementing activities in eight interdependent and complementary subprogramme areas. Under each of the subprogrammes, particular attention will be given to supporting member States in attaining the goals of NEPAD and the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992. As a follow-up to the Brussels Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, which included landlocked developing countries and small island developing States, the programme will also give particular attention to addressing the special needs of this category of countries and accelerating their social and economic development.

14.6 Vigorous action to address the challenge of HIV/AIDS will be an essential component of the work of the Economic Commission for Africa during 2006-2007. This will build on the research and analytical policy work currently being undertaken within the context of the Commission on HIV/AIDS and Governance in Africa, established by the Secretary-General in February 2003 and chaired by the Executive Secretary of the Commission, in order to heighten international awareness of the development impact of the disease and to encourage appropriate policy responses. It will also continue to respond to the mandates provided in the African Consensus and Plan of Action: Leadership to Overcome HIV/AIDS, adopted by the African Development Forum in March 2000; the Abuja Declaration on HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Other Related Infectious Diseases, adopted at a special summit of the Organization of African Unity in 2001; and the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-sixth special session in 2001.

14.7 The modalities for action will include: advocacy and policy analysis and monitoring and tracking of Africa's progress in various areas of development; convening stakeholders and building consensus on key issues in Africa's development through forums such as the annual Conferences of African Ministers organized by the Commission, the African Development Forum and the "Big Table" meeting; and providing technical assistance and capacity-building support in the form of advisory services and training of African policy makers. The Commission will continue to build on its existing partnerships with other United Nations agencies as well as with African regional and subregional organizations, civil society and the private sector, leveraging its comparative advantage to achieve the above objectives.

14.8 To ensure system-wide coherence, the Economic Commission for Africa will undertake its work in close cooperation and coordination with other United Nations entities, including the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization. As an active member of the Executive Committee on Economic and Social Affairs, the Commission will devote attention to clarification of the roles and responsibilities of global and regional bodies with regard to follow-up on internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992. The Commission will continue to collaborate with regional and national organizations as well as civil society and the private sector.

Programme 15

Economic and social development in Asia and the Pacific

Overall orientation

15.1 Within the United Nations, the mandate of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) is to promote economic and social development in the Asian and Pacific region by fostering cooperation between its members and associate members. The mandate for the programme derives from Economic and Social Council resolutions 37 (IV) of 28 March 1947 and 414 (XIII) of 18, 19 and 20 September 1951, by which the Commission was established.

15.2 The mandate was further elaborated in General Assembly resolution 32/197 of 20 December 1977, on the restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations system, in which ESCAP was designated to serve as the main general economic and social development centre within the United Nations system for Asia and the Pacific and as an executing agency for intersectoral, subregional, regional and interregional projects. The internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992, provide the overarching mandates for the United Nations and its specialized agencies, including ESCAP.

15.3 Over 800 million of the world's 1.2 billion poor people live in the Asian and Pacific region. Over 500 million of them are suffering from hunger and disease. The poor lack productive income, employment and assets and have insufficient access to food, basic services, infrastructure, information and decision-making opportunities, which constitutes a threat to human security, as recognized by ESCAP.

15.4 Equitable access is essential for poverty reduction. The poor need access to health services, clean water, adequate sanitation, energy, shelter, education and training. They also need access to markets, transport infrastructure, credit, capital and information technology to increase their productivity and income. Furthermore, access to meaningful decision-making processes provides the poor with avenues through which to voice their concerns. All of these are central to expanding the range of choices that the poor can have to improve their income and quality of life.

15.5 Globalization has contributed to the expansion of opportunities for the poor and societies at large. However, this process is not automatic, as globalization can actually widen income disparities. Countries thus need to develop the capacity to manage globalization, with the aim of maximizing its benefits and minimizing its costs.

15.6 Hence, the overall objective of ESCAP for the strategic framework for 2006-2007 will be to promote equitable access to opportunities for individuals, communities and economies, leading to the economic and social advancement of the region.

15.7 ESCAP will pursue that objective by focusing on three thematic priorities:

- (a) Poverty reduction;
- (b) Managing globalization;
- (c) Addressing emerging social issues.

15.8 In terms of results, ESCAP will contribute to countries' efforts to build national capacity, at the request of members and associate members, in:

(a) Developing and implementing economic and social development policies and programmes, including regulatory, legal and institutional frameworks;

(b) Negotiating effectively in multilateral and regional forums;

(c) Building effective partnerships with all sectors of civil society, including the private sector;

(d) Implementing commitments from global and regional conferences and reviewing progress in achieving the internationally agreed goals and targets adopted at global and regional conferences. Interventions will include policy advocacy and dialogue, knowledge-sharing, training and other advisory services. The work programmes of the regional institutions will be aligned and closely coordinated with those endeavours.

15.9 As a matter of priority, the gender dimension and the rights-based as well as development-based approaches for persons with disabilities will be mainstreamed across relevant subprogrammes. Particular attention will be given to promoting, in diverse development sectors, the rights of vulnerable groups, including women, youth, people with disabilities, older persons and people living with HIV/AIDS, especially among the poor.

15.10 To ensure system-wide coherence and avoid duplication, ESCAP will undertake work in close cooperation and coordination with other United Nations bodies and specialized agencies. As an active member of the Executive Committee on Economic and Social Affairs, ESCAP will devote attention to ensuring clarity in the roles and responsibilities of global and regional bodies with regard to follow-up to the outcomes of major global conferences. ESCAP will continue to collaborate with regional, subregional and national organizations, and, at the request of members and associate members, with civil society institutions and the private sector.

Economic development in Europe

Overall orientation

16.1 The programme is under the responsibility of the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE).

16.2 The Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 36 (IV) of 28 March 1947, established the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) and assigned to it responsibilities for coordination and promotion of international economic cooperation in Europe. Further direction to the programme is provided by the Declaration on the Strengthening of Economic Cooperation in Europe and its annexed Plan of Action, both endorsed by the Council in its decision 1997/224. Taking into account the role of the regional commissions, as set forth in Economic and Social Council resolution 1998/46 of 31 July 1998, and the goals and commitments contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development, the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing 2002, adopted at the Second World Assembly on Ageing and the related Regional Implementation Strategy Adopted in Berlin, the main objectives of the ECE work programme for the biennium 2006-2007 will be: (a) to promote the economic integration of ECE countries in the context of the post-enlargement European Union and taking into account the various stages of development of countries of the region with economies in transition (acceding countries, emerging market economies and less advanced transition economies); (b) to foster sustainable development in the countries of the region, with a focus on promoting the conditions for sustained growth and trade and improving the environment; and (c) to contribute to the economic and environmental dimensions of security in Europe.

16.3 The overall ECE programme of work is designed around nine interdependent and complementary subprogrammes, namely: Environment, Transport, Statistics, Economic analysis, Sustainable energy, Trade development, Timber, Human settlements and Industrial restructuring and enterprise development. The core strategy involves the negotiation and implementation of conventions, norms, standards and guidelines; the promotion of dialogue in economic cooperation and development and the exchange of information and experience in the key areas of ECE work; the development of policy analysis, studies and supporting statistics; and the provision of technical assistance.

16.4 ECE will bring about a further achievement of economic integration in the region as a whole and, in particular, closer cooperation between countries of the enlarged European Union and non-acceding countries through its work in the further development and maintenance of norms and standards, with an emphasis on their implementation. The work in this area will also have a positive impact on the rest of the world as more of the ECE-developed agreements and standards, in particular in the areas of transport, trade facilitation, statistics, energy and environmental protection, are expected to become accepted for use in non-ECE countries.

16.5 ECE will also contribute to reducing disparities and preventing the emergence of new dividing lines in Europe by promoting greater regulatory compatibility among ECE member States. Through policy discussions, the exchange of experiences and projects, in particular for improving trade and investment flows, transport infrastructure and energy networks, the integration between the enlarged European Union and other countries will be fostered.

16.6 The work of ECE in the area of policy analysis will be covering the core United Nations development-related themes addressed in the Millennium Declaration and the outcomes of recent United Nations summits and major forums, reflecting the progress made in the region in the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals of the United Nations.

16.7 Technical cooperation activities will be carried out in accordance with the ECE Technical Cooperation Strategy, which was endorsed at the fifty-ninth session of the Commission in 2004. Activities will be streamlined and focused on south-east Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), in particular Central Asia and the Caucasus. A unifying strategy to identify the needs of these countries and to determine activities responding thereto will be carried out with the objectives of: (a) improving national capacities to implement legally binding instruments and other regional standards, including those developed by ECE; and (b) finding solutions to address transboundary problems.

16.8 The economic and environmental dimensions of security in the region have been given a new impetus through the adoption, in December 2003, of the New Strategy Document of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), in which ECE was identified as a key partner for reviewing the commitments in their economic and environmental dimensions. ECE will, therefore, further integrate the security dimension in its relevant subprogrammes, with a view to contributing to the review and implementation of those commitments that correspond to its areas of expertise as agreed in the memorandum of understanding with OSCE and in the work plan set up between the two organizations.

Subprogramme 1 Environment

Objective of the Organization: To improve environmental management, reduce the overall pollution burden throughout the region and strengthen the environmental pillar of sustainable development.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Further mainstreaming of environmental concerns into policy formulation by Governments and implementation through the “Environment for Europe” process and other sustainable development activities	(a) Percentage of implemented decisions/ commitments by ECE member States that relate to the integration of environmental concerns into policy formulation
(b) Increased adherence to and further implementation by countries in meeting their obligations under ECE legal instruments for the protection of the environment	(b) (i) Number of ratifications of ECE environmental conventions and protocols (ii) Number of reports from parties indicating significant progress in implementing key obligations
(c) Improved environmental performance in countries with economies in transition	(c) (i) Number of countries having carried out environmental performance reviews by the end of the biennium (ii) Number of countries that have implemented more than 50 per cent of the recommendations contained in the first environmental performance review, as reflected in the second reviews and in country reports

16.9 In line with this objective, the Environment and Human Settlements Division will further promote sustainable development in the ECE region. Work will focus on the implementation of the ECE environmental conventions and their protocols and the conduct of the second round of environmental performance reviews of countries with economies in transition. Furthermore, the subprogramme will contribute to the implementation of the Millennium Declaration and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation in the ECE region and the outcomes of regional environment and sustainable development conferences, in particular the ministerial conferences “Environment for Europe” (Kiev 2003 and Belgrade 2007). These activities will be undertaken in cooperation with other relevant organizations working in the region.

16.10 In particular, consistent with the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, actions will be taken to: promote multi-stakeholder participation; support processes and partnerships in the region resulting from the World Summit on Sustainable Development, the “Environment for Europe” process and the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development; contribute to the environmental dimension of security; and promote intersectoral programmes and projects, including water and environment, transport and environment, health and environment and education for sustainable development. It will also contribute to the regional submissions related to the priority areas of the 2006-2009 programme cycle of the Commission on Sustainable Development. Special activities for the implementation of the Commission's legally binding instruments will be undertaken, in particular supporting implementation of regional and subregional agreements and action programmes; evaluating and supporting enforcement and compliance with agreements; and providing timely and accurate environmental information.

Subprogramme 2 Transport

Objective of the Organization: To facilitate the international movement of persons and goods by inland transport modes and improve safety, environmental protection, energy efficiency and security in the transport sector to levels that contribute effectively to sustainable development.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Adoption, at the regional and/or global level, of amendments to existing legal instruments and recommendations on road transport, road, rail, inland water and combined transport infrastructure, border crossing, transport of dangerous goods and other transport issues, as well as to vehicle regulations, and development of new legal instruments and new vehicle regulations, including global vehicle regulations	(a) (i) Number of existing legal instruments amended (ii) Number of amendments to existing vehicle regulations and number of new vehicle regulations, including global vehicle regulations, adopted (iii) Number of adopted amendments to the United Nations Recommendations on the Transport of Dangerous Goods and to the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals
(b) Increased implementation of the ECE legal instruments and recommendations on transport	(b) (i) Number of new accessions of member States to ECE legal instruments on transport (ii) Number of international and national legal instruments amended to reflect the United Nations Recommendations on the Transport of Dangerous Goods and other ECE legal instruments of transport
(c) Further development of transport infrastructure conducive to strengthening economic cooperation within the region, in particular between the enlarged European Union and the non-acceding countries, taking into consideration the imperative of sustainable development	(c) Number of kilometres of new and improved road and rail transport infrastructures along main transport links in non-acceding countries

16.11 In order to achieve the above objective, the Transport Division will update and improve the existing set of ECE legal instruments and recommendations governing inland transport in the region by incorporating new technological developments, political and economic changes as well as measures aimed at reducing further the number of transport accidents and the impacts of transport on the environment. The Division will also incorporate adequate measures to address new security threats in, or related to, the transport sector. It will extend the globalization of some of its legal instruments on transport, particularly in the areas of vehicle construction, transit, transport of dangerous goods and road safety. This will be achieved through consensus and agreement reached at the intergovernmental meetings of the Inland Transport Committee and its Bureau, on the basis of relevant substantive documentation and provision of efficient meetings services by the Transport Division. Dissemination of the outcome of meetings, performance of the legal and administrative functions related to international legal instruments and promotion of the implementation of these instruments and recommendations, including through advisory services, are also an integral part of the strategy. The Transport Division provides assistance in planning and developing road and rail transport infrastructures in particular in landlocked developing countries as a follow-up to the Almaty Programme of Action. The needs of the beneficiaries are also met through the participation of other United Nations agencies, intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) representing transport operators, other relevant industries, transport users and consumers in the above-mentioned meetings.

