2003 activities

In her report covering 2003 [DP/FPA/2004/9 (Part I)] to the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)/UNFPA Executive Board, the UNFPA Executive Director described the Fund's activities in programme priority areas and noted that assisting countries to achieve the ICPD goals [YUN 1994, p. 955], the ICPD+5 key actions [YUN 1999, p. 1005] and the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51] was central to the Fund's mission. She said that UNFPA was also committed to strengthening results-based management and organizational effectiveness, as it focused strategically on consolidating and building on its 18-month transition exercise that ended in December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1078].

The number of UNFPA donors grew to 151 in 2003, comprising 149 donor Governments, the Mars Trust and the grass-roots campaign called "34 Million Friends". In 2003, the Fund's regular income increased by 12.7 per cent to $293.1 million, following its efforts to attract larger contributions from major donor countries of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). Contributions to related resources (trust funds, cost-sharing and other programme arrangements) amounted to $103.6 million.

The implementation of country and sub-regional programmes continued as the Fund's core work during 2003. By programme area, the largest share of resources, 61.5 per cent, went to reproductive health activities; 19.8 per cent went to population and development strategies; 12.1 per cent to advocacy activities; and 6.7 per cent to multisectoral activities. The highest priority for allocation of assistance, 65.5 per cent, was for Group A countries (those most in need), which included all the least developed countries (see p. 867). By region, sub-Saharan Africa accounted for 36 per cent of programme assistance; Asia and the Pacific for 30.2 per cent; the Arab States and Europe for 13 per cent; and Latin America and the Caribbean for 7.6 per cent. Interregional and global activities accounted for 13.1 per cent of programme assistance.

UNFPA's investment in reproductive health was intended to enhance women's access to quality services and female-controlled methods and to promote male involvement. Activities encompassed reducing maternal mortality and morbidity, family planning and reproductive health commodity security.

HIV/AIDS prevention was another key component of the Fund's work in 2003. The Fund focused on three core areas, namely, the prevention of HIV infection among young people, the prevention of HIV infection in pregnant women and comprehensive condom programming. It maintained its role as the convening agency in the two important areas of focusing on young people and condom programming and worked to strengthen UN partnership and collaboration. The Fund provided a strong presence in country-level theme groups on HIV/AIDS.

The needs of adolescents and youth in developing countries remained an urgent priority for UNFPA in 2003, particularly in the fight against poverty and HIV/AIDS. The Fund's flagship publication, State of World Population 2003 [Sales No. E.03.III.H.1], stressed that HIV/AIDS had become a disease of the young, with half of all new HIV infections, and at least a third of more than 333 million new cases of curable sexually transmitted infections (STIs) each year, occurring in people aged 15 to 24. However, only a small percentage knew that they were infected and the majority were ignorant about how HIV was transmitted.

UNFPA continued to support efforts to expand information and education on reproductive health issues to young people.

UNFPA provided humanitarian assistance to more than 20 countries and territories. As part of the UN emergency response system, it supplied reproductive health kits valued at some $2.15 million to 59 emergency destinations. It provided support to conduct and facilitate rapid reproductive health assessments, train field staff and national counterparts, prepare project documents and consolidated appeals processes, advocacy, supply reproductive health kits and commodities, mobilize resources and conduct emergency and post-conflict programme evaluation. The Fund also contributed to the first-ever inter-agency global evaluation of reproductive health services. It led an evaluation of worldwide delivery of the Minimum Initial Services Package of reproductive health services to refugees, and an analysis of financial resource trends for emergency reproductive health programming.

Throughout 2003, UNFPA was involved in partnerships with a variety of development partners, working with civil society coalitions at the country level and collaborating with the New Partnership for Africa's Development (see p. 937), among others. It also continued to promote South-South cooperation as an integral strategy for implementing the ICPD Programme of Action goals, to focus on the incorporation of population dimensions into development policies and plans to address the overall goal of poverty reduction, and to support work on population dynamics and demographic trends.

Gender issues were mainstreamed throughout UNFPA's programmes in both reproductive health and population and development areas. The Fund continued to address structural and cultural barriers in the context of a rights-based approach to development. At the inter-agency level, it worked to advance the Secretary-General's human rights plan of action "Strengthening human rights-related United Nations action at country level: National protection systems and country teams", while at the policy level it supported the development and enforcement of laws prohibiting all forms of gender-based violence.

On 19 June [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/16)], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board welcomed the report of the Executive Director for 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1077] and invited her to consider merging the various parts of the annual report into a single, concise, performance- and results-oriented annual report, taking into account the priorities, goals and outputs contained in the multi-year funding framework.

By decision 2003/225 of 11 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the annual reports of the UNDP Administrator and the UNFPA Executive Director to the Council [E/2003/13] and the Executive Board's reports on its 2002 second regular session [DP/2003/1] and its first regular session in 2003 [DP/2003/9].

Country and intercountry programmes

UNFPA's provisional project expenditures for country and intercountry (regional and inter-regional) programmes in 2003 totalled $176.4 million, compared to $203.6 million in 2002, according to the Executive Director's statistical overview report [DP/FPA/2004/9 (Part I, Add.1)]. The 2003 figure included $140.5 million for country programmes and $35.9 million for intercountry programmes. In accordance with the procedure for allocating resources according to categorization of countries into groups, laid down in a 1996 UNDP/UNFPA decision [YUN 1996, p. 989] and updated in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1005], total expenditures in 2003 to Group A countries (those most in need) amounted to $92.1 million, compared to $116.5 million in 2002.

Africa. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA programmes in sub-Saharan Africa totalled $63.5 million in 2003, compared to $73.3 million in 2002. Most of those resources (60.4 per cent) went to reproductive health and family planning, followed by population and development strategies (25.8 per cent), multisectoral activities (8 per cent) and advocacy (5.8 per cent).

On 23 January [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/6)], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board approved country programmes for Botswana, Burundi, Cameroon, the Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Equatorial Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Mali, Mauritania and Nigeria. On 19 June [dec. 2003/21], the Board took note of the country programme outlines for Benin, Kenya and the Niger.

Arab States and Europe. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA programmes in the Arab States and Europe totalled $23 million in 2003, compared to $23.8 million in 2002. Most of the resources (71.4 per cent) went to reproductive health and family planning, followed by population and development strategies (17.7 per cent), advocacy (5.9 per cent) and multisectoral activities (5 per cent).

On 23 January [dec. 2003/6], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board approved country programmes for Djibouti and Jordan.

Asia and the Pacific. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA programmes in Asia and the Pacific totalled $53.3 million in 2003, compared to $63.8 million in 2002. Most of the resources (71.8 per cent) went to reproductive health and family planning, followed by population and development strategies (13.3 per cent), advocacy (10.6 per cent) and multisectoral activities (4.3 per cent).

On 23 January [dec. 2003/6], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board approved country programmes for Bangladesh, China, India, Maldives, Papua New Guinea, Timor-Leste and the South Pacific region. On 19 June [dec. 2003/21], the Board took note of the country programme outlines for Afghanistan, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and Pakistan; and took note of the report on the implementation of UNFPA's special programme of assistance to Myanmar [DP/FPA/2003/9].

Latin America and the Caribbean. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA programmes in Latin America and the Caribbean totalled $13.5 million in 2003, compared to $21.8 million in 2002. Most of the resources (54.8 per cent) went to reproductive health and family planning, followed by population and development strategies (28.6 per cent), advocacy (8.7 per cent) and multisectoral activities (8 per cent).

On 23 January [dec. 2003/6], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board approved country programmes for Bolivia, Colombia, El Salvador and Venezuela. On 19 June [dec. 2003/21], it took note of the country programme outline for Cuba.

Interregional programmes. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA's interregional and global programmes totalled $23.2 million in 2003, compared to $20.9 million in 2002. Of that total, 41.3 per cent went to advocacy, 34.5 per cent to reproductive health and family planning, 15 per cent to population and development strategies, and 9.3 per cent to multisectoral activities.

Financial and administrative questions

UNFPA's income from all sources totalled $397.9 million in 2003, compared to $373.2 million in 2002 [DP/FPA/2004/15], comprising $292.3 million in regular resources and $105.6 million from other resources. Expenditures totalled $380 million in 2003, down from $410.1 million in 2002, comprising $270.8 million from regular resources and $109.2 million from other resources, resulting in a net excess of $21.5 million in regular resources and a net deficit of $3.6 million in other resources.

Contributions to regular resources increased in 2003 by 15.4 per cent ($38.4 million) to $288.5 million, continuing the trend of the preceding five years. Income to other resources decreased by 5.4 per cent ($5.9 million) to $103.6 million, which also continued a recent trend. Total expenditure decreased by 7.3 per cent ($30.1 million) to $380 million. Programme expenditure decreased to $303.6 million in 2003, down from $343.3 million in 2002.

2004-2005 support budget

In a July report [DP/FPA/2003/11], the Executive Director submitted to the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board the estimates for the 2004-2005 biennial support budget, totalling $169.6 million (gross) and $155 million (net). The estimates were based on a resource framework of $750.6 million for total income.

The proposal provided for greater support to country offices by consolidating the cost of establishing a new typology for the Fund's country offices and incorporating the resources needed to strengthen country offices in such areas as audit services, human resources management and the integrated Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) system. It provided for growth because the higher income estimate of $584.1 million from regular resources was $39.1 million, or 7.2 per cent, higher than in the revised proposal for the 2002-2003 biennium [YUN 2002, p. 1081], despite the loss of a major donor's contribution. It also provided cost containment for several operating costs that had been limited to their 2002-2003 levels or adjusted downward.

Commenting on the estimates for the 2004-2005 biennial support budget in August [DP/FPA/2003/12], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) stated that the time had come to introduce results-based budgeting techniques in preparing budget estimates; requested that future UNFPA budget documents contain a separate annex indicating actions taken to implement previous ACABQ recommendations, as approved by the Executive Board; and expressed appreciation for the Fund's efforts to increase resources.

On 10 September [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/28)], the Executive Board approved gross appropriations of $169.6 million for the 2004-2005 biennial support budget and resolved that income estimates of $14.6 million should be used to offset the gross appropriations, resulting in estimated net appropriations of $155 million. It authorized the Executive Director to redeploy resources between appropriation lines up to 5 per cent of the appropriation to which the resources were redeployed; and additional extrabudgetary expenditures up to $3.8 million for the implementation of the ERP project.

Multi-year funding commitments

In May [DP/FPA/2003/6], the Executive Director submitted to the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board updated estimates of regular and other resources for 2003 and future years. As at 28 February, 60 countries had submitted written pledges to UNFPA for 2003, of which only 15 were multi-year pledges.

In 2002, UNFPA exceeded its pledging target of 125 countries, reaching an all-time high of 136 donor countries by the end of the year: 36 from Africa, 33 from Asia and the Pacific, 32 from Europe, 20 from Latin America and the Caribbean, 13 from the Arab States, 1 from North America, and a private contribution from the Mars Trust in the amount of $1.1 million. Total contributions received from donor Governments and from the interest from the Mars Trust for UNFPA's regular resources in 2002 amounted to $260 million. As at 28 February, $281 million had been pledged for 2003, including a projected interest receivable amount of $4 million; $63 million for 2004; $63 million for 2005; and $8,000 for 2006. Of UNFPA's 15 major donors (those contributing $1 million or more), which together provided an estimated 95 per cent of the total contributions to regular resources, only five countries were in a position to make multi-year pledges.

UNFPA called on Executive Board members and the Fund's donors to consider increasing their contributions for 2003 and future years and to ensure the early and timely payment of pledges. The Fund hoped that the increases in official development assistance (ODA) announced at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953] would lead to increased contributions to UNFPA.

On 19 June [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/19)], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board encouraged UNFPA to broaden its donor base; welcomed the contributions and commitments made by programme countries; encouraged all countries to commit to multi-year pledges and make early contribution payments; and urged them, in the spirit of the Monterrey Consensus [YUN 2002, p. 953], to increase regular (core) funding to UNFPA in order to secure a stable regular resource base.

Assessment of the 2000-2003 multi-year funding framework

In response to UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board decision 2000/9 [YUN 2000, p. 1005], UNFPA submitted a cumulative report on its first multi-year funding framework (MYFF) for 2000-2003 [DP/FPA/2003/4 (Part II)], which outlined the Fund's key contributions in assisting countries to implement the ICPD Programme of Action [YUN 1994, p. 955] and ICPD+5 key actions [YUN 1999, p. 1005] and in achieving the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51]; outlined the context in which UNFPA worked during the 2000-2003 MYFF period; described progress in achieving MYFF goals and outputs; discussed lessons learned in the implementation process; indicated steps taken towards results-based management; presented an integrated resources framework; and highlighted strategic considerations for the next MYFF cycle.

Although there was a lack of data for reporting on the MYFF goal indicators over such a short period of time, there had been a marked improvement in the availability and quality of data at the output level, and a notable increase in the recording and reporting of data at the country level. Continued efforts were necessary to build capacity in data collection and in monitoring and reporting programme results. Results-based management had led to the formulation of a common strategic direction and results-oriented approaches to processes and systems that were being implemented throughout UNFPA. Under the resources framework, the report updated income estimates; reported on resource mobilization; and indicated how programme funds were distributed, in accordance with Executive Board decision 2000/19 [YUN 2000, p. 1005].

The strategic considerations for the implementation of the next MYFF cycle (2004-2007) would place greater emphasis on shared goals and outcomes; accelerate progress towards ICPD goals and the MDGs; link programme support to national policy development and poverty reduction; reinvigorate work in population and development; promote gender equality and women's empowerment; give special attention to the needs of adolescents and youth in the face of the HIV/AIDS epidemic; increase access to reproductive health information and services, and reduce maternal morbidity and mortality; and implement results- and competency-based mechanisms in human resources management.

On 19 June [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/17)], the Executive Board approved the strategic considerations for the 2004-2007 MYFF cycle; urged UNFPA to simplify and refine the content and format of the 2004-2007 MYFF; and requested the Executive Director to develop her proposal to report on the MYFF every second year, and to continue to hold open-ended informal consultations on the development of the 2004-2007 MYFF.

Audit reports

The Executive Director submitted to the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board a status report [DP/FPA/2003/1] describing action taken in response to recommendations on UNFPA by the Board of Auditors for the 2000-2001 biennium [YUN 2002, p. 1082]. On 23 January [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/5)], the Executive Board took note of the report.

In an April report [DP/FPA/2003/3], the Executive Director described UNFPA's internal audit and oversight activities in 2002, stating that management audits had been carried out in 28 country offices, one Country Technical Services Team office, one division and one functional area at headquarters. Contracted audits were undertaken in 13 country offices. In addition, 542 audit reports covering 2001 activities for projects executed by Governments and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) were reviewed. Of 41 reports issued in 2002 (including 9 on 2001 audits), the level of internal controls and the compliance with financial and administrative requirements were found to be satisfactory in 14 offices. Twenty-two offices were rated partially satisfactory and five offices/divisions were deficient.

The UNFPA Office of Oversight and Evaluation analysed 20 midterm reviews of UNFPA-assisted country programmes undertaken during 2001-2002; conducted a policy application review of one country programme in the Latin American region; and continued to follow up on the implementation of recommendations of similar reviews conducted in previous years.

On 19 June [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/14)], the Executive Board encouraged the Executive Director to take the necessary steps to address the issues contained in the report on internal audit and oversight and to report to the Board in 2004.

Technical Advisory Programme

In response to Executive Board decision 2002/3 [YUN 2002, p. 1083], the Executive Director submitted a report on the Technical Advisory Programme (TAP) monitoring and evaluation system for 2003-2005 [DP/FPA/2003/7].

TAP, an inter-agency arrangement through which UNFPA technical assistance was provided to countries in support of population and development activities, was established in 1992 and had evolved in terms of both its substantive areas of focus and its method of servicing country programme needs. TAP was a three-tiered arrangement: the first tier was composed of national and regional expertise; the second was a group of technical specialists assigned to multi-disciplinary regional Country Technical Services Teams (CSTs); and the third was made up of Technical Advisory Services (TAS) specialists posted at the headquarters or regional offices of relevant UN agencies and regional commissions.

The monitoring and evaluation process had three components: CSTs would collect information on technical support activities; CSTs, along with relevant UN organizations, would analyse the collected information to identify strengths and weaknesses and make recommendations for corrective action—the analysis would also include midterm review findings that would assess the quality and usefulness of the TAP outputs; and an external and internal evaluation would be undertaken in the third year of the TAP implementation to assess its contribution to the MYFF goals and outcomes.

On 19 June [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/21)], the Executive Board took note of the report.

Delegation of formal authority on personnel matters

The Executive Director submitted a March report [DP/FPA/2003/5] on the delegation of formal authority to the Executive Director in matters concerning UNFPA personnel. Formal authority had resided with UNDP's Administrator since 1969 and remained there even after UNFPA was placed under the General Assembly's authority in 1972 by Assembly resolution 3019(XXVII) [YUN 1972, p. 378]. The Executive Director stated that the delegation of authority to UNFPA, endorsed by UNDP, would improve the Fund's management, efficiency and accountability of personnel services. Although the change in delegation of authority would incur no direct financial implications or added costs, UNFPA would continue to make use of, and pay for, certain personnel services provided by UNDP. The cost of the personnel services assumed by the Fund would be offset by a corresponding reduction in the amount paid to UNDP.

In a May report [DP/FPA/2003/10], ACABQ endorsed UNFPA's recommendation on delegating formal authority in its personnel matters to the Executive Director.

On 17 June [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/13)], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board recommended to the General Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council, that formal authority in matters of UNFPA personnel be delegated by the Secretary-General to the Executive Director. By decision 2003/224 of 11 July, the Council took note of the Executive Board decision and made that recommendation to the Assembly. A 22 September Secretariat note [A/C.5/58/2 & Corr.1] drew the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee's attention to the Council's decision.

By decision 58/555 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that formal authority in matters of UNFPA personnel should be delegated by the Secretary-General to the Fund's Executive Director.

UN Population Award

The 2003 United Nations Population Award was presented to Werner Fornos (United States),

President of the Population Institute, in the individual category, and to the Family Planning Association of Kenya in the institutional category. Mr. Fornos was selected for his outstanding contributions in the population field, primarily in advocacy. The Family Planning Association of Kenya was selected for its advocacy efforts to promote gender equality and to eradicate female genital mutilation.

The Award was established by General Assembly resolution 36/201 [YUN 1981, p. 792], to be presented annually to individuals or institutions for outstanding contributions to increasing awareness of population problems and to their solutions. In July, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the report of the UNFPA Executive Director on the Population Award [A/58/151]. By decision 58/552 of 23 December, the Assembly took note of the report.

Commission on Population and Development

The Commission on Population and Development, at its thirty-sixth session (New York, 31 March–4 April) [E/2003/25], considered as its central theme “Population, education and development”, which was discussed in the context of the follow-up to the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) (see p. 1085). Documents before the Commission that focused on the theme were reports of the Secretary-General on world population monitoring, 2003 [E/CN.9/2003/2] (see p. 1085); the monitoring of population programmes [E/CN.9/2003/3] (see p. 1086); the flow of financial resources for assisting in the implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action [E/CN.9/2003/4] (see p. 1086); and world demographic trends [E/CN.9/2003/5]. The Commission also had before it the Secretary-General’s report [E/CN.9/2003/6] on programme implementation and progress of work in the field of population in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1084].

The Commission adopted and brought to the Economic and Social Council’s attention a resolution on population, education and development [E/2003/25 (res. 2003/1)] (see p. 1086). It also decided that the special theme for its thirty-eighth (2005) session would be “Population, development and HIV/AIDS, with particular emphasis on poverty” [dec. 2003/1] and took note of the documents it had considered [dec. 2003/2].

By decision 2003/229 of 21 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission’s report on its thirty-sixth session and approved the provisional agenda for its thirty-seventh (2004) session.

In preparation for the thirty-seventh session, the Commission’s Bureau held an intersessional meeting (Vilnius, Lithuania, 13-14 November) [E/CN.9/2004/2].

2003 UN activities

In a report on programme implementation and progress of work of the UN Population Division in 2003 [E/CN.9/2004/5], the Secretary-General described the Division’s activities dealing with the analysis of fertility, mortality and migration; world population estimates and projections; population policies and population ageing; population and development; monitoring, coordination and dissemination of population information; and technical cooperation in population. The report also highlighted the Division’s major accomplishments during the year.

The Population Division’s work in fertility and family planning analysis included the issuance of the World Fertility Report 2003, which presented data on fertility, nuptiality, contraceptive use and national policies with respect to fertility and family planning for 194 countries and various areas of the world. Work also progressed on setting up a fertility database, which would complement the Report.

On mortality and health, the Population Division organized a workshop on HIV/AIDS and adult mortality in developing countries (New York, 8-13 September) for specialists from African countries most affected by the epidemic. It discussed ways to improve communication, especially through the media; the social and economic effects of the epidemic; and opportunities and constraints in the use of demographic information as an advocacy tool.

On international migration, the Population Division organized the Second Coordination Meeting on International Migration (New York, 15-16 October), which discussed, among other issues, workers’ remittances; undocumented migration, with special attention to human trafficking; and international migration and security. The Division prepared and submitted to the General Assembly the Secretary-General’s report on international migration and development (see p. 1086).

With regard to population projections, the Population Division completed World Population Prospects: The 2002 Revision, which presented estimates and projections to the year 2050 and a new set of long-range projections, extending the projection horizon by country of the 2002 Revision to the year 2300. The Division held a technical working group meeting on long-range population projections (New York, 30 June) and an Expert Group Meeting on World Population in 2300 (New York, 9 December). The "2003 Revision of World Urbanization Prospects" was completed as a working paper and would be issued in 2004.

In the area of population policies, the Population Division completed "National Population Policies 2003"; a study on fertility, contraception and population policies; and a study on HIV/AIDS policies, "National responses to HIV/AIDS: a review of progress". The United Nations Ninth Inquiry among Governments on Population and Development was finalized and sent to all permanent missions to the United Nations.

Other issuances included a report on living arrangements of older persons around the world, which was being finalized for formal publication, and a preliminary version of The Impact of AIDS. Work continued on the fourth version of the Population, Resources, Environment and Development database.

During 2003, the Population Division prepared the second quinquennial review and appraisal of the progress made in achieving the ICPD Programme of Action goals and objectives, to be considered by the Commission on Population and Development in 2004. It also continued to maintain and develop the Population Information Network (POPIN), a major channel for information dissemination.

The Population Division continued to implement a programme of technical assistance for capacity-building among population research centres in developing countries in the effective use of new information and communication technologies, particularly the Internet; and to maintain three web sites associated with the networks of population research and training institutions.

The Population Division's technical cooperation programme launched an automatic e-mail announcement service for new publications and produced and distributed MORTPAK for Windows, the Division's software package for demographic estimation. It convened an international panel of eminent specialists (Bangkok, Thailand, January) that developed a blueprint for a multi-stage research training programme on population ageing in developing countries and organized a briefing on its work for about 100 specially invited students from over 60 countries at the Population Association of America annual meeting (Minneapolis, United States, May).

Chapter IX

Social policy, crime prevention and human resources development

In 2003, the United Nations continued to promote social, cultural and human resources development, and to strengthen its crime prevention and criminal justice programme.

The Commission for Social Development, in May, considered as its priority theme national and international cooperation for social development and adopted agreed conclusions on the theme, which were endorsed by the Economic and Social Council. The General Assembly considered follow-up to the 1995 World Summit for Social Development and to the Assembly's twenty-fourth (2000) special session, which adopted further initiatives, and preparations for the observance of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family in 2004.

In December, the Assembly endorsed a June decision of the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities to establish a working group to prepare a draft text for the convention, which would be the basis for negotiation by Member States. The Assembly proclaimed 2005 the International Year for Sport and Physical Education, as a means to promote education, health, development and peace. As preparations gathered momentum for the twenty-eighth (2004) Olympic Games, the Assembly urged Governments to observe the Olympic Truce while the Games were under way.

In the area of crime prevention, the Assembly, in October, adopted the United Nations Convention against Corruption, which was opened for signature (December, Merida, Mexico). The United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime entered into force in September, as did its Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children in December. Preparations continued for the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in 2005.

The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice considered trafficking in persons, transnational organized crime, preparations for the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, the work of the Centre for International Crime Prevention of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, international cooperation and technical assistance in preventing and combating terrorism, urban crime, kidnapping, crimes against cultural heritage, UN standards and norms in crime prevention, the Commission's functioning and illicit trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna.

The Secretary-General, in September, described the need to increase investment in human resources development and to promote strategies for information technologies. Also calling for increased investment, the Assembly recognized the importance of developing human resources as a means to promote sustained economic growth and eradicate poverty.

Social development

Follow-up to 1995 World Summit and to General Assembly special session

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 57/163 [YUN 2002, p. 1087], submitted a July report [A/58/172] on the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action, adopted at the 1995 World Summit for Social Development [YUN 1995, p. 1113], and of the further initiatives for social development adopted by the Assembly's twenty-fourth (2000) special session [YUN 2000, p. 1012]. The report focused on the coherence of policies to promote social development, and participation and partnership as objectives and means of social development, and brought to the Assembly's attention the agreed conclusions on national and international cooperation for social development [E/2003/26], adopted by the Commission for Social Development (see p. 1099). The report stated that the Commission approached the coherence of policies to promote social development from four angles: policies in relation to the goals and objectives of social development; the integration of social and economic policies; the coherence between national and international cooperation for development policies; and the specific case of employment. Regarding participation and partnership, which had emerged as objectives and instruments of social development, three main elements were found in the Commission's agreed conclusions: the participation of developing countries in international affairs; partnership among all actors of the development process: the private sector and civil society; and the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 937) as an example of partnerships. The report made a series of recommendations to the Assembly, which were incorporated into resolution 58/130 (below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/496], adopted resolution 58/130 without vote [agenda item 105].

Implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development and of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling the World Summit for Social Development, held at Copenhagen from 6 to 12 March 1995, and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, entitled "World Summit for Social Development and beyond: achieving social development for all in a globalizing world", held at Geneva from 26 June to 1 July 2000,

Reaffirming that the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action and the further initiatives for social development adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-fourth special session constitute the basic framework for the promotion of social development for all at the national and international levels,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the development goals contained therein, as well as the commitments made at major United Nations conferences, special sessions and summits,

Recalling also the commitment to promote national and global economic systems based on the principles of justice, equity, democracy, participation, transparency, accountability and inclusion,

Recalling further its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Considering that, despite the efforts made and the progress achieved in some areas of economic and social development, vast sectors of our societies, in particular in the developing and the least developed countries, are still facing serious challenges, including serious financial crises, insecurity, poverty, exclusion and inequality in income growth and distribution, education and health,

Noting that the Commission for Social Development, at its forty-third session in 2005, will consider as its priority theme "Review of the further implementation of the World Summit for Social Development and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly",

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms the need to take effective measures to implement the commitments made by heads of State and Government at the World Summit for Social Development, contained in the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action, which established a new consensus to place people at the centre of development policies and pledged to eradicate poverty, promote full and productive employment and foster social integration so as to achieve stable, safe and just societies for all;

3. Also reaffirms the decisions on further action and initiatives to accelerate social development for all, adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-fourth special session and contained in the further initiatives for social development;

4. Further reaffirms that the aim of social integration is to create a "society for all", in which every individual, each with rights and responsibilities, has an active role to play, and that such an inclusive society must be based on respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms, cultural and religious diversity, social justice and the special needs of vulnerable and disadvantaged groups, democratic participation and the rule of law;

5. Recognizes the need to promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in order to address the most pressing social needs of people living in poverty, including through the design and development of appropriate mechanisms to strengthen and consolidate democratic institutions and governance;

6. Reaffirms the commitment to gender equality and to strengthening policies and programmes that improve, ensure and broaden the full participation of women in all spheres of political, economic, social and cultural life, as equal partners, and to improving their access to all resources needed for the full exercise of all their human rights and fundamental freedoms by removing persistent barriers;

7. Stresses that, in addition to social policies, progress in the realization of long-term goals, such as equity, social cohesion and an adequate accumulation of human capital, requires supportive and coherent short-term and long-term economic policies at the national and international levels;

8. Emphasizes the importance of integrating economic and social policies in promoting human resources development and enhancing the process of development, invites the Economic and Social Council, at the highest possible level, to assess the effectiveness of such integration and make recommendations in this regard to the General Assembly, requests the Commission for Social Development to continue giving particular attention to this issue in its forthcoming sessions, and invites the different entities of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, to take into account the integration of economic and social policies in their respective domains;

9. Stresses the necessity of ensuring the effective involvement of developing countries in the international economic decision-making process through, inter alia, greater participation in international economic forums, thereby ensuring the transparency and accountability of international financial institutions with respect to according a central position for social development in their policies and programmes;

10. Reaffirms that, given the growing and multi-faceted interdependence of all regions and countries, coherent and strengthened international cooperation as well as a favourable external economic environment are indispensable complements to the efforts of developing countries, including least developed countries and countries with economies in transition, to promote their social development and eradicate poverty;

11. Recognizes that achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, demands a new partnership between developed and developing countries, and in this context stresses the importance of achieving sound policies, good governance at all levels and the rule of law, as well as mobilizing domestic resources, attracting international flows, promoting international trade as an engine for development, increasing international and financial and technical cooperation for development, sustainable debt financing and external debt relief and enhancing the coherence and consistency of the international monetary, financial and trading systems;

12. Also recognizes that a substantial increase in official development assistance and other resources will be required if developing countries are to achieve the internationally agreed development goals and objectives, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and further recognizes that, in order to build support for official development assistance, heads of State and Government have pledged further to improve policies and development strategies, both nationally and internationally, to enhance aid effectiveness;

13. Urges developed countries that have not done so to make concrete efforts towards achieving the target of providing 0.7 per cent of their gross national product as official development assistance to developing countries and from 0.15 to 0.20 per cent of their gross national product as official development assistance to least developed countries, as reconfirmed at the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, held at Brussels from 14 to 20 May 2001, encourages developing countries to build on progress achieved in ensuring that official development assistance is used effectively to help to achieve development goals and targets, acknowledges the efforts of all donors, commends those donors whose official development assistance contributions exceed, reach or are increasing towards the targets, and underlines the importance of undertaking an examination of the means and time frames for achieving the targets and goals;

14. Reaffirms that recipient and donor countries, as well as international institutions, should strive to make official development assistance more effective;

15. Underlines the importance of adopting effective measures, including new financial mechanisms, as appropriate, to support the efforts of developing countries to achieve sustained economic growth, sustainable development, poverty reduction and the strengthening of their democratic systems, while reaffirming that each country has primary responsibility for its own economic and social development and that national policies have the leading role in the development process;

16. Reaffirms that social development requires the active involvement of all actors in the development process, including civil society organizations, corporations and small businesses, and that partnerships among all relevant actors are increasingly becoming part of national and international cooperation for social development, reaffirms also that, within countries, partnerships among the Government, civil society and the private sector can contribute effectively to the achievement of social development goals, and underlines the fact that, at the international level, the recent initiatives towards building voluntary partnerships for social development should be encouraged and discussed further at, inter alia, the intergovernmental level;

17. Underlines the responsibility of the private sector, at both the national and the international levels, including small and large companies and transnational corporations, regarding not only the economic and financial, but also the development, social, gender and environmental implications of their activities, their obligations towards their workers and their contributions to achieving sustainable development, including social development, and emphasizes the need to take concrete actions within the United Nations system and through the participation of all relevant stakeholders on corporate responsibility and accountability;

18. Reaffirms that education, employment creation and improvement in working conditions, which are some of the indispensable elements of poverty eradication, social integration, gender equality and overall development, should be at the centre of development strategies and international cooperation in support of national policies, and recognizes the need to promote employment that meets labour standards as defined in relevant instruments of the International Labour Organization and other international instruments;

19. Encourages, in this context, current initiatives of the United Nations system on the elaboration of comprehensive employment strategies and measures to foster youth employment, bearing in mind relevant international instruments pertaining to youth;

20. Reaffirms the call of the Economic and Social Council for enhanced coordination within the United Nations system and the ongoing efforts to harmonize the current initiatives on Africa, and requests the Commission for Social Development to continue to give due prominence in its work to the social dimension of the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

21. Welcomes the contribution of the Commission for Social Development in the follow-up to and review of the further implementation of the commitments made at the World Summit for Social Development and the further initiatives agreed upon at the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, reaffirms that the Commission will continue to have the primary responsibility in this regard, and encourages Governments, the relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and civil society to enhance their support to its work;

22. Recalls, in this regard, its request to each functional commission of the Economic and Social Council to examine its methods of work in order to better pursue the implementation of the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, recognizing that there is no need for a uniform approach since each functional commission has its own specificity, while also noting that modern methods of work can better guarantee the review of progress made in implementation at all levels, on the basis of a report with recommendations to be submitted by the Secretary-General to each functional commission and relevant subsidiary body of the Council on its methods of work, in accordance with the provisions defined by the respective outcomes and relevant decisions taken by each body, bearing in mind the progress recently achieved in this regard by certain commissions, in particular by the Commission on Sustainable Development; the functional commissions and other relevant bodies of the Council should report to it no later than 2005 on the outcome of this examination;

23. Notes its decision to review in 2005 the progress achieved in implementing all the commitments made in the Millennium Declaration, and notes also that there is scope for a major event in this context, and in this regard calls upon the Commission for Social Development to transmit to the General Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council, the substantive outcome of its review of the further implementation of the World Summit for Social Development and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly for its consideration in 2005;

24. Invites the Secretary-General, the Economic and Social Council, the Commission for Social Development, the regional commissions, the relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and other intergovernmental forums, within their respective mandates, to continue to integrate into their work programmes and give priority attention to the commitments and undertakings contained in the Copenhagen Declaration and the Programme of Action and in the further initiatives for social development, to continue to be actively involved in their follow-up and to monitor the achievement of those commitments and undertakings;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development and of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly", and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on this question to the Assembly at that session.

Commission for Social Development

The Commission for Social Development, at its forty-first session (New York, 10-21 February) [E/2003/26], adopted agreed conclusions on its priority theme, "National and international cooperation for social development" (see p. 1100). The Commission made recommendations for action by the Economic and Social Council on: the drafting of an international convention to promote and protect the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities (see p. 1107); national and international cooperation for social development, in particular the implementation of the social objectives of NEPAD (see p. 937); policies and programmes involving youth (see p. 1216); and modalities for reviewing the 2002 Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing (see p. 1219). A text on preparations for the observance of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family in 2004 was recommended to the Council for adoption by the General Assembly (see p. 1103).

The Commission reviewed the proposed work programme of the Division for Social Policy and Development of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) for the 2004-2005 biennium [E/CN.5/2003/8], and took note of the report of the Board of the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) on UNRISD's work during 2001-2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1089]. The Commission nominated, for confirmation by the Council, four candidates for membership to the Board for a four-year term beginning 1 July 2003 [E/CN.5/2003/3 & Add.1].

In an effort to link the Commission's normative work with its work in the field, a presentation was made on technical cooperation activities. A dialogue with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) was also held.

On 21 July, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its forty-first session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its forty-second (2004) session (decision 2003/230).

Cooperation for social development

The Secretary-General, in response to Economic and Social Council decision 2002/237 [YUN 2002, p. 1089], submitted to the Commission for Social Development a report on national and international cooperation for social development [E/CN.5/2003/5 & Corr.1], the priority theme for the Commission's 2003 session. The priority theme had five sub-themes: the sharing of experiences and practices in social development; forging partnerships for social development; the social responsibility of the private sector; the impact of employment strategies on social development; and the policies and role of international financial institutions and their effect on national social development strategies. The report analysed the sub-themes, covering such issues as capacity-building for social development, priority-setting and financing, information and evaluation, lessons learned from recent experiences with social development partnerships and approaches to the social responsibility of the private sector. It also reviewed the impact of employment strategies on social development and provided a critical appraisal of the activities and impact of international financial institutions on national social development strategies.

To study the priority theme, the Secretariat organized expert group meetings on the sharing of experiences and practices in social development (Havana, Cuba, 12-14 June 2002), and on forging partnerships for social development and the social responsibility of the private sector (Copenhagen, Denmark, 26-29 June 2002). The report said that, while economic and social development was generally considered to be a national concern, international support was important for developing countries to achieve development objectives within reasonable time frames, including the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51]. The report proposed policy recommendations for the Commission's consideration.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 42], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2003/26], adopted resolution 2003/15 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Agreed conclusions on national and international cooperation for social development

The Economic and Social Council

Endorses the following agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission for Social Development at its forty-first session with respect to its priority theme:

1. The Commission stresses that national and international cooperation for social development should aim at solidarity, equality within and among countries, social justice, good governance at all levels, tolerance and full respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms.

2. The Commission recognizes that globalization and interdependence are opening new opportunities through trade, investment and capital flows and advances in technology, including information technology, for the growth of the world economy and the development and improvement of living standards around the world. At the same time, there remain serious challenges, including serious financial crises, insecurity, poverty, exclusion and inequality within and among societies. Considerable obstacles to further integration and full participation in the global economy remain for developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, as well as for some countries with economies in transition. Unless the benefits of social and economic development are extended to all countries, a growing number of people in all countries and even entire regions will remain marginalized from the global economy. The Commission reiterates the need for immediate action in order to overcome those obstacles affecting peoples and countries and to realize the full potential of opportunities presented for the benefit of all. The Commission stresses that the social impact and dimension of globalization deserves further attention.

3. Globalization offers opportunities and challenges. The developing countries and countries with economies in transition face special difficulties in responding to those challenges and opportunities. Globalization should be fully inclusive and equitable, and there is a strong need for policies and measures at the national and international levels, formulated and implemented with the full and effective participation of developing countries and countries with economies in transition to help them to respond effectively to those challenges and opportunities.

4. In an increasingly globalizing world, renewed and effective partnerships between developed countries and developing countries as well as countries with economies in transition are required to achieve the internationally agreed social development objectives and commitments, including those adopted at the World Summit for Social Development and the further initiatives adopted at the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, and the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration.

5. The Commission welcomes the prominence given to the New Partnership for Africa's Development in the report of the Secretary-General on national and international cooperation for social development as an example of a partnership among Governments. It also recognizes that the objectives and action plans enunciated in the New Partnership are consistent with the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, as well as those spelled out in the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development, particularly its commitment 7 on accelerating the economic, social and human resource development of Africa and the least developed countries, and the outcome document of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly.

6. The Commission invites the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council to continue to include consideration of the integration of economic and social policies as one of the thematic areas to be addressed in future debates.

7. National capacity is one of the key factors in implementing social development policies and fulfilling national responsibilities. Each country has primary responsibility for its own economic and social development and the role of national policies and development strategies cannot be overemphasized. Enhanced international cooperation is essential to implement the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development as well as the further initiatives for social development and to address the challenges of globalization. In this regard, international cooperation has a vital role in assisting developing countries as well as some countries with economies in transition in the strengthening of their human, institutional and technological capacity. Without the building of such capacity, it will be difficult to ensure that social policy concerns are integrated within the policy planning and budgeting processes. The Commission therefore urges the international community to continue to assist developing countries in their capacity-building in order to promote social development.

8. Given the importance of education as a primary and critical component in any development strategy, in particular for the elimination of illiteracy, the Commission emphasizes the relevance of cooperation in educational matters at the national and international levels.

9. Achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, demands a new partnership between developed and developing countries. In this context, the Commission stresses the importance of the commitment recently made by heads of State and Government to achieving sound policies, good governance at all levels and the rule of law, as well as to mobilizing domestic resources, attracting international flows, promoting international trade as an engine for development, increasing international financial and technical cooperation for development, sustainable debt financing and external debt relief, and enhancing the coherence and consistency of the international monetary, financial and trading systems.

10. The Commission recognizes that a substantial increase in official development assistance and other resources will be required if developing countries are to achieve the internationally agreed development goals and objectives, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration. To build support for official development assistance, heads of State and Government have pledged to further improve policies and development strategies, both nationally and internationally, to enhance aid effectiveness.

11. In that context, the Commission urges developed countries that have not done so to make concrete efforts towards achieving the target of providing 0.7 per cent of their gross national product as official development assistance to developing countries and from 0.15 to 0.20 per cent of their gross national product as official development assistance to least developed countries, as reconfirmed at the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, and encourages developing countries to build on progress achieved in ensuring that official development assistance is used effectively to help achieve development goals and targets. The Commission acknowledges the efforts of all donors, commends those donors whose official development assistance contributions exceed, reach or are increasing towards the targets, and underlines the importance of undertaking an examination of the means and time frames for achieving the targets and goals.

12. Recipient and donor countries, as well as international institutions, should strive to make official development assistance more effective.

13. The Commission underlines the responsibility of the private sector at the national and international levels, including small and large companies and transnational corporations, regarding not only the economic and financial but also the development, social, gender and environmental implications of their activities, their responsibilities towards their workers and their contributions to achieving sustainable development including social development. In this context, the Commission emphasizes the need to take concrete actions within the United Nations system and through the participation of all relevant stakeholders on corporate responsibility and accountability.

14. Partnerships among all relevant actors are increasingly becoming part of national and international cooperation for social development. Within countries, partnerships among the Government, civil society and the private sector can contribute effectively to the achievement of social development goals. At the international level, the recent initiatives towards building voluntary partnerships for social development should be encouraged and discussed further at, inter alia, the intergovernmental level.

15. Cross-sectoral and integrated policies that take into account the needs and interests of all members of society, as well as their contributions to national development, and that mainstream a gender perspective should be promoted.

16. The Commission calls upon all relevant development partners to give adequate attention to productive and sustainable employment, as appropriate, in their development policies. Employment strategies can have a substantial impact on poverty eradication, social development and gender equality and should be developed in harmony with economic growth strategies and structural reforms. The Commission sees the involvement of social partners in cooperating with Governments in the formulation and implementation of employment strategies as an important element in ensuring their success. The Commission stresses the need to design appropriate labour and employment policies that will support both growth with employment and employment that supports social development goals.

17. Fulfilment of sustainable development objectives should aim at ensuring, inter alia, quality employment and defending workers' rights and interests and, to this effect, the Commission notes the need to promote respect for the relevant conventions of the United Nations and the International Labour Organization.

18. The Commission encourages the strengthening of cooperation among countries, inter alia, to address the issues of labour-market information and skills standards certification as well as transnational issues on labour migration, with a view to protecting the rights and dignity of migrant workers.

19. The Commission stresses the necessity of ensuring the effective involvement of developing countries in the international economic decision-making process through, inter alia, greater participation in international economic forums, thereby ensuring the transparency and accountability of international financial institutions with respect to according a central position to social development in their policies and programmes.

20. The Commission notes the increasing operational coordination and cooperation achieved between the United Nations funds and programmes and the international financial institutions, while taking into account their respective competencies and mandates. In this context, the Commission invites the international financial institutions to strengthen further their efforts to ensure that an improved social outcome is incorporated into their programmes of assistance, taking into account the fact that poverty reduction strategies should be nationally owned. Where poverty reduction strategy papers exist, a broad platform is necessary to place them within a wider context where all social objectives would be adequately taken into account.

In resolution 2003/13 of 21 July (see p. 940), the Council underlined the need for partnership and cooperation between Governments and civil society in implementing the outcomes of the World Summit for Social Development (YUN 1995, p. 1114) and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly [YUN 2000, p. 1012], and the need to ensure, within the NEPAD framework, their involvement in the planning, elaboration, implementation and evaluation of social policies at the national, regional and international levels.

UN Research Institute for Social Development

During 2003, the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) continued to conduct research on the social dimensions of development problems. It sought to promote a holistic and multidisciplinary approach to social development by focusing on decision-making processes, often-conflicting social forces and the effects of growing or contracting economies.

Among issues addressed in its 2003 publications and research papers were communicating in the information society; gender, health and human rights; the expansion of information technology in Senegal; marginalized rural youth in Brazil, Egypt and Nepal; agrarian change in the first half of 2003; global media governance; and citizenship rights and obligations of people of African descent.

UNRISD participated in the second meeting of the Preparatory Committee for the World Summit on the Information Society and participated in the Summit's first phase (see p. 857). It organized a conference entitled "Corporate Social Responsibility and Development: Towards a New Agenda?" (Geneva, 17-18 November), and collaborated in organizing the conference "Promoting Corporate Social and Environmental Responsibility in the Philippines" (7 March). UNRISD launched a new research project on UN world summits and civil society engagement to assess the impact of various UN summits on civil society activism at global, national and local levels. UNRISD also expanded its access to public media.

Cooperatives in social development

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/114 [YUN 2001, p. 1007], the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/159], submitted the replies he had received from Governments and international organizations on progress achieved in the resolution's implementation, particularly in promoting a supportive environment for the development of cooperatives and their contribution to poverty eradication, the generation of full and productive employment, and the enhancement of social integration.

The Secretary-General concluded that efforts were being made to create a supportive environment for cooperative development in many countries, particularly in revamping cooperative regulations and legislation. Initiatives had been taken to enhance capacity, efficiency and management to better serve members and communities. Suggestions were made for promoting the development of cooperatives, including strengthening national training and information centres; focusing on integrating and strengthening national and international cooperative networks; research on the cooperative model by the Committee for the Promotion and Advancement of Cooperatives; and UN assistance for human resources development, technical advice and training.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/497], adopted resolution 58/131 without vote [agenda item 106].

Cooperatives in social development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 47/90 of 16 December 1992, 49/155 of 23 December 1994, 51/58 of 12 December 1996, 54/123 of 17 December 1999 and 56/114 of 19 December 2001, concerning cooperatives in social development,

Follow-up to International Year of the Family (1994)

By a March note [A/58/67-E/2003/49], the Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 57/164 [YUN 2002, p. 1090], submitted a report on preparations for the tenth (2004) anniversary of the International Year of the Family [E/CN.5/2003/6], proclaimed by the Assembly in resolution 44/82 [YUN 1989, p. 612] and observed in 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1144].

At the national level, organizational arrangements had been made, partnerships formed and promotional activities undertaken. The UN regional commissions were playing a lead role and, at the international level, NGOs were acting as partners in the preparation and observance of the anniversary. At the United Nations, DESA promoted awareness of the economic, social and demographic processes affecting families and their members. The report recommended that Governments promote and facilitate the observance of the anniversary, with the participation of all segments of society; raise awareness of family issues; formulate national strategies for enhancing the well-being of families; enlist all segments of society in the development and implementation of national plans; and strengthen partnerships with NGOs working on family issues, particularly with regard to advocacy and policy formulation. Concerned UN agencies and bodies were called on to emphasize the family perspective in development cooperation and encourage regional and subregional cooperation in matters relating to families, monitor progress in the regions, identify needs, collect and analyse information, sponsor research and development, and provide advisory services and training for personnel.

The Economic and Social Council, on 24 July, took note of the Secretary-General's note (decision 2003/310), as did the Assembly on 22 December (decision 58/530).

Persons with disabilities

World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 56/115 [YUN 2001, p. 1010], submitted the fourth five-year review and appraisal of the 1982 World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons [A/58/61-E/2003/5], adopted by Assembly resolution 37/52 [YUN 1982, p. 981]. The report assessed trends in policies and programmes since the previous review [YUN 1997, p. 1117], noting the widespread support for the goals and objectives of the Programme of Action and for the guidance provided by the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities, adopted by Assembly resolution 48/96 [YUN 1993, p. 977], on disability-sensitive policy design, planning, evaluation and drafting of national legislation. However, Governments had yet to pronounce on the proposed supplement to the Standard Rules, contained in a 2002 report of the Special Rapporteur on disability [YUN 2002, p. 1091]. Views of Governments on the proposed supplement would be considered by the Commission for Social Development in 2004. Recommendations for further action included identifying options to bring a disability perspective into international development instruments, such as the MDGs, which did not address specifically the situation of persons with disabilities; and defining disability within the proposed convention (see p. 1107). Three priorities were identified for action: the dimension of environmental accessibility; ways in which persons with disabilities could benefit from measures for implementing the MDGs by 2015 on the basis of equality with non-disabled populations; and the development of international agreements on employment indicators, such as labour force participation and unemployment rates for persons with disabilities. Proposals for action to the Assembly involved identifying policy options and target areas that could be used by UN funds and programmes to incorporate a disability perspective in their activities; identifying priorities for action related to statistics and indicators; and expressing its views on options and priorities to strengthen joint planning and evaluation of the outcomes of the UN system in promoting the advancement of persons with disabilities in the context of development.

Annexed to the report was an overview of recent policy and programme activities taken by Governments.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2003/310 of 24 July, took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Cultural development

Follow-up to United Nations Year for Cultural Heritage

Following the observance of the United Nations Year for Cultural Heritage in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1096], the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) General Conference, on 17 October 2003, adopted the Convention for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage and the Declaration concerning the Intentional Destruction of Cultural Heritage. The Convention, the fifth of its kind adopted by UNESCO for the protection of cultural heritage, was designed to make the States parties take measures to ensure the safeguarding of the international cultural heritage and to strengthen solidarity and cooperation at regional and international levels. The Declaration outlined possible protection measures by States to combat the intentional destruction of cultural heritage, in both peacetime and in the event of armed conflict, including during an occupation.

It found that sports-based initiatives were practical and cost-effective tools to achieve objectives in development and peace. Sport could cut across barriers that divided societies, making it a means to support conflict prevention and peace-building efforts, both symbolically and practically. Sport programmes could promote social integration and foster tolerance, help to reduce tension and generate dialogue. Sport could be an effective tool for advocacy and communication.

Work of the Centre for International Crime Prevention

The Executive Director of the Centre for International Crime Prevention of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime reported in March [E/CN.15/2003/2] on the Centre's activities in 2002. One of the Centre's core activities was the promotion of the ratification process of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and its Protocols (see p. 1125) and the provision of assistance to States seeking to ratify them. A Global Programme against Terrorism was launched in 2002 to respond to requests for counter-terrorism assistance by the Security Council's Counter-Terrorism Committee (see p. 63) or directly from requesting States. Thirteen Member States responded to the Secretary-General's request for information on steps taken to implement the plans of action for the implementation of the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, annexed to General Assembly resolution 56/261 [YUN 2002, p. 1099]; a number of them indicated that they were being guided by the plans of action. The Centre published statistical information on crime and criminal justice for the period 1998-2000 received from over 80 Member States and expanded its dissemination of information by electronic means. Work focused on initiating the Centre's global trends study, which examined the links between institutional arrangements and organized crime and public sector corruption. The report presented statistical data on the Centre's technical cooperation activities and described coordination with the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network.

A March report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.15/2003/4] summarized the activities of the institutions comprising the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network—the United Nations Inter-regional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI), 11 regional and affiliated institutes and the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council—based on their contributions submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/170 [YUN 2002, p. 1108]. UNICRI activities focused on juvenile justice; criminal justice reform; trafficking in persons; terrorism; and the production of crime surveys. The regional and affiliated institutes emphasized similar activities, in addition to those relating to prison conditions, extradition and legal assistance, trafficking in illicit firearms and ammunition, restorative justice, violence, property crime and drugs, transnational organized crime, extradition and terrorism, and high-technology and computer-related crime.

UN African crime prevention institute

In an August report [A/58/223], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 57/172 [YUN 2002, p. 1114], the Secretary-General highlighted the activities of the African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (UNAFRI), including the medium-term strategy and action plan for 2002-2007, approved by the UNAFRI Governing Board (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 17-18 March), fund-raising efforts and strategies for sustaining the Institute.

UNAFRI, as part of the main focus of its activities, held a series of national workshops with a view to sharing valuable experience and disseminating information regarding the prevalence of transnational criminality and the need for concerted action at the regional and subregional levels. It informed countries about relevant UN conventions as an effective means of combating crime. Other activities related to a draft convention on mutual legal assistance and extradition to control transnational organized crime, combating trafficking in firearms and ammunition in Africa, a UN survey on kidnapping, means to combat terrorism, workshops on crime prevention strategies and preventing trafficking in women and children.

The Institute's total resources for 2002-2003 amounted to $952,691, which came from member States, assessed contributions, a UN grant, and rent and interest income.

Proposals to strengthen the Institute included increasing cooperation and partnership with UNODC; calling on potential donors and relevant international funding agencies for contributions for the effective implementation of the UNAFRI work programme; and urging members to meet their financial obligations to the Institute.

In September, the Convention entered into force, as did its Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children in December.

In 2003, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and one of its supplementary Protocols—the Protocol to

1. Each State Party shall take appropriate measures to encourage persons who participate or who have participated in the commission of an offence established in accordance with this Convention to supply information useful to competent authorities for investigative and evidentiary purposes and to provide factual, specific help to competent authorities that may contribute to depriving offenders of the proceeds of crime and to recovering such proceeds.

2. Each State Party shall consider providing for the possibility, in appropriate cases, of mitigating punishment of an accused person who provides substantial cooperation in the investigation or prosecution of an offence established in accordance with this Convention.

3. Each State Party shall consider providing for the possibility, in accordance with fundamental principles of its domestic law, of granting immunity from prosecution to a person who provides substantial cooperation in the investigation or prosecution of an offence established in accordance with this Convention.

4. Protection of such persons shall be, mutatis mutandis, as provided for in article 32 of this Convention.

5. Where a person referred to in paragraph 1 of this article located in one State Party can provide substantial cooperation to the competent authorities of another State Party, the States Parties concerned may consider entering into agreements or arrangements, in accordance with their domestic law, concerning the potential provision by the other State Party of the treatment set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 of this article.

Article 38

Cooperation between national authorities

Each State Party shall take such measures as may be necessary to encourage, in accordance with its domestic law, cooperation between, on the one hand, its public authorities, as well as its public officials, and, on the other hand, its authorities responsible for investigating and prosecuting criminal offences. Such cooperation may include:

(a) Informing the latter authorities, on their own initiative, where there are reasonable grounds to believe that any of the offences established in accordance with articles 15, 21 and 23 of this Convention has been committed; or

(b) Providing, upon request, to the latter authorities all necessary information.

Article 39

Cooperation between national authorities and the private sector

1. Each State Party shall take such measures as may be necessary to encourage, in accordance with its domestic law, cooperation between national investigating and prosecuting authorities and entities of the private sector, in particular financial institutions, relating to matters involving the commission of offences established in accordance with this Convention.

2. Each State Party shall consider encouraging its nationals and other persons with a habitual residence in its territory to report to the national investigating and prosecuting authorities the commission of an offence established in accordance with this Convention.

Article 40

Bank secrecy

Each State Party shall ensure that, in the case of domestic criminal investigations of offences established in accordance with this Convention, there are appropriate mechanisms available within its domestic legal system to overcome obstacles that may arise out of the application of bank secrecy laws.

Article 41Criminal record

Each State Party may adopt such legislative or other measures as may be necessary to take into consideration, under such terms as and for the purpose that it deems appropriate, any previous conviction in another State of an alleged offender for the purpose of using such information in criminal proceedings relating to an offence established in accordance with this Convention.

Article 42Jurisdiction

1. Each State Party shall adopt such measures as may be necessary to establish its jurisdiction over the offences established in accordance with this Convention when:

(a) The offence is committed in the territory of that State Party; or

(b) The offence is committed on board a vessel that is flying the flag of that State Party or an aircraft that is registered under the laws of that State Party at the time that the offence is committed.

2. Subject to article 4 of this Convention, a State Party may also establish its jurisdiction over any such offence when:

(a) The offence is committed against a national of that State Party; or

(b) The offence is committed by a national of that State Party or a stateless person who has his or her habitual residence in its territory; or

(c) The offence is one of those established in accordance with article 23, paragraph 1 (b) (ii), of this Convention and is committed outside its territory with a view to the commission of an offence established in accordance with article 23, paragraph 1 (a) (i) or (ii) or (b) (i), of this Convention within its territory; or

(d) The offence is committed against the State Party.

3. For the purposes of article 44 of this Convention, each State Party shall take such measures as may be necessary to establish its jurisdiction over the offences established in accordance with this Convention when the alleged offender is present in its territory and it does not extradite such person solely on the ground that he or she is one of its nationals.

4. Each State Party may also take such measures as may be necessary to establish its jurisdiction over the offences established in accordance with this Convention when the alleged offender is present in its territory and it does not extradite him or her.

5. If a State Party exercising its jurisdiction under paragraph 1 or 2 of this article has been notified, or has otherwise learned, that any other States Parties are conducting an investigation, prosecution or judicial proceeding in respect of the same conduct, the competent authorities of those States Parties shall, as appropriate, consult one another with a view to coordinating their actions.

6. Without prejudice to norms of general international law, this Convention shall not exclude the exercise of any criminal jurisdiction established by a State Party in accordance with its domestic law.

Chapter IV*International cooperationArticle 43International cooperation*

1. States Parties shall cooperate in criminal matters in accordance with articles 44 to 50 of this Convention. Where appropriate and consistent with their domestic legal system, States Parties shall consider assisting each other in investigations of and proceedings in civil and administrative matters relating to corruption.

2. In matters of international cooperation, whenever dual criminality is considered a requirement, it shall be deemed fulfilled irrespective of whether the laws of the requested State Party place the offence within the same category of offence or denominate the offence by the same terminology as the requesting State Party, if the conduct underlying the offence for which assistance is sought is a criminal offence under the laws of both States Parties.

Article 44Extradition

1. This article shall apply to the offences established in accordance with this Convention where the person who is the subject of the request for extradition is present in the territory of the requested State Party, provided that the offence for which extradition is sought is punishable under the domestic law of both the requesting State Party and the requested State Party.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 1 of this article, a State Party whose law so permits may grant the extradition of a person for any of the offences covered by this Convention that are not punishable under its own domestic law.

3. If the request for extradition includes several separate offences, at least one of which is extraditable under this article and some of which are not extraditable by reason of their period of imprisonment but are related to offences established in accordance with this Convention, the requested State Party may apply this article also in respect of those offences.

4. Each of the offences to which this article applies shall be deemed to be included as an extraditable offence in any extradition treaty existing between States Parties. States Parties undertake to include such offences as extraditable offences in every extradition treaty to be concluded between them. A State Party whose law so permits, in case it uses this Convention as the basis for extradition, shall not consider any of the offences established in accordance with this Convention to be a political offence.

5. If a State Party that makes extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty receives a request for extradition from another State Party with which it has no extradition treaty, it may consider this Convention the legal basis for extradition in respect of any offence to which this article applies.

6. A State Party that makes extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty shall:

(a) At the time of deposit of its instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval of or accession to this Convention, inform the Secretary-General of the United Nations whether it will take this Convention as the legal basis for cooperation on extradition with other States Parties to this Convention; and

(b) If it does not take this Convention as the legal basis for cooperation on extradition, seek, where appropriate, to conclude treaties on extradition with other States Parties to this Convention in order to implement this article.

7. States Parties that do not make extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty shall recognize offences to which this article applies as extraditable offences between themselves.

8. Extradition shall be subject to the conditions provided for by the domestic law of the requested State Party or by applicable extradition treaties, including, inter alia, conditions in relation to the minimum penalty requirement for extradition and the grounds upon which the requested State Party may refuse extradition.

9. States Parties shall, subject to their domestic law, endeavour to expedite extradition procedures and to simplify evidentiary requirements relating thereto in respect of any offence to which this article applies.

10. Subject to the provisions of its domestic law and its extradition treaties, the requested State Party may, upon being satisfied that the circumstances so warrant and are urgent and at the request of the requesting State Party, take a person whose extradition is sought and who is present in its territory into custody or take other appropriate measures to ensure his or her presence at extradition proceedings.

11. A State Party in whose territory an alleged offender is found, if it does not extradite such person in respect of an offence to which this article applies solely on the ground that he or she is one of its nationals, shall, at the request of the State Party seeking extradition, be obliged to submit the case without undue delay to its competent authorities for the purpose of prosecution. Those authorities shall take their decision and conduct their proceedings in the same manner as in the case of any other offence of a grave nature under the domestic law of that State Party. The States Parties concerned shall cooperate with each other, in particular on procedural and evidentiary aspects, to ensure the efficiency of such prosecution.

12. Whenever a State Party is permitted under its domestic law to extradite or otherwise surrender one of its nationals only upon the condition that the person will be returned to that State Party to serve the sentence imposed as a result of the trial or proceedings for which the extradition or surrender of the person was sought and that State Party and the State Party seeking the extradition of the person agree with this option and other terms that they may deem appropriate, such conditional extradition or surrender shall be sufficient to discharge the obligation set forth in paragraph 11 of this article.

13. If extradition, sought for purposes of enforcing a sentence, is refused because the person sought is a national of the requested State Party, the requested State Party shall, if its domestic law so permits and in conformity with the requirements of such law, upon application of the requesting State Party, consider the enforcement of the sentence imposed under the domestic law of the requesting State Party or the remainder thereof.

14. Any person regarding whom proceedings are being carried out in connection with any of the offences to which this article applies shall be guaranteed fair treatment at all stages of the proceedings, including enjoyment of all the rights and guarantees provided by the domestic law of the State Party in the territory of which that person is present.

15. Nothing in this Convention shall be interpreted as imposing an obligation to extradite if the requested State Party has substantial grounds for believing that the request has been made for the purpose of prosecuting or punishing a person on account of that person's sex, race, religion, nationality, ethnic origin or political opinions or that compliance with the request would cause prejudice to that person's position for any one of these reasons.

16. States Parties may not refuse a request for extradition on the sole ground that the offence is also considered to involve fiscal matters.

17. Before refusing extradition, the requested State Party shall, where appropriate, consult with the requesting State Party to provide it with ample opportunity to present its opinions and to provide information relevant to its allegation.

18. States Parties shall seek to conclude bilateral and multilateral agreements or arrangements to carry out or to enhance the effectiveness of extradition.

Article 45

Transfer of sentenced persons

States Parties may consider entering into bilateral or multilateral agreements or arrangements on the transfer to their territory of persons sentenced to imprisonment or other forms of deprivation of liberty for offences established in accordance with this Convention in order that they may complete their sentences there.

Mutual legal assistance

1. States Parties shall afford one another the widest measure of mutual legal assistance in investigations, prosecutions and judicial proceedings in relation to the offences covered by this Convention.

2. Mutual legal assistance shall be afforded to the fullest extent possible under relevant laws, treaties, agreements and arrangements of the requested State Party with respect to investigations, prosecutions and judicial proceedings in relation to the offences for which a legal person may be held liable in accordance with article 26 of this Convention in the requesting State Party.

3. Mutual legal assistance to be afforded in accordance with this article may be requested for any of the following purposes:

- (a) Taking evidence or statements from persons;
- (b) Effecting service of judicial documents;
- (c) Executing searches and seizures, and freezing;
- (d) Examining objects and sites;
- (e) Providing information, evidentiary items and expert evaluations;
- (f) Providing originals or certified copies of relevant documents and records, including government, bank, financial, corporate or business records;
- (g) Identifying or tracing proceeds of crime, property, instrumentalities or other things for evidentiary purposes;
- (h) Facilitating the voluntary appearance of persons in the requesting State Party;
- (i) Any other type of assistance that is not contrary to the domestic law of the requested State Party;

(j) Identifying, freezing and tracing proceeds of crime in accordance with the provisions of chapter V of this Convention;

(k) The recovery of assets, in accordance with the provisions of chapter V of this Convention.

4. Without prejudice to domestic law, the competent authorities of a State Party may, without prior request, transmit information relating to criminal matters to a competent authority in another State Party where they believe that such information could assist the authority in undertaking or successfully concluding inquiries and criminal proceedings or could result in a request formulated by the latter State Party pursuant to this Convention.

5. The transmission of information pursuant to paragraph 4 of this article shall be without prejudice to inquiries and criminal proceedings in the State of the competent authorities providing the information. The competent authorities receiving the information shall comply with a request that said information remain confidential, even temporarily, or with restrictions on its use. However, this shall not prevent the receiving State Party from disclosing in its proceedings information that is exculpatory to an accused person. In such a case, the receiving State Party shall notify the transmitting State Party prior to the disclosure and, if so requested, consult with the transmitting State Party. If, in an exceptional case, advance notice is not possible, the receiving State Party shall inform the transmitting State Party of the disclosure without delay.

6. The provisions of this article shall not affect the obligations under any other treaty, bilateral or multilateral, that governs or will govern, in whole or in part, mutual legal assistance.

7. Paragraphs 9 to 29 of this article shall apply to requests made pursuant to this article if the States Parties in question are not bound by a treaty of mutual legal assistance. If those States Parties are bound by such a treaty, the corresponding provisions of that treaty shall apply unless the States Parties agree to apply paragraphs 9 to 29 of this article in lieu thereof. States Parties are strongly encouraged to apply those paragraphs if they facilitate cooperation.

8. States Parties shall not decline to render mutual legal assistance pursuant to this article on the ground of bank secrecy.

9. (a) A requested State Party, in responding to a request for assistance pursuant to this article in the absence of dual criminality, shall take into account the purposes of this Convention, as set forth in article 1;

(b) States Parties may decline to render assistance pursuant to this article on the ground of absence of dual criminality. However, a requested State Party shall, where consistent with the basic concepts of its legal system, render assistance that does not involve coercive action. Such assistance may be refused when requests involve matters of a de minimis nature or matters for which the cooperation or assistance sought is available under other provisions of this Convention;

(c) Each State Party may consider adopting such measures as may be necessary to enable it to provide a wider scope of assistance pursuant to this article in the absence of dual criminality.

10. A person who is being detained or is serving a sentence in the territory of one State Party whose presence in another State Party is requested for purposes of identification, testimony or otherwise providing assistance in obtaining evidence for investigations, prosecutions or judicial proceedings in relation to offences covered by this Convention may be transferred if the following conditions are met:

(a) The person freely gives his or her informed consent;

(b) The competent authorities of both States Parties agree, subject to such conditions as those States Parties may deem appropriate.

11. For the purposes of paragraph 10 of this article:

(a) The State Party to which the person is transferred shall have the authority and obligation to keep the person transferred in custody, unless otherwise requested or authorized by the State Party from which the person was transferred;

(b) The State Party to which the person is transferred shall without delay implement its obligation to return the person to the custody of the State Party from which the person was transferred as agreed beforehand, or as otherwise agreed, by the competent authorities of both States Parties;

(c) The State Party to which the person is transferred shall not require the State Party from which the person was transferred to initiate extradition proceedings for the return of the person;

(d) The person transferred shall receive credit for service of the sentence being served in the State from which he or she was transferred for time spent in the custody of the State Party to which he or she was transferred.

12. Unless the State Party from which a person is to be transferred in accordance with paragraphs 10 and 11 of this article so agrees, that person, whatever his or her nationality, shall not be prosecuted, detained, punished or subjected to any other restriction of his or her personal liberty in the territory of the State to which that person is transferred in respect of acts, omissions or convictions prior to his or her departure from the territory of the State from which he or she was transferred.

13. Each State Party shall designate a central authority that shall have the responsibility and power to receive requests for mutual legal assistance and either to execute them or to transmit them to the competent authorities for execution. Where a State Party has a special region or territory with a separate system of mutual legal assistance, it may designate a distinct central authority that shall have the same function for that region or territory. Central authorities shall ensure the speedy and proper execution or transmission of the requests received. Where the central authority transmits the request to a competent authority for execution, it shall encourage the speedy and proper execution of the request by the competent authority. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall be notified of the central authority designated for this purpose at the time each State Party deposits its instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval of or accession to this Convention. Requests for mutual legal assistance and any communication related thereto shall be transmitted to the central authorities designated by the States Parties. This requirement shall be without prejudice to the right of a State Party to require that such requests and communications be addressed to it through diplomatic channels and, in urgent circumstances, where the States Parties agree, through the International Criminal Police Organization, if possible.

14. Requests shall be made in writing or, where possible, by any means capable of producing a written record, in a language acceptable to the requested State Party, under conditions allowing that State Party to establish authenticity. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall be notified of the language or languages acceptable to each State Party at the time it deposits its instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval of or accession to this Convention. In urgent circumstances and where agreed by the States Parties, requests may be made orally but shall be confirmed in writing forthwith.

15. A request for mutual legal assistance shall contain:

- (a) The identity of the authority making the request;
- (b) The subject matter and nature of the investigation, prosecution or judicial proceeding to which the request relates and the name and functions of the authority conducting the investigation, prosecution or judicial proceeding;
- (c) A summary of the relevant facts, except in relation to requests for the purpose of service of judicial documents;
- (d) A description of the assistance sought and details of any particular procedure that the requesting State Party wishes to be followed;
- (e) Where possible, the identity, location and nationality of any person concerned; and
- (f) The purpose for which the evidence, information or action is sought.

16. The requested State Party may request additional information when it appears necessary for the execution of the request in accordance with its domestic law or when it can facilitate such execution.

17. A request shall be executed in accordance with the domestic law of the requested State Party and, to the extent not contrary to the domestic law of the requested State Party and where possible, in accordance with the procedures specified in the request.

18. Wherever possible and consistent with fundamental principles of domestic law, when an individual is in the territory of a State Party and has to be heard as a witness or expert by the judicial authorities of another State Party, the first State Party may, at the request of the other, permit the hearing to take place by video conference if it is not possible or desirable for the individual in question to appear in person in the territory of the requesting State Party. States Parties may agree that the hearing shall be conducted by a judicial authority of the requesting State Party and attended by a judicial authority of the requested State Party.

19. The requesting State Party shall not transmit or use information or evidence furnished by the requested State Party for investigations, prosecutions or judicial proceedings other than those stated in the request without the prior consent of the requested State Party. Nothing in this paragraph shall prevent the requesting State Party from disclosing in its proceedings information or evidence that is exculpatory to an accused person. In the latter case, the requesting State Party shall notify the requested State Party prior to the disclosure and, if so requested, consult with the requested State Party. If, in an exceptional case, advance notice is not possible, the requesting State Party shall inform the requested State Party of the disclosure without delay.

20. The requesting State Party may require that the requested State Party keep confidential the fact and substance of the request, except to the extent necessary to execute the request. If the requested State Party cannot comply with the requirement of confidentiality, it shall promptly inform the requesting State Party.

21. Mutual legal assistance may be refused:

- (a) If the request is not made in conformity with the provisions of this article;
- (b) If the requested State Party considers that execution of the request is likely to prejudice its sovereignty, security, ordre public or other essential interests;
- (c) If the authorities of the requested State Party would be prohibited by its domestic law from carrying out the action requested with regard to any similar offence, had it been subject to investigation, prosecution or judicial proceedings under their own jurisdiction;
- (d) If it would be contrary to the legal system of the requested State Party relating to mutual legal assistance for the request to be granted.

22. States Parties may not refuse a request for mutual legal assistance on the sole ground that the offence is also considered to involve fiscal matters.

23. Reasons shall be given for any refusal of mutual legal assistance.

24. The requested State Party shall execute the request for mutual legal assistance as soon as possible and shall take as full account as possible of any deadlines suggested by the requesting State Party and for which reasons are given, preferably in the request. The requesting State Party may make reasonable requests for information on the status and progress of measures taken by the requested State Party to satisfy its request. The requested State Party shall respond to reasonable requests by the requesting State Party on the status, and progress in its handling, of the request. The requesting State Party shall promptly inform the requested State Party when the assistance sought is no longer required.

25. Mutual legal assistance may be postponed by the requested State Party on the ground that it interferes with an ongoing investigation, prosecution or judicial proceeding.

26. Before refusing a request pursuant to paragraph 21 of this article or postponing its execution pursuant to paragraph 25 of this article, the requested State Party shall consult with the requesting State Party to consider whether assistance may be granted subject to such terms and conditions as it deems necessary. If the requesting State Party accepts assistance subject to those conditions, it shall comply with the conditions.

27. Without prejudice to the application of paragraph 12 of this article, a witness, expert or other person who, at the request of the requesting State Party, consents to give evidence in a proceeding or to assist in an investigation, prosecution or judicial proceeding in the territory of the requesting State Party shall not be prosecuted, detained, punished or subjected to any other restriction of his or her personal liberty in that territory in respect of acts, omissions or convictions prior to his or her departure from the territory of the requested State Party. Such safe conduct shall cease when the witness, expert or other person having had, for a period of fifteen consecutive days or for any period agreed upon by the States Parties from the date on which he or she has been officially informed that his or her presence is no longer required by the judicial authorities, an opportunity of leaving, has nevertheless remained voluntarily in the territory of the requesting State Party or, having left it, has returned of his or her own free will.

28. The ordinary costs of executing a request shall be borne by the requested State Party, unless otherwise agreed by the States Parties concerned. If expenses of a substantial or extraordinary nature are or will be required to fulfil the request, the States Parties shall consult to determine the terms and conditions under which the request will be executed, as well as the manner in which the costs shall be borne.

29. The requested State Party:

(a) Shall provide to the requesting State Party copies of government records, documents or information in its possession that under its domestic law are available to the general public;

(b) May, at its discretion, provide to the requesting State Party in whole, in part or subject to such conditions as it deems appropriate, copies of any government records, documents or information in its possession that under its domestic law are not available to the general public.

30. States Parties shall consider, as may be necessary, the possibility of concluding bilateral or multilateral agreements or arrangements that would serve the purposes of, give practical effect to or enhance the provisions of this article.

Transfer of criminal proceedings

States Parties shall consider the possibility of transferring to one another proceedings for the prosecution of an offence established in accordance with this Convention in cases where such transfer is considered to be in the interests of the proper administration of justice, in particular in cases where several jurisdictions are involved, with a view to concentrating the prosecution.

Law enforcement cooperation

1. States Parties shall cooperate closely with one another, consistent with their respective domestic legal and administrative systems, to enhance the effectiveness of law enforcement action to combat the offences covered by this Convention. States Parties shall, in particular, take effective measures:

(a) To enhance and, where necessary, to establish channels of communication between their competent authorities, agencies and services in order to facilitate the secure and rapid exchange of information concerning all aspects of the offences covered by this Convention, including, if the States Parties concerned deem it appropriate, links with other criminal activities;

(b) To cooperate with other States Parties in conducting inquiries with respect to offences covered by this Convention concerning:

(i) The identity, whereabouts and activities of persons suspected of involvement in such offences or the location of other persons concerned;

(ii) The movement of proceeds of crime or property derived from the commission of such offences;

(iii) The movement of property, equipment or other instrumentalities used or intended for use in the commission of such offences;

(c) To provide, where appropriate, necessary items or quantities of substances for analytical or investigative purposes;

(d) To exchange, where appropriate, information with other States Parties concerning specific means and methods used to commit offences covered by this Convention, including the use of false identities, forged, altered or false documents and other means of concealing activities;

(e) To facilitate effective coordination between their competent authorities, agencies and services and to promote the exchange of personnel and other experts, including, subject to bilateral agreements or arrangements between the States Parties concerned, the posting of liaison officers;

(f) To exchange information and coordinate administrative and other measures taken as appropriate for the purpose of early identification of the offences covered by this Convention.

2. With a view to giving effect to this Convention, States Parties shall consider entering into bilateral or multilateral agreements or arrangements on direct co-operation between their law enforcement agencies and, where such agreements or arrangements already exist, amending them. In the absence of such agreements or arrangements between the States Parties concerned, the States Parties may consider this Convention to be the basis for mutual law enforcement cooperation in respect of the offences covered by this Convention. Whenever appropriate, States Parties shall make full use of agreements or arrangements, including international or regional organizations, to enhance the cooperation between their law enforcement agencies.

3. States Parties shall endeavour to cooperate with their means to respond to offences covered by this Convention committed through the use of modern technology.

Article 49

Joint investigations

States Parties shall consider concluding bilateral or multilateral agreements or arrangements whereby, in relation to matters that are the subject of investigations, prosecutions or judicial proceedings in one or more States, the competent authorities concerned may establish joint investigative bodies. In the absence of such agreements or arrangements, joint investigations may be undertaken by agreement on a case-by-case basis. The States Parties involved shall ensure that the sovereignty of the State Party in whose territory such investigation is to take place is fully respected.

Special investigative techniques

1. In order to combat corruption effectively, each State Party shall, to the extent permitted by the basic principles of its domestic legal system and in accordance with the conditions prescribed by its domestic law, take such measures as may be necessary, within its means, to allow for the appropriate use by its competent authorities of controlled delivery and, where it deems appropriate, other special investigative techniques, such as electronic or other forms of surveillance and undercover operations, within its territory, and to allow for the admissibility in court of evidence derived therefrom.

2. For the purpose of investigating the offences covered by this Convention, States Parties are encouraged to conclude, when necessary, appropriate bilateral or multilateral agreements or arrangements for using such special investigative techniques in the context of cooperation at the international level. Such agreements or arrangements shall be concluded and implemented in full compliance with the principle of sovereign equality of States and shall be carried out strictly in accordance with the terms of those agreements or arrangements.

3. In the absence of an agreement or arrangement as set forth in paragraph 2 of this article, decisions to use such special investigative techniques at the international level shall be made on a case-by-case basis and may, when necessary, take into consideration financial arrangements and understandings with respect to the exercise of jurisdiction by the States Parties concerned.

4. Decisions to use controlled delivery at the international level may, with the consent of the States Parties concerned, include methods such as intercepting and allowing the goods or funds to continue intact or be removed or replaced in whole or in part.

Chapter V

Asset recovery

General provision

The return of assets pursuant to this chapter is a fundamental principle of this Convention, and States Parties shall afford one another the widest measure of cooperation and assistance in this regard.