16.12 This strategy also applies to the Economic and Social Council Committee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods and the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals and its subsidiary bodies, to which the Transport Division also provides a secretariat.

Subprogramme 3 Statistics

Objective of the Organization: To improve the reliability of national official statistics and ensure their comparability at the international level.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Further developed national institutional frameworks and corresponding implementation practices of member countries, in line with the ECE Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics	(a) (i) Number of countries ensuring better compliance with the Fundamental Principles through revisions of their national statistical legislations (ii) Number of ECE recommendations implemented to improve national institutional frameworks for official statistics
(b) Increased implementation of internationally recommended standards and practices to ensure comparable statistics, particularly by the less advanced countries in the region	(b) (i) Number of new or revised statistical standards endorsed by a statistical authority to which the ECE has contributed in substance (ii) Number of countries in CIS and south-east Europe having implemented essential internationally recommended standards and practices in macroeconomic, social and demographic statistics
(c) Streamlined activity patterns of statistical work between international organizations through elimination of overlaps and gaps	(c) (i) Percentage of joint activities in the ECE statistical programme undertaken in cooperation with the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), the Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat) and other international organizations (ii) Number of international organizations regularly reporting their activities in the Integrated Presentation of International Statistical Work programmes
(d) Increased access by users to reliable, timely and comparable macroeconomic, social and demographic statistics	(d) Percentage of users that express satisfaction with the quality, coverage and timeliness of data delivered

16.13 The Statistics Division will review existing institutional frameworks (statistical laws) and major practices in member countries and positively influence eventual revisions. It will use recommendations made through technical cooperation activities such as bilateral advice to countries and multilateral workshops and seminars to accomplish this objective.

16.14 The subprogramme will continue to improve the comparability of official statistics in the ECE region. This will be achieved through reviewing and updating, jointly with other international organizations, the existing statistical standards and developing new ones, when necessary. As an integral part of its strategy, statistical assistance will be provided to the less developed countries of the region so that they can produce essential macroeconomic, social and demographic statistics, including the indicators for achieving the goals contained in the Millennium Declaration. Furthermore, through the mechanisms established by the Conference of European Statistics, the emerging needs of official statistics will be addressed collectively by all international organizations active in the region. For this to be achieved it is essential that the coordination role of the Conference of European Statistics vis-à-vis the statistical activities of international organizations, including the Statistical Office of European Communities (Eurostat), OECD, the International Monetary Fund, the Statistics Division of the Secretariat and CIS, be kept and further strengthened. ECE will, therefore, continue to compile updated information on the statistical activities of the various international organizations and make it publicly available.

16.15 The ECE strategy in statistics also applies to the production and dissemination of internationally comparable statistical data on the ECE region, with the aim of contributing to the public debate and decision-making process at the national and international level. Cooperation with other international organizations in collecting and sharing essential statistical data from national statistical offices and making efficient use of modern technologies for collection, processing and dissemination of statistics is a key part of this strategy.

Subprogramme 4 Economic analysis

Objective of the Organization: To enhance policy-making on major economic and development problems faced by countries of the ECE region and contribute to achieving the internationally agreed development goals of the United Nations.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Increased understanding of economic developments and policies in the ECE region, including in the areas relating to the internationally agreed development goals of the United Nations	(a) (i) Percentage of users of the Economic Survey indicating usefulness and relevance of the policy recommendations to policy makers related to major economic developments (ii) Increased number of downloads from the ECE web site of ECE economic analyses addressing policy issues

16.16 The substantive responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Economic Analysis Division.

16.17 The subprogramme will first seek to provide an international and regional perspective for national economic policy makers and, when appropriate, facilitate policy dialogue. The Economic Survey of Europe will be used as a medium for producing analysis of economic issues, policies and problems in the ECE region, especially as they relate to core United Nations themes in the field of development. The Survey will continue to place special emphasis on the less advanced economies, with a view to helping them catch up with other countries of the region and the rest of the world. It is intended to strengthen the focus on structural change and institutional problems both in the Survey and at the ECE spring seminar. In undertaking this work, the Division will do its part to ensure that its work does not duplicate that done by other organizations and that it provides clear added value, with a focus on those subregions of ECE that are not covered by other organizations.

16.18 Secondly, the subprogramme will coordinate and contribute to the work as agreed in the memorandum of understanding with OSCE and the established work plan.

16.19 Through the spring seminar and other meetings, ECE will provide a forum for policy debates on major and topical economic issues among senior economists from the government, academic and business sectors and from other international organizations. The population-related activities will be carried out in close collaboration with the United Nations Population Fund, other international organizations and national institutions. Using reliable data from national and international sources, including population censuses and household/family surveys, the subprogramme will conduct analyses, research and exchange of experiences relating to areas approved by the Commission for regional follow-up to the International Conference on Population and Development, the Fourth World Conference on Women, the second World Assembly on Ageing and the ECE Ministerial Conference on Ageing, held in Berlin.

Subprogramme 5 Sustainable energy

Objective of the Organization: To facilitate (a) the transition to a more sustainable development path for the production and use of energy; and (b) the fuller integration of the energy economies and energy infrastructure of countries in the region.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement

Strategy

16.20 The responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Industrial Restructuring, Energy and Enterprise Development Division. In the framework of the global initiatives towards sustainable development, this subprogramme is designed to promote a sustainable energy development strategy for the ECE region. In particular, it is to assist member States in maintaining access to high quality energy services for all individuals in the ECE region, promote the security of energy supplies in the short, medium and long term, facilitate the transition to a more sustainable energy future and promote the fuller integration of the energy economies and energy infrastructures of countries in the ECE region. ECE will promote well-balanced energy network systems throughout the region tailored to optimize operating efficiencies and overall regional cooperation and sustained improvements in energy efficiency, production and use, particularly in countries with economies in transition. The subprogramme will support projects, especially on gas infrastructure and transportation networks, with particular attention to the Caucasus, Central Asia, the Balkans and Southern Europe. In the context of post-enlargement European Union, the subprogramme is to assist member States with the integration of their energy economies through the compatibility of legal, regulatory and policy measures, including business practices and the development of classification systems and guidelines, and to conduct studies on natural gas markets. The subprogramme takes into account the goals of the United Nations Millennium Declaration, the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and the proposals emanating from the process on strengthening the Organization initiated by the Secretary-General in 2002.

16.21 In order to meet the objectives, ECE will work through its intergovernmental bodies, with the active participation of government officials and representatives of the energy industries, the financial community, relevant international organizations and NGOs. It will coordinate its activities with other international organizations such as the International Energy Agency and the Energy Charter, with a view to ensuring efficient and effective use of resources and avoiding duplication. The present structure of intergovernmental dialogue through a committee, expert groups and technical assistance projects will be reinforced by additional extrabudgetary resources which the ECE sustainable energy activities usually attract. The international cooperation pursued by ECE bodies will have its greatest impact in this field by focusing on the key issues that strengthen national policies by providing a coherent regional context for managing inherently international problems. While activities begin with policy dialogue, the subprogramme also provides the opportunity for policy recommendations to be implemented through international norms, standards, training programmes, technical assistance and the preparation of investment projects.

Trade development

Objective of the Organization: To facilitate trade and economic cooperation among countries of the ECE region and with the rest of the world.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Adoption by member States of new/ revised trade facilitation recommendations, norms, standards, guidelines and tools, including for agricultural produce	(a) (i) Number of new and/or updated ECE recommendations, norms, standards, guidelines and tools for trade facilitation and electronic business agreed upon by member States (ii) Number of agreed new or revised international standards and recommendations on agricultural produce
(b) Increased implementation of trade facilitation recommendations, norms, standards, guidelines and tools, including for agricultural produce	(b) (i) Increased number of recommendations, norms, standards, guidelines and tools implemented by member States (ii) Number of downloads of key recommendations, norms, standards, guidelines and tools from the ECE Internet site, as a proxy for their use (iii) Cumulative total number of implementations of ECE agricultural quality standards in member States (total number of standards multiplied by total number of countries implementing them)
(c) Enhanced policy dialogue on trade practices and regulatory framework	(c) Percentage of participants in policy discussions who evaluate them as being useful for decision-making

Strategy

16.22 The responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Trade Development and Timber Division. The strategy will promote five key work areas. First, developing and maintaining international trade facilitation instruments in response to the needs of international business, especially to support international supply chains and the integration of countries into the global economy, and to provide a platform for discussion among all actors (Governments, business and other organizations) in this regard. This will entail maintaining electronic data interchange standards (United Nations Directories for Electronic Data Interchange for Administration, Commerce and Transport (UN/EDIFACT)), extending the work of the Organization on electronic codes and developing new e-business standards. Second, the strategy will focus on reducing barriers to trade in goods and services, especially non-tariff barriers, through greater implementation of ECE norms, standards and recommendations in trade facilitation, international harmonization and standardization and regulatory compatibility. Third, efforts will be made to facilitate trade policy development, especially in the context of the implications of the enlargement of the European Union, the new challenges stemming from trade and security and measures to promote sustainable trade. Fourth, the strategy will seek to add value to the Commission's well-established work in agricultural quality standards and to encourage the participation of more countries throughout the ECE region in the standards-making process. Fifth, the ECE will encourage implementation of the trade-related norms and standards, in particular for the benefit of countries with economies in transition. Overall, efforts will be made to support the mainstreaming of information and communication technologies and gender issues into all aspects of the subprogramme.

Subprogramme 7 Timber

Objective of the Organization: To improve sustainable forest management, including the sound, legal use of wood, other forest products and services throughout the ECE region.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Increased understanding of sustainable forest management, notably the policies necessary to achieve it, based on increased ability to measure sustainable forest management at the national and regional levels	(a) (i) Percentage of ECE countries with national forest programmes or similar holistic forest sector policy frameworks (ii) Percentage of ECE countries able to provide satisfactory data on indicators of sustainable forest management to the fifth Ministerial Conference on the Protection of Forests in Europe
(b) Increased understanding of the sound use of wood, leading to policies to promote it and increased ability to monitor it	(b) (i) Percentage of ECE countries with policies in place on sound use of wood, whether as part of national forest programmes or not (ii) Percentage of ECE countries able to provide satisfactory responses to the ECE/Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations/International Tropical Timber Organization/Eurostat joint forest sector questionnaire
(c) Increased capacity of countries in CIS and south-east Europe to achieve sustainable forest management at the national level, notably through developing appropriate policy measures	(c) Increased number of CIS and south-east European countries adopting national forest programmes

16.23 The responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Trade Development and Timber Division. The work will be carried out in conjunction with relevant activities of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Labour Organization. To support forest management, including the use of wood and forest products, which is sustainable from the ecological, economic and social point of view, it is necessary to maintain a good balance between these three aspects, based on a strong consensus about goals and methods among all stakeholders, as well as to ensure that the strategy is well integrated into the policy framework of other sectors (the cross-sectoral approach). Achieving sustainable forest management is primarily a sovereign national responsibility. However, regional international cooperation, through the timber subprogramme and its partners, will contribute by developing and disseminating concepts and information, sharing experience and defining standard measurement tools (indicators). The main contribution of the subprogramme is through developing and applying analytical and monitoring tools, both on policy and on developments on the ground, collecting, validating and disseminating information and analysis, as well as stimulating the exchange of experience and joint efforts to measure progress. While all countries benefit from international cooperation, the subprogramme recognizes a special need of the countries of CIS and south-eastern Europe, where forest sector problems tend to be more acute and national capacity weaker.

Subprogramme 8

Human settlements

Objective of the Organization: To improve the human settlements situation in the ECE region, taking into account the needs of socially vulnerable population groups and the gender perspective in sustainable urban development.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Improved housing sector policies through implementation of recommendations, taking into account the concerns of vulnerable population groups	(a) (i) Number of countries which have expressed willingness to engage in an assessment of their housing situation through the country profile programme (ii) Percentage of recommendations that have been implemented in key areas by the countries that have taken part in land administration reviews, as reported to the Committee on Human Settlements
(b) Further development and reforms in land administration	(b) (i) Number of countries that have expressed willingness to engage in an assessment of their land administration systems through land administration reviews (ii) Percentage of recommendations that have been implemented by the reviewed countries, as reported to the Committee on Human Settlements
(c) Improved policy formulation for urban planning	(c) Number of countries that have taken action to implement the guidelines on urban planning, as reported to the Committee on Human Settlements

Strategy

16.24 The responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Environment and Human Settlements Division. The activities of the subprogramme will promote the implementation of the ECE Strategy for Sustainable Quality of Life in Human Settlements in the 21st Century and will address the goals contained in the Millennium Declaration (eradication of extreme poverty, promotion of gender equality, ensuring of environmental sustainability) as well as the regional priorities for human settlements as decided upon at the first Regional Implementation Forum on Sustainable Development, held as follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development. In line with these directions, the activities of the subprogramme will promote socially, economically and environmentally sound human settlements policies. Through capacity-building measures, the dissemination of good practices and the provision of expert assistance to countries, the subprogramme will contribute to improving housing and urban planning policies and moving those policies in a more sustainable direction, particularly through upgrading land and real estate systems, promoting social housing for vulnerable population groups, including incorporation of the gender perspective, and improving urban land use for, inter alia, sustainable transport and energy consumption.

Subprogramme 9

Industrial restructuring and enterprise development

Objective of the Organization: To foster industrial restructuring and the development of effective and competitive enterprises, particularly in countries with economies in transition.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Enhanced policy dialogue on industrial restructuring and modernization, including promotion of innovative small and medium-sized enterprises and the development of knowledge-based economies based on national e-assessment reports identifying gaps and corresponding policy recommendations	(a) (i) Percentage of policy recommendations resulting from national e-assessment reports that have been implemented by the countries reviewed (ii) Number of business incubators generated by ECE activities related to industrial development
(b) Enhanced policies and practices for investment promotion	(b) (i) Percentage of policy recommendations implemented in countries with economies in transition in the areas of investment promotion that are addressed by ECE activities (ii) Number of initiatives/actions aimed at promoting investment undertaken by countries and generated by ECE activities in these areas

16.25 The responsibility for this subprogramme is vested in the Industrial Restructuring, Energy and Enterprise Development Division. In order to meet the above objective, the Division intends to operate within and strengthen the already established network of officials responsible for enterprise restructuring and development within ministries of economy, trade, industry and finance and the major financial and non-financial public and private corporations. In particular, through enhancing policy dialogue and exchange of experiences among policy makers, experts and private sector representatives, ECE will assist member States, upon request, in dealing with key challenges such as: the promotion of domestic and foreign investment; the creation of an environment conducive to transforming the old industries into new ones that are products of the newly emerging knowledge-based economy; the promotion of institutions facilitating new business undertakings, including business incubators, that support innovative small and medium-sized enterprises; and the strengthening of the regulatory and institutional framework for enterprise development as one important aspect of the economic dimension of security. In this way, the most pressing and relevant industrial restructuring and modernization issues will be properly addressed in intergovernmental cooperation and debate. At the same time, this course of action will foster the development and implementation of concerned national policies. Where appropriate and necessary, training and education of policy makers in implementing business development strategies and creating modern institutions for promoting entrepreneurship will also be undertaken.

Programme 17

Economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean

Overall orientation

17.1 The overall purpose of this programme is to promote the economic and social development of Latin America and the Caribbean through interactive cooperation with member States in undertaking a comprehensive analysis of the development process and in providing the relevant operational services.

17.2 The mandate for the programme, which falls within the purview of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), derives from Economic and Social Council resolution 106 (VI), by which the Council established the Commission and entrusted it, inter alia, with initiating and participating in measures for improving the level of economic and social activity in Latin America and the Caribbean; maintaining and strengthening economic relations among the countries of the region and between them and other countries; making or sponsoring such research and studies as the Commission deemed appropriate; and undertaking or supporting member countries in the collection, evaluation and dissemination of information on regional development issues, trends and policies. The mandate has been set forth in greater detail in various resolutions adopted subsequently by the General Assembly, the Council and the Commission.

17.3 The Commission's overall strategy for achieving the objectives of the programme is structured around 12 interdependent and complementary subprogrammes. It is based on a proposal for improving economic growth rates, fostering international linkages for the region in the world economy and strengthening multilateral trade regimes and regional and subregional integration schemes with a view to increasing productive development with social equity and environmental sustainability.

17.4 The goals and objectives set forth in the Millennium Declaration, as adopted by the General Assembly, will be regarded as a basic source of guidelines and orientation for the implementation of activities related to the programme of work of ECLAC during the period 2006-2007. The strategy also takes into account the relevant provisions of other United Nations global conferences, especially those related to: financing for development; multilateral trade; international migration and poverty reduction; gender mainstreaming; sustainable development at the national and international levels; and furtherance of the special needs of small island developing States. The strategy will be implemented through an integrated approach, disaggregated in each of the subprogrammes at two levels. On one level, the strategy is aimed at achieving stable economic growth rates and productive development with social equity and environmental sustainability, which emerges in its various dimensions in all subprogrammes, and, at another level, notwithstanding the effective specialization of each programme, the strategy places emphasis on the strong links between the subprogrammes. Proposals for public policies focusing primarily on institution-building and the improvement of public regulation are priority aspects of such interrelationships. The strategy places special emphasis, in terms of analytical work, on the formulation of public policies and facilitating its practical implementation by making available operational services in the areas of specialized information, technical assistance and training and by fostering cooperation at the regional and international levels.

17.5 Expected accomplishments by the end of the plan period would include:

(a) Increased effectiveness and efficiency of the Commission in the periodic systematization of information, technical assistance, the monitoring of relevant regional developments, action-oriented research and interaction with various government bodies;

(b) An analysis of development-related issues from a regional perspective, with special emphasis on new trends and their effects on the performance of Latin America and the Caribbean, using an integrated approach, and a comparative analysis of national experiences;

(c) A stronger role in communicating the region's concerns and interests in world forums and highlighting in regional forums the issues that attract world attention;

(d) Increased technical cooperation between developing countries and collaboration in subregional, regional and hemispheric integration schemes;

(e) The generation of new information to support bilateral and multilateral cooperation, particularly in the areas of trade, macroeconomics and fiscal policies, productive and technological development, the efficient use of natural resources, environmental sustainability and gender mainstreaming;

(f) Wider dissemination of ECLAC outputs, modernized channels of communication and use of more effective mechanisms for targeting various user groups.

Subprogramme 1

Linkages with the global economy, regional integration and cooperation

Objective of the Organization: To strengthen linkages between Latin American and Caribbean countries and the global economy and regional cooperation and integration schemes at subregional, regional and hemispheric levels.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Increased awareness in the countries of the region of the implications and impact of the adoption of conventional and new trade rules and disciplines	(a) (i) Number of downloads of documents and press citations of materials prepared under the subprogramme dealing with the adoption of conventional and new trade rules and disciplines (ii) Number of readers of the flagship publication, Latin America and the Caribbean in the World Economy , who consider its analysis and policy recommendations as “useful” or “very useful” for policy formulation
(b) Strengthened understanding and analytical knowledge of member State stakeholders of ways of improving their linkages with the global economy in the context of the parallel advancement of globalization and open regionalism in Latin America and the Caribbean	(b) Number of issues raised by ECLAC that improve linkages with the global markets that are taken into account by policy makers and other member State stakeholders

Strategy

17.6 Substantive responsibility for this subprogramme rests with the Division of International Trade and Integration. The subprogramme will assist Governments to draw on the benefits of, and surmount the main challenges posed by, a multilateral rules-based trading system and to deepen and expand the economic integration processes through analytical and operational activities, including the preparation and dissemination of documents and technical reports and the promotion of technical discussions through panels and expert group meetings and the formulation and execution of technical cooperation projects and other capacity-building activities. The strategy will devote special attention to assist member State stakeholders in: (a) assessing the key analytical and policy issues associated with the World Trade Organization negotiations and the proliferation of regional, subregional and bilateral trade agreements; (b) fulfilling commitments undertaken by signatory countries of various trade and integration agreements; and (c) strengthening their capacities to adapt to the new international environment, including the design of open-economy policies, the improvement of competitiveness and participation in the fastest growing segments of world trade. Attention will also be given to building regional consensus on strategies for addressing the main constraints faced by the countries of the region seeking to derive full benefit from newly established competition and integration schemes and to the special situation of the smaller economies of the region.

Subprogramme 2 Production and innovation

Objective of the Organization: To strengthen the capacity of the countries of the region to design and implement microeconomic and sectoral policies to foster the production, innovation and knowledge systems with due consideration to the economic, social and environmental dimensions and the linkages with the global economy.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Increased understanding of ECLAC proposals by stakeholders for the design and implementation of policies for productive development	(a) (i) Increased number of stakeholders fostering policies for productive development along the lines of ECLAC recommendations (ii) Increased number of downloads from the subprogramme's web site of the main analytical documents and reports presenting policy options and recommendations (iii) Number of readers of the flagship publication, Foreign Investment in Latin America and the Caribbean , responding to surveys who consider its analysis and recommendations as "useful" or "very useful" for their work
(b) Increased utilization of ECLAC services by member State stakeholder institutions to formulate policies and strategies to enhance the competitiveness of their production structures	(b) (i) Number of member State stakeholder institutions making use of analytical tools developed under the subprogramme (ii) Number of participants in training courses organized under the subprogramme that rate them as "useful" or "very useful" for application in their work

17.7 Substantive responsibility for the execution of this subprogramme rests with the Division of Production, Productivity and Management. The strategy to be followed will take special account of the relevant provisions relating to the goals and targets set forth in the Millennium Declaration, in particular those related to the global partnership for development; the promotion of greater commitment to good governance, development and poverty reduction; and efforts to make available the benefits of new technologies, especially information and communication technologies (goal 8 and targets 12 and 18, respectively).

17.8 The strategy will include the generation and dissemination of economic analyses, policy proposals and relevant statistical information, with a view to fostering sectoral and enterprise development in the region providing technical advisory assistance and training services to policy makers and other relevant actors in the region, and promoting the sharing of experiences and best practices among them, including through the holding of expert group meetings. While maintaining its focus on the more traditional agricultural and industrial sectors, the subprogramme will also place special emphasis on services sectors, particularly the emerging area of information and communications technologies, and on the social and environmental dimensions of productive development.

Subprogramme 3

Macroeconomic policies and growth

Objective of the Organization: To strengthen the capacity of Latin American and Caribbean countries to design and implement suitable macroeconomic policies for achieving long-term growth.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Increased awareness of policy makers in Latin America and the Caribbean of key issues at stake to design and implement consistent short-term macroeconomic policies within a long-term growth-enhancing framework	(a) Increased percentage of users who find the subprogramme's flagship publications "useful"
(b) Increased understanding in Latin American and Caribbean countries of how to reconcile long-term growth with sustainable development	(b) Proportion of beneficiaries of policy advice services provided by the subprogramme that consider the relevant policy recommendations received to be "useful" or "very useful"
(c) Enhanced regional cooperation and increased understanding of the need to develop macroeconomic coordination in the context of regional and subregional integration processes	(c) Number of other participants in ECLAC forums that rate as useful for their work the recommendations made by the subprogramme regarding macroeconomic coordination
(d) Increased awareness on the part of a wider audience about trends in the Latin American and Caribbean economies and their prospective behaviour	(d) Increased number of policy makers, scholars and other users who find the subprogramme's flagship publications as "useful"

Strategy

17.9 Substantive responsibility for the execution of this subprogramme rests with the Economic Development Division. It is expected that the Governments in Latin America and the Caribbean will continue to work towards consolidating macroeconomic stabilization. Formidable challenges lie ahead, however, since the impact of past internal and external disequilibria and the vulnerability of the countries of the region to external shocks are expected to carry over into the future, thus reducing their manoeuvring room for the implementation of countercyclical fiscal and monetary policies. The strategy will consist of continuing with the systematic monitoring of the region's macroeconomic performance with a view to providing timely and accurate information, analysis and options for short-term macroeconomic policy design. The subprogramme will carry out research specifically designed to build its capacity to provide technical cooperation services and other collaboration to Governments, with a view to strengthening the type of long-term macroeconomic governance that is essential for the implementation of growth-oriented policies. The subprogramme will also continue to promote policy harmonization in the context of regional integration and the wider framework of freer trade and increasing international economic integration. This aim will be pursued through the organization of workshops, expert group meetings and other specialized forums for technical debate.