Article 52

Prevention and detection of transfers of proceeds of crime

1. Without prejudice to article 14 of this Convention, each State Party shall take such measures as may be necessary, in accordance with its domestic law, to require financial institutions within its jurisdiction to verify the identity of customers, to take reasonable steps to determine the identity of beneficial owners of funds deposited into high-value accounts and to conduct enhanced scrutiny of accounts sought or maintained by or on behalf of individuals who are, or have been, entrusted with prominent public functions and their family members and close associates. Such enhanced scrutiny shall be reasonably designed to detect suspicious transactions for the purpose of reporting to competent authorities and should not be so construed as to discourage or prohibit financial institutions from doing business with any legitimate customer.

2. In order to facilitate implementation of the measures provided for in paragraph 1 of this article, each State Party, in accordance with its domestic law and inspired by relevant initiatives of regional, inter-regional and multilateral organizations against money-laundering, shall:

(a) Issue advisories regarding the types of natural or legal person to whose accounts financial institutions within its jurisdiction will be expected to apply enhanced scrutiny, the types of accounts and transactions to which to pay particular attention and appropriate account-opening, maintenance and record-keeping measures to take concerning such accounts; and

(b) Where appropriate, notify financial institutions within its jurisdiction, at the request of another State Party or on its own initiative, of the identity of particular natural or legal persons to whose accounts such institutions will be expected to apply enhanced scrutiny, in addition to those whom the financial institutions may otherwise identify.

3. In the context of paragraph 2 (a) of this article, each State Party shall implement measures to ensure that its financial institutions maintain adequate records, over an appropriate period of time, of accounts and transactions involving the persons mentioned in paragraph 1 of this article, which should, as a minimum, contain information relating to the identity of the customer as well as, as far as possible, of the beneficial owner.

4. With the aim of preventing and detecting transfers of proceeds of offences established in accordance with this Convention, each State Party shall implement appropriate and effective measures to prevent, with the help of its regulatory and oversight bodies, the establishment of banks that have no physical presence and that are not affiliated with a regulated financial group. Moreover, States Parties may consider requiring their financial institutions to refuse to enter into or continue a correspondent banking relationship with such institutions and to guard against establishing relations with foreign financial institutions that permit their accounts to be used by banks that have no physical presence and that are not affiliated with a regulated financial group.

5. Each State Party shall consider establishing, in accordance with its domestic law, effective financial disclosure systems for appropriate public officials and shall provide for appropriate sanctions for non-compliance. Each State Party shall also consider taking such measures as may be necessary to permit its competent authorities to share that information with the competent authorities in other States Parties when necessary to investigate, claim and recover proceeds of offences established in accordance with this Convention.

6. Each State Party shall consider taking such measures as may be necessary, in accordance with its domestic law, to require appropriate public officials having an interest in or signature or other authority over a financial account in a foreign country to report that relationship to appropriate authorities and to maintain appropriate records related to such accounts. Such measures shall also provide for appropriate sanctions for non-compliance.

Article 53

Measures for direct recovery of property

Each State Party shall, in accordance with its domestic law:

(a) Take such measures as may be necessary to permit another State Party to initiate civil action in its courts to establish title to or ownership of property acquired through the commission of an offence established in accordance with this Convention;

(b) Take such measures as may be necessary to permit its courts to order those who have committed offences established in accordance with this Convention to pay compensation or damages to another State Party that has been harmed by such offences; and

(c) Take such measures as may be necessary to permit its courts or competent authorities, when having to decide on confiscation, to recognize another State Party's claim as a legitimate owner of property acquired through the commission of an offence established in accordance with this Convention.

Article 54

Corrupt practices and illegal transfer of funds

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/244 [YUN 2002, p. 1120], the Secretary-General transmitted a July report [A/58/125] prepared by the UN Centre for International Crime Prevention on preventing and combating corrupt practices and the transfer of funds of illicit origin and returning such assets to the countries of origin. Recalling also the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, which underlined that fighting corruption at all levels is a priority, and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Taking note of the global study on the transfer of funds of illicit origin, especially funds derived from acts of corruption, submitted to the Ad Hoc Committee for the Negotiation of a Convention against Corruption, which noted the substantial amounts of money involved, the economic hardships for countries that are victims of such corruption and the enormous obstacles to recovery faced by those countries,

Noting that Member States have different institutional arrangements and capacities to ensure the implementation of legislation on preventing corrupt practices and transfer of assets of illicit origin and returning such assets to the countries of origin,

Considering that the prevention of corrupt practices and transfer of assets of illicit origin and the return of such assets to the countries of origin have not been adequately regulated by all national legislations and international legal instruments,

Emphasizing the responsibilities of all Governments to enact laws aimed at preventing and combating corrupt practices and transfer of assets of illicit origin and return of such assets to the countries of origin,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on preventing and combating corrupt practices and transfer of funds of illicit origin and returning such assets to the countries of origin;

6. Invites all Member States and competent regional economic integration organizations to sign, ratify and fully implement the United Nations Convention against Corruption as soon as possible in order to ensure its rapid entry into force;

7. Encourages all Member States that have not yet done so to enact laws to prevent and combat corrupt practices and the transfer of illicitly acquired assets and for the return of such assets to the countries of origin, in accordance with the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

8. Also encourages all Member States that have not yet done so to require financial institutions to properly implement comprehensive due diligence and vigilance programmes that could facilitate transparency and prevent the placement of illicitly acquired funds;

9. Encourages subregional and regional cooperation, where appropriate, in the efforts to prevent and combat corrupt practices and the transfer of assets of illicit origin and for the return of such assets to the countries of origin;

10. Calls for further international cooperation, inter alia, through the United Nations system, in support of national, subregional and regional efforts to prevent and address the transfer of assets of illicit origin, as well as to return such assets to the countries of origin;

11. Requests the international community to provide, inter alia, technical assistance to support national efforts to strengthen human and institutional capacity aimed at preventing corrupt practices and the transfer of assets of illicit origin, returning such assets to the countries of origin and formulating strategies for mainstreaming and promoting transparency and integrity in both the public and private sector;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session a sub-item entitled "Preventing and combating corrupt practices and transfer of funds and assets of illicit origin and returning such funds and assets to the countries of origin".

Strategies for crime prevention

Combating terrorism

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/19 [YUN 2002, p. 1121], the Secretary-General, in March [E/CN.15/2003/9], summarized information received from 19 Member States on measures they had taken to strengthen international cooperation and technical assistance in preventing and combating terrorism, particularly on such matters as adherence to international instruments, implementation of relevant Security Council resolutions, regional instruments, bilateral agreements, national and international action to combat terrorism, national legal frameworks against terrorism, terrorism and organized crime, and support for the work UNODC against terrorism.

The report also described UN activities, particularly those of UNODC as part of its Global Programme against Terrorism. To support the establishment of a global legal framework against terrorism, a preparatory assistance project on strengthening the legal regime against terrorism was being implemented. As part of the project, a UN legislative guide to the 12 international anti-terrorism conventions and protocols and to the legislative actions required for their ratification was reviewed by a group of international experts (Siracusa, Italy, 3-5 December 2002). A web page containing the UN legislative guide and examples of national counter-terrorism legislation was also created.

The Secretary-General concluded that UN activities should be part of a tripartite strategy supporting global efforts to: dissuade disaffected groups from embracing terrorism; deny groups or individuals the means to carry out acts of terrorism; and sustain broad-based international cooperation in the struggle against terrorism.

The Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208] continued work on a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism (see p. 1338).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2003/30], adopted resolution 2003/22 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance in promoting the implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism within the framework of the activities of the Centre for International Crime Prevention

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 58/136 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/499], adopted resolution 58/136 without vote [agenda item 108].

Strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance in promoting the implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism within the framework of the activities of the Centre for International Crime Prevention

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions related to the prevention and suppression of terrorism, as well as Security Council resolutions 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001, 1377 (2001) of 12 November 2001 and 1456(2003) of 20 January 2003,

Kidnapping

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/16 [YUN 2002, p. 1117], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [E/CN.15/2003/7 & Add.1] on international cooperation to prevent, combat and eliminate kidnapping and to provide assistance to victims. The report summarized replies received from 64 Member States and three UN entities to a survey on the practice and extent of kidnapping, and the legislative, law enforcement, victim support and international cooperative initiatives taken in response to the problem. All responding countries considered kidnapping to be a serious crime and treated it accordingly. They noted that the various types of kidnapping suggested that the role of organized criminal and terrorist groups differed from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. The report pointed to a relatively dramatic increase in some States in kidnappings carried out within and between criminal groups and the development of new varieties of kidnapping. Although steps had been taken in a number of jurisdictions to counter kidnapping, it was too early to judge their success; lessons were emerging on countering the crime and there was scope for increased exchange of information on best practices and technical cooperation.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2003/30], adopted resolution 2003/28 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

The Economic and Social Council,

Concerned at the practice of kidnapping in various countries of the world and at the harmful effects of that crime on victims and their families, and resolved to support measures to assist and protect them and to promote their recovery,

Reiterating that the kidnapping of persons under any circumstances and for any purpose constitutes a serious crime and a violation of individual freedom and undermines human rights,

Recalling its resolution 2002/16 of 24 July 2002, in which it requested the Secretary-General, in coordination with competent entities of the United Nations system, to submit a progress report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twelfth session on the factual and legal situation of kidnapping throughout the world, including the situation of victims,

1. Vigorously condemns and rejects once again the practice of kidnapping, in any circumstances and for any purpose, including kidnapping by organized criminal groups and terrorist groups;

2. Stresses that organized criminal groups and terrorist groups as well as all perpetrators are responsible for any harm or death that results from a kidnapping committed by them and should be punished accordingly;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the progress report of the Secretary-General, submitted pursuant to resolution 2002/16;

4. Urges Member States that have taken new measures in the context of the present resolution to co-

8. Calls upon Member States that have not yet done so, in furtherance of the fight against kidnapping, to strengthen their measures against money-laundering and to engage in international cooperation and mutual assistance, inter alia, in the tracing, detection, freezing and confiscation of proceeds of kidnapping in order to combat organized criminal groups and terrorist groups;

9. Requests the Secretary-General, drawing on extrabudgetary funds or voluntary contributions, to provide technical assistance to States, upon request, to enable them to strengthen their capacity to combat kidnapping, including establishing, as appropriate, special law enforcement and prosecution units and mechanisms for cooperation with civil society and international cooperation;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to complete his report on the implementation of resolution 2002/16, including in it information on the practice of kidnapping and on relevant domestic measures that have been taken, including those related to support and assistance to the victims and their families, and to submit it to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its thirteenth session.

Recognizing that, in many countries, criminal activities have become a major threat to public safety in large urban areas,

Expressing particular concern for children at risk in large urban areas,

Recognizing that urban criminality in specific situations hampers economic growth and weakens state institutions, thereby undermining efforts to promote sustainable development and reduce poverty,

Recognizing also the need for a balanced, integrated approach to fighting urban crime, including activities addressing such root causes as poverty, social marginalization and exclusion and lack of opportunities for young people,

Recognizing further that crime prevention strategies and actions should be based on a broad, gender-sensitive, multidisciplinary foundation of knowledge about proven and promising practices,

Reiterating the need for more regional and international collaboration in the fight against urban crime,

1. Encourages Member States to draw upon the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime, annexed to its resolution 2002/13, when developing, implementing and evaluating urban crime prevention programmes and projects, and to share their experience gained in that regard, including in their inputs to the report of the Secretary-General requested in that resolution;

2. Also encourages Member States to establish effective policies and to pursue the implementation of such policies, where appropriate, to protect children at risk in urban areas;

3. Requests the Centre for International Crime Prevention of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in consultation with Member States, the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network, the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) and other relevant entities of the United Nations system to continue to assist Member States, upon request, to prepare proposals for the provision of technical assistance in the area of crime prevention, in accordance with the

5. Again calls upon all relevant United Nations organizations and bodies and international financial institutions to give appropriate consideration to the inclusion of urban crime prevention and law enforcement projects in their assistance programmes;

6. Recommends that, in the programme of the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, due attention be given to the issue of urban crime;

7. Welcomes the inclusion of urban crime and youth at risk as one of the issues for the workshops to be held at the Eleventh Congress, which will permit an in-depth discussion of the subject at the regional preparatory meetings for the Congress.

UN standards and norms

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/15 [YUN 2002, p. 1124], the Secretary-General convened the Meeting of Experts on the Application of United Nations Standards and Norms in Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (Stadtschlaining, Austria, 10-12 February) [E/CN.15/2003/10/Add.1]. The Meeting evaluated the progress made in the application of the standards and norms, reviewed the current system of reporting on their application and presented proposals on the future application of the standards and norms. The Meeting adopted a series of recommendations addressed to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, Member States and other entities and UNODC.

The Secretary-General concluded that the information provided indicated that the use and application of the standards and norms resulted in changes and reforms being introduced in legal systems in many parts of the world with a view to upgrading and strengthening the capacity of criminal justice systems.

6. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary funds, an intergovernmental expert group meeting on the basis of adequate and equitable geographical representation to prepare proposals to be considered by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its thirteenth session in relation to:

(a) The design of information-gathering instruments that are short, simple, complete and understandable in relation to select groups of standards and norms referred to in paragraph 3 above and that are aimed at identifying and addressing specific problems in Member States requesting assistance and at providing an analytical framework with a view to improving technical cooperation;

(b) New ways and means for maximizing the effectiveness of technical assistance to Member States in specific areas of crime prevention and criminal justice, including in the context of the reconstruction of criminal justice institutions in peacekeeping and post-conflict situations, in particular as regards capacity-building and the promotion of the rule of law;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission at its fifteenth session on progress made in the first targeted collection of information on the group of standards and norms referred to in paragraph 3 (a) and (b) above, including how that collection of information relates to requests by Member States for technical assistance.

Annex

Recommendations of the Meeting of Experts on the Application of United Nations Standards and Norms in Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

Recommendations to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

1. The application and formulation of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice should continue to be accorded high priority by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice. The standing agenda item on those standards and norms should be maintained and appropriate time and resources should be devoted to it.

2. Possible future United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice should focus on emerging practices in crime prevention or criminal justice, in order to facilitate the development of detailed practical guidelines for use by interested States in carrying out specific tasks.

3. The Commission should establish a mechanism, such as a group of experts and/or a special rapporteur, to supplement existing procedures for undertaking periodic reviews of the application of selected United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice in order to ensure their promotion, as well as to make appropriate recommendations to the Commission.

4. The focus in subsequent review cycles should be on identifying difficulties that have been encountered in the application of United Nations standards and norms, in crime prevention and criminal justice, ways in which technical assistance can be used to overcome those difficulties and desirable practices in crime prevention and control.

5. The resulting data and other information should be shared in order to enhance the level and impact of technical cooperation in the world, the overall objective being to promote criminal justice reform in line with applicable United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

6. The entire review process should be guided by the need to relate it to the main programme priorities of the United Nations, as noted in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, including strengthening the rule of law, good governance, sustainable development and the alleviation of poverty.

7. In line with the programme priorities of the United Nations, the Commission, at each of its sessions, should seek to focus on the application of a cluster of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice. The Commission may wish to consider the possibility of reviewing a presentation of a particular cluster of standards and norms and their application in specific countries. Such a presentation could be prepared in cooperation with the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network.

8. In redesigning the information-gathering mechanisms and within the limits of current programme budget resources, the Commission should examine and propose focusing the future review process on selected clusters of instruments with the most widespread potential and relevance for application in criminal justice reforms in the world, in the following order of priority, bearing in mind gender as a cross-cutting issue, and grouped into clusters as follows:

(a) Juvenile justice and prison reform, including alternatives to imprisonment and restorative justice;

(b) The conduct of law enforcement and criminal justice practitioners, including the integrity of the judiciary;

(c) Public security and crime prevention;

(d) The treatment of victims and witnesses;

(e) Legal, institutional and practical arrangements for international cooperation (model treaties).

9. The Commission should request donor States and relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental institutions to support criminal justice reforms, in accordance with United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, in countries requesting assistance. The Commission could rely on a roster of national and regional experts who could, upon request, provide technical assistance and advice on the use and application of selected standards and norms.

10. The Commission should encourage donor countries to make financial contributions to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund. Contributions should be directed towards technical cooperation projects for implementing and promoting United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, as well as organizing meetings of experts to identify priority areas for the development of future standards and norms.

Recommendations to Member States and other entities

11. Each of the Member States should be encouraged to identify at least one contact person who could serve as a knowledgeable source for the analysis of the State's response concerning the application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

12. Member States should establish mechanisms and provide resources at the national level for promoting and monitoring the application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

13. Focused efforts should be made to obtain the commitment of policy makers and criminal justice managers to the implementation of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

14. Member States should publish and disseminate, in their local languages, the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

15. United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice should be easily accessible and explained in understandable language.

16. Member States, financial institutions and development agencies should support projects for the implementation of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

17. Member States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and interregional, regional and national training and educational institutions should vigorously promote programmes and projects that advance the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

18. National institutions and non-governmental organizations should integrate United Nations standards and norms fully into their relevant training programmes.

Recommendations to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime

19. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should emphasize in its organizational structure and operations the essential role of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

20. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should assist Member States, upon request, in the application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice and in the development of projects.

21. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should seek to ensure that the relevant entities within the Secretariat and in the field are fully aware of the importance of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice for building and maintaining the rule of law.

22. Well-focused efforts should be undertaken to encourage officials in peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations and their counterparts to apply United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice.

23. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should identify opportunities for sharing data and other information on United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice with Governments and with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations.

24. The information provided by Member States on the application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice should be distributed by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime via the World Wide Web.

25. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should encourage financial institutions, development agencies and non-governmental organizations to expand their technical assistance programmes for improving access to justice and the rule of law.

26. The information-gathering mechanisms used by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should be reviewed in order to bring them in line with the overall programme priorities of the United Nations. The goal should be to redesign the mechanisms in a more comprehensive, consistent and operational manner, so that the collected data and other information are more relevant to those priorities. The goal should also be to enhance cooperation among respondents, both in the collection of data and in the execution of technical cooperation projects.

27. New information-gathering mechanisms should be focused on identifying difficulties encountered in application and desirable practices. The mechanisms should be based on the present United Nations priorities unless the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in 2005, identifies new priorities.

28. Bearing in mind the priorities, the new information-gathering mechanisms should be conceptualized and existing mechanisms reviewed along the following parameters:

(a) Standards and norms related primarily to persons in custody, non-custodial sanctions and juvenile and restorative justice;

(b) Standards and norms related primarily to good governance, the independence of the judiciary and the integrity of criminal justice personnel;

(c) Standards and norms related primarily to crime prevention and victim issues;

(d) Standards and norms related primarily to legal, institutional and practical arrangements for international cooperation.

29. Reviews of United Nations standards and norms related primarily to capital punishment should be conducted pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 1995/57 of 28 July 1995, in which the Council recommended that the quinquennial reports of the Secretary-General should continue to cover the implementation of the safeguards guaranteeing protection of the rights of those facing the death penalty.

30. In gathering information on the above-mentioned priorities, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should also focus its efforts on practical measures that make it possible to determine their operational usefulness in restoring or maintaining law and order, with particular reference to developing countries, countries with economies in transition and post-conflict situations.

31. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should continue to explore the possibility of additional approaches and techniques in information-gathering in order to develop even more concise, simplified and cross-sectoral methods.

32. The survey instruments should be designed to be short, easy to complete and comprehensible.

33. The Secretary-General is requested to involve the regional institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network in the review and design of the information-gathering instruments and the analysis of information collected.

34. Procedures should be developed according to which the Secretary-General, in reporting on the application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, would be able to utilize not only other relevant information available within the United Nations, but also the expertise of specialized agencies, relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and academic institutions.

Recommendations on training

35. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should continue to develop and produce manuals, modules and tools to be used in providing training on United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, to carry out a limited number of such training courses and workshops and to coordinate such training with other United Nations entities.

36. A training unit should be created within the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and resources should be allocated for training and coordination functions.

37. To the maximum extent possible, the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network should be utilized in the planning and conduct of such training activities.

38. In cooperation with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should develop basic training materials for peacekeeping and peace-building operations.

Recommendations on technical cooperation

39. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should establish rosters of national and regional experts who would be able to provide, upon request, technical assistance and advice on the application of particular types of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice. Such rosters should be developed in accordance with the different clusters of such standards and norms.

40. The advisory services of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in relation to United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice should be enhanced. Projects should be evaluated in the light of the information gathered. The lessons learned should be incorporated into future planning so that the capacity to execute technical assistance projects can be improved.

41. At the request of Member States, practical projects should be developed, in particular for victims' support services and witness protection, prison reform and alternatives to imprisonment, juvenile justice and restorative justice.

Human resources development

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/189 [YUN 2001, p. 1047], which recognized the importance of developing human resources as a means of promoting economic growth, eradicating poverty, participating more effectively in the world economic system and benefiting from globalization, the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/58/348], described measures to implement the resolution. The report focused on the issues addressed in resolution 56/189, particularly the need to adopt a comprehensive approach to human resources development, increase investment in human resources development and promote strategies for information and communication technologies, collaboration with the private sector and NGOs, and the harmonization of UN system efforts and partnerships. The report called for human resources development strategies to include developing capacities for all generations and for groups of special concern, such as persons with disabilities, older persons, youth and indigenous peoples, taking into consideration gender equality. It recommended increasing investments to provide access to health care and education to all persons living in poverty, including groups with special needs. The HIV/AIDS pandemic required combining short-term humanitarian responses with long-term development measures to rebuild the human capacity lost to AIDS. The development of core work skills (such as communication and problem-solving) should form an important part of basic education and literacy programmes. Policies for expanding the use of technologies should encourage the use of local resources, including traditional information systems. Efforts should be made to increase the flow of development financing and its greater allocation to human resources development.

UN research and training institutes

UN Institute for Training and Research

A report [A/59/14] of the Executive Director of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) described the Institute's activities during the period from 1 July 2002 to 31 December 2003. He reviewed UNITAR's programmes in international affairs management, which had increased to 150 different programmes and workshops or seminars organized annually, benefiting over 7,600 participants yearly; the activities of outposted offices in New York and at the regional office for Asia and the Pacific in Hiroshima, Japan, which was established in July; and activities related to training and capacity-building in sustainable development.

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/268 [YUN 2002, p. 1132], the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/183], provided an overview of UNITAR programmes. He said that, while the financial situation of the programmes funded through special-purpose grants was satisfactory, the UNITAR General Fund, made up of non-earmarked voluntary contributions, remained weak and vulnerable. The Secretariat and UNITAR had considered ways to solve the long-standing issue of rental and maintenance costs of the premises used in Geneva and New York and the payment of the accumulated debt of UNITAR to the United Nations.

An October report [A/58/544] of the Secretary-General on the financial viability of UNITAR, submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 57/292 (YUN 2002, p. 1375), covered the status of all voluntary contributions and the payment of the accumulated debt of the Institute, as well as provisions offered to other comparable organizations. Based on his consultations with the Institute, the Secretary-General put forward proposals on how to address the issue of past and future maintenance and rental costs. In order to compensate UNITAR for its expenditures under the General Fund relating to the provision of training in multilateral diplomacy and international affairs management to the diplomatic personnel of the missions to the United Nations free of charge, the Secretary-General proposed providing UNITAR with an annual subvention in an amount not exceeding its annual rental and maintenance costs ($165,630 in 2002), to be paid from the UN regular budget. That would require an additional provision of $331,300 over the resources proposed under section 29, Management and central support services, of the 2004-2005 biennial programme budget. He also proposed that UNITAR's debt of $321,184 to the United Nations should be paid within a five-year period.

In November [A/58/7/Add.10], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) presented its comments on the Secretary-General's report. It believed that the five-year period was too long to repay UNITAR's debt and recommended that the UNITAR Executive Director repay the amount as soon as possible. The possibility of releasing part of the accrued interest on special-purpose grants so that it could be applied towards loan repayment should be explored.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/489, as orally revised], adopted resolution 58/223 without vote [agenda item 99 (a)].

United Nations Institute for Training and Research The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/188 of 16 December 1996, 52/206 of 18 December 1997, 53/195 of 15 December 1998, 54/229 of 22 December 1999, 55/208 of 20 December 2000, 56/208 of 21 December 2001 and 57/268 of 20 December 2002,

Welcoming the recent progress made by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research in its various programmes and activities, including the improved cooperation that has been established with other organizations of the United Nations system and with regional and national institutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the Governments and private institutions that have made or pledged financial and other contributions to the Institute,

Noting with concern that contributions to the General Fund have not increased, while the participation of the developed countries in training programmes in New York and Geneva is increasing,

Noting that the bulk of the resources contributed to the Institute is directed to the Special Purpose Grants Fund rather than to the General Fund, and stressing the need to address that unbalanced situation,

Noting also that the Institute receives no subsidy from the United Nations regular budget and that it provides training programmes to all Member States free of charge,

Reiterating that training activities should be accorded a more visible and larger role in support of the management of international affairs and in the execution of the economic and social development programmes of the United Nations system,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Reaffirms the importance of a coordinated United Nations system-wide approach to research and training, based on an effective coherent strategy and an effective division of work among the relevant institutions and bodies;
3. Also reaffirms the relevance of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research in view of the growing importance of training within the United Nations and the training requirements of States and the relevance of the training-related research activities undertaken by the Institute within its mandate;
4. Welcomes the progress made in building partnerships between the Institute and other organizations and bodies of the United Nations system with respect to their training programmes, and in this context underlines the need to develop further and to expand the scope of those partnerships, in particular at the country level;
5. Also welcomes the establishment of the Institute's Hiroshima Office for Asia and the Pacific in Hiroshima, Japan;
6. Requests the Board of Trustees of the Institute to continue to ensure fair and equitable geographical distribution and transparency in the preparation of the programmes and in the employment of experts, and in this regard stresses that the courses of the Institute should focus primarily on development issues and the management of international affairs;
7. Renews its appeal to all Governments, in particular those of developed countries, and to private institutions that have not yet contributed financially or otherwise to the Institute, to give it their generous financial and other support, and urges the States that have interrupted their voluntary contributions to consider resuming them in view of the successful restructuring and revitalization of the Institute;

8. Encourages the Board of Trustees of the Institute to continue its efforts to resolve the critical financial situation of the Institute, in particular with a view to broadening its donor base and to increasing the contributions to the General Fund;

9. Also encourages the Board of Trustees to consider diversifying further the venues of the events organized by the Institute and to include the cities hosting regional commissions, in order to promote greater participation and reduce costs;

10. Stresses the need to take action to resolve expeditiously the issues related to the Institute's rent, debt, rental rates and maintenance costs, taking into account its financial situation, and welcomes the consideration of those issues by the Fifth Committee;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution, including details on the status of contributions to and the financial situation of the Institute.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly, in resolution 58/272 (see p. 1417), decided to cancel UNITAR's debt in respect of rent and maintenance charges in the amount of $321,184 and requested the Secretary-General to invite the UNITAR Board of Trustees to rationalize the financial structure of the Institute, including through the possible application of a consistent programme support rate to the Special Purpose Grants Fund in order to bring it in line with the standard rate applied by the United Nations. It decided to revert to the matter at its fifth-ninth (2004) session.

University for Peace

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1050], the Secretary-General, in October [A/58/430], described progress in revitalizing the Costa Rica-based University for Peace. As part of its five-year expansion and revitalization plan, a newly designed academic programme was being implemented, including five new master's degree programmes on peace and security issues and a number of short courses for mid-career professionals. The course materials would be disseminated to partner universities worldwide. The Secretary-General noted that the University's five-year development strategy would be concluded by December 2005. The first phase of development of the academic programme would be financed from tuition and scholarship fees, the regional activities would be self-sustaining and the distance education programme would be revenue generating. Full implementation of the programme depended on broad government support and on financial resources for the University's institutional functioning and the implementation and dissemination of its academic programme.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 November [meeting 59], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/12 [draft: A/58/L.26 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 25].

University for Peace

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/2 of 22 October 2001, in which it recalled that, in its resolution 34/111 of 14 December 1979, it had approved the idea of establishing the University for Peace as a specialized international centre for higher education, research and the dissemination of knowledge relative to peace and its universal promotion within the United Nations system, and in which it also recalled its resolution 35/55 of 5 December 1980, in which it approved the establishment of the University for Peace, as well as all preceding resolutions on this item,

Noting that in 1991 the Secretary-General, with the assistance of the United Nations Development Programme, established a Trust Fund for Peace consisting of voluntary contributions in order to provide the University with the means necessary to extend its sphere of activity to the whole world, taking full advantage of its potential capacity for education, research and support of the United Nations and to carry out its mandate of promoting peace in the world,

Noting with appreciation the vigorous actions taken by the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and with the encouragement and support of the Government of Costa Rica, to revitalize the University,

Recognizing the important and varied activities carried out by the University during the period from 2001 to 2003, with the valuable assistance and contributions of Governments, foundations and non-governmental organizations, in particular the progress made in the development and implementation of the academic programme and the expansion of its scope worldwide as part of a five-year programme of expansion and revitalization,

Noting with satisfaction the activities directed towards expanding the University's educational and research programmes to Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Central Asia and Latin America and the Caribbean,

Also noting with satisfaction the progress made in the development of teaching programmes at the master's level, short courses, programmes to disseminate course materials and distance education and the establishment of a digital library on peace-related issues,

Considering the importance of promoting education that fosters peaceful coexistence among people, including respect for the life, dignity and integrity of human beings, irrespective of their nationality, race, sex, religion or culture, as well as friendship and solidarity among peoples,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General outlining the progress made in revitalizing the University for Peace, especially in regard to implementation of the five-year programme of expansion and revitalization;

2. Requests the Secretary-General, in view of the important work of the University for Peace and its potential role in developing new concepts and approaches to security through research and dialogue in order to respond effectively to emerging threats to peace, to consider further ways to strengthen cooperation between the United Nations and the University for Peace;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to consider using the services of the University as part of his conflict-resolution and peace-building efforts and in the promotion of the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace;

4. Invites Member States, intergovernmental bodies, non-governmental organizations and interested individuals to contribute to the Trust Fund for Peace or to the budget of the University;

5. Invites Member States to accede to the International Agreement for the Establishment of the University for Peace, thereby demonstrating their support for an educational institution devoted to the promotion of a universal culture of peace;

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the University for Peace would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

United Nations University

The Council of the United Nations University (UNU) (Tokyo, Japan 1-5 December) [A/59/31] considered the 2004-2005 academic programme and budget; a review of the financial situation of UNU, including the management of the UNU Endowment Fund; the UNU personnel policy; a policy paper on new UNU associated institutions; a policy on the role of UNU support groups and associations; a UNU-wide strategy for follow-up of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]; and a report on UNU's strategy for future activities in and on Africa.

During 2003, the UNU peace and governance programme focused its research and policy analysis activities in four thematic areas: conflict and security; human rights and ethics; policy and institutional frameworks; and international order and international justice. The focus of the UNU environment and sustainable development programme was on the interactions between human activities and the natural environment, and the implications for sustainable human management of natural resources. Networking and capacity-building, particularly in developing countries, were given high priority. In 2003, the programme regrouped its activities under four broad themes: sustainable urbanization; managing fragile ecosystems; solutions to water crises; and environmental governance and information.

Chapter X

Women

During 2003, United Nations efforts to advance the status of women and ensure their rights continued to be guided by the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted by the Fourth (1995) World Conference on Women. The outcome of the General Assembly's twenty-third (2000) special session, to appraise and assess implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (Beijing+5), prompted further action and initiatives for the advancement of women.

The Commission on the Status of Women, at its forty-seventh session in March, recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption agreed conclusions on women's participation in and access to the media and information and communication technologies and their impact on and use as an instrument for the advancement and empowerment of women, which the Council endorsed in July. The Council also took action on assistance to Palestinian women; women and girls in Afghanistan; mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the UN system; and the revitalization and strengthening of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW). The Commission also adopted and brought to the attention of the Council a resolution on women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS; and a decision on communications concerning the status of women.

The Assembly adopted resolutions on women and political participation; violence against women migrant workers; improvement of the situation of women in rural areas; elimination of domestic violence against women; the girl child; an in-depth study on all forms of violence against women; women in development; improvement of the status of women in the United Nations; and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. The United Nations Development Fund for Women continued to focus on women's economic security and political empowerment, and to advocate gender mainstreaming and equality.

INSTRAW continued its research and training, and networking and information dissemination, in particular through the gender awareness information and networking system. Economic and Social Council amendments to the Institute's statute included the replacement of its Board of Trustees with an Executive Board and the empowerment of the Secretary-General to appoint its Director, taking into account the list of candidates proposed by the Board. In December, the Secretary-General appointed Carmen Moreno as the Institute's new Director.

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and Beijing+5

During 2003, the Commission on the Status of Women, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly considered follow-up to the 1995 Fourth World Conference on Women, particularly the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170], and the political declaration and further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted at the twenty-third (2000) special session of the Assembly (Beijing+5) by resolution S/23-2 [YUN 2000, p. 1084]. The political declaration had reaffirmed the commitment of Governments to the goals and objectives of the Fourth World Conference and to the implementation of the 12 critical areas of concern set forth in the Platform for Action: women and poverty; education and training of women; women and health; violence against women; women and armed conflict; women and the economy; women in power and decision-making; institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women; human rights and women; women and the media; women and the environment; and the girl child (see pp. 1167-1190 for action taken regarding the critical areas of concern). In the context of the follow-up, the issue of mainstreaming a gender perspective into UN policies and programmes was also addressed (see p. 1188).

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/182 [YUN 2002, p. 1137], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/58/166], described the steps taken by the Assembly and its Main Committees, the Economic and Social Council and the United Nations Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women to promote the mainstreaming of gender perspectives into UN policies and programmes. The report highlighted action taken relating to the follow-up to the United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] and the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857).

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly call for continued efforts to include gender equality in reports; take further steps to provide greater attention to the follow-up and implementation of the resolutions and decisions addressing gender equality and the empowerment of women; ensure that gender perspectives were an integral part of all aspects of the implementation of the Millennium Declaration; and call for further attention to gender perspectives in the follow-up to and reporting on the Johannesburg Declaration and Plan of Implementation adopted by the World Summit on Sustainable Development. It might also wish to encourage further systematic attention to gender perspectives in the preparatory process for and outcome of the World Summit on the Information Society.

Critical areas of concern

Women in power and decision-making

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/501], adopted resolution 58/142 without vote [agenda item 110].

Women and political participation

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the obligations of all States to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms as stated in the Charter of the United Nations, and guided by the purposes and principles of human rights instruments,

Reaffirming also the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which states that everyone has the right to take part in the government of his or her country and the right of equal access to public service,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which states, inter alia, that every citizen shall have the right and opportunity to take part in the conduct of public affairs, directly or through freely chosen representatives, to vote and to be elected at genuine periodic elections and to have access, on general terms of equality, to public service in his or her country,

Recalling also the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, which states, inter alia, that States parties shall take all appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination against women in the political and public life of the country,

Recalling further the Convention on the Political Rights of Women, which states that women shall be, on equal terms with men and without any discrimination, entitled to vote in all elections, eligible for election to all publicly elected bodies established by national law and entitled to hold public office and to exercise all public functions established by national law,

Recalling the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", the United Nations Millennium Declaration and agreed conclusions 1997/2 on women in power and decision-making, adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women on 21 March 1997,

2. Invites Governments, as well as the private sector, non-governmental organizations and other actors of civil society:

(a) To develop mechanisms and training programmes that encourage women to participate in the electoral process and improve women's capacity to cast informed votes in free and fair elections;

(b) To encourage political parties to remove all barriers that directly or indirectly discriminate against the participation of women, in order to ensure that women have the right to participate fully at all levels of decision-making in all internal policy-making structures and nominating processes and in the leadership of political parties on equal terms with men;

(l) To develop programmes to educate and train women and girls in using the media and information and communication technologies in order to obtain and impart information, be informed voters, network, communicate with potential voters and raise campaign funds;

(m) To encourage the media to recognize the importance of women's participation in the political process, provide fair and balanced coverage of male and female candidates, cover participation in women's political organizations and ensure coverage of issues that have a particular impact on women;

Violence against women

In accordance with the multi-year (2002-2006) programme of work adopted by Economic and Social Council resolution 2001/4 [YUN 2001, p. 1084], the Commission on the Status of Women had before it a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.6/2003/7 & Corr.1] on women's human rights and elimination of all forms of violence against women and girls, as defined in the Beijing Platform for Action, [YUN 1995, p. 1170] and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, as annexed to Assembly resolutions S/23-2 [YUN 2000, p. 1084] and S/23-3 [ibid., p. 1085]. Owing to the broad nature of violence, the report focused on the one form of violence that had reached world-wide proportions—trafficking in women and girls.

The report reviewed activities undertaken by the UN system regarding trafficking in women and girls, which, the Secretary-General said, had expanded since the Assembly's 2000 special session. It described regional efforts against trafficking and summarized the discussion and recommendations of an expert group meeting on the issue in November 2002.

Commission action. In March, the Commission on the Status of Women held a panel discussion on women's human rights and elimination of all forms of violence against women and girls, as defined in the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome document of the Assembly's twenty-third special session, which focused on domestic violence and trafficking in women and girls.

On 25 March [E/2003/27 (dec. 47/103)], the Commission took note of the Secretary-General's report (above).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/501], adopted resolution 58/147 without vote [agenda item 110].

Elimination of domestic violence against women

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women and the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, as well as the follow-up action by the Commission on the Status of Women on violence against women and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Women migrant workers

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/131 [YUN 2001, p. 1058], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/58/161], summarized information received from Member States, UN system entities and intergovernmental bodies on measures they had taken to address the issue of violence against women migrant workers. The Secretary-General stated that, although a number of countries had taken measures to address the violence, information on their impact remained limited. The lack of comprehensive and timely data on the number of women migrants and the violence and discrimination they suffered remained an obstacle to understanding the scale of the phenomenon and made it more difficult to design policies to combat such violence and discrimination. Information was also needed on the gender-specific impact of labour and immigration legislation, especially in respect of the enjoyment by women migrant workers of the full range of human rights. The Secretary-General called for improving access to legal protection for women seeking to migrate in search of work, in order to reduce their vulnerability to exploitation, ill-treatment and trafficking; exploring the link between migration and trafficking and addressing the two issues, with a particular focus on the need to protect women from all forms of violence, irrespective of their immigrant status; encouraging Governments and other actors to provide information on migration and trafficking in their legislative and other measures; and encouraging other actors to place enhanced emphasis on migration and trafficking. Governments were urged to ratify international instruments dealing with migration issues, particularly the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (see p. 676), and the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and its supplementary Protocols on trafficking in persons and on migrant smuggling (see p. 1125).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/501], adopted resolution 58/143 without vote [agenda item 110].

Expressing deep concern at the continuing reports of grave abuses and acts of violence committed against women migrant workers,

Realizing that the movement of a significant number of women migrant workers may be facilitated and made possible by means of fraudulent or irregular documentation and sham marriages with the object of migration, that this may be facilitated through, among other things, the Internet, and that these women migrant workers are more vulnerable to abuse and exploitation,

Acknowledging the economic benefits that accrue to both the country of origin and the country of destination from the employment of women migrant workers,

Recognizing the importance of joint and collaborative approaches and strategies at the bilateral, regional, interregional and international levels in protecting and promoting the rights and welfare of women migrant workers, tain continuing dialogues to facilitate the exchange of information;

8. Also urges concerned Governments, in particular those of the countries of origin and destination, to support and allocate appropriate resources for programmes aimed at strengthening preventive action, in particular information for target groups, education and campaigns to increase public awareness of this issue at the national and grass-roots levels, in cooperation with non-governmental organizations;

9. Notes with appreciation the adoption by Member States, including countries of origin, transit and destination, of measures to inform women migrant workers of their rights and the benefits to which they are entitled, and encourages other Member States to adopt appropriate measures in this regard;

11. Encourages concerned Governments, in particular those of the countries of origin and destination, to support and, if they have not done so, to formulate and implement training programmes for their law enforcers, prosecutors and service providers with a view to instilling among those public sector workers the necessary skills and attitude to ensure the delivery of proper and professional interventions for women migrant workers who are subjected to abuse and violence;

12. Also encourages concerned Governments, in particular those of the countries of origin and destination, to adopt measures or strengthen existing ones to regulate the recruitment and deployment of women migrant workers, and to consider the adoption of appropriate legal measures against intermediaries who deliberately encourage the clandestine movement of workers and who exploit women migrant workers;

15. Encourages Member States to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to relevant International Labour Organization conventions and to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, as well as the Slavery Convention of 1926;

16. Welcomes the imminent entry into force of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and the adoption by the General Assembly of the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and encourages Governments to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the Protocols;

Women's health

Women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS

In a March resolution on women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS [E/2003/27 (res. 47/1)], the Commission on the Status of Women emphasized that the advancement of women was the key to reversing the pandemic. It called for enhanced efforts by all relevant actors to include a gender perspective in developing HIV/AIDS programmes and policies and in training personnel involved in implementing the programmes. The Secretary-General was asked, in his reports on HIV/AIDS (see p. 1241), to take a gender perspective into account.

Traditional practices affecting the health of women and girls

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/128 [YUN 2001, p. 1063], the Secretary-General, in a July report on traditional or customary practices affecting the health of women and girls [A/58/169], summarized information received from 28 Member States regarding measures they had taken to counter the problem. Similar information was provided by UN system entities and non-governmental organizations (NGOs).

The Secretary-General concluded that initiatives at the national, regional and international levels reflected the increased recognition of the need for the prevention and elimination of harmful traditional practices. Consultative and participatory initiatives involving men and women in affected societies, including community and traditional leaders, as well as judicial, legal, healthcare, educational and media personnel, had been effective tools in combating harmful traditional practices. Member States, NGOs and UN entities should continue and strengthen measures to eliminate the harmful practices, and strengthen their cooperation with assistance from donor Governments and international organizations. The Secretary-General advocated expanding information and data collection on the trends and prevalence of the practices and conducting progress assessment and impact-monitoring studies on implemented initiatives so that appropriate and effective strategies could be documented and shared, and lessons learned adapted and replicated in other relevant settings.

Women and human rights

Women in Afghanistan

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/4 [YUN 2002, p. 1149], the Secretary-General, in a January report on the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan [E/CN.6/2003/4], reviewed developments in 2002, focusing on steps taken by the Afghan Transitional Administration (TA) to raise the status of women and UN system activities to assist the TA. Afghanistan's emergence from 24 years of conflict (see p. 289) had led to positive changes in women's lives. Women were re-emerging as a political and economic force, participated in decision-making on the peace process and reconstruction of the country, appointed to serve in Government and returning to the workforce and gaining access to education. However, many women continued to face gross violations of their rights and were victims of insecurity. In addition, Taliban-like restrictions by local leaders continued to be applied to women in some parts of the country. The Secretary-General made recommendations to the TA and the UN system, donor countries and civil society, in order to further strengthen the status of women and girls in Afghanistan and their full participation in the reconstruction and development of their country.

Palestinian women

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/25 [YUN 2002, p. 453], a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.6/2003/3] reviewed the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women during the period from September 2001 to September 2002 (see p. 493).

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2003/42, took action on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (see p. 494).

Older women in society

In response to General Assembly resolutions 57/167 [YUN 2002, p. 1197] and 57/177 [ibid., p. 1153], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/58/160] on the follow-up to the 2002 Second World Assembly on Ageing [YUN 2002, p. 1193]. The report introduced the road map for the implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, which was adopted at the 2002 World Assembly [ibid., p. 1194]; highlighted the Plan's main gender dimensions; reviewed progress in defining the modalities for the review and appraisal of the Plan; and outlined major developments during the first year of the implementation process. (See also p. 1219.)

Women and development

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/188 [YUN 2001, p. 1069], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/58/135], which described the attention paid at UN conferences and summits to the concerns of women and gender equality goals in the context of the implementation of the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] and the promotion of economic growth, poverty eradication and sustainable development.

The Secretary-General concluded that recent UN conferences and summits had made progress in integrating women's concerns and gender perspectives into the preparatory processes and final outcomes. However, progress achieved had to be translated into practical action at the national level and a strong focus on implementing policies, norms and recommendations was required. The Secretary-General proposed a series of recommendations to the Assembly regarding increased attention to gender perspectives and more effective monitoring of progress.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/58/483/Add.1 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/206 without vote [agenda item 93 (a)].

Women in developmentThe General Assembly,*

Recalling its resolutions 52/195 of 18 December 1997, 54/210 of 22 December 1999 and 56/188 of 21 December 2001 and all its other resolutions on the integration of women in development, and the relevant resolutions and agreed conclusions, including those on women in the economy, adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women,

Recalling also the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Reaffirming the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which affirms that the equal rights and opportunities of women and men must be assured, and calls for, inter alia, the promotion of gender equality and the empowerment of women as being effective and essential in the combat of poverty, hunger and disease and in stimulating development that is truly sustainable,

Reaffirming also that gender equality is of fundamental importance for achieving sustained economic growth and sustainable development, in accordance with the relevant General Assembly resolutions and recent United Nations conferences, and that investing in the development of women and girls has a multiplier effect, in particular on productivity, efficiency and sustained economic growth,

Recognizing the significant contribution that women make to the economy and the major force that they represent for change and development in all sectors of the economy, especially in key areas such as agriculture, industry and services,

Reaffirming that women are key contributors to the economy and to combating poverty through both remunerated and unremunerated work at home, in the community and in the workplace and that the empowerment of women is a critical factor in the eradication of poverty,

Recognizing that population and development issues, education and training, health, nutrition, the environment, water supply, sanitation, housing, communications, science and technology, and employment opportunities are important elements for effective poverty eradication and the advancement and empowerment of women,

Recognizing also, in this context, the importance of respect for all human rights, including the right to development, and of a national and international environment that promotes, inter alia, justice, gender equality, equity, civil and political participation and political freedom for the advancement and empowerment of women,

Recognizing further that equal access to education and training, in particular in business, trade, administration, information and communication technologies and other new technologies, is essential for gender equality, the empowerment of women and poverty eradication,

Recognizing also that enhanced trade opportunities for developing countries, including through trade liberalization, will improve the economic condition of those societies, including women, which is of particular importance in rural communities,

Aware that, while women represent an important and growing proportion of business owners, their contribution to economic and social development is constrained by, inter alia, the lack of equal access of women and men to, and control over, credit, technology, support services, land and information,

Concerned that the continuing discrimination against women, the denial or lack of equal rights and access to education, training and credit facilities and the lack of control over land, capital, technology and other areas of production impede their full and equal contribution to, and equal opportunity to benefit from, development,

Emphasizing the promotion of programmes aimed at financial intermediation, with a view to ensuring the access of rural women to credit and to agricultural inputs and implements and, in particular, to easing collateral requirements for access to finance by women,

Women and the media

In accordance with the multi-year (2002-2006) programme of work of the Commission on the Status of Women, adopted by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 2001/4 [YUN 2001, p. 1084], the Secretary-General submitted a report [E/CN.6/2003/6] summarizing UN system efforts in the area of women and the media and information and communication technologies (ICT). The report, which was based on the analysis and conclusions of two expert meetings (Seoul, Republic of Korea, 11-14 November 2002; Beirut, Lebanon, 12-15 November 2002) and contributions by UN entities and civil society, focused on the opportunities and challenges to women's empowerment through ICT and the media.

The Secretary-General's recommendations to the Commission included the creation of a gender-sensitive enabling environment and integration of gender perspectives in the development and implementation of national policies and strategies in ICT and media and communication policies; the promotion of women's participation and employment in the information society; the mobilization of resources to promote gender equality in the media and in ICT; inclusiveness and participation in the promotion of gender equality in the information society; and the inclusion of a gender perspective in every facet of the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857).

On 14 March, the Commission adopted agreed conclusions on women's participation in and access to the media and ICT and their impact on and use as an instrument for women's advancement and empowerment and requested that the Economic and Social Council endorse them (see below). On 25 March [E/2003/27 (dec. 47/103)], it took note of the Secretary-General's report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2003/27], adopted resolution 2003/44 without vote [agenda item 14 (a)].

Agreed conclusions of the Commission on the Status of Women on women's participation in and access to the media, and information and communication technologies and their impact on and use as an instrument for the advancement and empowerment of women

The Economic and Social Council,

Endorses the following agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-seventh session with respect to women's participation in and access to the media, and information and communication technologies and their impact on and use as an instrument for the advancement and empowerment of women:

1. The Commission on the Status of Women recalls and reiterates the strategic objectives and actions of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome document adopted at the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace in the twenty-first century", on the potential of the media and of information and communication technologies to contribute to the advancement and empowerment of women. It also recalls the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the development goals contained therein to promote gender equality and the empowerment of women as effective ways to combat poverty, hunger and disease, to stimulate development that is truly sustainable and to ensure that the benefits of new technologies, especially information and communication technologies, are available to all.

2. The Commission notes that, globally, there are substantial differences in participation in, access to and use of media and information and communication technologies, their content and production. Such differences have important implications for policy development at the national, regional and international levels. A focus on the gender dimensions of information and communication technologies is essential in order to prevent and combat any adverse impact of the digital revolution on gender equality and the perpetuation of existing inequalities and discrimination, including the sexual exploitation of women both through the traditional media and through new technologies. The media and information and communication technologies also offer tools for enhancing women's full access to the benefits of information and new technologies and can become central tools for the empowerment of women and the promotion of gender equality. Efforts are therefore necessary to increase women's access to and participation in the media and information and communication technologies, including in their decision-making processes and new opportunities created through information and communication technologies.

3. The Commission welcomes the convening of the World Summit on the Information Society, which is to be held in Geneva in December 2003 and in Tunis in 2005, and urges all participants to take the following recommendations into account and to integrate gender perspectives in every facet of the Summit. It further encourages the participation of women in the Summit, including significant numbers of gender equality experts and women experts in the field of information and communication technologies as members of national delegations, organizations of civil society and the business community.

4. The Commission urges Governments and, as appropriate, the relevant funds and programmes, organizations and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, the international financial institutions, civil society, including the private sector and non-governmental organizations, and other stakeholders to take the following actions:

Recalling the International Conference on War-Affected Children, held at Winnipeg, Canada, from 10 to 17 September 2000, and affirming the ongoing importance of the Winnipeg Agenda for War-Affected Children for all children affected by armed conflict,

Recognizing the need to achieve gender equality to ensure a just and equitable world for girls,

Deeply concerned about discrimination against the girl child and the violation of the rights of the girl child, which often result in less access for girls to education, nutrition and physical and mental health care and in girls enjoying fewer of the rights, opportunities and benefits of childhood and adolescence than boys and often being subjected to various forms of cultural, social, sexual and economic exploitation and to violence and harmful practices, such as female infanticide, incest, early marriage, prenatal sex selection and female genital mutilation,

Deeply concerned also that, in situations of poverty, war and armed conflict, girl children are among those most affected and that their potential for full development is thus limited,

Concerned that the girl child has furthermore become the victim of sexually transmitted diseases and increasingly of the human immunodeficiency virus, which have a serious impact on the quality of her life and leave her open to further discrimination,

Concerned also by the increasing number of child-headed households particularly orphan girls, including those orphaned by the HIV/AIDS pandemic,

Convinced that racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance reveal themselves in a differentiated manner for women and girls and can be among the factors leading to a deterioration in their living conditions, poverty, violence, multiple forms of discrimination and limitation or denial of their human rights,

1. Stresses the need for full and urgent implementation of the rights of the girl child as guaranteed to her under all human rights instruments, including the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, as well as the need for universal ratification of those instruments;

2. Urges States to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child;

4. Urges all Governments and the United Nations system to strengthen efforts bilaterally and with international organizations and private sector donors in order to achieve the goals of the World Education Forum, in particular that of eliminating gender disparities in primary and secondary education by 2005, and to implement the United Nations Girls' Education Initiative as a means of reaching this goal, and reaffirms the commitment contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration in this regard;

5. Calls upon all States to take measures to address the obstacles that continue to affect the achievement of the goals set forth in the Beijing Platform for Action, as contained in paragraph 33 of the further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, where appropriate, including the strengthening of national mechanisms to implement policies and programmes for the girl child and, in some cases, to enhance coordination among responsible institutions for the realization of the human rights of girls, as indicated in the further actions and initiatives;

6. Urges States to enact and strictly enforce laws to ensure that marriage is entered into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses, to enact and strictly enforce laws concerning the minimum legal age of consent and the minimum age for marriage and to raise the minimum age for marriage where necessary;

7. Also urges States to fulfil their obligations under the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, as well as the commitment to implement the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century" and the special session on children;

8. Urges all States to promote gender equality and equal access to basic social services, such as education, nutrition, health care, including sexual and reproductive health care, vaccinations, and protection from diseases representing the major causes of mortality, and to mainstream a gender perspective in all development policies and programmes;

9. Also urges all States to enact and enforce legislation to protect girls from all forms of violence and exploitation, including female infanticide and prenatal sex selection, female genital mutilation, rape, domestic violence, incest, sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, child prostitution and child pornography, trafficking and forced labour, and to develop age-appropriate safe and confidential programmes and medical, social and psychological support services to assist girls who are subjected to violence;

10. Urges States to formulate comprehensive, multi-disciplinary and coordinated national plans, programmes or strategies to eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls, which should be widely disseminated and should provide targets and timetables for implementation, as well as effective domestic enforcement procedures through the establishment of monitoring mechanisms involving all parties concerned, including consultations with women's organizations, giving attention to the recommendations relating to the girl child of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences;

11. Calls upon all States and international and non-governmental organizations, individually and collectively, to implement further the Beijing Platform for Action, in particular the strategic objectives relating to the girl child, and the further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action;

12. Urges States to ensure that the right of children to express themselves and participate in all matters affecting them, in accordance with their age and maturity, is fully and equally enjoyed by girls;

13. Recognizes that a considerable number of children, including orphans, children living on the street, internally displaced and refugee children, children affected by trafficking and sexual and economic exploitation and children who are incarcerated, live without parental support, and in this regard urges States to take special measures to support such children and the institutions, facilities and services that care for them, and to build and strengthen children's abilities to protect themselves;

14. Urges States to take appropriate measures to address the needs of orphan girls by implementing national policies and strategies to build and strengthen governmental, family and community capacities to provide a supportive environment for orphans and girls and boys infected with and affected by HIV/AIDS, including by providing appropriate counselling and psychosocial support, and ensuring their enrolment in school and access to shelter, good nutrition and health and social services on an equal basis with other children; and to protect orphans and vulnerable children from all forms of abuse, violence, exploitation, discrimination, trafficking and loss of inheritance;

15. Also urges States to take special measures for the protection of girls affected by armed conflicts and in particular to protect them from sexually transmitted diseases, such as HIV/AIDS, gender-based violence, including rape and sexual abuse, and sexual exploitation, torture, abduction and forced labour, paying special attention to refugee and displaced girls, and to take into account the special needs of girls affected by armed conflict in the delivery of humanitarian assistance and disarmament, demobilization, rehabilitation assistance and reintegration processes;

16. Deplures all the cases of sexual exploitation and abuse of women and children, especially girls, in humanitarian crises, including those cases involving humanitarian workers and peacekeepers;

17. Urges all States and the international community to respect, protect and promote the rights of the child, taking into account the particular vulnerabilities of the girl child in pre-conflict, conflict and post-conflict situations, and calls for special initiatives designed to address all of the rights and needs of girls affected by armed conflicts;

18. Calls upon Governments, civil society, including the media, and non-governmental organizations to promote human rights education and the full respect for and enjoyment of the human rights of the girl child, inter alia, through the translation, production and dissemination of age-appropriate information material on those rights to all sectors of society, in particular to children;

21. Requests all human rights treaty bodies, special procedures and other human rights mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights and its Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights to adopt regularly and systematically a gender perspective in the implementation of their mandates and to include in their reports information on the qualitative analysis of violations of the human rights of women and girls, and encourages the strengthening of cooperation and coordination in that regard;

22. Stresses the importance of a substantive assessment of the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action with a life-cycle perspective so as to identify gaps and obstacles in the implementation process and to develop further actions for the achievement of the goals of the Platform for Action;

(See also p. 780.)

Institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women

Inter-Agency Network. The United Nations Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality, at its second session (New York, 24-27 February) [IANWGE/2003/12/Rev.1], endorsed decisions and recommendations made by task forces and working groups regarding women, peace and security; gender mainstreaming in programme budgets; gender and financing for development; gender and ICT; gender mainstreaming in the common country assessment and United Nations Development Assistance Framework process; database activities including WomenWatch, an Internet portal to UN gender resources; working methods and the link between the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination and the Network; and the regional commissions' projects on gender indicators. The Network established three new task forces on the gender perspectives of the MDGs, gender and trade, and gender and water. It also held a workshop on incorporating gender perspectives into the preparation of and follow-up to global conferences.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 56/132 [YUN 2001, p. 1055], the Secretary-General, in a report [E/CN.6/2003/2] to the Commission on the Status of Women, summarized progress made in mainstreaming gender perspectives within the UN system, based on input received from UN system entities since his 2002 report on the issue [YUN 2002, p. 1154]. He concluded that there had been a marked increase in the number of gender units/focal points, networks, task forces and similar institutional mechanisms established to provide catalytic support and to strengthen capacity for gender mainstreaming in sectoral areas. Other measures included the training of staff and establishment of monitoring mechanisms. Inter-agency activities at global and regional levels remained a vehicle for coordination, information-sharing and joint activities. Further efforts should focus on identifying the remaining gaps in policy frameworks and strategies, and assessing the impact of the strategies, which should provide critical input towards the review of the progress made in implementing Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 on gender mainstreaming [YUN 1997, p. 1186]. The Secretary-General recommended that the Commission request that the following be included in the next report: assessments of the impact of policies and strategies, of the most pertinent gaps in sex-disaggregated data and gender-specific information, by sector, of remaining gaps in the policy and strategy framework for gender equality and mainstreaming in sectoral areas in UN entities, and of the effectiveness of existing institutional mechanisms. He also proposed an overview of monitoring mechanisms for gender mainstreaming in place in the UN system.

Commission on the Status of Women. On 13 March [E/2003/27 (res. 47/2)], the Commission requested the Secretary-General to include in his next report the assessments and overview of monitoring mechanisms proposed in his report (above). It asked the Economic and Social Council to consider devoting its 2004 coordination segment to a review and appraisal of the system-wide implementation of agreed conclusions 1997/2.

Further report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/182 [YUN 2002, p. 1137] and Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/23 [ibid., p. 1154], the Secretary-General, in a May report [E/2003/69], described progress made by the Council in mainstreaming a gender perspective in its work during 2002, and that of its functional commissions in 2003. Also reviewed was the work of the Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality (see p. 1187). The Secretary-General concluded that the Council and all subsidiary bodies that had completed their sessions reflected, to some degree, the concerns of women or gender perspectives in their work. However, interaction between the Commission on the Status of Women and other functional commissions, and use of the Commission's work by the Council and its subsidiary machinery had been uneven. Recommendations to the Council proposed devoting its 2004 coordination segment to a review and appraisal of the system-wide implementation of agreed conclusions 1997/2; encouraging its subsidiary machinery to strengthen practical guidance provided in resolutions, decisions and agreed conclusions; encouraging relevant commissions to address gender aspects within their mandates; urging the commissions to use more systematically the work of the Commission on related topics under their consideration; and calling for efforts to include attention to gender equality in reports submitted to the Council and its subsidiary machinery.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/49 [draft: E/2003/L.24/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 7 (f)].

17. Underlines the importance of reports to inter-governmental bodies consistently giving attention to gender equality through systematic and rigorous analysis of the issues involved, and presenting issues and approaches in a gender-sensitive manner so as to give concrete and practical recommendations and serve as an analytical basis for those bodies to undertake gender-responsive policy formulation in accordance with its agreed conclusions 1997/2;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on implementation of and follow-up to the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, including on progress in gender mainstreaming, to the next substantive session of the Council;

Status of women in the United Nations

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/180 [YUN 2002, p. 1411], the Secretary-General, in a January report [E/CN.6/2003/8], updated information on women's representation in the UN Secretariat since the submission of his last report [YUN 2002, p. 1410] and focused on the implementation of gender equality goals in the staffing process. He recommended discontinuing the present report and replacing it with a report to the General Assembly at the session immediately preceding that of the Commission on the Status of Women, accompanied by an oral update to the Commission if needed. On 25 March, the Commission took note of the Secretary-General's report [E/2003/27 (dec. 47/103)].

Also in response to resolution 57/180, the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/58/374] on improving the status of women in the UN system (see p. 1448).

In resolution 58/144 of 22 December, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to provide a verbal update to the Commission and to report to the Assembly in 2004 (see p. 1449).

CPC action. In June [A/58/16], the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), having considered a report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services [E/AC.51/2003/5 & Corr.1] on the triennial review of the implementation of CPC recommendations on the evaluation of the advancement of women programme in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1123], recommended that the review's conclusions be approved and submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women. On 22 December, the General Assembly endorsed CPC's recommendations (decision 58/532).

Convention on the elimination of discrimination against women

As at 31 December 2003, 175 States were parties to the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 34/180 [YUN 1979, p. 895]. During the year, Afghanistan, San Marino and Sao Tome and Principe ratified the Convention and the Syrian Arab Republic and Timor-Leste acceded to it. At year's end, 42 States parties had also accepted the amendment to article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention in respect of the meeting time of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, which was adopted by the States parties in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1178]. The amendment would enter into force when accepted by a two-thirds majority of States parties.

The Optional Protocol to the Convention, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 54/4 [YUN 1999, p. 1100] and which entered into force in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1123], had 59 States parties by year's end.

The Secretary-General submitted his annual report to the Assembly on the status of the Convention as at 31 July [A/58/341].

CEDAW

In 2003, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), established in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 1149] to monitor compliance with the 1979 Convention, held two regular sessions in New York [A/58/38].

At its twenty-eighth session (13-31 January), CEDAW reviewed the initial or periodic reports of Albania, Canada, the Congo, El Salvador, Kenya, Luxembourg, Norway and Switzerland on measures they had taken to implement the Convention. CEDAW considered a Secretariat report on ways and means of expediting its work [CEDAW/C/2003/1/4] and a note by the Secretary-General on the reports of specialized agencies [CEDAW/C/2003/1/3] and the reports of specialized agencies on the implementation of the Convention in areas falling within the scope of their activity [CEDAW/C/2003/1/3/Add.1,3,4]. CEDAW appointed five members to the Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol (see below) for a two-year period starting in January [A/58/38 (dec. 28/II)]; decided to convene a meeting during its twenty-ninth session in July with States whose reports under the Convention had been due for over five years [dec. 28/II]; decided, subject to the availability of resources, to nominate two of its members, in addition to its Chairperson, to participate in the May workshop, held by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), on reform proposals for treaty bodies [dec. 28/III] (see p. 668); and, subject to the availability of resources, decided to nominate four members, including the Chairperson, to participate in OHCHR's second (June) inter-committee meeting of treaty bodies [dec. 28/IV] (see p. 668). The Committee decided to change the name of the Working Group on the Optional Protocol to the Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol. The Group met (25-27 June) to review its methods of work and to consider cooperation between the UN Division for the Advancement of Women and OHCHR. It decided to register its first communication.

At its twenty-ninth session (30 June-18 July), CEDAW reviewed the initial or periodic reports of Brazil, Costa Rica, Ecuador, France, Japan, Morocco, New Zealand and Slovenia, and considered the Secretariat report submitted to its twenty-eighth session (above). The Committee decided that those States parties whose initial reports under article 18 were more than five years overdue as at 18 July would be reminded of their reporting obligations [A/58/38 (dec. 29/1)].

Commission on the Status of Women

The Commission on the Status of Women, at its forty-seventh session (New York, 3-14 and 25 March) [E/2003/27], recommended three draft resolutions to the Economic and Social Council for adoption on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (see p. 494); the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan (see p. 1175); and its agreed conclusions on the participation in and access of women to the media and information and communication technologies and their impact on and use as an instrument for the advancement and empowerment of women (see p. 1183). The Commission also adopted and brought to the Council's attention resolutions on women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS (see p. 1174); and mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the UN system (see p. 1188). A draft decision for adoption by the Council related to the Commission's report on its forty-seventh (2003) session and the provisional agenda for the forty-eighth (2004) session (see below). The Commission further adopted three decisions, which were brought to the Council's attention, regarding the United Nations International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women [dec. 47/101] (see p. 1194) and the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women [dec. 47/102] (see p. 1193); and it took note of the documents before it [dec. 47/103], among them, the Secretary-General's report summarizing steps taken by the Commission to follow up on policy guidance provided by the Council to its functional commissions in 2002 [E/CN.6/2003/10]; and on the joint work plan of the Division for the Advancement of Women and OHCHR for 2003 [E/CN.4/2003/73-E/CN.6/2003/5] (see p. 779).

By decision 2003/237 of 22 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission's report on its forty-seventh session and approved the provisional agenda for its forty-eighth session.

Communications on the status of women

Working Group. At three meetings in March, including one closed meeting [E/2003/27], the Commission considered the report of the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women, established in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1050] to consider ways of making the communications procedure more transparent and efficient. The Working Group considered seven confidential communications received directly by the Division for the Advancement of Women and 15 confidential communications received by OHCHR. The Group noted that Governments had replied to three of the seven communications received by the Division and to 14 of the 15 transmitted by OHCHR. Due to the limited number (22) of communications received, the Group was unable to assess the existence of a consistent pattern of reliably proven injustice and discriminatory practices against women, as defined by its mandate in Economic and Social Council resolution 1983/27 [YUN 1983, p. 923]. However, it ascertained that communications were most frequently submitted on sexual violence against women, including rape, perpetrated by State agents, such as members of the police force, security forces, prison guards and members of the army; violations of the rights of female human rights defenders, in particular the violation of the freedom of expression and assembly; violations of the rights of women belonging to ethnic or religious minorities, including killings, inhuman and degrading treatment and discrimination; and violations of women's human rights in the context of internal conflicts, including killings, torture and enforced or involuntary disappearances. The Group was concerned about a communication received indicating the existence of legal practices that prescribed cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment of women.

In a March decision [E/2003/27 (dec. 47/102)], the Commission decided that at its forty-eighth (2004) session, it would continue to consider the Working Group's future work, and requested the Secretary-General to submit a report for that purpose.

UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM)

During 2003 [A/59/135], the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) continued to focus on strengthening women's economic security and rights; enhancing women's leadership in governance and peace-building; and promoting women's human rights by highlighting the gender dimensions of the HIV/AIDS pandemic and eliminating violence against women. UNIFEM's activities were defined in its 2000-2003 strategy and business plan, endorsed by the Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme/United Nations Population Fund (UNDP/UNFPA) in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1127].

UNIFEM's work in support of women's economic security and rights focused on promoting an enabling environment for women's equal ownership and access to economic resources and assets; incorporating a gender perspective in macro-economic frameworks and building the capacity of countries to manage globalization and economic transition from the perspective of poor women; and strengthening women's economic capacity and rights. Results in those areas were greatly enhanced through gender-responsive budget initiatives and promoting the use of gender-sensitive data and statistics. UNIFEM's work regarding women's leadership in governance and peace-building achieved significant results in strengthening gender-focused information collection and on conflict prevention and early warning mechanisms; enhancing humanitarian assistance and protection for women in conflict situations; making women and gender perspectives central to peace processes; supporting gender justice in post-conflict peace-building; and strengthening women's political participation. In its programme to promote women's human rights by highlighting the gender dimensions of the HIV/AIDS pandemic and eliminating violence against women, UNIFEM expanded capacity for effective implementation at the national level of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (see p. 1190); strengthened policies and programmes to end violence against women and girls; and increased awareness and action in response to the gender and human rights dimensions of the HIV/AIDS pandemic.

UNIFEM's initiatives to enhance the capacity of the UN system to support women's empowerment and gender mainstreaming in policies and programmes resulted in increased attention to gender equality in coordination mechanisms and stronger collaboration with strategic UN partner organizations. Strengthening the Fund's effectiveness by incorporating the principles of a learning organization and building strategic partnerships resulted in the refinement of knowledge "products" to capture and make accessible learning in key thematic areas.

In 2003, UNIFEM's resources totalled $34 million, of which $21.7 million was in core resources and $12.3 million in non-core resources. A total of 38 Member States contributed to the core resources. Contributions from bilateral donors accounted for 88 per cent of the resource base, as in 2002.

By a January note [E/CN.6/2003/11-E/CN.4/2003/121], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission on the Status of Women UNIFEM's report on the 2002 activities of its Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence against Women [YUN 2002, p. 1165], prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 50/166 [YUN 1995, p. 1188]. On 25 March [E/2003/27 (dec. 47/103)], the Commission on the Status of Women took note of UNIFEM's report. A later report of UNIFEM [E/CN.6/2004/8-E/CN.4/2004/117 & Corr.1] stated that the Fund approved over $600,000 in grants for eight new projects in 2003, in an enhanced attempt to address diverse forms of violence against women. Since its establishment in 1996, the Trust Fund had awarded $8.4 million in grants to 155 projects in more than 70 countries.

The UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board, on 10 September [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/23)], took note of the UNDP Administrator's report [DP/2003/28] on budget estimates for the 2004-2005 biennium, and approved $14.9 million for UNIFEM.

In July [A/58/168], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report on UNIFEM's 2002 activities [YUN 2002, p. 1164]. The Assembly noted the report, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/501], by decision 58/533 of 22 December, and, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/487], by decision 58/551 of 23 December.

International Research and Training Institute (INSTRAW)

A May report of the Board of Trustees of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW) [E/2003/59] stated that the Board's twenty-second session, which was postponed in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1165] pending the recommendations of the Working Group on the Future Operation of INSTRAW (see below), still had not taken place. However, the Board electronically approved a brief on INSTRAW developments and challenges during 2002 and current status, prepared by INSTRAW, which was annexed to the report.

INSTRAW's financial situation remained precarious in 2003 (see p. 1200).

Working Group report. The Working Group on the Future Operation of INSTRAW, established by General Assembly resolution 56/125 [YUN 2001, p. 1089], submitted a preliminary report [A/AC.266/1] in February on activities undertaken pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/175 [YUN 2002, p. 1167] relating to its recommendations [ibid., p. 1166]. The Working Group held a 10 February meeting with UN Secretariat representatives to request the Secretary-General to appoint an INSTRAW Director to provide leadership and initiate fund-raising activities. The Secretariat expressed the view that such an appointment was not currently possible because the funds available for INSTRAW would be sufficient only to cover the salaries of the current staff, contracts and operational expenses until 31 May, after which additional fund-raising would be necessary through voluntary contributions. Following a 12 February meeting on the status of INSTRAW's voluntary contributions, the Secretary-General received a pledge of $100,000 from Spain, with the promise of a further similar amount once a Director had been appointed, and $5,520 from Venezuela. INSTRAW's host country, the Dominican Republic, reiterated its support to the Institute. The Under-Secretary-General of the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) said that the pledges made, together with the existing funds, should be enough to permit the prompt appointment of a Director. He intended to meet with the UN Controller to coordinate the appointment. On 20 February, the Working Group decided to consult with the Secretary-General regarding the appointment of a Director. It also decided to raise with the Secretariat the possibility of postponing the election, scheduled for the Economic and Social Council's resumed 2003 organizational session, of the five members of INSTRAW's Board of Trustees whose mandates would end on 30 June. The Working Group discussed the procedural steps that should be taken to fulfil its mandate and highlighted the need for the Council to amend the Institute's statute.

In March, [E/2003/27 (dec. 47/101)], the Commission on the Status of Women took note of the report and recommended that the Economic and Social Council consider the Group's reports to the Assembly in 2003.

Note by Secretary-General. In an April note [E/2003/L.3/Add.6], the Secretary-General stated that, on 18 March, he informed all Member States that the Council would be called on to appoint five members to serve on INSTRAW's Board of Trustees. He drew the Council's attention to Assembly resolution 57/175, which endorsed and requested the Secretary-General to implement the Working Group's recommendation that the Board of Trustees be abolished and replaced with an advisory board composed of Member States. In the light of that information, the Secretary-General recommended that the Council extend the mandate of the existing members of the Board and postpone the election of Board members until the Council had taken action on the Working Group's recommendation.

Communication. On 20 June [E/2003/93], Spain, as Chairman of the Working Group on the future of INSTRAW, transmitted to the President of the Economic and Social Council a note presenting the Working Group's recommendations regarding the amendment of INSTRAW's statute [YUN 2002, p. 1166]. The Group proposed that the Council adopt a resolution in order to achieve those changes, which would allow the Institute to achieve its mandate properly.

Note by Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/175, the Secretary-General submitted a July note [E/2003/101], which contained the Secretariat's comments on the recommendations of the Working Group as transmitted by its Chairman (see above). The Secretariat noted that some of the proposed amendments did not adequately reflect the full scope of the effect that the Assembly's endorsement of the Working Group's recommendations in resolution 57/175 had on INSTRAW's statute. In particular, the new recommendations did not address the abolition of INSTRAW's autonomous status nor the establishment of institutional linkage to DESA under the direct authority of the Under-Secretary-General of that Department. In addition, the proposed amendments did not address the requirement that the Institute work closely and in close coordination with the other UN bodies involved in gender equality and the advancement of women. Also, the amendment proposed to article III, which referred to an Executive Board, should instead refer to an Advisory Board; article III, which referred to members of the Executive Board, should in fact refer to Member States instead of individual representatives since the Board should be composed of Member States; article IV, which provided that the Director should be appointed by the Secretary-General from a pool of three candidates proposed by the Executive Board, in fact interfered with the Secretary-General's prerogative as the Organization's Chief Administrative Officer; and the same reasoning applied to the amendments proposed in article IV, dealing with the authority vested in the Secretary-General to retain, confirm or replace the Institute's Director. With regard to the appointment of a Director, an understanding could be reached whereby the Secretary-General would present the Board with a list of candidates, from which the Board would select up to three, one of whom should be appointed by the Secretary-General. A revised statute of the Institute was annexed to the note.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 48], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/57 [draft: E/2003/L.44] without vote [agenda item 14 (a)].

Revitalization and strengthening of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

Future operation of INSTRAW

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/175 [YUN 2002, p. 1167], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/417], which reviewed progress in the implementation of reform measures proposed by the Working Group on the Future Operation of INSTRAW in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1166], including the revision of INSTRAW's statute (see p. 1195), the implementation of its work programme, the creation of the post of Deputy Director with specific fund-raising responsibilities and the establishment of a liaison function for INSTRAW in DESA, the appointment of a Director (see below), increased coordination between INSTRAW and other relevant UN bodies and the management of INSTRAW. An external audit was conducted (26-30 May) on follow-up to audit recommendations, including recommendations made by the Office of Internal Oversight Services [YUN 2002, p. 1165] and progress in the implementation of the work programme for 2002 (ibid., p. 1166), the results of which would be reported to Member States once a management letter had been received.

The Secretary-General said that, as requested by Assembly resolution 57/311 (see p. 1200), the Secretariat had transferred $250,000 to the Trust Fund for INSTRAW in June, which represented the second tranche of the regular budget subsidy of $500,000 that was set aside in the contingency fund for the 2002-2003 biennium, in accordance with Assembly decision 57/580 [YUN 2002, p. 1167]. Largely due to the subsidy and savings from vacancies in INSTRAW, the Institute would be able to continue to operate at a minimal level until the end of May 2004. INSTRAW's precarious financial situation precluded long-term planning and programming, and its capacity to contribute to the advancement of women and gender equality continued to deteriorate. He concluded that, despite the efforts of the Working Group and the Secretariat, no progress had been made in the implementation of INSTRAW's institutional reform.

Working Group report. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/175, the Working Group on the Future Operation of INSTRAW, in an October report [A/58/540], updated the status of implementation of its recommendations. The Economic and Social Council had decided to amend the INSTRAW statute in order to transform the Board of Directors into an Executive Board (see p. 1195), the $500,000 subsidy was allocated (see above) and the creation of a post of Deputy Director had been enabled by the changes to the statute.

By decision 58/533 of 22 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's and the Working Group's reports on the future operation of INSTRAW.

Appointment. In December, the Secretary-General announced the appointment of Carmen Moreno as Director of the Institute.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/501], adopted resolution 58/244 by recorded vote (126-5-30) [agenda item 110].

Financial situation

During 2003, INSTRAW's financial situation remained precarious. In an April report [A/57/797] on INSTRAW's financial situation, submitted in response to General Assembly decision 57/580 [YUN 2002, p. 1167], the Secretary-General stated that, in accordance with the decision, $250,000 was transferred to the Institute's Trust Fund in January, resulting in a balance of $687,780, which was sufficient to finance the Institute's operations and related operating expenses until 31 May. However, contributions pledged during the Pledging Conference for Development Activities (New York, November 2002) had not been received. The Trust Fund's income during the first four months of 2003 amounted to $138,919, including $127,925 in government contributions and $10,994 in miscellaneous income. On that basis, and taking into account that the Institute's Director was expected to be appointed as from 1 May, it was estimated that the Trust Fund's balance as at 31 May would amount to approximately $481,900, which was considered sufficient for maintaining its operations until the end of November. An additional amount of $100,000 would, however, be required to sustain the Institute's operations until 31 December. The Secretary-General concluded that it was not possible to be definitive as to any contributions that might be made subsequent to the issuance of the current report. He recommended that the General Assembly take note of the current report and request a further report on the Institute's financial situation at its fifty-eighth (2003) session.