Social development and equity

Objective of the Organization: To accelerate the alleviation of poverty and the attainment of social equity in the region.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement

(b) Strengthened institutional capacity of Governments and other stakeholders in the social policy field to design, implement and assess policies, programmes and projects for enhancing social equity and integration	(b) Number of social programmes, whether designed by Governments or through cooperation among agencies or other social stakeholders, that make explicit use of the methodologies developed under the subprogramme
(c) Strengthened institutional capacity on the part of Governments and other stakeholders to use and exchange information in designing and implementing social policies and programmes	(c) Number of thematic networks of social policy makers or other social stakeholders established for the exchange of information, experiences and good practices in the framework of activities carried out under the programme of work

17.10 Substantive responsibility for the execution of this subprogramme rests with the Social Development Division. The strategy will consist of assisting Governments of ECLAC member States and other stakeholders in the area of social development to build their capacities to monitor the social situation and social trends, with a view to formulating and implementing policies, programmes and projects to attain the goal of poverty alleviation and social equity. This strategy will set out to enable the countries of the region to analyse their own experiences by means of up-to-date diagnostic studies on social conditions, especially in relation to income distribution, educational and training resources and opportunities, poverty alleviation and access to social services and employment. The strategy will also include the development of methodological inputs involving the use of sociocultural inclusion and exclusion indicators to complement economic and social indicators in the analysis of the asymmetrical effects of economic, social and sociocultural changes on well-being, particularly in the case of vulnerable population groups. In addition, technical assistance and training activities will be carried out on the formulation, management and assessment of social policies, programmes and projects. These activities will advocate the adoption of a rights-based approach to development in order to make social initiatives more responsive to social demands and more conducive to broader citizen participation. Efforts will be made to promote the dissemination and exchange of information, experiences and good practices in the area of social policy, including through the holding of expert group meetings.

Subprogramme 5

Mainstreaming the gender perspective in regional development

Objective of the Organization: To achieve the mainstreaming of the gender equity agenda into the principal policies of the Governments of the Latin American and Caribbean countries by strengthening the institutionalization of public policies that incorporate a gender perspective.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Increased adoption of policies to mainstream the gender perspective into the priority areas of the government agendas (economic policy, employment, poverty, social protection, institutional development and security)	(a) (i) Number of programmes in priority areas of government policy that have mainstreamed the gender perspective into their reforms and policies (ii) Number of countries in which agreements and inter-institutional networks have been established to ensure the mainstreaming of the gender perspective into the priority areas of the government agendas
(b) Increased utilization of monitoring tools such as gender indicators and gender planning	(b) (i) Number of countries that have developed a system of gender indicators comparable to those used in the integrated system proposed by ECLAC (ii) Number of countries in which agreements have been established among national statistical institutes, national women's offices and the priority sectors of government policy with regard to the production and exchange of gender statistics for use in public policy-making

17.11 Substantive responsibility for the execution of this subprogramme rests with the Women and Development Unit of the Office of the Executive Secretary of the Commission. The strategy of the subprogramme will consist of continuous support to the Regional Conference on Women in Latin America and the Caribbean and its presiding officers. Activities pertaining to cooperation for development will also be pursued in order to build the capacity of the member States of ECLAC to formulate public policies geared towards gender equality in the market, institutions and society at large. These activities will include the provision of substantive and methodological training to national women's offices and sectoral ministries and institutions, in which a particular effort will be made to strengthen relations between civil society and Governments. Headway will also be made in consolidating coordination among agencies of the United Nations system that conduct gender-related activities, both within the region and at the global level. In addition, capacity-building for national institutions will be supported through research on gender relations in the region as a means to help those institutions to become better positioned to deploy their own efforts to deal with the most pressing challenges involved in combating poverty and achieving development with equity, as well as other challenges related to institutional affairs and political participation. Lastly, the subprogramme will streamline the monitoring activities conducted by ECLAC in order to fully identify opportunities for mainstreaming the gender perspective into the substantive work of the Commission.

Subprogramme 6 Population and development

Objective of the Organization: To improve the generation of sociodemographic information and knowledge on population issues for use in social programming in the countries of the region.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Increased technical capacity of the Latin American and Caribbean member States to monitor population trends and tackle population and development issues for use in social programming	(a) Increased number of member States making use of knowledge and information generated under the subprogramme on demographic trends and population and development issues for the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of their social programmes and policies
(b) Increased technical capacity of Latin American and Caribbean member States to monitor progress in the implementation of the recommendations and goals of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the Regional Implementation Strategies of the Madrid Plan of Action as well as the relevant objectives and goals of the Millennium Declaration	(b) Number of countries that have taken action to implement the goals and recommendations of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, the Regional Strategy for the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action as well as the relevant goals and objectives of the Millennium Declaration and other relevant international conferences related to the field of population and development

17.12 Substantive responsibility for the implementation of this subprogramme rests with the Population and Development Division — Latin American and Caribbean Demographic Centre (CELADE). The strategy for the subprogramme includes the provision of substantive and technical inputs to the countries of the region to promote the consideration of population variables in the formulation of their social programmes, especially those aimed at poverty alleviation and the reduction of social inequities. The subprogramme will also support the efforts of member States to implement and monitor the commitments agreed upon at international conferences, in particular those related to the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing of the Second World Assembly on Ageing, as well as the relevant goals and objectives of the Millennium Declaration. Thus, the strategy involves: (a) performing policy-oriented research on key population issues; (b) developing and improving relevant methodologies and techniques for analysing population variables for use in social programming; (c) rendering technical assistance and advisory services to relevant institutions in the member States; (d) carrying out training activities on population-related matters for the benefit of policy makers and other relevant actors in the region; (e) fostering the sharing of experiences and good practices among countries of the region (including horizontal cooperation); and (f) disseminating information and knowledge on demographic subjects. A key component of the strategy is continuing support to the activities of the sessional Ad Hoc Committee on Population and Development of the Commission. The strategy also calls for continued close interaction with and technical support for relevant institutions and national counterparts in the region and for the strengthening and expansion of collaboration and cooperation with other international organizations working on population issues in the region.

Subprogramme 7

Planning of public administration

Objective of the Organization: To improve public sector management in the countries of the region with regard to planning, budgeting and local development.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement

Strategy

17.13 Substantive responsibility for this subprogramme rests with the Latin American and Caribbean Institute for Economic and Social Planning, which acts as the Commission's training centre and plays a normative role in the formulation, implementation and evaluation of all training activities offered by the institution. Efforts will be made to organize new training activities geared towards disseminating the Commission's views regarding challenges and potential development paths in the region among university graduate students and professors, academic circles and the media.

17.14 The strategy will centre on strengthening institutional capacities of ECLAC member States for public administration at the national and subnational levels, with regard to planning, budgeting and evaluation of current and capital expenditures as well as subnational development. Particular attention will be paid to two basic subject areas: budgetary policies and public-sector management; and subnational development policies. The first subject area continues to be assigned a high priority on the regional agenda. The subject of subnational development policies has gained importance in the region, thanks to the progress made in implementing decentralization processes in countries with unitary government structures and the active debate in federally organized countries on how to redefine relationships among government organizations at different territorial levels.

17.15 The strategy will be implemented through: the organization and implementation of training courses and workshops designed to serve the needs of relevant national policy makers, civil servants and professional staff in the fields of concern; the servicing of intergovernmental and expert group meetings to provide forums of discussion and to promote the sharing of best practices and technical experiences among participants; and the provision of specialized advisory services and technical cooperation to government institutions on the various issues.

Subprogramme 8

Environment and human settlements

Objective of the Organization: To improve the integration of environmental and urban management considerations into economic, social and land-use policies in the framework of sustainable development.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Fuller understanding of the sustainable development and human settlements trends and prospects by the Governments of the region and other stakeholders	(a) (i) Percentage of participants from the countries of the region in the conferences, workshops and training initiatives organized under the subprogramme who rate the knowledge gained as “useful” or “very useful” for their work (ii) Increased number of online consultations, downloads and direct inquiries by stakeholders and users of the databases and publications produced under the subprogramme
(b) Enhanced capacity of the Governments of the region to follow up and make progress in the implementation of international and national commitments derived from the outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development, the second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and the relevant goals and objectives of the Millennium Declaration	(b) Percentage of ECLAC member States participating in intergovernmental forums, technical meetings, seminars and conferences to review progress in implementation of international commitments derived from the relevant world summits and international conferences

17.16 Substantive responsibility for the execution of this subprogramme rests with the Sustainable Development and Human Settlements Division. The strategy will aim to build the capacity of the Governments of the region and other relevant social stakeholders to assess the environmental impacts, costs and benefits of economic and social policies in the region. To that end, steps will be taken to address the need for systematic, reliable and regularly updated databases and indicators for objectively measuring progress towards environmental sustainability. A set of selected indicators will be designed and implemented to monitor current environmental sustainability trends in the region.

17.17 In addition, activities to follow up international and regional multilateral agreements will be carried out to support the countries of the region in formulating and designing environmental sustainability, land use and human settlements policies that are consistent with the goals set out in the Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development and the second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II). Priority will also be given to the design and implementation of environmental fiscal policies, economic instruments for environmental management and mechanisms for financing sustainable environmental and urban development at the international, regional and national levels as well as to the analysis of the interaction between trade and the environment. In view of the region's high urbanization indices, the strategy will also focus on national capacity-building for the design and implementation of sustainable development policies for land-use management.

17.18 The subprogramme will achieve these aims by preparing and disseminating analytical papers and technical reports and organizing training courses, expert meetings, seminars and workshops for the discussion of national and subregional policies and systems, with emphasis on strengthening the participation of private sector and civil society stakeholders. It will also offer technical advisory services to the Governments of the region in the areas mentioned and will implement other technical cooperation activities for development geared to end-users.

Efforts will also be made to promote the integration of physical infrastructure to enhance the complementarity of the productive structures of the countries of the region and to improve the use of their resource endowment. In this sense, the strategy will consist of furnishing the countries with analytical studies and systematized information on best practices applied in the region with respect to the regulation and management of natural resources and the provision of infrastructure and public utility services in the context of the goals and targets deriving from the Millennium Declaration. Priority will be given to providing the countries with technical advisory services in the area of regulation, the management of mining, energy and water resources and the provision of infrastructure and public utility services as well as to promoting discussion forums to disseminate new policy options and lessons learned in terms of regulation and management, which will be supplemented by active participation in the physical integration efforts undertaken by the countries of the region. In this regard, special attention will be paid to the follow-up to the Almaty Programme of Action: Addressing the Special Needs of Landlocked Developing Countries within a New Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation for Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries. Training activities for decision makers, public officials and specialists in the above-mentioned areas will also be offered under the subprogramme.

17.20 Responsibility for the implementation of this subprogramme rests with the Statistics and Economic Projections Division. Given its interdisciplinary nature, the subprogramme will be executed in close collaboration with the other ECLAC divisions, to which it will continue to provide services. The strategy will focus on strengthening the capacity of the national statistical systems of the region to produce and disseminate, in a timely manner and in keeping with international standards and best practices, the statistical information and indicators needed to design and monitor their economic and social policies. This includes refining methodologies in the field of national accounts, statistics and projections and providing technical assistance and training to national statistical offices. Activities in the economic field will include the incorporation of new dimensions relevant to the design and monitoring of development policy as well as expanding the time horizon of the models used for analysing alternative scenarios. In the social field, activities will be undertaken to increase the scope of the measurement of well-being and relative poverty, with special attention to socio-economic vulnerability, exclusion and opportunities. One of the central aims of the strategy is to continue to support and strengthen the activities of the Statistical Conference of the Americas of ECLAC, in particular in its efforts to harmonize and coordinate statistics in the context of regional integration schemes.

Programme 18

Economic and social development in Western Asia

Overall orientation

18.1 The overall orientation of programme 18 is to foster comprehensive, equitable, integrated and sustainable development and economic and social cooperation in the region and to maintain and strengthen economic relations between the member countries of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) and other countries of the world. ESCWA is responsible for the implementation of the programme.

18.2 Policy direction for the programme is provided in Economic and Social Council resolutions 1818 (LV) of 9 August 1973 and 1985/69 of 26 July 1985, establishing ESCWA and amending the terms of reference to underscore the social functions of the Commission. Further direction is provided in ESCWA resolution 220 (XX) of 27 May 1999, on the adoption, by ESCWA member countries, of the Beirut Declaration, which envisioned an enhanced role for the Commission at the regional level; and, by the recommendation of the Commission at its twenty-first session (May 2001) that activities focus on a limited number of priorities, on Arab regional integration and on the study of mechanisms that would activate such integration. The internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992, dealing with such matters as trade, sustainable development, social development, finance, and information and communication technologies, provide further policy direction to the programme.