In May [A/57/7/Add.27], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions endorsed the Secretary-General's recommendation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/57/649/Add.2], adopted resolution 57/311 without vote [agenda item 112].

Financial situation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

The General Assembly,

Recalling its decision 57/580 of 20 December 2002,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financial situation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Having also considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of the Institute,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General and of the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Takes note also of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

3. Regrets that the nomination of a Director of the Institute, a post classified at the D-2 level, has not yet taken place, impairing the capacity of the Institute to function properly;

4. Urges the Secretary-General to appoint immediately a Director at the D-2 level, to be based at the headquarters of the Institute in the Dominican Republic, and thereafter to inform the Working Group on the Future Operation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women of the designation of the nominee;

5. Approves the release of the amount of 250,000 United States dollars that was set aside in the contingency fund for the biennium 2002-2003, in conformity with the provisions of General Assembly decision 57/580, as an additional provision for the continuation of the core activities of the Institute in 2003, and decides to appropriate the amount of 250,000 dollars for this purpose;

6. Recalls its resolutions 41/213 of 19 December 1986 and 42/211 of 21 December 1987, and in this connection stresses that the contingency fund is not intended to be used as a recurring source of programme funding;

7. Requests the Institute to report to the General Assembly, one year after the appointment of a Director, on its programme of work and on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report further to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session on the financial situation of the Institute.

As requested by Assembly resolution 57/311 (above), the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/426] on INSTRAW's financial situation. During the reporting period (17 April-30 September), additional income to the Trust Fund amounted to $10,421, which included $2,999 in government contributions and $7,452 in miscellaneous income. As at 30 September, unpaid pledges to the Institute amounted to $76,074. The level of expenditures for the period from 1 January to 30 September was lower than expected. That, coupled with the additional grant of $250,000 from the UN regular budget, resulted in the Trust Fund's projected unencumbered balance as at 31 December 2003 being $450,000, an amount that would allow the Institute's operations to continue until the end of May 2004.

Chapter XI

Children, youth and ageing persons

In 2003, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) continued its efforts to ensure that every child received the best start in life; was fully immunized and protected from disease and disability; completed a quality primary education; and was protected from harm, abuse and violence in times of war and peace and in emergencies. All young people were to be given reliable information on HIV/AIDS prevention.

Progress towards the implementation of "A world fit for children", the final document of the General Assembly's twenty-seventh (2002) special session on children, continued in the four major goal areas of the document's Plan of Action—promoting healthy lives, providing quality education, protecting children against abuse, exploitation and violence, and combating HIV/AIDS.

UNICEF continued work on its five organizational priorities for 2002-2005: girls education; fighting HIV/AIDS; integrated early childhood development; immunization "plus"; and improved protection from violence, exploitation, abuse and discrimination.

The World Youth Report 2003, a comprehensive analysis of the global situation of youth, reviewed the 10 priority areas of the 1995 World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, and identified five new concerns that had emerged since the Programme's adoption. The second meeting of the High-level Panel of the Youth Employment Network considered a draft action programme, which recommended the next five steps to be taken by the Network.

In 2003, the United Nations continued its efforts to implement the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, adopted in 2002 by the Second World Assembly on Ageing. The Secretariat proposed a "bottom-up" approach to the review and appraisal of the Plan of Action, and a road map for its implementation was introduced by the Secretary-General in July.

August [A/58/333], described follow-up to the Assembly's twenty-seventh (2002) special session on children [YUN 2002, p. 1168], including progress in realizing the commitments of the session's final document, "A world fit for children", consisting of a Declaration and Plan of Action, adopted in resolution S-27/2 [ibid., p. 1169]. The report covered global and regional actions taken by non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and civil society organizations, and the UN system's response. It also highlighted action taken in the four major goal areas of the Plan of Action—promoting healthy lives, providing quality education, protecting children against abuse, exploitation and violence, and combating HIV/AIDS.

Although Governments, foundations, NGOs, civil society organizations, the private sector and UN agencies had worked together to ensure that the Declaration and Plan of Action were enthusiastically and diligently pursued, follow-up actions had not received high priority in all countries or regions, and more systematic efforts and exchanges of experience were called for to fulfil the pledges made at the special session. Nearly 140 countries had taken concrete actions to translate their commitments into national action plans and/or to integrate them into specific plans and policies. Information received by UNICEF, as at the end of July, indicated that 29 countries had completed or drafted new national plans of action for children; 64 countries were in the process of or would start to develop such plans. In addition, 10 countries had updated their existing national plans and 46 had integrated the agenda of "A world fit for children" into existing national plans and policies, poverty reduction strategies and sectoral policies. The report provided regional information on progress in sub-Saharan Africa; Asia; Central and Eastern Europe, the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and the Baltic States; Latin America and the Caribbean; the Middle East and North Africa; and industrialized countries.

Follow-up by the UN system focused on programmatic support and inter-agency collaboration, advocacy, communication strategies, resource mobilization, building partnerships and alliances, and the quantitative and qualitative review of progress made by Member States. Efforts were under way to ensure that the goals, targets and strategies of "A world fit for children" were adequately reflected in the common country assessment (CCA) and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) processes. The UN system was also working with the World Bank and bilateral agencies to include the agenda of "A world fit for children" and the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) of the Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49], in poverty reduction strategies and sector-wide approaches.

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/190 [YUN 2002, p. 749], the Secretary-General, in

The Secretary-General concluded that the progress made represented a good start, but tremendous challenges remained. He urged countries that were developing or would develop national action plans to complete them by year's end. Countries that had chosen to use other mechanisms should ensure that those plans and frameworks reflected the key goals and targets of "A world fit for children" to enable periodic monitoring and future review of progress. It was imperative that a broad consensus be built, and that civil society organizations, NGOs, families, children and young people be engaged in the development and monitoring of national and subnational plans of action for children. All countries should follow up the Monterrey Consensus, adopted at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953], to increase financing for development. They should also consider establishing or strengthening national institutions to promote and protect children's rights; establish or strengthen national and subnational monitoring systems to assess progress towards key, child-related goals and increase national capacities to collect, analyse and disaggregate data by sex, age and other factors; and conduct periodic reviews of progress at national and subnational levels to address obstacles and accelerate progress. Countries might wish to develop closer linkages between the mechanisms established for monitoring and reporting on the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by General Assembly resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 560] (see p. 780). The Secretary-General proposed providing to the Assembly an in-depth progress report on implementation of the Declaration and Plan of Action every five years—in 2006, 2011 and 2016—based on national, regional and global reviews. All countries were encouraged to conduct in-depth reviews of progress in or before 2005 for the first review process, which would lead to the 2006 report.

A final report on the use of funds for UNICEF support to the special session [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.12] indicated that UNICEF received 40 contributions from 22 Member States, six national committees and one foundation, totalling $7,417,439; total expenditures as at 30 June amounted to $7,415,324, leaving a balance of $2,115.

On 22 December, the General Assembly, in resolution 58/157 (see p. 781), requested the Secretary-General to prepare an updated report on progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in "A world fit for children" and to report to the Assembly at its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on follow-up to the outcome of the special session on children would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

United Nations Children's Fund

UNICEF was committed to the realization of the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51], and the goals set out by the Assembly's twenty-seventh (2002) special session on children [YUN 2002, p. 1168] in its outcome document, "A world fit for children" [ibid., p. 1169]. Its mission was to defend children's rights, help meet their basic needs, ensure their survival and increase their opportunities to flourish; rally political will to invest in children's well-being; respond to emergencies and strengthen the ability of children and their families to handle crises, including armed conflict, natural disasters and HIV/AIDS; assist countries in transition to protect young people's rights and provide vital services to children and their families; advance equal rights for boys and girls and encourage their full participation in the development of their communities; and work towards the human development goals adopted by the world community and the peace, justice and social progress enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations.

UNICEF's flagship publication, The State of the World's Children 2003, sought to draw public attention to the importance of young people's active participation in family, school, community and national life; encourage States, civil society organizations and the private sector to promote children's involvement in decisions that affected their lives; present examples of how the lives of children, families and communities had been changed when children had the opportunity to contribute on matters that affected them; and spark action that included children and young people in meeting the goals of "A world fit for children" and the MDGs.

In 2003, UNICEF cooperated with 158 countries, areas and territories: 46 in sub-Saharan Africa; 35 in Latin America and the Caribbean; 35 in Asia; 20 in the Middle East and North Africa; and 22 in Central and Eastern Europe, CIS and the Baltic States.

Total expenditures, including write-offs, amounted to $1,480 million (compared with $1,273 million in 2002), of which 93 per cent ($1,382 million) was for country programmes of cooperation; 6 per cent ($87 million) for management and administration of the organization; and about 1 per cent ($11 million) for write-offs and other charges. Programme expenditures by priorities were: $442 million for early childhood development; $258 million for immunization "plus"; $233 million for girls' education; $123 million for the improved protection of children; and $110 million for HIV/AIDS. UNICEF operations in 2003 were described in the UNICEF Annual Report covering the period 1 January to 31 December 2003, the annual report of its Executive Director [E/ICEF/2004/4] and a report of the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2004/9] on results achieved for children during the year in support of UNICEF's 2002-2005 medium-term strategic plan, which was approved by the Executive Board in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1094].

The UNICEF Executive Board held its first regular session of 2003 (13-17 January), the annual session (2-6 and 9 June), the second regular session (15-19 September) and an extraordinary budgetary session (1-2 December), all in New York [E/2003/34/Rev.1]. The Board adopted 18 decisions during those sessions.

By decision 2003/225 of 11 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Board's report on its first regular session; the Board's decisions at its annual session [E/2003/L.8]; and the annual report of the Executive Director covering the year 2002 [E/2003/48], which was transmitted in accordance with a January decision of the Board [E/2003/34/Rev.1 (dec. 2003/1)].

On 19 September [dec. 2003/14], the Executive Board, having considered a July report on its working methods [E/ICEF/2003/12], requested the Bureau to enter into dialogue with representatives of other UN funds, programmes and organizations to explore approaches to improving working methods and to report back to the Board in 2004. On the same date, the Board adopted the programme of work and dates for its 2004 sessions [dec. 2003/15].

Programme policies

In January, the Executive Board considered a progress report on UNICEF engagement in sector-wide approaches to development (SWAp) [E/ICEF/2003/6]. The report discussed SWAp in the context of existing and emerging development financing initiatives; UNICEF's contribution to SWAp; benefits and constraints of UNICEF participation; and UNICEF's efforts to develop staff capacities to participate meaningfully in policy dialogue on SWAp and in their implementation. UNICEF was participating in evolving SWAp and sectoral development programmes in 20 countries, mostly in the health and education sectors.

Medium-term financial plan (2003-2006)

While the medium-term financial plan was contained in each medium-term strategic plan (MTSP) (the 2002-2005 MTSP was approved by the Executive Board in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1094]), it was updated annually. The Board considered a July report [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.7], which presented the financial plan for 2003-2006 and projected total planned programme expenditures with an upward trend to reflect increased income. The Executive Director recommended that the Board approve the medium-term financial plan as a framework of projections for 2003-2006, including preparation of up to $151 million in programme expenditures from regular resources to be submitted to the Board in 2004. The amount was subject to the availability of resources and to the condition that estimates of income and expenditure continued to be valid. The Executive Director also recommended that the Board authorize the establishment of a funded reserve to count towards the contingent liability of after-service health insurance, with $30 million allocated to the reserve in 2003 and $10 million per year for the period 2004-2006.

On 17 September [dec. 2003/11], the Board approved the 2003-2006 medium-term plan and the establishment of a funded reserve for after-service health insurance, as recommended by the Executive Director.

Evaluation system

A November report of the Executive Director [E/2004/3-E/ICEF/2004/4] stated that a senior-level Evaluation Committee was created in 2003 to advise her on evaluation matters and to provide oversight of the evaluation function. Its mandate was to review evaluation reports produced by UNICEF that had relevance at the global governance level and to endorse the recommendations made in the reports. The Committee examined the work of UNICEF's Evaluation Office and cleared the release of reports to the public domain; it also adopted rules and procedures that clarified the accountabilities for the evaluation function at all levels of UNICEF and its own modus operandi. Training workshops were held as part of ongoing evaluations, so as to disseminate results-based approaches to programming and evaluation. Integrated monitoring and evaluation planning within the country programme management plan were promoted through workshops and inclusion in the United Nations Development Group (UNDG) harmonized and simplified country programme cycle. In compliance with a multi-year evaluation plan in support of the MTSP, evaluation work was conducted in areas related to HIV/AIDS and education as prevention against child labour. An assessment of the ChildInfo web site, which provided access to UNICEF's key statistical database, was completed. The Evaluation Office assessed programmes of cooperation for Mauritius, the Pacific island countries and Peru, in an effort to develop and test a broad-based methodology for country programme evaluation. To strengthen evaluation capacity-building within UNICEF, a meta-evaluation of the quality of evaluations performed by country offices, together with national authorities, identified areas requiring improvement.

Emergency assistance

In 2003, UNICEF updated its Core Commitments for Children in Emergencies (CCCs). Efforts focused on the comparative advantage of UNICEF in the light of enhanced coordination by humanitarian actors. The purpose of the revised CCCs was to enhance the timeliness, effectiveness and predictability of the UNICEF humanitarian response, and to reinforce the link between the UNICEF response to crises and its mandate to promote and help ensure the rights of children and women.

About one third of the countries in which UNICEF operated in 2003 were responding to crises and emergencies, and 25-30 per cent of UNICEF funding was dedicated emergency funding. UNICEF continued to participate actively in the United Nations inter-agency consolidated appeals process (see p. 922).

In 2003, humanitarian support extended by donors included secondment of emergency response personnel, in-kind donations and other forms of assistance to enable improved response to children's needs in crisis situations. Emergency funding reached $401.4 million. Of that amount, UNICEF received $345.2 million (86 per cent) from government and intergovernmental donors and $52.1 million (13 per cent) from national committees. During the year, UNICEF humanitarian programmes received support from 38 Governments, 29 national committees and 5 other donors.

UNICEF programmes by region

In 2003, UNICEF regional programme expenditures totalled $1,208 million, of which $493 million (41 per cent) went to programmes in sub-Saharan Africa; $388 million (32 per cent) to programmes in Asia; $160 million (13 per cent) to programmes in the Middle East and North Africa; $69 million (6 per cent) to programmes in the Americas and the Caribbean; and $53 million (4 per cent) to programmes in Central and Eastern Europe, CIS and the Baltic States. Another $45 million (4 per cent) went to interregional programmes. Programme support costs amounted to an additional $155 million.

Programme expenditures continued to be concentrated in countries with low income and high or very high under-five mortality rates. The 63 low-income countries—those with a per capita gross national income of $745 and less—had a total child population of 1 billion or about 55 per cent of all children worldwide; they received 65 per cent of the total programme expenditure, 6 per cent less than in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1185].

Field visits

In Mozambique (10-19 March), Executive Board members noted that UNICEF activities had achieved a good balance between efforts to promote survival and health care for children and interventions aimed at promoting long-term human development. In supporting community-based action aimed at engaging people in the development process, the country team had achieved impressive outcomes while ensuring that the methodology used supported long-term project sustainability. UNICEF had taken innovative approaches in implementing its priorities, including in combating HIV/AIDS through active support for peer education, and in its vision of extending services to the aged who cared for HIV/AIDS orphans and other orphaned children; there was a need to encourage and support community-based monitoring of the impact of those approaches, with a view to ensuring that they were maintained and strengthened. UNICEF's involvement of community volunteers working in the supplementary feeding programme in the detection of severe malnutrition increased the community's ability to monitor the nutritional status of children for referral to health centres. A joint segment of the field visit by members of the Executive Boards of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)/United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), UNICEF and the World Food Programme (WFP) took place during the same period; it was recommended that such joint visits be continued.

Executive Board members who visited Tajikistan and Uzbekistan (10-19 March) concluded that both countries had successfully established political stability and were seriously committed to and involved in implementing the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child (see p. 780). The country programmes in both countries were well-focused and characterized by a decentralized approach; they forged strong partnerships with institutions, the community, NGOs and children, while remaining action-oriented, cost-effective and catalytic. UNICEF's role as catalyst was especially evident in the pursuit of child-related issues within the framework of the Convention. The programme reviews, particularly the midterm reviews in Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, had resulted in a better-focused set of key priorities and targets. The current thrust of building the capacity of local NGOs and community participation should be reinforced. In the light of funding constraints, which could seriously hamper programme delivery and progress, it would be desirable for UNICEF to reinforce its fund-raising strategies for the region through the Central Asian Republics and Kazakhstan Forum, as well as horizontal cooperation.

At the initiative of the Executive Board President, Bureau members visited Bolivia (7-10 April), marking the first-ever field visit explicitly for Bureau members. The team found that the empowerment of communities, particularly of women, was evident in most programmes visited, including in the management of the microcredit scheme and of water and sanitation systems. Literacy programmes had proved very effective in empowering community members and as an entry point for other initiatives. The sustainability of most projects appeared to be linked to low cost, the use of simple technologies and the commitment of local authorities and community members. In addition to direct interventions in basic services, the country programme was also successful in advocacy, policy dialogue and capacity-building. UNICEF was able to influence national policies in bilingual education and in basic health insurance schemes for women and for children under the age of five. The Bureau members were convinced of the importance of field visits in future and recommended that the practice continue annually.

UNICEF programmes by sector

In 2003, UNICEF programme expenditures were linked to the five organizational priorities established in 2001 under the 2002-2005 MTSP [YUN 2001, p. 1093], with the largest share of the $1,208 million total expenditure made in the area of early childhood development (ECD) ($440 million or 36 per cent). Significant shares also went to immunization "plus" ($260 million or 22 per cent); girls' education ($233 million or 19 per cent); child protection ($123 million or 10 per cent); and HIV/AIDS ($111 million or 9 per cent). Expenditures in other areas amounted to $41 million or 3 per cent of the total. Programme support costs amounted to an additional $155 million.

The Executive Director allocated $24.9 million in 2003 to country programmes from the global set-aside of 7 per cent of regular resources. The funds were allocated in support of strategic initiatives, in line with the Executive Board decision establishing the set-aside (YUN 1997, p. 1220). The largest portion of the set-aside—41 per cent—was used to combat HIV/AIDS and its effects, while 16 per cent supported girls' education initiatives and 12 per cent went to child protection. The remaining funds were allocated to support arsenic mitigation, ECD, polio eradication, and health initiatives in Haiti. Forty-three per cent of the set-aside funds were allocated to countries in Asia and 30 per cent to sub-Saharan Africa.

Early childhood development

In 2003, UNICEF supported various components of the early childhood approach that addressed improving the situation of children living in poverty, their families and communities. Some 57 countries had national coordinating mechanisms for early childhood development, compared to 41 in 2002. The number of programme countries with official policies on early childhood increased from 17 in 2002 to 30 in 2003. Together with other UN agencies, UNICEF worked in Azerbaijan, Burkina Faso, Mongolia, the Republic of Moldova and Serbia and Montenegro to promote an emphasis on young children in new or revised poverty reduction strategy papers (PRSPs). In Uganda, health and education SWAPs were used to help ensure a policy focus on young children.

UNICEF and the World Bank teamed up to support the use in several countries of the "marginal budgeting to bottlenecks" tool, which helped to identify implementation constraints in the health-care system and the marginal costs of overcoming them. The tool had been used in preparing medium-term expenditure frameworks in Mali and Mauritania, where it helped to increase allocations to child and maternal survival, and for policy dialogue in Madagascar and the state of Madhya Pradesh in India.

Regarding basic delivery service in key areas of maternal and child health, water and sanitation, prevention of iodine deficiency disorders, malaria prevention, the control of diarrhoeal diseases, and pre-school and early learning programmes, some countries in West Africa used "zones of convergence" to deliver a coordinated package of services and commodities to young children. The convergence approach to basic service provision was also used in places with large populations of displaced people or refugees, such as Guinea and

Liberia. In Angola, "child-friendly" spaces were used to provide a range of assistance to war-affected children and adolescents, including nutrition rehabilitation, birth registration, family tracing and psychosocial recovery. The Integrated Management of Childhood Illness (IMCI) strategy, a major effort for the convergent delivery of services for child survival, growth and development, focused on malnutrition, acute respiratory infections, diarrhoeal diseases and malaria—conditions that combined to cause nearly 4 million child deaths every year. In 77 countries, UNICEF supported a "community focus" on IMCI, including strengthening the local health system, the case management skills of health workers, and family health practices in the management of diarrhoea, pneumonia and malaria. The Accelerated Child Survival and Development (ACSD) programme, a complementary initiative piloted by UNICEF and the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), supported cost-effective interventions in 11 countries in West and Central Africa, including immunization and case management of the main childhood killer diseases, vitamin A supplementation and antenatal care. It was estimated that some 130 million people in 86 developing countries were covered by IMCI and ACSD in 2003.

A range of sectoral interventions continued to be supported by UNICEF, such as the improvement of emergency obstetric care in 3,400 health facilities in 80 countries during 2003. The use of insecticide-treated nets (ITNs) to combat malaria expanded in 38 countries. At least 12 African countries were expected to reach 60 per cent usage rates among young children and women in 2005. Procurement of nets and insecticide, a priority of the UNICEF supply operation (see p. 1214), had more than doubled, from 2.3 million nets in 2001 to nearly 4.8 million—worth $13.5 million—in 2003, as part of UNICEF's contribution to the Roll Back Malaria partnership (see p. 1251). Insecticide worth some $3.7 million was also supplied. UNICEF supported the training of health workers in diarrhoea management and strengthening of systems for the distribution of essential commodities such as oral rehydration salts (ORS); it supplied 43.2 million sachets of ORS in 33 countries in 2003, a 38 per cent increase compared to 2002.

In 2003, UNICEF supported programmes for clean water, sanitation and hygiene in 91 countries, assisting in policy reform, capacity-building and improved service delivery for poor and marginalized populations, with a major focus on rural water supply and sanitation in countries with low coverage rates. In Iraq, UNICEF supported the repair of damaged infrastructure and supplied 825,000 people with water on a daily basis. It also led the UN coordinating unit for Iraq, based in Amman, Jordan. Emergency support was provided in response to an earthquake in Iran and to a major typhoid outbreak in Tajikistan.

During the year, participatory approaches were applied to nutrition, HIV/AIDS and malaria control, and were implemented successfully in drought- and AIDS-affected countries in Southern Africa, especially Mozambique and Zambia. Responding to the potential danger of arsenic poisoning in several countries in Asia, affecting an estimated 50 million people, Governments, with the support of UNICEF and other agencies, initiated arsenic mitigation programmes to raise awareness about the danger, identify contaminated wells and establish alternative water systems. UNICEF was involved in testing household filter technologies in Bangladesh, India and Viet Nam, and it continued to focus on finding alternative arsenic-free water sources.

During 2003, UNICEF supported birth registration campaigns in 40 least developed countries (LDCs) and 25 countries facing emergency situations, indicating that registration had become an important part of crisis response. The number of countries that had developed key parental care practices, based on UNICEF/World Health Organization (WHO) recommendations, for promoting among families and communities the need to secure a child's best start in life, increased to 83, compared with 67 in 2002; the total included some 60 per cent of LDCs and nearly two thirds of countries with current humanitarian appeals. About 60 countries also undertook baseline surveys during 2002-2003 to improve the understanding of existing family-care practices. Ten countries suffering the burden of HIV/AIDS revitalized efforts to support infant feeding and the Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative, and the introduction of the UNICEF/WHO Global Strategy for Infant and Young Child Feeding, endorsed by UNICEF's Executive Board in 2002 (YUN 2002, p. 1184), refocused efforts on support to women and families. The number of countries making efforts to strengthen the role of fathers in child care increased from 10 in 2002 to 28 in 2003. UNICEF continued its support for child-care centres in about two thirds of programme countries, and for home-based care in about half. In 38 countries, UNICEF also supported early learning initiatives that incorporated specific measures to prepare girls for school.

Immunization "plus"

dren were saved each year worldwide, but there were about 2.2 million preventable deaths. In 2003, UNICEF procured some 2.5 billion doses of vaccines to support immunization programmes and campaigns, including nearly 1.9 billion doses of oral polio vaccine. UNICEF continued to work for global polio eradication in partnership with Governments and international organizations, including the United States Centers for Disease Control (CDC), Rotary International and WHO. Following a rise in the number of confirmed cases of wild polio virus to 1,918 in 2002 from 483 in 2001, renewed progress was seen in 2003 towards the eradication goal, with some 733 cases confirmed. By the end of the year, polio transmission had become more localized and confined to a few states or provinces of Afghanistan, Egypt, India, the Niger, Nigeria and Pakistan. UNICEF assisted in the vaccination of 4 million children against polio before the conflict in Iraq (see p. 333), and its provision of 25 million doses of vaccine and cold-chain equipment helped to re-establish the routine immunization system soon after.

The MTSP target of reducing measles mortality by one half was likely to be reached and even surpassed. By 2002, the death toll from measles had been reduced to 611,000—an estimated 30 per cent decrease from 869,000 in 1990. Ninety-six per cent of those deaths occurred in 45 priority countries, mainly in Africa and Asia, where UNICEF and its partners were focusing their efforts. Of the 45 countries, 10 completed “catch-up” vaccination campaigns in 2003 and another eight mounted campaigns as part of multi-year efforts to reach all children. UNICEF supplied about 160 million doses of measles vaccines compared to 145 million in 2002. UNICEF, the United States CDC and WHO supported the planning and management of the campaigns and the exclusive use of auto-disable (AD) syringes. However, funding shortfalls and logistical constraints, injection safety and waste management still needed to be addressed to achieve and sustain national measles reduction targets. The Measles Initiative, whose members included the American Red Cross, the United States CDC, CIDA, the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, the United Nations Foundation, UNICEF and WHO, continued to support efforts towards the measles mortality reduction targets.

Maternal and neonatal tetanus (MNT) remained a public health problem in 52 countries. With widespread funding shortages, tetanus campaigns in 2003 aimed to cover 5.5 million women in high-risk areas that had poor infrastructure—a substantial decrease from 2002. Despite that setback, UNICEF supported Governments in formulating and implementing MNT activities in 37 of the priority countries, compared with 26 in 2002. In Afghanistan, a three-year elimination plan was developed and almost 760,000 women received three doses of tetanus toxoid vaccine.

Some 60 countries—half of those reporting—used AD syringes for all routine immunization activities during 2003, up from 45 in 2002. UNICEF supplied $31 million worth of AD syringes, an increase from $18 million the year before, contributing to limiting the spread of infections such as hepatitis B and HIV, and to strengthening awareness of immunization safety. UNICEF collaborated with the United States CDC, WHO and other partners in support of countries in the context of the Safe Injection Global Network.

UNICEF supplied nearly 511 million high-dose vitamin A supplement capsules to 82 countries through a donation in kind from the Micronutrient Initiative, a not-for-profit organization specializing in addressing micronutrient malnutrition. The UNICEF Vaccine Independence Initiative continued to contribute to national self-sufficiency procurement, including in the Pacific and Central Asian subregions. In 69 of the 130 programme countries for which information was available, routine vaccine spending was fully met by Governments. However, some 25 countries, predominantly in Africa, remained completely dependent on external support for their vaccine needs in 2003.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, UNICEF co-sponsored the first vaccination week, which brought immunization to indigenous populations and border areas, and continued to promote expanded coverage of routine services to the poorest families through its participation in health SWaps and PRSPs. The joint UNICEF/WHO Reach Every District immunization initiative was introduced in nine countries in 2003.

More than 16 million doses of measles vaccine had been delivered in Afghanistan since 2001, preventing an estimated 30,000 deaths. In Angola, a post-conflict country, over 7 million children of up to 14 years of age received measles vaccine and nearly 3 million received vitamin A supplements during two months in 2003. In Peru, the Ministry of Health and UNICEF initiated a hepatitis B immunization campaign, in response to an outbreak that threatened the survival of two ethnic groups in the Amazon region.

Girls' education

The number of countries with girls' net enrolment ratios below 85 per cent was estimated at 65 in 2003, about the same as in 2002. UNICEF had become a more responsive and strategic partner for meeting the MDG on education [YUN 2000, p. 52] and the goal to provide quality education for all by 2015, with particular emphasis on girls' schooling, to which Governments committed themselves at the 2000 World Education Forum [ibid., p. 1081]. In 2003, the United Nations Girls' Education Initiative [ibid.] was evaluated and revitalized, and was focusing on joint action by UN partners at the country level. Efforts were intensified and some advances were made by countries with low or stagnating levels of school enrolment and persistent gender disparities, including Afghanistan, Benin, Burkina Faso, Chad, Mali, Pakistan and Yemen. UNICEF played a leading role in the formulation of national education plans and their review against the indicative framework of the Fast-Track Initiative, a partnership of developing countries and donors created to help low-income countries achieve the MDG on education. It also increased its emphasis on advocacy for sustained investments in basic education, including through SWaps and PRSPs.

Enrolment gains reported in UNICEF-assisted zones were higher than the national averages in 53 countries in 2003, compared to 38 in 2002, but it was not clear that such gains were occurring at a rate that would make possible the achievement of the MDG goal on education with regard to gender disparity, particularly in south Asia and sub-Saharan Africa. In all, UNICEF spent some $31 million on educational supplies in 2003, a significant increase over earlier years. UNICEF-assisted community approaches to schooling were taken up by Governments and other partners and expanded in Egypt, Malawi, Sierra Leone and elsewhere.

The number of countries reporting that their national Education For All (EFA) plans included explicit measures for reducing the number of out-of-school girls increased from 66 in 2002 to 71 in 2003, and included 40 of the 65 countries that had an estimated net enrolment rate of less than 85 per cent, and 20 of the 25 priority countries for acceleration. The number of countries where a gender review of the education sector had been undertaken within the previous three years increased to 56 in 2003 from 37 in 2002, although only 28 of the countries with low girls' net enrolment had undertaken such a study.

Although UNICEF continued to support more specific interventions to promote quality learning, especially in curriculum development and teacher training, it needed to develop clearer strategies for such support, in order to avoid piecemeal approaches. Policies were needed to address the educational needs of orphans and adolescent girls, especially in countries with high HIV/AIDS prevalence.

UNICEF support for school environments with a clean water supply and sanitation expanded to 73 countries in 2003 from 50 in 2002, and was reported to be effective in promoting the enrolment and retention of girls. Practical hygiene education formed part of the interventions, either as a part of life-skills education or through the Participatory Hygiene and Sanitation Transformation approach.

Protection from violence, abuse, exploitation and discrimination

In 2003, 80 UNICEF offices reported Government-issued public statements on trafficking in children, compared with 64 in 2002, and 84 public statements on sexual exploitation, up from 14 in 2002. UNICEF stepped up efforts to emphasize, with national and UN partners, the close linkages between child protection and the MDGs and the relevant provisions of the Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49].

UNICEF documented 1,037 cases of gross violations of child rights in Sierra Leone. It supported databases on abducted children in Uganda and child soldiers in Sri Lanka. In Liberia, it assisted in the establishment of a child protection group of more than 40 NGOs, and a task force that had reunited over 100 children with their families. The number of UNICEF offices undertaking general advocacy on behalf of children in armed conflict increased from 21 in 2002 to 29 in 2003; on the demobilization of child soldiers, from 15 to 18; and on internally displaced children, from 12 to 15. At the global level, UNICEF worked with partners to produce the Inter-Agency Guiding Principles on Unaccompanied and Separated Children. It also continued close collaboration with the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict (see p. 789), including the finalization and piloting of a training package for peace-keeping personnel.

A major consultation (New York, November), convened by UNICEF with NGO and UN partners, identified potential indicators for children in formal care, juvenile justice, female genital mutilation and child marriage. One hundred and nine UNICEF offices reported that a child protection analysis was either in place or under development, up from 91 in 2002. In 2003, only 23 UNICEF offices indicated that national standards adequately protected children deprived of their liberty or in formal care. UNICEF worked with Armenia to shift funding from institutional care to support for vulnerable families, and supported the development of foster care systems. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, it worked with partners to ensure the inclusion of provisions in the PRSP aimed at reducing institutionalization. The promotion of inclusive education was the major emphasis of UNICEF work to support children with disabilities during the MTSP period.

By the end of 2003, the International Labour Organization (ILO) Worst Forms of Child Labour Convention (No. 182) [YUN 1999, p. 1388] had been ratified by 147 countries. UNICEF worked with ILO in over 60 countries to combat the worst forms of child labour. Joint activities in 2003 included a programme combining education for working children with financial credit for their families in Paraguay, a child labour survey in Jamaica and a time-bound plan of action in Indonesia. UNICEF developed Guidelines for Protection of the Rights of Children Victims of Trafficking in South-Eastern Europe, which were adopted by the Stability Pact, a security mechanism for South-Eastern Europe adopted in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 398]. Limited progress was made regarding child labour issues in national statistical systems in 2003.

Regarding child soldiers, UNICEF worked with partners, including the United Nations Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the World Bank and NGOs, in Côte d'Ivoire and the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), where 814 and 846 children were demobilized, respectively. Parties to the conflict in Sri Lanka agreed, with UNICEF facilitation, on a plan that established a formal release and reintegration system for child soldiers.

In 2003, 78 UNICEF offices reported that a review of legal standards to protect children from violence had been undertaken either by the Government or others within the last three years, up by 17 from 2002, while three quarters of country offices continued to promote awareness-raising on violence against children. Over 4,000 humanitarian relief workers were trained in Africa on a code of conduct applicable to international and national staff for the protection of women and children from sexual violence in humanitarian crises. In the DRC, Guinea and Sierra Leone, UNICEF developed programmes to respond to gender-based violence, which included components on HIV transmission.

UNICEF expanded its activities relating to landmines to 31 countries, from 18 at the start of the MTSP period, with particular emphasis on Asia and Eastern and Southern Africa. It produced its first mine-action strategy and strengthened its capacity to support mine-action in the field, with financial assistance from the United Kingdom Department for International Development and the Swedish Development Agency.

HIV/AIDS

Since the inception of the 2002-2005 MTSP [YUN 2002, p. 1184], UNICEF had made major advances in establishing HIV/AIDS as an organizational priority. Key challenges continued to include the interaction of HIV/AIDS with poverty and humanitarian crises, the effects of stigma, silence and discrimination, and the weakness of local capacities for prevention, treatment and care. In 2003, all UNICEF country offices were cooperating to combat HIV/AIDS. The UNICEF supply operation (see p. 1214) was assisting Governments in over 40 countries to purchase anti-retroviral drugs and diagnostic equipment as access to therapies expanded with the support of the WHO-led initiative to reach 3 million people by 2005 (the "3 by 5" initiative) (see p. 1248). A national situational analysis on HIV/AIDS, children and young people was undertaken in 78 countries and was planned for a further 21.

Preventing HIV/AIDS among young people was the core of the UNICEF global response to the epidemic and was a priority in all regions. UNICEF continued to work with Governments to develop or update national plans in that regard. In 2003, national plans were in place for some 88 countries, compared with 80 in 2002, but many of the plans were not supported with adequate resources. UNICEF supported life-skills-based education for HIV prevention in most countries with high prevalence rates, and many programmes were operating on a large scale through schools. National strategies in HIV prevention education had been adopted by 71 countries in 2003, compared with 64 in 2002. In Andhra Pradesh, India, approximately 1.3 million young people were reached through 11,500 schools. Curriculum reform and teacher training were taking place with UNICEF support in East Asia, sub-Saharan Africa and the Eastern Caribbean.

During 2003, UNICEF continued to be a lead supporter of prevention of parent-to-child transmission (PPTCT) programmes worldwide. A major development was the reduction in price of antiretroviral drugs and their increased availability for treatment through new global initiatives, with impetus from WHO and the United States. The priority for UNICEF and its partners was to move forward with PPTCT Plus, incorporating care and support for mothers, their children and families. The PPTCT Plus initiative, led by Columbia University (New York) and operated with UNICEF assistance in eight countries during 2003, was designed to increase synergy among PPTCT programmes by reducing stigma and offering mothers an additional incentive to participate. In 2003, UNICEF and its partners provided direct support to PPTCT programmes in 70 countries, up from 58 in 2002; five countries had nationwide programmes and 26 were in the process of scaling up.

Regarding the protection of children orphaned or made vulnerable by HIV/AIDS, the first forum of global partners on orphans and vulnerable children, convened by UNICEF (Geneva, October), agreed on a framework for responding to the crisis. UNICEF also issued Africa's Orphaned Generations, a report which stressed both the protection and material needs of orphans and raised the visibility of children within the global response to HIV/AIDS. National strategies for the protection of orphans and vulnerable children were in place in 36 countries in 2003, compared to 31 in 2002, and were under development in a further 32 countries. UNICEF was supporting relevant programmes in 38 countries in sub-Saharan Africa.

Operational and administrative matters

UNICEF finances

UNICEF income totalled $1,680 million, an increase of $226 million (16 per cent) over 2002, which resulted from substantial increases in emergency contributions and some growth in regular resource contributions and exchange rate gains. The total was higher than the financial plan forecast by 20 per cent. UNICEF derived its income primarily from Governments, which contributed $1,127 million (67 per cent of total income), and from private sector or non-government sources, which provided $516 million (31 per cent). The balance of $37 million (2 per cent) was derived from other miscellaneous sources.

During its second regular session in September, the Executive Board took note of the UNICEF interim financial report and statements for the year ended 31 December 2002 [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.9].

Budget appropriations

In June [dec. 2003/6], the Board approved recommendations for the aggregate indicative budgets for 12 country programmes and a programme for Palestinian children and women, amounting to the following amounts for regular and other resources, respectively, by region: Africa, $108,188,000 and $201,744,000; the Americas and the Caribbean, $3,912,000 and $10,000,000; Asia, $67,124,000 and $79,000,000; and the Middle East and North Africa, $3,200,000 and $9,230,000. On 17 September [dec. 2003/12], the Board approved recommendations for funding of $13,023,000 from other resources only for country programmes in two countries and a Gulf Area sub-regional programme; $2,208,730 in additional resources to fund the approved country programmes of eight countries; and $789,594 from regular resources to cover overexpenditures from four programmes. A report of the Executive Board summarized the regular resources and other resources programmed for 2003 [E/ICEF/2003/P/L.25].

Also in June [dec. 2003/7], the Board approved an increase of $100 million in the other resources ceiling for intercountry programmes, from $203 million to $303 million, for the 2002-2003 biennium, as recommended by the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2003/P/L.14].

During its extraordinary budgetary session (New York, 1-2 December), the Executive Board considered an October report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.15] on UNICEF's supplementary support budget for 2002-2003 [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.13] and biennial support budget for 2004-2005 [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.14]. Acting on the comments of ACABQ, the Executive Board, in December [dec. 2003/16], approved supplementary budget appropriations of $8 million to cover salary increases and additional requirements for security, and approved gross appropriations in the amount of $684,906,000 for UNICEF programme support in the field and at headquarters, and for management and administration [dec. 2003/17]. It resolved that income estimates of $156,400,000 would be used to offset the gross appropriations, resulting in estimated net appropriations of $528,506,000. The Board authorized the Executive Director to redeploy resources between appropriation lines up to a maximum of 5 per cent of the appropriation to which the resources were redeployed. The Board also approved an additional allocation of $14 million for security-related provisions. It requested the Executive Director to continue to develop results-based budgeting for the 2006-2007 biennium, in close collaboration with other funds and programmes; to consult the Board if the level of resources available for programming fell significantly below the level projected in the 2004-2005 budget; and to explore options for timing the approval of the biennial support budget in the context of one of the existing regular board sessions and to report during the 2004 annual session.

As a result of the harmonization of the budgets of UNICEF, UNDP and UNFPA, proposals relating to intercountry programmes were presented separately from the support budget. Based on those proposals [E/ICEF/2003/P/L.29], the Executive Board, on 2 December [dec. 2003/18], approved a regular resources programme budget of $25.19 million

(other than the Emergency Programme Fund) for 2004-2005. The Emergency Programme Fund budget was approved at $25 million. The Board also approved an other resources-funded programme budget of $302.2 million for the 2004-2005 biennium, subject to the availability of specific-purpose contributions. Further, a total recommendation of $302.2 million for other resources funding was approved for the biennium.

In July [E/ICEF/2003/P/L.21], the Executive Director reported on the implementation of the modified system for allocation of regular resources for programmes, which was endorsed by the Board in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1220]. Since the system's introduction in 1999, the secretariat had implemented all of its features. The report described results of the implementation; links between the modified system and the 2002-2005 MTSP and with integrated budgeting; and measures for improving system implementation performance. On 19 September [dec. 2003/13], the Executive Board decided to continue to apply the modified system. It requested the Executive Director to intensify efforts to reach the target of 60 per cent of regular resources to be allocated to LDCs and maintain at least 50 per cent for sub-Saharan Africa, and to report to the Board no later than the second regular session of 2004. She was also asked to continue to review the modified system.

Audits

On 14 January [dec. 2002/3], the Executive Board took note of the UNICEF financial report and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2001 and the report of the Board of Auditors [A/57/5/Add.2 & Corr.1]. In October [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.10], UNICEF reported on steps taken or to be taken in response to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the UNICEF accounts for the 2000-2001 biennium.

In its sixth annual report [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.11 & Corr.1], the Office of Internal Audit stated that it completed 36 audits in 2002, including two audits at headquarters locations and three global summary reports. It found that overall, UNICEF controls were generally satisfactory, no location was found to be unsatisfactory in all audited areas, and most country offices and headquarters auditees took timely and adequate actions to address both the audit observations issued in 2002 and those that remained open from previous years.

Operational reserve

In response to a 2001 Executive Board decision [YUN 2001, p. 1098], the Executive Director, in March, reviewed the issue of establishing an operational reserve [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.4]. The report stated that since the issue was last discussed by the Board in 2001, UNICEF had exceeded the requirement, under its current policy, to maintain year-end cash balances of regular resources income equal to about 10 per cent of the following year's regular resources income, as it had done since the measure was established in 1987 [YUN 1987, p. 862]. In addition, UNICEF had met the informal liquidity ratio reported in its financial statements. While an operational reserve could provide a short-term response mechanism to address an unforeseen shortfall in receipts and income, and afford an opportunity to earn marginally increased interest income through longer-term investments, it also created a balance sheet asset at the expense of funding programmes, and might engender increased costs if it became necessary to break long-term investment commitments to utilize the funds. A 12 May letter from the ACABQ Chairman to the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.6 & Corr.1] contained ACABQ's comments on the report.

On 4 June [dec. 2003/8], the Executive Board recommended that UNICEF continue to manage its liquidity in accordance with the requirement approved by the Board, and that it not establish a funded operational reserve.

Recovery policy

In January, the Executive Board considered a review of the current recovery policy for support costs for programmes funded from other resources [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.1], which the Executive Board approved in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1100] as an interim policy and was a core part of the financial procedures related to supplementary-funded projects. The review recommended action to the Board regarding revisions to the policy. The Board also had before it ACABQ's comments on the review [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.2]. An April report [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.5] discussed consultations by UNICEF with regional groups, national committees and, in some cases, bilateral consultations on the policy, which identified key areas of consensus on the underlying principles of the recovery policy and key areas of concern, including harmonization; thematic and private sector fundraising; simplification of the proposal; interest income on other resources cash balances; and UN reform and new funding modality. A 12 May letter from the ACABQ Chairman to the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.6 & Corr.1] presented ACABQ's comments on the April report.

On 5 June [dec. 2003/9], the Executive Board requested all donors to strive to increase contributions to regular resources, and requested the Executive Director to hold consultations to encourage donors to increase the proportion of contributions to regular resources. It endorsed the objectives that other resources support the MTSP priorities and that regular resources should not subsidize the support costs for other resources programmes, and it encouraged UNICEF to apply procedures that reduced transaction costs for other resources programmes (see below). It also endorsed the aim of eliminating, in the medium term, the subsidy of support costs for other resources programmes by regular resources. The Board called on donors contributing to other resources to consider directing those contributions to the five thematic areas of the MTSP (see p. 1206) and called on all donors to simplify their administrative and reporting requirements to significantly reduce the administrative costs of their contributions to other resources. The Board decided to apply, as an interim measure, the methodology, as described in the review report (see p. 1212). It authorized the Executive Director to apply the following rates to new agreements to be signed after Executive Board approval of the revised policy on an interim basis: 5 per cent for all resources raised from the private sector in the programme countries; for other private sector resources, 5 per cent for thematic contributions and 7 per cent for non-thematic contributions; for other contributions to thematic areas, 8 per cent; and an additional reduction of 1 per cent for 90 per cent of up-front payments. For non-thematic contributions, the Board authorized 12 per cent and additional reductions of 1 per cent for 90 per cent of up-front payments, 1 per cent for contributions over $500,000, 2 per cent for contributions over $2 million, 3 per cent for contributions over $10 million, and, as a transitional arrangement through 2004, 4 per cent for contributions over $40 million. The Board requested the Executive Director to bring the issue of the recovery policy to the attention of the UNDG working group on harmonization and simplification, with a view to harmonizing the methodology used by UNDG members in devising their recovery policies. It also requested the Executive Director to report to the Board on the experiences of the recovery policy, especially on actual cost recovery achieved and recovery rates applied to projects during this period, on its effects on the regular resources and on the harmonization efforts undertaken, and to submit proposals for further steps towards the elimination of any remaining subsidy of support costs of other resources programmes by regular resources at the second regular session of the Executive Board in 2005, for a review of the interim policy.

Also on 5 June [dec. 2003/10], the Executive Board requested the Executive Director to submit, in 2004, an assessment report, based on country-specific examples, of the UNICEF experience of joint programming and other innovative and collaborative approaches aimed at improving programming and reducing transaction costs for programme countries and their associated costs and benefits.

Resource mobilization

UNICEF continued to collaborate with Governments to mobilize both regular and other resources, holding 17 consultations or high-level visits with donor Governments. A further 59 discussions and presentations were held on thematic, technical or programmatic issues. The discussions increasingly focused on UNICEF's strategic contributions to the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51]; the need to obtain regular resources contributions to strengthen UNICEF's core capacity to support national priorities over the medium term; and flexible, thematic contributions that did not entail high transaction costs.

At a January pledging event, 62 Governments pledged a total of $392 million to regular resources, and, by year's end, 90 Governments had contributed $403 million, an increase of 10 per cent compared to 2002; some 28 Governments increased their contributions. The United States remained the largest donor with a contribution of $119.2 million, followed by Norway ($46.2 million), Sweden ($36.3 million), the Netherlands ($32.7 million), the United Kingdom ($27.8 million) and Denmark ($26.9 million).

In the area of thematic funding for MTSP priorities, a total of $29.4 million was mobilized from four Governments ($24.4 million from Andorra, Finland, Norway and Sweden) and eight national committees ($5 million from the committees in Belgium, France, Italy, Japan, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom, and the United States).

Private Sector Division

Net income from UNICEF Private Sector Division (PSD) activities for the year ending 31 December 2003 totalled $289.4 million for regular resources, $8 million (2.9 per cent) higher than the $281.4 million achieved in 2002 [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.9]. That amount included $47.1 million from UNICEF card and gift sales, $249.5 million from private sector fund-raising activities, a positive exchange rate adjustment of $6.3 million and investment fund expenditures of $13.5 million. In addition, $172.2 million ($141.9 million in 2002) was raised from private sector fund-raising activities that were earmarked for other resources. The net consolidated income, including both regular and other resources, amounted to $461.6 million, an increase of $38.3 million compared to the 2002 net consolidated income of $423.3 million. Excluding a one-time legacy in 2002 of $56.2 million, the net increase in 2003 was $94.5 million (25.8 per cent).

On 15 January (dec. 2003/4), the Executive Board approved budgeted expenditures of $80.9 million for the PSD work plan for 2003 [E/ICEF/2003/AB/L.3]. The Executive Director was authorized to redeploy resources between various budget lines up to a maximum of 10 per cent of the amounts approved, and to spend an additional amount between Executive Board sessions, when necessary, up to the amount caused by currency fluctuations, to implement the 2003 approved work plan. The Board renewed investment funds with $14.2 million established for 2003; authorized the Executive Director to incur expenditures in 2003 related to the cost of goods delivered (production/purchase of raw materials, cards and other products) for 2004, up to $30.5 million; and approved the PSD medium-term plan for 2004-2007.

JIU report

In January, the Executive Board had before it a secretariat note [E/ICEF/2003/5] on the reports of the Joint Inspection Unit concerning issues of relevance to UNICEF, prepared between September 2001 and September 2002. On 13 January (dec. 2003/2) the Board took note of the document.

Joint Committee on Education

The Executive Board considered a report of the eighth meeting of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)/UNICEF Joint Committee on Education (Paris, 25 November 2002) [E/ICEF/2003/8], which addressed collaboration in the two core areas of EFA and girls' education at the international, regional and national levels, focusing on results, impacts and major challenges ahead. The Joint Committee, having decided that it had fulfilled its original mandate, agreed to recommend to the UNESCO and UNICEF Executive Boards that it be discontinued and asked the secretariats of both agencies to propose ways of strengthening coordination.

On 15 January (dec. 2003/5), the UNICEF Executive Board agreed with the Joint Committee's recommendation and requested the UNICEF secretariat to work with the UNESCO secretariat on strengthening coordination.

Supply operations

The Executive Board had before it a review of the UNICEF supply function in the context of the MTSP, which provided an overview of the UNICEF Supply Division and discussed the supply component of the five organizational priorities of the MTSP [E/ICEF/2003/7]. It also reviewed the Division's procurement services for governmental and non-governmental partners and its work with the oil-for-food programme in Iraq (see p. 362), and discussed steps taken to improve the efficiency of UNICEF's global supply operation and the Division's alliances and partnerships. The report addressed future challenges, including the issue of vaccine security; the increased demand for antiretroviral medicines for the treatment of people with HIV/AIDS and for insecticide-impregnated bednets to help prevent malaria in young children and pregnant women; the procurement of key commodities in a more complex business environment; and the procurement of supporting supplies.

Youth

Implementation of the World Programme of Action for Youth

UN policies and programmes on youth in 2003 continued to focus on efforts to implement the 1995 World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2002 and Beyond, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 50/81 [YUN 1995, p. 121]. The Programme of Action addressed the problems faced by youth worldwide and outlined ways to enhance youth participation in national and international policy- and decision-making.

An expert group meeting on jobs for youth: national strategies for employment promotion (Geneva, 15-16 January) was organized by the UN Division for Social Policy and Development in collaboration with ILO.

World Youth Report 2003

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/117 [YUN 2001, p. 1100], the Secretary-General, by a May note [A/58/79], transmitted the World Youth Report 2003 [E/CN.5/2003/4], a comprehensive report on the global situation of youth, which he had presented to the forty-first session of the Commission for Social Development (New York, 27 February 2002 and 10-21 February 2003) [E/2003/26] (see p. 1099). The report stated that from 1995 to 2000, the world's youth population was estimated to have grown by an average of 0.7 per cent, from 1.025 billion to 1.061 billion, with 85 per cent living in developing countries. Based on the findings of an expert group meeting on global priorities for youth (Helsinki, Finland, October 2002), the report contained a review of the 10 priority areas of the World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, namely education, employment, hunger and poverty, health issues, environment, drug abuse, juvenile delinquency, leisure, girls and young women, and youth participation. It also reviewed five new concerns that had emerged since the adoption of the Programme of Action, including the impact of globalization on young people; the use of and access to information and communication technologies; the dramatic increase in HIV infections among young people and the epidemic's impact on their lives; the active involvement of young people in armed conflict; and the increased importance of addressing intergenerational issues in an ageing society. The report presented recommendations on those priorities and concerns.

The report evaluated the 2001 World Youth Forum of the United Nations System [YUN 2001, p. 1100] and recommended that future sessions of the Forum be based on an intergovernmental mandate emanating from the Assembly. It also suggested that, in order to promote meaningful youth participation, Governments should take a more positive stance when addressing young people's ideas and questions.

Youth employment

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/165 [YUN 2002, p. 1192], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/229], reported on the promotion of youth employment and progress achieved by the Youth Employment Network, formed by the Secretary-General in collaboration with ILO in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1100]. ILO estimated that about 74 million young women and men were unemployed worldwide, accounting for 41 per cent of the 180 million unemployed globally; many more were working long hours for low pay. An estimated 59 million young people between the ages of 15 and 17 were engaged in hazardous work. In response to a questionnaire on the current status of national action plans for youth employment, 19 of the 37 responding Member States reported that they had not prepared a national action plan; of those, 11 reported that they were planning to do so. Several Member States reported that they did not have a specific action plan for youth employment because the issue was already being addressed as part of an overall action plan for employment or that there were already programmes in place addressing the issue.

The report stated that the Network's High-level Panel on Youth Employment had set up Working Groups on employability, equal opportunities, entrepreneurship and employment creation, corresponding to the four priority areas for national action plans identified in 2001 [ibid.]. The results of the Working Groups were integrated into a consolidated document that provided further guidance in the four areas and were the subject of discussion at the Panel's second High-level Meeting (Geneva, 30 June-1 July) (see below). The Network's activities were being coordinated with the work of UNDG, the United Nations Millennium Development Project—an advisory body launched by the Secretary-General and the UNDP Administrator to recommend strategies for achieving the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51]—and with the overall strategy for implementation of the Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 55/2 [ibid., p. 49].

The fifth session of the High-level Committee on Programmes of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (Rome, 26-27 March) [CEB/2003/4] confirmed its strong support for the Network. It called on its members to contribute actively to Governments' efforts to develop national reviews and action plans and to provide inputs to the Secretary-General's report to the Assembly's fifty-eighth (2003) session.

The second meeting of the Network's High-level Panel (Geneva, 30 June-1 July) discussed a draft action programme recommending the next five steps to be taken by the Network, including a call for the Network to endorse the Panel's recommendations on the four priorities for national action plans, based on road maps produced by the Panel's four Working Groups; initiatives to stimulate and encourage Governments to design and implement national action plans, as called for in Assembly resolution 57/165 [YUN 2002, p. 1192]; a proposal for social dialogue on youth employment; an invitation to youth organizations worldwide to advise on the design of youth employment programmes, contribute to the implementation of those programmes, help Governments monitor progress towards their youth employment commitments, and work with the Panel in an advisory capacity; and a call for the World Bank and ILO to develop jointly an initiative for mobilizing funding for national youth employment programmes and for the work of the Network's secretariat. Following the meeting, the secretariat undertook joint consultations on strengthening the coherence of its youth employment activities in three areas, including a political process: linking policy to action; mapping the challenge of youth employment; and promoting initiatives and programmes with proven impact through network development.

In March, ILO's Governing Body called on the Youth Employment Network and its core partner institutions (ILO, the World Bank and the UN Secretariat) to support Member States in carrying out national reviews and action plans on youth employment. A guidance note for the preparation of reviews and action plans, which was annexed to the report, was sent to all Member States. The Network, under ILO's leadership, was called on to carry out from 2004 to early 2005, in cooperation with the Secretariat, the World Bank and other relevant agencies, a global analysis and evaluation of the reviews and plans and of progress made by the Network. ILO intended to prepare the global analysis and evaluation in the framework of its World Employment Report 2005. The analysis would also contribute to the five-year review of the MDGs in 2005.

The report concluded that, to prepare for the next phase of the Network's activities, which focused on country-level action, it was urgent that Member States submit their national reviews and action plans and that steps be taken to mobilize the necessary resources for implementation.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

11. Encourages Member States to prepare national reviews and action plans on youth employment, either integrated into their national action plans on employment or issued as separate documents, to make full use of existing data and statistics and to involve young people and youth organizations in this process, taking into account, inter alia, the commitments made by Member States in this regard, in particular those included in the World Programme of Action, and, where such reviews and action plans exist, to submit them to the Secretariat by September 2004;

12. Invites, within the context of the Youth Employment Network, the International Labour Organization, in collaboration with the Secretariat and the World Bank and other relevant specialized agencies, to assist and support, upon request, the efforts of Governments in the elaboration of national reviews and action plans and to undertake a global analysis and evaluation of progress made in this regard;

13. Recommends devoting two plenary meetings at its sixtieth session, in 2005, to review the situation of youth and achievements attained in the implementation of the World Programme of Action ten years after its adoption;

14. Requests the Secretary-General, with regard to paragraph 4 above, to consider organizing a consultative meeting with youth organizations and youth representatives, taking into account equitable geographical distribution, on the evaluation of the progress made and obstacles encountered in the implementation of the World Programme of Action in preparation for the two plenary meetings of the General Assembly to be held in 2005, and to include the outcome of the meeting in his report to the Assembly at its sixtieth session;

15. Invites all Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to contribute to the United Nations Youth Fund, and requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate actions to encourage contributions;

16. Notes with appreciation the provision by some Member States of expertise and financial resources to support the activities of the Youth Employment Network, and invites all Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to contribute to the Network in support of action taken at the country level within the framework of the Network;

17. Reiterates the call made in the World Programme of Action to Member States to consider including youth representatives in their delegations to the General Assembly and other relevant United Nations meetings, thus broadening the channels of communication and enhancing the discussion of youth-related issues, and requests the Secretary-General to convey this invitation again to Member States;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, through the Commission for Social Development at its forty-third session, with a comprehensive report including an evaluation of the implementation since 1995 of the priority areas identified in the World Programme of Action, including actions taken by Member States, United Nations bodies, specialized agencies, regional commissions and youth organizations in their multi-disciplinary work for and with youth;

19. Also requests the Secretary-General, in preparing the report requested in paragraph 18 above, to bear in mind the five issues identified in paragraph 3 above and discuss them in an annex to the report;

20. Further requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a global analysis and evaluation of national action plans on youth employment.

[E/2003/26] (see p. 1099), considered a Secretariat note [E/CN.5/2003/7] on the Commission's role in integrating the different dimensions of population ageing in its work and the modalities for the review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing [YUN 2002, p. 1194], which was adopted in 2002 by the Second World Assembly on Ageing [ibid., p. 1193]. The note underscored ageing as a cross-cutting theme and the need to integrate it into the broader agendas of the Economic and Social Council, General Assembly and other relevant functional commissions. As for the Commission, its role in the follow-up became more important in the light of the Regional Implementation Strategy for the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, adopted by the Economic Commission for Europe Ministerial Conference on Ageing (Berlin, 11-13 September 2002) [ECE/AC.23/2002/2/Rev.6], whose follow-up process was made contingent on what was decided by the Commission.

The note presented a proposal for a "bottom-up" approach to the review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing that would involve open-ended dialogues, meetings and forums with various stakeholders at local levels both in and outside of government, and in partnership and coordination with national actors. Regional entities, notably the regional commissions and their intergovernmental bodies, should play an active role in implementation assessment by networking with their member countries, national committees and other stakeholders in the exchange of information and the gathering and compiling of data and research findings. It was envisaged that the Commission would provide the forum in which stakeholders would present and elaborate on their findings. The Commission was invited to consider the review and appraisal approach and to reach an understanding on the format and substantive outcome. The note recommended that the Commission consider a review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action every four or five years. In identifying the themes or issues for the review, it recommended that the Commission adhere to the Plan's recommendations and its priority directions, namely, ageing and development, advancing health and well-being into old age, and ensuring enabling and supportive environments [YUN 2002, p. 1193]. It also recommended that the Commission adopt the "bottom-up" review and appraisal approach.

The UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) would facilitate the review process, including the preparation of materials for a review strategy, advocacy, and information dissemination and exchange. Under the Commission's guidance, DESA could also develop guidelines for the review of the Madrid Plan of Action.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 42], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2003/26], adopted resolution 2003/14 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Modalities for the review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that the goals and targets in the economic, social and related fields contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, supplemented by the outcomes of their reviews, constitute a comprehensive basis for actions at the national, regional and international levels,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 57/167 of 18 December 2002 and all previous Assembly resolutions on ageing and the International Year of Older Persons,

Recalling further the resolutions adopted by the Commission for Social Development on ageing and on the preparations for the Second World Assembly on Ageing,

Bearing in mind that, in its resolution 57/167, the General Assembly invited the Commission to consider the modalities for reviews and appraisals of the follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing,

Bearing in mind also that the Commission is responsible for follow-up to and appraisal of the implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, and that it should consider integrating into its work the different dimensions of population ageing as contained in the Madrid Plan of Action,

Bearing in mind further the work of the open-ended Ad Hoc Working Group of the General Assembly on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields, established pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/270 A of 20 December 2002,

1. Invites all actors at all levels, as appropriate, to participate in the implementation of and follow-up to the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002;

2. Invites the organizations of the United Nations system to consider mainstreaming ageing issues into their work plans;

3. Invites Members States and other stakeholders to mainstream ageing into the design and implementation of their policies and programmes;

4. Invites Governments as well as the United Nations system and civil society to participate in a "bottom-up" approach to the review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action, through, inter alia, sharing of ideas, data collection and best practices;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session information on the implementation of the present resolution.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/167 [YUN 2002, p. 1197] on follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing (2002) [ibid., p. 1193] and resolution 57/177 on the situation of older women in society [ibid., p. 1153], the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/160], reported on the implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing [YUN 2002, p. 1194]. During the first year following the World Assembly, progress was seen in several areas, including intergovernmental processes, inter-agency activities, regional actions, research and information dissemination.

The report introduced the road map for the implementation of the Plan of Action, which was intended to assist countries in developing implementation strategies at the national level by helping to set priorities, select approaches and stimulate international cooperation. It took into consideration the Plan's recommendations for implementation and follow-up, and incorporated the Plan's priorities for international cooperation on ageing. National capacity-building and mainstreaming of ageing into the national development agenda were two universal and essential facets of the implementation process, particularly in developing countries and those with economies in transition. The DESA Programme on Ageing, as the UN focal point on ageing, would facilitate the evolving road map project through networking within and outside the UN system. National action would include the convening of workshops. At the international level, ageing would need to be linked to the global agendas on poverty, children and youth, the advancement of women, rural development and HIV/AIDS. The report identified the lack of age-disaggregated data in many countries as a serious limitation to policy formulation and development, and recommended that the Assembly consider requesting the Statistical Commission to develop modalities for disaggregating statistics on the basis of age and sex. While dialogue on ageing had increased significantly among stakeholders, the inclusion of ageing in development processes was constrained by the lack of data and formulation of indicators. The report recommended that the Assembly ensure the incorporation of ageing into actions to achieve the MDG on the eradication of poverty, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49], and that it consider requesting UN organizations and specialized agencies to take up the issue of mainstreaming ageing in their work programmes and to report on progress to the Commission for Social Development.

The situation of older women and the gender aspects of ageing should receive explicit attention from Governments and other stakeholders. The report proposed that the Assembly recommend the establishment or strengthening of institutional linkages at the national level between national machineries for the advancement of women and governmental bodies responsible for developing, coordinating and/or implementing age-related policies and programmes. Opportunities for systematic attention to the gender aspects of ageing and the situation of older women should continue to be enhanced within the UN system, and the mainstreaming of ageing should be undertaken from a gender perspective. Opportunities should be explored for further coordination and collaboration between the Commission for Social Development and the Commission on the Status of Women (see p. 1192), with regard to older women and in the framework of their multi-year programmes of work.

Regarding the proposed "bottom-up" narrative approach to the review and appraisal of the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action (see p. 1218), the Secretary-General stated that additional efforts were required to clarify the content of modalities and periodicity of the review and appraisal process, and recommended that the Assembly request the Commission for Social Development to take up that task in 2004. He also recommended that the Assembly suggest that the Commission apply an ageing perspective in its consideration of priority themes related to the follow-up to the 1995 World Summit for Social Development [YUN 1995, p. 1113].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/498], adopted resolution 58/134 without vote [agenda item 107].

Follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/167 of 18 December 2002, in which it endorsed the Political Declaration and the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, and welcomed the preparation by the Programme on Ageing of the Division for Social Policy and Development of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat of a road map for the process of implementing the Madrid Plan of Action, as well as its resolution 57/177 of 18 December 2002, in which it stressed, inter alia, the importance of mainstreaming a gender perspective,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/14 of 21 July 2003, in which the Council invited Governments, the United Nations system and civil society to participate in a "bottom-up" approach to the review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action,

Recalling further its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003, in which it agreed to the framework for an integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields and reaffirmed the importance of regularly reviewing the progress made in the implementation of the commitments undertaken at individual major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields,

Recognizing that the follow-up to and the implementation of the outcome of the Second World Assembly on Ageing is an integral part of the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits,

Recognizing also that a tremendous global demographic change is to be expected during the next fifty years, in both developing and developed countries, as well as in countries with economies in transition, and that since this change will be the most rapid in developing countries, where the older population is expected to quadruple over the same period of time, it is imperative that ageing be integrated into development policies for the attainment of internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Aware that the lack of data disaggregated by age and sex is an impediment to the consideration of ageing issues and the situation of older persons at both the international and the national policy levels,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Also takes note of the road map for the implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, contained in the report of the Secretary-General;
3. Invites Member States and the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to incorporate ageing, as appropriate, into actions to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in particular the goal on the eradication of poverty;
4. Stresses the need for action at the national and international levels to implement the Madrid Plan of Action, including the need to set national and international priorities and to select appropriate approaches to ensure that countries achieve a society for all ages;
5. Encourages the establishment of institutional linkages at the national level between national machineries for the advancement of women and those governmental entities responsible for the development, implementation and coordination of ageing-related policies and programmes;
6. Stresses that the role of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, is important in supporting Governments in their implementation and assessment of and follow-up to the Madrid Plan of Action;
7. Requests the Economic and Social Council to consider ageing when elaborating its list of cross-sectoral thematic issues common to the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits for the establishment of the multi-year programme of work for the coordination segment of its substantive session;
8. Requests the Commission for Social Development to integrate an ageing perspective in its consideration of priority themes related to the follow-up to the World Summit for Social Development;

9. Requests the Commission for Social Development and the Commission on the Status of Women to further coordinate and collaborate through their respective bureaux on the issue of older women within the framework of their respective multi-year programmes of work;

10. Recalls, in this regard, its request to each functional commission of the Economic and Social Council to examine its methods of work in order to better pursue the implementation of the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, recognizing that there is no need for a uniform approach since each functional commission has its own specificity, while noting that modern methods of work can better guarantee the review of progress made in implementation at all levels, on the basis of a report containing recommendations to be submitted by the Secretary-General to each functional commission and relevant subsidiary body of the Economic and Social Council on its methods of work, in accordance with the provisions defined by the respective outcomes and relevant decisions taken by each body, bearing in mind the progress recently achieved in this regard by certain commissions, in particular the Commission on Sustainable Development, and recalling that the functional commissions and other relevant bodies of the Council should report to it no later than 2005 on the outcome of this examination;

11. Requests the Commission for Social Development to take up the issue of the periodicity and the format of the review of the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action at its forty-second session, taking into account the provisions of resolution 57/270 B;

12. Stresses the importance of the collection of data and population statistics disaggregated by age and sex on all aspects of policy formulation by all countries, and encourages the relevant entities of the United Nations to support national efforts in capacity-building, especially those of developing countries and countries with economies in transition, takes note in this context of the establishment by the United Nations of an Internet-accessible database on ageing, and invites States to submit, whenever possible, information for inclusion in the database;

13. Requests the Statistical Commission to assist Member States in developing modalities for disaggregating data by age and sex;

14. Requests the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system and the specialized agencies to integrate ageing, including from a gender perspective, into their programmes of work and to report on their progress to the Commission for Social Development;

15. Invites the international financial institutions and the regional development banks to take older persons into account in their policies and projects as part of the effort to assist developing countries and countries with economies in transition in the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action;

16. Recommends that the institutional linkages between United Nations gender focal points and focal points on ageing be strengthened in order to enhance the integration of the gender aspects of ageing within the system;

17. Welcomes the progress made in the work of some of the regional commissions in implementing the objectives and recommendations of the Madrid Plan of Action, and encourages other regional commissions to make progress in this regard;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to forward his report to the Commission for Social Development at its forty-second session and to make available any other relevant information related to this issue that may assist the Commission in its deliberations;

19. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Chapter XII

Refugees and displaced persons

In 2003, the total number of persons of concern to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) dropped to approximately 17 million, from 20.8 million in 2002, due largely to the return home of millions of refugees following the end of prolonged crises, mainly in Africa and Afghanistan. Almost 5 million people who had fled their homes found a solution through resettlement or local integration.

UNHCR achieved success in addressing the refugee situation in some regions, while problems in other areas undermined progress. Positive developments included the repatriation of over half a million Afghan refugees in the largest return movement of the year. Despite persisting insecurity in parts of Afghanistan, UNHCR maintained the momentum of returns and made considerable progress in ensuring that returnees were included in national development programmes. In other large-scale repatriations, thousands were assisted to return to their places of origin in Angola, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Côte d'Ivoire, Eritrea, Iraq, Liberia, Rwanda, Sierra Leone and Somalia. On the negative side, persons of concern in some 38 protracted refugee crises worldwide still awaited durable solutions. Notable situations of concern in that regard included millions of Afghans and half a million Angolans remaining in neighbouring countries, and 700,000 Burundian refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs) whose hope of return faded as the country's peace process faltered. Others included some 165,000 refugees from Western Sahara living in camps in south-western Algeria for over 25 years and an increasing number of IDPs, estimated at 2 million, uprooted by the conflict in Colombia, of whom 290,000 were displaced during the year. In other fresh outflows, over 300,000 refugees fled several African countries, creating large-scale emergencies in some cases.

During the year, UNHCR finalized the report on the "UNHCR 2004" process, designed to strengthen the Office and better position it to carry out its mandate. In December, the General Assembly removed the time limitation on the continuation of UNHCR and decided to continue the Office until the refugee problem was solved. It also enlarged the UNHCR Executive Committee membership from 64 to 66 States. In October, the Assembly extended the term of office of Ruud Lubbers as UN High Commissioner for Refugees for a period of two years beginning on 1 January 2004.

Programme policy

Executive Committee action. At its fifty-fourth session (Geneva, 29 September–3 October) [A/58/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee of the UNHCR Programme, in a conclusion on proposals [A/AC.96/980] arising from the "UNHCR 2004" process [YUN 2001, p. 1107], recognized UNHCR's leading role in international protection of refugees and supported the continuation of the Office until the refugee problem was solved, thereby removing the time limitation contained in General Assembly resolution 57/186 [YUN 2002, p. 1203] (see also p. 1225). Highlighting the importance of joint efforts by UN departments and UNHCR in seeking solutions for refugees, the Committee encouraged UNHCR to play a more active role in that regard and recommended that the High Commissioner review, every 10 years, the global situation of refugees and UNHCR's role, and report thereon to the Assembly as from its sixty-eighth (2013) session. The Committee also adopted conclusions on international protection, including the Agenda for Protection adopted in 2002 [ibid., p. 1205] and statelessness; the return of persons found not to be in need of international protection; protection safeguards in interception measures; and protection from sexual abuse and exploitation. Decisions were adopted on administrative, programme and financial, and institutional matters.

In his opening statement to the Committee, the High Commissioner, describing the negative impact on UNHCR operations of the 19 August terrorist attack on the UN headquarters in Baghdad, Iraq (see p. 346), stated that the challenge facing the Office was finding a balance between continued assistance to the Iraqi people and ensuring staff security. The High Commissioner highlighted positive developments in Afghanistan and in several African countries, including Angola, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Liberia and Sierra Leone. However, he noted that although over half a million Afghan refugees returned home during the year, millions of others remained in neighbouring countries, particularly in Iran and Pakistan, and finding durable solutions for them remained a top priority. In Africa, UNHCR continued to seek durable solutions for the refugees in the United Republic of Tanzania; difficulties in Burundi's peace process left over 300,000 refugees and some 400,000 internally displaced persons (IDPs) with limited prospects of returning home; and intense fighting in the Darfur region of the Sudan compelled up to 65,000 refugees to flee to Chad. The priority in Asia remained the resolution of the stalemate on finding solutions for 100,000 Bhutanese people in camps in Nepal. In China, the plight of North Koreans who left their country illegally remained a serious concern. In the Americas, UNHCR continued to coordinate the UN response in Colombia, where the total number of IDPs stood at well over 2 million. In Europe, attention focused on the difficulties facing the displaced population of Chechnya, Russian Federation, while the ongoing asylum debate in the European Union (EU), despite prompting new thinking on ways of enhancing refugee protection, also tended to encourage increasingly restrictive legal asylum measures. The High Commissioner, announcing the finalization of the report on the "UNHCR 2004" process to strengthen the Office (YUN 2001, p. 1107) and better position it to carry out its mandate (see p. 1225), noted that a panel discussion was planned on the implementation of the conclusions contained in the report.

The High Commissioner reported significant progress in the ongoing review of human resources management. Steps had also been taken to enhance transparency and accountability in the management of UNHCR operations, and revised guidelines on preventing and responding to sexual and gender-based violence, intended for the staff of UNHCR and its humanitarian and development partners, had been launched. With regard to finances, UNHCR was required to cut its budget twice during the year, reducing the level of allocations by $54 million, freezing $37 million of the operational reserve, and making additional cuts to compensate for $42 million in increased costs resulting from exchange rate fluctuations and UN salary increases. To avoid further cuts, $56 million in new contributions was needed towards the 2003 annual budget. The High Commissioner also highlighted ongoing efforts to strengthen UNHCR's partnerships.

By decision 2003/310 of 24 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the High Commissioner's report covering the period from 1 January 2002 to 30 April 2003 [A/58/12].

Extension of High Commissioner

By decision 58/402 of 6 October, the General Assembly, on the 30 September proposal of the Secretary-General [A/58/396], extended for a period of two years the term of Office of the High Commissioner, Ruud Lubbers, beginning on 1 January 2004.

Coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance

In 2003 [A/59/12], UNHCR, in a continuing effort to strengthen its partnerships within the UN system, joined the United Nations Development Group, an inter-agency forum established to help improve the effectiveness of UN development initiatives at the country level. Within that framework, UNHCR co-chaired, with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), a working group to develop guidelines for UN resident coordinators and country teams in achieving durable solutions for target groups. UNHCR continued to participate in the work of the Executive Committee for Humanitarian Affairs (ECHA) and the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC). It also remained active in the Inter-Agency Advisory Group on AIDS and the IASC Task Force on HIV/AIDS in Emergency Settings (see p. 1245). During the year, UNHCR continued to work closely with the IDP Unit of the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) on measures to strengthen collaboration for protecting IDPs, and further strengthened collaboration with the World Food Programme (WFP), the International Labour Organization (ILO) and the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) on refugee issues. With over 600 United Nations Volunteers (UNVs) participating in some 60 UNHCR operations worldwide during the year, a memorandum of understanding (MOU) was being finalized to further strengthen cooperation with the UNV Office. In the area of refugee health, UNHCR cooperated with the World Health Organization (WHO) in addressing refugee health and nutrition, and in preparing technical guidelines, including the New Emergency Health Kit and the Tuberculosis (TB) Control Manual. The Office also continued collaboration with the International Organization for Migration (IOM) and participated in furthering the objectives of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 937) to ensure a stake for returnees and IDPs in their countries of origin, and to help avert renewed displacement. During the year, UNHCR channelled $223 million (one quarter of its annual budget) through over 500 non-governmental organizations (NGOs), covering sectors such as shelter/other infrastructure; transport/logistics; health and nutrition; education; legal assistance/protection; and agency operational support. UNHCR initiated consultations to involve strategic NGO partners more closely in assessing planning processes so as to avoid duplicating efforts and better target humanitarian assistance and protection. The Office launched a protection learning programme for its partners: a pilot project designed to promote a team-based approach, mainstream gender and age issues, and demonstrate the importance of accountability.

Evaluation activities

UNHCR, in an August report [A/AC.96/976], described developments in its evaluation function, explained its evaluation policy, examined the challenge of ensuring that related findings and recommendations were effectively utilized, and described the evaluation activities of its Evaluation and Policy Analysis Unit (EPAU). In January, the new evaluation policy, contained in a policy statement adopted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1201], took effect. To ensure the effective use of evaluation findings and recommendations, UNHCR introduced a management response requirement, obliging the manager responsible for an evaluated policy or programme to explain how the findings and recommendations of the evaluation would be used. EPAU was also considering several other mechanisms for further strengthening the evaluation function.

Completed evaluation projects were related to health and community services; reproductive health services to refugees; monitoring the protection, rights and well-being of refugees; protracted refugee situations, particularly in Africa; refugees in urban areas; management learning programmes; country programmes; facilitation and internal consultancy; and strategic reviews of UNHCR operations. Other activities during the year included reviews of UNHCR operations in Afghanistan, Guinea, Tajikistan, Timor-Leste and Western Europe, and of UNHCR office staffing parameters, emergency procurement arrangements, indicators for implementing the High Commissioner's commitments regarding refugee women and freedom of movement issues in refugee situations.

Inspections

In 2003 [A/59/12], regular inspections of UNHCR operations by its Inspector General's Office (IGO) were conducted in Gabon, Greece, Pakistan and Turkey. In order to assess strategy and policy from a subregional perspective and to ascertain where UNHCR might strengthen partnerships with other members of the UN system, international organizations and NGOs, IGO undertook its first operational reviews of Somalia, Sri Lanka, the Sudan and Turkey. It also carried out a comprehensive review and revision of its inspection strategy. IGO expanded its work to include ad hoc inspections focusing on specific management issues requiring a separate assessment. In 2003, IGO received 158 complaints alleging misuse of assets, medical insurance fraud, sexual harassment of staff, sexual exploitation of refugees and other improper conduct. In 40 per cent of those cases, it recommended administrative or disciplinary action; in another 40 per cent, it concluded that the allegations were unfounded or insufficiently established.