18.3 In the biennium 2006-2007, ESCWA will reinforce the orientation set out in the reform and restructuring effort undertaken in 2002-2003 to achieve its full potential and reap the benefits in terms of improved programme outcomes. The key priority areas identified at that time — globalization and regional integration, social policies, water and energy, and information and communication technologies — remain valid and are reflected in the strategic framework. Attention should be focused on Arab regional integration and the study of mechanisms that would activate this integration and on reviewing the existing organizational structure of the secretariat in order best to serve Arab integration. These priorities both are an integral part of the global agendas and are region-specific.

18.4 Overall, the programme seeks to promote successful outcomes in the countries of Western Asia in key areas of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992. The programme is structured around seven interdependent and complementary subprogrammes, which, on the basis of core analytical and normative work and through regional coordination and cooperation, aim in particular, on the request of member countries, to enhance capacity development so as to assist in building consensus and negotiating agreements in global and regional forums and to assist in formulating, implementing and monitoring policies, strategies, programmes and measures and in establishing and managing related mechanisms. A salient feature of the strategy is to strengthen the capacity of member countries to prepare for, monitor and follow up progress towards internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992 with a view to achieving agreed goals and targets. Other important elements are awareness-raising, policy dialogue, advocacy and advice, knowledge-sharing and networking, training and technical support and, importantly, assisting member countries in coping with the multidimensional requirements of globalization by fostering competitiveness on the basis of economic efficiency and the acquisition of the requisite technological skills, advising them on the integration of the human and social dimensions of development into their policies by focusing on capacity-building with regard to human resources and proposing mechanisms through which to identify the specifications and qualifications required of human resources that would enable member countries to become the driving force of social and economic development.

18.5 As the Western Asia region continues to be beset by instability and wanting for peace, ESCWA will continue to give special emphasis to countries emerging from conflict and the governance of recovery, pursuant to ESCWA resolution 241 (XXII). The recent evolving situation in the region requires flexibility to quickly respond to emerging issues, such as youth employment.

18.6 To ensure system-wide coherence, ESCWA will undertake its work in close cooperation and coordination with other United Nations entities, including the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization (WTO). As an active member of the Executive Committee on Economic and Social Affairs, ESCWA will devote attention to ensuring clarity in the roles and responsibilities of global and regional bodies with regard to follow-up on internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992. ESCWA will continue to collaborate with regional and national organizations, as well as with civil society and the private sector.

Integrated policies for the management of regional resources for sustainable development

Objective of the Organization: To improve the sustainable management and use of natural resources in the region, with particular emphasis on water, energy, environmental protection and the production sectors.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat

Indicators of achievement

(a) Enhanced capacity of member countries to formulate and adopt integrated environmentally sound policies and measures and introduce mechanisms to improve the sustainable management of natural resources, with particular emphasis on the water, energy and production sectors	(a) (i) Increased number of countries formulating and adopting policies and measures and introducing mechanisms to improve sustainable resource use and management (ii) Increased number of policies adopted and implemented by countries in the region to protect the environment and decrease pollution
(b) Improved performance and competitiveness of small and medium-sized enterprises by networking and clustering and harnessing technology and innovation	(b) (i) Increased number of business associations that facilitate the development of clusters and networks of small and medium-sized enterprises (ii) Increased number of measures adopted to improve the use of technology and innovation
(c) Increased application of measures and approaches for integrated water resource management among member countries for the prevention of water- and environment-related disputes	(c) Increased number of measures applied by member States relating to integrated water resources management, shared water resources and environmental impacts
(d) Increased use by member countries of tools and techniques to enhance productivity and competitiveness in the production sectors	(d) Number of countries adopting innovative technology and management initiatives to enhance competitiveness and more sustainable and efficient use of such technology

18.7 The ESCWA region is suffering from a scarcity of water resources and their inefficient use, which is manifested in wasteful consumption patterns, particularly in the agricultural sector. The region also suffers from disputes over rights to shared water resources. On the other hand, the abundance of fossil fuel energy in some member countries has encouraged unsustainable production and consumption patterns that have an adverse impact on the environment. Also, the rural areas have limited access to energy services. The production sectors suffer from low productivity and weak competitiveness, due mainly to the inefficient use of resources, insufficient networking and clustering and poor use of technology. Costs of environmental protection have not yet been fully taken into consideration in the production process.

18.8 This subprogramme, which is under the responsibility of the Sustainable Development and Productivity Division, will concentrate on facilitating the formulation and implementation of sustainable development strategies, policies and programmes and on assisting member countries in their follow-up to the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and in achieving its targets, as well as the Millennium Development Goals and targets, especially target 9, on integrating the principles of sustainable development into country policies and programmes and reversing the loss of environmental resources, and target 10, on sustainable access to safe drinking water and basic sanitation, of goal 7, on ensuring environmental sustainability. The subprogramme will continue to serve as a forum for promoting policy dialogue as a means to reach common positions and enhance synergies among the countries of the region; facilitate regional cooperation, particularly in the management of shared water resources, and enhance negotiation skills to prevent disputes; support national and regional capacity-building in priority areas of sustainable development, especially in the fields of integrated management of water resources and energy efficiency; facilitate the establishment and coordination of mechanisms for monitoring and reporting on environmental issues; assist small and medium-sized enterprises through clustering and networking and improving their use of technology; and improve linkages between technology and sectoral development in order to harness the efforts of individual member countries so as to enhance competitiveness and turn innovations into an effective vehicle for development. Efforts will be made to assist member countries in filling the gaps in vertical chains and/or in introducing knowledge-based high-tech industries by promoting development of the production and service sectors in order to achieve maximum value added, competitiveness and sustainability in the economies of member countries and the region. Measures to facilitate capacity-building will be identified in order to enhance the productivity, competitiveness and environmental compatibility of service, industrial and agricultural outputs. This will be achieved by undertaking research and analytical studies, convening meetings and seminars, disseminating best practices and building capacity through workshops and advisory services on priority sustainable development issues related to water, energy, the environment and the production sectors.

Subprogramme 2 Integrated social policies

Objective of the Organization: To strengthen coherent and integrated national social policies that are region-specific and culturally sensitive and to strengthen also community development action towards reducing social inequity and enhancing social stability in the region.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Enhanced capacity of member States requesting assistance to formulate integrated social policies and programmes that are region-specific and culturally sensitive	(a) (i) Increased number of countries adopting an approach of integrated social policies and programmes (ii) Increased number of countries that formulate population and social policies aimed at vulnerable and disadvantaged groups
(b) Increased capacity of civil society institutions in implementing community development mechanisms	(b) (i) Increased number of civil society institutions and local communities adopting the approach and mechanisms developed by ESCWA for social services at the local level (ii) Increased number of networking mechanisms among civil society institutions and local communities

18.9 The ESCWA member countries are confronted by political instability, an imbalance in the provision of basic social services between urban and rural areas and between the different social strata and widening disparities in income distribution, associated with increasing poverty and unemployment. National social policies are often conflicting and seldom harmonized and are frequently formulated and implemented, in some member countries, with little input from local communities or civil society institutions. They do not foster a rights-based approach to development. Development potential is further impeded by the failure to develop human capital, notably youth, women and vulnerable and disadvantaged social groups such as the disabled and victims of conflict.

18.10 In 2006-2007, the strategy of this subprogramme, which is under the responsibility of the Social Development Division, is to shift the focus from the sectoral approach of 2002-2003 and build on advocacy for integrated social policies in 2004-2005 by enhancing the capacity of member States, at their request, to formulate integrated social policies. There will be increased emphasis on assisting member countries in the implementation of the plans of action of the global conferences and Millennium Development Goals (1, 4, 5 and 8); supporting member countries in strengthening institutions and the capacity of national and regional mechanisms, leading to integrated regional responses and concerted actions; assisting member countries in formulating integrated policy action with particular regard to poverty and unemployment reduction, with a focus on youth, women and the disabled; supporting member countries and local authorities in formulating appropriate, innovative and integrated policies and programmes on population and development; improving the physical environment and advocating partnerships between governments and municipalities; increasing capacity for popular participation in urban development at the local level, particularly in cities and other urban areas; and assisting in post-conflict recovery measures. The subprogramme will continue to serve as a forum for promoting policy dialogue and networking, increasing popular participation and providing technical cooperation, including advisory services on various social issues and on the production and dissemination of gender-sensitive social statistics and indicators.

Subprogramme 3 Economic analysis and forecasting for regional development

Objective of the Organization: To strengthen macroeconomic policy-making for short-term economic growth and sustainable economic development in member countries, including those emerging from conflict.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Increased understanding of the use of macroeconomic variables and indicators of performance for economic forecasting in policy-making and planning	(a) Increased percentage of target users of the flagship publications and other economic studies indicating their satisfaction with the information and advice contained therein
(b) Improved national capacity to formulate macroeconomic policy and development programmes	(b) Increased number of macroeconomic policies and development programmes formulated and tools developed by member countries, including those emerging from conflict

18.11 The region is suffering from low rates of economic growth and investment, resulting in high unemployment rates, particularly among youth. During the past quarter of a century, several countries in the region have experienced war and civil conflict, resulting in the destruction of physical productive capacities and infrastructure, as well as a significant weakening of institutional and human resource capacities. For other member countries, the prevailing atmosphere of great economic and political uncertainty within the region has undermined prospects for steadier development, high rates of investment and productivity growth. As market size has been constricted and intraregional integration has faced obstacles, economic growth rates have remained low and obstacles and barriers to participation in the multilateral trading system remain.

18.12 The strategy of this subprogramme, which is under the responsibility of the Economic Analysis Division, includes two new elements, namely, advocacy for the coordination of macroeconomic policies among the countries of the region and the provision of assistance on macroeconomic issues and policies to countries emerging from conflict. Other elements of the strategy include (a) enhancing policy-making options through economic projections and forecasts; (b) in-depth analyses of economic developments and trends; (c) analysis of the main trends in the performance of production sectors; and (d) analysis of fiscal and monetary developments and policies, including trends in foreign and domestic debt and trends in the environment of increased competitiveness. A greater effort will be made to provide quality advisory services in economic policy to complement analytical work. The subprogramme will use quantitative techniques and produce impact analyses and continue to analyse issues of uncertainty and risk that affect investment, economic growth and unemployment.

Subprogramme 4 Regional integration and responding to globalization

Objective of the Organization: To improve the management of challenges posed and opportunities offered by globalization to strengthen regional integration among member countries by facilitating transboundary flows of goods, information, services, persons and capital and to mobilize sufficient financial resources for development.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Enhanced ability of member countries to implement policies and measures recommended by the Monterrey Consensus on financing for development	(a) Increased number of policies and measures adopted by member countries to implement the Monterrey Consensus
(b) Enhanced capacity of member countries to implement and monitor the integrated transport system in the Arab Mashreq	(b) Increased number of policy measures adopted by member countries to implement the integrated transport system in the Arab Mashreq
(c) Greater participation in the multilateral trading system	(c) Increased number of rules, regulations and policies adopted by member countries in conformity with WTO provisions and regional agreements
(d) Increased facilitation of transboundary flows of goods, services, persons and capital among member countries	(d) Number of countries accepting and/or adopting harmonization schemes proposed by ESCWA in order to facilitate transboundary flows of goods, persons and capital

18.13 Despite the various efforts made towards regional integration among member States in the 1950s, the basic requirements for achieving economic integration have not been established. In a world moving increasingly towards the establishment of large economic blocs, regional economic integration becomes a matter of vital importance. Two major impediments to regional and international integration and increased competitiveness are backwardness of the transport sector and obstacles and barriers to participation in the multilateral trading system. Most ESCWA member countries were latecomers to the multilateral trading system and need to adapt and cope with its requirements to avoid marginalization and increase their competitiveness. Furthermore, the region, in general, has not succeeded in mobilizing sufficient financial resources for development needs.

18.14 The strategy of this subprogramme, which is under the responsibility of the Globalization and Regional Integration Division, will be to develop the mechanism for implementing the agreements on the integrated transport system in the Arab Mashreq and monitor their implementation. After developing the road and railway transport agreements, the subprogramme will endeavour to reach an agreement on maritime transport and facilitate measures for air transport in the region. Emphasis will also be placed on strengthening the negotiation skills of member States in respect of the WTO negotiation process, continuing to increase their understanding of the opportunities and challenges presented by WTO as well as regional integration agreements, defining obstacles and barriers to participation in the multilateral trading system and organizing awareness drives on the role of the Arab free-trade area and other bilateral agreements. Furthermore, the subprogramme will continue to assist member countries, at their request, in implementing the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development. Support will be provided in enhancing regional development by analysing existing credit and investment policies and formulating specific recommendations for the improvement of existing investment laws, regulations and incentives in order to increase significantly the attractiveness of member countries to domestic and foreign investors, with particular emphasis on intraregional capital flows and the return of capital invested outside the region. The subprogramme will facilitate dialogue among member countries as a means of reducing differences and reaching common positions; increase understanding by undertaking research and analytical studies, convening meetings and disseminating best practices; and build capacity through workshops and advisory services.

Subprogramme 5

Information and communication technology for regional integration

Objective of the Organization: To narrow the digital divide to build an inclusive development-oriented information society and knowledge-based economy.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Improved enabling environment for the development of the information society and knowledge-based economy in the region through relevant instruments	(a) (i) Increased number of member countries implementing strategies and plans of action for building the information society and knowledge-based economy, in line with regional and international agreements and recommendations (ii) Member countries show improvement in Millennium Development Goal indicators 47 and 48, related to goal 8, target 18, on information and communication technologies
(b) Activated partnership for implementing information and communication technology projects to achieve socio-economic development, with particular emphasis on the Millennium Development Goals	(b) (i) Increased number of new partnerships between stakeholders of the information society, focused on development in the region (ii) Increased number of governmental institutions and national stakeholders participating in information and communication technology partnerships and knowledge networks

18.15 Western Asia suffers from a widening digital divide: at the internal level, between Gulf and other member countries, on the one hand, and between cities and rural areas, on the other; and externally, between the region and other regions of the world. Currently, information and communication technology indicators for the region as a whole are lower than world averages. At the same time, the region has development potential that needs to be exploited in building the information society, particularly in terms of the common language and cultural heritage. Greater efforts need to be deployed in increasing literacy and education levels and tapping human resources and talents, especially among women and the growing youth population.

18.16 Through regional preparations for the second phase of the World Summit on the Information Society, the subprogramme, for which the Information and Communication Technology Division is responsible, will serve as a forum for dialogue to adopt joint positions and formulate harmonized policies and strategies on information and communication technologies so as to enhance socio-economic development and increase regional integration among member States. It is imperative to raise awareness of the need to move towards a knowledge-based economy, as well as of the importance of regional collaboration and partnership in building the information society, building institutional capacity in information and communication technology, enhancing digital Arabic content and developing the information and communication technology sector. The subprogramme will contribute to the establishment of coordination and cooperation mechanisms between regional players, both private and public, engaged in information and communication technology development activities and to the creation of new partnerships. Research, analytical studies, meetings, knowledge networking and advisory services will contribute to this endeavour. Pilot projects for employment creation and poverty reduction through information and communication technology will also be launched and their best practices disseminated in the region. Support will be provided to member countries in the context of a regional plan of action for building the information society that respects the particularities and linguistic and cultural priorities of the region.

Subprogramme 6

Comparable statistics for improved planning and decision-making

Objective of the Organization: To improve the production and use of harmonized and comparable economic, social and sectoral statistics, including gender-disaggregated statistics.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat

Indicators of achievement

(a) Increased capacity of ESCWA member States to produce harmonized macroeconomic, international trade and sectoral statistics	(a) (i) Increased number of countries implementing international standards in the production of trade and transport statistics, sectoral statistics and the 1993 System of National Accounts (ii) Increased utilization of sectoral statistics and indicators, especially with regard to regional integration among member States and indicators and statistics in new areas
(b) Strengthened skills of national statistical officials to produce gender-disaggregated social statistics and indicators in specialized areas such as population, education, unemployment, and other systems of statistics and data required to measure progress towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals and for monitoring the implementation of the outcomes of major global conferences	(b) (i) Increased number of national reports containing gender-disaggregated social statistics and indicators in other specialized areas (ii) Increased number of national statistical offices that provide data for measuring progress towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals and for monitoring the implementation of the outcomes of major global conferences

18.17 ESCWA countries are faced with the challenge of producing and disseminating data and statistics that are comparable and timely to respond to their national and the international development agendas. Better harmonization of statistics through the adoption of international standards and concepts is essential for enhancing the quality of these data and making them available for use by policy makers and analysts in member countries.

18.18 The Statistics Coordination Unit will coordinate the statistical functions within ESCWA. Each of the substantive divisions of ESCWA will implement the statistical component that is related to its mandate.

18.19 The subprogramme will be oriented towards assisting member countries, at their request, in implementing international standards and improving the consistency and reliability of national statistics. It will increase the capacity of member countries to produce gender-disaggregated statistics and indicators and monitor progress towards achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals. It will also assist the countries of the region in adopting and applying the scientific standards employed internationally for amassing, analysing and disseminating statistical data and indicators, with a view to enabling those countries to formulate economic and social policies and monitor progress towards the achievement of national development objectives. A variety of modalities, including publications, meetings, workshops and advisory services, will be employed to build national capacities. Greater effort will be made to increase the electronic dissemination of statistics and indicators.

Subprogramme 7

Advancement and empowerment of women

Objective of the Organization: To increase the focus on women and gender issues with a view to reducing gender imbalances and empowering women.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat

Indicators of achievement

(a) Strengthened capacity of national mechanisms for the empowerment and advancement of women to address gender imbalances and mainstream a gender perspective	(a) (i) Increased number of gender units or autonomous or permanent national mechanisms for women established by member countries (ii) Increased number of countries adopting a gender-mainstreaming approach in national policies
(b) Increased civil society institution involvement in and contribution to policy dialogue with governments on gender issues and monitoring the implementation of the recommendations of global conferences	(b) Increased number of non-governmental organizations involved in policy dialogue on gender issues and in monitoring the implementation of global conferences

18.20 The region is characterized by low rates of women's participation in the economic, social and political domains, despite their increased educational levels. Although the constitutions of most ESCWA countries recognize women's equal civil and political rights, this has not been translated in practice into women's full realization of their civic, legal and political rights. The political participation rate of women is one of the lowest in the world. The participation of civil society institutions in policy dialogue at the regional level, as well as their contribution to the implementation of recommendations of global conferences, and the monitoring thereof, is rather modest.

18.21 This subprogramme reflects the determination of ESCWA to increase its focus on women's issues and ameliorate the status and participation of women in the region, pursuant to ESCWA resolution 240 (XXII) of April 2003. The ESCWA Centre for Women, which serves as the secretariat of the Committee on Women, will assume a major role in the region in assisting in gender mainstreaming, empowering women and promoting gender equality. It will also strive to promote partnerships between governments and civil society institutions.

18.22 To achieve its objective, the subprogramme will pursue the strategy of raising awareness and understanding of women's issues and of the vital role of non-governmental organizations in this respect; promoting dialogue on critical areas of concern for the advancement of women and for fostering partnerships between civil society institutions and governments; facilitating the reaching of common regional positions with regard to women's issues; assisting member countries in formulating realistic action-oriented gender equality policies; and promoting gender mainstreaming. The subprogramme will also monitor developments with respect to the status of women and will evaluate indicators and statistics with a view to assisting member countries, at their request, to formulate an integrated policy for the advancement and empowerment of women in the region. This will be achieved by complementing normative activities with the provision of technical assistance, including advisory services, to member countries and civil society institutions.

Programme 19

Human rights

Overall orientation

19.1 The purpose of the United Nations human rights programme is to promote universal enjoyment of all human rights by giving practical effect to the will and resolve of the world community as expressed by the United Nations. Its mandate derives from Articles 1, 13, 55 and 62 of the Charter of the United Nations; the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights and subsequently endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 48/121 of 20 December 1993; the mandate of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights as defined in resolution 48/141 of 20 December 1993; international human rights instruments adopted by the United Nations; the outcomes of relevant United Nations conferences and summits; and the resolutions and decisions of policy-making bodies, including, in particular, General Assembly resolutions 55/2 of 8 September 2000 on the United Nations Millennium Declaration, 56/95 of 14 December 2001 on the follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit and 57/300 of 20 December 2002 on strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change. The programme is based on the principles and recommendations of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action.

19.2 The programme is under the responsibility of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, who performs her or his functions under the direction and authority of the Secretary-General, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 48/141. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) acts as the focal point for and provides the leading role on all human rights activities of the United Nations.

19.3 The Office will continue to strive for the universal realization of all human rights for all through the implementation of the Charter's provisions on human rights and of the international human rights instruments adopted by the United Nations. The decisions of policy-making organs will guide this effort. Emphasis will be placed on the enhancement of cooperation at the international, regional and national levels, keeping in mind the values of the Millennium Declaration, which calls for promoting democracy and strengthening the rule of law and respect for all internationally recognized human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to development. Priority will continue to be given to emphasizing the importance of human rights on international and national agendas, upholding the principle of equality and non-discrimination, combating discrimination on grounds of race, sex, language or religion, advancing the rights of children and women, spreading education about human rights at all levels of education, responding to the needs of the vulnerable for protection, and addressing situations of international concern identified by the Commission on Human Rights and other relevant United Nations organs.

19.4 Increased support will be provided to Member States, at their request, in national capacity-building, human rights education and training through advisory services, technical cooperation activities and field activities and operations. All human rights will be addressed in an integrated, interrelated and interdependent manner by stimulating and coordinating action across the United Nations system. The Office of the High Commissioner will continue to provide support to human rights organs and treaty-monitoring bodies and to support efforts to strengthen, rationalize and streamline the United Nations machinery in the field of human rights, as requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 48/141, and work with United Nations partners to increase support for national human rights capacity-building. OHCHR will continue to take gender fully into account in the development and application of norms and procedures so that violations against women and girls are clearly identified and protection is offered under law. It will also seek to increase awareness and understanding of human rights issues.

19.5 The OHCHR strategy will be guided by the lessons learned from the 2002-2003 biennium, in particular with regard to reflecting measurements of achievement that can be realistically implemented by the Secretariat.

(b) Enhancing assistance to mandate holders, including through the preparation of information regarding alleged violations and situations for review and the provision of support to missions and meetings, by improving the methodology used to consider and analyse information with respect to situations of alleged human rights violations and by facilitating their capacity to report on issues within their mandates and make recommendations about alleged human rights violations and thematic issues and to issue thematic and country-specific studies;

(c) Enhancing the provision of substantive and logistical support for fact-finding missions and meetings;

(d) Contributing to increasing knowledge and awareness of the methodology and findings of the thematic special procedures;

Programme 20

Protection of and assistance to refugees

Overall orientation

20.1 The overall objective of this programme is to provide international protection to refugees and others of concern to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and to seek permanent solutions to their problems, as well as to ensure the provision of humanitarian assistance to them. Assistance is one aspect of international protection and is a means of facilitating it. It is rooted in and grows out of the protective nature of the work of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). In its operational activities, UNHCR seeks to integrate protection and humanitarian assistance. The pursuit of durable solutions to the problems of refugees is the heart of protection and the principal purpose of this programme. The framework for the provision of international protection was further spelled out in the “Agenda for Protection” endorsed by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and welcomed by the General Assembly in 2002.⁴

20.2 The mandate for the programme is contained in General Assembly resolution 319 A (IV), by which the Assembly established UNHCR as from 1 January 1951, and resolution 428 (V), which sets out the statute of the Office. The Assembly has also called upon the High Commissioner to ensure that returnees receive assistance to help in their sustainable reintegration, as well as to monitor their safety and well-being on return (see resolution 40/118). In addition, on the basis of specific requests from the Secretary-General or the competent principal organs of the United Nations, and with the consent of the State concerned, UNHCR provides humanitarian assistance and protection to internally displaced persons (see resolution 48/116), working in cooperation with the United Nations Emergency Relief Coordinator (see resolution 58/153). As regards the assistance activities of UNHCR, the basic provisions of the statute were expanded by the Assembly in its resolution 832 (IX). Through the adoption by the Assembly of its resolution 58/153 of 22 December 2003 on implementing actions proposed by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to strengthen the capacity of his Office to carry out its mandate, the Office was given a renewed mandate to address the challenge of forced displacement through a mission based on a spirit of solidarity, responsibility and burden-sharing, with an abiding commitment to make the Office a truly multilateral institution.

20.3 The international legal basis for the protection of refugees finds its principal expression in the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol thereto. In addition, there are a number of other international instruments of relevance, such as the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child. At the regional level, there are also important instruments and declarations, such as the Convention Governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa of the Organization of African Unity, the Cartagena Declaration on Refugees, adopted by the Colloquium on the International Protection of Refugees in Central America, Mexico and Panama, and the San José Declaration on Refugees and Displaced Persons.