The UN Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) audited UNHCR's staffing of emergency operations; decentralized personnel administration; housing maintenance element (HOME) entitlement; the Media Relations and Public Information Service; central emergency and regional stockpiles; air operations; various aspects of the Management System Renewal Project; and operations in 29 countries. It also reviewed two NGOs to assess their systems and procedures and to advise on how to comply with UNHCR requirements. OIOS audits covered operations and activities amounting to $218 million or 22 per cent of UNHCR's total expenditure of $983 million in 2003. It issued 34 audit reports to senior management and over 66 audit observations to managers in the field.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/503], adopted resolution 58/151 without vote [agenda item 112].

Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the activities of his Office and the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the work of its fifty-fourth session and the conclusions and decisions contained therein,

Recalling its previous annual resolutions on the work of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees since its establishment by the General Assembly,

Expressing its appreciation for the leadership shown by the High Commissioner, commending the staff and implementing partners of the Office of the High Commissioner for the competent, courageous and dedicated manner in which they discharge their responsibilities, and underscoring its strong condemnation of all forms of violence to which humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel are increasingly exposed.

1. Endorses the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the work of its fifty-fourth session;

2. Welcomes the important work undertaken by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and its Executive Committee in the course of the year, and notes in this context the conclusions adopted on international protection, on the return of persons found not to be in need of international protection, on protection safeguards in interception measures, and on protection from sexual abuse and exploitation, which are aimed at strengthening the international protection regime, consistent with the Agenda for Protection resulting from the Global Consultations on International Protection, and at assisting Governments in meeting their protection responsibilities in today's changing international environment;

3. Reaffirms the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and its 1967 Protocol as the foundation of the international refugee protection regime, and recognizes the importance of their full and effective application by States parties and the values they embody, notes with satisfaction that one hundred and forty-five States are now parties to one instrument or to both, encourages States not parties to consider acceding to those instruments, underlines in particular the importance of full respect for the principle of non-refoulement, and recognizes that a number of States not parties to the international refugee instruments have shown a generous approach to hosting refugees;

4. Notes that fifty-five States are now parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and that twenty-seven States are parties to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue his activities on behalf of stateless persons;

5. Re-emphasizes that the protection of refugees is primarily the responsibility of States, whose full and effective cooperation, action and political resolve are required to enable the Office of the High Commissioner to fulfil its mandated functions;

6. Emphasizes that international protection is a dynamic and action-oriented function that is at the core of the mandate of the Office of the High Commissioner and which includes, in cooperation with States and other partners, the promotion and facilitation of, inter alia, the admission, reception and treatment of refugees and the ensuring of durable, protection-oriented solutions, bearing in mind the particular needs of vulnerable groups, and notes in this context that the delivery of international protection is a staff-intensive service that requires adequate staff with the appropriate expertise, especially at the field level;

7. Welcomes the High Commissioner's "Convention Plus" initiative, and encourages the High Commissioner and those States that have offered to facilitate Convention Plus agreements to strengthen the international protection regime through the development of comprehensive approaches to resolving refugee situations, including improving international burden- and responsibility-sharing and realizing durable solutions;

8. Recalls the important role of effective partnerships and coordination in meeting the needs of refugees and other displaced persons and in finding durable solutions to their situations, and welcomes the efforts under way, in cooperation with other United Nations agencies and development actors, to promote a framework for durable solutions, particularly in protracted refugee situations, including the "4Rs" approach (repatriation, reintegration, rehabilitation and reconstruction) to sustainable return;

9. Urges all States and relevant non-governmental and other organizations, in conjunction with the Office of the High Commissioner, in a spirit of international solidarity and burden- and responsibility-sharing, to cooperate and to mobilize resources with a view to enhancing the capacity of, and reducing the heavy burden borne by, countries that have received large numbers of refugees and asylum-seekers, and calls upon the Office to continue to play its catalytic role in mobilizing assistance from the international community to address the root causes as well as the economic, environmental and social impact of large-scale refugee populations in developing countries, particularly least developed countries, and countries with economies in transition;

10. Strongly reaffirms the fundamental importance and the purely humanitarian and non-political character of the function of the Office of the High Commissioner of providing international protection to refugees and seeking permanent solutions to refugee problems, and recalls that these solutions include voluntary repatriation and, where appropriate and feasible, local integration and resettlement in a third country, while reaffirming that voluntary repatriation, supported by necessary rehabilitation and development assistance to facilitate sustainable reintegration, remains the preferred solution;

11. Emphasizes the obligation of all States to accept the return of their nationals, calls upon States to facilitate the return of their nationals who have been determined not to be in need of international protection, and affirms the need for the return of persons to be undertaken in a safe and humane manner and with full respect for their human rights and dignity, irrespective of the status of the persons concerned;

12. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to improve its management systems and to ensure effective and transparent use of its resources, recognizes that adequate and timely resources are essential for the Office to continue to fulfil the mandate conferred upon it through its statute and by subsequent General Assembly resolutions concerning refugees and other persons of concern, and urges Governments and other donors to respond promptly to annual and supplementary appeals issued by the Office for requirements under its programmes;

13. Requests the High Commissioner to report on his activities to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

Strengthening UNHCR

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/186 [YUN 2002, p. 1203], the Secretary-General, in October, transmitted the report of the High Commissioner on strengthening the capacity of UNHCR to carry out its mandate [A/58/410]. The report was the outcome of the "UNHCR 2004" process, launched in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1107], to determine how UNHCR could be better positioned to meet new challenges that had affected its capacity to carry out its mandate. It was prepared in consultation with the UNHCR Executive Committee, the Secretary-General and partner agencies and NGOs. The High Commissioner noted that, although the primary role of the Office had not changed, new categories of persons of concern had been added to its responsibilities, raising the need to ensure that it was sufficiently equipped to do its work and to respond to related challenges. The actions proposed, some of which depended on Assembly decisions, covered the time-limited nature of the Office; implementation of the Agenda for Protection [YUN 2002, p. 1205]; accessions to the Conventions on stateless persons and statelessness; IDPs; protection and assistance for returnees; the targeting of development assistance to facilitate durable solutions; addressing the asylum and migration nexus; convening periodic ministerial meetings, normally every five years, of States parties to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] and its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477]; streamlining UNHCR reporting, strengthening the linkages between UNHCR and peace and security, development and humanitarian pillars, and with human rights bodies; partnerships with NGOs; and diversifying and broadening UNHCR funding.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/503], adopted resolution 58/153 without vote [agenda item 112].

Implementing actions proposed by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to strengthen the capacity of his Office to carry out its mandate

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 428(V) of 14 December 1950, the annex to which contains the statute of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and its resolution 57/186 of 18 December 2002 on the continuation of the Office of the High Commissioner,

Appreciating the concerted efforts of the High Commissioner in undertaking consultations with the Secretary-General, the members of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and observers of its Standing Committee, through the process known as "UNHCR 2004", on how the Office of the High Commissioner could be better equipped to carry out its mandate in the changing context of the global situation, and noting that this is in support and in the context of the goals, objectives and commitments contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, as well as the efforts of the Secretary-General to strengthen the United Nations system,

1. Welcomes the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on strengthening the capacity of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to carry out its mandate, as called for in resolution 57/186;

2. Reaffirms that international protection and the search for durable solutions for refugees and, as applicable, other persons of concern to the Office of the High Commissioner, which were examined, inter alia, in the Global Consultations on International Protection process and are reflected in the Agenda for Protection, are the core of the mandate of the Office;

3. Welcomes the efforts of the Office of the High Commissioner to strengthen its linkages with the other parts of the United Nations system in order to enhance refugee protection and to identify and implement durable solutions for refugees and other persons of concern to the Office, and appreciates its efforts to strengthen partnerships with operational and implementing partners;

4. Welcomes the admission of the Office to the United Nations Development Group, and invites the Development Group to include, through the resident coordinator system and in full consultation with the Government concerned, consideration of the needs of refugees and, as applicable, other persons of concern to the Office of the High Commissioner in the common country assessment process and the subsequent formulation and implementation of their development programmes;

5. Notes the importance of the support of the Office of the High Commissioner, within its mandate, to the efforts of the Emergency Relief Coordinator to promote predictable and timely United Nations strategies that, inter alia, integrate durable solutions for refugees with those for internally displaced persons;

6. Highlights the importance of joint efforts of the Department of Political Affairs and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat, together with those of the Office of the High Commissioner, which contribute to durable solutions for refugees in conflict and post-conflict situations, encourages the Office to play a more active role, including by sharing information with relevant United Nations forums, and stresses that all of these activities should be undertaken in a manner consistent with the mandate of the Office;

7. Recalls paragraph 20 of the statute of the Office of the High Commissioner, and calls for its application;

8. Reaffirms the continued voluntary nature of the funding of the Office of the High Commissioner in accordance with its statute, while recognizing the importance of contributions made by countries hosting refugees, especially developing countries, notes the need for more equitable international responsibility and burden-sharing and expresses concern over the recurring shortfall in the funding of the Office, requests that States, within their capacities, contribute to the full funding of the budget level approved by the Executive Committee, and encourages the Office to continue its efforts to expand its donor base and to diversify funding sources, including through the private sector;

9. Decides to remove the temporal limitation on the continuation of the Office of the High Commissioner contained in its resolution 57/186 and to continue the Office until the refugee problem is solved;

10. Decides also that the High Commissioner shall make an annual oral report to the Economic and Social Council to keep it informed of the coordination aspects of the work of the Office and shall continue the existing practice, as established in paragraph 11 of its statute, of presenting an annual written report to the General Assembly, on the understanding that every ten years, beginning at the sixty-eighth session, the report will include a strategic review of the global situation of refugees and the role of the Office, prepared in consultation with the Secretary-General and the Executive Committee.

Enlargement of Executive Committee

On 24 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2003/285, noted Egypt's request [E/2003/3] for membership in the UNHCR Executive Committee and recommended that the General Assembly decide on the question of enlarging the Committee's membership from 64 to 65 States at its fifty-eighth (2003) session. By decision 2003/286 of the same date, the Council noted Zambia's request [E/2003/77] for membership and recommended that the Assembly decide on the question of enlarging the membership from 65 to 66 States at its fifty-eighth session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/503], adopted resolution 58/152 without vote [agenda item 112].

Enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council decisions 2003/285 and 2003/286 of 24 July 2003 concerning the enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Taking note also of the requests regarding the enlargement of the Executive Committee contained in the letter dated 23 September 2002 from the Permanent Representative of Egypt to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General and the note verbale dated 25 April 2003 from the Permanent Mission of Zambia to the United Nations Office at Geneva addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Decides to increase the number of members of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from sixty-four to sixty-six States;

2. Requests the Economic and Social Council to elect the additional members at its resumed organizational session for 2004.

Financial and administrative questions

UNHCR's initial annual programme budget target for 2003 was set at $836.3 million [A/59/12] by the Executive Committee in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1204]. Supplementary programmes established during the year totalled $330.6 million. Contributions to the annual programme budget totalled $652.2 million plus $8.1 million for the Junior Professional Officers (JPO) programme. The UN regular budget provided $28.2 million and contributions towards supplementary programmes totalled $268.2 million, $18.6 million of which was transferred to the annual programme budget to cover supplementary programme activities. Expenditures during the year totalled some $983 million, $714.8 million of which was from the annual programme budget. UNHCR expenditure by region was as follows: Africa, $376 million; Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, $225 million; Asia and the Pacific, $54.4 million; Europe, $120.5 million; and the Americas, $24.3 million.

In October, the Executive Committee approved the revised 2003 annual programme budget amounting to $809.1 million, which, together with the UN regular budget contribution of $20.4 million, provisions for JPOs of $7 million and needs under supplementary programmes of $313.3 million, brought total requirements for the year to $1,150 million.

For the 2004 annual programme budget, the Committee approved $923 million, including an operational reserve of $61 million (representing 7.5 per cent of programmed activities) and $50 million, introduced on a trial basis for one year, for funding activities not included in the annual programme budget. The Committee decided to review in 2004 the issue of additional contributions for such activities and took note of the UN regular budget contribution of $25 million, and of the sum of $7 million for JPOs, which brought total requirements for 2004 to $955 million.

Accounts (2002)

The audited financial statements of voluntary funds administered by UNHCR for the year ending 31 December 2002 [A/58/5/Add.5] showed total expenditures of some $908.4 million and total income of $858.2 million, with a reserve balance of $120 million.

The Board of Auditors found that: unallocated available reserves at the end of 2002 ($50 million) were insufficient to cover the staff termination liabilities of some $263 million; the value of non-expendable property as at 31 December 2002 was understated by some $70 million; invalid expenditure, valued at $5.9 million, showed the need to set up a proper accounting policy; the 2002 operational expenditure not supported by implementing partners' financial reports totalled $14.2 million as at 11 June 2003; as at 31 January 2003, UNHCR had not received audit certificates for 52.5 per cent of expenditure on 2001 operational projects; the share of non-programme expenditure (28 per cent) had to be reviewed in view of the shortfall of $50 million in 2002; between 1998 and 2002, staff employed constantly exceeded the number of posts; some 75 per cent of staff held de facto permanent appointments as at 1 July 2002, versus 16 per cent in 1998; at the end of 2002, 113 Professionals were "staff-in-between-assignment", being paid but without assignment; the creation of the housing maintenance element (HOME) for staff exceeded the delegation of authority granted to the High Commissioner and was not in line with standard UN provisions; and the accounting systems did not enable UNHCR to report what was paid in respect of each entitlement and each staff member. The Board made a series of recommendations to improve management, noting that UNHCR had mostly actively responded to earlier recommendations, although some had not been implemented.

UNHCR, in August [A/AC.96/978/Add.1], reported on measures taken or proposed to respond to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors.

In a September report [A/58/384], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) observed that the Board had modified its opinion, drawing attention to its finding on the adequacy of assurance obtained by UNHCR that funds were properly used for the purpose intended and on the understatement of some $70 million in the disclosure of non-expendable property. ACABQ noted that the statement of income and expenditure and changes in reserve and fund balances of the voluntary funds administered by the Office did not include $21 million received from the UN regular budget. As to human resources management, ACABQ shared the Board's concern about the gap between staff members with appointments and posts. ACABQ expressed concern about UNHCR's management of staff-in-between-assignments, citing the Board's finding that, as at December 2002, some 113 Professional staff and 16 General Service staff, although their assignments had expired, remained on special leave with full pay, which had cost the Office several million dollars between 1998 and 2002. ACABQ requested that the High Commissioner take urgent action to comply with the Board's recommendations in that regard and to report on the management of affected staff in the next budget report. It welcomed the High Commissioner's intention to introduce reforms, transparency and stronger control of the staffing table. ACABQ agreed with the Board's view that the creation of the HOME allowance exceeded the authority delegated to the High Commissioner.

The Executive Committee, in a decision on administrative, financial and programme matters [A/58/12/Add.1], requested that it be informed regularly on measures taken to address the recommendations and observations made by the Board of Auditors and ACABQ.

Standing Committee

The UNHCR Standing Committee held three meetings in 2003 (4-6 March [A/AC.96/974]; 24-26 June [A/AC.96/984]; and 25 September [A/AC.96/985]). It reviewed UNHCR's programmes and activities in various regions and considered updates on overall programme and funding issues; protection/programme policy issues, including the safety and security of staff and refugees, and the economic and social impact of massive refugee populations on developing host countries and other countries; international protection; statelessness; coordination issues within the UN system; and issues relating to management, finance, oversight and human resources, and governance.

In October [A/58/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee adopted the following items for the Standing Committee's 2004 programme of work: international protection; programme/protection policy; programme and funding; governance; coordination; and management, financial, oversight and human resources. The Standing Committee was authorized to add or delete items, as appropriate, to its intersessional work programme.

Staff safety

At its March meeting [A/AC.96/974], the Standing Committee discussed staff and refugee safety and security. The Director of UNHCR's Emergency Security Service drew attention to increasing threats to the physical safety of UNHCR staff and past and current initiatives to address those threats. The establishment of a qualified cadre of professional security officers had been accompanied by measures to develop a wider culture of security awareness to help all staff become more effective in managing their own security and that of their colleagues. That resulted in the establishment of the UNHCR security policy, which was complementary to the system-wide accountability scheme of the United Nations Security Coordinator (UNSECOORD). Further measures included training sessions and tools development, notably the CD-ROM interactive self-learning course, which had been adopted by other UN system agencies as a mandatory basic security training. Additional initiatives would extend training support further across the system, and possibly to NGO and governmental partners. Work was ongoing, in collaboration with the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations and Governments, to find ways to improve UNHCR's response to refugee security.

Refugee protection and assistance

Protection issues

In his annual report covering 2003 [A/59/12], the High Commissioner described significant challenges facing States and UNHCR in securing and upholding international protection of refugees, which included safeguarding humanitarian principles in a frequently precarious security environment, ensuring access to international protection, planning and supporting major repatriation movements, and promoting the resolution of protracted situations. He stated that the goals and related objectives of the Agenda for Protection, adopted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1205] as a multi-year programme of action for improving the protection of refugees and asylum-seekers, had been mainstreamed into UNHCR strategies, policies, practices and reporting processes, from country operations plans to protection learning programmes. Measures taken by UNHCR to meet the goals of the Agenda for Protection included: strengthening implementation of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] and its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477]; protecting refugees within broader migration movements; sharing burdens and responsibilities more equitably and building capacities to receive and protect refugees; addressing security-related concerns more effectively; redoubling the search for durable solutions; and meeting the protection needs of refugee women and children.

In a July note on international protection [A/AC.96/975], the High Commissioner focused on the mechanics of protection, highlighting how States, UNHCR and other actors were using various tools to ensure that those needing international protection benefited from it. He discussed operational, legal and policy, and promotional protection tools, covering the period from September 2002 to July 2003, highlighted developments in different countries where they indicated broader trends, and outlined UNHCR's actions in response to protection challenges within the framework of follow-up action to the Agenda for Protection.

The High Commissioner stated that the effects of globalization and contemporary security concerns had brought to the fore problems resulting from mixed migratory flows. UNHCR had suggested ways to develop a comprehensive framework for improving national asylum systems in destination States, establish cooperative regional processing systems among those States and improve access to durable solutions in regions of origin. Nonetheless, the protection of refugees faced significant challenges, especially in situations of conflict, such as in West and Central Africa, where insecurity remained an endemic problem. UNHCR was also concerned at the proliferation of international organizations describing their work as protection, which could lead to a confusion of roles and dilution of expertise, ultimately detrimental to protection. Elsewhere, asylum processes had increasingly been tightened to the detriment of refugees and there was a strong tendency towards harmonization, at the level of the lowest common denominator, in the development of regional asylum systems.

The Executive Committee, in October [A/58/12/Add.1], stressed the value of strengthening protection capacities in host countries, encouraged follow-up activities towards the implementation of the Agenda for Protection and urged cooperation between States and UNHCR on methods to resolve cases of statelessness. The Committee highlighted the need to provide protection safeguards to intercepted persons within the framework of international human rights and refugee law, and recommended measures to guide such interception and ways to protect refugees and asylum-seekers from sexual abuse and exploitation.

International instruments

In 2003, Timor-Leste acceded to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520], bringing the total number of parties to the Convention to 142. With the accession of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Timor-Leste, the total number of States party to the Convention's 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477] rose to 141. Albania's accession to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons [YUN 1954, p. 416] and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness [YUN 1961, p. 533] increased the number of States party to those instruments to 55 and 27, respectively.

Convention Plus

In 2003, the High Commissioner for Refugees launched the "Convention Plus" initiative to help strengthen the commitment of States and UNHCR partners to resolving refugee situations, notably through multilateral special agreements, and develop comprehensive action plans for resolving specific refugee situations, particularly protracted ones. Dialogue and negotiations on multilateral special agreements began within groups of States and other stakeholders, convened around each of the three central strands of the initiative: the strategic use of resettlement; ways to address irregular secondary movements of refugees and asylum-seekers; and the strategic targeting of development assistance to achieve solutions to refugee problems. A comprehensive plan of action to address the Somali refugee crisis was being considered.

Assistance measures

The global population of concern to UNHCR dropped to 17 million in 2003 from 20.8 million in 2002, due largely to the return of millions of refugees following the end of prolonged crises in Africa and Afghanistan. An estimated 5 million persons who had fled their homes found a solution through voluntary repatriation, resettlement or local integration. Those assisted included asylum-seekers, refugees, returning refugees in the early stages of their reintegration, IDPs and other persons of concern, mainly victims of conflict. During the year, some 1.1 million refugees repatriated voluntarily to their countries of origin, with the largest number (644,500) repatriating to Afghanistan from Iran and Pakistan. Many others returned to Angola, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Eritrea, Iraq, Liberia, Rwanda, Sierra Leone and Somalia. The number of those resettled during the year rose to 26,000 from 20,000 in 2002, owing to a relative rise in acceptance levels for resettlement. Also, efforts to encourage local integration and to implement self-reliance strategies for refugees made limited but tangible progress in many countries. Nonetheless, millions in some 38 protracted refugee situations still awaited durable solutions, with new outflows reported in several African countries and in Colombia. UNHCR continued to accord high priority to developing effective responses for such situations.

In 2003, UNHCR received a total of some $929 million in voluntary contributions towards its annual programme budget.

Refugees and the environment

In 2003, UNHCR, in a bid to limit environmental damage and degradation caused by the presence of refugees, continued efforts to mainstream sound environmental management into all phases of refugee operations, with the active participation of refugees and host communities. It emphasized cost-effective, community-based projects and strengthened collaboration with partners in addressing post-repatriation environmental rehabilitation. It also planned to produce guidelines on the assessment, monitoring and evaluation of environmental activities, for field testing and finalization in 2004.

Refugees and HIV/AIDS

Under UNHCR's 2002-2004 strategic plan on HIV/AIDS, launched in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1207], which included plans to standardize and align programmes within country operations, the Office was making efforts to develop a subregional approach to combating the disease, one example of which was the World Bank-funded Great Lakes Initiative programme, which aimed to achieve more effective coordination and cooperation between donors, host populations and Governments. Within the IASC Task Force on HIV/AIDS in Emergency Settings, UNHCR, together with WFP and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), was reviewing nutrition and food aid policies to ensure that sufficient food was provided to those suffering from the disease.

Refugee women

In May, UNHCR issued its response to the 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1202] evaluations on refugee women, refugee children and the community service function, which drew particular attention to the need for increased ownership of existing policies and the involvement of all staff. The implementation of a three-year action plan drawn up in that regard was being overseen by a Steering Committee. During the year, a pilot project developed in Latin America and Turkey, on the basis of earlier UNHCR experiences, was launched in 10 countries. The project aimed to facilitate the integration of a gender and age perspective into UNHCR operations. UNHCR revised its Guidelines for Prevention and Response to Sexual and Gender-based Violence in refugee and refugee-like settings and disseminated it to field offices and partners. Numerous training workshops on prevention were organized.

Refugee children

In 2003, UNHCR maintained a strong emphasis on education as a protection tool for refugee children, focusing on ensuring access to primary education. To overcome low enrolment rates, particularly among girl refugees at the primary school level, projects were launched in Ethiopia, Kenya and Somalia, in partnership with private corporations. Tertiary-level scholarships and secondary-level trust fund education support continued. A UNHCR report on education indicators in 118 refugee camps in 23 asylum countries identified areas where future planning for refugee children's education could be improved.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 56/136 [YUN 2001, p. 1115], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on assistance to unaccompanied refugee minors [A/58/299]. The report provided information on UNHCR action to protect and assist minors and on activities by other UN entities, including UNICEF, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, OCHA and the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, among others. The report discussed a rights-based approach to securing the interests of affected minors and global priority issues relating to refugee children, including family tracing and reunification, military recruitment, sexual exploitation, abuse and violence, and education. It also highlighted other concerns and challenges such as the special protection needs of refugee girls and of internally displaced children.

The Secretary-General observed that progress had been made over the past two years in addressing the protection and assistance needs of unaccompanied or separated refugee children. Cooperation among UN system bodies and with other partners, notably the International Committee of the Red Cross, NGOs and Governments, had been strengthened. Positive results were evident in terms of training and capacity-building, commitments to common goals on critical child protection and assistance issues, the entry into force of new human rights instruments, and legislative changes raising child protection standards. The inter-agency agreement on common Guiding Principles on Unaccompanied and Separated Children was a noteworthy example of progress. Nonetheless, serious challenges remained, including security concerns, insufficient human and material resources, inadequate law enforcement systems for the effective pursuit of child rights violations, and, in some cases, insufficient political will by States to comply with international standards relating to children. The Secretary-General urged States that had not done so to ratify the two optional protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 54/263 [YUN 2000, p. 615], and to ensure the implementation and monitoring of compliance with international instruments and accountability for violations. States and other stakeholders in civil society were encouraged to ensure that adequate resources were provided to enable refugee children to enjoy rights to which they were entitled, such as the right to education, and to avoid being recruited into armed forces or groups, or falling victim to sexual exploitation and abuse. More attention was needed by all actors involved with unaccompanied or separated children towards achieving more effective identification, registration, tracing and family reunification systems.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/503], adopted resolution 58/150 without vote [agenda item 112].

Assistance to unaccompanied refugee minors

The General Assembly,

Africa

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/183 [YUN 2002, p. 1209], the Secretary-General submitted a September report on assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa [A/58/353], updating information contained in his 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 1208]. He stated that, in early 2003, Africa was hosting 3.3 million refugees, 32 per cent of the global refugee population. Almost 350,000 African refugees were repatriated during the reporting period, mainly Angolan, Burundian, Sierra Leonean and Somalian nationals. The main African refugee groups continued to originate from Angola, Burundi, the DRC, Eritrea, Somalia and the Sudan, with major new refugee outflows reported from Burundi, the Central African Republic, Côte d'Ivoire, the DRC and Liberia in 2002.

In East Africa and the Horn of Africa, which was hosting some 940,000 refugees, persistent political, humanitarian and socio-economic challenges, including acute food shortages in Eritrea and Ethiopia, continued to take their toll on refugee operations. However, progress on a few of the major political and humanitarian problems in the subregion opened the way for voluntary repatriation operations, notably for Eritrean and Somali refugees. Hopes of resolving the crisis in the Sudan prompted preparation of contingency plans for the return and reintegration of half a million Sudanese refugees from six neighbouring States. However, rebel attacks on refugee settlements in Uganda, persistent insecurity in western Ethiopia and violence in parts of Kenya undermined UNHCR operations, displacing thousands of Sudanese refugees in those countries.

The Central Africa and the Great Lakes subregion was host to an estimated 1.3 million refugees. In the Central African Republic, UNHCR continued to protect and assist thousands of refugees from neighbouring States, despite the general insecurity and political and economic turmoil prevailing in that country. UNHCR began to promote the voluntary return of Rwandan refugees. By the end of 2002, 23,800 Rwandan refugees had returned from the United Republic of Tanzania and 14,000 from the DRC. In 2003, 4,000 Rwandan refugees were assisted to return from the DRC and Tanzania. In Burundi, the peaceful handover of power to a new regime opened further possibilities for addressing the situation of an estimated 574,000 Burundian refugees in exile. In Tanzania, some of the largest refugee caseloads in Africa posed major challenges to the international community in terms of providing protection and assistance, including the provision of adequate food. In the DRC, a peace agreement with Rwanda renewed impetus for the voluntary repatriation of Rwandan refugees residing there, some 6,000 of whom returned home during the year. However, persistent instability in eastern DRC, among other factors, obstructed the anticipated repatriation from neighbouring countries of over 350,000 refugees, and affected the humanitarian community's response to the protection and assistance needs of over half a million IDPs in the country. In Angola, the Government took measures to further consolidate and enhance the refugee protection mandate, and the peace process between the Government and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) enabled the repatriation of thousands of Angolan refugees from the DRC.

In West Africa, where 1 million persons of concern resided, the end of the civil war in Sierra Leone and renewed hostilities in some host countries paved the way for many Sierra Leonean refugees to return home. Since the beginning of the return programme in 2000, up to 213,000 refugees had repatriated voluntarily, 115,000 of whom were assisted by UNHCR. In total, some 300,000 Sierra Leoneans had benefited from assistance in returnee areas through community-based projects. In contrast, the ongoing war in Liberia resulted in hundreds of thousands of IDPs and forced some 275,000 Liberians to flee to neighbouring countries, mostly to Guinea. In Côte d'Ivoire, where a 2002 coup d'état sparked a civil war and significant population movements, UNHCR continued to ensure the safety of some 45,000 refugees and to meet basic protection and assistance needs. In Guinea, the Office continued to assist the refugee population in camps and to promote voluntary repatriation.

In Southern Africa, which was hosting 685,000 persons of concern to UNHCR, the consolidation of peace in Angola allowed some 130,000 Angolan refugees to return home spontaneously, and assistance measures helped reintegrate them in their home villages. In Zambia, which hosted over 250,000 refugees, the largest refugee population in the subregion, the Government, with support from UNHCR, the United Nations Office for Project Services and the international community, continued to implement local integration projects. Peace prospects in the DRC and Rwanda had also raised hopes for the return of refugees from both countries who had fled to other Southern African States. Nonetheless, critical food shortages continued to affect the subregion, with some 6 million people in need of support.

Describing cooperation with regional bodies and initiatives, the Secretary-General stated that an important development was the signing, in May, of a memorandum of understanding between the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights and UNHCR, designed to strengthen cooperation and to promote and protect the human rights of refugees and other persons of concern.

UNHCR report. According to UNHCR's Global Report 2003, persons of concern in Africa during the year totalled 4.5 million, comprising some 3.3 million refugees, 180,639 asylum-seekers, 669,655 IDPs and 329,528 returnee refugees.

In Central Africa and the Great Lakes, UNHCR's major preoccupation was the influx into Chad of tens of thousands of people from the Darfur region of the Sudan. The emergency posed a major challenge, owing mainly to the length and inaccessibility of the borderland to which the refugees fled. Other challenges affecting humanitarian operations related to continuing insecurity in Burundi, the Central African Republic and the DRC, and to environmental degradation in Tanzania. Despite those problems, UNHCR was able to either repatriate or settle thousands of Burundian, Rwandan and Somali refugees. Positive developments in East Africa and the Horn of Africa included the repatriation and reintegration of some 9,444 Eritreans, 10,227 Somalis and 281 Ugandans. Following the outbreak of fighting in the Sudan's Darfur region, however, and the killing of three humanitarian workers in north-west Somalia (Somaliland), hopes of further progress were dashed. In West Africa, UNHCR assisted over 33,000 Sierra Leonean refugees to return home and facilitated the local integration of urban refugees in the country. Major concerns in West Africa included sporadic and complex population flows, resulting mainly from the conflicts in Côte d'Ivoire and Liberia. Significant developments in Southern Africa included the repatriation of 76,674 Angolan refugees and the resettlement in the country of another 435 from neighbouring States. Combating HIV/AIDS was a priority and emphasis was placed on ensuring that related refugee care was included in host countries' health programmes. Challenges in the subregion included restrictive refugee legislation, irregular refugee movements and a backlog of asylum applications, and the limited capacity of some countries, most notably Angola, to receive and reintegrate returnees.

UNHCR assisted 1.3 million persons in Central Africa and the Great Lakes region, which received $101.3 million in agency expenditures. In West Africa, $110.8 million was spent on 1.5 million persons of concern, while some $107 million was spent on programmes assisting 1 million persons in need in East Africa and the Horn of Africa. In Southern Africa, $57.5 million was spent on over half a million persons of concern.

Sexual exploitation of refugees in West Africa

The General Assembly, in April, considered the 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1202] OIOS report [A/57/465] on its investigation of allegations of sexual exploitation of female refugees by UN and NGO staff and peacekeepers in West Africa (Guinea, Liberia, Sierra Leone).

Note by Secretary-General. In response to Assembly resolution 57/306 (see p. 1237), the Secretary-General, on 10 November [A/58/559], summarized actions he had taken to address the problem of sexual exploitation and abuse. He had issued an October bulletin on the issue, emphasized the significance of the problem to the Senior Management Group of the common system and indicated plans to implement the bulletin in the field. The UN Office of Human Resources Management would collect information on investigations into cases of sexual exploitation and abuse for preparation of the report requested by the Assembly. The Secretariat had received no reports of investigations into such allegations in 2003.

On 23 December (decision 58/558), the General Assembly noted the information.

The Americas

Developments in North America and the Caribbean during the year included Canada's plans to reorganize its national refugee system, assigning responsibility for some issues relating to citizenship and immigration, including detention and removals, to a newly created Department of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness. The United States maintained primary focus on threats posed by international terrorism and the Iraq war, with the resulting restrictive asylum environment. The newly created Department of Homeland Security incorporated the former Immigration and Naturalization Service, which was in turn split into three agencies with practical implications for the implementation of national immigration, refugee and asylum policies. UNHCR monitored those policy developments in both countries, especially the adverse effects of the ongoing emphasis on security on the United States resettlement programme. In 2003, arrivals totalled 28,422, well below the approved ceiling of 70,000. Continuing unrest in Haiti and the potential for a mass exodus prompted UNHCR to step up contingency plans with States likely to be affected. In Central America and Mexico, restrictive migratory and security concerns in some countries posed difficulties for persons seeking access. A major challenge for UNHCR remained the identification of asylum-seekers among mixed flows of migrants and ensuring alternatives to detention. Also, UNHCR's reduced presence in the subregion affected its capacity to protect refugees and other persons of concern at entry points; economic and social factors hampered local integration, particularly in Costa Rica; and Belize lacked a functioning asylum procedure. In South America, there were fewer newly displaced persons in 2003 than in previous years. However, the conflict in Colombia continued to cause major population displacement and an outward flow to neighbouring States. The presence of illegal armed groups along the borders with Colombia had a negative impact on the asylum policies of those countries. UNHCR's response focused on ensuring that asylum-seekers were protected and assisted, consolidating the legal and institutional asylum framework, and coordinating protection and assistance networks. It opened a representative office in Panama, helped to enhance institutional capacity-building in Peru and established quick-impact projects to benefit some 26,000 persons of concern in 27 communities in Venezuela. The integration of groups of resettled refugees remained difficult in some Latin American countries, notably in Brazil and Chile, because of limited opportunities open to them for self-reliance.

Total UNHCR expenditure in the Americas in 2003 was $24.3 million, for a population of concern numbering approximately 3 million.

Asia and the Pacific and the Arab States

In 2003, UNHCR spent a total of $54.4 million on activities in Asia and the Pacific, for a total population of concern of 1.4 million. For operations in Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, a total of $225 million was spent for a population of concern of 4 million.

South Asia

During the year, the refugee situation in South Asia was affected by a deteriorating situation in Nepal, following resumed hostilities between government forces and Maoist rebels, and by a continuing stalemate in the Bhutan-Nepal bilateral process, which had kept over 100,000 people in Nepalese camps for several years. In another protracted situation, 19,700 Myanmar Muslims had been living in temporary asylum in Bangladesh for more than a decade. Relative progress was made in that situation as UNHCR facilitated the voluntary return to Myanmar of some 3,231 refugees and proposed self-reliance projects for several thousand of the others remaining in Bangladesh. In Sri Lanka, the 2002 ceasefire agreement [YUN 2002, p. 1213] paved the way for the return of 345,734 IDPs to their home areas and 5,964 refugees from India. UNHCR strengthened its operational capacity in the country and expanded its field presence to monitor more closely the human rights situation in return areas.

East Asia and the Pacific

In East Asia and the Pacific, renewed fighting in Indonesia's Aceh province resulted in a sharp increase in asylum-seekers into neighbouring Malaysia, another 8,000 persons from Myanmar requested UNHCR protection and assistance, and the plight of North Koreans in China remained a cause of concern to UNHCR. UNHCR was constrained by lack of access to asylum-seekers and populations of concern throughout the subregion, especially in Cambodia, Viet Nam and areas along China's border with North Korea. Efforts by the Office to find durable solutions for former East Timorese refugees in Indonesia were constrained by ongoing UN security restrictions in West Timor. In Viet Nam, UNHCR intervened with authorities on the naturalization and local integration of 2,400 Cambodians residing in Vietnamese camps since 1979. In Papua New Guinea, it supported the registration of 2,500 refugees, an essential step to obtaining residency certificates. In West Timor, the construction of 870 houses enabled the closure of several camps for East Timorese refugees and helped reduce tension along the border with Timor-Leste. At year's end, only 385 files of East Timorese separated children remained open.

Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East

In Central Asia, UNHCR became a partner in implementing an EU border management programme that would ensure that the rights and needs of refugees and asylum-seekers were respected. Although progress was made in developing and strengthening refugee protection and in establishing related national structures, particularly in Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, challenges remained in a number of other countries in the region. During the year, UNHCR assisted 362 Afghans to return from Central Asian States and 76 Chechen asylum-seekers in Kyrgyzstan and 143 Tajik refugees to return to their homes. It resettled some 208 refugees in third countries. In South-West Asia, UNHCR continued to facilitate the voluntary repatriation of Afghan refugees and IDPs, some 485,400 of whom were assisted, particularly from Iran and Pakistan. The low rate of return in 2003, compared to the 2002 figure of 1.8 million, was attributed to instability and economic underdevelopment in potential high return areas and the slow imposition of the rule of law in Afghanistan. In Iran, UNHCR's agreement with the authorities to introduce a screening mechanism ensured that repatriated Afghans had access to UNHCR for continuing protection. UNHCR signed a tripartite agreement with Pakistan and Afghanistan, which committed the two Governments to a policy of voluntary return. However, security problems in parts of both countries, as well as the conflict in Iraq, continued to affect UNHCR operations. In November, the return operation was suspended temporarily following the murder of a UNHCR staff member in Afghanistan.

In North Africa, UNHCR's main concern was the situation of some 165,000 refugees from Western Sahara living in camps in south-western Algeria for more than 25 years. A breakthrough in the political stalemate between the parties to the Western Saharan conflict allowed the implementation of confidence-building measures, including opportunities for separated families to meet.

In the Middle East, UNHCR assisted some 9,000 Iraqis who had sought asylum in Iran, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and the Syrian Arab Republic to return to their homes, despite continuing insecurity in the country. At UNHCR's request, Iraq's neighbours introduced a temporary protection regime, banning the forced return of Iraqis, and strengthened protection and assistance to refugee women and children in the region. UNHCR worked to raise public awareness of its activities and concerns through the establishment of a web site in Arabic and the work of its Goodwill Ambassador, Adel Imam. Following the 19 August attack on the UN complex in Baghdad (see p. 346) and the withdrawal of international staff members, the responsibility for maintaining UNHCR's programme there devolved to locally recruited staff and UNHCR's implementing partners.

Europe

In 2003, UNHCR's expenditure for activities in Europe totalled $120.5 million for a population of concern of over 5 million. Over half of that amount ($66 million) was for 1 million persons of concern in South-Eastern Europe.

Western, Central and Eastern Europe

In Western Europe, although asylum claims fell dramatically to 288,100, from 425,528 in 2002, and despite ongoing negotiations to harmonize asylum systems at the EU level, 12 States amended their national asylum legislation, incorporating restrictive concepts into the system. Some 79 per cent of all new claims in 2003 were received by Austria, France, Germany, Sweden and the United Kingdom. A number of States showed increased interest in resettlement as a durable solution, with the United Kingdom introducing a first annual quota of 500 resettlement cases. Voluntary repatriation gained momentum and some Governments indicated support for initiatives under Convention Plus (see p. 1229). Public information activities remained a key element of UNHCR's Europe strategy, designed to increase awareness and understanding of asylum and related issues. UNHCR expressed concern with regard to proposals within the context of EU negotiations on harmonizing asylum systems, particularly those relating to the draft qualification directive and the draft asylum procedures directive. It proposed, as an alternative approach, improving access to protections and solutions in regions of origin. Other concerns included access to and conditions in reception facilities for asylum-seekers and the mandatory detention of asylum-seekers.

In Central Europe and the Baltic States, where asylum applications rose to 43,320, the year marked a critical transition period for the five newly admitted EU members (Cyprus, Czech Republic, Malta, Poland, Slovenia) as they undertook the challenge of revising or adopting asylum legislation to meet international and EU standards. To meet those new imperatives, UNHCR began taking stock of its programme and management structure in the subregion. Other challenges included the introduction of restrictive bilateral visa regimes; the need to upgrade asylum systems and to enhance refugee status determination capacity; the lack of opportunities for the sustainable integration of recognized refugees, which continued to encourage secondary movements; inadequate safety conditions in reception and detention centres; disappearance of separated children from reception facilities; gender-based violence; discrepancies in asylum procedures among States; and weak implementation of asylum systems. However, progress was made in strengthening asylum structures and procedure. The number of successful appeals against first instance rejections and cases of detention increased and the quality of NGO interventions also improved. UNHCR placed special emphasis on preventing and responding to sexual and gender-based violence at all stages of the asylum process, improving the protection of refugee women, and on their participation in decisions affecting them.

In Eastern Europe, UNHCR increased focus on building asylum systems in fragile environments where there were ongoing conflicts. In the Russian Federation, progress was made in building the capacity of authorities responsible for persons of concern. In Georgia, the profiling of Chechen refugees considerably reduced tensions in the Pankisi Valley and facilitated the definition of a range of durable solutions. In the light of the impending EU enlargement, which highlighted the need to strengthen asylum systems in the western Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) countries (Belarus, Moldova, Ukraine), UNHCR strengthened its regional representation in Ukraine to enable it to coordinate its activities. In Armenia and Azerbaijan, UNHCR, in partnership with the European Commission, initiated activities to strengthen reception facilities and the capacity of Governments to address asylum issues.

Follow-up to 1996 conference of CIS countries and neighbouring States

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/134 [YUN 2001, p. 1122], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/58/281] on follow-up to the 1996 Regional Conference to Address the Problems of Refugees, Displaced Persons, Other Forms of Involuntary Displacement and Returnees in the Countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States and Relevant Neighbouring States [YUN 1996, p. 1107]. The report provided information on progress in the implementation of the Conference's Programme of Action [ibid., p. 1118] and reviewed progress made and future plans.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December (meeting 77), the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/503], adopted resolution 58/154 without vote [agenda item 112].

up to the Conference, and invites them to demonstrate stronger support for the process of multinational constructive dialogue among a wide range of countries concerned;

11. Emphasizes the necessity of undertaking follow-up activities to the Programme of Action in relation to ensuring respect for human rights as an important factor in the management of migration flows, the consolidation of democracy, the rule of law and stability;

12. Recognizes the importance of taking measures, on the basis of strict adherence to all of the principles of international law, including humanitarian, human rights and refugee law, to prevent situations that lead to new flows of refugees, displaced persons and other forms of involuntary displacement;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the progress achieved in the implementation of activities undertaken in follow-up to the Programme of Action;

14. Decides to continue its consideration of the question at its sixtieth session.

South-Eastern Europe

In South-Eastern Europe, the political environment in the Balkans deteriorated and progress slowed down for refugees in Serbia and Montenegro and IDPs in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Also, the economic situation offered a bleak prospect for the welfare of the most vulnerable refugees and displaced persons and stifled hopes of sustainable return. There was also slow progress on property repossession and tenancy rights, which impacted negatively on the repatriation of Croatian refugees. Thus, contrary to earlier expectations that most of the affected refugees and IDPs would be repatriated by year's end, the need for UNHCR's protection and assistance would continue in 2004. Positive developments in the subregion included the fact that the property (restitution) law implementation plan in Bosnia and Herzegovina facilitated the resolution of 92.5 per cent of all property claims and the majority of the sub-regional States adopted new asylum legislation consistent with international standards. A total of 9,280 refugees repatriated to Croatia, and in Serbia and Montenegro some 44,000 refugees were granted citizenship and deregistered. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, 54,300 returns were recorded, while the Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro witnessed 3,629 minority returns, a 31 per cent increase over the previous year. Another 2,014 refugees repatriated from Kosovo to the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Chapter XIII

Health, food and nutrition

In 2003, the United Nations continued to promote human health, coordinate food aid and food security, and support research in nutrition.

At the end of 2003, about 37.8 million people were living with HIV/AIDS. During the year, an estimated 4.8 million people became infected with the virus and 2.9 million died as a result. In September, the General Assembly held four high-level plenary meetings devoted to follow-up to the outcome of its twenty-sixth (2001) special session and the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, adopted during the special session. The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) continued to coordinate UN activities for AIDS prevention and control, including the implementation of the Declaration. In December, UNAIDS and the World Health Organization (WHO) launched the "3 by 5" initiative, a global project to provide antiretroviral therapy to 3 million people in developing countries by the end of 2005. Efforts also continued towards meeting the UN Millennium Development Goal of halting and beginning to reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS by 2015.

In support of the Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa, 2001-2010, the General Assembly called on the international community to support the development of the capacity to manufacture insecticide-treated nets (ITNs) in Africa and to encourage and facilitate the transfer of technology needed to make ITNs more effective and long-lasting. Measures were taken to strengthen the Roll Back Malaria initiative, launched by WHO in 1998 with the goal of halving the world's malaria burden by 2010. The Assembly also took action to address the global road safety crisis. The text of the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control was finalized in February and adopted by the World Health Assembly in May.

The World Food Programme (WFP)—a joint undertaking of the United Nations and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)—assisted a record 104.2 million people, providing 6 million tons of food aid. Through WFP's relief operation in Iraq, 2.1 million tons of food reached the entire Iraqi population of around 27 million. FAO continued to implement the Plan of Action adopted at the 1996 World Food Summit and the Declaration of the 2002 World Food Summit: five years later, which called on the international community to fulfil the pledge made at the Summit to halve the number of hungry to about 400 million by 2015.

AIDS prevention and control

Follow-up to the twenty-sixth special session

The Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, adopted at the twenty-sixth special session of the General Assembly by resolution S-26/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1126], called for an expanded global response to the epidemic and established time-bound targets relating to the prevention, care, support and treatment, impact alleviation, and children orphaned and made vulnerable by HIV/AIDS. As pledged by the session's participants, one full day of high-level plenary meetings during the Assembly's annual session was devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of the special session and implementation of the Declaration (see p. 1244). The first of the Declaration's time-bound commitments were due to be met in 2003.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (May)

On 22 May [meeting 86], the General Assembly adopted resolution 57/308 [draft: A/57/L.78] without vote [agenda item 42].

High-level plenary meetings devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session: implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/299 of 20 December 2002, entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session: implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS", in which it decided to convene a day of high-level plenary meetings devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of its twenty-sixth special session and the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, and to hold, in parallel with the afternoon plenary meeting, an informal interactive panel discussion with the theme "Implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS: from policy to practice—progress achieved, lessons learned and best practices",

Recalling also that, in accordance with its resolution 57/299, the statements in the debate in the plenary meetings should not exceed five minutes each,

Recalling further that in its resolution 57/299, it invited the President of the General Assembly to finalize any outstanding organizational matters in consultation with the Member States,

1. Decides to amend paragraph 2 of its resolution 57/299 to read "Decides to convene a day of high-level plenary meetings of the General Assembly devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of its twenty-sixth special session and the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, to be held on 22 September 2003";

2. Also decides that the list of speakers for the debate in plenary will be organized on a first-come, first-served basis, the order of precedence being as follows:

- (a) Heads of State and Government;
- (b) Vice-Presidents/Crown Princes or Princesses;
- (c) Deputy Prime Ministers;
- (d) The highest ranking official of the Holy See, in its capacity as observer State, and of Palestine, in its capacity as observer;
- (e) Ministers;
- (f) Vice-Ministers;
- (g) Heads of delegations;

and, should the level of participation change, the replacement speaker will be accommodated in the last position available in the appropriate category;

3. Further decides that, in accordance with paragraph 5 of its resolution 57/299, an invitation to the informal interactive panel discussion, to be held in parallel with the afternoon plenary meeting, will be extended to those on the list of civil society representatives submitted on 25 April 2003 by the President of the General Assembly to Member States and to which no objection has been received.

In accordance with the above resolution, the Assembly, on 22 September, held four high-level plenary meetings [A/58/PV.3-6] devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session and the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to the Declaration of Commitment and in accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/299 [YUN 2002, p. 1218], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/58/184] on progress made to implement the Declaration. The report, which was based primarily on responses provided by 100 Member States on 18 global and national indicators developed by UNAIDS, said that there had been significant progress in the global response to HIV/AIDS since the Secretary-General's first (2002) progress report [YUN 2002, p. 1217]. The number of Member States meeting the policy targets for 2003 set forth in the Declaration had increased significantly, but many countries risked falling behind in certain aspects of the implementation if immediate action was not taken. Political intervention at the highest level was required in many countries to ensure that obstacles to coordination, implementation and reinforcement of HIV/AIDS strategies were rapidly addressed. Organizations representing people living with the disease, faith-based groups, workers' organizations and the business sector had extended the reach of essential HIV/AIDS programmes and services, but such engagement remained inadequate. Only 62 per cent of responding States had laws and policies in place to protect against discrimination towards people living with or affected by HIV/AIDS, and only 38 per cent had policies prohibiting discrimination against vulnerable populations. Investment in HIV/AIDS programmes in low- and middle-income developing countries had grown significantly and was estimated at $4.7 billion during 2003, including both national and international spending. The Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1217], had received almost $4.6 billion in financial pledges and approved proposals worth $1.5 billion in 93 countries. However, current financing trends still suggested that global funding for HIV/AIDS programmes would fall far short of the estimated $10.5 billion required annually by 2005.

While virtually all heavily affected countries had adopted multisectoral HIV/AIDS strategies, most were experiencing difficulty in converting those strategies into broad-based programmes. The problem hindered obtaining basic information on HIV/AIDS, access to voluntary counselling and testing services, antenatal care for pregnant women regarding the prevention of mother-to-child transmission of the virus and access to antiretroviral treatment. More than one in four countries identified a need for greater attention to programmes for vulnerable populations. A shortage of financial, human and technical resources and limited monitoring and evaluation capacity were among the primary impediments to programmatic reinforcement. Agricultural production was declining in many heavily affected countries in sub-Saharan Africa as a result, in part, of the loss of workers to HIV/AIDS, and education systems were being undermined by the loss of teachers to HIV-related illness and death. Women and girls represented half of all cases of HIV infection globally and as high as 58 per cent of cases in Africa. Thirty-nine per cent of countries with generalized epidemics—defined as adult prevalence consistently greater than 1 per cent in both urban and rural areas—had no formal strategy to address the needs of orphans and other vulnerable children, but many States indicated that such policies were in development.

The report described efforts to increase leadership on HIV/AIDS at the national, regional and global levels and to ensure the engagement of civil society partners; protect and promote human rights as an effective response to HIV/AIDS; prevent infection and reduce vulnerability to the disease; increase access to care, support and treatment; alleviate the social and economic impacts of the epidemic; strengthen research and development; address HIV/AIDS in conflict- and disaster-affected regions; mobilize resources; and monitor and evaluate follow-up to the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS.

The report recommended that countries assess their national policies in relation to the Declaration's provisions for 2003 and accelerate the development and implementation of policies needed to come into compliance with them. Areas needing emphasis were national leadership; the engagement of civil society, especially people living with HIV/AIDS; human rights, stigmatization and discrimination; prevention through the provision of information, services and support to young people; reducing the vulnerability of women and girls and other groups; comprehensive prevention, treatment and support programmes; the needs of children orphaned and made vulnerable by the epidemic; capacity-building and sustainability; urgent sustained and coordinated action to respond to crisis conditions in Southern Africa; and monitoring, evaluation and follow-up. Financing the global response needed to achieve the Declaration's future commitments required a threefold increase over current levels of annual funding for HIV/AIDS programmes by 2005 and a fivefold increase by 2007.

On 22 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 58/534); on 23 December, it decided that the agenda item on the follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session: implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

IASC Task Force. In June, the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC) Task Force on HIV/AIDS in Emergency Settings, formally established by the IASC working group in 2002 as a reference group [YUN 2002, p. 1220], completed a draft revision of guidelines for HIV/AIDS interventions in emergency settings, originally produced in 1996 by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, UNAIDS and WHO. The purpose of the guidelines was to enable Governments and cooperating agencies, including UN agencies and non-governmental organizations, to give the minimum required multi-sectoral response to HIV/AIDS during the early phase of emergency situations. A final version of the guidelines would be published in 2004. The Task Force also continued its activities in the areas of advocacy and training.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (December)

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/236 [draft: A/58/L.54] without vote [agenda item 47].

Follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session: implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS

The General Assembly,

Recalling the goals and targets set forth in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-sixth special session, in 2001, and the HIV/AIDS-related goals contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration of 2000,

Reaffirming the commitment made by all States at the twenty-sixth special session of the General Assembly,

Noting with profound concern that 42 million people worldwide are living with HIV/AIDS, that the HIV/AIDS pandemic claimed 3.1 million lives in 2002 and to date has orphaned 14 million children,

Noting with grave concern that the majority of new HIV infections occur among young people and that women and girls are disproportionately affected by the pandemic,

Noting that the unequal legal and social status of women heightens their vulnerability to HIV,

Expressing serious concern about the continued global spread of HIV/AIDS, which exacerbates poverty and poses a major threat to economic and social development and to food security in heavily affected regions, while recognizing that poverty, underdevelopment and illiteracy are among the principal contributing factors to the spread of the disease,

Noting that the epidemic affects every region and, while sub-Saharan Africa remains worst affected, serious epidemics are present or emerging in the Caribbean, Eastern Europe and Asia and the Pacific,

Acknowledging that prevention, care, support and treatment for those infected and affected by HIV/AIDS are mutually reinforcing elements of an effective response and must be integrated in a comprehensive approach to combat the epidemic,

Also acknowledging the importance of maintaining an emphasis on prevention measures in countries with low prevalence rates,

Recognizing that, while the primary responsibility for responding to HIV/AIDS rests with Governments, the efforts and engagement of all sectors of society are essential to generating an effective response,

Reaffirming that the full realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all is an essential element in a global response to the HIV/AIDS pandemic, and reaffirming also the importance of the elimination of all forms of discrimination against people living with or at risk of HIV/AIDS, including those most vulnerable,

Recognizing that populations destabilized by armed conflict, humanitarian emergencies and natural disasters, including refugees, internally displaced persons and, in particular, women and children, are at increased risk of exposure to HIV infection,

Encouraged that civil society, especially organizations representing people living with HIV/AIDS, women, young persons, orphans, faith-based organizations and the private sector, is increasingly involved in national responses to HIV/AIDS, while noting the need for further engagement of these stakeholders at all levels,

Acknowledging the efforts of international humanitarian organizations, including the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, in combating the epidemic in the most affected areas of the world,

Noting that strengthened political commitment, including at the highest level, as witnessed, inter alia, at the high-level General Assembly meeting on HIV/AIDS, held on 22 September 2003, demonstrates the resolve of Governments and the international community to intensify implementation and cooperation in order to meet the goals and targets contained in the Declaration of Commitment,

Noting with appreciation the support for national responses provided by the United Nations system, especially the secretariat of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS and Co-sponsors, inter alia, for effective country-led mechanisms, including the mobilization of financial resources, the facilitation and provision of technical assistance and support to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria and applicant countries, at every level of the grant-making process,

Also noting with appreciation the new strategic direction taken by the Joint Programme after the five-year evaluation of the Programme by its Programme Coordinating Board, encompassing, in particular, a greater focus on national-level processes, continued global leadership and advocacy, and a focus on the gender implications of HIV/AIDS,

Encouraged that the United Nations system has made progress towards integrating the consideration of HIV/AIDS in its activities, including addressing HIV/AIDS in the United Nations workplace, the appointment of HIV/AIDS focal points in peacekeeping operations and the work on guidelines for HIV/AIDS in emergency settings,

Recognizing the emergence of the World Bank Multi-Country HIV/AIDS Programme and the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria and the contributions of private foundations as important sources of new and additional funding,

Noting with concern that, although many Member States have met the 2003 targets contained in the Declaration of Commitment, considerable gaps remain,

Also noting with concern that, at the current rate of implementation and fulfilment of commitments, many countries are unlikely to meet the targets for 2005,

Recognizing that many developing countries may not have the financial or human resources capacity to mount an effective response to the HIV/AIDS epidemic, and in this context underlining the importance of international cooperation,

Noting that, despite improvement, current global resources available for HIV/AIDS are less than half of the 10 billion United States dollars considered necessary for an effective response in 2005 alone and that substantial new funding will be required in order to meet the global resource targets,

Also noting that intensified implementation will require partnership and enhanced cooperation at all levels, as well as enhanced support for human and institutional capacity development and considerably increased financial resources,

Further noting that implementation has to be intensified through partnerships at the national, regional and international levels in order to offer infected and affected people and communities in developing countries and countries with economies in transition medicines and related technology which are affordable, easy to use and readily available,

Encouraged that an increasing number of companies in the private sector are offering prevention, care and treatment services to employees and their families, while noting the need for continued efforts in this regard,

Recalling Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/47 of 23 April 2003,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on progress towards implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS;

2. Reaffirms its commitment to the goals and targets contained in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS and the United Nations Millennium Declaration and to their implementation;

3. Stresses with deep concern that the HIV/AIDS emergency, with its devastating scale and impact, requires urgent actions in all fields and at all levels;

4. Urges relevant United Nations organizations, as well as other relevant international organizations, to further support national efforts for implementation of the Declaration of Commitment and address the issue of the cost, availability and affordability of drugs and related technology;

5. Urges Member States to intensify national efforts and international cooperation in the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment in order to meet the goals and targets contained therein based on national plans, where they exist, and, in particular, where gaps have been identified in the report of the Secretary-General by, inter alia:

(a) Providing stronger and more visible leadership in response to the epidemic;

(b) Creating an environment that encourages the engagement of and partnerships with all stakeholders, including civil society, people living with HIV/AIDS, marginalized and vulnerable groups, cultural and faith-based organizations, non-governmental organizations, traditional health practitioners, the private sector, international institutions and the media;

(c) Strengthening policies and programmes for combating HIV/AIDS, including those relating to the protection and promotion of all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, including eliminating stigmas and discrimination against people living with and/or affected by HIV/AIDS, ensuring gender equality, assisting orphans and children and expanding access to treatment, care and support;

(d) Building and scaling up a comprehensive response to achieve broad multisectoral coverage for prevention, care, treatment and support and recognizing the need to seriously address impact mitigation issues, in particular in the worst affected countries, and specifically within this context:

- (i) Intensifying prevention measures, especially those directed at vulnerable groups, in particular women and young persons, bearing in mind that prevention is the mainstay of the national, regional and international response;
  - (ii) Expanding access to treatment, in a progressive and sustainable manner, including the prevention and treatment of opportunistic diseases and the effective use of antiretroviral medication;
  - (iii) Improving the provision of care and support to those infected and affected by HIV/AIDS, including orphans;
  - (iv) Mitigating the social and economic impact of the epidemic;
  - (v) Promoting access to low-cost and effective drugs and related pharmaceutical products;
  - (vi) Strengthening health-care systems and integrating HIV/AIDS programmes into current health services;
  - (vii) Strengthening HIV/AIDS surveillance and systems for evaluating programme effectiveness;
- (e) Strengthening pharmaceutical policies and practices, including those applicable to generic drugs and intellectual property regimes, in order to further promote innovation and the development of domestic industries consistent with international law;
- (f) Intensifying training and research initiatives or programmes to strengthen the capacities of Governments to manage the epidemic;
- (g) Sharing experiences and exchanging information on key areas of intervention, such as prevention, the provision of care and support for HIV/AIDS-infected persons and the treatment of HIV/AIDS-related conditions;
- (h) Addressing the human resource crisis affecting the effective implementation of comprehensive national HIV/AIDS programmes, including supporting the development of monitoring and evaluation capacities and working at the national and international levels to generate flexible solutions;
- (i) Mobilizing financial resources and providing the support necessary to ensure that they are targeted effectively and absorbed quickly and deliver equitable and sustainable coverage of services, particularly to those most in need;

6. Welcomes with appreciation the Declaration on the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights and Public Health, adopted on 14 November 2001 at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held in Doha, and the decision dated 30 August 2003 of the General Council of the World Trade Organization on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Declaration;

7. Welcomes the commitment by the World Health Organization and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS to work with the international community to support developing countries in achieving the target of providing antiretroviral medicines to 3 million people infected with HIV/AIDS by the end of 2005, the "3 by 5" target, recalling Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/29 of 22 April 2003 entitled "Access to medication in the context of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria";

8. Urges the mobilization of additional resources from national, bilateral, multilateral and private sources, including but not limited to additional support to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, in order to address the growing need;

9. Also urges the provision of additional financial resources to the United Nations system, especially the Joint Programme's secretariat and Co-sponsors, in order that they may intensify their support for national responses to HIV/AIDS;

10. Emphasizes that, with the increasing number of HIV/AIDS initiatives at the global, regional and national levels, there is a need for close coordination at all levels, including under government leadership at the national level to ensure a harmonized approach and to increase the effectiveness of the response;

11. Encourages the private sector to become fully engaged in the fight against HIV/AIDS, including by adopting relevant workplace non-discrimination policies;

12. Encourages the private sector and the pharmaceutical industry to contribute to the fight against AIDS by, inter alia, continuing to provide key AIDS pharmaceuticals that meet the standards of the World Health Organization, at the lowest possible prices;

13. Recognizes the importance of young men and women having access to information, education, including peer education and youth-specific HIV education, and services necessary to develop the life skills required to reduce their vulnerability to HIV infection, in full partnership with young persons, parents, families, educators and health-care providers;

14. Reiterates the need to respond urgently to the dire situation in sub-Saharan Africa and in particular the crisis conditions in the southern African region, in order to minimize the loss of institutional capacity in key national sectors and mitigate the threat of accelerating the cycle of poverty, food insecurity, instability and heightened vulnerability to HIV/AIDS;

15. Stresses the need for intensified action in all regions, especially the Caribbean, Eastern Europe and Asia and the Pacific;

16. Decides to hold a high-level meeting in 2005 to review the progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in the Declaration of Commitment, and decides also that the scheduling, format, participation, including civil society participation, and other organizational details will be further considered during the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly;

17. Requests the Secretary-General, in this regard, to submit a comprehensive and analytical report on progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in the Declaration of Commitment, in particular those set out for 2005, with a view to identifying problems and constraints and making recommendations on action needed to make further progress;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session: implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS".

Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS

UNAIDS, which became fully operational in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1121] and served as the main advocate for global action on HIV/AIDS, had nine co-sponsors: the International Labour Organization (ILO), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), WHO, the World Food Programme (WFP) and the World Bank. UNAIDS was mandated to lead, strengthen and support an expanded response to the epidemic, mainly through facilitation and coordination, best-practice development and advocacy. The key goals of the response were to prevent the spread of HIV; to provide support for those infected and affected by the disease; to reduce the vulnerability of individuals and communities to HIV/AIDS; and to alleviate the socio-economic and human impact of the virus.

According to UNAIDS, at the end of 2003 an estimated 37.8 million people were living with HIV/AIDS, of whom 35.7 million were adults and 2.1 million were children under the age of 15. Globally, nearly 50 per cent of those living with the virus were women. During the year, an estimated 4.8 million people became infected with the virus and 2.9 million died as a result. The epidemic continued to expand in sub-Saharan Africa, where an estimated 3 million new infections occurred in 2003 and 25 million were living with the virus; an estimated 2.2 million Africans died of the disease. In Asia, an estimated 1.1 million people became infected, and 7.4 million people were living with HIV; in India, about 5.1 million people were living with the disease at year's end. In the Middle East and North Africa, some 480,000 people were living with HIV. In Eastern Europe and Central Asia, 1.3 million people were living with HIV and an estimated 360,000 became infected. In Latin America, around 1.6 million people were living with HIV and around 430,000 were living with the disease in the Caribbean region.

The fourteenth meeting of the UNAIDS Programme Coordinating Board (PCB) (Geneva, 26-27 June) [UNAIDS/PCB(14)/03.8] considered, among other things, the 2002-2003 report of its Executive Director [UNAIDS/PCB(14)/03.2]; financial and budgetary updates for the period 1 January 2002 to 31 March 2003; a report from the working group on UNAIDS governance; and the UN system strategic plan on HIV/AIDS (2001-2005). PCB endorsed the strategies and approaches contained in the 2004-2005 unified budget and work plan [UNAIDS/PCB(14)/03.3], particularly its strategic thrust to enable countries to enhance their national response to the epidemic. The Board approved a core budget of $250.5 million and an additional inter-agency core budget of $20 million, subject to availability of funding beyond the $250.5 million core budget. It also approved, with amendments, a memorandum of understanding [UNAIDS/PCB(14)/03.7] between UNAIDS and the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1217] as an enabling framework for further collaboration.

On World AIDS Day, 1 December, WHO and UNAIDS launched the "3 by 5" initiative, a global project to provide antiretroviral therapy to 3 million people in developing countries by the end of 2005 (see p. 1514). The initiative came in response to a 22 September declaration by UNAIDS, WHO and the Global Fund that the lack of access to the therapy was a global health emergency.

On 5 March (decision 2003/210), the Economic and Social Council decided that the theme for the humanitarian affairs segment of its 2003 substantive session (Geneva, 30 June-25 July) would be "Strengthening of the coordination of United Nations humanitarian assistance, with particular attention to humanitarian financing and effectiveness of humanitarian assistance and the transition from relief to development"; within the context of that theme it decided to convene a panel on the sub-theme "Responding to the effects of HIV/AIDS and other widespread diseases on humanitarian relief operations". On 14 July, the Council held the panel discussion with the participation of the Director of the UNAIDS Country and Regional Support Department, among others.

Report of UNAIDS Executive Director. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2001/23 [YUN 2001, p. 1137], the Secretary-General, by a May note [E/2003/66], transmitted a report of the UNAIDS Executive Director, which updated the status of the epidemic; summarized steps taken by UNAIDS to promote the implementation of the 2001 Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS; and summarized key developments in advancing a more effective and coordinated UN system response to the epidemic. It also provided an overview of the future direction of UNAIDS in response to decisions made by PCB at its thirteenth meeting in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1219], following an external evaluation of the Programme [ibid., p. 1220].

The report recommended that the Council consider endorsing the decisions of the thirteenth PCB meeting and the five cross-cutting functions applicable at all levels of UNAIDS set out in the Board's decisions. It should encourage UNAIDS and the broader UN system to pursue full achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) of the 2000 Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49], and the goals and targets of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS. It should also encourage the further development of UNAIDS as a positive, ongoing example of UN system reform; support to periodic and comprehensive multi-stakeholder reviews of national AIDS programmes; the formulation of joint UN programmes to support national responses to HIV/AIDS; and more systematic reporting on the activities of UN theme groups on HIV/AIDS, through the annual reports submitted by the UN resident coordinators to the Secretary-General. The Council should urge UN funds, programmes and specialized agencies, through the resident coordinators, to include the UNAIDS country coordinators as regular members in the UN country teams; all Governments, especially donors, to provide full funding for the 2004-2005 biennium; and PCB and the governing boards of co-sponsoring agencies to develop closer links and more effective coordination.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/18 [draft: E/2003/L.25/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 7 (g)].

Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS)

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1994/24 of 26 July 1994, by which it created the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), and its resolution 2001/23 of 26 July 2001,

Having considered the report of the Executive Director of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS),

Recalling the goals and targets set forth in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-sixth special session, held from 25 to 27 June 2001, and the HIV/AIDS-related goals contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration of 8 September 2000,

Encouraged by the resolve of Governments to intensify implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS in order to meet the goals and targets contained therein,

Reaffirming the importance of the follow-up process prescribed by the Declaration, which included the setting of specific time-bound targets, which fall due in 2003, 2005 and 2010,

Noting with profound concern that 42 million people worldwide are living with HIV/AIDS and that the HIV/AIDS pandemic claimed 3.1 million lives in 2002,

Expressing serious concern about the continued global spread of HIV/AIDS, which exacerbates poverty and poses a major threat to economic and social development and to food security in heavily affected regions,

Welcoming the establishment of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, and the memorandum of understanding concluded between the Programme and the Global Fund,

Acknowledging other national, bilateral and multilateral resources available to fight the HIV/AIDS epidemic and the need to mobilize additional resources,

1. Urges the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to intensify their support to Governments, with a view to achieving the goals contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, as well as the goals and targets contained in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS;

2. Encourages Governments to participate in the high-level plenary meetings and informal interactive panel discussion of the General Assembly, which are to be held on 22 September 2003, and which will be devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session of the Assembly and the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS;

3. Welcomes the decisions of the Programme Coordinating Board of UNAIDS, taken in response to the five-year evaluation of the Programme, which set out five cross-cutting functions to apply at all levels of the Programme, namely: (a) leadership and advocacy for effective action on the epidemic; (b) strategic information required to guide the efforts of the partners; (c) tracking, monitoring and evaluation of the epidemic and actions responding to it; (d) civil society engagement and partnership development; and (e) financial, technical and political resources mobilization;

4. Also welcomes the decision of the Programme Coordinating Board calling for significantly increased efforts and resources in the unified budget and work plan devoted to scaling up the response to HIV/AIDS at the country level;

5. Commends the Programme as a positive example of collaborative action of the United Nations system, and encourages the further refinement of the work of the Programme;

6. Invites the Chairperson of the Programme Coordinating Board to continue consultations with the members of the Board and with Observer States in order to improve further the working methods of the Programme, its subcommittees and ad hoc working groups, with a view to further enhancing participation in the work of the Programme;

7. Calls upon the Chairperson of the United Nations Development Group to ensure, through the resident coordinators, the inclusion of the country coordinators of the Programme as members of United Nations country teams, in order to strengthen United Nations coordination in the fight against HIV/AIDS at the country level, and to mobilize intensified assistance to Governments in mounting and sustaining effective responses to HIV/AIDS;

8. Invites the governing bodies of the co-sponsoring organizations of the Programme, as well as the Programme Coordinating Board, to develop closer links and more effective coordination in order to ensure that clear and effective guidance is provided to the secretariat of the Programme and to co-sponsoring organizations, including through the annual consideration by the governing body of each sponsoring organization of its engagement in the Programme;

9. Urges Governments, bilateral and multilateral donors, civil society, the private sector and other partners to increase their funding for HIV/AIDS-related activities, including funding of the unified budget and work plan of the Programme, in order to ensure a level of financial and other resources that are fully commensurate with the multisectoral challenges of the epidemic;

10. Encourages the Programme to continue to foster efficient and effective cooperation with financing mechanisms, such as the World Bank Multi-Country HIV/AIDS Programme and the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, bearing in mind the complementarity of the role of those mechanisms, based on their respective comparative advantages;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Economic and Social Council, at its substantive session of 2005, a report prepared by the Executive Director of the Programme, in collaboration with other relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, which should include information on progress made in developing the coordinated response of the United Nations system to the HIV/AIDS pandemic, as well as the decisions, recommendations and conclusions of the Programme Coordinating Board taken subsequent to the substantive session of the Council in 2003.

HIV/AIDS and food insecurity

The High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP) of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), at its fifth session (Rome, Italy, 26-27 March) [CEB/2003/4], discussed the issue of linkages between HIV/AIDS and food security and governance, based on a note introduced by the UNAIDS secretariat, which had convened an ad hoc group to prepare the Committee's consideration of the issue. The Committee noted that the projected 10 to 30 per cent reduction of the labour force by 2020 in countries with a high prevalence of HIV/AIDS showed the indomitable nature of the threat to public institutional capacity and its far-reaching impact on the ability of the affected States to provide effective governance. In turn, lack of food security and deepening poverty were exacerbating the more rapid spread of the pandemic, while erosion of public institutional capacity, especially in rural areas, was debilitating the capacity of many countries to deal with the pandemic and to strengthen food production capacity. The Committee emphasized that HIV/AIDS not only detracted from progress towards sustainable development and the achievement of the MDGs, but had emerged as a major security threat at the national, regional and global levels. The Committee requested the UNAIDS secretariat to continue to convene the open-ended group with WFP as co-convenor. While not ignoring other regions, the group should focus on Southern and Eastern Africa as the areas where the triple crisis of HIV/AIDS, food security and governance was most manifest, provide an overview of relevant UN system initiatives, and prepare a policy paper and present it to the Committee and CEB (see p. 1260). The group was asked to develop a matrix of initiatives under way on AIDS, food security and governance to encourage transparency and information-sharing. The CEB secretariat was requested to consult with the Office of the Secretary-General on possible approaches to advocacy and outreach. At its first 2003 inter-annual meeting (Geneva, 2 July) [CEB/2003/6], HLCP endorsed the content and time frame of the paper on HIV/AIDS, and food security and governance.

At its sixth session (Rome, 18-19 September) [CEB/2003/7], HLCP considered HIV/AIDS, and food security and governance on the basis of a paper prepared collaboratively by 11 agencies with UNAIDS and WFP as task leaders. A revised paper was issued during the meeting and endorsed by the Committee on an ad referendum basis. The Committee agreed that a revised version should be circulated by 24 September so that its members might consult their executive heads and a final text prepared for submission to CEB. The final paper, entitled "Organizing the United Nations response to the triple threat of food insecurity, weakened capacity for governance and AIDS, particularly in Southern and Eastern Africa", was annexed to the meeting report. The paper presented a coherent UN system-wide policy and programming approach on HIV/AIDS with specific recommendations to be endorsed by CEB. It summarized the interlinkages between HIV/AIDS, and food security and governance, and identified the paradigm shift required in the UN system to meet the new challenges. Appended to the paper was a declaration adopted by UN regional directors at their meeting in Maputo, Mozambique, on 9 July to accelerate country and regional action on HIV/AIDS in Southern and Eastern Africa. The Committee called for urgent, collective and intensified commitment and action by the UN system to assist affected countries in responding to HIV/AIDS and to demonstrate in the process that the system could make a visible difference and impact on the ground.

At its second regular session of 2003 (New York, 31 October-1 November) [CEB/2003/2], CEB endorsed the general analysis and programming approach and the series of programmatic and institutional actions set out in the paper on the triple threat of HIV/AIDS, and food insecurity and weak governance, and concurred with the thrust of the recommendations contained therein. It called on its members to: provide the necessary support to carry out the action points of the paper; strive to increase financial investments in country-level actions directed at HIV/AIDS in Southern and Eastern Africa; draw on the paper as a tool for advocacy and communication with regard to the interlinked crises of food security, weakened capacity for governance and AIDS in that region; adopt the paper as a guide for action by their country representatives and by UN country teams in areas threatened by AIDS; and request the United Nations Development Group (UNDG), in coordination with IASC and in consultation with the Regional Inter-Agency Coordination and Support Office, as appropriate, to take the lead on follow-up and to report on progress in implementing the actions set out in the paper. HLCP, at its second intersessional meeting of 2003 (New York, 3 November) [CEB/2003/8], invited UNGD to report on progress to the Committee's February 2004 session.

Tobacco

The sixth and final session of the Intergovernmental Negotiating Body on the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (Geneva, 17-28 February) finalized the draft text of the Framework Convention and transmitted it to the fifty-sixth session of the WHO World Health Assembly (Geneva, 19-28 May) (see p. 1514). The Convention, which governed tobacco taxation, smoking prevention and treatment, illicit trade, advertising, sponsorship and promotion, and product regulation, was adopted by the World Health Assembly on 21 May. It was opened for signature from 16 to 22 June at WHO headquarters in Geneva and would remain open for signature at UN Headquarters in New York from 30 June 2003 to 29 June 2004. The Convention would enter into force 90 days after the fortieth instrument of ratification, approval, acceptance, formal confirmation or accession was deposited with the UN depositary.

As at 31 December, 85 States had signed the Convention. During the year, Fiji, Malta, Seychelles and Sri Lanka ratified the Convention, and Norway approved it.

Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force

The Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control, established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1151], at its fifth session (Washington, D.C., 21-22 October), discussed the new orientation of the Task Force and the activities it should focus on following the adoption of the Framework Convention. Task Force members highlighted areas of concern in which tobacco use had had a significant adverse impact, including on health, economic growth and poverty, as well as its fiscal impact and the impact of globalization on tobacco use at the country level.

Roll Back Malaria initiative

In a July report [A/58/136 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General provided an update, prepared by WHO, of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 57/294 [YUN 2002, p. 1223] on the Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa (2001-2010), which was proclaimed by the Assembly in resolution 55/284 [YUN 2001, p. 1139]. The report reviewed the state of resource mobilization and financing of malaria control; presented steps to finance malaria control in Africa; and provided examples of successful ways in which malaria-endemic countries were tackling the disease through sector-wide approaches for health and the prioritization of malaria control in debt relief. It also discussed government action to reduce or waive taxes and tariffs on mosquito nets; technology transfer for the production of long-lasting insecticidal nets and increased access to antimalarial medicines; and WHO's enhanced technical support to countries for effective disease management in resource development planning.

The report drew significantly on The Africa Malaria Report-2003, published by UNICEF and WHO and launched on Africa Malaria Day, which described the malaria burden and trends, policies and implementation of key interventions, constraints and obstacles to implementation, and financing south of the Sahara. Data were mainly from the period 1998 to 2002 and, as such, provided a baseline against which to evaluate progress by 2005. The report also described efforts to strengthen the Roll Back Malaria (RBM) Partnership, which was founded by WHO in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1384] with the goal of halving the world's malaria burden by 2010. Following an internal review and an external evaluation in 2002, steps were taken to restructure the Partnership secretariat. In May, a Monitoring and Evaluation Reference Group (MERG) was established as an advisory body of RBM partners to establish robust systems to reliably monitor the malaria situation and evaluate the effectiveness of RBM interventions. At its first meeting (Arlington, Virginia, United States, 8-9 May), MERG, which was chaired by WHO and co-chaired by UNICEF, established task forces on five priority issues: malaria mortality trends; the development of a malaria prevalence indicator of the MDGs; malaria-related anaemia; strengthening national monitoring and evaluation capacity for RBM activities; and developing population-based surveys.

The 2005 evaluation of the midterm (2005) targets of the Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa, as set by the 2000 Abuja Declaration and Plan of Action on Roll Back Malaria in Africa [YUN 2001, p. 1139], and laid out in resolution 55/284 [ibid.], was discussed by MERG at its second meeting (Kampala, Uganda, 17-18 November).

The report concluded that although progress was made in malaria control, it was still too slow. It proposed a series of recommendations to the General Assembly, which were incorporated into resolution 58/237 (see below).

Maputo Declaration. On 11 December [A/58/626], Mozambique transmitted the decisions and declarations adopted by the Assembly of the African Union (AU) at its second ordinary session (Maputo, Mozambique, 10-12 July), including the Maputo Declaration on Malaria, HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Other Related Infectious Diseases. In the Declaration, the heads of State and Government of the AU reaffirmed the commitments enshrined in the 2000 Abuja Declaration and Plan of Action and the 2001 Abuja Declaration and Framework Plan of Action on HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Other Related Infectious Diseases, adopted by the heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity during an extraordinary summit meeting on the subject. They also reiterated their commitment to intensify and consolidate efforts for the implementation of those Declarations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/237 [draft: A/58/L.53 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 51].

2001-2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/135 of 19 December 1994, 50/128 of 20 December 1995, 55/284 of 7 September 2001 and 57/294 of 20 December 2002 concerning the struggle against malaria in developing countries, particularly in Africa,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Economic and Social Council relating to the struggle against malaria and diarrhoeal diseases, in particular resolution 1998/36 of 30 July 1998,

Taking note of the declarations and decisions on health issues adopted by the Organization of African Unity, in particular the declaration and plan of action on the "Roll Back Malaria" initiative adopted at the Extraordinary Summit of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, held in Abuja on 24 and 25 April 2000, as well as decision AHG/Dec.155(XXXVI) concerning the implementation of that declaration and plan of action, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-sixth ordinary session, held in Lomé from 10 to 12 July 2000,

Also taking note of the Maputo Declaration on Malaria, HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Other Related Infectious Diseases, adopted by the Assembly of the African Union at its second ordinary session, held in Maputo from 10 to 12 July 2003,

Recognizing the linkages in efforts being made to reach the targets set in the Abuja Summit as necessary and important for the attainment of the "Roll Back Malaria" goal and the targets of the United Nations Millennium Declaration by 2010 and 2015, respectively,

Also recognizing the urgent need for scaling up national malaria control programmes if African countries are to meet the intermediate target set by the Abuja Summit for the five-year period of 2000-2005,

Further recognizing that malaria-related ill health and deaths throughout the world can be eliminated with political commitment and commensurate resources if the public is educated and sensitized about malaria and appropriate health services are made available, particularly in countries where the disease is endemic,

Emphasizing the importance of implementing the Millennium Declaration, and welcoming in this connection the commitment of Member States to respond to the specific needs of Africa,

Commending the efforts of the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund and other partners to fight malaria over the years, including the launching of the Roll Back Malaria Partnership in 1998,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and calls for support for the recommendations contained therein;

2. Calls upon the international community to continue to support the "Roll Back Malaria" partner organizations, including the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, as vital complementary sources of support for the efforts of malaria-endemic countries to combat the disease;

3. Appeals to the international community to ensure that the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria receives increased funding to support sound national plans to control malaria in endemic countries to be implemented in a sustained and equitable way that contributes to health system development;

4. Urges malaria-endemic countries to increase domestic resource allocation to malaria control;

5. Encourages all African countries that have not yet done so to implement the recommendations of the Abuja Summit to reduce or waive taxes and tariffs for nets and other products needed for malaria control, both to reduce the price of nets to consumers and to stimulate free trade in insecticide-treated nets;

6. Calls upon the international community to support ways of stimulating the development of manufacturing capacity of insecticide-treated nets in Africa and, in this connection, to encourage and facilitate the transfer of technology needed to make insecticide-treated nets more effective and long-lasting;

7. Recognizes the importance of the development of effective vaccines and new medicines to prevent and treat malaria, and the need for further research, including through effective global partnerships such as the various malaria vaccine initiatives and the Medicines for Malaria Venture, in securing their development;

8. Reiterates the need for expanded public-private partnerships for malaria control and prevention, and in this context urges petroleum companies operating in Africa to consider providing polymer for the manufacture of mosquito nets at reduced prices as a contribution to rolling back malaria in Africa;

9. Urges the pharmaceutical industry to take note of the increasing need for effective combination treatment for malaria, particularly in Africa, and to form additional alliances and partnerships to help to ensure that all people at risk have access to prompt, affordable and quality treatment;

10. Requests the Secretary-General, in close collaboration with the World Health Organization, developing countries and regional organizations, including the African Union, to conduct in 2005 an evaluation of the measures taken and progress made towards the achievement of the mid-term targets, the means of implementation provided by the international community in this regard and the overall goals of the Decade, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution, under the agenda item entitled "2001-2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa".

Access to medication

In 2003, the Secretary-General reported to the Commission on Human Rights on measures States had taken to promote access to medication in the context of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS (see p. 806). In furtherance of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, adopted in General Assembly resolution S-26/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1126], the Commission called on States to address factors affecting the provision of drugs related to pandemics (see p. 807). In related action, the Commission's Special Rapporteur on the right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health presented an overview of good practices for the right (see p. 772).

On 30 August, the World Trade Organization General Council adopted a decision on the implementation of the 2001 Doha Declaration on the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights and Public Health [YUN 2001, p. 1432], which would make it easier for poorer countries to import cheaper generic drugs made under compulsory licensing if they were unable to manufacture the medicines themselves.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December (meeting 77), the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/179 by recorded vote (181-1) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Access to medication in the context of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,

Reaffirming also that the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health is a human right,

Recalling Commission on Human Rights resolutions 2001/33 of 23 April 2001, 2002/32 of 22 April 2002 and 2003/29 of 22 April 2003,

Acknowledging that prevention and comprehensive care and support, including treatment and access to medication for those infected and affected by pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria, are inseparable elements of an effective response and must be integrated into a comprehensive approach to respond to such pandemics,

Stressing the importance of fully implementing the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, "Global Crisis—Global Action", and taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the continuing political commitment demonstrated at the high-level plenary meetings of the General Assembly devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of its twenty-sixth special session and the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, "Global Crisis—Global Action", held on 22 September 2003,

Expressing its support for the work of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria and that of other international bodies combating such pandemics,

Bearing in mind World Health Assembly resolutions WHA55.12 and WHA55.14, both of 18 May 2002, and WHA56.30 of 28 May 2003,

Bearing in mind also the International Labour Organization Code of Practice on HIV/AIDS and the World of Work, adopted by the Governing Body of the International Labour Organization in June 2001,

Taking note of general comment No. 14 (2000) on the right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health (article 12 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights), adopted by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights at its twenty-second session,

Taking note also of general comment No. 3 (2003) on HIV/AIDS and the rights of the child, adopted by the Committee on the Rights of the Child at its thirty-second session,

Alarmed that the HIV/AIDS pandemic claimed 3.1 million lives in 2002, that about 42 million people were living with HIV by the end of 2002 and that 25 million children under the age of 15, including 20 million in Africa, are projected to lose one or both parents by 2010 owing to HIV/AIDS,

Fully aware that the failure to deliver antiretroviral treatment for HIV/AIDS to the millions of people who need it is a global health emergency,

Recalling its resolution 57/294 of 20 December 2002, entitled "2001-2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa",

Alarmed that, according to the global Roll Back Malaria Partnership, malaria annually causes more than 1 million deaths, around 90 per cent of which are in Africa, that it is the leading cause of death in young children and that it causes at least 300 million cases of acute illness each year,

Also alarmed that, according to the World Health Organization global tuberculosis control report of 2003, tuberculosis kills about 2 million people each year, that 7 to 8 million people around the world become sick with tuberculosis each year and that it is projected that 36 million people will die of tuberculosis between 2002 and 2020 if control is not further strengthened,

Acknowledging the significance of HIV/AIDS in the increase in tuberculosis and other opportunistic diseases,

Welcoming the initiatives of the Secretary-General and relevant United Nations agencies, States and civil society, including the private sector, to make drugs related to HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria more accessible and affordable to infected persons, especially in developing countries, and noting that much more could be done in this regard,

Recalling the Declaration on the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement) and Public Health adopted at the Fourth World Trade Organization Ministerial Conference in Doha in November 2001, and welcoming the World Trade Organization General Council decision of 30 August 2003 on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Declaration,

Recognizing that the spread of HIV/AIDS can have a uniquely devastating impact on all sectors and levels of society, and stressing that the HIV/AIDS pandemic, if unchecked, may pose a risk to stability and security, as stated in Security Council resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

Emphasizing, in view of the increasing challenges presented by pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria, the need for intensified efforts to ensure universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, including by reducing vulnerability to pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria and by preventing related discrimination and stigma,

1. Recognizes that access to medication in the context of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria is one fundamental element for achieving progressively the full realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

2. Welcomes the commitment of the World Health Organization and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS to work with the international community to support developing countries in achieving the global target of providing antiretroviral medicines to 3 million people infected with HIV/AIDS by the end of 2005, the "3 by 5" target;

3. Takes note with interest of the interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

4. Calls upon States to develop and implement national strategies, in accordance with applicable international law, including international agreements acceded to, to progressively realize access for all to prevention-related goods, services and information as well as access to comprehensive treatment, care and support for all individuals infected and affected by pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria;

(c) The assurance that pharmaceutical products or medical technologies used to treat pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria or the most common opportunistic infections that accompany them, irrespective of their sources and countries of origin, are scientifically and medically appropriate and of good quality;

7. Calls upon States, at the national level, on a non-discriminatory basis, in accordance with applicable international law, including international agreements acceded to:

(a) To refrain from taking measures that would deny or limit equal access for all persons to preventive, curative or palliative pharmaceutical products or medical technologies used to treat pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria or the most common opportunistic infections that accompany them;

(b) To adopt and implement legislation or other measures, in accordance with applicable international law, including international agreements acceded to, to safeguard access to such preventive, curative or palliative pharmaceutical products or medical technologies from any limitations by third parties;

(c) To adopt all appropriate positive measures, to the maximum of the resources allocated for this purpose, to promote effective access to such preventive, curative or palliative pharmaceutical products or medical technologies;

8. Also calls upon States, in furtherance of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, to address factors affecting the provision of drugs related to the treatment of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS and the most common opportunistic infections that accompany them, as well as to develop integrated strategies to strengthen health-care systems, including voluntary counselling and testing, laboratory capacities and the training of health-care providers and technicians, in order to provide treatment and monitor the use of medications, diagnostics and related technologies;

10. Calls upon States, at the international level, to take steps, individually and/or through international cooperation, in accordance with applicable international law, including international agreements acceded to, such as:

(a) Facilitating, wherever possible, access in other countries to essential preventive, curative or palliative pharmaceutical products or medical technologies used to treat pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria or the most common opportunistic infections that accompany them, as well as extending the necessary cooperation, wherever possible, especially in times of emergency;

(b) Ensuring that their actions, as members of international organizations, take due account of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health and that the application of international agreements is supportive of public health policies that promote broad access to safe, effective and affordable preventive, curative or palliative pharmaceutical products or medical technologies;

Follow-up to Millennium Summit

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/95 [YUN 2001, p. 1279], the Secretary-General submitted, in September, the second annual report [A/58/323] on progress achieved by the UN system and Member States to implement the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted in Assembly resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49]. The Secretary-General noted the lack of progress made to reverse the rate of the spread of HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis. HIV/AIDS had already had a devastating social and economic impact in sub-Saharan Africa and, to a lesser extent, in the Caribbean. Infection rates in most countries of South-Central and South-Eastern Asia were already at least comparable to those in most developed countries, where the pandemic started much earlier, and there were signs that the disease was breaking out of high-risk pockets into the general population. The incidence of malaria might also be on the rise, as increasing resistance to the available drugs, and of mosquitoes to available pesticides, made both treatment and prevention more difficult. The best estimates available indicated that the incidence of tuberculosis was increasing. However, the Secretary-General said, rapid improvements were possible by learning and building on success stories such as in Thailand, where a strong prevention campaign since 1990 had contained the HIV/AIDS pandemic; in Uganda, where infection rates were down for eight consecutive years in the 1990s; and in Senegal and Cambodia, where the spread of HIV was also contained. Countries had the opportunity to make sizeable inroads into the incidence of tuberculosis by adopting a relatively inexpensive but sustained treatment programme. Efforts to combat HIV/AIDS, as well as tuberculosis and malaria, were being supported by a major global mobilization that combined new commitments to advocacy and political action in many of the most affected countries and a new drive to raise international resources commensurate with the scale of the challenge.

The Secretary-General, as patron of the Global Fund to Fight HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, was encouraged by the increase in support for that body and for broader efforts by UN agencies, the World Bank and others. Private foundations were also increasingly supporting research, treatment and prevention. Some pharmaceutical firms were offering steeply discounted drug supplies, and an increasing number of countries were able to provide inexpensive generic drugs to their populations. Nevertheless, with commitments for the Global Fund still significantly short of the $3 billion required in 2004 and the $4.5 billion needed in 2005, it was imperative that donors make a renewed effort to increase their support. With immediate action, there was still reasonable hope to meet the MDG of halting and beginning to reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS and the incidence of malaria and other major diseases by 2015.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 27 October [meeting 43], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/3 [draft: A/58/L.5 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 60].

Road safety

In a letter of 28 January [A/57/235], Oman requested the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda in the fifty-seventh session of the General Assembly on the global road safety crisis; an explanatory memorandum included facts about road traffic injuries.

WHO designated "Safe roads" as the theme of World Health Day 2004, to be observed on 7 April of that year.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (May)

On 22 May [meeting 86], the General Assembly adopted resolution 57/309 [draft: A/57/L.77 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 169].

Global road safety crisis

The General Assembly,

Noting the rapid increase in road traffic deaths, injuries and disabilities globally,

Recognizing the disproportionate fatality rate in developing countries,

Taking note of the negative impact of road traffic injuries on national and global economies,

Affirming the need for a worldwide effort to raise awareness of the importance of road safety as a public policy issue, especially through education and the dissemination of information,

Convinced that responsibility for road safety rests at the local, municipal and national levels,

Affirming that the road safety crisis has multiple dimensions requiring collaborative efforts at all levels, including through appropriate public health education programmes,

1. Welcomes the efforts of the World Health Organization to designate "Safe roads" as the theme of World Health Day 2004, to be observed on 7 April of that year, and to undertake the development of a world report on road traffic injury prevention, to be issued in April 2004;

2. Encourages Governments and civil society to raise awareness of the widespread problem of preventable road traffic deaths and injuries, targeting especially the young in educational establishments;

3. Urges all Governments to promulgate and to continue to enforce existing traffic laws;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly on the global road safety crisis, through the appropriate United Nations body, taking into consideration the views expressed by Member States and the relevant organs and agencies within the United Nations system, for consideration by the Assembly at its fifty-eighth session.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to resolution 57/309 (above), the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/58/228] on the global road safety crisis, prepared by WHO and revised to include comments from Secretariat departments and other UN system entities. It emphasized that road traffic injuries posed a global public health crisis requiring action at the national and international levels. The report discussed the magnitude of the problem; who was affected; the social and economic consequences of road traffic injuries; the lack of information to assess road safety; risk factors and determinants that predisposed certain groups to vulnerability to road traffic injuries; and successful intervention strategies.

An estimated 1.26 million people worldwide died as a result of road traffic injuries in 2000; such injuries accounted for 2.2 per cent of global mortality and were responsible for 25 per cent of all deaths due to injury. Road traffic crashes ranked as the ninth leading cause of mortality and morbidity, accounting for 2.8 per cent of all global deaths and disability. WHO projections suggested that by 2020 road traffic injuries could rank third among causes of death and disability, ahead of malaria, tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS. More than a third—435,000—of annual road crash deaths in 2000 occurred in South-East Asia, but Africa had the highest road traffic death rate, at 28 deaths per 100,000 people. Road traffic injuries affected disproportionately the poor in developing countries, where the majority of road crash victims were vulnerable road users (pedestrians, cyclists, children, passengers). In developed countries, children of lower socio-economic status were more likely to die in collisions involving pedestrians than their more affluent counterparts. Poorer socio-economic groups also had less access to medical services, leading to disparities in chances of recovery or survival. More than 50 per cent of global mortality due to road traffic injury occurred among young adults, aged 15 to 44. The road traffic injury mortality rate for males was almost three times as high as it was for females.

The report identified a number of risk factors and determinants that affected the probability of a road traffic injury, which could be modified by intervention, including speeding; alcohol use; the use of helmets for motorbike riders; safety devices, such as seat belts and child restraints; access to trauma care; road design and roadway environment; implementation of road safety standards; enforcement of traffic safety regulations; improving vehicle safety; and the lack of vehicle inspection programmes.

The report made a series of recommendations to the General Assembly to address the global road safety crisis, particularly regarding the identification of a coordinating body within the UN system; the assessment by Member States of their road traffic safety problem and situation; increased funding for the inclusion of the problem of road traffic injuries in priority programmes in UN organizations, especially for low- and middle-income countries; and the development and implementation of a national strategy for Member States on road traffic injury prevention and appropriate action plans, and multisectoral collaboration between various ministries and sectors. It also proposed that the Assembly call on the UN regional commissions to expand their work programmes to include activities on: promoting regional best practices regarding matters related to road safety; assisting Member States in drawing up road safety standards appropriate to their setting; supporting human and technical capacity-building programmes pertaining to road safety; developing and implementing sustainable transport policies that incorporated road safety; adopting multisectoral approaches to road safety with clear targets and appropriate management structures; and developing short- and medium-term strategies to address road safety priorities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (November)

On 5 November [meeting 56], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/9 [draft: A/58/L.3/Rev.1 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 160].

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/309 of 22 May 2003,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on the global road safety crisis,

Expressing great concern at the rapid increase, particularly in developing countries, in traffic fatalities and injuries worldwide, which accounted for an estimated 1.26 million deaths in 2000 and which disproportionately affect people in low- and middle-income countries, and also expressing concern at the economic costs of road traffic injuries, which amount to 518 billion United States dollars per annum worldwide, with developing countries bearing 100 billion dollars of the cost,

5. Underlines the need for international cooperation to deal with issues of road safety;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, through an appropriate United Nations body, to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the progress made in improving global road safety and the issues referred to in the present resolution, also taking into consideration the views expressed during the meetings on 14 and 15 April 2004;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Global road safety crisis".

World Food Programme

In July, the Economic and Social Council had before it two reports pertaining to the work of the World Food Programme (WFP): the annual report of the Executive Director of WFP for 2002 [E/2003/14] and a report of the WFP Executive Board containing the decisions and recommendations of its 2002 sessions [E/2003/36]. The Council, by decision 2003/225 of 11 July, took note of the reports.

The WFP Executive Board decided on organizational and programme matters and approved a number of projects at its 2003 sessions [E/2004/36], all held in Rome: first regular session (5-7 February), annual session (28-30 May), second regular session (2-3 June) and third regular session (20-24 October). In October, the Board approved the WFP 2004-2005 biennial management plan and the WFP strategic plan (2004-2007), which outlined five core strategic priorities and identified nine management priority areas.

WFP activities

According to the WFP annual performance report for 2003 [WFP/EB.A./2004/4-A & Corr.1], WFP reached a record 104.2 million people in 81 countries in 2003, a 44.7 per cent increase from the 72 million assisted in 2002. Of those assisted, 61.2 million benefited from emergency operations, 26.8 million benefited from protracted relief and recovery operations and 16.2 million benefited from development programmes. The beneficiaries included 55.5 million children, including 15.2 million assisted through school feeding programmes; 53.5 million women and girls, representing 51.3 per cent of all beneficiaries; and 2.6 million refugees and 5.7 million internally displaced persons.

WFP delivered 6 million tons of food, including more than 2 million tons in Iraq alone; the volume of food shipped increased by 57 per cent compared to 2002.

Global food aid deliveries amounted to 10.2 million tons in 2003, an increase of about 5.2 per cent from the 9.7 million tons delivered in 2002. Bilateral deliveries accounted for 22.4 per cent of the total, a 9.7 per cent decrease from the previous year's 32.1 per cent. Nearly 67 per cent of the food aid delivered for the year was provided as relief aid to people affected by man-made or natural emergency situations. WFP's relief operation in Iraq was by far the largest: 2.1 million tons of food from donor contributions and from the oil-for-food programme reached the entire Iraqi population of approximately 27 million people. (For more information on the situation in Iraq in 2003, see p. 315.)

The portion of food aid channelled multilaterally increased from 39 per cent in 2002 to 49 per cent in 2003. WFP initiated 56 new operational activities and four new country programmes worldwide.

At the regional level, sub-Saharan Africa received the largest share of WFP assistance, with 48.8 per cent of operational expenditures spent in 40 countries; the Middle East and North Africa received 37.1 per cent for nine countries; Asia, 12.3 per cent for 19 countries; Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States, 2.3 per cent for nine countries; and Latin America and the Caribbean, 1.7 per cent for 11 countries.

Administrative and financial matters

The first joint session of the Executive Boards of UNDP/UNFPA and UNICEF, with the participation of WFP (New York, 6 and 9 June) [E/2003/35], discussed the simplification and harmonization process undertaken by the United Nations Development Group (UNDG) Executive Committee; the transition from relief to development; building on the Monterrey Consensus, reached at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953]; the five-year evaluation of UNAIDS, which was concluded in 2002 [ibid., p. 1220]; and the implementation in Nepal of the MDGs, adopted in General Assembly resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49].

Resources and financing

WFP operational expenditures for 2003 amounted to an all-time high of $3.3 billion for development and relief activities in the least developed countries and low-income food-deficit countries [WFP/EB.A/2004/4-A & Corr.1]. Contributions totalled a record $2.6 billion [E/2004/14], a 43 per cent increase over 2002. More than half of WFP's resources continued to be provided by the United States, which contributed $1.4 billion. Of the total contributed, $1.4 billion went to emergency operations, $240 million to development activities and $824 million to protracted relief and recovery operations.

Food security

Follow-up to 1996 World Food Summit

By a June note [E/2003/87], the Director-General of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) transmitted to the Economic and Social Council a report prepared by FAO's Committee on World Food Security on progress made to implement the Plan of Action adopted at the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129]. The report highlighted linkages with the coordinated and integrated follow-up to major UN conferences and summits. It consisted of extracts from a number of Committee reports, including the Declaration of the 2002 World Food Summit: five years later [YUN 2002, p. 1225], which, among other things, called on the international community to fulfil the pledge made at the 1996 Summit to reduce the number of hungry by half, to about 400 million, by 2015. The report also contained extracts from Committee decisions regarding a 2000 review of the first cluster of Plan of Action commitments, relating to people-centred objectives, and a 2002 review of the second cluster, consisting of commitments related to development-centred activities. Based on its findings and conclusions, the Committee made recommendations to implement the Plan of Action by Governments, the international community, international institutions, and FAO and its secretariat. National reports showed that countries had policies and programmes in place to implement the Plan, but the specific impact of each policy in improving food security and reducing the number of undernourished was seldom articulated in quantitative terms, making an analysis of progress difficult. A limited number of countries had succeeded in reducing the number of undernourished; in a large number of countries, the number of undernourished was growing.

On 16 July (decision 2003/227), the Council took note of the report.

CEB consideration. The CEB High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP) considered the issue of linkages between HIV/AIDS and food security and governance (see p. 1250) at its fifth session (Rome, 26-27 March) [CEB/2003/4], at its first intersessional meeting of 2003 (Geneva, 2 July) [CEB/2003/6] and at its sixth session (Rome, 18-19 September) [CEB/2003/7]. Over the course of the meetings, HLCP prepared an analytical policy paper on the UN response to the threats of food insecurity, weakened capacity for governance and AIDS. CEB, at its second regular session of 2003 (New York, 31 October-1 November) [CEB/2003/2], endorsed the general analysis and programming approach and the series of programmatic and institutional actions set out in the paper, and concurred with the thrust of its recommendations. HLCP, at its second intersessional meeting of 2003 (New York, 3 November) [CEB/2003/8], invited UNDG to report on progress in implementing the actions contained in the paper to the Committee's February 2004 session.

International Year of Rice (2004)

FAO continued to coordinate preparations for the International Year of Rice in 2004, declared by the General Assembly in resolution 57/162 [YUN 2002, p. 1226] as a major international effort to increase rice production. A meeting of the Steering Committee of the International Rice Commission on the International Year of Rice (Rome, 17 January) discussed a proposed road map for the Year and the terms of reference and membership of the FAO Organizing Committee. On 30 October, FAO's secretariat for the Year produced a concept paper, with inputs from members of the Organizing Committee and participants of the international planning and coordination meeting for the Year (Rome, 6-7 March), which discussed the background and history of the Year, aspects of rice-based systems, challenges and opportunities for the Year and a conceptual framework for implementation.

The Year was officially launched at UN Headquarters in New York on 31 October.

Nutrition

Standing Committee on Nutrition

The thirtieth session of the UN System Standing Committee on Nutrition (SCN) (Chennai, India, 3-7 March) reviewed reports of working groups on nutrition throughout the life cycle; nutrition in emergencies; nutrition and HIV/AIDS; micronutrients; nutrition, ethics and human rights; capacity development in food and nutrition; the nutrition of school-age children; breastfeeding and complementary feeding; and household food security. During the session, a task force formed to draft an SCN position statement on nutrition and the MDGs reported to the Committee. The position statement would set out the role that nutrition improvement played in achieving the MDGs and would cover nutrition interventions and enabling environmental factors. On 4 March, the M. S. Swaminathan Research Foundation hosted a symposium on mainstreaming nutrition to improve development outcomes.

Based on a request from the twenty-ninth (2002) SCN session [YUN 2002, p. 1226], an international technical working group was formed to explore current information on the impact of iron deficiency in children less than 2 years of age and to recommend strategies to eliminate it in children of that age group by 2008.

UNU activities

The United Nations University Food and Nutrition Programme for Human and Social Development (UNU-FNP) assisted developing regions to enhance individual, organizational and institutional capacity, carried out coordinated global research activities and served as the academic arm for the UN system in areas of food and nutrition that were best addressed in a non-regulatory, non-normative environment.

In 2003, UNU-FNP activities included the Latin America Initiative, which focused on leadership training and leveraging of funds in the region to strengthen local and regional capacity for action in health/nutrition promotion, micronutrient fortification, and prevention of nutrition-related chronic diseases and other forms of malnutrition. Regarding its African Initiative, UNU-FNP completed the initial two-year implementation phase of the 10-year action plans for strengthening capacity in the area of food and nutrition, and an assessment of lessons learned and action plan updates were under way. Capacity had been strengthened in the areas of HIV and nutrition and the enhancement of advocacy skills. At the thirtieth SCN session (see above), the Task Force for Capacity Strengthening in Nutrition in Asia presented its 10-year plan. A five-year grant of $1 million per year from the Ellison Medical Foundation would support a fellowship programme coordinated with UNU's capacity development efforts. The programme, to be administered by the International Nutrition Foundation, had obligated funds for the first two years and would be limited to about 16 developing country institutions recognized as leaders in their respective regions; the fellowships would be used to help develop or maintain a critical mass of well-trained personnel. The data collection phase of the Multi-Country Growth Reference Study was completed, with studies in six countries involving some 8,000 children; construction of the world's first truly international growth standards had begun.

Under the University's capacity development training programme, cooperation between UNU and FAO in the area of nutrition data management continued with a three-week course on production and the use of food composition data in nutrition (Wageningen, Netherlands, October), with the participation of seven UNU fellows. Five fellows began a year-long training programme in food science and technology organized by UNU at the National Food Research Institute in Tsukuba, Japan; five others completed their training and received grants to return to their home countries for follow-up research projects. UNU also awarded a fellowship to one student from the Sudan for a 10-month course at the Central Food Technological Research Institute in Mysore, India. In the degree-oriented programme, one UNU fellow was admitted to the two-year Master's Programme in Applied Human Nutrition offered by the University of Nairobi. UNU continued its quarterly publication of the Food and Nutrition Bulletin and the Journal of Food Composition and Analysis.

Chapter XIV

International Drug Control

During 2003, the United Nations, through the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), reaffirmed its commitment to strengthen international cooperation and increase efforts to counter the world drug problem. Drug control activities throughout the UN system focused mainly on implementation of the 1999 Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, which served as a guide for Member States in adopting strategies and programmes for reducing illicit drug demand in order to achieve significant results by 2008.

UNODC assisted States in complying with international drug control treaties and supported the international community in achieving the objectives of the measures adopted by the General Assembly at its 1998 special session on the world drug problem. Through its technical cooperation programmes, UNODC promoted drug control activities at the national, regional and international levels and initiatives to suppress drug trafficking, prevent drug abuse and strengthen treatment and rehabilitation services. It supported national efforts to reduce or eliminate illicit cultivation of opium poppy, coca bush and cannabis through alternative development projects and to estimate the extent of illicit crop cultivation in key illicit production areas.

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs—the main UN policy-making body dealing with drug control—recommended a number of draft resolutions to the Economic and Social Council and adopted resolutions on such issues as the reduction of demand for illicit drugs and prevention of drug abuse, illicit drug trafficking and supply, implementation of the international drug control treaties, administrative and budgetary matters and strengthening UN machinery for international drug control. In July, the Council urged Governments to continue contributing to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials for medical and scientific purposes.

INCB reviewed the impact of illicit drugs on economic development and continued to oversee the implementation of the three major international drug control conventions, to analyse the drug situation worldwide and to draw Governments' attention to weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance, making suggestions and recommendations for improvements at the national and international levels.

Follow-up to the twentieth special session

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/174 [YUN 2002, p. 1229], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/253], presented a quinquennial evaluation of the implementation of the outcome of the Assembly's twentieth special session on countering the world drug problem [YUN 1998, p. 1135], including the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 54/132 [YUN 1999, p. 1157]. The report reviewed the 2003 ministerial segment of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs (see p. 1263); the adoption of national drug control strategies and plans; the Action Plan for implementing the Declaration on the Guiding Principles; the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and Their Precursors, adopted by Assembly resolution S-20/4 A [YUN 1998, p. 1139]; countering money-laundering linked to drug trafficking; the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, adopted by Assembly resolution S-20/4 E [ibid., p. 1148]; judicial cooperation; and the control of precursors. The Secretary-General concluded that positive developments in countering the drug problem were mixed with some alarming signals. He noted that, while heroin and cocaine abuse had stabilized or declined in some countries, trends in synthetic drugs were worrying, with illicit manufacture spreading beyond the traditional centres in North America, Europe and East Asia. Cannabis abuse was also on the rise. On the supply side, illicit coca cultivation was declining, but the total output volume of illicitly cultivated opium poppy remained stable.

The number of producing countries had been reduced significantly, reflecting the positive impact of alternative development programmes, as in Pakistan and Thailand. The Secretary-General asserted that drug control policy, demand reduction, alternative development and international cooperation had yielded positive results in countering the drug problem.

In February, the UNODC Executive Director submitted his second biennial report on the implementation of the outcome of the Assembly's special session [E/CN.7/2003/2 & Add.1-6]. The report, prepared pursuant to Commission resolutions 42/11 [YUN 1999, p. 1191] and 44/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1143], was based on an analysis of information received from States. It reviewed national, regional and global efforts to counter the world drug problem, identified the major difficulties faced by Governments and provided guidance as to the areas requiring action.

In July [A/58/124], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, in response to Assembly resolutions 55/65 [YUN 2000, p. 1175] and 56/124 [YUN 2001, p. 1144], reported on progress achieved in meeting the goals and targets set out in the Political Declaration, adopted at the Assembly's special session in resolution S-20/2 [YUN 1998, p. 1136], based on an evaluation conducted by the Commission during a ministerial segment at its forty-sixth session (Vienna, 16-17 April). The Commission adopted a Joint Ministerial Statement, in which it recognized that Member States' efforts in implementing the action plans and measures adopted by the Assembly were uneven, and made recommendations for the period 2003-2007. The report also contained the outcomes of round-table discussions held during the segment on challenges, new trends and patterns of the world drug problem; countering illicit drug supply; strengthening international cooperation, based on the principle of shared responsibility; and demand reduction and preventive policies. A Secretariat note [E/CN.7/2003/3] provided information on the substantive organization of the Commission's ministerial segment.

Conference on drug routes. At the initiative of France, the Foreign Ministers of 55 countries seriously affected by the traffic of opium and heroin produced in Afghanistan and originating from Central and South-West Asia attended the Conference on Drug Routes from Central Asia to Europe (Paris, 21-22 May) [S/2003/641]. The Conference adopted the Paris Statement, which addressed many facets of the issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/500], adopted resolution 58/141 without vote [agenda item 109].

International cooperation against the world drug problem

The General Assembly,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, its resolution 57/174 of 18 December 2002 and its other previous resolutions,

Reaffirming its commitment to the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, held in New York from 8 to 10 June 1998, and welcoming the continuing determination of Governments to overcome the world drug problem by a full and balanced application of national, regional and international strategies to reduce the demand for, production of and trafficking in illicit drugs,

Reaffirming the importance of the commitments of Member States in meeting the objectives targeted for 2003 and 2008, as set out in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at the twentieth special session, and welcoming the guidelines and elements recommended by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme for the preparation of subsequent reports on the follow-up to the twentieth special session,

Emphasizing the importance of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, which introduces a new global approach balanced between illicit supply and demand reduction, under the principle of shared responsibility, and of the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, which recognizes the importance of supply reduction as an integral part of a balanced drug control strategy,

Recognizing the efforts of all countries, in particular those that produce narcotic drugs for scientific and medical purposes, and of the International Narcotics Control Board in preventing the diversion of such substances to illicit markets and in maintaining production at a level consistent with licit demand, in line with the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971,

Aware that progress has been uneven in meeting the goals set in the Political Declaration, as also reflected in the biennial reports of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and recognizing that the drug problem is still a global challenge that constitutes a serious threat to public health and safety and the well-being of humankind, in particular children and young people, and that it undermines socio-economic and political stability and sustainable development, including efforts to reduce poverty, and causes violence and crime, including in urban areas,

Deeply concerned by the serious challenges and threats posed by the continuing links between illicit drug trafficking and terrorism and other national and transnational criminal activities, such as trafficking in human beings, especially women and children, money-laundering, corruption and trafficking in arms and chemical precursors, and reaffirming that strong and effective international cooperation is needed to counter these threats,

Gravely concerned about policies and activities in favour of the legalization of illicit narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances that are not in accordance with the international drug control treaties and that might jeopardize the international drug control regime,

Acknowledging that international cooperation in countering drug abuse and illicit production and trafficking has shown that positive results can be achieved through sustained and collective efforts, and expressing its appreciation for the initiatives in this regard,

Welcoming the holding of the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs in Vienna on 16 and 17 April 2003,

I

Respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law in countering the world drug problem

1. Reaffirms that countering the world drug problem is a common and shared responsibility that must be addressed in a multilateral setting, requires an integrated and balanced approach, and must be carried out in full conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law, and in particular with full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of States and all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and on the basis of the principles of equal rights and mutual respect;

2. Urges all States to ratify or accede to and implement all the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1953 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

II

International cooperation to counter the world drug problem and follow-up to the twentieth special session

1. Reaffirms the Joint Ministerial Statement and further measures to implement the action plans emanating from the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, adopted during the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, which emphasizes that the world drug problem must be addressed in multilateral, regional, bilateral and national settings and that, in order to succeed, action to counter it has to involve all Member States, that action must be supported by strong international and development cooperation and must be further included in national development priorities, and that it requires a balance between supply reduction and demand reduction, as well as a comprehensive strategy that combines alternative development, including, as appropriate, preventive alternative development, eradication, interdiction, law enforcement, prevention, treatment and rehabilitation as well as education;

2. Calls upon all relevant actors to continue their close cooperation with Governments in promoting and implementing the outcome of the twentieth special session and of the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs;

National drug control strategies

3. Stresses that, in order to be able to further develop sound, evidence-based drug control policies, data collection and analysis and evaluation of the results of ongoing policies are essential tools;

Demand reduction

4. Urges all Member States to implement the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and to strengthen their national efforts to counter the abuse of illicit drugs in their population, in particular among children and young people, noting with concern the increasing levels of drug abuse among them;

5. Urges States, in order to achieve a significant and measurable reduction of drug abuse by 2008:

(a) To further implement comprehensive demand reduction policies and programmes, including research, covering all drugs under international control, in order to raise public awareness of the drug problem, paying special attention to prevention and education and providing, especially to young people and others at risk, information on developing life skills, making healthy choices and engaging in drug-free activities;

(b) To further develop and implement comprehensive demand reduction policies, including risk reduction activities, that are in line with sound medical practice and the international drug control treaties and that reduce the adverse health and social consequences of drug abuse, and to provide a wide range of comprehensive services for the treatment, rehabilitation and social reintegration of drug abusers, with appropriate resources being devoted to such services, since social exclusion constitutes an important risk factor for drug abuse;

(c) To enhance early intervention programmes that dissuade children and young people from the use of illicit drugs, including polydrug use and the recreational use of substances such as cannabis and synthetic drugs, especially amphetamine-type stimulants, and to encourage the active participation of the younger generation in campaigns against drug abuse;

(d) To provide a comprehensive range of services for preventing the transmission of HIV/AIDS and other infectious diseases associated with drug abuse, including education, counselling and drug abuse treatment, and in particular to assist developing countries in their efforts to deal with these issues;

Illicit synthetic drugs

6. Urges States to renew their efforts, at the national, regional and international levels, to implement the comprehensive measures covered in the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and Their Precursors, to make special efforts to counter the abuse and recreational use of amphetamine-type stimulants, especially by young people, and to disseminate information on the adverse health, social and economic consequences of such abuse;

Control of precursors

7. Encourages States:

(a) To establish or strengthen mechanisms for making the most effective use of existing systems and for ensuring strict control of chemical precursors used to manufacture illicit drugs;

(b) To support international operations aimed at preventing the diversion of chemical precursors used in the illicit manufacture of cocaine, heroin and amphetamine-type stimulants by exchanging information with other States and conducting timely joint law enforcement operations, including the use of controlled deliveries;

(c) To further international cooperation in the implementation of article 12, on control of precursors, of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, in close cooperation with the International Narcotics Control Board, and the measures agreed upon at the twentieth special session;

Judicial cooperation

8. Calls upon all States to strengthen international cooperation among judicial and law enforcement authorities at all levels in order to prevent and combat illicit drug trafficking and to share and promote best operational practices in order to interdict illicit drug trafficking, including by establishing and strengthening regional mechanisms, providing technical assistance and establishing effective methods for cooperation, in particular in the areas of air, maritime and port control;

Countering money-laundering

9. Urges States to strengthen action, in particular international cooperation and technical assistance aimed at preventing and combating the laundering of proceeds derived from drug trafficking and related criminal activities, with the support of the United Nations system, international institutions such as the World Bank and regional development banks, to develop and strengthen comprehensive international regimes to combat money-laundering, and to improve information-sharing among financial institutions and agencies in charge of preventing and detecting the laundering of those proceeds;

10. Calls upon States to consider including provisions in their national drug control plans for the establishment of national networks to enhance their respective capabilities to prevent, monitor, control and suppress serious offences connected with money-laundering and the financing of terrorist acts, and in general to counter all acts of transnational organized crime, and to supplement existing regional and international networks dealing with money-laundering;

International cooperation in illicit crop eradication and alternative development

11. Calls upon States, where appropriate:

(a) To enhance support, including, where appropriate, through the provision of new and additional financial resources, for alternative development and elimination programmes undertaken by countries affected by the illicit cultivation of cannabis, especially in Africa, of opium poppy and of coca bush, in particular national programmes that seek to reduce social marginalization and promote sustainable economic development;

(b) To enhance joint strategies, through international and regional cooperation, to strengthen, including by training and education, alternative development, eradication and interdiction capacity, with the aim of eliminating illicit crop cultivation;

(c) To encourage international cooperation, including, as appropriate, preventive alternative development, to prevent illicit crop cultivation from emerging in or being relocated to other areas;

(d) To provide, in accordance with the principle of shared responsibility, greater access to their markets for products of alternative development programmes, which are necessary for the creation of employment and the eradication of poverty;

(e) To establish or reinforce, where appropriate, national mechanisms to monitor and verify illicit crops;

(f) To continue to contribute to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials used for medical and scientific purposes and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials;

12. Welcomes the adoption by the Transitional Government of Afghanistan of a national drug strategy, and notes the need for continued coordination with the international efforts;

13. Recommends that adequate help be provided to Afghanistan within the framework of the comprehensive international strategy, carried out, inter alia, under the auspices of the United Nations and through other multilateral forums, in support of the commitment of the Transitional Government of Afghanistan, including the strengthening of "security belts" in the region, and reaffirms that the response to this unique situation will not detract from the commitments and resources devoted to the fight against drugs in other parts of the world;

III

Action by the United Nations system

1. Emphasizes that the multidimensional nature of the world drug problem calls for the promotion of integration and coordination of drug control activities throughout the United Nations system, including in the follow-up to major United Nations conferences, as well as other relevant multilateral institutions and organizations;

2. Reaffirms its resolve to continue to strengthen the United Nations machinery for international drug control, in particular the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and the International Narcotics Control Board, in order to enable them to fulfil their mandates, bearing in mind the recommendations contained in Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/30 of 28 July 1999 and the measures taken and recommendations adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-fourth, forty-fifth and forty-sixth sessions, aimed at the enhancement of its functioning, in particular in its resolutions 44/16 of 29 March 2001, 45/17 of 15 March 2002 and 46/8 of 15 April 2003;

3. Encourages the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the global coordinating body in international drug control and as the governing body of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, and the International Narcotics Control Board to continue their useful work on the control of precursors and other chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

4. Notes that the International Narcotics Control Board needs sufficient resources to carry out all its mandates, and therefore urges Member States to commit themselves in a common effort to assigning adequate and sufficient budgetary resources to the Board, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/20 of 23 July 1996, and emphasizes the need to maintain its capacity, inter alia, through the provision of appropriate means by the Secretary-General and adequate technical support by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, and calls for enhanced cooperation and understanding between Member States and the Board in order to enable it to implement all its mandates under the international drug control conventions;

5. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to implement its mandate, and requests the Programme to continue:

(a) To strengthen dialogue with Member States and also to ensure continued improvement in management, so as to contribute to enhanced and sustainable programme delivery and further encourage the Executive Director to maximize the effectiveness of the Programme, inter alia, through the full implementation of Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolutions 44/16 and 45/17, in particular the recommendations contained therein;

(b) To strengthen cooperation with Member States and with United Nations programmes, funds and relevant agencies, as well as relevant regional organizations and agencies and non-governmental organizations, and to provide, on request, assistance in implementing the outcome of the twentieth special session;

(c) To increase its assistance, within the available voluntary resources, to countries that are deploying efforts to reduce illicit crop cultivation by, in particular, adopting alternative development programmes, and to explore new and innovative funding mechanisms;

(d) To allocate, while keeping the balance between supply and demand reduction programmes, adequate resources to allow it to fulfil its role in the implementation of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, and support countries, upon their request, to further develop and implement drug demand reduction policies;

(e) To strengthen dialogue and cooperation with multilateral development banks and with international financial institutions so that they may undertake lending and programming activities related to drug control in interested and affected countries to implement the outcome of the twentieth special session, and to keep the Commission on Narcotic Drugs informed of further progress made in this area;

(f) To take into account the outcome of the twentieth special session, to include in its report on the illicit traffic in drugs an updated, objective and comprehensive assessment of worldwide trends in illicit traffic and transit in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, including methods and routes used, and to recommend ways and means of improving the capacity of States along those routes to address all aspects of the drug problem;

(g) To publish the World Drug Report, with comprehensive and balanced information about the world drug problem, and to seek additional extrabudgetary resources for its publication in all the official languages;

(h) To provide technical assistance, from available voluntary contributions for that purpose, to those States identified by relevant international bodies as the most affected by the transit of drugs, in particular developing countries in need of such assistance and support;

(i) To develop action-oriented strategies to assist Member States to implement the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration, and to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-seventh session on the follow-up to the Action Plan;

(j) To provide assistance, subject to the availability of resources, at the request of States and respecting fully their sovereignty and territorial integrity, and with the support of the United Nations Office for Outer Space Affairs and the European Space Agency, among others, in detecting on time the emergence or relocation of illicit crop cultivation;

6. Welcomes the holding in Paris, on 21 and 22 May 2003, of the Conference on Drug Routes from Central Asia to Europe, and encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other relevant international institutions to continue in their follow-up action on the recommendations of the Conference (the Paris Pact);

7. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of resources and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, together with international financial institutions and the organizations involved in preventing and suppressing money-laundering and drug trafficking, to facilitate the provision of training and advice through technical cooperation in States, when requested, taking into account, inter alia, the recommendations on money-laundering and the financing of terrorism formulated by the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering and its regional groups;

8. Urges all Governments to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the United Nations International Drug Control Programme by widening its donor base and increasing voluntary contributions, in particular general-purpose contributions, to enable it to continue, expand and strengthen its operational and technical cooperation activities, and recommends that a sufficient share of the regular budget of the United Nations be allocated to the Programme to enable it to fulfil its mandates and to work towards securing assured and predictable funding;

9. Encourages the meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies and of the Sub-commission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to continue to contribute to the strengthening of regional and international cooperation, taking into account the outcome of the twentieth special session and the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs;

10. Calls upon the relevant United Nations agencies and entities, other international organizations and international financial institutions, including regional development banks, to mainstream drug control issues into their programmes;

11. Takes note of the report of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the report of the Secretary-General, and, taking into account the promotion of integrated reporting, requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Money-laundering

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/36 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Establishment of national networks to counter money-laundering in the framework of national and international drug control plans

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Inter-American Convention against Terrorism,

Taking into account the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering and its regional groups,

Taking into account also the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, which called for Member States to make special efforts against the laundering of money linked to drug trafficking and recommended that States adopt by the year 2003 national money-laundering legislation and programmes in accordance with the 1988 Convention, as well as the measures for countering money-laundering adopted at the twentieth special session,

Considering that multilateral action against the modern global phenomenon of transnational organized crime and the illicit activities connected with it, in particular drug trafficking, money-laundering, corruption and the financing of terrorism, represents a commitment by States that calls for shared responsibility and coordinated activities with a view to achieving a coherent global approach in accordance with multilateral instruments,

Recognizing that the laundering of proceeds derived from drug trafficking and other serious offences has increased throughout the world to become a global threat to the stability and security of the financial and commercial system, and even to government structures, and that concerted efforts by the international community are required in order to deal with the problems posed by organized crime and the proceeds derived from it,

Emphasizing the need for States to harmonize their legislation in order to ensure adequate coordination of their policies for preventing, monitoring, controlling and suppressing money-laundering and the financing of terrorism,

Recognizing that effective action to counter the problem of money-laundering will be possible only through international cooperation and the utilization of networked information systems that facilitate collaboration and the exchange of information between the relevant authorities of the States concerned,

Recognizing also the strategic necessity for States to have the appropriate infrastructure for analysis and finanacial investigation in order to combat money-laundering and the financing of transnational organized crime in a coordinated manner, using national, regional and international strategies,

Reiterating the importance of establishing and implementing national plans or strategies to combat the laundering of the proceeds of crime,

1. Recommends that States, in conformity with their legislation and in accordance with their capabilities, set up national networks to supplement existing regional and international networks dealing with money-laundering;

2. Calls upon States to consider including provisions in their national drug control plans for the establishment of national networks to enhance their respective capabilities to prevent, monitor, control and suppress serious offences connected with money-laundering and the financing of terrorist acts and, in general, to counter all transnational organized criminal acts;

3. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of resources and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, together with international financial institutions and the organizations involved in preventing and suppressing money-laundering and drug trafficking, to facilitate the provision of training and advice through technical cooperation in States, when requested, taking into account, inter alia, the recommendations on money-laundering and the financing of terrorism formulated by the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering and its regional groups.

Conventions

In 2003, international efforts to control narcotic drugs were governed by three global conventions: the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 1961, p. 382], which, with some exceptions of detail, replaced earlier narcotics treaties and was amended in 1972 by a Protocol [YUN 1972, p. 397] intended to strengthen the role of the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB); the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1971, p. 380]; and the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 690].

As at 31 December 2003, 175 States were parties to the 1961 Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol. During the year, Algeria and Myanmar acceded to the Convention.

The number of parties to the 1971 Convention stood at 174 as at 31 December 2003, with the accession of Albania and Saint Lucia.

At year's end, 167 States and the European Community were parties to the 1988 Convention, with Mongolia acceding in 2003.

Commission action. At its forty-sixth session in April [E/2003/28/Rev.1], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs reviewed implementation of international drug control treaties. It had before it the INCB report covering 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1235]; the 2002 INCB technical report on the implementation of article 12 of the 1988 Convention, entitled "Precursors and chemicals frequently used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances" [ibid., p. 1236]; and a Secretariat note on changes in the scope of control of substances [E/CN.7/2003/12 & Add.1], which contained recommendations for Commission action and a proposal from the World Health Organization (WHO) to place amineptine in schedule II of the 1971 Convention.

Pursuant to its mandate under the 1961 Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Commission called on Governments of producing countries to adhere to the Convention's provisions and prevent illicit production or diversion of opiate raw materials. Regarding implementation of article 12 of the 1988 Convention, the Commission noted the Board's overview of the global situation regarding control of precursor chemicals and its efforts to improve information exchange between Governments in order to prevent their diversion. Recognizing that the control of precursor chemicals was one of the most effective tools in addressing the illicit manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants (ATS), the Commission urged Governments to support Project Prism [YUN 2002, p. 1235], an INCB initiative to address diversions of ATS precursors and materials and equipment used in their illicit manufacture. The Commission commended the Board for its efforts as the focal point for the exchange of information under Operation Purple and Operation Topaz, the international programmes focusing on potassium permanganate and acetic anhydride, respectively. Governments were urged to submit annual information to the Board.

On 8 April [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (dec. 46/1)], the Commission decided to include amineptine in schedule II of the 1971 Convention.

On 15 April [res. 46/4], the Commission called on Member States to implement the international treaties fully and to avoid adopting policies and measures facilitating access to drugs for non-medical or non-scientific purposes. It urged States to engage non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and other civil society organizations in their efforts to address the world drug problem. The Executive Director was requested to report in 2004.

INCB action. In its report covering 2003 [Sales No. E.04.XI.1], INCB called on States that had not done so to become parties to the 1961 Convention on Narcotic Drugs and to accede to or ratify the 1972 Protocol amending it. It reiterated its request to States to implement the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances and become parties thereto. Noting that almost all of the world's major drug and chemical manufacturing, exporting and importing countries were parties to the 1988 Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, the Board called on States that had not done so to implement the Convention and become parties to it.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/40 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific purposes

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2002/20 of 24 July 2002 and previous relevant resolutions,

Emphasizing that the need to balance the global licit supply of opiates against the legitimate demand for opiates for medical and scientific purposes is central to the international strategy and policy of drug control,

Noting the fundamental need for international cooperation with the traditional supplier countries in drug control to ensure universal application of the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol,

Reiterating that a balance between consumption and production of opiate raw materials was achieved in the past as a result of efforts made by the two traditional supplier countries, India and Turkey, together with other producer countries,

Expressing deep concern at the increase in the global production of opiate raw materials and the significant accumulation of stocks over the past few years as a consequence of the operation of market forces, which has the potential to upset the delicate balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiates for medical and scientific purposes,

Noting the importance of opiates in pain relief therapy as advocated by the World Health Organization,

Noting also that countries differ significantly in their level of consumption of narcotic drugs and that, in most developing countries, the use of narcotic drugs for medical purposes has remained at an extremely low level,

1. Urges all Governments to continue to contribute to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials for medical and scientific purposes, the achievement of which would be facilitated by maintaining, insofar as their constitutional and legal systems permit, support to the traditional and legal supplier countries, and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials;

2. Urges Governments of all producer countries to adhere strictly to the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, to take effective measures to prevent illicit production or diversion of opiate raw materials to illicit channels, especially when increasing licit production, and welcomes the study carried out by the International Narcotics Control Board on the relative merits of different methods of producing opiate raw materials;

3. Urges Governments of consumer countries to assess their licit needs for opiate raw materials realistically and to communicate those needs to the International Narcotics Control Board in order to ensure easy supply, and requests the Governments of producer countries to ensure that their future production of opiate raw materials is adjusted to conform to the actual requirements for opiate raw materials worldwide, bearing in mind the current level of global stocks of opiate raw materials, and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials;

4. Commends the International Narcotics Control Board for its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions and, in particular:

(a) In urging the Governments concerned to adjust global production of opiate raw materials to a level corresponding to actual licit needs and to avoid unforeseen imbalances between the licit supply of and demand for opiates caused by the exportation of products manufactured from seized and confiscated drugs;

(b) In inviting the Governments concerned to ensure that opiates imported into their countries for medical and scientific use do not originate in countries that transform seized and confiscated drugs into licit opiates;

(c) In arranging informal meetings, during the sessions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, with the main States that import and produce opiate raw materials;

5. Requests the International Narcotics Control Board to continue its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions in full compliance with the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and with that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Governments for consideration and implementation and to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-seventh session on progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

On the same day [meeting 44], the Council, on the recommendation of the Commission [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/41 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Efforts to counter the trend towards the legalization of drugs for non-medical use

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking into account the policies adopted by organizations of the United Nations system concerning the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, the United Nations Convention Against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in particular article 33 thereof,

Recalling the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction,

Recalling also that narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances are controlled under the 1961 Convention, that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol and the 1971 Convention, which call for the States parties to those conventions to adopt all possible measures to limit the production, manufacture, export, import and distribution of, trade in and use and possession of those drugs for medical and scientific purposes if those States consider that to be the most appropriate means of protecting health and public welfare,

Conscious that increased availability of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, without the appropriate controls, could facilitate the diversion of those drugs,

Taking into account the reports of the International Narcotics Control Board for 2001 and 2002,

Bearing in mind that countering the world drug problem is a shared responsibility calling for coordinated action in conformity with the relevant multilateral instruments in force at the international level,

Concerned about the increasing levels of illicit drug consumption, in particular among children, young people and groups at risk of abusing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Concerned also about the trend towards the development of lenient policies relating to cannabis and other drugs that are not in accordance with international drug control treaties and about the fact that such trends may have a negative impact on efforts being made to eradicate cannabis cultivation and to combat drug trafficking,

1. Invites the International Narcotics Control Board to continue to monitor and report on the application of the international drug control treaties by Member States with regard to cannabis and other drugs;

2. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in collaboration with the World Health Organization, to report on new trends with regard to cannabis.

Also on the same date [meeting 44], the Council, on the recommendation of the Commission [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/39 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Strengthening systems of control over chemical precursors and preventing their diversion and trafficking

The Economic and Social Council,

Convinced that the transnational nature of the world drug problem and related offences requires the effective application of the principles of shared responsibility and a holistic and balanced approach,

Noting that the availability of chemical precursors makes it possible to extract, refine and synthesize illicit drugs of natural or synthetic origin,

Noting also General Assembly resolution S-20/4 B of 10 June 1998 on the control of precursors, adopted by the Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together,

Stressing the importance of Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 45/12 of 12 March 2002 on the diversion of precursors and prompt reporting to competent authorities of the countries of origin and the countries of transit and the International Narcotics Control Board,

Concerned at the fact that the diversion of chemical precursors is related to, inter alia, the manufacture of illicit drugs,

Observing that transnational criminal organizations have taken advantage of the benefits of globalization and the use of new technology to broaden the scope of their activity in this area and that, therefore, combating those organizations and the methods they use constitutes one of the greatest challenges facing the international community today,

Noting with concern the widespread use of substances substituted for controlled substances in Tables I and II of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, for the purposes of extracting and refining drugs of natural or synthetic origin,

Noting the important problems posed by the diversion, smuggling and illicit trading of chemical precursors needed for the production of drugs of natural or synthetic origin,

Aware that the availability of chemical precursors continues, despite the success of "Operation Topaz" and "Operation Purple" and the efforts of all countries to prevent the access of drug traffickers to chemical precursors needed in the manufacture of illicit drugs of natural and synthetic origin,

Committed to preventing, through all legal means available, access to chemical precursors by those engaged in or attempting to engage in the processing of illicit drugs,

Concerned at the fact that illicit drugs of natural and synthetic origin have spread worldwide, and recognizing that that represents a threat to all States,

1. Urges all States, including producing, exporting, transit and importing States, in accordance with the principle of shared responsibility, to exchange information, through the competent authorities established in accordance with the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 or through law enforcement authorities, regarding suspicious transactions or shipments of substances suspected of being diverted for use in illicit drug production;

2. Recommends that all States ensure that they have in place fully effective systems for chemical precursor control and procedures for training personnel of control agencies and operational, regulatory and administrative staff;

3. Calls upon all States to inform, through the International Narcotics Control Board, the competent authorities of States about matters concerning the introduction of substances substituted for controlled substances and the use of new techniques in the synthesis, refining and extraction of illicit drugs, with a view to strengthening controls;

4. Encourages all States, including producing, exporting, transit and importing States, to make full use of existing channels of communication for the timely exchange of information, where possible, on enterprises that have been given penalties for improper management of chemicals, in accordance with their national legislation, as well as on routes and means of trafficking and diversion, on methods of camouflaging and on means of falsifying and manipulating customs documents, and any other information necessary to exercise more effective control;

5. Reiterates the vital importance of the process of prior notification of export of chemicals used in the manufacture of organic and synthetic drugs, established pursuant to article 12 of the 1988 Convention, as a mechanism for preventing the diversion of chemicals into illicit channels, and stresses the need for timely feedback following such prior notification;

6. Reiterates also the need to adopt measures for the application of the "know-your-customer" principle by enterprises involved in production and distribution;

7. Encourages States and relevant international organizations to provide technical assistance that can be used to exercise more effective precursor control.

International Narcotics Control Board

The 13-member International Narcotics Control Board held its seventy-sixth (3-7 February), seventy-seventh (26 May-6 June) and seventy-eighth (29 October-14 November) sessions, all in Vienna.

In performing the tasks assigned to it under the international conventions, the Board maintained a permanent dialogue with Governments, and used the information received from them to identify the enforcement of treaty provisions requiring them to limit to medical and scientific purposes the licit manufacture of, trade in and distribution and use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. The Board, which was requested by the international drug control treaties to report annually on the drug control situation worldwide, noted weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance and made recommendations for improvements at both the national and international levels.

The Board's 2003 report (Sales No. E.04.XI.1) reviewed the impact of drugs, crime and violence at the microlevel in society, addressing the relationship among drug abuse, crime and violence with respect to individuals, families, neighbourhoods and communities, and taking into account both criminality and victimization.

INCB concluded that drug trafficking and related crime and violence linked local communities with transnational criminal networks, and a targeted intervention was essential to deal with traffickers operating at the microlevel. The law enforcement response should include community-based policing, pre-emptive intervention and greater cooperation among criminal justice agencies, social welfare agencies and specialized NGOs. More timely and targeted efforts should be made at the local, national and international levels through partnerships with a diverse range of organizations, and programmes introducing community-based microlevel interventions should be established. The Board stressed the importance of introducing a comprehensive demand reduction programme.

The Board expressed concern at the failure of many States, including some that manufactured, imported, exported or used narcotic drugs, to comply with their treaty obligation to submit timely annual statistical reports. It encouraged States and territories for which it had established estimates of narcotic drug requirements for 2004 to review and revise them.

As to the diversion of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, INCB noted that the diversion of pharmaceutical products containing narcotic drugs from domestic licit distribution channels, occurring in many countries, was underreported. Noting that the diversion and abuse of opioids prescribed for substitution treatment was also reported in many countries, the Board reiterated its request to prevent their diversion. The Board called on Governments to prohibit the import and export of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances through the mail in order to prevent the selling of illegal supplies by Internet pharmacies.

In the light of continued attempts by traffickers to divert precursors, it was imperative for Governments to verify the intended end use of orders of precursor chemicals and the volumes required, particularly ATS precursors, ephedrine and pseudoephedrine. Operational activities commenced in January under Project Prism (see p. 1268) to address the diversion of ATS precursors and equipment and materials used in their illicit manufacture, and the use of the Internet for their sale. The second meeting of the Project Prism working groups (Bangkok, Thailand, June) reviewed those activities. The Board noted the continued success of Operation Purple, involving the international tracking programme for potassium permanganate used in the illicit manufacture of cocaine, and of Operation Topaz, involving the international tracking of acetic anhydride used in heroin manufacture. With illicit opium production in Afghanistan increasing, it was essential for countries in the region to implement the working mechanisms and operating procedures established for Operation Topaz to prevent acetic anhydride from being diverted and smuggled into and through the region to Afghanistan. The Board convened a round-table consultation (Vienna, March) to address the diversion of acetic anhydride uncovered in Europe.

As to ensuring the availability of drugs for medical purposes, INCB noted that global production and stocks of opiate raw materials rich in both morphine and thebaine reached a record high in 2002, well in excess of global demand. The Board requested producing countries not to exceed their 2004 estimates for the cultivation and production of opiate raw materials, and urged them, in accordance with international drug control objectives and policies, to adjust their future production to meet actual worldwide requirements. However, in view of the continued low availability of opiates in many countries for the treatment of pain, the Board had no objection to increasing the production of opiate raw materials in response to increased global demand. It called on Governments to contribute to the maintenance of a balance between the supply of opiate raw materials and the demand for opiates.

The Board, aware of continued use by some military forces of drugs scheduled under the 1961 and the 1971 conventions, mainly of the amphetamine-type group, and the ongoing research into their further possible uses, appealed to Governments to ensure that military and law enforcement sectors followed the principles of sound medical practice in their use of internationally controlled substances and that the international conventions were respected.

By decision 2003/236 of 22 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the INCB report for 2002 [E/INCB/2002/1 (Sales No. E.03.XL1)].

The Council, by decision 2003/220 of 1 May, decided to include the issue of honorariums payable to INCB members in the agenda of its substantive 2003 session.

World drug situation

In its 2003 report [Sales No. E.04.XL1], INCB presented a regional analysis of world drug abuse trends and control efforts, so that Governments would be kept aware of situations that might endanger the objectives of international drug control treaties.

Africa

Throughout Africa, cannabis was the most widely grown, trafficked and abused drug, accounting for one quarter of global seizures. The bulk was seized by South Africa, but large cannabis seizures were also reported in Egypt, Ghana, Kenya, Malawi, Morocco, Nigeria and the United Republic of Tanzania. Morocco remained one of the world's leading cannabis producers and the source of 60 to 70 per cent of the cannabis resin seized in Europe. In Egypt, cannabis continued to be illicitly cultivated in the northern part of the Sinai. In the Sudan, a shift from the cultivation of food crops to cannabis resulted in food shortages. In Western and Central Africa, where cultivation was traditionally limited to the local market, cannabis became a significant economic crop following the fall in prices of cash crops in international markets. It was produced on a large scale, in particular in Ghana, Nigeria and Senegal, and continued to be cultivated in Eastern Africa. Southern Africa remained the major source of cannabis in Africa.

Illicit opium poppy cultivation in the Sinai peninsula in Egypt was declining. While heroin abuse in Africa was relatively low, trends showed an increase, particularly from the spillover effects of drug trafficking. Heroin from South-East and South-West Asia continued to be smuggled through Eastern and Western Africa to illicit markets in Europe and, to some extent, the United States. Some heroin was also smuggled into South Africa, where its abuse was rising, particularly among youth.

Cocaine originating in South America and shipped mainly from Brazil continued to transit Western and Southern Africa to Europe. Cocaine abuse in Africa was limited to the spillover effects of trafficking.

The abuse of psychotropic substances was of concern in Southern, Eastern and Western Africa. In Western Africa, especially in the Sahelian countries, the abuse of amphetamine, ephedrine and pemoline was widespread. Most psychotropic substances continued to be diverted mainly from licit distribution channels. A major problem was the abuse of prescription pharmaceutical products that were being sold over the counter or in the streets, particularly in several Western and Central African countries. The diversion of drugs intended for the licit market into illicit channels became an issue in South Africa. Methcathinone ("cat") appeared on illicit markets in South Africa, and, despite law enforcement efforts aimed at interrupting the supply of methaqualone (Mandrax), its abuse continued unabated in Eastern and Southern Africa, above all in South Africa, where it remained the second most commonly abused illicit drug. Methaqualone continued to enter that country from India and China and from clandestine laboratories in Southern Africa. The abuse of methylenedioxymethamphetamine (MDMA (Ecstasy)) occurred in Southern Africa, particularly in South Africa.

Illicit drug trafficking remained a major problem in the region. Information gathered from war-torn countries in Western and Central Africa indicated that the arms and ammunition used by rebel groups and criminal organizations to destabilize those subregions might have been partly procured with the proceeds of illicit drug trafficking.

As to regional cooperation, collaboration targeting the drug problem continued within inter-governmental organizations such as the African Union (AU), the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), the Southern African Development Community (SADC) and the East African Community (EAC). Arab ministers of information and of the interior held a meeting (Tunis, Tunisia, January) to discuss money-laundering, terrorism and organized crime. Ministers of the interior of the Western Mediterranean States coalition met (Tripoli, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, July) to discuss cooperation in fighting terrorism, drug trafficking and organized crime, among other issues. A regional workshop (Accra, Ghana, May) brought together the coordinators of inter-ministerial drug committees, national project coordinators and NGO representatives of ECOWAS members. The third annual meeting of the East Africa Drug Information System took place in Nairobi, Kenya, in October. At the national level, Ethiopia introduced draft legislation against money-laundering, while Nigeria enacted legislation against money-laundering in 2002.

The Board welcomed action by Morocco to conduct a comprehensive survey in 2003 to determine the extent, locations and patterns of cannabis cultivation in the northern part of the country. In South Africa, the demand reduction campaign "Ke Moja" was launched nationwide in June, and legislation to combat money-laundering was implemented.

An INCB mission to Mali in March found that various drugs, mainly diverted from licit distribution channels and humanitarian aid, were sold in street markets. In April, an INCB mission visited Algeria, where diversions of psychotropic substances occurred after they had been licitly imported. The Board called on the Government to strengthen its control of the distribution of pharmaceutical products and to undertake an assessment of drug abuse.

Americas

Central America and the Caribbean

Drug trafficking in Central America and the Caribbean involved mostly cannabis and cocaine, although heroin seizures increased. Trafficking contributed to the increase in drug abuse in Central America and the Mexican corridor and the Caribbean, which remained the transit route for smuggling cocaine and heroin from Colombia into North America.

Cannabis cultivation continued in all countries in Central America, mainly for local abuse or smuggling into neighbouring countries, and it remained the most widely abused substance, with El Salvador and Honduras reporting the highest prevalence. The largest seizures in the Caribbean continued to be made in Jamaica, an important source of the cannabis trafficked outside the subregion. In the Eastern Caribbean, it was grown mainly in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saint Lucia and Dominica, primarily for local abuse. The smuggling of cannabis from the Caribbean into Europe and North America continued to decline; cannabis produced in the subregion was increasingly abused locally or trafficked within the subregion.

Cocaine production remained insignificant, with only Panama reporting minor coca bush cultivation and cocaine laboratories. However, the transit traffic in cocaine continued to affect all countries, especially Puerto Rico, the main entry point for cocaine smuggled through the Caribbean into the United States. Countries through which the substance was trafficked had a higher level of abuse. Cocaine abuse increased and the age of initiation into illicit drug consumption decreased. Cocaine, or crack cocaine, was the second most widely abused drug in the Caribbean among students in secondary school. In Curaçao, crack abuse became a major problem.

Guatemala was the only Central American country to report minimal cultivation of opium poppy. Heroin abuse was marginal, except in Puerto Rico. Heroin seizures, which were reported in all countries in Central America and most countries in the Caribbean, reached unprecedented levels. Most of the heroin originated in Colombia. Trinidad and Tobago continued to be affected by trafficking in cocaine and heroin, mainly from Venezuela.

Central America was a transit area for shipments of precursor chemicals used in the manufacture of narcotic drugs and destined mainly for Colombia. There were shortcomings with respect to their control. Some Central American countries reported sporadic seizures of Ecstasy, mostly originating in Europe, abuse of which was emerging in the region.

The Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission (CICAD) of the Organization of American States was the main forum of regional cooperation. Coordination in areas such as judicial cooperation, law enforcement operations and border control was usually in the form of bilateral agreements between countries. The United States remained the single most important bilateral partner in drug control matters for most countries and territories, providing assistance in the interdiction of drug trafficking. The Board welcomed the increased attention given to demand reduction in the region, and the cooperation of Caribbean countries with the Netherlands and the United Kingdom to address the smuggling of drugs into Europe by individual couriers.

At the national level, Central American countries continued to seek ways to strengthen their capabilities to combat trafficking. The Board noted the strengthening of legislation against money-laundering and of the drug control infrastructure in Costa Rica. It urged the Bahamas to adopt a national drug control plan and implement regulations on precursor chemicals. Progress was achieved in combating money-laundering activities in the Caribbean. However, some of the islands in the Eastern Caribbean were still vulnerable.

An INCB mission to Panama in February noted its vulnerability to trafficking due to its geographical location, economic structure and intense commercial traffic. While Panama had adequate drug control legislation, it had limited resources to implement it. The Board encouraged the Government to ensure coordination and communication between government entities and the inter-institutional commission for chemical control. INCB reviewed action taken by El Salvador to implement its recommendations following a 2000 Board mission to that country [YUN 2000, p. 1184]. It noted the adoption of a national drug control plan, covering supply reduction, demand reduction and the control of licit activities related to narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors.

North America

Cannabis, the most abused drug in Canada, Mexico and the United States, was produced in large quantities in all three countries. Almost 40 per cent of cannabis herb seizures reported worldwide were made in Mexico.

The demand for cocaine fell in some areas of the United States. While there appeared to be an overall decline in drug abuse among teenagers with regard to some drugs, cocaine and crack abuse remained at the same level. In Mexico, the abuse of cocaine and crack increased, in particular among youth, and they were increasingly used as initiation drugs.

Heroin abuse was rising in Mexico, with increased availability, lower prices and higher purity levels. Though the majority of heroin smuggled into the United States and Canada was of Colombian origin, a significant share was also manufactured in Mexico, where, despite efforts by the Government to reduce it, illicit opium poppy cultivation continued. In the United States, a field with 40,000 opium poppies was discovered in June in a remote area in California, raising concern that trafficking organizations were attempting to establish large-scale cultivation sites within the country.

The abuse of Ecstasy among teenagers in the United States declined in 2002 for the first time in several years, though it remained at high levels. The abuse of amphetamine and methamphetamine remained high. In Mexico, ATS abuse increased significantly among young persons. Abuse of prescription drugs in the United States continued, exacerbated by the unlawful selling of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances by online pharmacies within and outside the country.

The North American countries cooperated closely in their drug control efforts, resulting in the arrest by Mexico and the United States of a number of powerful drug traffickers. Mexico extradited to the United States numerous suspected drug traffickers, including major figures in drug trafficking organizations. In April, Canada and the United States completed a joint operation targeting trafficking in pseudoephedrine, a precursor used in methamphetamine manufacture.

As to national legislation, new regulations came into force in Canada, completing the inclusion under appropriate national control of all internationally controlled psychotropic substances. Canada's Drug Strategy was adopted, increasing the funding of drug control activities. Noting with concern that, in June, Canada had approved the establishment of a drug injection room in Vancouver, the Board reiterated its view that such sites were contrary to the fundamental provisions of the international treaties.

In October, INCB visited Canada and noted the strong coordination among various ministries and agencies in drug control and initiatives to deal with the problem of indoor cannabis production.

South America

In South America, the political threat of the drug problem led many Governments to devote more of their limited resources to reducing illicit drug supply, including by the eradication of illicit crops, the interdiction of drug trafficking and the introduction of measures against money-laundering. There were continued reports of arms being exchanged for illicit drugs. What was originally known as Plan Colombia, sponsored by the United States and aimed at reducing the illicit supply from Colombia and other South American countries, evolved into a broader effort named the Andean Counter-drug Initiative. Colombia remained the main recipient of assistance.

Cannabis, the most widely abused illicit drug in South America, was cultivated in almost every country, mainly for local or regional markets. One half of its seizures were accounted for by Brazil and one third by Colombia, both of which ranked among the top 10 countries in the world in terms of cannabis herb seizures.

In Colombia, coca bush cultivation fell by 58 per cent compared with 2000, the peak year. Most of the reduction was attributed to aerial fumigation. However, illicit cultivation increased sharply in the Nariño area bordering Ecuador. In Peru, the total area under cultivation remained stable, while in Bolivia, there was a slight increase in 2002.

The potential total manufacture of cocaine remained at approximately 800 tons in 2002, the bulk of which took place in Colombia, mainly in areas under the control of armed groups. Some 80 tons of potassium permanganate were seized in Colombia in 2002, the largest quantity ever in one year. Apart from the coca-producing countries, the transit countries of Brazil, Ecuador and Venezuela reported the largest seizures of cocaine. The United States remained the main market for South American cocaine. Other trafficking routes were uncovered, such as a route leading from Peru to Australia via Argentina.

Colombia estimated that in 2002, some 4,200 hectares were under opium poppy cultivation in the central and southern parts of the country. Peru also reported a small increase in opium poppy cultivation. In South America, there was an increasing trend in heroin manufacture and trafficking, mainly from Colombia into the United States, using individual carriers.

Regional cooperation often took the form of bilateral or multilateral agreements between States with common interests and shared geographical traits. Cooperation between Brazil and Colombia was enhanced, and joint police force operations were extended to Peru, Suriname and Venezuela. The United States remained the principal contributor of resources, mostly through bilateral agreements. Cooperation agreements also existed between South American and European countries. Various regional operations were initiated in South America to address the diversion of and trafficking in chemicals.

At the national level, new legislation on chemical precursors increased the number of chemicals monitored in Brazil. In Peru, new legislation for strengthening the control of precursor chemicals was adopted and a financial intelligence unit was created. In Uruguay, the legal framework for the control of precursor chemicals was strengthened. However, control provisions against money-laundering needed to be expanded.

In February, a Board mission to Colombia, recognizing the importance of providing alternative development for the local population in coca-growing areas, noted that increased resources were needed and invited the international community to support Colombia in alternative development and demand reduction. In July, an INCB mission visited Ecuador which, as a result of measures taken in neighbouring Andean countries, had become more vulnerable to drug trafficking activities. The Board welcomed the establishment in 2002 of the Drug Observatory and appreciated the initiatives taken to combat corruption, drug trafficking and money-laundering. It noted the need for increased international assistance to Ecuador to tackle illicit cultivation and trafficking in the Andean subregion. Also in July, a Board mission to Peru noted efforts towards the elimination of coca bush cultivation. It expressed appreciation for Peru's decision to update the registry of farmers for the licit production of coca leaf, and to estimate actual needs for coca leaf to evaluate the required cultivation area. The Board acknowledged the improvements made by the Government, in follow-up to its 2000 recommendations [YUN 2000, p. 1186], particularly in streamlining the functions of agencies involved in drug control, but noted that some recommendations had not been addressed.

Asia

East and South-East Asia

In all the countries of East and South-East Asia, cannabis abuse was widespread. However, it was limited in China, Japan and the Republic of Korea and declined in Malaysia and Thailand, where abusers shifted to other drugs, mainly methamphetamine and various stimulants. The Philippines reported a significant reduction in cultivation, as a result of an eradication campaign, but it continued to be cultivated in and smuggled out of Cambodia, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Thailand. Indonesia and Thailand were also sources of cannabis resin.

In East and South-East Asia, the total area under illicit opium poppy cultivation declined further. As a result of government efforts, illicit opium production fell in Myanmar and Laos, the two major producers. In Myanmar, the world's second largest producer of illicit opium and heroin after Afghanistan, the area under opium poppy cultivation had decreased by almost two thirds since 1996, and by 55 per cent since 1998 in Laos, the third largest producer. In Thailand and Viet Nam, production levels remained insignificant. Opium was abused in countries where cultivation took place, but the number of abusers decreased, as many addicts turned to heroin, the drug of choice. In East and South-East Asia, there was little cocaine trafficking and abuse.