20.4 UNHCR is responsible for the implementation of the programme.

20.5 The overall strategy that will be followed consists of a range of activities undertaken in cooperation with States and various organizations and pursued with a continued strong emphasis on improving efficiency, transparency and accountability, especially through the development of an integrated operations management system. Notable among them are the following:

(a) The pursuit of comprehensive strategies, in cooperation with States and organizations as and when appropriate (“Convention Plus Agreements”), aimed at mitigating and preventing the causes of forced population movements as well as finding solutions to them when they occur;

(b) The ongoing development of a legal regime of international protection, in particular through the promotion of accessions to international and regional instruments relating to the status of refugees or otherwise benefiting refugees, the effective implementation of refugee rights and the promotion and dissemination of refugee law and protection principles;

(c) The further development of contingency planning, emergency preparedness and response capabilities, in coordination with other organizations, so as to respond effectively and efficiently to situations of forced human displacement;

(d) Ensuring that UNHCR and its partners provide humanitarian assistance in an environmentally sensitive manner and in such a way that it is supportive of and reinforces development initiatives to the extent possible;

(e) Ensuring that UNHCR and its partners incorporate into all aspects of its protection programmes and the delivery of humanitarian assistance the particular needs and capacities of refugee women and elderly refugees and the special needs of refugee children and adolescents;

(f) The further development, in consultation with concerned parties, of options to ensure the security and the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and settlements as well as security in areas of return and to explore further concrete ways of enhancing the safety and security of UNHCR staff and other humanitarian workers working with refugees and returnees. In this regard, due consideration should be given to the obligation of United Nations officials, in the conduct of their duties, to observe fully both the laws and regulations of Member States and their duties and responsibilities to the Organization;

(g) The systematic follow-up to relevant recommendations in the plans of action emanating from recent and upcoming international conferences;

(h) The involvement, as soon as possible, of other humanitarian and development organizations, both national and international, in providing assistance to refugees and host communities and in the search for durable solutions.

20.6 The programme is under the intergovernmental guidance of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, in accordance with its terms of reference, as contained in General Assembly resolution 1166 (XII).

Strategy

20.7 This subprogramme falls under the overall responsibility of the Department of International Protection. The overall objective is multifaceted and will be pursued in a number of ways. Further accessions to the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees as well as to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness will be promoted. The monitoring of the observance by States of internationally accepted standards for the treatment of refugees, especially the fundamental principles of asylum and non-refoulement, will contribute to ensuring the effective implementation of refugee rights by the States concerned. This will involve working especially for the establishment by States of fair and efficient procedures for the determination of refugee status or, as appropriate, other mechanisms to ensure that persons in need of international protection are identified and granted such protection, and to ensure that all persons seeking international protection are granted access to those procedures and mechanisms. To ensure a more effective response to the protection needs of refugee women, children and adolescents, a more concerted effort to mainstream the policies and guidelines relating to refugee women, children and adolescents will be continued through the work of specially trained interdisciplinary UNHCR country teams. The promotion and dissemination of refugee law and protection principles, particularly through training, in cooperation with non-governmental organizations, academic institutions and other relevant organizations of governmental and non-governmental officials will be another means of achieving the stated objective. In addition, when, on the basis of a specific request of the Secretary-General or a competent principal organ of the United Nations, and with the consent of the State concerned, UNHCR provides protection to internally displaced persons, it will do so on the basis of criteria enumerated in the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and in close collaboration with other concerned entities and agencies. To revitalize old partnerships and build new ones in support of the international refugee protection system, efforts to promote collaboration on refugee protection with a wide range of actors, including the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, will be continued. In order to find permanent solutions to the problems of refugees, efforts will be made to promote the development of more comprehensive and regional approaches, as and when appropriate, in the form of "Convention Plus Agreements", to resolving refugee situations.

Subprogramme 2

Strategy

20.8 The subprogramme is under the responsibility of the Department of Operations, which embraces the various regional operations. UNHCR will engage in a number of strategies. It is concerned that assistance, whenever possible, should be delivered in such a way that it involves the recipients and taps their potential. This participatory approach will be part of a broader situation analysis which will also include improved demographic data deriving from the new registration tools (resulting from Project Profile in 2004-2005) and the use of the standards and indicators for the sectors as established in the practical guide to the systematic use of standards and indicators in UNHCR operations. This approach should lead to a significant improvement in the quality of the Office's assistance programmes, especially for refugee women, children and the elderly.

20.9 In providing assistance, UNHCR will aim to enhance the self-reliance of returnees and, where feasible, that of refugees rather than increasing their dependency. UNHCR, in close cooperation with its partners, has developed a framework for durable solutions. This framework will aim to ensure that the Office's assistance activities are directed towards a durable solution to the plight of refugees. It will focus, as appropriate, on the following elements: (a) the promotion of development and humanitarian assistance for refugees through better targeting of such assistance to countries and areas hosting large numbers of refugees over protracted periods; (b) the establishment of so-called "4Rs" programmes for returnees and internally displaced persons of concern to UNHCR. These will ensure the linkages between repatriation, reintegration, rehabilitation and reconstruction. Using a country-specific approach, the programmes will provide an overarching framework for institutional cooperation between UNHCR and its development partners and are an integral part of transition strategies; and (c) the promotion of a relevant strategy of development in those areas where local integration of refugees is acceptable to the host countries. Work to implement this framework will be pursued, inter alia, through the Office's membership in the United Nations Development Group. To anchor the return of those forcibly displaced to their communities of origin, the Office will continue to ensure linkages between broader development efforts and humanitarian assistance. In that regard, UNHCR, when formulating programmes, will work closely with development entities and international financial institutions to ensure a comprehensive approach to programme planning.

Palestine refugees

Overall orientation

21.1 The General Assembly, by its resolution 302 (IV) of 8 December 1949, established the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) as a separate entity within the United Nations system and mandated it to provide continued assistance for the relief of Palestine refugees. Since starting its work in 1950, UNRWA has become the largest operational agency in the Middle East, demonstrating its capacity to adapt and enhance its programmes as required to meet the evolving needs of refugees and to cope with developments in the region. It stands ready to continue doing so during the biennium 2006-2007 in accordance with the triennial mandate it receives from the General Assembly, the most recent of which was resolution 56/52 of 10 December 2001, by which the Assembly extended UNRWA's mandate until June 2005.

21.2 UNRWA reports directly to the General Assembly. Overall review of UNRWA programmes and activities is undertaken by the 10-member Advisory Commission, which includes representatives of the Agency's major donors and host Governments. In its resolution 3331 B (XXIX) of 17 December 1974, the General Assembly decided that, with effect from 1 January 1975, the expenses relating to the emoluments of international staff in the service of UNRWA, which would otherwise have been charged to voluntary contributions, should be financed by the regular budget of the United Nations for the duration of the Agency's mandate.

21.3 The strategic objectives of UNRWA for the biennium 2006-2007 are to sustain its investment in the human resources of Palestine refugees, to support the social and economic development of their communities and to provide targeted relief and support for refugees experiencing special hardship. The Agency also provides emergency assistance to vulnerable refugee communities in situations of acute distress. Beginning in 2000, over and above its regular services to refugees, the Agency provided emergency assistance to over 1.2 million refugees affected by the strife in the occupied Palestinian territory. It plans to continue these services as necessary. Should the strife in the occupied Palestinian territory continue or intensify, the deteriorating economic conditions of the refugees, the restrictions on the flow of goods, services and staff members and the heavy demands of emergency operations on staff will affect service provision to the refugees.

21.4 During 2006-2007, UNRWA will also provide, on an exceptional basis, services to the non-refugee poor living within refugee communities, in keeping with past practice. Under the responsibility of its Commissioner-General, UNRWA aims to achieve its objectives by maintaining provision of a targeted blend of education, health, relief, social and microfinance services to eligible Palestine refugees. Eligible registered Palestine refugees, who are located in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, are projected to number some 4.4 million in 2006. Gender issues remain a major concern of the Agency in all its programme areas. In 2006-2007 UNRWA will build on key achievements in this area by further developing its gender-mainstreaming practices. A key activity in this regard is the development and implementation, during the biennium 2004-2005, of an Agency-wide gender strategy, through which the Agency expects to realize identifiable accomplishments in 2006-2007.

21.5 The Palestine refugees rely on the Agency to provide a range of basic services for their well-being. The Agency, which is entirely dependent on voluntary funding to implement its programmes, and which has contended with chronic funding shortfalls in recent years, will continue to maintain efficient and cost-conscious management and to carry out strategic planning and programme assessments, as necessary, in order to preserve the quality and scope of its services for a rapidly growing refugee population. To engage the international community on, inter alia, ensuring funding and UNRWA programme needs, the Agency is planning a major international conference to be hosted by the Government of Switzerland in June 2004. Furthermore, in early 2004, the Agency prepared a five-year strategic plan (2004-2008) to identify the activities and resources necessary to upgrade services and rehabilitate infrastructure. In each subprogramme area, including general education and technical and vocational training, maternal and child health care and disease prevention, poverty alleviation and microfinance, the Agency has sought to achieve programme results consistent with the targets and commitments established by the United Nations system, such as the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992. UNRWA will continue, in its five areas of operation, to maintain its efforts to achieve this consistency throughout 2006-2007, including in the areas of educational services, health services, relief and social services and income-generating programmes, and will continue to undertake projects to improve infrastructure and socio-economic conditions.

22.1 The overall purpose of the programme is to ensure the timely, coherent and coordinated response of the international community to disasters and emergencies, to promote natural disaster reduction and to facilitate the smooth transition from emergency relief to rehabilitation and development. The legislative authority and mandate for this programme are derived from General Assembly resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991, in which the Assembly reaffirmed the guiding principles of humanitarian assistance and reinforced earlier decisions and resolutions adopted by it and the Economic and Social Council concerning humanitarian assistance and the leadership role of the Secretary-General in responding to natural disasters and humanitarian emergencies. development policy processes and sensitizing the international community and decision-making authorities about the cost-effectiveness of investing in reducing disaster risk and vulnerability.

22.12 Through its network of country offices, UNDP will continue to support the development and implementation of disaster risk reduction programmes and projects at the regional and national levels as an essential objective of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction. This will be carried out through the development of disaster reduction capacity-building strategies and programmes, training for human resource development, mainstreaming risk reduction into ongoing frameworks of cooperation, programmes and projects in country offices and the design and implementation of frameworks and programmes for sustainable recovery.

Programme 23

Public information

Overall orientation

23.1 The central purpose of the programme is to help fulfil the substantive aims of the United Nations by strategically communicating the activities and concerns of the Organization in order to achieve the greatest public impact. The responsibility for the programme is vested in the Department of Public Information both at Headquarters in New York and in the worldwide network of United Nations information centres and services, information components and regional hubs, where applicable. The mandate of the Department is contained in General Assembly resolution 13 (I) of 13 February 1946. The Department's work is guided by the priorities laid down by the Assembly and its subsidiary body, the Committee on Information, through resolutions on questions relating to information, the most recent of which are 58/101 A and B.

23.2 The strategic framework of the Department seeks to promote global awareness and enhanced understanding of the diverse functions of the United Nations. To this end and using the United Nations Millennium Declaration as its guide, the Department will focus on priority issues for the Organization, including the eradication of poverty, conflict prevention, sustainable development, human rights, the HIV/AIDS epidemic, combating terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and the needs of the African continent. As the Department responsible for the communication policies of the United Nations, the Department of Public Information works closely with substantive offices of the United Nations system to deliver effective and targeted information programmes on the aforementioned key areas. It strives to reach global audiences, particularly influential opinion leaders, as well as youth, through intermediaries such as the media, governmental and non-governmental organizations, educational institutions, business and professional organizations and other segments of civil society, including through enhanced partnerships.

23.3 Progress will continue to be made towards rationalizing the network of United Nations information centres, in conformity with paragraph 15 of resolution 57/300 of 20 December 2002, resolution 58/101 B of 9 December 2003 and resolution 59/126 B of 10 December 2004, with the objective of enhancing the strategic capacity and value of the centres as a key element in the Department's outreach activities.

23.4 Within this framework, special efforts will be made to ensure that gender mainstreaming is incorporated into the design of public information products and activities, particularly those at the core of the various promotional campaigns for the United Nations system that are spearheaded by the Department.

23.5 Increased use is being made of the latest technology, in both the traditional and electronic media, including the Internet, to deliver news directly and instantaneously to the media worldwide. Particular attention is given to tailoring the news disseminated to different regions, bearing in mind their technological capacity.

23.6 A major challenge for the Department in implementing this programme is to build bridges effectively in order to make the relevance of the work of the United Nations resonate in the lives and daily concerns of people everywhere.

Strategy

23.7 The subprogramme will be implemented by the Strategic Communications Division, which consists of the Communications Campaigns Service, the Information Centres Service, the United Nations information centres and services, information components and regional hubs, where applicable, and the Committee Liaison Unit.

23.8 The objective will be accomplished by giving a more strategic focus to the activities of the Department and the United Nations information centres and services, information components and regional hubs, where applicable. Priority issues and activities of substantive departments will be identified through a new client planning process and will form the basis of communications plans. These plans will identify key messages tailored to specific target audiences, which will be reached using the most appropriate tools. The United Nations Communications Group will be utilized to enhance the coordination of communications activities between the Department and the organizations of the United Nations family relating to these issues.