Methamphetamine continued to be manufactured, mainly in China, Myanmar and, to a lesser extent, in the Philippines. Over two thirds of the global seizures took place in the region, mainly in China, Myanmar and Thailand, although they had declined since 2001. Precursors for methamphetamine continued to be smuggled into Myanmar and the Philippines out of China and India. Methamphetamine was the most widely abused drug in Japan, the Republic of Korea and Thailand. Its abuse increased in most parts of the region coupled with a rise in the abuse of other ATS, particularly Ecstasy. Seizures of Ecstasy were reported mainly in China and Japan. The illicit trade in precursor chemicals continued to be a major concern.

The Board commended the cooperation of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) with China. In September, the six signatories to the 1993 memorandum of understanding on drug control between the countries in the Mekong area (Cambodia, China, Laos, Myanmar, Thailand, Viet Nam) reconfirmed their agreement to strengthen subregional cooperation across borders. China, Laos, Myanmar and Thailand agreed to establish a network among their ports along the Mekong to reinforce their national campaigns against drug traffickers, and Malaysia launched a joint police initiative with Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Singapore and Thailand. In May, the border liaison offices of Laos and Thailand pledged to strengthen cross-border law enforcement. China and Thailand provided assistance for alternative development in Laos and Myanmar.

In March, an INCB mission visited Laos. It noted that the Government had enhanced its national drug legislation and that the opium elimination programme had led to a significant decline in illicit cultivation. However, as a result of enhanced law enforcement measures in some neighbouring countries, Laos was increasingly targeted by drug traffickers. Also in March, a Board mission visited Viet Nam to review the drug control situation and progress made following its 1997 mission there [YUN 1997, p. 1274]. The Government made progress in drug control, particularly in strengthening the national drug control legislation and institutions, the implementation of the national drug master plan and the eradication of illicit opium poppy cultivation. The Board encouraged the Government to take measures to exercise control over its financial institutions and enact a law against money-laundering. In April, an INCB mission visited Cambodia, where the abuse of drugs, particularly methamphetamine and heroin, had increased. The Board urged the Government to develop a national drug control master plan.

South Asia

South Asian countries continued to be used by drug traffickers as transit countries because of their proximity to the world's most prolific opiate production areas in South-East and South-West Asia. Drug trafficking was believed to be one of the major sources of funds for terrorist groups in the region. In most countries, licitly manufactured narcotic drugs were diverted to the illicit markets, and the region faced increasing abuse of pharmaceutical products containing controlled narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

Cannabis was illicitly cultivated in all countries except Maldives and was smuggled out of India and Nepal. Scattered but increasing illicit cultivation was reported in Bangladesh, which had also become a transit point for cannabis resin, originating in India and Pakistan, on its way to Europe. The north-west of India emerged as a significant source of cannabis resin. In Nepal, the abuse of locally grown and wild cannabis remained widespread. Cannabis grew wild in the high hills of the central, mid-western and far western parts of the country, where eradication was expensive due to the difficult terrain. In the southern part, its cultivation increased, the crops mostly destined for the illicit market in India. Cannabis was illicitly cultivated in Sri Lanka for the local illicit markets.

In India, a traditional producer of opium for medical and scientific purposes, opium poppy was grown under a stringent licensing policy controlled by the Central Bureau of Narcotics, but diversion of opium to illicit channels still occurred. The bulk of the illicit opium poppy cultivation was confined to the remote north-eastern states. The production of opium for local abuse and for sale to cross-border heroin manufacturers in Myanmar increased. Illicit laboratories throughout India manufactured the low-quality brown heroin base known as "brown sugar". Most of the heroin from Afghanistan, which was smuggled through the border between India and Pakistan, was destined for Europe. In Bangladesh, a large number of abusers of phensedyl (codeine-based cough syrup) changed to heroin because of its increased availability and the high price of phensedyl. Most of the heroin abused in Bangladesh originated in India. In Nepal, illicit opium poppy cultivation was increasing, and the smuggling and abuse of heroin from South-West and South-East Asia were on the rise. In Sri Lanka, a transit point for shipments of heroin from Asia to Europe, the percentage of injecting drug abusers remained low and opium abuse became insignificant.

India manufactured a wide range of precursor chemicals. Despite strict controls and training for law enforcement officials, diversion from licit channels occurred. The most commonly abused precursors were benzodiazepines (alprazolam, diazepam, nitrazepam). Bangladesh and Nepal reported the abuse of diverted diazepam and nitrazepam, mainly of Indian origin. Benzodiazepines were also abused in Sri Lanka, where they were diverted from the retail trade. In India, control over the licit distribution of buprenorphine was strengthened, but its diversion still occurred. In Sri Lanka, the import and distribution of psychotropic substances continued to take place without adequate control.

As to regional cooperation, Bangladesh signed a bilateral agreement with Myanmar for combating illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors. India concluded two bilateral agreements and held meetings with Myanmar, Pakistan and Sri Lanka. It hosted a number of exchange programmes. Nationally, the Board urged Nepal to adopt legislation on precursor control.

An INCB mission to India in May concluded that the licit production and processing of opiates were well regulated and the Government continued to tighten controls to make diversion of licitly produced opium more difficult. As the main exporter of licitly produced opium in the world, India cooperated with the Board in ensuring a lasting balance between the supply of and demand for opium worldwide. Although control over precursors was well implemented, controls over the licit manufacture of, trade in and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances were inadequate. INCB urged the Government to enforce laws at the retail level to prevent illicit sales of psychotropic substances and to streamline the administrative structure for drug control at the national level.

West and Central Asia

The drug problem remained a major challenge for West Asia, undermining the social and economic stability of some countries and jeopardizing peace and security in the region. Corruption linked to drug trafficking was also a serious problem. In several countries, initiatives to assess the extent of drug abuse and establish demand reduction activities revealed worrying levels of abuse, including an increase in abuse by injection. The main drugs of abuse were cannabis and opiates. In addition, Ecstasy became increasingly available. In Afghanistan, despite the armed intervention and political change (see p. 289) and the fight against terrorism, cultivation and trafficking in opiates expanded, resulting in increased political instability. In 2003, seizures of opiates increased, particularly in Central Asia. Precursor chemicals continued to flow into the region along the same routes used for smuggling opiates but in the opposite direction.

Cannabis was the most widely grown and abused drug in West Asia. Illicit cannabis cultivation took place in several countries, and the plant grew wild in Afghanistan, Kazakhstan and Pakistan. Some cultivation was destroyed in Tajikistan, where a few cases of opium poppy cultivation were also discovered. Cannabis continued to be smuggled in large quantities, mainly in the form of cannabis resin, out of South-West Asia and into Europe. In Lebanon, despite regular eradication campaigns, illicit cultivation of both cannabis and opium poppy re-emerged in the Bekaa valley and was linked to the area's economically deprived status.

In Afghanistan, opium poppy cultivation, which had re-emerged on a large scale in 2002, spread further in 2003, as farmers grew it increasingly in remote and inaccessible areas. Production of opium increased, despite significant eradication efforts in some traditional cultivation areas. The Board noted with concern the resurgence of opium poppy cultivation in Pakistan, mostly in non-traditional poppy-growing areas.

Large-scale heroin manufacture in West Asia persisted, primarily in Afghanistan, although hardly any laboratories were detected. Opiate smuggling from Afghanistan continued into other countries in West Asia, destined for Europe and other regions, as well as for abuse in the region. Seizures of opiates, mainly heroin and morphine, increased in Iran, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Turkey and several countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS).

Drug abuse assessments revealed alarming trends. In Pakistan, drug abuse increased in urban and rural areas, with cannabis-type drugs (cannabis resin and "charas"), heroin, psychotropic substances and alcohol being the most commonly abused substances. In Afghanistan, cannabis resin was the most commonly abused substance, followed by pharmaceutical drugs, opium, heroin and alcohol. A major concern was the rate of drug injection. In Turkey, drug abuse, though relatively low, was increasing. The Board expressed concern about the high level of drug abuse in West Asia and the increasing trend with regard to injecting drug abuse.

Trafficking in and abuse of illicitly manufactured stimulants (often reported as Captagon)

continued in the Eastern Mediterranean area and on the Arabian peninsula. Rising trends in West Asia were noted in the abuse of Ecstasy. In Turkey, seizures of Ecstasy originating from Western Europe increased considerably. Israel made several large seizures of Ecstasy in 2002, and its availability also increased in Iran. In several countries, the abuse of benzodiazepines was widespread, particularly among women.

At the regional level, Afghanistan participated in meetings and other activities, such as the fourth meeting of drug liaison officers, hosted by Iran in March. At the Conference on Drug Routes from Central Asia to Europe (see also p. 1263), ways for strengthening cooperation in stemming the illicit production of and trade in heroin and opium from Afghanistan to Central Asia were discussed. Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan—members of the Central Asian Cooperation Organization (CACO)—discussed the development of multilateral regional cooperation within the framework of CACO (Almaty, Kazakhstan, July) [A/58/131-S/2003/703]. In West Asia, regional and sub-regional cooperation, especially regarding drug law enforcement, was well developed. Steps were taken to integrate Afghanistan in regional law enforcement activities, and cooperation activities continued to be carried out between Iran and Pakistan.

At the national level, a new drug control law was adopted in Afghanistan, and a national drug control strategy was endorsed by the President in May. The Board noted with concern that Afghanistan's commitment to drug control, as expressed by the Transitional Administration, was not followed throughout the country, due to lack of nationwide control and insufficient support by provincial authorities. It welcomed the drug law enforcement initiatives in Central Asia. The Board noted that information about drug abuse in most countries was fragmented and demand reduction activities received less priority than those in supply reduction.

In June, an INCB mission to Turkey noted that the country had made efforts to improve its position as a competitive supplier of opiate raw materials on the world market, while ensuring the implementation of control measures and achieving a balance between supply and demand. The Board welcomed the activities undertaken by the Turkish International Academy against Drugs and Organized Crime, which focused on drug law enforcement training and promoted national and regional cooperation.

In September, the Board visited Iran, where drug abuse and illicit trafficking created significant problems, as the country was a main conduit for illicit drugs originating in Afghanistan. INCB appreciated the Government's increased demand reduction efforts and welcomed its co-operation with the other countries in the region. It encouraged the Government to strengthen support to Afghanistan and to enact and implement legislation on money-laundering and the control of precursors.

Europe

Cannabis remained the most commonly abused drug in Europe and was increasingly cultivated and trafficked in the region. In Switzerland, between 300 and 500 hectares were cultivated for production, and in the United Kingdom it was estimated that about 50 per cent of all abusers grew their cannabis. Albania was a large supplier of cannabis, which was smuggled into Europe and West Asia. Its abuse was on the increase in Central and Eastern Europe. Cannabis seizures showed a stable or upward trend in many countries.

The cocaine market in Europe was second only to that in North America. The abuse of all forms of cocaine increased in Western Europe; however, crack cocaine abuse was confined to metropolitan areas in some countries. The volume of cocaine from South America smuggled into Europe continued to increase, with Spain, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom being the three main ports of entry. Spain ranked third in the world (after the United States and Colombia) for the volume of cocaine seized.

Heroin abuse spread in Central and Eastern Europe, replacing the abuse of locally produced opiates in most countries. HIV infection among injecting drug abusers spread alarmingly in the Baltic States, the Russian Federation and Ukraine. Heroin on the illicit market was mainly of Afghan origin. In Western Europe, heroin seizures remained stable or declined. In South-Eastern Europe, trafficking continued via the Balkan route. Drug abuse in the countries along that route showed an upward trend. In Western Europe, drug abuse prevention and treatment efforts contributed to the stable or declining levels of heroin abuse. In Eastern Europe, however, it continued to increase.

Europe remained a major producer of synthetic drugs, particularly those of the MDMA variety, which were trafficked worldwide. While Ecstasy and related drugs were mostly manufactured in and distributed from Belgium and the Netherlands, amphetamine was increasingly manufactured all over Europe, especially in Poland, the Baltic States and Romania. Home-cooked methamphetamine (pervitin) was still being manufactured in the Czech Republic, and its trafficking was no longer confined to the local illicit markets, but had spread to Austria, Germany and Slovakia. The percentage of ATS abusers was highest in Ireland, the United Kingdom and the Netherlands.

The Board noted the efforts by Greece, holding the Presidency of the European Council during the first half of 2003, to forge a common European Union (EU) drug control policy. It also noted that the EU Council of Ministers of Justice and Home Affairs had adopted an implementation plan of action against the illicit supply of synthetic drugs in November 2002, and urged EU members to ensure its implementation.

The Board acknowledged national legislation, policy and action, including in the Netherlands, where cannabis became available as a prescription drug; a new drug action plan, which entered into force in Norway; a national action plan on drugs and addiction adopted by Germany; Spain's decision to use funds generated by the forfeiture of assets seized in drug trafficking cases for supporting drug control activities carried out by UNODC; and efforts in countries on the Balkan route, in particular Serbia and Montenegro, to thwart the diversion of precursor chemicals for international trade for the illicit manufacture of drugs.

Following an INCB mission to Poland (February), where ATS manufacture and abuse took place at significant levels, the Board urged the Government to take steps for more effective repression of ATS manufacture and trafficking. An INCB mission visited the Czech Republic (March), where the Board noted the commitment of the Government to deal with drug abuse and trafficking. In July, the Board sent a mission to Germany to visit drug injection rooms and to discuss its concerns. It noted that there was little evidence that drug injection rooms ensured treatment or contributed to a reduction in drug-related deaths, reiterated that those rooms were not in compliance with the international drug control treaties and urged the Government to take steps to ensure compliance. The Board, reviewing progress by Ireland in implementing its 2000 recommendations [YUN 2000, p. 1189], noted that a number of controlled substances under the 1961 and the 1971 Conventions had not been placed under adequate control and urged the Government to adopt legislative provisions required by the two conventions. In January, the Board, during a technical visit to Slovakia, noted that legislation for opium poppy cultivation and poppy straw was in line with its position and appreciated the efforts of the law enforcement authorities to counteract diversion and trafficking in psychotropic substances.

Oceania

Although cannabis abuse declined in Oceania, it remained at a high level and cannabis was the drug of choice in Australia and New Zealand. More sophisticated hydroponic growing techniques contributed to increased yields, especially in Australia. Significant cultivation was found also in Fiji and Papua New Guinea.

Australia and New Zealand were among the main destinations for shipments of heroin and ATS from South-East Asia. However, successful law enforcement operations in Australia led to a sharp reduction in heroin supply to illicit markets. At the same time, the abuse of cocaine and synthetic drugs increased despite record seizures at borders. In all countries in Oceania, except Australia and New Zealand, heroin and cocaine trafficking and abuse were sporadic and at a low level.

In Australia, border detections of synthetic drugs, ATS and Ecstasy increased, as did the number of uncovered clandestine laboratories for ATS manufacture. In both Australia and New Zealand, local illicit manufacture and distribution of ATS increased. In some parts of New Zealand, cannabis abuse was surpassed by ATS abuse, and Ecstasy abuse continued to spread. In Australia, gamma-hydroxybutyric acid, ketamine and various antidepressants became popular party drugs.

At the regional level, the Pacific Islands Forum maintained an essential role in coordinating drug control efforts in Oceania. In March, Australia and Indonesia signed a memorandum of understanding on the exchange of information to enforce customs laws. The Australian Federal Police and the New Zealand Police played a key role in terms of regional technical assistance, and the police and customs of Australia and Papua New Guinea continued to participate in joint border patrols.

At the national level, New Zealand tightened its control over domestic licit distribution of ephedrine and pseudoephedrine through close cooperation between police and pharmacists. The Board noted that both Australia and New Zealand had strengthened their legislation to detect and prevent clandestine ATS manufacture and to intercept consignments of such stimulants and their precursors. The Board noted progress achieved in the fight against money-laundering in several Pacific island States.

In January, the Board sent missions to Fiji and Papua New Guinea. It invited the Government of Fiji to establish a comprehensive national master plan for drug control. It noted that further efforts were required to ensure adequate availability of drugs for medical purposes and to provide scientific support for drug law enforcement. Papua New Guinea needed to revise its drug control legislation. INCB invited the Government to conduct an assessment of the drug abuse situation with a view to introducing proper treatment and rehabilitation programmes.

UN action to combat drug abuse

UN Office on Drugs and Crime

The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), formerly the Office of Drug Control and Crime Prevention [YUN 2002, p. 1247], implemented the Organization's drug programme and crime programme (see p. 1116) in an integrated manner, addressing the interrelated issues of drug control, crime prevention and international terrorism in the context of sustainable development and human security. The drug programme continued to be implemented in accordance with General Assembly resolution 45/179 [YUN 1990, p. 874]. The Office served as the central drug control entity responsible for coordinating all UN drug control activities, and as the repository of technical expertise in international drug control for the UN Secretariat. It acted on behalf of the Secretary-General in fulfilling his responsibilities under international treaties and resolutions relating to drug control; and provided services to the Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, and committees and conferences dealing with drug control matters.

The UNODC Executive Director described the Office's 2003 activities in a report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/CN.7/2004/9-E/CN.15/2004/2]. UNODC assisted States in complying with international conventions to counter the world drug problem and supported INCB in monitoring their implementation. It identified and promoted best policing practices, facilitating cross-border law enforcement cooperation, and worked closely with the relevant law enforcement agencies, such as Interpol, the Customs Cooperation Council (also known as the World Customs Organization), the European Police Office (Europol) and the Southeast European Cooperative Initiative. Technical law enforcement assistance was provided to countries in Southern and East Africa, Central Asia, South-East Asia and Central and Eastern Europe.

In the alternative development area, UNODC supported Governments in reducing the cultivation of illicit drug crops, particularly opium poppy and coca bush. UNODC programmes focused on poverty reduction, the empowerment of women, the creation of new sources of livelihood and the protection of the environment. The programmes targeted peasant families in isolated areas, where illicit drug production and trafficking thrived. The Office promoted best practices in alternative development in Afghanistan, Bolivia, Colombia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar, Peru and Viet Nam.

As to drug demand reduction, UNODC assisted Member States in establishing national drug abuse information systems, promoting best practices in drug abuse prevention and the treatment and rehabilitation of addicts, and implementing projects for reducing drug dependence. UNODC developed the tool kit on drug abuse epidemiology to support the development of an integrated drug information system and supported drug abuse education in schools, and projects targeting youth at risk. The UNODC/World Health Organization (WHO) Global Initiative on Primary Prevention of Substance Abuse was finalized, reaching thousands of people in Belarus, the Philippines, the Russian Federation, South Africa, Thailand, the United Republic of Tanzania, Viet Nam and Zambia. A local expert network on demand reduction was launched in Western Africa.

UNODC launched regional treatment and rehabilitation projects aimed at diversifying services to injecting drug users, including HIV/AIDS treatment and prevention in Belarus, the Republic of Moldova, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the Central Asian States. To strengthen its capacity to respond to HIV/AIDS drug abuse-related issues, the Office established a new unit for HIV/AIDS work to implement preventive projects among abusers. HIV/AIDS advisers were placed in the UNODC regional offices in Bangkok, Moscow and Tashkent. The Office maintained the UN Reference Group on HIV/AIDS Prevention and Care among Injecting Drug Users in Developing and Transitional Countries, whose members completed a mapping of the global, regional and national epidemiology of injecting drug use and HIV infection.

In Afghanistan, UNODC assisted the Counter-Narcotics Directorate of the National Security Council in building capacities in drug law enforcement and in the criminal justice sector. The Office engaged the agencies involved in post-conflict reconstruction to ensure that the elimination of illicit drug crops remained a priority, and it helped to develop the national drug control strategy aimed at the elimination of illicit cultivation of opium poppy within 10 years. Central Asia and the countries bordering the region were affected by the export of Afghan opium. UNODC followed up on the recommendations of the Conference on Drug Routes from Central Asia to Europe (see pp. 1263 and 1277) with an initiative aimed at achieving effective cross-border cooperation in countries along the drug trafficking routes.

In Africa, the Office supported the AU in integrating drug- and crime-related issues into the New Partnership for Africa's Development (see p. 937). It continued to work with Governments to strengthen judicial integrity and promoted the development of multisectoral programmes to combat drug trafficking and abuse, corruption, organized crime and terrorism. It helped to improve the seaport and airport law enforcement capabilities in Eastern and Southern Africa, and provided specialized training for judges, prosecutors and investigators to improve treaty implementation. In various African countries, an initiative launched jointly by UNODC and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) (see p. 1247) resulted in several preventive actions. In Eastern Africa, projects were revised to include training professionals to provide services to prevent HIV/AIDS transmission. Small grants were given to NGOs to support activities targeting drug abuse and HIV/AIDS.

The operational priorities that were agreed by Member States in January 2003, reflected in the consolidated budget for the 2004-2005 biennium (see p. 1281), set the resource requirements at $180.4 million. The UNODC budget (mostly funded through voluntary contributions by a small number of Member States) increased by 12.7 per cent. General-purpose income increased to $18.5 million in 2003 (23 per cent above the 2002 level). The increase, coupled with cost-saving measures introduced in mid-2002, prevented a potential default during the year.

Training

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/32 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Training in precursor control, countering money-laundering and drug abuse prevention

The Economic and Social Council,

Conscious that offences connected with drug trafficking depend on the availability of chemical precursors, without which the illicit manufacture of cocaine, heroin and amphetamine-type stimulants would not have become a problem,

Concerned at the escalation of the problem of illicit supply, diversion and substitution of precursors and at the use of sophisticated technologies,

Concerned also at the increase in the laundering of money derived from drug trafficking, which is detrimental to national economies and fosters corruption,

Noting that the supply of and demand for illicit drugs are harmful to public health and that children and young persons are among the consumers of such drugs,

Recognizing that education and training are basic prerequisites for the efficient performance of the various tasks that institutions and their officials must carry out in order to deal with the world drug problem and drug-related offences,

Urges relevant international organizations, in consultation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, to provide financing and other support for the training of experts in various subjects related to the fight against the world drug problem, with particular emphasis on preventive measures and areas such as precursor control, drug-testing laboratories and laboratory quality assurance, countering money-laundering and drug abuse prevention, bearing in mind that such training may often be best delivered on a regional basis.

Administrative and budgetary matters

2002-2003 programme budget

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs considered the proposed revised budget for 2002-2003 [E/CN.7/2003/15] for the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP), as presented by the Executive Director in January [E/CN.7/2003/15]. The revised 2002-2003 support budget amounted to $34.2 million, reflecting a nominal decrease of $1.1 million, or 3.3 per cent, compared with the initial support budget amount of $35.4 million. It included a proposed volume decrease of $1.5 million or 4.2 per cent, and cost changes of $341,300, or 1 per cent, compared with the initial budget (YUN 2001, p. 1166). The Commission also considered an overview of UNDCP's financial situation, which showed that total income for the 2002-2003 biennium was revised upwards by $0.9 million to $137.2 million. However, general-purpose income had to be revised downwards by $5 million, while special-purpose or earmarked income was revised upwards by $5.9 million. The change in the mix of income would result in a decline in the general-purpose fund balance by $5.3 million by the end of 2003, well below the $8 million minimum balance required to maintain sufficient cash flow in 2004. To address the cash-flow and structural problem in financing, the Secretariat proposed a number of options, including finding alternative sources of financing.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in a February report [E/CN.7/2003/16], recommended approval of the proposed revised support budget for the 2002-2003 biennium

By a 15 April resolution [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/10)], the Commission approved an appropriation in the amount of $34.2 million for the Fund's revised 2002-2003 support budget. It authorized the Executive Director to redeploy resources between appropriation lines up to 5 per cent of the appropriation to which the resources were redeployed, and endorsed the revised resource allocation for programme activities in the amount of $130.2 million. Also on 15 April [res. 46/9], the Commission, noting that the Executive Director's initiatives to increase general-purpose contributions and contributions to the support budget, encouraged him to continue further cost savings and/or reduce the burden on the support budget; to broaden, in cooperation with Member States, the donor base; and to increase voluntary contributions to the Fund. He should also explore innovative means for increasing the resources for drug control programmes.

The Executive Director, in a September performance review of the 2002-2003 budget [E/CN.7/2003/20 & Add.1], noted that the final 2002-2003 budget for the UNDCP Fund amounted to $144.2 million, comprising a programme budget of $106.3 million, a final support budget of $35.4 million and agency support costs of $2.5 million. The final support budget of $35.4 million increased by $3 million (9.2 per cent), as compared with the revised support budget for 2002-2003.

By a 27 November resolution [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/11)], the Commission approved an appropriation in the amount of $38 million for the final support budget for the 2002-2003 biennium funded under the UNDCP Fund, of which $27.6 million was allocated for programme support and $10.3 million for management and administration. It endorsed the final resource allocation for programme activities of $106.3 million for 2002-2003.

Proposed 2004-2005 budget

The budget outline for UNDCP for 2004-2005, as proposed by the Executive Director in January [E/CN.7/2003/15], amounted to $170.9 million, compared with the 2002-2003 revised budget of $166.4 million, reflecting an increase of $4.5 million, or 2.7 per cent. Of that amount, $132.2 million would be allocated for programme activities, $28.3 million for programme support, and $10.4 million for management and administration. ACABQ, in February [E/CN.7/2003/15], recommended approval of the proposed outline for the 2004-2005 biennium.

On 15 April [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/10)], the Commission endorsed the programme and budget strategy for 2004-2005 and took note of the outline for 2004-2005 totalling $171 million, which it considered a basis for the submission of the proposed initial budget for 2004-2005 by the UNODC Executive Director.

At its reconvened forty-sixth session in November, the Commission considered a September report on the 2004-2005 UNODC consolidated budget [E/CN.7/2003/20 & Add.1]. For 2004-2005, the total budget for the UNDCP Fund amounted to $187.4 million, comprising a programme budget of $146.9 million, a support budget of $35.9 million and agency support costs of $4.6 million. Total projected resources amounted to $196 million. The proposed 2004-2005 UNODC budget was predicated on a projected total income from voluntary sources of $155.8 million, of which $141.8 million covered the drug programme, a decrease of about 1 per cent compared with the income for 2002-2003. Total income resources projected for 2004-2005 for the Office would amount to $183.7 million, of which $160.3 million was for the drug programme. General-purpose funds of $35.2 million were expected to remain at about the same level; of the total, $33 million was for the drug programme.

A November ACABQ report [E/CN.7/2003/21] stated that the consolidated budget document was a step in the UNODC reform process. It recommended that the budget should indicate the extent to which expected results would contribute to the attainment of the stated objectives, within defined time frames. It urged the Office to maintain better coordination with the Budget Division of the UN Secretariat and close collaboration with other UN entities that had introduced results-based management systems, encouraged the Executive Director's efforts, including increasing cooperation with the private sector, and stressed the need for complete transparency.

A November note by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2003/22], submitted in response to Commission resolution 46/9 (see p. 1281), stated that the proposed 2004-2005 budget relating to section 17 of the UN regular budget was under consideration by the General Assembly, and that further consultations would be held in early 2005 when the regular budget for the 2006-2007 biennium would be prepared.

By a 27 November resolution [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/11)], the Commission approved an appropriation of $40.5 million for the 2004-2005 initial support budget and an appropriation of $15.1 million for the initial core programme budget. It authorized the Executive Director to re-deploy resources between appropriation lines in the support and core budgets of up to 5 per cent of the appropriation to which the resources were redeployed, and endorsed the initial resource allocation for technical cooperation activities in the amount of $131.8 million for 2004-2005. The Commission also endorsed the 2004-2005 programme and budget strategy and noted that implementation of the budget and additional priority programmes was subject to the availability of funding.

National Drug Control System

The Commission, in a 15 April resolution [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/5)] on improving the exchange of electronic information among Member States and communication with international organizations, commended the broadening of the mandate and scope of the National Drug Control System to cover the collection, exchange and processing of data relevant to national and international drug control, and the provision of support to States in using it. The Commission requested that data be provided to Member States by electronic means and asked that the possibility of obtaining secure funds to deploy the System in more countries be explored and that the System be enhanced. Member States were encouraged to expand the System's use.

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs held its forty-sixth session in Vienna from 8 to 17 March, during which it adopted 10 resolutions and one decision and recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption 10 draft resolutions and two draft decisions. It held a reconvened forty-sixth session on 26 and 27 November, also in Vienna, at which it adopted a resolution on the 2002-2003 final budget and the initial budget for 2004-2005 for the UNDCP Fund (see p. 1281 and above), and brought it to the Council's attention.

Following the closure of the forty-sixth session on 27 November, the Commission opened its forty-seventh session to elect the new chairman and other bureau members.

By decision 2003/235 of 22 July, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its forty-sixth session [E/2003/28/Rev.1] and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the forty-seventh (2004) session, on the understanding that intersessional meetings would be held in Vienna, at no additional cost, to finalize the items to be included in the provisional agenda and the documentation requirements for the forty-seventh session.

Demand reduction

In 2003, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs had before it a February report by the Executive Director on optimizing systems for collecting information and identifying the best practices to counter the demand for illicit drugs [E/CN.7/2003/8]. The report, submitted in response to Commission resolution 45/13 [YUN 2002, p. 1248], reviewed the implementation of demand reduction activities and contained a proposed programme of work for 2003-2008 intended to achieve measurable results in demand reduction by 2008 by improving information systems for reporting on activities for reducing demand; facilitating the sharing of information on best practices; and supporting Member States seeking expertise in developing their own strategies and activities. An addendum to the report [E/CN.7/2003/8/Add.1] summarized some main principles of best practices to counter the demand for illicit drugs as reflected in the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, adopted in General Assembly resolution S-20/3 [YUN 1998, p. 1137].

In a 15 April resolution [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/1)], the Commission urged States to allocate sufficient resources to demand reduction; to ensure that reduction programmes were based on effective, evidence-based standards of research; and to develop a framework for assessing and reporting on the achievements of their national strategies, in line with the Declaration. The Commission encouraged States to share best practices and requested UNDCP to ensure that the programmes promoted had effectiveness in reducing the illicit use of drugs and in facilitating recovery from dependence or addiction. It called on States to develop knowledge of drug abuse and dependence; to use evidence-based interventions to develop prevention programmes; to develop and implement intervention programmes targeting non-dependent drug users; and to improve treatment and rehabilitation programmes for drug-dependent users as well as in community-based services.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/33 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Reduction of illicit drug demand

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the measures to enhance international cooperation to counter the world drug problem, adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session,

Recognizing that the rapid evolution of the socio-economic situation, combined with cultural, personal and social factors and compounded by the availability of illicit drugs, has exacerbated the global problem of consumption of psychoactive substances,

Conscious that the problem of consumption has a greater impact on populations at risk, in particular children and young people, who, for various family and cultural reasons, have become more vulnerable and susceptible to illicit drug consumption and hazardous behaviour regarding illicit drugs,

Aware that programmes for the reduction of illicit drug demand must form part of a global strategy and that, if they are integrated and coordinated so as to offer a wide variety of appropriate measures in the community and in the education, health, labour and social welfare sectors, they will enable the targeted persons, families and communities to diminish the adverse effects of improper drug use,

Considering that the world drug problem must be dealt with on the basis of shared responsibility, which requires an integrated and balanced approach, offering people comprehensive care that will foster their development as individuals and within the community,

1. Supports the implementation of programmes for the reduction of illicit drug demand with global impact and scope that target the people at risk of consuming illicit drugs and the problems associated with illicit drug consumption, to be implemented in an integrated and coordinated manner in the community and in the education, health, labour and social welfare sectors;

2. Invites Member States to share their experience with models for intervention in the various sectors with a view to restructuring their programmes for the reduction of illicit drug demand so that the programmes will have greater impact.

Drug abuse

The Commission considered a January Secretariat report [E/CN.7/2003/4], which reviewed global patterns and trends in illicit drug consumption covering 2001 and analysed abuse patterns by drug type. It also discussed developments in the capacity to monitor illicit drug abuse. The analysis was based on the responses submitted by the 103 countries (54 per cent) that had completed and returned the annual reports questionnaire for the year 2001 by 20 November 2002, in compliance with their obligations under the international treaties.

The Commission, by a 15 April resolution [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/7)] on measures to promote the exchange of information on new patterns of drug use and on psychoactive substances consumed, urged States to implement its resolution 45/6 [YUN 2002, p. 1248]. It invited UNODC and WHO to convene a meeting of experts to establish guidelines applicable to recording cases of drug abuse and dependence, to improve the assessment of the potential of abuse and dependence of psychoactive substances, and to establish a worldwide databank. The UNODC Executive Director was requested to report in 2004.

HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne viruses

A January report by the Executive Director [E/CN.7/2003/5], submitted in response to Commission decision 45/1 [YUN 2002, p. 1249], provided an overview of the status of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, in particular its linkage with drug use, and highlighted activities as reported by Member States through the annual reports questionnaire for the reporting period 2001, and the biennial questionnaire for the reporting cycle 2000-2002. At the end of 2002, an estimated 42 million people were living with HIV/AIDS; over 95 per cent of them were in developing countries. More than 130 countries reported the injecting of illicit drugs, and more than 110 reported HIV infections among injectors. Between 5 and 10 per cent of HIV/AIDS cases were attributable to injecting drug use, which was a major driving force of the epidemic in East Asia and the Pacific, Eastern Europe and Central Asia, where it continued to expand the fastest. In East and South-East Asia, the epidemic spread rapidly through injections, and in many Latin American and Caribbean countries, its spread through the sharing of injecting equipment was a growing concern. In North America, injecting drug use was a prominent route of HIV infection in the United States, whereas the HIV prevalence in Canada remained very low. Although the Middle East and North Africa region was one of the least affected by the epidemic, injecting drug use was a major mode of transmission. Both hepatitis B and hepatitis C were also highly prevalent among injecting drug users.

On 15 April [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/2)], the Commission encouraged Member States to strengthen efforts to achieve the targets set in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, contained in General Assembly resolution S-26/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1126], in the area of HIV prevention, and to ensure that prevention, education, treatment and rehabilitation measures were accessible to all individuals, including HIV-infected drug abusers. Reiterating its concern at the negative consequences of injecting drug abuse, the Commission called on States to implement measures to reduce it; to take into account issues involving drug-related HIV infection in their national policies; and to establish monitoring and evaluation systems to assess progress. It called on the international community to invest in programmes to prevent the spread of HIV related to drug abuse. The Executive Director was requested to report in 2004.

Guidelines for travellers

The Commission, in a 15 April resolution on provisions regarding travellers under medical treatment with drugs containing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances under international control [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/6)], encouraged the States parties to the drug conventions (see p. 1267) to notify INCB of restrictions applicable to those travellers and requested INCB to publish that information in a unified form, in order to ensure wide dissemination and facilitate the task of government agencies. States were urged to implement recommendations on national regulations relating to travellers under medical treatment, taking into account national legal requirements and practical considerations. The UNODC Executive Director was requested to report in 2004.

Illicit cultivation and trafficking

The Commission considered a report by the Executive Director on international assistance to the States most affected by the transit of drugs [E/CN.7/2003/11], prepared in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/21 [YUN 2002, p. 1250]. The report reviewed activities to support transit States through programmes in Asia and the Pacific, Latin America and the Caribbean, Eastern Europe, Central Asia and Africa. Assistance was provided to upgrade technical skills and strengthen competencies, such as data collection in support of informed responses to illicit trafficking; the provision of equipment to front-line operations; projects to build cross-border and regional cooperation; and self-sustaining instruction to provide agency training in best operating practices.

A January report by the Executive Director on strengthening international cooperation in the control of opium poppy cultivation [E/CN.7/2003/10], submitted pursuant to Commission resolution 45/10 [YUN 2002, p. 1246], stated that advisory and technical support was provided to the Transitional Administration of Afghanistan and to the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) through policy support, legislation and advocacy; elimination of illicit crops; suppression of illicit drug trafficking; and drug abuse prevention and reduction. The potential positive role of microcredit and other financing schemes was studied to dissuade farmers from cultivating opium poppy.

Another January report of the Executive Director [E/CN.7/2003/9], submitted in response to Commission resolution 44/6 [YUN 2001, p. 1170], reviewed action to develop technical assistance and training on cooperation against illicit drug trafficking by sea. It analysed progress made in developing a guide for national authorities responsible for receiving and responding to requests made pursuant to article 17 of the 1988 Convention (see p. 1267). The guide contained an overview of maritime cooperation under the provisions of the Convention, provided guidelines on the establishment of a legal framework at the national level and reviewed the tasks of national authorities. To support States in their cooperation against illicit trafficking by sea, the directory of competent national authorities under the 1988 Convention was published on a quarterly basis.

On 15 April [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/3)], the Commission, noting progress made by UNDCP in developing a practical guide for national authorities, invited States to evaluate its usefulness as an instrument for enhancing international cooperation against drug trafficking by sea. States were encouraged to establish channels for the exchange of information and to provide to UNDCP information to enable the preparation, distribution and maintenance of a directory of a national contact or contacts. The Commission also urged States with expertise in maritime interdiction to provide, in cooperation with UNDCP, assistance, training and equipment to interested States.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/34 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

International assistance to the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2002/21 of 24 July 2002 and the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the measures to enhance international cooperation to counter the world drug problem,

Reaffirming its resolution 2001/16 of 24 July 2001 on international assistance to the States most affected by the transit of drugs,

Taking note of the second biennial report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on the implementation of the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, his report on international assistance to the States most affected by the transit of drugs and other relevant reports submitted to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-sixth session,

Bearing in mind the principle of shared responsibility and the need for all States to promote and implement the actions necessary to counter the world drug problem and crimes related to that problem,

Acknowledging efforts by national authorities and the international community, including the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, to reduce the demand for and to combat international trafficking in illicit drugs,

Noting the fact that the transit States continue to face grave and multifaceted challenges, owing to both the problems related to illicit drug trafficking and supply and the rising levels of drug abuse resulting from the transiting of illicit drugs through their territories,

Bearing in mind the need to strengthen law enforcement capacities at all levels and the importance of inter-agency coordination to the achievement of effective drug control strategies addressing all aspects of the world drug problem,

Recognizing the need to provide, for that purpose, international assistance to the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs,

1. Encourages the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs to continue to implement and strengthen law enforcement initiatives at all levels and cross-border cooperation between transit States, as well as countries of destination, with a view to promoting coordinated drug control activities and unified responses to drug trafficking;

2. Also encourages the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs to continue to implement and strengthen comprehensive policies for the reduction of illicit drug demand;

3. Calls upon the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs to ensure well-coordinated and focused policies to suppress drug trafficking through greater coordination between key agencies responsible for drug law enforcement;

4. Calls upon the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, subject to the availability of voluntary funds and in accordance with the guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, and Member States to facilitate such initiatives by providing assistance and technical support to the drug control authorities of the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs, in particular developing countries, including countries with economies in transition, that are in need of such assistance and support;

5. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and Member States, in providing such assistance to the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs, to integrate, subject to availability of voluntary funds and in accordance with guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds adopted by the Commission, projects for the reduction of illicit drug demand and the strengthening of treatment and rehabilitation services for drug abusers;

6. Urges the international financial institutions and other potential donors to provide financial assistance to the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs, including for empowering and building the capacity of locally available human resources, so that those States may intensify their efforts to combat drug trafficking and deal with its consequences, in particular increased drug addiction;

7. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-seventh session on the implementation of the present resolution.

On the same day [meeting 44], the Council, also on the recommendation of the Commission [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/35 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Strengthening the prevention and suppression of illicit drug trafficking

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing that, in order to be effective, the elimination of illicit drug crops must be based on a regional strategy that involves international cooperation, including the strengthening of capacity to prevent trafficking in illicit drugs from producer countries, taking into account the need to make alternative development products competitive,

Recalling that Governments have adopted various measures to promote multilateral, regional, sub-regional and bilateral cooperation between judicial, law enforcement and tax authorities so as to deal in a comprehensive manner with criminal groups involved in drug trafficking,

1. Reaffirms the importance of broad policies to eliminate illicit drug crops and of the implementation of legislation, in particular legislation to facilitate the interdiction of illicit drug shipments, in support of illicit drug crop eradication and elimination, alternative development and strong law enforcement efforts at reducing the supply of illicit drugs;

2. Calls upon States to adopt effective measures to strengthen international cooperation projects aimed at the prohibition and control of drug trafficking and to deal with the activities of criminal groups involved in such trafficking and the diversification of their methods and transport routes;

3. Urges States to include among those measures the exchange of mutual legal and investigatory assistance to combat criminal groups involved in drug trafficking, and to promote the further development of effective models for cooperation, in particular in the areas of air, sea and port control, and the enhanced monitoring of controlled precursors and chemical components.

Secretariat report. A report by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2004/4] described global trends and patterns in illicit drug production during 2002-2003 and trafficking up to 2002. Information on illicit cultivation and production was drawn from the illicit crop-monitoring surveys presented by UNODC. Information on seizures in 2002 was drawn from the annual reports questionnaire submitted by Governments to UNODC, and, in 2003, it was drawn from government reports on significant seizures. Other sources included country reports received by UNODC or submitted to the Commission and reports from UNODC field offices.

Alternative development

A February report [E/CN.7/2003/17] by the Executive Director, prepared in response to Commission resolution 45/14 [YUN 2002, p. 1250], described development-oriented drug control mechanisms and discussed possibilities for innovative funding mechanisms. UNODC undertook pilot projects and advocated and built alternative development interventions and projects. At the country level, the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) and the resident coordinator system helped to integrate the drug component in the UN agenda and promoted inter-agency cooperation. In most countries with alternative development schemes, including in Bolivia, Colombia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Peru and Viet Nam, the drug aspect was addressed through UNDAF. In the area of alternative product marketing, partnerships with the private sector, foundations and corporate entities facilitated the sharing of commitments and resources for alternative development. Regarding possibilities for innovative funding mechanisms, the report stated that, although UNODC had not established a special funding mechanism for alternative development, it had made approaches to secure more attention, support and resources. The report concluded that efforts to support alternative development would be positively affected by a stable and predictable core funding base; the long-term commitment of resources to alternative development projects; and the inclusion of alternative development in sustainable development policies and operations by the major development and financial institutions.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/37 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Strengthening alternative development through trade and socio-environmental preservation

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, which states that alternative development is an important component for generating and promoting lawful, viable and sustainable economic options to illicit drug crop cultivation, that States with illicit drug crops will need continued funding to support national efforts to eliminate drug crops and that the success of alternative development programmes depends, inter alia, on the long-term political and financial commitment of the Governments of the affected countries and the international community,

Reaffirming Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 45/14 of 15 March 2002, in which the Commission invited Member States to make more comprehensive and determined efforts in the area of financial and technical cooperation aimed at promoting alternative development, including, where appropriate, preventive alternative development, and urged the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to enlarge its base of donors and to use available voluntary resources to increase the financial and technical assistance that it provides to alternative development programmes, including, where appropriate, preventive alternative development,

Aware of the importance of programmes promoting alternative development, including, where appropriate, preventive alternative development,

Urging Member States to consider that the presence of illicit drug crops and illicit cultivation and production leads to the degradation of the environment,

Noting with concern that the existence of illicit crops and illicit cultivation and production seriously damages the environment and causes severe socio-economic problems, in particular for highly vulnerable populations, and that effective crop control strategies require an integrated and balanced approach, in particular alternative development, including, where appropriate, preventive alternative development,

1. Urges the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and all Member States to continue to cooperate effectively on programmes to promote alternative development, including, where appropriate, preventive alternative development, in accordance with the provisions of Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 45/14;

2. Calls upon the international community and Member States to promote an economic environment that is favourable to products from alternative development and that facilitates the access of such products to international markets as an effective and efficient means of eliminating the illicit economy;

3. Reiterates the necessity of encouraging access to international markets for products, including produce, from alternative development areas;

4. Urges Member States, in accordance with the principle of shared responsibility and as a sign of their commitment to the fight against illicit drugs, to extend cooperation in the area of alternative development to include technical assistance, support for the protection of the environment, sustainable development of forest resources, creation of social and productive infrastructure and promotion of private investment and agro-industry, as well as facilitation of the access of alternative development products to markets;

5. Calls upon Member States to share their experience in programmes to eliminate or reduce illicit crop cultivation, thereby taking into account common socio-economic and environmental factors, and to encourage the participation of local inhabitants in such programmes;

6. Encourages Member States, multilateral financial institutions, regional development banks and non-governmental organizations to focus attention on measures designed to protect society, in particular highly vulnerable populations, and the environment from the harmful effects of illicit drugs;

7. Resolves to promote the implementation of programmes of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of voluntary funds, which might be from general-purpose funds, in accordance with the guidelines adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, or from earmarked funds, and programmes of other relevant organizations for alternative development, including, where appropriate, preventive alternative development, through an integrated approach to the development of vulnerable areas that includes strategies for the preservation of the environment, security, monitoring, education, health, sanitation and community development.

Regional cooperation

In a report to the Commission [E/CN.7/2004/5], the Secretariat reviewed action taken by the Commission's subsidiary bodies in 2003. Following a review of trafficking trends and regional and subregional cooperation, each subsidiary body addressed drug law enforcement issues of priority concern to its region and made recommendations. The thirty-eighth session of the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East (Amman, Jordan, 23-27 June) [UNODC/SUBCOM/2003/5], considered regional trends in opiate trafficking; identifying traffickers through effective document control; and illicit manufacture and distribution of stimulants. The thirteenth meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HONLEA), Africa (Port Louis, Mauritius, 8-12 September) [UNODC/HONLAF/2003/5] considered regional trends in opiate and cannabis trafficking; illicit manufacture and distribution of stimulants; identifying sound practice in training for Africa's law enforcement officials; and mobilizing community support for law enforcement anti-drug strategies. The thirteenth meeting of HONLEA, Latin America and the Caribbean (Salvador, Brazil, 20-24 October) [UNODC/HONLAC/2003/5] examined the value of effective controlled delivery operations; strengthening information exchange and operational cooperation at the inter-agency, cross-border and regional levels; and new global threats: challenges to law enforcement from globalization. The twenty-seventh meeting of HONLEA, Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 8-12 December) [UNODC/HONLAP/2003/5] reviewed effective mechanisms to support operational cross-border cooperation; the appropriateness of national drug law enforcement strategies to the current world situation; identifying traffickers through effective document control; and the region's response to the increasing availability of ATS.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2003/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2003/38 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Funding of travel for participants in meetings of heads of national drug law enforcement agencies

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 53/115 of 9 December 1998, 54/132 of 17 December 1999, 55/65 of 4 December 2000 and 56/124 of 19 December 2001, in which the Assembly stressed the importance of the meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies, in all regions of the world, and the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, and encouraged them to continue to contribute to the strengthening of regional and international cooperation, taking into account the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly,

Recalling also its resolution 1985/11 of 28 May 1985, in which it requested the Secretary-General to convene regular meetings of the operational heads of the national drug control and law enforcement agencies of States in the African region to study questions related to illicit drug traffic in the region and to establish more effective mechanisms for cooperation and mutual assistance in the suppression of illicit drug traffic within, from and into the region,

Recalling further its resolution 1987/34 of 26 May 1987, in which it invited the Governments of the Latin American and the Caribbean countries and other interested Governments to participate in the regional meeting of the heads of national drug law enforcement agencies with a view to establishing the Meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies, Latin America and the Caribbean, and requested the Secretary-General to adopt the necessary measures and to provide the financial resources required for holding the regional meeting,

Recalling its resolution 1988/15 of 25 May 1988, in which it requested the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to convene annually the Meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies, Asia and the Pacific, Africa, and Latin America and the Caribbean, and to provide the financial resources required from available resources and, if necessary, to seek additional extrabudgetary resources,

Recalling also its resolution 1992/28 of 30 July 1992 on improvement of the functioning of the subsidiary bodies of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, in which it requested the Commission to examine further, on a regular basis, the functioning of the subsidiary bodies of the Commission,

Strengthening UN mechanisms

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs had before it a report by the UNDCP Executive Director on strengthening the drug control programme and the role of the Commission [E/CN.7/2003/14]. The report, prepared in response to Commission resolution 45/17 (YUN 2002, p. 1252), reviewed progress made to implement its resolution 44/16 [YUN 2001, p. 1172] regarding strengthening dialogue between Member States and the programme; improving the effectiveness of the Commission's work; the programme's operations and management; and funding.

On 15 April [E/2003/28/Rev.1 (res. 46/8)], the Commission urged the continued reform of the drug control programme, based on resolutions 44/16 and 45/17 and the recommendations contained in the reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services [YUN 2001, p. 1167], the Board of Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit [YUN 2002, p. 1358], and called on the Executive Director to complete their implementation and develop existing reforms. Reaffirming its governing role in the programme's budget process, the Commission requested UNDCP to continue to present briefings and reports to States, such as the progress report on management reform entitled "Commitment to good governance". The Commission called on the Executive Director to consider as priorities the development and application of expertise in evaluation and monitoring. He was requested to report in 2004.

Chapter XV

Statistics

The United Nations continued its statistical work programme in 2003, mainly through the Statistical Commission and the United Nations Statistics Division. In March, the Commission endorsed the Division's proposed actions in support of the 2010 round of population and housing censuses; approved the draft terms of reference for the newly established Advisory Committee on Indicators; and endorsed the draft work programme of the Statistics Division for the 2004-2005 biennium.

The Commission reviewed the work of groups of countries and international organizations in various areas of economic, social, demographic and environment statistics and made specific recommendations and suggestions.

Work of Statistical Commission

The Statistical Commission held its thirty-fourth session in New York from 4 to 7 March [E/2003/24]. Actions included: endorsement of the proposed activities to be undertaken by the United Nations Statistics Division in support of the 2010 round of population and housing censuses and of the scope of the updating process of the 1993 System of National Accounts (SNA), with a view to maintaining the current system's fundamentals and its consistency with related manuals. The Commission also endorsed the managing and coordinating role of the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts (ISWGNA) in the updating process, with the assistance of an Advisory Group on National Accounts (AGNA), and further endorsed the targeted publication date of 2008.

Having reviewed the statistical work of groups of countries and international organizations, the Commission requested the creation of a "Friends of the Chair" group to examine coordination in the production and dissemination of health statistics and to recommend improvements. It endorsed the Division's proposal to hold, in collaboration with the Siena Group for Social Statistics, an expert group meeting on setting the scope of social statistics and to prepare a compendium on best practices in poverty statistics. The Commission welcomed the report of the Office for National Statistics (United Kingdom), which summarized topical issues concerning the new economy; noted the progress made in agricultural statistics, in particular the modernization of FAOSTAT (the corporate statistical database of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)); and agreed with the proposal to create an international advisory panel on agricultural statistics. The Commission also welcomed the Australian Bureau of Statistics report on service statistics activities and suggested that the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) take the lead in project management and coordination of work in that field. It commended the World Bank's efforts that had resulted in significant developments in the International Comparison Programme (ICP), endorsed the composition of ICP's new Executive Board and welcomed the progress made by the Programme's new Global Office in coordinating work on purchasing power parities. It also supported the Statistics Division's work outline for environment statistics and agreed that an inter-agency working group should be set up on that subject. It further noted the proposal by OECD, the Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat) and the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) to establish a steering committee on sustainable development statistics. The Commission supported the need for a "concepts paper" to provide a basis for the revisions of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC) and the Central Product Classification (CPC), and reiterated its expectation of a positive outcome of the convergence between the General Industrial Classification of Economic Activities within the European Communities (NACE) and the North American Industry Classification System (NAICS). The Commission authorized its Chairman to finalize the report on indicators, which was requested by the Economic and Social Council in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1254]; asked that the report emphasize the need for international support to statistical capacity-building in developing countries; stressed the need to pay attention to indicators for monitoring implementation of the UN Millennium Development Goal (MDG) [YUN 2000, p. 51] on developing a global partnership for development; and approved the draft terms of reference for the Advisory Committee on Indicators. The Commission emphasized the importance of statistical capacity-building, stressing that statistical capacity-building efforts needed to be an integral part of development programmes, and endorsed the Statistics Division's technical cooperation programme. It agreed that Commission and Division actions were consistent with Economic and Social Council policy decisions. The Commission welcomed the establishment of the Committee for the Coordination of Statistical Activities and requested that it work on a common approach to data quality assessment. It also requested that the Statistics Division and the Committee continue to work on the issue of reviewing and resolving data-collection duplication. The Commission endorsed the Division's proposed draft work programme for the 2004-2005 biennium and approved the revised 2003 work programme. The Commission noted or gave direction to the work of a number of statistical groups (see below).

On 24 July (decision 2003/284), the Economic and Social Council deferred consideration of the item on statistics to its resumed 2003 session. On 19 December (decision 2003/317), the Council deferred consideration of the Statistical Commission's report on its thirty-fourth session to its organizational session in 2004.

Economic statistics

National accounts

In response to a 2002 Statistical Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 1254], the Secretary-General submitted the report of the Task Force on National Accounts [E/CN.3/2003/9]. The report assessed the implementation of the 1993 SNA [YUN 1993, p. 1112] and reviewed coordination of related work programmes. It discussed the treatment of a number of issues in applying SNA: accrual accounting of interest; repurchase agreements; interest under conditions of high inflation; pension funds; employee stock option plans; non-performing loans; insurance/reinsurance; financial services; software; and taxes on capital gains. It also reviewed the current procedure for updating the 1993 SNA.

The report also contained the recommendations of ISWGNA for the future updating of the SNA and other ISWGNA actions to strengthen the updating procedure.

With regard to the assessment of the implementation of the 1993 SNA, it was reported that the conceptual compliance questionnaire was sent to all countries by the end of September 2002. The assessment report would be submitted to the Commission in 2004.

The Commission had recommended in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1254] that the Statistics Division collect data on national accounts quarterly, in addition to annual data. ISWGNA recommended that the Division not replicate International Monetary Fund (IMF) and OECD work in that area.

In March [E/2003/24], the Commission endorsed the scope of the updating process, with a view to maintaining the fundamentals of the current 1993 SNA and its consistency with related publications like the Balance of Payments Manual, the Government Finance Statistics Manual and the Monetary and Financial Statistics Manual. It supported the three criteria for identifying issues for SNA updating and recommended the inclusion of two additional criteria: user needs and feasibility. The Commission also endorsed the managing and coordinating role of ISWGNA in the updating process, requested the preparation of a project document describing the 1993 SNA updating and delineating AGNA's role, and advised ISWGNA to circulate the document to member countries for input. It further endorsed the list of issues to be updated, recommending that it be an open-ended list, and the targeted publication date of 2008 for the updated 1993 SNA. It considered the deadline of 2005 for the conclusions to be submitted to the Commission too optimistic and suggested that it be moved to mid-2006. The Commission noted the concerns of some member countries about the decision-making process regarding past ISWGNA submissions of solutions and recognized the desirability of arriving at solutions in a spirit of compromise, ensuring a thorough analysis of issues by set deadlines. It further noted the concerns of developing countries and international bodies about the challenges faced in implementing the current 1993 SNA and the need to maintain international comparability. The Commission emphasized the need to widen the participation of Member States in the updating process and urged timely translation of the officially approved document in all the official languages of the United Nations.

Services statistics

The Commission considered a report by the Australian Bureau of Statistics on the statistics of services [E/CN.3/2003/12], which gave particular attention to the classification of services and products, price indexes for services, international trade in services and short-term indicators in services. Conceptual and measurement issues in emerging areas of information and communication technology, knowledge-based economy, innovation, globalization and non-profit institutions were also covered. The report concluded that the main issues were: whether the international statistical community needed to increase the priority of and resources devoted to services statistics; whether current coordination mechanisms could be made more efficient; and how the provision of practical measurement guidance to developing countries might be coordinated. The Commission also had before it the Secretary-General's note transmitting the report of the Task Force on Statistics of International Trade in Services [E/CN.3/2003/15], which noted the publication of its Manual on Statistics of International Trade in Services.

The Commission noted the activities related to services statistics of the city and expert groups, and emphasized that participation of developing countries in those groups needed to be facilitated. It noted the need for a "project management" approach and coordination of work in services statistics, and suggested that OECD take the lead in that regard; agreed that the coordination function should not be carried out by existing city groups, whose work should remain focused on methodological issues; and noted that the coordination function would include a continuous overview of activities, ensuring and facilitating communication between the different groups involved, and identifying overlaps, links and gaps in data-collection, in methodological issues and in setting work priorities. The Commission encouraged the preparation of a single annual report on the work of the various expert and city groups, which should be submitted to the Commission. It suggested that the future work on implementation of the Manual on Statistics of International Trade in Services should focus on increasing data quality rather than on introducing more detailed statistics.

International Comparison Programme

The Commission had before it the Secretary-General's note transmitting a World Bank report on ICP [E/CN.3/2003/13] [YUN 2002, p. 1255]. The Commission acknowledged the important role of the Friends of the Chair as an interim governing body and noted that, with ICP's new management structure, the group would be disbanded. It commended the World Bank's work, which had resulted in significant developments, endorsed the ICP Executive Board's composition and welcomed the progress achieved by the ICP Global Office in centrally coordinating purchasing power parities. The Commission stressed that country ownership of the Programme should be strongly emphasized and that continuous communication with national statistical offices was essential. It recognized the interrelationship between scope, coverage and funding issues; noted that alternative proposals had been elaborated in case of budget constraints, resulting in the necessity of reconsidering limiting the Programme to the comparison of consumption for a smaller number of countries; and encouraged additional funding and in-kind Programme support at the regional and global levels and bilateral support to countries seeking technical assistance. The Commission concluded that the Programme timetable provided an adequate basis for implementing ICP in a timely fashion, and noted that its presentation in a room document had contributed to its transparency. It welcomed the preparation of the draft ICP handbook and supported the initiative for wider information dissemination on the Programme through the ICP newsletter and web site. The Commission supported the ICP implementation, emphasizing its capacity-building potential in consumer price and national accounts statistics, as well as price and household consumption surveys, and stressed the need to develop the Programme so as to ensure its sustainability beyond the current phase.

A December World Bank report [E/CN.3/2004/14] discussed ICP's organizational and financial status at the regional and global levels, noting that, although significant progress had been made in resource mobilization, response to fundraising had not met expectations and the Programme faced a shortfall of $6.8 million.

Finance statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the Task Force on Finance Statistics [E/CN.3/2003/16] on activities undertaken to improve the methodological soundness, transparency, timeliness and availability of data on external debt and international reserves.

The Commission welcomed the cooperation among international organizations within the Task Force, congratulated the Task Force on completing External Debt Statistics: Guide for Compilers and Users, and welcomed IMF's training seminars for managers and external debt data compilers on collection, quality improvement and cross-country data comparability. It endorsed the Task Force as a forum to address external debt statistics issues and encouraged research on vulnerability assessment. The Commission supported Task Force and IMF efforts to develop a centralized external debt statistics database to complement the joint Bank for International Settlements/IMF/OECD/World Bank statistics (BIOWS) database; develop further BIOWS with regard to short-term debt data; identify information repositories so as to assess external debt data gaps; and analyse and reconcile statistics compiled by debtors and creditors. It acknowledged the Task Force's effort to assist IMF in developing a data quality assessment framework.

Other economic statistics

Measuring the new economy

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Commission a report by the United Kingdom Office for National Statistics on the International Association for Official Statistics conference on "official statistics and the new economy" (London, 27-29 August 2002) [E/CN.3/2003/10].

The Commission recognized that the "new economy" involved advanced levels of knowledge and information and communication technologies; it had led to rapid changes on a global scale, affecting many statistical domains, especially services statistics, and entailing highly complex conceptual issues, including measurement, one of which could involve changes in comparative advantage and how wealth was created. The Commission endorsed the recommendation that international bodies set clear research priorities and agreed that close cooperation between international bodies and national statistical offices and the sharing of good practice were required to move the agenda forward.

Agriculture statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Commission the FAO report on recent developments in agricultural statistics and future plans [E/CN.3/2003/11 & Corr.1]. The Commission noted the progress made in agricultural statistics, particularly the modernization of FAOSTAT, the promotion of the decennial Programme of the World Census of Agriculture and the renewed activities in agricultural producer price statistics. It welcomed FAO's monitoring of two indicators among the MDGs: prevalence of undernourishment and percentage of forest cover. The Commission expressed support for the future methodological development plans that would broaden the scope of agricultural statistics, move towards demand-side statistics and develop a framework of new concepts and methods for rural statistics. It affirmed that more resources would be needed for FAO to fulfil its leadership role and extend its programme in agricultural statistics and agreed with the proposal to create an international advisory panel on agricultural statistics.

International trade statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Commission the report of the Task Force on International Trade Statistics [E/CN.3/2003/14], which discussed the impact of e-commerce on international trade statistics; international trade statistics according to CPC; and alternative trade data sources.

The Task Force identified the need for a manual on international trade indices and IMF had agreed to explore the possibility of leading that effort. The Commission took note of the work and plans of the Task Force; endorsed its plans to develop a manual on import and export price indices; and welcomed IMF's intention to develop that manual.

Price indexes and statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the Ottawa Group on Price Indexes [E/CN.3/2003/17]. It took note of the Group's report and its plan to hold a meeting in 2003 to provide a forum for sharing experience on crucial problems of measuring price change.

ISWGPS

Having considered the report of the Inter-secretariat Working Group on Price Statistics (ISWGPS) [E/CN.3/2003/18], the Commission noted that the Manual on Consumer Price Indexes was almost completed and that its improved structure reflected stronger emphasis on practical issues of compilation of consumer price indexes. It also noted that the work on the Producer Price Index Manual was well advanced, with an expected late 2003 publication date. The Commission recommended that ISWGPS explore the possible future direction of its work after its initial mandate on the elaboration of the manuals was accomplished.

Environment statistics

The Commission had before it the Secretary-General's report on environment statistics [E/CN.3/2003/19], which summarized the results of two international collections of environmental data carried out by the Statistics Division in 1999 and 2001. It also outlined a work programme for the improvement of the regular collection, compilation and dissemination of international environment statistics.

The Commission underlined the complexity of environment statistics, acknowledged existing methodological and institutional difficulties, and emphasized the high priority to be given at the international level to the new and developing area of environment statistics. It supported the work programme outlined in the report; emphasized the need for a continuous review of data collection; and stressed the need to intensify work in the development of standards, concepts and methods. The Commission also underlined the need to link development of environment statistics with statistics on sustainable development; recognized the importance of national collaboration between data producers and policy makers; and stressed the role of training and national capacity-building in developing environment statistics. It agreed that the Statistics Division should set up an inter-agency working group on environment statistics; and took note of the OECD/Eurostat/ECE joint proposal to establish a steering group on statistics of sustainable development.

Demographic and social statistics

Population and housing censuses

The Commission considered the Secretary-General's report on population and housing censuses [E/CN.3/2003/2], which summarized activities undertaken during 2002, approved for 2003, proposed for the 2004-2005 biennium and requested by the Commission for inclusion in the Statistics Division's work programme in subsequent bienniums.

During 2002, the Division conducted training programmes to strengthen national capabilities in census operations, analysis, dissemination and the promotion of census results; drafted the handbook on the collection of fertility and mortality data and submitted it for publication; and issued a technical report on the collection of economic characteristics in population censuses. It also published the proceedings of the 2001 global review of the 2000 round of population and housing censuses, on the theme "Mid-decade assessment and future prospects"; and began to draft a handbook on household demographic and social surveys.

The approved activities for 2003 included an expert group meeting to review the handbook on household demographic and social surveys, and workshops and meetings to consider concerns expressed by the Commission. Activities for the 2004-2005 biennium included two specific Commission requests from its thirty-third (2002) session: a follow-up symposium in 2004 on the experience of the 2000 round of censuses and a report on the collection, compilation and dissemination of international migration statistics [E/CN.3/2003/2].

The Commission endorsed the activities proposed in the report, emphasizing that they would need to be completed by 2006 in order to respond to country requirements and contribute to the 2010 planning of population and housing censuses. It recommended the inclusion of other activities: the development of guidelines and sharing of experience in the use of the Internet in census data collection and dissemination, and development of new technologies for data capturing to improve efficiency and cost-effectiveness; the preparation of technical documents on successes and failures in the 2000 round of national censuses, post-enumeration surveys based on national experience from the 2000 round and the use of geographical information systems and digital mapping in data collection and dissemination; and further work on the use of new technology to capture data on human settlements, including slums. The Commission suggested themes for the 2004 symposium: mobilization of broad public acceptance and support for census activities; approaches to the collection and dissemination of data on race and ethnicity; and cost-effectiveness of post-enumeration surveys. It requested the development of a handbook to complement the Recommendations on Statistics of International Migration, Revision I [Sales No. E.98.XVII.14], and the organization of workshops to review and assess national experience in implementing the recommendations; that population and housing censuses be an integral part of national statistical systems; and that work be undertaken to identify instruments that could be used to ensure accurate and reliable measurement of population change during intercensal periods.

Health statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Commission a report by the World Health Organization (WHO) on its recent work in health statistics [E/CN.3/2003/3]. WHO worked with countries to strengthen their capacity to collect and analyse their own data, and to measure and report indicators; it was in the process of establishing additional advisory committees using external experts.

The Commission also had before it reports on health statistics submitted by the Australian Bureau of Statistics [E/CN.3/2003/4], the Central Statistics Office of Botswana [E/CN.3/2003/5 & Corr.1] and Eurostat [E/CN.3/2003/6].

The Commission expressed concern about the lack of consultation, coordination and collaboration between WHO and national statistical offices and regional and international organizations. It emphasized that primary data collection was the responsibility of countries, while international organizations were responsible for assistance in statistical standards development and technical support to countries. The Commission reiterated the need for transparency and openness in methods used to compile and generate health statistics, and for coordination in the use of existing national sources. It expressed support for WHO's work on international classifications, and requested that guidelines be prepared on national health accounts and on the implementation of the automated coding system for recording cause of death.

It also requested WHO, in collaboration with the Statistics Division and other relevant UN bodies, to explore alternative methods of estimating the prevalence of HIV/AIDS. The Commission further requested the creation of a Friends of the Chair group to examine coordination among international organizations and between international organizations and national statistical offices in the production and dissemination of health statistics and to recommend improvements.

Social statistics

The Commission considered the Secretary-General's report on social statistics [E/CN.3/2003/7], which described activities to be carried out by the Statistics Division in response to the expressed need for a more systematic development of social statistics, improved measurement of disability and the preparation of a poverty compendium on best practices. The Commission also had before it the report of the Office for National Statistics of the United Kingdom on the theme "Official statistics and the new economy" (see p. 1292).

The Commission welcomed the Secretary-General's report and endorsed the activities proposed therein, including the holding of an expert group meeting in May, in collaboration with the Siena Group for Social Statistics, on setting the scope of social statistics. That meeting, it underscored, needed to deliver clear outcomes and develop a time frame for achieving set goals; review current coordinating activities, with particular attention to setting good practices and standards; take into account the progress made in the area of development indicators; and consider the implications for social statistics contained in the report of the Office for National Statistics of the United Kingdom on official statistics and the new economy. The Commission supported the collection of disability statistics through the Demographic Yearbook system; emphasized the need to ensure the collection of internationally comparable disability statistics; encouraged the Statistics Division to work with the Washington Group on Disability Measurement (see below) to identify items for which statistical disability information was comparable; and advised the judicious and complementary use of sources of disability statistics, namely, censuses, surveys and administrative records. The Commission endorsed the proposal to prepare a compendium on best practices in poverty statistics, which should address the needs of developing countries and have an applied focus; it stressed the importance of the compendium's timely and progressive release. The Commission urged proactive consultation with other institutions that had expertise in poverty data collection and measurement and recommended the compilation of gender-relevant statistics.

The Expert Group Meeting on Setting the Scope of Social Statistics took place in New York from 6 to 9 May [ESA/STAT/AC.88/04]. The Expert Group Meeting to Review the United Nations Demographic Yearbook System took place in New York from 10 to 14 November [ESA/STAT/AC.91/L4].

Disability measurement

The Commission had before it the report of the Washington Group on Disability Measurement [E/CN.3/2003/8], which discussed the dissemination of the results of the first meeting of the Washington Group and outlined plans for future meetings. The Commission noted that disability was a complex and difficult area of statistical measurement. It advised caution in the policy use of information generated from general measures of disability since the purpose and use of such data might require a range of disability measures.

Other statistical activities

International economic and social classifications

The Commission considered the Secretary-General's report on international economic and social classifications [E/CN.3/2003/20], which outlined how the Commission's 2002 recommendations [YUN 2002, p. 1257] had been addressed. The Commission also had before it background documents on the 2007 revision of ISIC and CPC: a draft concepts paper, and on the report of the Working Group on the Convergence of NACE and NAICS.

The Commission supported the need for the concepts paper to provide a conceptual basis for the ISIC and CPC revisions, and noted that country consultations would facilitate further discussion and refinement. It stressed the need for a link between activity and product classifications, and for continuity through links to previous versions of the classifications; it cautioned against substantial changes. The Commission reiterated its expectation of a positive outcome of the convergence process between NACE and NAICS, welcomed the steps taken and emphasized the need to continue consultations in Europe. It noted the need for funding in some regions to ensure inclusion of the countries concerned in the revision process; recommended that national consultations on classifications involve a variety of users; and noted the need for increased integration of classifications activities, products and occupations. The Commission requested that the International Standard Classification of Occupations (ISCO) revision timetable be reviewed, noting that moving deadlines forward was necessary to meet the needs of the next census rounds, and suggested the creation of a technical sub-group to assist in the ISCO revision.

Follow-up to UN conferences and summits

In response to a 2002 Statistical Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 1258], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the harmonization of indicators and progress towards realizing the MDGs [E/CN.3/2003/21], in the context of the United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] follow-up process [YUN 2001, p. 1278]. The Statistics Division's work had primarily focused on following up the Economic and Social Council's mandate in resolution 2000/27 [YUN 2000, p. 1377] to harmonize and rationalize conference indicators and prepare the statistical base material for the annual report on progress towards the MDGs (see p. 1384). The Commission also had before it the Secretary-General's note transmitting the report of the United Nations Development Programme on the status of MDG country reporting [E/CN.3/2003/22].

The Commission authorized its Chairman to finalize the report on indicators that was requested in Council decision 2002/311 [YUN 2002, p. 1254], requesting that the report emphasize the need for international support for statistical capacity-building in developing countries to meet the needs for development indicators on a sustainable basis. It stressed the need to pay particular attention to indicators for monitoring implementation of the MDG to develop a global partnership for development and recommended that developed countries prepare progress reports on assistance to developing countries for the achievement of the goals contained in the Millennium Declaration, with at least one such report being prepared by each developed country by 2004, in time for the Secretary-General's 2005 comprehensive review. The Commission approved the draft terms of reference for the Standing Advisory Committee on Development Indicators, requested that they be sent to Commission members within two weeks, and decided that the Advisory Committee should submit recommendations for Commission approval. It agreed that further harmonization and prioritization in the field of development indicators were needed, particularly with regard to MDG indicators and the indicator architecture recommended by the Friends of the Chair and endorsed by the Commission in 2002 [ibid., p. 1258]. The Commission emphasized that internationally recommended indicators should be adapted in each country and that national statistical services played a leading role in developing national country reports. It noted the progress in preparing the next ICP round and the value of those data in preparing internationally comparable estimates for the indicator for the MDG of eradicating extreme poverty and hunger. The Commission called on the international statistical services to provide developing countries with more extensive guidance, documentation and training materials on international standards and best practices in data collection and analysis relating to development indicators and monitoring of progress towards the MDGs, and their role in policy planning and implementation.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Economic and Social Council decision 2002/311 [YUN 2002, p. 1254], the Statistical Commission submitted a May report [E/2003/83], in which it presented an overview of its work on development indicators, as reported at the Commission's thirty-third (2002) session [YUN 2002, p. 1258] and as described in the Secretary-General's 2002 report on basic indicators for the integrated and coordinated follow-up to major UN conferences and summits at all levels [ibid., p. 1436]. The report included proposals for future activities.

By decision 2003/227 of 15 July, the Council took note of the report.

Statistical capacity-building

The Commission considered the Secretary-General's report [E/CN.3/2003/23], which described the Statistics Division's technical cooperation activities that sought to build the statistical capacity of countries and regions. The Commission also had before it the annual report of the Steering Committee of the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the Twenty-first Century (PARIS 21) [E/CN.3/2003/24], which provided an update on the work of PARIS 21, the programme of regional workshops and the activities and outputs of the task teams, including the completion of the report on indicators of statistical capacity-building. It also discussed future plans, including the 2003 evaluation of PARIS 21 achievements.

The Commission emphasized the importance of statistical capacity-building, stressing that efforts in that regard needed to be an integral part of development programmes. It also emphasized the importance of effective collaboration of all technical cooperation providers. The Commission endorsed the Statistics Division's technical cooperation programme, took note of the indicator framework for statistical capacity and encouraged PARIS 21 to conduct further testing in member States, and welcomed the offer of PARIS 21 to submit a report on the dissemination of statistics at the Commission's next (2004) session.

Coordination and integration of statistical programmes

The Commission considered the report of the inter-agency meeting on coordination of statistical activities (New York, 17-19 September 2002) [E/CN.3/2003/25], which discussed the need to develop a new coordination system, given that the Administrative Committee on Coordination Subcommittee on Statistical Activities had been disbanded in 2001 [YUN 2002, p. 1259]. The meeting established a Committee for the Coordination of Statistical Activities. Also before the Commission was the Secretary-General's report on the coordination of statistical data collection from countries [E/CN.3/2003/26], which described the Statistics Division's efforts to eliminate duplication in data collection.

The Commission welcomed the establishment of the Committee for the Coordination of Statistical Activities and requested that it work on a common approach to data quality assessment. It endorsed the Statistics Division's and the Committee's approach to reviewing and resolving examples of data collection duplication, and requested them to continue work on that issue. The Commission also encouraged Member States to bring instances of data collection duplication at the international level to the Division's attention.

Follow-up to Economic and Social Council policy decisions

The Commission had before it a note of the Secretary-General on action taken in response to 2002 policy decisions of the Economic and Social Council that were relevant to the Commission's work [E/CN.3/2003/28]. The Commission agreed that the actions outlined in the note were consistent with the Council's requests.

Programme and institutional questions

The Commission endorsed the Statistics Division's draft programme of work for the 2004-2005 biennium [E/CN.3/2003/29] and approved the revised list of expert group meetings and workshops to be held in 2003 [E/CN.3/2003/30].

The Commission approved its multi-year (2002-2005) programme of work for the period 2003-2006, as amended [E/CN.3/2003/31]; took note of the activities of the Commission for Social Development [E/CN.3/2003/32] and the Commission on Sustainable Development [E/CN.3/2003/33] that were relevant to its work; and recommended that its thirty-fifth session be held in New York from 2 to 5 March 2004. It also approved the provisional agenda and documentation for that session.

International Court of Justice

In 2003, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) delivered three Judgments, made 12 Orders and had 26 contentious cases and one request for an advisory opinion pending before it.

In a 31 October address to the General Assembly, the ICJ President explained that many cases had been rendered more complex as a result of preliminary objections by respondents to jurisdiction or admissibility, counterclaims and applications for permission to intervene, and requests for the indication of provisional measures, which were dealt with as a matter of urgency. He stated that in performing its dispute resolution function, the Court, which embodied the principle of equality of all before the law, acted as guardian of international law and ensured the maintenance of a coherent international legal order. The President assured the Assembly that the Court would pursue its efforts to respond to the hopes placed in it.

Judicial work of the Court

During 2003, the Court delivered a Judgment on the merits in the case concerning Oil Platforms (Iran v. United States) and two Judgments on the admissibility of the request for revision, in the cases concerning Application for Revision of the Judgment of 11 July 1996 in the Case concerning Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia), Preliminary Objections (Yugoslavia v. Bosnia and Herzegovina) and Application for Revision of the Judgment of 11 September 1992 in the Case concerning the Land, Island and Maritime Frontier Dispute (El Salvador/Honduras: Nicaragua intervening) (El Salvador v. Honduras).

During the year, the Court was seized of four new cases: Avena and Other Mexican Nationals (Mexico v. United States); Certain Criminal Proceedings in France (Republic of the Congo v. France); Sovereignty over Pedra Branca/Pulau Batu Puteh, Middle Rocks and South Ledge (Malaysia/Singapore); and the General Assembly's request for an advisory opinion on Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. On 4 August, Liberia filed an Application in respect of a dispute with Sierra Leone concerning the indictment and international arrest warrant of 7 March, issued against Charles Ghankay Taylor, President of Liberia, by a decision of the Special Court for Sierra Leone at Freetown. In the Application, Liberia also requested the Court to indicate provisional measures. Regarding the Court's jurisdiction, Liberia referred to its own declaration of 1952 accepting the Court's jurisdiction as compulsory [YUN 1952, p. 150], and stated that "[w]ith a view to Article 38 (5) of the Rules of the Court, [it] expects the Republic of Sierra Leone to accede for the purpose of this Application to the jurisdiction of the Court pursuant to Article 36 (2) of the Statute of the Court . . .". In accordance with Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of the Court, a copy of the Application, together with the request for provisional measures, was transmitted to Sierra Leone. However, as at 31 December, Sierra Leone had not given its consent to the Court's jurisdiction in the case and, accordingly, the Court took no action in the matter.

The Court or its President made Orders on the conduct of the proceedings in the cases concerning Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda); Territorial and Maritime Dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia); Frontier Dispute (Benin/Niger); Avena and Other Mexican Nationals (Mexico v. United States); Certain Criminal Proceedings in France (Republic of the Congo v. France); Sovereignty over Pedra Branca/Pulau Batu Puteh, Middle Rocks and South Ledge (Malaysia/Singapore); and Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (request for advisory opinion). It held hearings in the cases concerning Oil Platforms (Iran v. United States); Frontier Dispute (Benin/Niger); Application for Revision of the Judgment of 11 September 1992 in the Case concerning the Land, Island and Maritime Frontier Dispute (El Salvador/Honduras: Nicaragua intervening) (El Salvador v. Honduras); Avena and Other Mexican Nationals (Mexico v. United States) (provisional measures and merits); and Certain Criminal Proceedings in France (Republic of the Congo v. France) (provisional measures).

In the case of Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom) and (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States), the Court, following notifications by the Parties, discontinued proceedings and removed the case from its List.

During the year, there were no new developments in the cases concerning Legality of Use of Force (Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Canada), (Serbia and Montenegro v. France), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Germany), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Italy), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Netherlands), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Portugal) and (Serbia and Montenegro v. United Kingdom) [YUN 1999, p. 1207], and Certain Property (Liechtenstein v. Germany) [YUN 2001, p. 1194].

ICJ activities in 2003 were covered in two reports to the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2002 to 31 July 2003 [A/58/4 & Corr.1] and 1 August 2003 to 31 July 2004 [A/59/4]. On 31 October, the Assembly took note of the 2002/03 report (decision 58/510).

Questions of interpretation and application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the aerial incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom) and (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States)

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya instituted in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 982] separate proceedings against the United Kingdom and the United States in respect of a dispute over the interpretation and application of the 1971 Montreal Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation [YUN 1971, p. 739], which arose from its alleged involvement in the crash of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on 21 December 1988. In the Applications, Libya referred to the charging and indictment of two of its nationals by the Lord Advocate of Scotland and by a United States Grand Jury for having caused a bomb to be placed aboard Pan Am flight 103, which exploded, caused the aircraft to crash and killed all 270 persons aboard.

The United Kingdom and the United States, on 16 and on 20 June 1995, respectively [YUN 1995, p. 1306], filed preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain Libya's Applications. Public sittings to hear the oral arguments of the Parties on the preliminary objections were held in October 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1313]. In February 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1184], the Court delivered the two judgments on the preliminary objections, by which it rejected the objection to jurisdiction raised by the United Kingdom and the United States; found that it had jurisdiction, on the basis of article 14, paragraph 1, of the Convention, to hear the disputes between Libya and the United Kingdom and Libya and the United States concerning the interpretation or application of the provisions of the Convention; rejected the objection to admissibility derived by the United Kingdom and the United States from Security Council resolutions 748(1992) [YUN 1992, p. 55] and 883

(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 101]; found that the Applications filed by Libya on 3 March 1992 were admissible; and declared that the objection raised by both countries according to which the same Council resolutions had rendered the claims of Libya without object did not, in the circumstances of the case, have an excessively preliminary character.

The time limit of 30 December 1998 fixed by the Court [YUN 1998, p. 1185] for the filing of the Counter-Memorials of the United Kingdom and the United States was extended to 31 March 1999 following a proposal of the United Kingdom and the United States, which referred to diplomatic initiatives [ibid., p. 163], and after the views of Libya had been ascertained. The Counter-Memorials were filed within the time limit.

The Court, by Orders of 29 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1203], authorized the submission of a Reply by Libya and a Rejoinder by the United Kingdom and the United States, which fixed 29 June 2000 as the time limit for the filing of the Reply. The Court fixed no date for the filing of the Rejoinders; the representatives of the Respondent States had expressed the desire that no such date be fixed at that stage of the proceedings, "in view of the new circumstances consequent upon the transfer of the two accused to the Netherlands for trial by a Scottish court". Libya's Reply was filed within the prescribed time limit.

By Orders of 6 September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1211], the President of the Court, taking account of the Parties' views, fixed 3 August 2001 as the time limit for filing the Rejoinder of the United Kingdom and the United States. The Rejoinders were filed within the prescribed time limit [YUN 2001, p. 1183].

By two letters of 9 September 2003, the Governments of Libya and the United Kingdom and of Libya and the United States notified the Court that they had "agreed to discontinue with prejudice the proceedings". Following the notifications, the President of the Court, on 10 September 2003, made an Order in each of the cases, placing on record the discontinuance of the proceedings with prejudice, by agreement of the Parties, and directing the removal of the case from the Court's List.

Oil platforms (Iran v. United States)

Iran instituted proceedings against the United States in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 983] regarding a dispute in which Iran alleged that the destruction by United States warships, on 19 October 1987 and 18 April 1988, of three offshore oil production complexes owned and operated by the National Iranian Oil Company constituted a breach of international law and the 1955 Iran/United States

Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations and Consular Rights. Iran requested the Court to rule on the matter.

Orders of the Court in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 983] and 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1138] fixed time limits for the filing of the Memorial by Iran and for a Counter-Memorial by the United States. Iran filed its Memorial, while the United States filed certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court. In 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1280], Iran presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the United States objections, in accordance with an Order of the Court.

The Court delivered its Judgment in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1178], by which it rejected the preliminary objection of the United States and found that it had jurisdiction to entertain the claims made by Iran.

By an Order of 16 December 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1178], the President of the Court fixed 23 June 1997 as the time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of the United States. Within that time limit, the United States filed the Counter-Memorial and a counterclaim [YUN 1997, p. 1313].

In November and December 1997, respectively, Iran and the United States submitted written observations on the question of the admissibility of the United States counterclaim.

In 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1185], the Court found that the counterclaim presented by the United States in its Counter-Memorial was admissible. It further directed Iran to submit a Reply and the United States to submit a Rejoinder, fixing the time limits for those pleadings at 10 September 1998 and 23 November 1999, respectively. Also in 1998, the Vice-President of the Court, as Acting President, twice extended the time limits for Iran's Reply and the United States Rejoinder, which finally were set at 10 March 1999 for Iran's Reply and 23 November 2000 for the United States Rejoinder. Iran's Reply was filed within the time limit. However, in September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1211], the President of the Court extended, at the request of the United States and taking into account the agreement between the Parties, the time limit for filing the United States Rejoinder to 23 March 2001. The Rejoinder was filed within the extended time limit.

By an Order of 28 August 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1183], the Vice-President of the Court, taking account of the agreement of the Parties, authorized Iran's submission of an additional pleading relating solely to the United States counterclaim and fixed 24 September 2001 as the time limit for the filing of that pleading. Iran filed the additional pleading within the prescribed time limit.

At the conclusion of public hearings on the merits of the case, held from 17 February to 7 March 2003, the Parties presented their final submissions. Iran requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: the United States breached its obligations to Iran under the 1955 Treaty, and bore responsibility for the attacks; the United States was accordingly under obligation to make full reparation to Iran in a form and amount to be determined by the Court, the right being reserved to Iran to introduce and present to the Court a precise evaluation of the reparation owed, and any other remedy the Court might deem appropriate; and the United States counterclaim be dismissed. The United States asked the Court to adjudge and declare that it did not breach its obligations to Iran under the 1955 Treaty, and Iran's claims were accordingly dismissed. With respect to its counterclaim, it asked the Court to adjudge and declare, rejecting all submissions to the contrary, that Iran, in attacking vessels in the Gulf with mines and missiles and otherwise engaging in military actions that were dangerous and detrimental to commerce and navigation between the territories of the United States and Iran, had breached its obligations to the United States under the 1955 Treaty, and was accordingly under an obligation to make full reparation to the United States in a form and amount to be determined by the Court.

In its Judgment of 6 November 2003, the Court, by 14 votes to 2, found that the actions of the United States against the Iranian oil platforms could not be justified as measures necessary to protect the essential security interests of the United States under the 1955 Treaty, as interpreted in the light of international law on the use of force; the Court could not, however, uphold Iran's submission that those actions constituted a breach of the United States obligations under the Treaty regarding freedom of commerce between the Parties' territories, and, accordingly, Iran's claim for reparations also could not be upheld. By 15 votes to 1, the Court found that the United States claim concerning the breach of Iran's obligations under the 1955 Treaty, regarding freedom of commerce and navigation between the Parties' territories, could not be upheld and, accordingly, that the United States counterclaim for reparation also could not be upheld.

Appended to the Judgment were: declarations by Vice-President Ranjeva and Judge Koroma; separate opinions by Judges Buergenthal, Higgins, Parra-Aranguren, Kooijmans, Owada and Simma; dissenting opinions by Judges Al-Khasawneh and Elaraby; and a separate opinion by Judge ad hoc Rigaux.

Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro)

Bosnia and Herzegovina instituted proceedings in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1138] against Serbia and Montenegro, then known as the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959]. The Court delivered its Judgment in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1179], rejecting the preliminary objections raised by Serbia and Montenegro in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1307]. In 1997, Serbia and Montenegro filed a Counter-Memorial that included counterclaims against Bosnia and Herzegovina [YUN 1997, p. 1315]. Bosnia and Herzegovina filed a Reply in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1186], and Serbia and Montenegro filed a Rejoinder in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1204].

By an Order of 10 September 2001, the President of the Court placed on record the withdrawal by Serbia and Montenegro of the counterclaims submitted in its Counter-Memorial [YUN 2001, p. 1184].

Serbia and Montenegro had submitted to the Court, on 4 May 2001, a document entitled "Initiative to the Court to reconsider ex officio Jurisdiction over Yugoslavia". Submissions presented in the document were, firstly, that the Court had no jurisdiction ratione personae over Serbia and Montenegro and, secondly, that the Court should suspend proceedings regarding the merits of the case until a decision on the jurisdictional issue had been rendered. In a 12 June 2003 letter, the ICJ Registrar informed the Parties that the Court had decided it could not effect a suspension of the proceedings in the circumstances of the case.

Application for Revision of the Judgment of 11 July 1996 concerning Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia), Preliminary Objections (Yugoslavia v. Bosnia and Herzegovina)

On 24 April 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1184], the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY), currently known as Serbia and Montenegro, filed an Application for revision of the Judgment delivered by the Court on 11 July 1996 in the case concerning Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia), Preliminary Objections [YUN 1996, p. 1179] (see above).

Public hearings were held on the question of the admissibility of the Application for revision in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1264].

On 3 February 2003, the Court delivered its Judgment. By 10 votes to 3, it found that the Application submitted by FRY for revision of the Judgment of 11 July 1996 was inadmissible. Judge Koroma appended a separate opinion to the Judgment; Judge Vereshchetin a dissenting opinion; and Judge Rezek a declaration. Judges ad hoc Mahiou and Dimitrijevic appended a separate opinion and a dissenting opinion, respectively.

Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (Guinea v. Democratic Republic of the Congo)

In 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1190], Guinea instituted proceedings against the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) by an "Application with a view to diplomatic protection", in which it requested the Court to condemn the DRC for the grave breaches of international law perpetrated upon the person of a Guinean national, Ahmadou Sadio Diallo.

According to Guinea, Mr. Diallo, a businessman who had been a resident of the DRC for 32 years, was "unlawfully imprisoned by the authorities of that State" for two and a half months, "divested from his important investments, companies, bank accounts, movable and immovable properties, then expelled". The expulsion took place on 2 February 1996, as a result of his attempts to recover sums owed to him by the DRC (especially by Gécamines, a State enterprise and mining monopoly) and by oil companies operating in that country (Zaire Shell, Zaire Mobil and Zaire Fina), by virtue of contracts concluded with businesses owned by him, namely Africom-Zaire and Africacontainers-Zaire.

In 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1206], the Court fixed 11 September 2000 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Guinea and 11 September 2001 for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by the DRC. By an Order of 8 September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1213], the President of the Court, at Guinea's request and after the views of the other Party had been ascertained, extended to 23 March 2001 and 4 October 2002 the respective time limits for the Memorial and Counter-Memorial. The Memorial was filed within the extended time limit.

On 3 October 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1266], within the time limit as extended for the deposit of its Counter-Memorial, the DRC filed certain preliminary objections to the Court's jurisdiction and the admissibility of Guinea's Application; the proceedings on the merits were accordingly suspended, in accordance with Article 79 of the Rules of the Court. By an Order of 7 November 2002 [ibid.], the Court fixed 7 July 2003 as the time limit within which Guinea might present a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by the DRC.

The written statement was filed within the time limit.

Armed activities on the territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda)

The DRC instituted proceedings against Burundi, Uganda and Rwanda on 23 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1209] for acts of armed aggression perpetrated in flagrant violation of the Charter of the United Nations and the Charter of the Organization of African Unity (OAU). In 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1191], the DRC notified the Court that it wished to discontinue the proceedings against Burundi and Rwanda. The President of the Court, in Orders of 30 January 2001, placed the discontinuance by the DRC on record and ordered the removal of the case from the List. In its Applications, the DRC contended that "such armed aggression . . . involved inter alia violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the [DRC], violations of international humanitarian law and massive human rights violations". The DRC sought the cessation of the aggression against it; reparation for acts of intentional destruction and looting; and restitution of national property and resources appropriated for the benefit of the respective respondent States.

In the case against Uganda, the Court, taking into account an agreement of the Parties in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], fixed 21 July 2000 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by the DRC and 21 April 2001 for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by Uganda. The Memorial of the DRC was filed within the prescribed time limit.

On 19 June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1218], the DRC requested the Court to indicate provisional measures requiring, among other things, the withdrawal of Uganda's army from Kisangani and the cessation of military and other activities by Uganda within the territory of the DRC. Public sittings to hear the oral observations of the Parties on the request for the indication of provisional measures were held on 26 and 28 June 2000. On 1 July 2000 [ibid.], the Court rendered its Order on the DRC's request for provisional measures, which stated that both Parties must, forthwith, prevent and refrain from any action, particularly armed action, which might prejudice the rights of the other Party in respect of whatever judgment the Court might render, or which might aggravate or extend the dispute before the Court or make it more difficult to resolve; both Parties must, forthwith, take measures to comply with all their obligations under international law; and both Parties must, forthwith, take measures to ensure full respect within the zone of conflict for fundamental human rights and for the applicable provisions of humanitarian law. Judges Oda and Koroma appended declarations to the Order.

Uganda filed its Counter-Memorial, which contained counterclaims, within the time limit set by the Court's Order of 21 October 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210].

By an Order of 29 November 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1192], the Court found that two of the counterclaims submitted by Uganda against the DRC were "admissible as such and [formed] part of the current proceedings", but that the third was not. In view of those conclusions, the Court considered it necessary for the DRC to file a Reply and Uganda a Rejoinder, addressing the claims of both Parties, and fixed 29 May 2002 as the time limit for the filing of the Reply and 29 November 2002 for the Rejoinder. Further, in order to ensure strict equality between the Parties, the Court reserved the right of the DRC to present its views in writing a second time on the Uganda counterclaims, in an additional pleading to be the subject of a subsequent Order. The Reply was filed within the time limit [YUN 2002, p. 1268]. By an Order of 7 November 2002 [ibid.], the Court extended the time limit for the filing by Uganda of its Rejoinder to 6 December 2002. The Rejoinder was filed within the extended time limit.

By an Order of 29 January 2003, the Court authorized the DRC's submission of an additional pleading relating solely to the counterclaims submitted by Uganda, and fixed 28 February 2003 as the time limit for its filing. The written pleading was filed within the fixed time limit. The Court then fixed 10 November 2003 as the date for the opening of the hearings.

In a 5 November 2003 letter, the DRC raised the question of whether the hearings might be adjourned to a later date, in April 2004, to enable the diplomatic negotiations engaged by the Parties to be conducted in an atmosphere of calm. A 6 November 2003 letter by Uganda indicated that it supported the proposal and adopted the DRC's request.

By a 6 November 2003 letter, the ICJ Registrar informed the Parties that the Court, acting under Article 54, paragraph 1, of the Rules of the Court, and taking account of the representations made to it by the Parties, had decided that the opening of the oral proceedings would be postponed and that it was impossible to fix a date in April 2004 for the adjourned hearings. As the Court's judicial calendar until well into 2004 had been adopted some time before, a new date for the opening of oral proceedings would have to be fixed subsequently.

Application of the genocide convention (Croatia v. Serbia and Montenegro)

Croatia instituted proceedings against Serbia and Montenegro, then known as FRY, on 2 July 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210] for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959], said to have been committed between 1991 and 1995. In its Application, Croatia contended that by "directly controlling the activity of its armed forces, intelligence agents, and various paramilitary detachments, on the territory of . . . Croatia, in the Knin region, eastern and western Slovenia, and Dalmatia, [Serbia and Montenegro] is liable [for] the 'ethnic cleansing' of Croatian citizens from these areas . . . and is required to provide reparation for the resulting damage". It further alleged that, "by directing, encouraging, and urging Croatian citizens of Serb ethnicity in the Knin region to evacuate the area in 1995, as . . . Croatia reasserted its legitimate governmental authority . . . [Serbia and Montenegro] engaged in conduct amounting to a second round of 'ethnic cleansing'". Croatia invoked the jurisdiction of the Court based on Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute and on article IX of the Convention. Croatia reserved the right to introduce to the Court at a future date a precise evaluation of the damages.

By an Order of 14 September 1999, the Court took account of an agreement of the Parties expressed on 13 September and fixed 14 March 2000 as the time limit for the filing of the Memorial of Croatia and 14 September 2000 for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of Serbia and Montenegro.

In 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1219], at Croatia's request, the President of the Court twice extended the time limits, which finally were set at 14 March 2001 for the Memorial of Croatia and at 16 September 2002 for the Counter-Memorial of Serbia and Montenegro. The Memorial of Croatia was filed within the time limit thus extended. On 11 September 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1268], within the extended time limit for filing its Counter-Memorial, Serbia and Montenegro filed certain preliminary objections to jurisdiction and admissibility. The proceedings on the merits were suspended, in accordance with Article 79 of the Rules of the Court.

On 25 April 2003, within the time limit fixed by an Order of the Court of 14 November 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1268], Croatia filed a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by Serbia and Montenegro.

Maritime delimitation (Nicaragua v. Honduras)

In 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Honduras in respect of a dispute concerning the delimitation of the maritime zones appertaining to each of those States in the Caribbean Sea. In its Application, Nicaragua stated that it had maintained for decades the position that its maritime Caribbean border with Honduras had not been determined, while the position of Honduras allegedly was that a delimitation line was fixed by the King of Spain in an Arbitral Award of 23 December 1906, which was found valid and binding by ICJ on 18 November 1960 [YUN 1960, p. 536]. According to Nicaragua, the position adopted by Honduras had brought repeated confrontations and mutual capture of vessels of both nations in and around the general border area, and diplomatic negotiations had failed. Nicaragua founded the jurisdiction of the Court on declarations under Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Court's Statute, by which both States accepted the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court, and also article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement (officially known as the "Pact of Bogotá"), signed on 30 April 1948, to which both Nicaragua and Honduras were parties.

Nicaragua requested the Court to determine the course of the single maritime boundary between areas of territorial sea, continental shelf and exclusive economic zone appertaining to Nicaragua and Honduras.

By an Order of 21 March 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1219], the Court, taking into account the agreement of the Parties, fixed 21 March 2001 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Nicaragua and 21 March 2002 for the filing of the Counter-Memorial by Honduras. The Memorial [YUN 2001, p. 1193] and Counter-Memorial [YUN 2002, p. 1269] were filed within the prescribed time limits. Copies of the pleadings and annexed documents were made available to Colombia [YUN 2001, p. 1193] and Jamaica [YUN 2002, p. 1269], at their request.

By an Order of 13 June 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1269], the Court authorized the submission of a Reply by Nicaragua and a Rejoinder by Honduras and fixed 13 January 2003 and 13 August 2003, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of those pleadings. The Reply of Nicaragua and the Rejoinder of Honduras were filed within the fixed time limits.

Territorial and maritime dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia)

In 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1195], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Colombia in respect of a dispute concerning "a group of related legal issues subsisting” between the two States “concerning title to territory and maritime delimitation”. In its Application, Nicaragua requested the Court to adjudge and declare, first, that Nicaragua had sovereignty over the islands of Providencia, San Andres and Santa Catalina and all the appurtenant islands and keys, and also over the Roncador, Serrana, Serranilla and Quitasueño keys (insofar as they were capable of appropriation); and, second, in the light of the determinations concerning the title requested above, the Court was asked further to determine the course of the single maritime boundary between the areas of continental shelf and exclusive economic zone appertaining to Nicaragua and Colombia, in accordance with equitable principles and relevant circumstances recognized by general international law as applicable to such a delimitation of a single maritime boundary. Nicaragua reserved the right to claim compensation for elements of unjust enrichment consequent upon Colombian possession of the islands of San Andres and Providencia, as well as the keys and maritime spaces up to the 82 meridian, in the absence of lawful title. It also reserved the right to claim compensation for interference with fishing vessels of Nicaraguan nationality or vessels licensed by Nicaragua.

By an Order of 26 February 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1271], the Court fixed 28 April 2003 and 28 June 2004, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Nicaragua and of a Counter-Memorial by Colombia. The Memorial of Nicaragua was filed within the time limit.

On 21 July 2003, Colombia filed preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court; under Article 79 of the Rules of the Court, proceedings on the merits were suspended accordingly. By an Order of 24 September 2003, the Court fixed 26 January 2004 as the time limit for the filing by Nicaragua of a written statement of its observations and submissions on Colombia’s preliminary objections.

Frontier dispute (Benin/Niger)

In 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1271], Benin and the Niger jointly notified the Court of a Special Agreement, which was signed between them on 15 June 2001 and entered into force on 11 April 2002. Under article 1 of the Agreement, the Parties agreed to submit their boundary dispute to a chamber to be formed by the Court, pursuant to Article 26, paragraph 2, of the Court’s Statute, and that each of them would choose a judge ad hoc. Article 2 of the Agreement stated that the Court was requested to determine the course of the boundary between Benin and the Niger in the River Niger sector; specify which State owned each of the islands in the River Niger, in particular Lété Island; and determine the course of the boundary between the two States in the River Mekrou sector. Article 10 contained a “special undertaking” as follows: “Pending the judgment of the Chamber, the Parties undertake to preserve peace, security and quiet among the peoples of the two States”. By an Order of 27 November 2002 [ibid.], the Court decided to accede to the Parties’ request and form a special chamber of five judges; the Court formed a Chamber of three members of the Court together with two judges ad hoc chosen by the Parties. The Court fixed 27 August 2003 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by each Party. The Memorials were filed within the time limit.

By an Order of 11 September 2003, the President of the Chamber fixed 28 May 2004 as the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by each of the Parties. On 20 November 2003, the Chamber held its first public sitting to enable the two judges ad hoc to make the solemn declaration required by the Statute and the Rules of the Court.

Armed activities on the territory of the Congo (New Application: 2002) (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Rwanda)

On 28 May 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1271], the DRC filed an Application instituting proceedings against Rwanda in respect of a dispute concerning “massive, serious and flagrant violations of human rights and of international humanitarian law” resulting “from acts of armed aggression perpetrated by Rwanda on the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in flagrant breach of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the [latter], as guaranteed by the United Nations and OAU Charters”. The DRC requested the Court to adjudge and declare that, by violating human rights, Rwanda had violated and was violating the UN Charter as well as articles 3 and 4 of the OAC Charter; that it further had violated a number of instruments protecting human rights; that, by shooting down a Boeing 727 owned by Congo Airlines on 9 October 1998 in Kindu, thereby causing the death of 40 civilians, Rwanda had also violated certain conventions regarding international civil aviation; and that, by engaging in killing, slaughter, rape, throat-slitting and crucifying, Rwanda was guilty of genocide against more than 3.5 million Congolese, including the victims of massacres in the city of Kisangani, and had violated the sacred right to life provided for in certain instruments protecting human rights, as well as the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide [YUN 1948-49, p. 959]. It further asked the Court to adjudge and declare that all Rwandan armed forces should be withdrawn from Congolese territory and that the DRC was entitled to compensation. In its Application, the DRC, in order to found the jurisdiction of the Court, relied on a number of compromissory clauses in treaties.

Also on 28 May 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1272], the DRC submitted a request for the indication of provisional measures. Following public hearings on the request, the Court delivered its Order, by which, having found that it had no prima facie jurisdiction, it rejected the request of the DRC. In the Order, the Court also rejected the submissions by Rwanda seeking the removal of the case from the Court's List.

By an Order of 18 September 2002 [ibid.], the Court decided, in accordance with Article 79, paragraphs 2 and 3, of the revised Rules of the Court, that the written pleadings would first be addressed to the questions of the jurisdiction of the Court and the admissibility of the Application, and fixed 20 January 2003 as the time limit for the Memorial of Rwanda and 20 May 2003 for the DRC's Counter-Memorial. The pleadings were filed within the time limits.

Revision of the Judgment of 11 September 1992 in the Case concerning the Land, Island and Maritime Frontier Dispute (El Salvador/Honduras: Nicaragua intervening) (El Salvador v. Honduras)

In September 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1272], El Salvador filed an Application for revision of a Judgment delivered in 1992 by the Chamber of the Court in the case concerning Land, Island and Maritime Frontier Dispute (El Salvador/Honduras: Nicaragua intervening) [YUN 1992, p. 983]. El Salvador indicated that the "sole purpose of the application is to seek revision of the course of the boundary decided by the Court for the sixth disputed sector of the land boundary between El Salvador and Honduras". El Salvador based its Application for revision on Article 61, paragraph 1, of the ICJ Statute. El Salvador requested the Court to proceed to form the chamber that would hear the Application, bearing in mind the terms agreed upon by El Salvador and Honduras in a Special Agreement of 24 May 1986 [YUN 1986, p. 984]; to declare the Application of El Salvador admissible; and, following the admission of the Application, to proceed to the revision of the 1992 Judgment.

By an Order of 27 November 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1273], the Court, after its President had been informed of the view of the Parties on the composition of the chamber and had reported to it, decided to accede to the request of both Parties that it should form a special chamber of five judges, and formed a Chamber of three members of the Court together with the two judges ad hoc chosen by the Parties. The Court further fixed 1 April 2003 as the time limit for the filing of written observations by Honduras on the admissibility of the Application for revision. The observations were deposited within the prescribed time limit.

Hearings on the admissibility of the request for revision were held from 8 to 12 September 2003. At the conclusion of the hearings, the Parties presented submissions to the Court. El Salvador requested the Chamber, rejecting all contrary claims and submissions, to declare that its Application was admissible based on new facts of such a nature as to leave the case open to revision, pursuant to Article 61 of the ICJ Statute, and, once the request was admitted, to proceed to a revision of the 1992 Judgment, so that a new judgment fixed the boundary line in the sixth disputed sector of the land boundary between El Salvador and Honduras as specified by El Salvador in its submission. Honduras, in its submission, requested the Chamber to declare the inadmissibility of El Salvador's Application for revision.

On 18 December 2003, the Chamber delivered its Judgment, which, by 4 votes to 1, found that the Application submitted by El Salvador for revision of the 1992 Judgment was inadmissible.

Judge ad hoc Paolillo appended a dissenting opinion to the Judgment.

Avena and other Mexican nationals (Mexico v. United States)

On 9 January 2003, Mexico instituted proceedings before the Court against the United States in a dispute concerning alleged violations of articles 5 and 36 of the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] with respect to 54 Mexican nationals who had been sentenced to death in the States of Arizona, Arkansas, California, Florida, Illinois, Nevada, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon and Texas.

In its Application, Mexico maintained that the 54 cases (later adjusted by Mexico to 52) illustrated the systemic nature of the United States violation of its obligation under article 36 of the Vienna Convention to inform nationals of Mexico of their right to consular assistance and to provide relief adequate to redress such a violation. Mexico claimed that in at least 49 of the cases, it had found no evidence that the competent United States authorities attempted to comply with article 36 before Mexico's nationals were tried, convicted and sentenced to death. It further noted that in four cases, some attempt was apparently made to comply with article 36, but that the authorities still failed to provide the required notification "without delay"; and in one case, the detained national was informed of his rights to consular notification and access in connection with immigration proceedings, but not in connection with pending capital charges. The Application briefly described each case, catalogued by state. Mexico invoked as a basis for the Court's jurisdiction article I of the Vienna Convention's Optional Protocol concerning the Compulsory Settlement of Disputes [YUN 1963, p. 312], which provided that "disputes arising out of the interpretation or application of the Convention shall lie within the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice".

Also on 9 January, Mexico, "in view of the extreme gravity and immediacy of the threat that authorities in the United States will execute a Mexican citizen in violation of obligations the United States owes to [it]", filed an urgent request for the indication of provisional measures, asking that, pending final judgment in the case, the Court indicate that the United States should take all measures necessary to ensure that no Mexican national was executed and that no execution dates were set for any Mexican national, report to the Court the actions it had taken in that respect, and ensure no action was taken that might prejudice the rights of Mexico or its nationals with respect to any decision the Court might render on the merits of the case. At hearings held on 21 January, Mexico confirmed its request for the indication of provisional measures, while the United States asked the Court to reject the request and not to indicate any such measures.

On 5 February, the Court unanimously adopted an Order indicating provisional measures. In the Order, it decided that the United States should take "all measures necessary" to ensure that César Roberto Fierro Reyna, Roberto Moreno Ramos and Osvaldo Torres Aguilera, of Mexican nationality, were not executed pending a final judgment of the Court; the United States should inform the Court of all measures taken to implement the Order; and the Court would remain seized of the matters which formed the subject of the Order until it had rendered its final judgment.

A further separate Order of 5 February, taking into account the views of the Parties, fixed 6 June as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Mexico and 6 October as the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by the United States. By an Order of 22 May, the President of the Court, at the joint request of the Parties, extended the time limits to 20 June for the Memorial of Mexico and to 3 November for the Counter-Memorial of the United States. The Memorial and Counter-Memorial were filed within the extended time limits.

At the conclusion of public hearings held from 15 to 19 December, the Parties presented final submissions to the Court. In its submission, Mexico requested the Court to adjudge and declare: that the United States, in arresting, detaining, trying, convicting and sentencing the 52 Mexican nationals on death row, had violated its international legal obligations to Mexico, in its own right and in the exercise of its right to diplomatic protection of its nationals, by failing to inform, without delay, the nationals after their arrest of their right to consular notification and access under article 36 (1) (b) of the 1963 Vienna Convention, and by depriving Mexico of its right to provide consular protection and the nationals' rights to receive such protection as Mexico would provide under article 36 (1) (a) and (c) of the Convention (the obligation in article 36 (1) of the Vienna Convention required notification of consular rights and a reasonable opportunity for consular access before the competent authorities of the receiving State took any action potentially detrimental to the foreign nationals' rights); and that the United States had violated its obligations under article 36 (2) of the Vienna Convention by failing to provide meaningful and effective review and reconsideration of convictions and sentences impaired by a violation of article 36 (1), by substituting for the review and the reconsideration clemency proceedings and by applying the "procedural default" doctrine and other municipal law doctrines that failed to attach legal significance to an article 36 (1) violation on its own terms. Pursuant to the injuries suffered by Mexico in its own right and in the exercise of diplomatic protection of its nationals, Mexico also asked the Court to adjudge and declare that: Mexico was entitled to full reparation for the injuries in the form of restitutio in integrum; such restitution consisted of the obligation to restore the status quo ante by annulling or otherwise depriving of full force or effect the convictions and sentences of all 52 Mexican nationals; the restitution also included the obligation to take all measures necessary to ensure that a prior violation of article 36 would not affect the subsequent proceedings; to the extent that any of the 52 convictions or sentences were not annulled, the United States would provide, by means of its own choosing, meaningful and effective review and reconsideration of the convictions and sentences of the 52 nationals, and the obligation could not be satisfied by means of clemency proceedings or if any municipal law, rule or doctrine inconsistent with Mexico's request regarding the United States obligations under article 36 (1) and (2) of the Vienna Convention was applied (see p. 1307); and the United States should cease violations of article 36 with regard to Mexico and its 52 nationals and should provide appropriate guarantees and assurances that it would take measures to achieve increased compliance with article 36 (1) and to ensure compliance with article 36 (2).

The United States, on the basis of the facts and arguments it had made in its Counter-Memorial and in the proceedings, requested that the Court, taking into account that the United States had conformed its conduct to the Court's 2001 Judgment in the case concerning LaGrand (Germany v. United States) [YUN 2001, p. 1188], with respect not only to German nationals but also, consistent with the declaration of the President of the Court in that case [ibid., p. 1189], to all detained foreign nationals, adjudge and declare that Mexico's claims were dismissed.

Certain criminal proceedings in France (Republic of the Congo v. France)

On 9 December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1263], the Republic of the Congo filed an Application by which it sought to institute proceedings against France seeking the annulment of the investigation and prosecution measures taken by the French judicial authorities further to a complaint for crimes against humanity and torture filed by various associations against the President of the Congo, Denis Sassou Nguesso, the Congolese Minister of the Interior, Pierre Oba, and other individuals including General Norbert Dabira, Inspector General of the Congolese Armed Forces. The Application further stated that, in connection with the proceedings, an investigating judge of the Meaux (France) tribunal de grande instance had issued a warrant for the President of the Congo to be examined as witness.

The Congo contended that by "attributing to itself universal jurisdiction in criminal matters and by arrogating to itself the power to prosecute and try the Minister of the Interior of a foreign State for crimes allegedly committed by him in connection with the exercise of his powers for the maintenance of public order in his country", France violated "the principle that a State may not, in breach of the principle of sovereign equality among all Members of the United Nations . . . exercise its authority on the territory of another State". The Congo further submitted that, in issuing a warrant instructing police officers to examine the President of the Congo as witness in the case, France violated "the criminal immunity of a foreign head of State, an international customary rule recognized by the jurisprudence of the Court".

In its Application, the Congo indicated that it sought to found the jurisdiction of the Court, pursuant to Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of the Court, "on the consent of the French Republic, which will certainly be given". In accordance with that provision, the Application by the Congo was transmitted to France and no further action was taken in the proceedings at that stage.

By an 8 April letter, France stated that it "consent[ed] to the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the Application pursuant to Article 38, paragraph 5". That consent made it possible to enter the case in the Court's List and to open the proceedings. In its letter, France added that its consent to the Court's jurisdiction applied strictly within the limits "of the claims formulated by the Republic of the Congo" and that "Article 2 of the Treaty of Co-operation signed on 1 January 1974 by the French Republic and the People's Republic of the Congo, to which the latter refers in its Application, does not constitute a basis of jurisdiction for the Court in the present case".

The Application of the Congo was accompanied by a request for the indication of a provisional measure "seek[ing] an order for the immediate suspension of the proceedings being conducted by the investigating judge of the Meaux tribunal de grande instance".

Taking into account the consent given by France and in accordance with Article 74, paragraph 3, of the Rules of the Court, the President of the Court fixed 28 April as the date for the opening of the public hearings on the request for the indication of a provisional measure submitted by the Congo. The hearings were held on 28 and 29 April.

On 17 June, the President of the Court read the Order, by which the Court found, by 14 votes to 1, that the circumstances, as they presented themselves to the Court, were not such as to require the exercise of its power under Article 41 of the Statute to indicate provisional measures. Judges Koroma and Vereshchetin appended a joint separate opinion to the Order, and Judge ad hoc de Cara a dissenting opinion.

By an Order of 11 July, the President of the Court fixed 11 December as the time limit for the Memorial of the Congo and 11 May 2004 as the time limit for the Counter-Memorial of France. The Memorial was filed within the time limit.

Sovereignty over Pedra Branca/Pulau Batu Puteh, Middle Rocks and South Ledge (Malaysia/Singapore)

On 24 July, Malaysia and Singapore jointly notified the Court of a Special Agreement that was signed between them on 6 February at Putrajaya, Malaysia, and entered into force on 9 May.

In article 2 of the Special Agreement, the Parties requested the Court to determine whether sovereignty over Pedra Branca/Pulau Batu Puteh, Middle Rocks and South Ledge belonged to Malaysia or Singapore. In article 6, the Parties agreed to accept the judgment of the Court as final and binding upon them. The Parties further set out their views on the procedure to be followed.

By an Order of 1 September, the President of the Court, taking into account the provisions of article 4 of the Special Agreement, fixed 25 March 2004 and 25 January 2005 as the respective time limits for the filing, by each of the Parties, of a Memorial and of a Counter-Memorial.

Legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory

In response to General Assembly resolution ES-10/14 of 8 December 2003 (see p. 480), which requested the Court to urgently render an advisory opinion on the legal consequences arising from the construction of the wall being built by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, ICJ, by an Order of 19 December, decided that the United Nations and its Member States were likely, in accordance with Article 66, paragraph 2, of the ICJ Statute, to be able to furnish information on all aspects raised by the question submitted to the Court for an advisory opinion, and fixed 30 January 2004 as the time limit within which written statements might be submitted, in accordance with Article 66, paragraph 4, of the Statute. By the same Order, the Court further decided that, in the light of resolution ES-10/14 and the report of the Secretary-General transmitted with the request (see p. 478), and taking into account the fact that the Assembly had granted Palestine a special status of observer and that the latter was co-sponsor of the draft resolution requesting the advisory opinion, Palestine might also submit a written statement on the question within the time limit. Also by the Order, the Court decided, in accordance with Article 105, paragraph 4, of the Rules of the Court, to hold public hearings, during which oral statements and comments might be presented to it by the United Nations and its Member States, regardless of whether or not they had submitted written statements, and fixed 23 February 2004 as the date for the opening of the hearings. In the Order, the Court also decided that, for the reasons set out above, Palestine might take part in the hearings. Lastly, it invited the United Nations, its Member States and Palestine to inform the Registry, by 13 February 2004 at the latest, if they intended to take part in the hearings. By letters of 19 December 2003, the Registrar informed them of the Court's decisions and transmitted to them a copy of the Order.

Other questions

1999 advisory opinion

On 22 May [E/2003/78], the Secretary-General, further to his letters of 15 December 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1212] and 26 April 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1273], informed the President and the members of the Economic and Social Council that he remained concerned that the United Nations had not been reimbursed for the legal expenses of Dato' Param Cumaraswamy, a Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights, in accordance with ICJ's advisory opinion of 29 April 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1211]. The legal expenses were incurred as a result of suits filed in Malaysia against Mr. Cumaraswamy in 1996 and 1997, which were dismissed by the Kuala Lumpur High Court. It was the considered view of the United Nations that the costs imposed by the Malaysian courts, within the meaning of the advisory opinion, included all legal expenses imposed on Mr. Cumaraswamy by virtue of the court orders and proceedings in the Malaysian courts, and Malaysia was ultimately responsible for those expenses. The United Nations maintained that, in order to fulfil its obligations to hold Mr. Cumaraswamy financially harmless, Malaysia should reimburse the United Nations the amount of $118,145.91 for the legal expenses it had paid on his behalf.

Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes

In August [A/58/295], the Secretary-General reported on the activities and status of the Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes through ICJ since the submission of his 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 1274]. The Fund, established in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 818], provided financial assistance to States for expenses incurred in connection with a dispute submitted to ICJ by way of a special agreement or the execution of a judgment resulting from such an agreement.

The Fund received no applications during the period under review (1 January 2002-30 June 2003). Two States contributed to the Fund, which, as at 31 July, had a total balance of $1,863,162, excluding awards already paid.

Chapter II

International tribunals

In 2003, the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (ICTY) moved forward with its strategy to complete investigations in 2004 and first instance trials in 2008. In May, the Security Council amended the ICTY statute to permit ad litem judges, during the period of their appointments to a trial, also to adjudicate in pre-trial proceedings in other cases. The Council reappointed Carla Del Ponte as the Tribunal's Prosecutor for a four-year term with effect from 15 September 2003.

During the year, the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 (ICTR) rendered five judgements, the greatest number delivered in a single year. The Council amended the ICTR statute in order to increase the number of ad litem judges who might be used at any given time from four to nine and to empower them to adjudicate in pre-trial proceedings in cases other than those they had been appointed to try. The Council further amended the ICTR statute to establish a new position of ICTR Prosecutor, and subsequently appointed Hassan Bubacar Jallow as Prosecutor for a four-year term with effect from 15 September 2003. Until then, the ICTY Prosecutor had also acted as the ICTR Prosecutor.

International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

In 2003, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) moved forward with its completion strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1275], adopting internal reforms to ensure compliance with Security Council resolution 1503(2003), adopted in August (see p. 1330). It also continued to prepare the States in the Balkan region for the prosecution of war crimes cases. It reached agreement with the Office of the High Representative for Bosnia and Herzegovina (see p. 399) regarding the establishment of a special chamber for war crimes prosecutions in the State Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina. That special chamber, endorsed on 12 June by the Steering Board of the Peace Implementation Council, was expected to enable ICTY to begin transferring some cases of mid- and lower-level accused by the end of 2004 or early 2005.

The Council, by resolution 1481(2003) (see p. 1315), amended the ICTY statute to permit ad litem judges to do pre-trial work in addition to participating in the trials to which they were assigned.

The judges amended the ICTY Rules of Procedure and Evidence to clarify the standards for the referral of cases to competent national courts; to permit the replacement of a judge in certain cases of judicial disability, even without the consent of the accused, when the interests of justice so warranted; and to give the Trial Chambers greater power to limit the amount of evidence presented by the prosecution.

During the year, the ICTY judicial database, providing the judges, the Chambers, the Registry and the Office of the Prosecutor with electronic access to court records of most of the cases, became operational.

The activities of ICTY, established by Security Council resolution 827(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 440], were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2002 to 31 July 2003 [A/58/297-S/2003/829 & Corr.1] and 1 August 2003 to 31 July 2004 [A/59/215-S/2004/627]. On 9 October, the Assembly took note of the 2002/03 report (decision 58/505).

The Chambers

The judicial activities of the Tribunal's three Trial Chambers, which ran six trials simultaneously throughout the year, and of its Appeals Chamber included first instance and appeals proceedings—against judgements, interlocutory decisions and State requests for review—proceedings regarding the Tribunal's primacy and contempt cases. ICTY had a total of 25 judges—16 permanent judges, including 2 ICTR judges serving in the Appeals Chamber, and 9 ad litem judges.

New arrests, surrenders and indictments

Milan Milutinovic, charged jointly with Slobodan Milosevic, Nikola Sainovic, Dragoljub Ojdanic and Vljako Stojkovic in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1214] but still at large in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1278], surrendered to the Tribunal on 20 January, making his initial appearance before the Trial Chamber on 27 January. His motion challenging the jurisdiction of ICTY was dismissed on 6 May and his 13 May appeal of that decision was suspended as he no longer had legal representation. On 10 June, he confidentially filed an application for leave to appeal the Trial Chamber's decision rejecting his 23 January application for provisional release, which the Appeals Chamber refused on the ground that he had not shown good cause.

Four members of the Kosovo Liberation Army who had served at the Lapusnik Prison Camp in Glogovac (Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro) were arrested for crimes against Kosovo Serbs. Haradin Bala and Isak Musliu were arrested in Kosovo on 17 February by the international security force (KFOR) and transferred to the Tribunal the following day. At their initial appearance on 20 February, Mr. Bala pleaded not guilty to four counts and Mr. Musliu to three counts of crimes against humanity (imprisonment, cruel treatment, torture, murder), alternatively charged as violations of the laws or customs of war. Fatmir Limaj, arrested on 18 February by police in Slovenia and transferred to ICTY on 4 March, pleaded not guilty to those same charges at his initial appearance on 5 March. On 31 October, the Chamber denied a request filed by all three for provisional release. Agim Murtezi, also an indictee in the case, was arrested by KFOR in February and transferred to the Tribunal; he was released upon determination that he was not the person thought to be responsible for the crimes alleged in the indictment.

Vojislav Seselj, who surrendered to the Tribunal on 24 February, was charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war in a 14-count indictment. The indictment alleged that as president of the Serbian Radical Party he participated in a plan for the forcible removal of a majority of the Croat, Muslim and other non-Serb populations from about one third of the territory of Croatia, large parts of Bosnia and Herzegovina and parts of Vojvodina in Serbia in order to make those areas part of a new Serb-dominated State. On 25 March, he pleaded not guilty to all counts.

Ivica Rajic, arrested by the Croatian authorities in April, was surrendered to the Tribunal on 24 June. Originally indicted [YUN 1996, p. 1186] for crimes committed in 1993 against the civilian Muslim population in Stupni Do [YUN 1993, p. 461] and Vares [ibid., p. 462] in central Bosnia and Herzegovina, the accused pleaded not guilty to two counts of war crimes (wilful killing, destruction of property) and one count of violations of the laws and customs of war (attack on civilians), at his initial appearance on 27 June.

Naser Oric was arrested in Tuzla, Bosnia and Herzegovina, on 10 April by the multinational Stabilization Force and transferred to the Tribunal the following day. At his initial appearance on 15 April, he pleaded not guilty to two counts of violations of the laws or customs of war under article 7(1) of the ICTY statute (wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages not justified by military necessity, plunder of public or private property) and four counts of violations of the laws or customs of war under article 7(3) (murder, cruel treatment, wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages not justified by military necessity, plunder of public or private property). On 25 July, the Trial Chamber denied his request for provisional release, and, on 17 October, the Appeals Chamber affirmed that decision.

Franko Simatovic and Jovica Stanisic, who surrendered from Belgrade (Serbia) on 30 May and 11 June, respectively, pleaded not guilty, in June, to charges of four counts of crimes against humanity (persecutions, murder, deportation, inhumane acts (forcible transfer)) and one count of violating the laws or customs of war (murder).

Miroslav Radic, who surrendered to the Tribunal from Belgrade on 17 May, and Veselin Sljivancanin, arrested by the authorities of Serbia and Montenegro and transferred to ICTY on 1 July, made their initial appearance on 21 May and 10 July, respectively. Both had been at large since their indictment in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1322] jointly with two other accused in connection with the alleged execution in Ovchara (near Vukovar, Croatia) of some 200 Croatian and other non-Serb persons removed from Vukovar Hospital in 1991.

In the case against Dusen Fustar, Pedrag Banovic, Dusko Knezevic, Momcilo Gruban and Zeljko Meakic, who were charged in the Omarska [YUN 1995, p. 1314] and Keraterm [YUN 1998, p. 1193] indictments, which were joined into a single case in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1279], Mr. Meakic surrendered to the Tribunal from Belgrade on 4 July and made his initial appearance on 7 July. On 18 March, the Trial Chamber dismissed Mr. Knezevic's motion for provisional release and Mr. Gruban's application in May to vary the terms of his provisional release. On 26 June, the Trial Chamber, having accepted a guilty plea by Mr. Banovic to one count of persecution, pursuant to a plea agreement, withdrew the other four counts in the indictment against him. In October, he was sentenced to eight years in prison.

Mitar Rasevic, indicted on 11 June 1997 regarding events that took place in Bosnia and Herzegovina at the Kazneno Popravni Dom detention centre at Foca from April 1992 until October 1994 against Muslim and other non-Serb civilians [YUN 1996, p. 1186], surrendered on 10 August in Serbia. He was charged with seven counts of crimes against humanity (persecutions, torture, inhumane acts, murder, imprisonment, enslavement) and five counts of violations of the laws or customs of war (torture, cruel treatment, murder, slavery). At his 16 September initial appearance, the accused declined to enter a plea; therefore the judge entered pleas of not guilty to all charges on his behalf. The prosecution requested the Trial Chamber to hold its decision in abeyance on the challenge to the indictment, filed by the defence on 20 November, pending the filing of an amended indictment. The defence did not oppose the prosecution's motion, filed on 2 December, for leave to amend the indictment.

Vladimir Kovacevic was arrested in Serbia on 25 September and transferred to the Tribunal on 23 October. His case was entwined with that of Miodrag Jokic, Pavle Strugar and Milan Zec (see p. 1314).

Milan Babic's testimony at the trial of Slobodan Milosevic (see p. 1313) led to an indictment filed against him in November for one count of persecution as a crime against humanity and four counts of murder, cruel treatment, wanton destruction of cities and destruction of religious institutions, as violations of the laws and customs of war. The accused, who had held various political positions in the Serb-dominated part of Croatia known as Krajina, surrendered voluntarily to the Tribunal and agreed to cooperate with the prosecution.

In 2003, public indictments were made against Vlastimir Dordevic, Vladimir Lazarevic, Sreten Lukic and Nebojsa Pavkovic, all of whom remained at large.

Ongoing cases and trials

On 27 January, independent medical experts confirmed that Janko Bobetko was unfit to travel and stand trial, as purported by Croatia in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1277]. As Croatia had failed to serve the indictment on the accused or his counsel, the judge issued an order on 19 March directing it to do so. Croatia, on 4 April, informed the Tribunal that it had served the indictment. On 29 April, the accused died; on 24 June, the case was declared closed causa mortis.

Dragoljub Ojdanic and Nikola Sainovic, charged in 1999 (see p. 1311), whose requests for provisional release in 2002 had been denied [YUN 2002, p. 1278], filed, on 7 and 10 February, respectively, their second motions for provisional release, which were again denied. Also in February, the Trial Chamber held that the Registrar should carry out a new assessment of Mr. Sainovic's ability to remunerate counsel. (Mr. Sainovic in 2002 had challenged the Registrar's decision requiring him to bear the cost of 1,700 hours of pre-trial investigative work.) In April, Mr. Ojdanic applied to the Trial Chamber for review of the Registrar's decision not to provide additional funds for his pre-trial proceedings. The Chamber upheld that decision and, on 16 July, certified the matter for interlocutory appeal.

Mitar Vasiljevic, who had pleaded not guilty to charges against him in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1221], whose trial began in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1201] and who was sentenced in 2002 and filed a notice of appeal at that time [YUN 2002, p. 1280], filed a new notice of appeal on 12 February. In November, the Appeals Chamber heard oral arguments on the appeal.

Biljana Plavsic, who surrendered voluntarily in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1198] and changed her plea in 2002 to guilty in respect of one charge (persecution) [YUN 2002, p. 1279], was sentenced on 27 February to 11 years in prison. In June, she was transferred to Sweden to serve her sentence.

On 31 March, a judgement against Vinko Martinovic and Mladen Naletilic, who had pleaded not guilty in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1216] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1223], sentenced them to 18 years and 20 years in prison, respectively. Both accused filed notices of appeal on 29 April, as did the prosecution on 2 May, and all parties filed appeal briefs between July and October. The accused also filed motions for the admission of additional evidence.

In the Celebici case (Hazim Delic, Esad Landzo, Zdravko Mucic), the Appeals Chamber, on 8 April, rejected appeals filed in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1280] and confirmed the sentences imposed by the Trial Chamber in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1201]. On 9 July, Messrs. Delic and Landzo were transferred to serve their sentences in Finland. On the same date, Mr. Mucic's request for early release was granted, effective 18 July, as he had served two thirds of his sentence at The Hague, having been in pre-trial and trial custody since 18 March 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1186].

The trial of Vidoje Blagojevic, Dragan Obrenovic, Dragan Jokic and Momir Nikolic, charged jointly in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199] with crimes allegedly committed following the fall of Srebrenica in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 529], began in May. In a plea agreement, Mr. Nikolic, on provisional release since 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1276], agreed to testify against the co-accused, and both the defence and prosecution requested that sentencing be delayed until after he had testified to allow the Trial

Chamber to assess the extent of his cooperation with the prosecution. The proceedings against Mr. Nikolic were separated from those against the other three accused. Following his testimony, a sentencing hearing was held in October. As part of Mr. Nikolic's plea agreement, the prosecution recommended a 15-to-20-year sentence, while the defence submitted that the sentence should not exceed 10 years. On 2 December, the Trial Chamber sentenced Mr. Nikolic to 27 years in prison, which he appealed. Similarly, Mr. Obrenovic entered into a plea agreement to testify against his co-accused; the proceedings against him were separated from those against the remaining two accused. Following his testimony, he was sentenced on 10 December to 17 years in prison. The trial of the remaining co-accused began on 14 May and would continue into 2004.

Goran Jelicic, whose motion for review of his 1999 sentence [YUN 1999, p. 1216; YUN 2001, p. 1201] was dismissed in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1280], was transferred in May to Italy to serve his sentence.

The trial of Momcilo Krajisnik [YUN 2000, p. 1221; YUN 2002, p. 1279], scheduled to begin in May, was postponed to 2004. The Registrar was compelled to withdraw the defence counsel because he had been disbarred in his home country. By decisions of 30 July and 16 September, he appointed a new defence team.

In the trial of Slobodan Milosevic [YUN 1999, p. 1214; YUN 2001, p. 1201; YUN 2002, p. 1277], the Trial Chamber, on 20 May, issued an oral ruling rejecting the prosecution's argument that the case should be allowed to proceed for as long as it took to hear the testimony of all the witnesses it wished to call, stating that the trial would become excessively long and oppressive to all concerned. On 30 September, the Trial Chamber ruled that, in view of medical advice concerning the health of the accused, the Chamber would sit three days weekly. In addition to interlocutory appeals, the case had generated a number of ancillary proceedings, including prosecution applications for binding orders directed to Serbia and Montenegro for the production of documentation relevant to the proceedings.

In the case of Pasko Ljubicic, who had pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1200] and whose indictment was amended in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1279], pre-trial briefs were filed by the prosecution and the defence, in June and July, respectively. The case would not be ready for trial until a large number of documents sought by the defence were produced by the Governments of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia. The Trial Chamber had issued a binding order to the Government of Bosnia and Herzegovina in February, but the defence had not received all the documents sought.

In the case against General Rahim Ademi, who surrendered voluntarily and pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199], pre-trial briefs were filed in June and July. However, the Prosecutor announced in July the intention to co-indict other perpetrators charged with crimes against civilian Serbs in the Medak pocket region of Croatia [YUN 1993, p. 490]. The Chamber was thus asked to defer General Ademi's trial until the new indictments were brought.

Darko Mrda, arrested and charged in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1276], entered into a plea agreement with the prosecutor on 24 July, according to which he pleaded guilty to murder and inhumane acts but not to extermination. The Chamber verified that there was a sufficient factual basis for the crimes and for the accused's participation therein, and accordingly entered a finding of guilt. Sentencing briefs were filed by the parties on 13 October and a sentencing hearing was held on 22 October.

In the trial of Milomir Stakic, who had pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199] and whose defence case began in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1278], the Trial Chamber, on 31 July, handed down its judgement: it found the accused guilty and sentenced him to life imprisonment, with a minimum term of 20 years. In September, the prosecution and the accused filed notices of appeal.

Radislav Krstic, who was sentenced in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1201] and whose appeal briefs were filed in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1278], filed two applications for the admission of additional evidence in January and August 2003. The Appeals Chamber issued its decision on the first additional evidence motion on 5 August and on the second additional evidence motion on 15 September, with reasons to follow. On 19 November, the Chamber dismissed the prosecution's motion of 11 November to adduce additional evidence. On 20 November, the Chamber granted a supplementary motion to adduce additional evidence filed by Mr. Krstic on 4 November. The Chamber conducted evidentiary hearings and heard oral arguments on the appeal on 21, 26 and 27 November.

The trial of Radoslav Brdanin, which began in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1277] on charges of genocide and crimes against humanity to which he had pleaded not guilty in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1215] and again in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1222], continued in 2003. Following the close of the prosecution case, the defence submitted, on 22 August, a partly confidential motion for judgement of acquittal, to which the prosecution responded. The Trial Chamber delivered its oral decision on 9 October, followed by a written decision on 28 November. The decision granted the defence motion insofar as the accused was acquitted of genocide in the context of the third category of joint criminal enterprise, and certain factual allegations were struck out with respect to four of the municipalities cited in the indictment; it dismissed the remaining issues raised in the defence motion, with one of the judges dissenting in part, favouring the acquittal of the accused on the counts of genocide and complicity in genocide. The prosecution subsequently filed the sixth amended indictment to comply with the Trial Chamber's ruling. It appealed the decision of the Trial Chamber, which the Appeals Chamber upheld, and reinstated the charge of genocide with respect to the third category of joint criminal enterprise, finding that the Trial Chamber had erroneously conflated the mens rea requirements for genocide with the mental requirement of the mode of liability. Co-accused Momir Talic died on 28 May.

In the case against Miodrag Jokic, Vladimir Kovacevic, Pavle Strugar and Milan Zec [YUN 2001, p. 1200], Mr. Jokic, who was provisionally released on 20 February, entered into a plea agreement on 25 August, according to which he pleaded guilty to six counts in an amended indictment in exchange for his full cooperation with the prosecution and a joint recommendation for a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison. On 17 September, the case against Mr. Jokic was severed from the case against Messrs. Strugar and Kovacevic. Mr. Jokic's sentencing hearing was held on 26 November. Mr. Kovacevic, arrested in Belgrade in September and transferred to the Tribunal on 23 October, was found in a state of mental disorder upon his arrival, which prevented him from entering a plea. At two initial appearances in November, he was found not fit to enter a plea. Also in November, his case was severed from the case against Mr. Strugar. A medical examination of Mr. Kovacevic by two experts concluded that he was unable to understand fully the context of the charges against him, but that he might recover if adequately treated at a mental health institution in a Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian-speaking environment; a similar finding was made by a defence psychiatrist and by the consulting psychiatrist of the Tribunal's Detention Unit. As for Mr. Strugar, a third amended indictment alleged six counts of violations of the laws or customs of war, three of which related to crimes against persons (murder, cruel treatment, attacks on civilians) and three related to crimes against property (destruction not justified by military necessity, attacks on civilian objects, destruction of institutions dedicated to religion and the arts and sciences). Prior to his trial, the defence raised the question of the fitness of the accused to stand trial. The Trial Chamber, having examined a report it had ordered on his medical condition and his medical records, found no justification for ordering any further examination. His trial began on 16 December. The indictment against Milan Zec was withdrawn in 2002.

In the case of Milorad Krnojelac, who was sentenced in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1278], the Appeals Chamber dismissed all grounds of his appeal in September. It introduced new convictions and revised the sentence, raising it from seven and a half years of imprisonment to 15 years.

A third amended indictment, dated 26 September, charged Enver Hadzihasanovic and Amir Kubura, who had pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199], with violations of the laws or customs of war (two counts of murder, two counts of cruel treatment, one count of wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages not justified by military necessity, one count of destruction or wilful damage of institutions dedicated to religion, one count of plunder of public and private property). Regarding the interlocutory appeal, jointly filed in 2002, of the Trial Chamber's decision that the doctrine of command responsibility was applicable in their case [YUN 2002, p. 1279], the Appeals Chamber affirmed it in part and reversed it in part on 16 July. It held that command responsibility in non-international conflicts was established but that the principle of a commander's being criminally liable for acts by his subordinates committed before he assumed command had not been sufficiently clearly established as a rule of customary international law at the time of the alleged offences to form a basis for criminal liability under the Tribunal's statute. The two accused, on provisional release since December 2001, surrendered to the custody of the Tribunal on 27 November 2003. Their trial started on 2 December. On 29 December, the Prosecutor filed an appeal regarding the Trial Chamber's decision on the refreshment of a witness's memory and on a 19 December motion for certification to appeal. Proceedings against the third co-accused, Mehmed Alagic, were terminated following his death in March.

Dragan Nikolic, who had pleaded not guilty in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1221] and again in 2002 to new charges contained in a second amended indictment [YUN 2002, p. 1278], entered a further plea of not guilty to a third amended indictment in 2003. In a September plea agreement, the accused pleaded guilty to counts one to four of the indictment related to persecution, murder, rape and torture. In December, the Trial Chamber entered a single conviction for persecutions as subsuming all crimes and sentenced the accused to 23 years in prison.

Preliminary motions by Milan Martić against the form of his indictment, to which he had pleaded not guilty in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1276], triggered several amendments to the indictment, which was finally approved by the Trial Chamber on 30 May. He pleaded not guilty to a second amended indictment of 5 September of 10 counts of crimes against humanity (persecution, extermination, murder, imprisonment, torture, inhumane acts, deportation) and to nine charges of violations of the laws or customs of war (murder, torture, cruel treatment, wanton destruction of villages and religious institutions, plunder of private property, attack on civilians).

Miroslav Đerović, arrested in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1276], entered a guilty plea on 30 September to a second amended indictment, which incorporated the six counts previously charged against him [ibid., p. 1277].

On 7 October, Ranko Česić, arrested in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1276], filed a plea agreement in which he pleaded guilty to the 12 counts charged against him [ibid.]. The prosecutor made further submissions at a sentencing hearing held on 27 November.

The Trial Chamber delivered its judgement in the trial of Blagoje Simić, Miroslav Tadić and Simo Zarić, jointly charged in 2002 under a fifth amended indictment [YUN 2002, p. 1278]. The judgement, delivered on 17 October, found Mr. Simić guilty of a crime against humanity for persecutions based on the unlawful arrest and detention of Bosnian Muslim and Croat civilians, cruel and inhumane treatment and deportation and forcible transfer, for which he was sentenced to 17 years in prison. He filed a notice of appeal on 17 November. Mr. Tadić, found guilty of a crime against humanity for persecutions based on deportation and forcible transfer, was sentenced to eight years in prison. Mr. Zarić, pronounced guilty of a crime against humanity for persecutions based on cruel and inhumane treatment, was sentenced to six years in prison.

Regarding notices of appeals filed by Tihomir Blaškić [YUN 2000, p. 1223; YUN 2002, p. 1280], following his 1999 trial [YUN 1999, p. 1216], the Appeals Chamber, on 31 October, admitted 108 items as additional evidence, as well as rebuttal material proffered by the prosecution. Appeals against his conviction were pending.

Stanislav Galić, who had pleaded not guilty in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1215] and whose trial began in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1201] and continued in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1279] and 2003, was sentenced, on 5 December, to 20 years in prison. One of the three judges filed a separate and partially dissenting opinion, challenging the majority's finding of certain facts and of some of the legal findings, and recommending a sentence of 10 years in prison. On 18 December, the prosecution filed a notice of appeal from the judgement.

An amicus curiae was appointed in a confidential contempt of court case pending before the Trial Chamber, which was seized of two other contempt cases.

Ad litem judges

The Secretary-General, on 7 May [S/2003/530], transmitted to the Security Council President a 1 May letter from the ICTY President requesting the Council to amend the ICTY statute so that ad litem judges, during the period of their appointment to a trial, could also adjudicate in pre-trial proceedings in other cases.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 May [meeting 4759], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1481 (2003). The draft [S/2003/546] was prepared in prior consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

Office of the Prosecutor

The Prosecutor's policy continued to be directed at the highest-level political and military leaders responsible for the gravest crimes, leaving middle- and lower-ranking criminals to be tried by national courts. The Office of the Prosecutor implemented the completion strategy it had defined in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1275] and which the Security Council approved in resolution 1503(2003) (see p. 1330). Particular efforts were made to obtain the cooperation of countries on which ICTY relied to carry out its mandate and to assist in the reform of the judicial systems of the countries of the former Yugoslavia—key elements of the ICTY completion strategy. The Prosecutor continued to review regularly all ongoing and pending investigations in order to ensure that all resources adequately targeted the highest-level suspects. The Office also continued its pre-trial, trial and appeals activities and developed measures to enhance its operations, such as streamlining its procedure and consolidating its use of electronic systems.

The cooperation of Croatia had improved considerably. Following the change of Government in December, it acted immediately in regard to two new indictments and facilitated the surrender of all accused, while undertaking measures to locate and arrest Ante Gotovina, who had been indicted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199]. Cooperation by Serbia and Montenegro improved but continued to be complex, partial and variable and affected by political uncertainties and developments, such as the assassination of Serbia's Prime Minister (see p. 415). Cooperation at the federal level was minimal and, in spite of some positive developments under new leadership in February/March, the overall assessment was that the State's cooperation was hostage to political developments. The cooperation of Bosnia and Herzegovina remained satisfactory, while that of Republika Srpska remained insufficient, notably in regard to the fugitives and access to wartime documentation. Since the Prosecutor's decision to apply the Tribunal's primacy regarding the investigation of allegations of war crimes committed between the security forces of the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) and organized Albanian rebel groups in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1204], two investigations had been opened involving perpetrators on both sides of the conflict. Following a deferral hearing, held before an ICTY Trial Chamber on 25 September to resolve the issue of primacy, national authorities continued to cooperate with the Office of the Prosecutor after a change of Government. FYROM authorities were cooperating with the Office with respect to the ongoing investigations.

Communication. In a July letter [S/2003/766] to the Security Council President, the Secretary-General, in accordance with the ICTY statute providing for the appointment of the Prosecutor by the Council on nomination by the Secretary-General, put forth the name of Carla Del Ponte as his nominee for reappointment to that position at the end of her current term as Prosecutor on 14 September.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 4 September [meeting 4819], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1504 (2003). The draft [S/2003/846] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003,

Noting that by that resolution the Council created a new position of Prosecutor for the International Tribunal for Rwanda,

Noting also that by its resolution 1503(2003) the Council welcomed the intention of the Secretary-General to submit to the Council the name of Ms. Carla Del Ponte as nominee for Prosecutor for the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia,

Having regard to Article 16, paragraph 4, of the statute of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia,

Having considered the nomination by the Secretary-General of Ms. Carla Del Ponte as Prosecutor of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Appoints Ms. Carla Del Ponte as Prosecutor of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia with effect from 15 September 2003 for a four-year term.

The Registry

The Registry continued to exercise its responsibilities in the administration and servicing of the Tribunal, and provided support to the Chambers and the Office of the Prosecutor. The Registry also managed the Victims and Witnesses Section, the Detention Unit, the legal aid system and information technology instruments, facilitated court management functions and provided general administrative services.

On 4 April, in Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, the Registrars of ICTY and ICTR signed a joint statement of implementation of the inter-Tribunal (ICTY-ICTR) project, sponsored by the European Commission. In September, the Commission approved the extension of the project's grant to include cooperation initiatives between ICTY-ICTR and the Special Court for Sierra Leone (see p. 213).

In May, the Registrar visited the ICTY field office in Kosovo and conducted inter-agency meetings with the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo and other international organizations, judges and prosecutors on a range of operational and administrative matters.

The Registry Advisory Section participated in working groups regarding the establishment of the Special War Crimes Chamber at the State Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina, in cooperation with the Office of the High Representative.

In keeping with recommendations in Security Council resolution 1503(2003) (see p. 1330), the Tribunal, as part of its completion strategy, continued to develop and improve its outreach programme, paying special attention to improving the capacity of national jurisdictions to prosecute war crimes cases. The outreach programme enhanced its activities to strengthen national jurisdictions in their handling of war crimes cases, assisting in the creation of a responsible body of lawyers, prosecutors and other legal professionals through a broad range of training programmes. The programme organized a conference (Sarajevo, December), which brought together victims' associations and legal professionals to discuss the impact of ICTY judgments on specific communities.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/288 [YUN 2002, p. 1283], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/288], described progress made by ICTY to reform its legal aid system, particularly with regard to rationalizing the costs of defence counsel and establishing indigence. A new system regarding defence counsel promised greater efficiency and eliminated time- and resource-consuming litigation of invoices before the Chambers or the ICTY President. As to the establishment of indigence, the Registry developed a financial formula that took into account the accused's income and assets, expenses for dependants and the costs and necessary duration of legal aid and other measures, such as means in relation to the projected cost of legal representation. The ability of the accused to contribute to defence costs was reassessed regularly. The report reviewed other issues related to the legal aid system, including financial investigations to address the issue of fee splitting, in which counsel and the accused arranged to share lawyer fees; the Association of Defence Counsel, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1275]; a Disciplinary Panel to address ethical violations; external factors affecting legal aid costs; and future reforms.

ACABQ report. In an October report [A/58/449], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) said that, from the available documentation, it was not in a position to ascertain the effect of the measures taken to reform the legal aid system on the estimated resource requirements of $29.5 million for defence counsel for the 2004-2005 biennium, even though, according to supplementary information provided to it, the estimates took into account the application of a revised system of paying for trials adopted as from July 2002. It requested detailed information in the context of the next budget estimates for ICTY on the effectiveness of the measures outlined in the Secretary-General's August report.

Financing

2002-2003 biennium

Report of Secretary-General. A November report of the Secretary-General [A/58/593], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 57/288 [YUN 2002, p. 1283], contained the second performance report of ICTY for the 2002-2003 biennium. The report reflected a net additional requirement of $18.8 million over the revised appropriation for that biennium. The increased requirements included changes with respect to exchange rates ($20.4 million) attributable mainly to the weakening of the United States dollar against the euro and inflation ($3.8 million). The Assembly was requested to revise the appropriation for 2002-2003 to $288.3 million gross ($255 million net) to the ICTY Special Account.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in November [A/58/605], recommended the revision of the 2002-2003 appropriation to the ICTY Special Account as requested by the Secretary-General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/58/580], adopted resolution 58/254 without vote [agenda item 132].

Second performance report for the biennium 2002-2003 on the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

The General Assembly,

Having considered the second performance report of the Secretary-General for the biennium 2002-2003 on the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 47/235 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which were resolutions 56/247 A of 24 December 2001, 56/247 B of 27 March 2002 and 57/288 of 20 December 2002,

1. Takes note of the second performance report of the Secretary-General for the biennium 2002-2003 on the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Notes with concern the late issuance of the second performance report of the Secretary-General for the biennium 2002-2003, bearing in mind the nature of the report and the period covered therein;

4. Resolves that, for the biennium 2002-2003, the amount of 262,653,700 United States dollars gross (235,955,000 dollars net) approved in its resolution 57/288 of 20 December 2002 for the budget of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia shall be adjusted by the amount of 25,668,500 dollars gross (18,803,200 dollars net) for a total amount of 288,322,200 dollars gross (254,603,800 dollars net).

2004-2005 biennium

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/288 [YUN 2002, p. 1283], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/58/226], containing the ICTY resource requirements for the 2004-2005 biennium. The requirements before recosting amounted to $262 million gross ($235 million net) and reflected a decrease in real terms of $992,500 net, compared to the revised 2002-2003 appropriation (see p. 1317). The changes reflected a proposed reorganization and initial downsizing of the staffing table as a first step to implement the completion strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1275]. In nominal terms, the estimate for 2004-2005 amounted to $330 million gross ($299 million net) and reflected an increase of $64 million net, mostly due to the decline of the United States dollar against the euro.

A September report of the Secretary-General [A/58/368] estimated a reduction in ICTY requirements for 2004-2005 of $2.3 million gross ($1.9 million net) in the light of Security Council resolution 1503(2003) (see p. 1330), which established the new position of ICTR Prosecutor and thus reduced the number of posts from the ICTY budget. Therefore, the overall requirements for 2004-2005 in nominal terms were reduced from $330 million gross ($299 million net) to $327.3 million gross ($297 million net).

ACABQ report. In an October report [A/58/449], ACABQ commented on the potential for economies under a number of objects of expenditure, and recommended that the estimated ICTY requirements for 2004-2005 be reduced by $20 million gross.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/580], adopted resolution 58/255 without vote [agenda item 132].

International Tribunal for Rwanda

In 2003, ICTR, in Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, rendered five judgements, the greatest number delivered in a single year. ICTR continued to explore innovative measures to expedite trials, which included amendments to its statute by the Security Council (see p. 1324) in order to increase the number of ad litem judges that might be used at any given time from four to nine and to expand their competence by empowering them to adjudicate over pre-trial matters. The Council further amended the statute to allow for an ICTR Prosecutor (see p. 1325). In September, Hassan Bubacar Jallow joined ICTR as its Prosecutor.

In the light of Council resolution 1503(2003) (see p. 1330), the ICTR President submitted a revised completion strategy [S/2003/946] based on information available as at 29 September.

In 2003, ICTR was awarded the Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung Human Rights Award for its contribution to human rights.

The 2003 activities of ICTR, established by Council resolution 955(1994) [YUN 1994, p. 299], were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/140-S/2003/707] and 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/183-S/2004/601]. On 9 October, the Assembly took note of the 2002/03 report (decision 58/504).

The Chambers

New cases

On 16 February, Ildephonse Hategekimana, former commander of the Ngoma camp, was arrested in Brazzaville, Congo, and transferred to ICTR three days later. He appeared before the Tribunal on 28 February for arraignment and pleaded not guilty to charges of genocide and crimes against humanity.

On 13 August, Juvenal Rugumbarara, former Bourgmestre of Bicumbi commune, was arrested in Uganda and transferred to Arusha. At his initial appearance, on 15 August, he pleaded not guilty to charges of genocide, crimes against humanity and serious violations of the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and of Additional Protocol II [YUN 1977, p. 706].

Ongoing trials

In February, the Chamber sentenced Elizaphan Ntakirutimana and his son, Gerard Ntakirutimana, to 10 and 25 years in prison, respectively. Both accused, whose trial began in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208] and was ongoing in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285], lodged appeals against the judgement.

In May, the Chamber rendered a judgement in the case of Eliezer Niyitegeka, who had pleaded not guilty in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1223] and whose trial was ongoing in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285]. The accused, who was sentenced to life in prison, filed a notice of appeal on 20 June.

Also in May, Laurent Semanza, whose trial began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1226] and was ongoing in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1286], was sentenced to 25 years in prison. Both the accused and the prosecutor appealed the judgement.

The trial of Sylvestre Gacumbitsi, who was arrested and pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1207], began on 28 July.

The joint trial of André Ntagerura, Emmanuel Bagambiki and Samuel Imanishimwe, referred to as the "Cyangugu" case [YUN 1999, p. 1222], which began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1226] and was ongoing in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1286], closed on 15 August.

The trial of Emmanuel Ndindabahizi, who was arrested and pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1207], began on 1 September.

On 6 November, the trial began against Casimir Bizimungu, Justin Mugenzi, Jerome Bicamupaka and Prosper Mugiraneza, referred to as the Government II case [YUN 1999, pp. 1222 & 1223].

On 27 November, the trial began against Edouard Karemera, Andre Rwamakuba, Matthieu Ndirumpatse and Joseph Nzirorera, referred to as the Government I case [YUN 1999, pp. 1222 & 1223].

In December, the Chamber sentenced Juvénal Kajelijeli, whose trial began in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208] and was ongoing in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1286], to three concurrent sentences: a life sentence each for genocide and for a crime against humanity (extermination) and 15 years in prison for direct and public incitement to commit genocide. He was acquitted of a crime against humanity (rape). The accused appealed the judgement.

In the "Media" case [YUN 1999, p. 1222], which was ongoing in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285], Ferdinand Nahimana and Hassan Ngeze, in December, were sentenced to life in prison, while Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza was sentenced to 35 years in prison. They filed appeals against the judgement.

The following trials remained ongoing in 2003: the joint trial begun in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285] of four senior Rwandan military officers (Théoneste Bagosora, Anatole Nsengiyumva, Aloys Ntabakuze, Gracien Kabiligi), consolidated as the "Military" case in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1222] and regarding which an interlocutory appeal was disposed of in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1209]; the joint trial in the "Butare" case (Pauline Nyiramasuhuko, Arsène Shalom Ntahobali, Sylvain Nsabimana, Alphonse Nteziryayo, Joseph Kanyabashi, Elie Ndayambaje), which began in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208] and continued in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1286]; and the trial of Jean de Dieu Kamuhanda, which also began in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208] and continued in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285].

Regarding an appeal by Georges Anderson Nderubumwe Rutaganda against his life sentence [YUN 1999, p. 1221], the Appeals Chamber, on 26 May, quashed the conviction on count 7 of the indictment (crime against humanity (murder)), overturned his acquittal on counts 4 and 6 of the indictment (murder as a violation of the 1949 Geneva Conventions) and rejected the remainder of his grounds for appeal. The Appeals Chamber confirmed the life sentence imposed by the Trial Chamber.

An accused, Samuel Musabyimana, who was arrested in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1207], passed away on 24 January.

Election of judges

In 2003, the General Assembly elected 11 ICTR judges for terms of office to expire on 24 May 2007. In addition, 18 ad litem judges were elected.

In order to achieve the target for the Tribunal to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, as set by the Security Council in resolution 1503(2003) (see p. 1330), the Council amended the ICTR statute to permit an ad litem judge who was appointed to serve for a trial to adjudicate in pre-trial proceedings. The statute was also amended to authorize the use of up to nine ad litem judges at any one trial, rather than a maximum of four.

Permanent judges

In January, the General Assembly adopted decision 57/414 A without vote [agenda item 18].

Election of judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994

At its 80th plenary meeting, on 31 January 2003, the General Assembly, in accordance with article 12 of the statute of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, elected the following eleven judges to serve in the Trial Chambers of the Tribunal for a term of office of four years, that is until 24 May 2007:

Communications. In identical letters of 16 April [A/57/790-S/2003/431] to the Presidents of the Security Council and the General Assembly, the Secretary-General transmitted a March letter of the ICTR President, Judge Navanethem Pillay, requesting extensions of the term of office of four permanent judges who were not elected to a new term, in order to allow them to dispose of a number of ongoing cases expected to continue beyond the end of their term on 24 May. The requests raised institutional and budgetary questions regarding the status of a judge beyond his/her elected term of office and related financial arrangements. Approval by the Council, as the parent organ of the Tribunal, and of the Assembly, as the organ that elected its judges, would be desirable to preclude any question on the legality of the extensions. The Registry estimated the associated costs at $1,893,800.

The Council President, in a 30 April letter [S/2003/550] to the Secretary-General, presented the views of Council members on the requested extensions to the effect that each request raised a different set of legal and practical issues. Council members had asked him to seek the advice of the President of the International Criminal Court (ICC) regarding the extension of Judge Pillay, who, on 4 February, had been elected an ICC judge for a term that had started on 11 March. Furthermore, Council members asked Judge Pillay for clarification of the issues raised and for quarterly reports on the progress of the cases in question, once the Council took action on the requests.