23.9 In order to generate better-informed public opinion on priority issues, information products for specialized media will be developed and disseminated in the official languages, as well as in local languages where possible, by United Nations information centres and services and regional hubs, where applicable. Strategic media outreach activities, such as press conferences and interviews with senior officials, will be organized. Web sites in local languages will continue to be created and maintained by the information centres and regional hubs, where applicable.

23.10 Operational support and strategic communications advice will continue to be provided to the information component of United Nations peace missions, including the maintenance of relevant web sites.

Programme 24

Management and support services

Overall orientation

24.1 The overall purpose of this programme, the responsibility for which is vested in the Department of Management and the administrative services of the United Nations Office at Geneva, the United Nations Office at Vienna and the United Nations Office at Nairobi, is to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of the Organization in managing its resources in three broad management areas, namely, finance, human resources and support services; to provide support services to the intergovernmental processes of the Organization; to secure financing for the mandated programmes and activities of the Secretariat; and to support the implementation of those programmes and activities.

24.2 The programme derives its mandates from relevant articles of the Charter of the United Nations, specifically Articles 8, 17, 97, 100 and 101, as well as the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, the Staff Regulations and Rules, the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, General Assembly resolutions 41/213 and 42/211 and the successive annual resolutions on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations, as well as resolutions 52/12 A and B, 57/300 and 58/269 addressing issues of the reform and revitalization of the Organization and other relevant resolutions.

24.3 The programme is oriented principally towards fully meeting client needs and taking a proactive approach to implementing the Secretary-General's management reform measures, including those approved by the General Assembly, with the support of a communication strategy that ensures that Member States, managers and staff are fully informed of and engaged in the efforts to ensure a more effective and results-oriented Organization. Through a continuous dialogue, the status quo in the functioning of the Organization will be challenged, client priorities identified and management policies developed or improved to ensure that the work of the Organization is carried out in a more timely, efficient and effective manner. The capacity of managers to deliver mandated programmes will be strengthened through management training and the process of greater delegation of authority, with accountability ensured through systematic monitoring, evaluation and greater transparency in decision-making.

24.4 In pursuing the Secretary-General's management reform measures, results-based budgeting will be further refined to enable programme managers to demonstrate to Member States the impact of their work programmes so that together they may take informed decisions about the priorities of the Organization, the nature and scope of outputs and services and related resource allocations. Improvements in the financial management of the Organization will continue to be made, particularly with respect to simplification of financial management processes. Results-based management will be reflected not only in a more effective programme planning and budgeting process, but also in the Organization's management of human resources.

24.5 Human resources management reform will continue to reflect the multicultural environment of the Organization and will be implemented to empower staff, increase their flexibility and mobility in adapting to the priorities of the Organization and enhance their ability to carry out their work more effectively. The Department will continue to support and strengthen the integration of the gender perspective into the work of the Organization, in fulfilment of its leading role in implementing gender-sensitive policies.

24.6 Safety and security issues have changed dramatically since the formulation of the medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005. The apparent immunity of the United Nations to terrorist attacks no longer exists. The programme will move towards a unified security management structure and strengthened security arrangements for the safety and security of delegations, staff and property at Headquarters and offices away from Headquarters. The first phases of modernization of the Headquarters buildings will proceed under the auspices of the capital master plan to provide a more secure, safe and efficient working environment for delegations and staff, subject to any decisions that the General Assembly may take on the project.

24.7 Improvements in administrative processes and strategies, streamlining of established procedures and implementation of the information and communication technology strategy will lead to attaining better value for money and achievement of overall goals. Coherence in management and administration will be promoted with the offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions and peacekeeping and other missions, which will be given greater authority to respond to the requirements of their offices.

24.8 The Department's leadership role within the United Nations common system will be maintained and synergies will be achieved through partnering with other organizations of the United Nations common system. Within the context of the Secretary-General's management reform, efforts will continue towards further strengthening of the existing common and joint services and the expansion and development of new common and joint services among the United Nations organizations when such services appear to be more efficient and cost-effective than the decentralized arrangements.

24.9 The Department will provide strategic policy guidance to all entities of the Secretariat in the above-mentioned broad management areas. It will provide substantive and/or technical secretariat support to the Administrative and Budgetary (Fifth) Committee, the Committee for Programme and Coordination, the Committee on Contributions, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Board of Auditors.

It will offer consulting, learning and self-evaluation services using a collaborative, results-driven and client-oriented approach. It will continue to report to the intergovernmental bodies on the relevance, usefulness, efficiency and effectiveness of the Organization, in order to facilitate their decision-making.

Subprogramme 3 Investigations

Objective of the Organization: To ensure compliance with regulations and rules of the United Nations and to minimize the occurrence of fraud, violations of regulations and rules of the United Nations, mismanagement, misconduct, waste of resources and abuse of authority.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat	Indicators of achievement
(a) Better protection of the Organization's assets and resources and greater compliance with the Organization's rules and regulations	(a) (i) Increased percentage of recommendations accepted (ii) Increased percentage of recommendations implemented
(b) Increased understanding of trends and risks by relevant parties for mitigation action	(b) Percentage of recommendations related to trends and risks accepted

Strategy

25.8 The Investigations Division will undertake professional investigations of reported allegations of fraud, misconduct, mismanagement, waste of resources, abuse of authority, violations of regulations and rules of the United Nations and other malfeasance in accordance with mandated requirements. Every matter that is received by the Division is assessed in order to identify the level of risk each of those matters presents to the Organization. Those which are deemed as "significant" or higher-risk are given priority, but lower risks still warrant inquiry as resources are available. On the basis of its findings, the Division will recommend the administrative, disciplinary, jurisdictional or other corrective action that should be taken. The Division has also sought to provide managers with the ability to identify risks, including undertaking basic investigative training for departments and offices so that they may be better equipped to address lower-risk matters that the Division would not be able to address. In addition, without compromising the operational independence granted under General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B and 54/244, the Division will provide investigative services to the United Nations Funds and Programmes, as appropriate.

C. United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination

Overall orientation

26.6 The responsibility for the promotion of inter-agency coordination and cooperation within the organizations of the United Nations system is vested in the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), which, pursuant to Economic and Social Council decision 2001/321 of 24 October 2001, replaced the Administrative Committee on Coordination, established in 1946 by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 13 (III). Two high-level committees assist the executive heads in performing their functions: the High-level Committee on Programmes, whose central role is the development of concerted and effective responses by the United Nations system to emerging policy challenges and issues relating to international cooperation and development; and the High-level Committee on Management, whose mandate is to provide guidance on administrative and management issues that are of system-wide relevance and promote inter-agency cooperation and coordination on those matters.

26.7 During the biennium 2006-2007, the main focus of CEB in programme matters will be on coordinated system-wide implementation of the outcomes of the first comprehensive review of the follow-up to the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the associated high-level event in 2005 provided for in General Assembly resolution 57/270 B. It will thus focus its work on accelerating progress in the implementation of internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992, and the continued strengthening of system-wide support for the sustainable development of Africa within the overall framework of the New Partnership for Africa's Development. On the management side, CEB will continue its emphasis on implementation of inter-agency agreements on the security and safety of United Nations system personnel and human resources management, capitalizing on investments in information and communication technologies and promoting best practices in the management and financial administration areas. Those activities are all geared towards ensuring a more integrated and coordinated United Nations system response to the policy directives and mandates of Member States.

Objective of the Organization: To ensure effective mobilization of the full capacity of the United Nations system to implement intergovernmental decisions.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat

Indicators of achievement

(a) Increased collaboration and coordination among member organizations in response to decisions of intergovernmental bodies	(a) Number of joint or complementary programmes and projects with strategic impact, task-specific inter-agency networking, time-bound working groups and other facilitating initiatives and activities to strengthen system-wide follow-up to intergovernmental decisions
(b) Enhanced coherence, efficiency and cost-effectiveness of the United Nations system of organizations in the administration and management areas	(b) Number of coordinated system-wide responses to the ICSC initiatives, staff management issues, financial and budgetary matters and oversight reports
(c) Improving knowledge-sharing within the system as well as with Member States and more efficient utilization of information technologies within the United Nations system	(c) Number of applications and common platforms as well as knowledge management networks in use and shared by programmes within the United Nations system and with Member States

Strategy

26.8 During the biennium 2006-2007, both the High-level Committee on Programmes and the High-level Committee on Management will continue to engage the organizations of the United Nations system on a system-wide framework to pursue strategic actions pertaining to programme matters and management and administrative issues for the consideration of CEB. The High-level Committee on Programmes will focus on promoting greater synergies among the policies and programmes of the organizations of the United Nations system so as to enhance their overall impact and on ensuring mutual reinforcement between global and country monitoring activities of the Millennium Development Goals. As necessary, the Committee will draw on inter-agency networks and working groups to undertake specific and time-bound activities. In the management area, the High-level Committee on Management will keep on its agenda the strengthening of inter-agency cooperation to reinforce measures for the security and safety of United Nations personnel and focus on promoting best practices, modern management approaches and partnerships in all areas of management, finance and budget. In the areas of information and communication technologies, the Committee will continue to promote greater accessibility to United Nations system information of Member States and the general public, including the further development of the United Nations system Extranet and tools for knowledge-sharing and management.

D. Inter-organizational security measures

Overall orientation

26.9 The primary responsibility under the Charter for the security and protection of personnel of the United Nations system lies with the Member States. However, there are situations under which Governments do not provide security coverage, particularly during emergency situations, such as abrupt changes in Government, civil disorder and the absence of de facto authorities. In order to enhance the security and safety of personnel of the organizations of the United Nations system in such situations and to prepare for any eventuality, a set of arrangements have been in place since 1980 to ensure coordinated action in all matters relating to the security and safety of field-based staff and their families. Under those arrangements, the responsibility for the coordination of all security matters rests with the Secretary-General, who has appointed the United Nations Security Coordinator to act on his behalf. The Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator was created in 1988 and has the responsibility to coordinate and manage the United Nations security management system. Concerned about the occurrence of attacks and threats against United Nations personnel, the General Assembly, in its resolution 54/192 of 17 December 1999, recognized the need to improve the safety and security arrangements for United Nations personnel and to strengthen the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator. The Security Coordinator acts on behalf of and reports directly to the Secretary-General.

26.10 The United Nations Security Coordinator coordinates and monitors the planning and implementation of inter-agency security and safety programmes, including all training. The Security Coordinator acts as the focal point for inter-agency cooperation concerning security matters and reviews security plans formulated by designated officials in each country to ensure that each duty station is adequately prepared for likely contingencies. The Coordinator will, inter alia, maintain on a continuing basis an assessment of exposures and vulnerabilities to actual or potential emergency situations, prepare information and instructions and arrange for pre-assignment briefings so as to assist designated officials, review all requests for security and communication equipment and issue monthly travel advisories. A mechanism of accountability and responsibility of security officials at all levels of the security management system is in place to ensure that the officials responsible for the security of the United Nations operations and personnel in the field are held accountable for both their action and inaction.

Objective of the Organization: To protect staff members of the United Nations system, associated personnel and eligible family members at all duty stations for which the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator is responsible.

Expected accomplishments of the Secretariat

Indicators of achievement

(a) Improved security and safety of the working environment in accordance with the minimum operating security standards	(a) Reduction in the number of deaths, injuries, abductions and other security-related incidents in the field
(b) Improved coordination of policies and procedures relating to the security and safety of United Nations field-based staff and family members	(b) All duty stations have established and complied with the minimum operating security standards updated and revised, as necessary
(c) Improved level of minimum standard security training for staff	(c) Increased percentage of staff having received the training stipulated in the report of the Secretary-General on inter-organizational security measures: framework for accountability for the United Nations field security management system (A/57/365)
(d) Improved stress management training for staff and their families in the field	(d) Increased percentage of staff and their families in the field who have received stress management training

Strategy

26.11 In achieving its objective, the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator will concentrate on creating conditions to minimize security-related incidents by: (a) coordinating safety and security issues between the organizations of the United Nations system; (b) monitoring the implementation of established security and safety policies; (c) developing security requirements for new missions as well as for special, regular and emergency operations; (d) monitoring, through compliance, assessment, survey and inspection missions, the implementation of the minimum operating security standards at field duty stations; (e) updating guidelines and directives and conducting training; and (f) coordinating with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the Department of Political Affairs and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs on the planning, implementation and review of safety and security programmes for peacekeeping, humanitarian and other special missions in the field. Those efforts will enforce the accountability and responsibility of designated officials, field security officers and other actors within the framework of the new mechanism of accountability and responsibility in the area of field security for the implementation of the minimum operating security standards at all duty stations of the United Nations system.