Mexico, on 19 May [S/2003/554], transmitted a 30 April letter from the Council President to the ICC President seeking advice on Judge Pillay's availability and the ICC Vice-President's 2 May reply, stating that it was not envisaged that she would be assigned substantive case work before year's end.

An 8 May letter [S/2003/551] from the Secretary-General to the Council President transmitted the views of Judge Pillay on the requests contained in her March letter (above), particularly regarding the extension of Judge Winston Churchill Matanzima Maqutu's term to December 2005 in order to complete the "Butare" case (see p. 1321). Regarding her election to ICC judge, Judge Pillay confirmed that she would be fully available as an ICTR judge and would not engage in substantive work as an ICC judge during the period required to complete the "Media" case (see p. 1321), which was expected to be completed no later than year's end.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

Communications. On 6 March [S/2003/290], the Secretary-General forwarded to the Security Council a list of the 26 nominations, together with their curricula vitae, that he had received for election to 18 ICTR posts for ad litem judges. On 28 March [S/2003/382], the Council President informed the Secretary-General that the Council had extended the deadline for submitting nominations until 15 April 2003.

The Secretary-General, on 21 April [S/2003/467], forwarded to the Council a list of 35 nominations and their curricula vitae, noting that the list remained short of the minimum number of 36.

Amendment of statute

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council President an 8 September letter [S/2003/879] from the ICTR President requesting that the Council amend the ICTR statute so that, during the period in which an ad litem judge was appointed to serve for a trial, he/she could also adjudicate in pre-trial proceedings in other cases. The amendment would facilitate the conduct of judicial business and enable the Tribunal to make better use of the time and abilities of the ad litem judges.

In a 29 September letter [S/2003/946], the President stated that if ICTR's judicial capacity remained unchanged, it would take until 2011 to complete the trials of all persons currently being, or who might in the future be, prosecuted before it. For ICTR to achieve completion by the end of 2008, the target set by the Council in resolution 1503 (2003) (see p. 1330), he requested that the Council amend the ICTR statute so that it would be authorized to make use of up to nine ad litem judges at any one time, rather than the current maximum of four. The related increase in the ICTR budget was estimated at $12.4 million for the 2004-2005 biennium for an additional five ad litem judges and support staff. ICTR's updated completion strategy was enclosed with the letter.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 October [meeting 4849], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1512(2003). The draft [S/2003/1033] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolutions 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 1165(1998) of 30 April 1998, 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000, 1411(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1431(2002) of 14 August 2002 and 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003,

Having considered the letter dated 12 September 2003 from the Secretary-General addressed to the President of the Security Council and the letter annexed thereto dated 8 September 2003 from the President of the International Tribunal for Rwanda addressed to the Secretary-General,

Having considered also the letter from the Secretary-General dated 3 October 2003 addressed to the President of the Security Council and the letter annexed thereto dated 29 September 2003 from the President of the International Tribunal for Rwanda addressed to the Secretary-General,

Convinced of the advisability of enhancing the powers of ad litem judges in the International Tribunal for Rwanda so that, during the period of their appointment to a trial, they might also adjudicate in pre-trial proceedings in other cases, should the need arise and should they be in a position to do so,

Convinced also of the advisability of increasing the number of ad litem judges that may be appointed at any one time to serve in the Trial Chambers of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, so that the Tribunal might be better placed to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, as envisaged in its Completion Strategy,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to amend articles 11 and 12 quater of the Statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda and to replace those articles with the provisions set out in the annex to the present resolution;

2. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Annex

(iii) To consult with the President of the International Tribunal for Rwanda in relation to the assignment of judges pursuant to article 13 of the present statute or in relation to a pardon or commutation of sentence pursuant to article 27 of the present statute.

Office of the Prosecutor

The Office of the Prosecutor had instituted internal reforms to increase the trial capacity of ICTR to the level of prosecuting up to six different cases every day. The Office focused on individuals who allegedly were in positions of leadership and bore the gravest responsibility for the crimes committed in 1994. Accused and suspects alleged to have been mid- to low-level participants in those crimes were to be transferred to national jurisdictions, including Rwanda, for trial. An updated version of the completion strategy for ICTR's work was submitted to the Security Council on 29 September [S/2003/946] (see p. 1320).

By resolution 1503(2003) (see p. 1330), the Security Council established the position of Prosecutor of ICTR and appointed Hassan Bubacar Jallow as Prosecutor for a four-year term with effect from 15 September 2003.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 4 September [meeting 4819], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1505 (2003). The draft [S/2003/847] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003,

Noting that by that resolution the Council created a new position of Prosecutor of the International Tribunal for Rwanda,

Having regard to article 15, paragraph 4, of the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, as adopted by the Council in its resolution 1503(2003),

Having considered the nomination by the Secretary-General of Mr. Hassan Bubacar Jallow as Prosecutor of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, Appoints Mr. Hassan Bubacar Jallow as Prosecutor of the International Tribunal for Rwanda with effect from 15 September 2003 for a four-year term.

The Registry

In the light of the completion strategy (see p. 1320), management reforms and organizational restructuring were undertaken in the Office of the Registrar. Significant changes included the re-amalgamation of the witnesses and victims support mechanisms of the Registry into a single section and the reemerging of the management of the United Nations Detention Facility with that of the Defence Counsel to form the Defence Counsel and Detention Management Section.

In March, the Registrar signed an agreement with France on the enforcement of sentences.

The recruitment, in June, of a Gender Adviser within the Gender Advisory Unit of the Office provided the impetus for more strategic action in gender-sensitive areas. The Unit contributed to the establishment of policy guidelines aimed at encouraging a more conducive environment for the participation of victims and witnesses in the judicial proceedings. Physical and psychological support measures were provided to victims, especially those who had been subjected to rape and sexual assault, summoned to testify before the Tribunal.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/289 [YUN 2002, p. 1291], the Secretary-General, in September [A/58/366], described progress made in the reform of the ICTR legal aid system, particularly with regard to rationalizing the costs of defence counsel and establishing indigence. The Defence Counsel and Detention Management Section instituted measures to monitor and control the upward trend of defence costs. The report of a consultant, which was annexed to the main report, stated that the systems at both ICTY and ICTR were flawed and open to abuse and made recommendations regarding defence team costs and indigency.

ACABQ report. A November report of ACABQ [A/58/554] commended the course of action proposed in the Secretary-General's report. However, it did not share the concern raised in the report as to the discriminatory effect of restricting the lists of lead counsel, co-counsel, legal assistants and investigators to persons residing in Africa, or that all co-counsel, legal assistants and investigators should be from Africa. The Committee was of the view that the effect of implementing the recommendations on the cost of defence counsel was not yet clear, but that it was bound to be considerable. Information on progress made in that regard should be provided.

2002-2003 biennium

Report of Secretary-General. A November report of the Secretary-General [A/58/597], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 57/289 [YUN 2002, p. 1291], contained the second performance report of ICTR for the 2002-2003 biennium. The report indicated an additional requirement of $4.5 million gross ($4.4 million net) over the revised appropriation for that biennium. The increased requirements pertained to changes with respect to the combined effect of exchange rates and inflation ($7.5 million gross ($7.5 million net)), partially offset by decreases in post incumbency and other changes ($3 million gross ($3.1 million net)). The Assembly was requested to revise the appropriation for the 2002-2003 biennium to $208.5 million gross ($187.3 million net) to the ICTR Special Account.

ACABQ report. A November report of ACABQ [A/58/605] recommended that the General Assembly approve the revision of the 2002-2003 appropriation to the ICTR Special Account as requested by the Secretary-General's report (above).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/579], adopted resolution 58/252 without vote [agenda item 131].

Second performance report for the biennium 2002-2003 on the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994

The General Assembly,

Having considered the second performance report of the Secretary-General for the biennium 2002-2003 on the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 49/251 of 20 July 1995 on the financing of the International Tribunal for Rwanda and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which were resolutions 56/248 A of 24 December 2001, 56/248 B of 27 March 2002 and 57/289 of 20 December 2002,

1. Takes note of the second performance report of the Secretary-General for the biennium 2002-2003 on the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Notes with concern the late issuance of the second performance report of the Secretary-General for the biennium 2002-2003, bearing in mind the nature of the report and the period covered therein;

4. Resolves that, for the biennium 2002-2003, the amount of 203,962,600 United States dollars gross (182,870,700 dollars net) approved in its resolution 57/289 of 20 December 2002 for the budget of the International Tribunal for Rwanda, shall be adjusted by the amount of 4,517,100 dollars gross (4,392,200 dollars net) for a total amount of 208,479,700 dollars gross (187,262,900 dollars net).

2004-2005 biennium

Reports of Secretary-General. An August report of the Secretary-General [A/58/269] contained the ICTR resource requirements for the 2004-2005 biennium. Those requirements, before recosting, amounted to $209 million gross ($187.3 million net), including growth of $4.8 million gross ($4.4 million net), or 2.4 per cent, compared with the revised 2002-2003 appropriation (see p. 1326). The real resource changes included provisions for the delayed impact of 109 new posts and the ad litem judges approved for 2002-2003 (see p. 1323). In nominal terms, the estimate for 2004-2005 amounted to $235 million gross ($213 million net) and reflected an increase of $26 million net mostly due to the impact of changes in inflation, offset by a decrease in exchange rates.

A September report of the Secretary-General [A/58/368] estimated additional ICTR requirements for 2004-2005 of $4 million gross ($3.4 million net) in the light of Security Council resolution 1503 (2003) (see p. 1330), which established the new position of ICTR Prosecutor. Thus, the overall requirements for 2004-2005 in nominal terms increased from $235 million gross ($213 million net) to $239.2 million gross ($216.3 million net).

A September note by the Secretary-General [A/58/367] stated that, as at 12 September, the Council, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/289 [YUN 2002, p. 1291], had taken no action on the long-term financial obligations of the United Nations regarding the enforcement of sentences. He proposed, therefore, that the Assembly continue the temporary arrangements set out in resolution 57/289, for which resources in the amount of $250,000 were included in the proposed 2004-2005 budget.

In a November report [A/58/550], the Secretary-General set out the resource requirements for 2004-2005 in the light of Council resolution 1512 (2003) (see p. 1324), which established five additional ICTR posts for ad litem judges. The estimated additional requirements would amount to $12.2 million gross ($11.2 million net), with an additional 45 temporary posts, thus increasing the overall requirements from $239.2 million gross ($216.3 million net) to $251.4 million gross ($227.5 million net).

ACABQ report. In a November report [A/58/554], ACABQ recommended approval of the estimated ICTR requirements for the 2004-2005 biennium of $251.4 million gross ($227.5 million net).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/579], adopted resolution 58/253 without vote [agenda item 131].

The General Assembly,

7. Welcomes also the efforts made by the Tribunal to enhance coordination between the Chambers, the Office of the Prosecutor and the relevant sections of the Registry, through the establishment of the various management committees;

8. Requests the Tribunal to continue to enhance its engagement with the defence counsel establishment in the facilitation of trial work;

9. Welcomes the development of the completion strategy, and invites the Tribunal to revise the strategy, where appropriate, to take into account the provisions of Security Council resolutions 1503(2003) and 1512(2003) and the resultant increased judicial capacity of the Tribunal;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to develop further the link between the Tribunal's completion strategy and objectives and the resources requested in future budget proposals;

11. Concurs with the view of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions that continued close collaboration between the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda is essential, and urges the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures to ensure such collaboration;

12. Notes with concern that the vacancy rate at the International Tribunal for Rwanda remains high, while acknowledging that the level has been reduced during the biennium 2002-2003, and requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures, as a matter of priority, to reduce the vacancy rate during the biennium 2004-2005, including, if appropriate, through delegating authority to the Registrar for recruitment in the Professional category and considering extending the contracts of core staff for longer periods, consistent with the staff regulations and rules, and bearing in mind the targets set in the completion strategy;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to undertake efficiency measures to streamline the work of the Tribunal and to provide an assessment of the financial impact of those measures in future budget proposals;

15. Invites the Security Council to continue to monitor closely the progress made by the Tribunal towards completing its mandate, in accordance with the completion strategy;

16. Also invites the Security Council to request the Secretary-General to make initial preparations, including establishing the rules of procedure, for the transfer of cases to national jurisdictions;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on proposals for the resources necessary to aid in the transfer of cases to national jurisdictions;

18. Decides to maintain the current level of funding for consultants and experts;

Prison facilities

Following the Security Council's adoption of resolution 1512(2003) (see p. 1324), the Council President, on 27 October [meeting 4849], made statement S/PRST/2003/18 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council notes the invitation of the General Assembly contained in paragraph 7 of its resolution 57/289 of 20 December 2002 that it address uncertainties regarding the power of the International Tribunal for Rwanda under its statute to finance the upgrading of prison accommodation in which persons convicted by the Tribunal are to serve their sentences.

The Council confirms that it is within the lawful powers of the International Tribunal for Rwanda under its statute to fund the renovation and refurbishment of prison facilities in States that have concluded agreements with the United Nations for the carrying out of prison sentences of the Tribunal. Such funds shall be used to bring up to international minimum standards the prison accommodation to be occupied or used pursuant to those agreements.

The Council will remain seized of this matter.

Functioning of the tribunals

Office of the Prosecutor

On 28 July [S/2003/766], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that, in view of his consultations with Council members, he had concluded that it was time to split the role of the Prosecutor, heretofore shared by both ICTY and ICTR. He felt that, as the two Tribunals moved towards implementing their completion strategies, it seemed essential, in the interests of efficiency and effectiveness, for each to have its own Prosecutor. To that end, he proposed amendments to the ICTR statute, as set out in the annex to his letter, to permit the appointment of a separate Prosecutor for ICTR.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 August [meeting 4817], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1503(2003). The draft [S/2003/835] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 978(1995) of 27 February 1995, 1165(1998) of 30 April 1998, 1166(1998) of 13 May 1998, 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000, 1411(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1431(2002) of 14 August 2002, and 1481(2003) of 19 May 2003,

Noting the letter dated 28 July 2003 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council,

Commending the important work of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda in contributing to lasting peace and security in the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, and the progress made since their inception,

Noting that an essential prerequisite for achieving the objectives of the completion strategies of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda is full cooperation by all States, especially in apprehending all remaining at-large persons indicted by the Tribunals,

Welcoming steps taken by States in the Balkans and the Great Lakes region of Africa to improve cooperation and apprehend at-large persons indicted by the Tribunals, but noting with concern that certain States are still not offering full cooperation,

Urging Member States to consider imposing measures against individuals and groups or organizations assisting indictees at large to continue to evade justice, including measures designed to restrict the travel and freeze the assets of such individuals, groups, or organizations,

Recalling and reaffirming in the strongest terms the statement of 23 July 2002 made by the President of the Security Council, endorsing the strategy of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for completing investigations by the end of 2004, all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, and all of its work in 2010 (the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia Completion Strategy), by concentrating on the prosecution and trial of the most senior leaders suspected of being most responsible for crimes within the jurisdiction of the Tribunal and transferring cases involving those who may not bear this level of responsibility to competent national jurisdictions, as appropriate, as well as the strengthening of the capacity of such jurisdictions,

Urging the International Tribunal for Rwanda to formalize a detailed strategy, modelled on the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia Completion Strategy, to transfer cases involving intermediate- and lower-rank accused to competent national jurisdictions, as appropriate, including Rwanda, in order to allow the International Tribunal for Rwanda to achieve its objective of completing investigations by the end of 2004, all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, and all of its work in 2010 (International Tribunal for Rwanda Completion Strategy),

Noting that the above-mentioned completion strategies in no way alter the obligation of Rwanda and the countries of the former Yugoslavia to investigate those accused whose cases would not be tried by International Tribunal for Rwanda or the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and take appropriate action with respect to indictment and prosecution, while bearing in mind the primacy of the Tribunals over national courts,

Noting also that the strengthening of national judicial systems is crucially important to the rule of law in general and to the implementation of the completion strategies of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and International Tribunal for Rwanda in particular,

Noting further that an essential prerequisite for achieving the objectives of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia Completion Strategy is the expeditious establishment under the auspices of the High Representative and early functioning of a special chamber within the State Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina (the "War Crimes Chamber") and the subsequent referral by the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia of cases of lower- or intermediate-rank accused to the Chamber,

Convinced that the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda can most efficiently and expeditiously meet their respective responsibilities if each has its own Prosecutor,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Calls upon the international community to assist national jurisdictions, as part of the completion strategies, in improving their capacity to prosecute cases transferred from the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda, and encourages the Presidents, Prosecutors, and Registrars of the Tribunals to develop and improve their outreach programmes;

2. Calls upon all States, especially Serbia and Montenegro, Croatia, and Bosnia and Herzegovina, and on the Republika Srpska within Bosnia and Herzegovina, to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, particularly to bring Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic, as well as Ante Gotovina and all other indictees to the Tribunal, and calls upon these and all other at-large indictees of the Tribunal to surrender to it;

3. Calls upon all States, especially Rwanda, Kenya, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and the Republic of the Congo, to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal for Rwanda, including on investigations of the Rwandan Patriotic Army and efforts to bring Felicien Kabuga and all other such indictees to the Tribunal, and calls upon these and all other at-large indictees of the Tribunal to surrender to it;

4. Calls upon all States to cooperate with the International Criminal Police Organization (ICPO-Interpol) in apprehending and transferring persons indicted by the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda;

5. Calls upon the donor community to support the work of the High Representative for Bosnia and Herzegovina in creating a special chamber, within the State Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina, to adjudicate allegations of serious violations of international humanitarian law;

6. Requests the Presidents of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda and their Prosecutors, in their annual reports to the Council, to explain their plans to implement the completion strategies of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda;

7. Calls upon the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, and to complete all of their work in 2010 (the completion strategies);

8. Decides to amend article 15 of the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda and to replace that article with the provision set out in the annex to the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to nominate a person to be the Prosecutor of the International Tribunal for Rwanda;

9. Welcomes the intention expressed by the Secretary-General in his letter dated 28 July 2003 to submit to the Security Council the name of Ms. Carla Del Ponte as nominee for Prosecutor of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia;

10. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Annex

The Prosecutor

1. The Prosecutor shall be responsible for the investigation and prosecution of persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in the territory of Rwanda and Rwandan citizens responsible for such violations committed in the territory of neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994.

2. The Prosecutor shall act independently as a separate organ of the International Tribunal for Rwanda. He or she shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other source.

3. The Office of the Prosecutor shall be composed of a Prosecutor and such other qualified staff as may be required.

4. The Prosecutor shall be appointed by the Security Council on nomination by the Secretary-General. He or she shall be of high moral character and possess the highest level of competence and experience in the conduct of investigations and prosecutions of criminal cases. The Prosecutor shall serve for a four-year term and be eligible for reappointment. The terms and conditions of service of the Prosecutor shall be those of an Under-Secretary-General of the United Nations.

5. The staff of the Office of the Prosecutor shall be appointed by the Secretary-General on the recommendation of the Prosecutor.

OIOS report

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/289 [YUN 2002, p. 1291], the Secretary-General transmitted a review by the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) [A/58/677] of the Office of the Prosecutor of ICTR and of ICTY. The review, conducted in June and July, concluded that the then sole Prosecutor for both Tribunals had taken initiatives to improve the performance of the two Offices through the use of information technology and changing working methods, such as the way translations were carried out. However, best practices were not always shared between the Offices, resulting in missed opportunities for building synergies. In addition, arrangements for planning and monitoring needed internal strengthening, in coordination with the other organs of the Tribunals. There was insufficient information to confirm the Tribunals' contention to the Security Council that investigation and prosecution mandates would be completed by 2004 and 2008, respectively. The Offices lacked a strategy document that formed part of a coordinated Tribunal-wide approach and that identified the factors that impacted on the Tribunals' ability to achieve the completion dates. While certain elements were present in the ICTR and ICTY proposed 2004-2005 budgets, which included a revised management structure, reduction and redeployment of staff of the Office of the Prosecutor of both Tribunals, nowhere were those clearly indicated as requirements to achieve the completion dates. The review found delays in recruiting the ICTR Deputy Prosecutor and the Chief of Prosecutions to be due to inappropriate recruitment procedures on the part of the Offices and the Registries. The Secretary-General took note of the OIOS findings and concurred with the recommendations. The ICTR and ICTY Prosecutors had accepted the recommendations and were in the process of implementing them.

Chapter III

Legal aspects of international political relations

During 2003, the International Criminal Court (ICC), established by the 1998 Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, became an operational judicial institution. Following the election of its 18 judges and Prosecutor at the resumed first session of the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute, ICC held its inaugural meeting in The Hague, Netherlands, on 11 March. Its administrative set-up was completed with the appointment of its Presidency and constitution of its chambers by ICC and appointment of its most senior officials and subsidiary bodies at the second session of the Assembly of States Parties. In December, the General Assembly called on States not yet parties to the Rome Statute to consider ratifying or acceding to it and on all States to consider becoming parties to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Court.

The International Law Commission continued its examination of topics suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law, provisionally adopting additional draft guidelines and draft articles on reservations to treaties and on diplomatic protection. It also adopted the first three draft articles on the responsibility of international organizations.

The Ad Hoc Committee on the convention for suppression of nuclear terrorism and the Sixth (Legal) Committee of the General Assembly continued work on the elaboration of a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism and a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism.

The Ad Hoc Committee on the Scope of Legal Protection under the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel continued to consider measures to enhance the existing protective legal regime for UN and associated personnel.

Establishment of the International Criminal Court

The 1998 Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209], which established ICC as a permanent institution with the power to exercise jurisdiction over persons for the most serious crimes of international concern—genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and the crime of aggression—entered into force on 1 July 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1298]. As at 31 December 2003, the Statute had 139 signatories and 92 States parties.

During 2003, the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute, the management oversight and legislative body of ICC, fully constituted ICC by electing its 18 judges and Prosecutor, appointing its other senior officials and completing its administrative set-up, thus making ICC operational.

Peacekeeping and ICC

The Security Council, by resolution 1487 (2003) of 12 June (see p. 77), renewed its request contained in resolution 1422(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 70] that ICC delay for a 12-month period, from 1 July 2003, investigation or prosecution of any case involving current or former officials from a State not party to the Rome Statute. The Council further expressed its intention to renew that request each 1 July for as long as might be necessary.

Assembly of States Parties

The Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court met in New York for the first (3-7 February) and second (21-23 April) resumptions of its first (2002) annual session [YUN 2002, p. 1300] and for its second annual session (8-12 September). The reports summarizing the proceedings of the resumptions [ICC-ASP/1/3/Add.1] and of the second session [ICC-ASP/2/10] were adopted by the Assembly on 23 April and 12 September, respectively.

In February, the Assembly elected the required 18 judges of the Court, all beginning their terms of three, six and nine years (six judges for each term) on 11 March. At their inaugural meeting on that date, in The Hague, Netherlands, the judges took their oath of office.

In April, the Assembly unanimously elected the Prosecutor, Luis Moreno Ocampo (Argentina), who took office on 16 June. It recommended that the judges proceed to elect the Registrar on the basis of a list submitted by the Assembly Presidency, elected 10 of the 12 members of the Committee on Budget and Finance and authorized the Committee to begin functioning as partially constituted. The Bureau, acting under the delegated authority of the Assembly, appointed the National Audit Office of the United Kingdom as External Auditor for ICC for a four-year period.

At the September session, the Assembly elected the Deputy Prosecutor, Serge Brammertz (Belgium), for a six-year term starting on 3 November. It completed the election, begun in April, of the 12-member Committee on Budget and Finance, 6 to serve for two years and 6 for three, and elected the Board of Directors of the trust fund for the victims of crimes within ICC's jurisdiction and their families (Victims Trust Fund). It took note of the oral report of the Special Working Group on the Crime of Aggression, which met for the first time during the September session.

In other action, the Assembly established its permanent secretariat; approved the 2004 programme budget of ICC, which included 53,071,846 euros for the major programmes; approved the ICC staff regulations; sought to strengthen ICC and the Assembly; established a trust fund for the participation of least developed countries (LDCs) in the Assembly's work; and acknowledged the facilitating role of the non-governmental organization (NGO) Coalition for the International Criminal Court and of the United Nations in the establishment of ICC. It also considered the conditions of service and compensation of the ICC judges; the ratification status of the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Criminal Court [YUN 2002, p. 1301]; and the establishment of an international criminal bar.

The Assembly decided to hold its third session in The Hague from 6 to 10 September 2004. It also decided that the Committee on Budget and Finance would meet in The Hague from 29 to 31 March and from 2 to 6 August 2004.

ICC report. In August, ICC submitted a report [ICC-ASP-2/3 & Corr.1] for consideration by the Assembly of States Parties at its September session, describing: coordination within the Court; the election in March of its three-member Presidency—composed of the President (Judge Philippe Kirsch) and the First and Second Vice-Presidents—together with its judicial, administrative and external-relations functions; the Pre-Trial, Trial and Appeals Divisions (Chambers) into which the judges constituted themselves; the functions of the Office of the Prosecutor; and the election of the Registrar in June and the core mission of the Registry. Also described were the Court's relations with the States parties and with the host State with regard to interim and permanent premises and a headquarters agreement.

Report of Secretary-General. In a September report [A/58/372], submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/23 [YUN 2002, p. 1301], the Secretary-General described the sessions of the Assembly of States Parties and the substantive and technical services of the UN Secretariat in its capacity as provisional secretariat for the Assembly of States Parties. He stated that he had taken steps within the Secretariat to expand the mandate of the fund established by General Assembly resolution 51/207 of 17 December 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1205] for voluntary contributions towards meeting the costs of LDC participation in the work of the Assembly of States Parties. A total of 64 LDC delegates to the two-part resumption of the first session and to the second session received assistance from the fund in the form of air tickets. Since a similar fund had been established under the ICC Registrar's authority, the Assembly of States Parties requested the Secretary-General to close the special fund established by resolution 51/207.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/516], adopted resolution 58/79 without vote [agenda item 154].

Noting that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court was adopted on 17 July 1998 and entered into force on 1 July 2002,

Noting also that with the election of the judges and the Prosecutor and the appointment of the Registrar, the International Criminal Court is fully constituted,

Reiterating the historic significance of the adoption of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court,

1. Calls upon all States that are not yet parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court to consider ratifying it or acceding to it without delay, and encourages efforts aimed at promoting awareness of the results of the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court, held in Rome from 15 June to 17 July 1998, the provisions of the Statute and the process leading to the establishment of the International Criminal Court;

2. Calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Criminal Court without delay;

8. Invites the Secretary-General to take steps to conclude a relationship agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court and to submit the negotiated draft agreement to the General Assembly for approval;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "International Criminal Court".

International Law Commission

The International Law Commission (ILC) held its fifty-fifth session in Geneva in two parts (5 May–6 June; 7 July–8 August) [A/58/10]. During the second part, the International Law Seminar held its thirty-ninth session, which was attended by 24 participants, mostly from developing countries. They observed ILC meetings, attended specially arranged lectures and participated in working groups on specific topics.

ILC, assisted by working groups and a Drafting Committee, advanced its work on reservations to treaties by adopting further guidelines on the formulation and communication of reservations and interpretive declarations. It considered several draft articles on diplomatic protection, reviewed the progress on the topic of unilateral acts of States and agreed on a conceptual outline for the topic of international liability in case of loss from transboundary harm arising from hazardous activities. It considered the first reports on two of three new topics in its work programme, namely, the responsibility of international organizations and shared natural resources. It decided, in the case of the third new topic, fragmentation of international law: difficulties arising from the diversification and expansion of international law, to begin by studying the lex specialis rule and the question of self-contained regimes. (For details on those topics, see pp. 1336 and 1337.)

In furtherance of cooperation with other bodies concerned with international law, ILC continued its traditional information exchanges with the International Court of Justice, the Inter-American Juridical Committee, the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization, the European Committee on Legal Cooperation and the Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law. ILC members also held informal meetings with other bodies and associations on matters of mutual interest.

Among its other decisions, ILC reconstituted the working group on its long-term programme of work and reiterated that the page limitations for reports of subsidiary bodies, as endorsed by General Assembly resolution 57/21 [YUN 2002, p. 1302], could not be applied to its documentation because of the characteristics of its work. It further reiterated that Assembly resolution 56/272 [ibid., p. 1402], which reduced the payment of honorariums to the nominal amount of $1, contradicted the Secretary-General's 1998 recommendations on the subject [YUN 1998, p. 1304], was taken without consultation with ILC and was not consistent with the principle of fairness on the basis of which the United Nations conducted its affairs. It stressed that the decision especially affected special rapporteurs, as it compromised support for their research. ILC decided to hold its fifty-sixth session in Geneva in two parts: from 3 May to 4 June and from 5 July to 6 August 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/514], adopted resolution 58/77 without vote [agenda item 152].

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-fifth session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-fifth session,

Emphasizing the importance of furthering the codification and progressive development of international law as a means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the desirability of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission for closer examination, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission to enhance further their contribution to the progressive development of international law and its codification.

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Welcoming the holding of the International Law Seminar, and noting with appreciation the voluntary contributions made to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar,

Stressing the usefulness of focusing and structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention to each of the main topics dealt with in the report and for discussions on specific topics,

Wishing to enhance further, as proposed at the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly by the Austrian-Swedish initiative to revitalize the debate on the report of the International Law Commission, the interaction between the Sixth Committee as a body of governmental representatives and the Commission as a body of independent legal experts, with a view to improving the dialogue between the two bodies,

International liability

Under the topic of international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law, ILC considered the first report by Special Rapporteur Pemmaraju Sreenivasa Rao (India) on the legal regime for the allocation of loss in case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities [A/CN.4/531]. The report reviewed previous ILC work on the topic, analysed the liability regimes of various instruments and offered a series of conclusions that could be a basis for drafting more precise formulations. ILC established an open-ended working group to assist the Special Rapporteur in considering the future orientation of the topic in the light of the ILC debate on his report.

Unilateral acts of States

ILC considered the sixth report on unilateral acts of States [A/CN.4/534] by Special Rapporteur Victor Rodríguez Cedeño (Venezuela), dealing in a preliminary and general manner with the unilateral act of recognition, with emphasis on recognition of States. It analysed the act of recognition in its various forms (conduct and acts, silence and acquiescence, tacit recognition through implicit or explicit acts and conventional recognition), especially with regard to the criteria for the formulation of such an act and its discretionary nature. It examined the conditions required for the validity of the act (formulation (intent), lawfulness of the object and conformity with imperative norms of international law); its legal effects and the basis for its binding nature; and the application of the act of recognition in order to draw conclusions as to whether an author State could modify, suspend or revoke the act unilaterally. The report yielded an outline definition that could be aligned with the draft definition of unilateral acts in general.

Following the debate on the report, the open-ended working group on the subject submitted its recommendations on the scope of the topic, with commentaries, and on the methodological approach, which ILC adopted on 31 July.

Responsibility of international organizations

ILC considered the first report on the topic of responsibility of international organizations [A/CN.4/532] by Special Rapporteur Giorgio Gaja (Italy). The report proposed articles 1 to 3, on the scope of those articles, the use of terms and general principles, which ILC referred to the Drafting Committee. On the Committee's recommendation, ILC, in July, adopted the three articles and, in August, the commentaries thereto.

Fragmentation of international law

In 2003, ILC appointed Martti Koskenniemi (Finland) as Chairman of the open-ended study group, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1304], on the topic of fragmentation of international law: difficulties arising from the diversification and expansion of international law. The group set a tentative schedule of work for the remainder (2004-2006) of the current quinquennium (2002-2006). It distributed work among its members on the preparation of the outlines of four studies endorsed by ILC in 2002 (ibid., p. 1305) on: the interpretation of treaties in the light of "any relevant rules of international law applicable in the relations between the parties" (article 31 (3) (c) of the 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties [YUN 1969, p. 734]), in the context of general developments in international law and concerns of the international community; the application of successive treaties relating to the same subject matter (article 30 of the Vienna Convention); agreements to modify multilateral treaties between certain of the parties only (article 41 of the same Convention); and hierarchy in international law: jus cogens, obligations erga omnes, Article 103 of the Charter of the United Nations, as conflict rules.

The group agreed that the outlines should focus on the nature of the topic in relation to fragmentation; the acceptance and rationale of the relevant rule; the operation of that rule; and conclusions, including possible draft guidelines. It held a preliminary discussion on the Chairman's outline on the questions of the function and scope of the lex specialis rule and "self-contained regimes".

Shared natural resources

In July 2003, ILC considered the first report on shared natural resources [A/CN.4/533 & Add.1] by Special Rapporteur Chusei Yamada (Japan). The report described the background to the topic and proposed limiting its scope to confined transboundary groundwaters, oil and gas, beginning with the first item. The addendum provided an overview of groundwater resources and dealt with basic terminology and related issues. ILC was informally briefed by groundwater experts from the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Association of Hydrogeologists.

International State relations and international law

Jurisdictional immunities of States and their property

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/16 [YUN 2002, p. 1305], the Ad Hoc Committee on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property, established by resolution 55/150 [YUN 2000, p. 1246], reconvened (New York, 24-28 February 2003) to make a final attempt to consolidate areas of agreement and resolve outstanding issues, with a view to elaborating a generally acceptable instrument based on the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, adopted by ILC in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 829], and on the results of the discussions of the Ad Hoc Committee and the open-ended working group of the Sixth Committee established by resolution 53/98 [YUN 1998, p. 1215], and to recommend a form for the instrument.

The Working Group of the Whole established two informal consultative groups—the first to consider the outstanding issue of the criteria for determining the commercial character of a contract or transaction, and the second to consider those related to the concept of a State enterprise or other entity in relation to commercial transactions, contracts of employment, the question of non-applicability of the draft articles to criminal proceedings, and the articles' relationship with other agreements. The pending issues concerning ownership, possession and use of property; intellectual and industrial property; the effect of an arbitration agreement; and State immunity from prejudgement measures of constraint were considered by the Working Group of the Whole, as was the form of the future instrument. All outstanding issues were resolved by the Working Group.

On 28 February, the Ad Hoc Committee adopted its report [A/58/22], to which were annexed the text of the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property and the understandings with respect to certain of the articles' provisions. The Committee recommended that the Assembly take a decision on the form of the draft articles, noting that, if and when it decided to adopt the articles as a convention, they would need a preamble and final clauses, including a general saving provision concerning the relationship between the articles and other international agreements relating to the same subject.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/512], adopted resolution 58/74 without vote [agenda item 150].

3. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the outcome of its work;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property".

International terrorism

Conventions on international terrorism and for suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism

Ad Hoc Committee

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/27 [YUN 2002, p. 1307], the Ad Hoc Committee on the convention for suppression of nuclear terrorism, established by Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208], held its seventh session (New York, 31 March–2 April) to continue, within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee, to elaborate a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism, with appropriate time allocated to the continued consideration of outstanding issues relating to the elaboration of a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism. It kept on its agenda the question of convening a high-level conference under UN auspices to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations.

The Ad Hoc Committee held a general exchange of views and proceeded with informal bilateral consultations in two stages: the first on the outstanding issues pertaining to articles 2, 2 bis and 18 and to the preamble of the draft comprehensive convention; and the second on issues pertaining to the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism, the principal one of which related to article 4, on the scope of application of the convention. The results were orally presented by the coordinators for those two consultations.

The Committee Chairman said he had received no specific proposal on the question of convening a high-level conference but that some delegations had had informal contacts on the matter, which he urged them to continue.

On 2 April, the Ad Hoc Committee adopted its report [A/58/37], to which were annexed the Chairman's informal summary of the general discussion and the reports of the coordinators. The Ad Hoc Committee recommended that the Sixth Committee, at the Assembly's fifty-eighth (2003) session, establish a working group to continue the elaboration of the two draft conventions and to keep on its agenda the question of convening a high-level conference.

Sixth Committee working group

As recommended by the Ad Hoc Committee (see above), the Sixth Committee established an open-ended working group on measures to eliminate international terrorism, which held three meetings (New York, 6, 8 and 10 October). Before it were the reports of the Ad Hoc Committee on its sixth [YUN 2002, p. 1306] and seventh [A/58/37] sessions; the 2002 report of the Sixth Committee working group [YUN 2002, p. 1306], annexing the lists of written amendments and proposals on the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism; and the 1998 report of the Sixth Committee working group [YUN 1998, p. 1216], annexing a revised text of the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism, with written amendments and proposals.

The working group began with a general exchange of views and then held informal consultations on the outstanding issues of the two draft conventions. On 8 October, the consultation coordinators orally reported on the results of those consultations. The working group was informed by its Chairman that consultations by several delegations on the question of convening a high-level conference were continuing at the political level in their capitals. On 10 October, the group adopted its report [A/C.6/58/L.10], which it referred to the Sixth Committee with a recommendation that work on finalizing the texts of the two draft conventions should continue, building on what had already been accomplished.

Measures to eliminate terrorism

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/53 [YUN 1995, p. 1330], the Secretary-General, in July, issued his annual report with later addendum [A/58/116 & Add.1] containing information on measures taken at the national and international levels by 28 States and 13 international organizations and UN agencies and bodies to implement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, approved by Assembly resolution 49/60 [YUN 1994, p. 1294], and Security Council resolution 1269(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 1240]. It listed 21 international instruments pertaining to terrorism, indicating the status of State participation in each, and provided information on workshops and training courses on combating terrorist crimes by four UN bodies and one regional intergovernmental organization. The report noted that the Secretariat was in the process of compiling material to be included in a second volume of the United Nations Legislative Series entitled "National Law and Regulations on the Prevention and Suppression of International Terrorism, Part II".

Safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel

Ad Hoc Committee consideration. The Ad Hoc Committee on the Scope of Legal Protection under the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel [YUN 1994, p. 1289], established by General Assembly resolution 56/89 [YUN 2001, p. 1227], held its second session (New York, 24-28 March) to continue considering measures to enhance the existing protective legal regime for UN and associated personnel, including addressing the application of the Convention to all UN operations, taking into account the Secretary-General's 2000 report [YUN 2000, p. 1347] and the Ad Hoc Committee's discussions at its 2002 session [YUN 2002, p. 1311].

Accordingly, a working group of the whole of the Committee deliberated on the questions of removing from the Convention the requirement of a declaration of an exceptional risk (the "trigger" mechanism) and of the inclusion of UN operations other than those foreseen under article 1 (c) (i) within the scope of the Convention. It considered the first two of three proposals that were introduced: one by New Zealand, containing a draft optional additional protocol aimed at extending the application of the Convention to all UN operations by removing the "trigger" mechanism contained in article 1 (c) (ii) [A/AC.264/2003/DP.1]; the second, by Pakistan, representing a short-term measure aimed at improving the existing regime [A/AC.264/2003/DP.2]; and the third, by Greece on behalf of the European Union (EU), providing a replacement text for article 1 (c) of the Convention regarding the definition of UN operations [A/AC.264/2003/DP.3].

As an alternative to an optional protocol, it was suggested that a stand-alone instrument be drafted to include some of the Convention's provisions while updating certain others in the light of the relevant treaties, such as the 1997 International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings [YUN 1997, p. 1348] and the 1999 International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism [YUN 1999, p. 1233].

On 28 March, the Ad Hoc Committee adopted its report [A/58/52], which annexed the proposals and recommended that the Assembly renew its mandate for 2004 and request the Secretary-General to provide for its next session a report elaborating on his report on the implementation of the short-term measures agreed in Assembly resolution 57/28 [YUN 2002, p. 1311], as well as on any measures undertaken on his own initiative to achieve the goals of the Convention, taking into account the Committee's discussions and including an assessment of the overall effectiveness of such measures.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/28 and the Ad Hoc Committee's recommendation (above), the Secretary-General prepared a report [A/58/187] focusing on: the incorporation of the key provisions of the Convention into status-of-forces and status-of-mission agreements; a procedure to initiate a declaration of an exceptional risk pursuant to article 1 (c) (ii); and standardization of relevant provisions in agreements between the United Nations and humanitarian NGOs.

The Secretary-General observed that, in the light of the short period that had elapsed since the adoption of resolution 57/28 and of the 2003 report of the Ad Hoc Committee, it would be premature to assess the effectiveness of measures taken to strengthen the Convention's protective regime. Its key provisions had been introduced in a small number of status-of-forces and status-of-mission agreements, most of them currently under negotiation. In the absence of any request for information on matters relevant to the application of the Convention, the role of the Secretary-General as "certifying authority" for the purposes of attesting to a declaration of an exceptional risk had not been tested. A standard provision in agreements between the United Nations and NGOs was in no way likely to affect the application of the Convention or strengthen its protective regime if the host country was not otherwise bound by the Convention, although a list of NGOs operating in the UN area of operation and contractually linked to the Organization might be submitted to the host country, at its request.

The Secretary-General said that the difficulty of initiating a declaration of exceptional risk remained the single most important limitation to the protective regime of the Convention and observed that the strength of the Convention's protective regime lay in the readiness of Member States to ensure its implementation. Annexed to his report was a list of the 198 civilian personnel who had lost their lives as a result of malicious acts while performing services for the Organization since January 1992, indicating the States in whose territories those acts were committed. Also listed were 21 cases in which the Secretariat had been advised by the Member States concerned that they had taken legal action to bring the perpetrators to justice.

Sixth Committee working group. On 29 September, the Sixth Committee established a working group to continue the work of the Ad Hoc Committee. The report on the group's work [A/C.6/58/L.16] contained details of its discussions on a proposal by New Zealand and the EU amendment thereto (see above) and a proposal by Jordan that sought to fill the gaps found in the Convention and addressed the concerns that had hindered universal adherence to it. The report also described the discussions on options for the form of the document to be elaborated, whether it should be an additional protocol, optional protocol, amendment to the 1994 Convention or a stand-alone protocol. A proposal by Costa Rica on the subject was introduced for discussion at a later stage.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/519], adopted resolution 58/82 without vote [agenda item 157].

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

As at 31 December 2003, the States parties to the following conventions relating to the protection of diplomats and diplomatic and consular relations were: 180 States parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations [YUN 1961, p. 512], 50 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 516] and 62 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.].

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] had 165 parties, the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 512] had 39 and the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.] had 46.

Parties to the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents [YUN 1973, p. 775], numbered 144.

ILC consideration. ILC, at its fifty-fifth session [A/58/10], had before it the fourth report of Special Rapporteur John R. Dugard (South Africa) on diplomatic protection, specifically with regard to corporations and shareholders [A/CN.4/530 & Add.1]. ILC considered the first part of the report covering draft articles 17 to 20 in May and the second part covering draft articles 21 and 22 in July. It established an open-ended working group on article 17, paragraph 2, which concerned, in respect of an injury to a corporation, the determination of its State nationality. ILC subsequently referred to the Drafting Committee article 17 as proposed by the working group, together with articles 18 to 22.

In June, ILC considered the Drafting Committee's report on draft articles 8 [10], 9 [11] and 10 [14], with the commentaries thereon. It provisionally adopted those articles and reproduced in its report the draft articles on diplomatic protection that it had so far adopted.

Treaties and agreements

Reservations to treaties

In July 2003, ILC [A/58/10] considered the eighth report of Special Rapporteur Alain Pellet (France) relating to withdrawal and modification of reservations to treaties and interpretative declarations, as well as to the formulation of objections to them [A/CN.4/535 & Add.1]. ILC referred to the Drafting Committee draft guidelines 2.3.5 (enlargement of the scope of a reservation), 2.4.9 (modification of interpretative declarations), 2.4.10 (modification of a conditional interpretative declaration), 2.5.12 (withdrawal of an interpretative declaration) and 2.5.13 (withdrawal of a conditional interpretative declaration).

Earlier, in May, ILC considered and provisionally adopted the following draft guidelines referred to the Drafting Committee in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 184]: 2.5.1 (withdrawal of reservations), 2.5.2 (form of withdrawal), 2.5.3 (periodic review of the usefulness of reservations), 2.5.4 [2.5.5] (formulation of the withdrawal of a reservation at the international level), 2.5.5 [2.5.5 bis, 2.5.5 ter] (absence of consequences at the international level of the violations of internal rules regarding the withdrawal of reservations), 2.5.6 (communication of a withdrawal of a reservation), 2.5.7 [2.5.7, 2.5.8] (effect of withdrawal of a reservation), 2.5.8 [2.5.9] (effective date of withdrawal of a reservation) (together with model clauses A, B and C), 2.5.9 [2.5.10] (cases on which a reserving State or international organization may unilaterally set the effective date of withdrawal of a reservation), 2.5.10 [2.5.11] (partial withdrawal of a reservation) and 2.5.11 [2.5.12] (effect of a partial withdrawal of a reservation). In August, ILC adopted the commentaries to those draft guidelines and reproduced in its report the text of the draft guidelines on reservations to treaties it had so far provisionally adopted, together with the commentaries pertaining thereto.

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations [YUN 1986, p. 1006], which had not entered into force, had 37 States parties as at 31 December 2003.

UN registration and publication of treaties

During 2003, 1,214 international agreements were received and 955 were registered; 1,251 subsequent actions were registered or filed and recorded by the Secretariat. In addition, 1,008 formalities concerning agreements for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions were registered. Twelve issues of the Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements were published.

Also in 2003, the texts of international agreements registered or filed and recorded were published in the UN Treaty Series in 47 volumes in the original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary. The drop in the number of volumes published was due mainly to the lack of translations. Volume 38 of the Cumulative Index to the Treaty Series was published in English and French. The new edition of the Final Clauses of Multilateral Treaties Handbook [Sales No. E.04.V.3] was also published.

Multilateral treaties

The UN Treaty Series (in 2,228 printed volumes as at the end of 2003) and the regularly updated status of multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General were available on the Internet at the UN Treaty Collection web site (<http://untreaty.un.org>).

Chapter IV

Law of the Sea

The United Nations continued in 2003 to promote universal acceptance of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and its two implementing Agreements, on the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and on the privileges and immunities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea.

The three institutions created by the Convention—the International Seabed Authority, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf—held sessions during the year.

On 31 May 2003, the 1998 Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Seabed Authority entered into force.

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea*Signatures and ratifications

In 2003, Albania, Canada, Kiribati and Lithuania ratified or acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), bringing the number of parties to 145. The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 178], entered into force on 16 November 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1301].

Meeting of States Parties

The thirteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention (New York, 9-13 June) [SPLOS/103 & Corr.1] discussed the 2002 activities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea [YUN 2002, p. 1321] and took action on a number of Tribunal-related financial and administrative issues, including: approving the 2004 budget in the amount of $8.04 million and a new budget line providing for the Tribunal's liability coverage in the event of service-related death, injury or illness; reducing the ceiling rate of the assessment scale for States parties for the Tribunal budget from the current 25 per cent to 24 per cent for the 2004 budget and to 22 per cent for the 2005-2006 budget; deciding to deduct on a pro rata basis from the contributions of States parties to the 2004 budget the $2.3 million that had accrued in the staff assessment account at the end of 2002; and adopting the Tribunal's Financial Regulations, to become effective on 1 January 2004. Also discussed were the 2002 activities of the International Seabed Authority and of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf [ibid.], and the possible inclusion in the agenda of future Meetings of issues arising from the implementation of UNCLOS.

On 2 September, a Special Meeting of States Parties elected Judge Anthony Amos Lucky (Trinidad and Tobago) to fill the vacancy in the Tribunal created by the death on 29 March of Judge Lennox Fitzroy Ballah (Trinidad and Tobago). Judge Lucky would serve on the Tribunal until 30 September 2011.

Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention

During 2003, the number of parties to the 1994 Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention (governing exploitation of seabed resources beyond national jurisdiction), adopted by General Assembly resolution 48/263 [YUN 1994, p. 1301], reached 117. The Agreement, which entered into force on 28 July 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1215], was to be interpreted and applied together with the Convention as a single instrument, and, in the event of any inconsistency between the Agreement and Part XI of the Convention, the provisions of the Agreement would prevail. Any ratification of or accession to the Convention after 28 July 1994 represented consent to be bound by the Agreement also. Parties to the Convention prior to the Agreement's adoption had to deposit a separate instrument of ratification of or accession to the Agreement.

Agreement relating to conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks

As at 31 December 2003, the number of parties to the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks [YUN 1995, p. 1334] reached 51. Referred to as the Fish Stocks Agreement, it entered into force on 11 December 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1232].

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 56/13 [YUN 2001, p. 1232] and 57/143 [YUN 2002, p. 1318], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/58/215] on the status and implementation of the Fish Stocks Agreement and its impact on related or proposed instruments throughout the UN system, with special reference to the implementation of Part VII of the Agreement dealing with the requirements of developing States. The report discussed the role of all States in the implementation of the Agreement and of States acting through sub-regional and regional fisheries management organizations (RFMOs) and arrangements; peaceful dispute settlement; Part VII of the Agreement; and the impact of the Agreement's entry into force on related or proposed international instruments.

The report concluded that the Agreement had had an important impact on the conservation and management of international fisheries, representing a benchmark for many States and recognized by the Plan of Implementation of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]; its full effect would only be achieved, however, by the wider acceptance and implementation of its provisions by all States. The current depleted state of stocks covered by the Agreement and the costs associated with implementing the Agreement were likely to mean that the short-term focus would be on distribution of actual fishing opportunities and full recovery of management costs, rather than on development of new fisheries. The report recommended specific action by coastal, flag and port States; global coverage of stocks by RFMOs and strengthening of RFMOs; priority areas of assistance to developing States parties to the Agreement under a new Part VII trust fund; and cooperation and coordination at the State and UN inter-agency levels and among RFMOs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 November [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/14 [draft: A/58/L.18 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 52 (b)].

Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 46/215 of 20 December 1991, 49/116 and 49/118 of 19 December 1994, 50/25 of 5 December 1995 and 57/142 of 12 December 2002, as well as other resolutions on large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing, unauthorized fishing in zones of national jurisdiction and on the high seas, fisheries by-catch and discards, and other developments, and its resolutions 56/13 of 28 November 2001 and 57/143 of 12 December 2002 on the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks ("the Agreement"),

Recalling the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention"), and bearing in mind the relationship between the Convention and the Agreement,

Recognizing that, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement sets forth provisions concerning the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, including provisions on sub-regional and regional cooperation in enforcement, binding dispute settlement and the rights and obligations of States in authorizing the use of vessels flying their flags for fishing on the high seas,

Noting that the Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations ("the Code") and its associated international plans of action set out principles and global standards of behaviour for responsible practices to conserve, manage and develop fisheries, including guidelines for fishing on the high seas and in areas under the national jurisdiction of other States, and on fishing gear selectivity and practices, with the aim of reducing by-catch and discards,

Noting with satisfaction the Strategy for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Capture Fisheries recently adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and recognizing that the long-term improvement of the knowledge and understanding of fishery status and trends is a fundamental basis for fisheries policy and management for implementing the Code,

Recognizing the need to implement, as a matter of priority, the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), in relation to achieving sustainable fisheries,

Deploring the fact that fish stocks, including straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in many parts of the world are overfished or subject to sparsely regulated and heavy fishing efforts, mainly as a result of, inter alia, unauthorized fishing, inadequate regulatory measures and excess fishing capacity,

Concerned that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing threatens seriously to deplete populations of certain fish species and to significantly damage marine ecosystems, to the detriment of sustainable fisheries as well as the food security and the economies of many States, particularly developing States,

Recognizing that inadequate flag State control over fishing vessels, including those fishing for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and insufficient monitoring, control and surveillance measures exacerbate the problem of overfishing,

Recognizing also that the interrelationship between ocean activities, such as shipping and fishing, and environmental issues needs further consideration,

Calling attention to the circumstances affecting fisheries in many developing States, in particular African States and small island developing States, and recognizing the urgent need for capacity-building to assist such States in meeting their obligations under international instruments and realizing the benefits from fisheries resources,

Noting the obligation of all States, pursuant to the provisions of the Convention, to cooperate in the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and recognizing the importance of coordination and cooperation at the global, regional, subregional as well as national levels in the areas, inter alia, of data collection, information-sharing, capacity-building and training for the conservation, management and sustainable development of marine living resources,

Recognizing the duty provided in the Convention, the Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Conservation and Management Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas ("the Compliance Agreement"), the Agreement and the Code for flag States to exercise effective control over fishing vessels flying their flag and vessels flying their flag which provide support to such vessels, and to ensure that the activities of such vessels do not undermine the effectiveness of conservation and management measures taken in accordance with international law and adopted at the national, subregional, regional or global levels,

Recognizing also the urgent need for action at all levels to ensure the long-term sustainable use and management of fisheries resources,

Recognizing further the economic and cultural importance of sharks in many countries, the biological importance of sharks in the marine ecosystem, the vulnerability of some shark species to over-exploitation and the need for measures to promote the long-term sustainability of shark populations and fisheries,

Reaffirming its support for the initiative of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and relevant regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements on the conservation and management of sharks, while noting with concern that only a small number of countries have implemented the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization in 1999,

Noting with satisfaction the outcomes of the second round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement, held in New York from 23 to 25 July 2003,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General, and emphasizing the useful role that the report plays in bringing together information relating to the sustainable development of the world's marine living resources provided by States, relevant international organizations, regional and subregional fisheries organizations and non-governmental organizations,

Noting with satisfaction that the incidence of reported large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing activities in most regions of the world's oceans and seas has continued to be low,

Expressing concern that the practice of large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing remains a threat to marine living resources,

Emphasizing that efforts should be made to ensure that the implementation of resolution 46/215 in some parts of the world does not result in the transfer to other parts of the world of drift nets that contravene the resolution,

Expressing concern at the reports of continued loss of seabirds, particularly albatrosses, as a result of incidental mortality from longline fishing operations, and the loss of other marine species, including sharks and fin-fish species, as a result of incidental mortality, and noting with satisfaction the imminent entry into force of the Agreement for the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels under the Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals,

Welcoming the fact that a growing number of States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, as well as regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, have enacted legislation, established regulations, adopted conventions or taken other measures as steps towards implementation of the provisions of the Agreement,

Recognizing the significant contribution of sustainable fisheries to food security, income and wealth for present and future generations,

I

Achieving sustainable fisheries

1. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of the marine living resources of the world's oceans and seas and the obligations of States to cooperate to this end, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the relevant provisions of the Convention, in particular the provisions on cooperation set out in Part V and Part VII, section 2, of the Convention regarding straddling stocks, highly migratory species, marine mammals, anadromous stocks and marine living resources of the high seas, and where applicable, the Agreement;

2. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention, which sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out, taking into account the relationship between the Convention and the Agreement;

3. Reaffirms the importance of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation in relation to fisheries, in particular the commitment made therein to restore depleted fish stocks on an urgent basis and, where possible, not later than 2015;

4. Urges all States to apply the precautionary approach widely to the conservation, management and exploitation of fish stocks, including straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and calls upon States parties to the Agreement to implement fully the provisions of article 6 of the Agreement as a matter of priority;

II

Implementation of the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks

5. Calls upon all States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, that have not done so to ratify or accede to the Agreement and to consider applying it provisionally;

Institutions created by the Convention

International Seabed Authority

Through the International Seabed Authority, established by UNCLOS and the 1994 Implementation Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 1301], States organized and conducted exploration of the resources of the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction. In 2003, the Authority, which had 145 members as at 31 December, held its ninth annual session (Kingston, Jamaica, 28 July–8 August) [ISBA/10/A/3]. Its subsidiary bodies, namely, the Assembly, the Council, the Legal and Technical Commission and the Finance Committee, also met during the session.

The Assembly considered the report of the Authority's Secretary-General covering July 2002 to June 2003 [ISBA/9/A/3], who indicated that, in view of the increasing technical emphasis in the Authority's work, he had begun developing a comprehensive three-year work plan to incorporate a review of existing staff positions and job descriptions and detailed budgetary implications of planned training programmes, with a view to strengthening the secretariat's technical expertise in marine scientific research. He would keep the pattern of meetings under review to ensure that it met the requirements of the various organs and bodies involved and represented the most efficient mechanism for carrying out the necessary technical work.

The Legal and Technical Commission, reporting to the Council on its work during the current session [ISBA/9/C/4], acknowledged that, from its evaluation of the first set of annual (2002) reports by the seven contractors engaged in the exploration for polymetallic nodules, the contractors had taken note of the format and structure recommended by the Commission [YUN 2002, p. 1321]. It stated that, of the second set of annual reports due by the end of March, five had been received as at 10 June. The Council noted the Commission's progress in formulating draft rules, regulations and procedures for the prospecting and exploration of polymetallic sulphides and cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts in the Area (the seabed area beyond the limits of national jurisdiction), including regulations for the protection and preservation of the marine environment during those operations. The Council further noted the need for a flexible approach, given the lack of scientific knowledge relating to deep sea ecosystems, and for any proposed regulations to be consistent with the existing regulatory regime for polymetallic nodules [YUN 2000, p. 1257].

On 31 May, the 1998 Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Seabed Authority [YUN 1998, p. 1226] entered into force, following the accession to it of the tenth member of the Authority, Nigeria.

In a ceremony at the Authority's headquarters on 17 December, the Supplementary Agreement between the Authority and the Government of Jamaica regarding the headquarters of the Authority and the use of the Jamaica Conference Centre complex was signed. Negotiations towards the Agreement, begun in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1257], concluded in November. The Agreement, to be applied provisionally upon signature, would enter into force upon its approval by the Assembly of the Authority and the Government of Jamaica.

International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea held its fifteenth (10–21 March) and sixteenth (8–19 September) sessions at its seat in Hamburg, Germany [SPLOS/109].

The Tribunal met from 20 September to 8 October to deal with the Case concerning Land Reclamation by Singapore in and around the Straits of Johor (Malaysia v. Singapore). The judicial deliberations in the case were held in conjunction with the Tribunal's September session. On 5 September, Malaysia submitted a request for the prescription of provisional measures under article 290, paragraph 5, pending the constitution of an arbitral tribunal to be established under annex VII to the Convention. A copy of a 4 July document instituting arbitral proceedings against Singapore accompanied the request, which was entered in the list of cases as Case No. 12. Pursuant to article 17, paragraph 3, of the statute, Malaysia nominated Kamal Hossain and Singapore nominated Bernard H. Oxman as judges ad hoc, who were admitted to participate in the case. By a 10 September Order, the Tribunal fixed 25 September for the opening of the hearing. On 20 September, Singapore filed its response. On 24 September, prior to the opening of the hearing, the Tribunal held initial deliberations. At five public sittings on 25, 26 and 27 September, the Tribunal heard oral arguments from the parties and their final submissions at the end of the hearing. On 8 October, the Tribunal delivered its Order.

In the Case concerning the Conservation and Sustainable Exploitation of Swordfish Stocks in the South-Eastern Pacific Ocean (Chile/European Community), the Tribunal considered the requests of Chile and the European Community dated 31 October and 11 November, respectively, to continue suspension of the time limit for a further two years. By an order of 16 December, the Tribunal extended the time limit for making preliminary objections until 1 January 2006.

The thirteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention approved the Tribunal's proposed 2004 budget in the amount of $8,039,000.

Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf

In 2003, the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf, established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1362], held its twelfth session (New York, 28 April–2 May) [CLCS/36]. Its thirteenth session, scheduled for 25 to 29 August, was not held as no submission from a coastal State had been received by 25 May.

At the twelfth session, the Commission considered a number of items to facilitate the process of dealing with coastal States' submissions regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, including a review of its procedural and organizational documents with a view to aligning their provisions. It decided that the operational provisions contained in its modus operandi would be combined with the internal procedure of the subcommissions set up to examine submissions into one document, and to make only editorial amendments to its Rules of Procedure and re-issue it as a separate document. To address concerns of confidentiality in connection with the need of States for information and data contained in coastal States' submissions and relevant Commission recommendations, the Commission decided that its recommendations should include an executive summary containing a general description of the extended continental shelf and a set of coordinates to identify the line describing the outer limits recommended by the Commission and illustrative charts, if appropriate. The Secretary-General would then be in a position to publicize the summary at his discretion, without causing prejudice to confidentiality requirements. Also considered was the status of the training manual to assist States in preparing submissions in respect of the outer limits of the continental shelf, for which a master plan had already been prepared by the two coordinators who were members of the Commission.

Other developments related to the Convention

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/141 [YUN 2002, p. 1322], the Secretary-General submitted a March report with later addendum on oceans and the law of the sea [A/58/65 & Add.1], in which he described the status of UNCLOS and its two implementing Agreements and discussed issues related to maritime space; safety of navigation; crimes at sea; marine resources, the marine environment and sustainable development; marine science and technology; settlement of disputes; and international cooperation and coordination.

According to the report, issues dominating discussions in several forums in the area of navigation were the accelerated phase-out of single-hull oil tankers, the transport of dangerous goods by sea, coastal States' jurisdiction, capacity-building for the production of nautical charts, flag State implementation and enforcement, ports of refuge, the provision of a place of safety for persons rescued at sea, and the freedom of movement of seafarers balanced against security concerns. Urgent action to ensure the effective conservation and sustainable use of marine and coastal biodiversity was underscored. So was the role of the International Maritime Organization in establishing international rules and standards for the prevention, reduction and control of marine environment pollution from vessels (see p. 1529) and in providing a forum for the consideration of new measures, such as the designation of a large area off the coasts of several Western European countries as a particularly sensitive sea area.

The Secretary-General considered it necessary for all States to ratify or accede to UNCLOS and its implementing Agreements and to the many other agreements giving substance and detail to the basic UNCLOS principles; to implement those agreements in their national laws and administrative structures; and actively to apply and enforce those laws and regulations. It was essential to reinforce the control of flag States over their vessels and to ensure that States did not register any vessels unless they had a truly effective means of enforcing on them all the relevant international rules and standards. To enhance and facilitate inter-agency cooperation, a flexible and transparent mechanism needed to be established to review ongoing ocean-related work in each agency, fund and programme, and to prepare coordinated responses to emerging challenges or urgent issues; it should work within UN established structures, such as the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination and its High-level Committee on Programmes. Mindful that the annual report on oceans and the law of the sea could play a role in facilitating international coordination and cooperation, the Secretary-General proposed submitting two separate reports to the Assembly: one, to be prepared in time for the meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (see p. 1355), would report on the areas of focus recommended by the Assembly and on international coordination and cooperation; the other, to be prepared for the Assembly's consideration under the agenda item on oceans and the law of the sea, would provide the traditional comprehensive overview of developments on the subject.

Marine environment: reporting and assessment

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/141 [YUN 2002, p. 1322], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/423] providing an overview of the main developments concerning the proposed establishment of a regular process for the reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, that would build on ongoing assessments. The report focused on steps towards such a process and reflected some of the discussions on global marine assessment (GMA) at an inter-agency consultative meeting of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (Paris, 8-9 September).

The report concluded that: the GMA process should operate under the authority of the General Assembly; capacity-building would be among its essential elements; funding required to support a secretariat and a global scientific panel could be considerable and would also have to cover preparatory work to establish the process; the organizational model proposed by the Joint Group of Experts on the Scientific Aspects of Marine Environmental Protection (GESAMP) appeared the most compelling; and the status of GESAMP as an existing inter-agency mechanism and its long-standing experience (since its founding in 1967) in marine assessment qualified it for a leading role in the global scientific panel. Although enough preparatory work had already been done, the practical modalities involved were complex and required further expert consideration.

United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/141 [YUN 2002, p. 1322], the fourth meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (New York, 2-6 June) [A/58/95] focused its discussions on the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems and on the safety of navigation. In that regard, and also with respect to Assembly resolutions 57/142 [ibid., p. 1058] and 57/143 [ibid., p. 1318], the Consultative Process presented proposals for the Assembly's consideration.

Established by Assembly resolution 54/33 [YUN 1999, p. 994] to facilitate the Assembly's annual review of developments in ocean affairs, the Consultative Process, in 2003, began the new three-year period for which it had been extended by Assembly resolution 57/141. It noted that the period since its third (2002) meeting had seen a heightened awareness of oceans issues, with the observation of the twentieth anniversary of the opening for signature of UNCLOS [YUN 2002, p. 1316] and the convening of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [ibid., p. 821].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/240 [draft: A/58/L.19 & Add.1] by recorded vote (156-1-2) [agenda item 52 (a)].

Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

During 2003, the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs continued to fulfil its role as the substantive unit of the UN Secretariat responsible for reviewing and monitoring all developments related to the law of the sea and ocean affairs, as well as for the implementation of UNCLOS and related General Assembly resolutions.

Under its TRAIN-SEA-COAST programme [YUN 1998, p. 1232], designed to build in-country capacity to improve skills in integrated coastal and ocean management, the Division conducted three training courses on responsible fisheries in the Pacific islands (June), and on ships' ballast water management (Brazil, 12-16 June).

In December, the eighteenth Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, established in 1981 [YUN 1981, pp. 130 & 139], was awarded to Fernanda Millicay of Argentina.

Evaluation of programme on law of the sea and ocean affairs

By an April note [E/AC.51/2003/3], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on its in-depth evaluation of the work of the programme on the law of the sea and ocean affairs, implemented since 1992 by the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea (see above), with a focus on the period 1998-2002. OIOS recommended that consultations among secretariats of the treaty system of institutions be held periodically and that the new inter-agency coordinating mechanism on oceans and coastal areas called for by General Assembly resolution 57/141 [YUN 2002, p. 1322] be task-oriented and involve all relevant UN agencies and programmes. It recommended that the Division promote universal acceptance of UNCLOS and its two related Agreements, participate actively in regional seas meetings and action plans, further analyse and synthesize information on new developments in ocean affairs, assess the needs of the readership of its publications to increase their usefulness, and maintain its capacity to fulfil its different responsibilities, taking account of existing specialized expertise throughout the UN system. The Secretary-General took note of the findings of OIOS and concurred with its recommendations. CPC [A/58/16], in approving the recommendations, stated that the annual report on oceans and the law of the sea should neither include assessments of the overall impact of the efforts of the competent organizations nor suggest future activities; rather it should focus on issues pertinent to oceans and seas in a systematic and integrated way.

Chapter V

Other legal questions

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization continued in 2003 to consider, among other items, proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security in order to strengthen the Organization and the implementation of Charter provisions on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII.

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to address complaints by permanent missions to the United Nations. Matters discussed included delays in issuing visas, transportation problems, security and safety, and travel regulations.

The Ad Hoc Committee on an International Convention against the Reproductive Cloning of Human Beings continued its consideration of the elaboration of a mandate for negotiating an international convention, within the framework of a working group of the Sixth (Legal) Committee.

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law adopted the Model Legislative Provisions on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects. In December, the General Assembly took note of the Model and requested the Secretary-General to consolidate that text and the Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects into a single publication.

In other action, the Assembly approved the guidelines and recommendations proposed by the Secretary-General for the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, and appointed 25 Members to the Programme's Advisory Committee for a four-year period beginning 1 January 2004.

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

Special Committee on United Nations Charter

tee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its fifty-eighth session (New York, 7-16 April) [A/58/33], continued to consider proposals relating to: the maintenance of international peace and security, according priority to the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions; the peaceful settlement of disputes between States; the future of the Trusteeship Council; the improvement of the Committee's working methods; and the status of the publications Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council.

In an exchange of views on the first item, the point was made that the question of sanctions as an effective policy tool to modify the behaviour of a State, entity or group of individuals posing a threat to international peace and security should be addressed in a holistic manner to include their impact on target States. In that connection, support was expressed for the revised working paper submitted by the Russian Federation entitled "Declaration on the basic conditions and standard criteria for the introduction of sanctions and other coercive measures and their implementation". The Committee's working group of the whole completed its first reading of the preamble and operative part of the draft declaration, subject to the amendments proposed, and agreed that the sponsor should prepare a revised version for a second reading.

Support was also expressed for the revised working paper on the strengthening of certain principles concerning the impact and application of sanctions, submitted by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya [YUN 2002, p. 1329], which said that it complemented the Russian Federation's paper.

Discussions continued on the proposal submitted by the Russian Federation (1998) entitled "Fundamentals of the legal basis for United Nations peacekeeping operations in the context of Chapter VI of the Charter of the United Nations". Its key elements included: a clear definition of the mandate of peacekeeping operations, including humanitarian assistance; establishing the limits to peacekeepers' right to self-defence while strengthening their protection; analysing the mechanism of apportioning responsibility between the United Nations and troop-contributing States for damage caused during peacekeeping operations; and specifying basic peacekeeping principles, including non-interference in the internal affairs of States parties to the conflict, neutrality and impartiality.

The working papers submitted by Cuba (1997 and 1998) entitled "Strengthening the role of the Organization and enhancing its effectiveness" contained proposals aimed at analysing the functions and powers of the General Assembly and Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security. On the basis of those proposals, Cuba hoped a consensus could be reached on measures to strengthen the relevant provisions of the Charter.

As to the revised proposal submitted by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya (1998) on strengthening the role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security, the sponsor noted that it was complementary to Cuba's proposals. It reiterated its concerns over the existing imbalance of powers exercised by the principal UN organs, as underscored by the situation in Iraq (see p. 315), and therefore the importance of the Special Committee's consideration of its revised proposal.

Discussions continued on the revised working paper jointly submitted by Belarus and the Russian Federation (2001) proposing that an advisory opinion be sought from the International Court of Justice (ICJ) on the legal consequences of a State's resort to the use of force without prior Council authorization, except in the exercise of the right to self-defence.

On the peaceful settlement of disputes, the primacy of the principle of free choice of means was emphasized. The Committee noted that recourse to dispute-settlement mechanisms required the disputing parties' consent. In singling out the importance of the judicial settlement of disputes, it stressed the role of ICJ, reaffirmed its authority and emphasized the need to ensure adequacy of its resources.

On the future of the Trusteeship Council, it was reiterated that to abolish it or change its status would be premature, since its existence entailed no financial implications for the United Nations and the purpose for which it had been established remained relevant.

With regard to measures to improve the Special Committee's working methods, a further revised working paper on the subject, submitted by Japan and the Republic of Korea and subsequently co-sponsored by Thailand, was reviewed by the working group, which provisionally adopted several of the proposed paragraphs, as amended. The remaining provisions would be taken up at the 2004 session.

As to the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council, the Legal Counsel reported to the working group on the status of both publications, including the Secretary-General's proposal to discontinue work on the Repertory, the instructions not to provide for it in the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget and an option that an academic institution might consider taking over the publication. The Special Committee recommended that the Assembly, at its fifty-eighth session, should encourage the Secretary-General in his efforts to eliminate the backlog in both publications, including by exploring options involving cooperation with academic institutions without prejudice to the continuation of timely publication; commend him for his initiative to make Repertory studies available on the Internet; and request him to exert every effort to make electronically available all versions of the Repertory as early as possible.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/24 [YUN 2002, p. 1331], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/58/347] outlining the steps taken by the Secretariat to reduce the backlog in the publication of the supplements to the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council, including consideration of alternative courses of action relating to the Repertory. For the Repertoire, it proposed a two-track approach to address current developments in the procedure and practice of the Council, and to expedite elimination of the backlog. The Assembly was invited, in the context of the approval of the 2004-2005 budget, to take action in the light of the information presented.

ACABQ report. Having considered the Secretary-General's September report and additional information provided by his representatives, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in October [A/58/537], recalled that any Assembly decision entailing financial requirements was subject to the provision of a statement of programme budget implications and its consideration by the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, which would make the appropriate recommendation.

Charter provisions relating to sanctions

Special Committee consideration. During the Special Committee's consideration of the implementation of the Charter provisions related to assistance to third States affected by sanctions [A/58/33], it was suggested that, given the length of time that the Committee had been considering the question, it should recommend the establishment of a working group of the Sixth Committee as a framework for a focused discussion of the issue. The Security Council was called upon to be fair and equitable in its application of sanctions. Prior to their imposition, the Council should make an objective evaluation and assessment, without overestimation, of their short-, medium- and long-term impact on third States, as well as on the target States, giving special consideration to their humanitarian impact. Sanctions should be clearly defined, targeted, imposed for a specific time frame, subject to periodic review and lifted as soon as the reason for their imposition had ceased to exist. Practical measures to alleviate the hardships encountered by third States included granting commercial exemptions, concessions or preferential treatment to such States or their suppliers; granting priority to their contractors for investment in the target State; and allowing their participation in the provision of supplies for peacekeeping operations or in the post-conflict rehabilitation, reconstruction and development. Maintaining direct consultations between the Council and the affected States was also mentioned. Delegations welcomed the Council's recent practice of imposing targeted sanctions of limited duration, and its adoption of the de-listing procedure (enabling individuals listed as targets to submit information to the sanctions committee concerned showing that the listing should not apply or no longer applied) and of technical resolutions on humanitarian exemptions. Targeted sanctions (arms embargoes, travel restrictions, freezing of personal assets and exclusion from participation in international forums) were viewed as appropriate interventions to address concerns regarding the humanitarian impact of sanctions. The initiatives undertaken outside the UN framework to establish targeted sanctions as regular tools for application by the Council were commended, such as the Interlaken (Switzerland) process on targeted financial sanctions [YUN 2001, p. 1246] and the Bonn-Berlin (Germany) process on arms embargoes and travel-related restrictions [ibid.].

The Committee recommended that the Assembly continue to consider the 1998 expert group's deliberations and main findings on developing a methodology for assessing the consequences incurred by third States as a result of preventive or enforcement measures [YUN 1998, p. 1235], taking into account the Committee's current debate; views presented in the Secretary-General's 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1252] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1270] reports; his most recent views on the main findings of the ad hoc expert group [YUN 2002, p. 1333]; and information he was to submit on the follow-up to a 1999 Security Council note [YUN 1999, p. 1252] and on assistance to third States affected by sanctions under Chapter VII and the implementation of Assembly resolution 57/25 [YUN 2002, p. 1333].

Security Council consideration. The Security Council met on 25 February 2003 [meeting 4713] to discuss general issues relating to sanctions and to consider the report of the Stockholm Process on the Implementation of Targeted Sanctions presented by Sweden. Begun in November 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1246], the Stockholm Process lasted for more than a year. Its goal was to suggest ways to strengthen the capacity to implement targeted sanctions, both within the UN system and among Member States, and to minimize unintentional negative consequences. One priority was to identify measures to enhance planning, monitoring, reporting and coordination among sanctions committees and monitoring bodies.

By an 18 December note [S/2003/1185], the Council President announced that the Council had agreed to extend until 31 December 2004 the mandate of its informal working group established to examine specific issues from which to develop recommendations on how to improve the effectiveness of UN sanctions [YUN 2000, p. 1270].

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/25 [YUN 2002, p. 1333], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/58/346] highlighting measures for further improving the procedures and working methods of the Security Council and its sanctions committees related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions. It reviewed the role of the Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Committee for Programme and Coordination in the area of such assistance. It also reviewed the Secretariat's capacity and modality for implementing relevant intergovernmental mandates and for addressing the main findings and recommendations of the 1998 ad hoc expert group meeting [YUN 1998, p. 1235].

By decision 2003/309 of 24 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 1333] on the subject.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/517], adopted resolution 58/80 without vote [agenda item 155].

them by representatives of States that find themselves confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of sanctions;

3. Invites the Security Council, its sanctions committees and the Secretariat to continue to ensure, as appropriate, that:

9. Invites the organizations of the United Nations system, international financial institutions, other international organizations, regional organizations and Member States to address more specifically and directly, where appropriate, the special economic problems of third States affected by sanctions imposed under Chapter VII of the Charter and, for this purpose, to consider improving procedures for consultations to maintain a constructive dialogue with such States, including through regular and frequent meetings, as well as, where appropriate, special meetings between the affected third States and the donor community, with the participation of United Nations agencies and other international organizations;

10. Requests the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its session in 2004, to continue to consider on a priority basis the question of the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter by commencing a substantive debate on all of the related reports of the Secretary-General, in particular the 1998 report containing a summary of the deliberations and main findings of the ad hoc expert group meeting convened pursuant to paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 52/162, together with the most recent report of the Secretary-General on this question, taking into consideration the forthcoming report of the informal working group of the Security Council on general issues relating to sanctions, the proposals submitted on the question, the debate on the question in the Sixth Committee during the fifty-eighth session of the Assembly and the text on the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations contained in annex II to Assembly resolution 51/242, as well as the implementation of the provisions of Assembly resolutions 50/51, 51/208, 52/162, 53/107, 54/107, 55/157, 56/87, 57/25 and the present resolution;

11. Decides to consider within the Sixth Committee or a working group of the Committee, at the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly, further progress in the elaboration of effective measures aimed at the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, under the agenda item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/77 [YUN 2001, p. 1250], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/446] on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law during 2002 and 2003. The report described UN efforts to implement the Programme, among them the holding of the thirty-ninth session of the International Law Seminar (Geneva, 7-25 July) (see p. 1334). Under the fellowship programme in international law, the Secretary-General awarded, at the request of Governments of developing countries, 18 fellowships in 2002 and 19 in 2003, and a series of lectures, seminars and complementary study visits were organized by the UN Office of Legal Affairs (OLA) and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR).

The OLA Codification Division assisted in the electronic dissemination of information regarding UN work on codification and the progressive development of international law, and created web sites on other legal information. The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) organized seminars and symposiums for the study of international law in many developing countries. The Treaty Section of OLA, jointly with UNITAR, organized two training sessions at UN Headquarters on treaty law and practice and a meeting of a panel of international experts on multilateral treaties against transnational organized crime and terrorism (New York, 8 July), in preparation for the 2003 treaty event on that theme (see p. 1125). Other programmes included the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea (see p. 1362), awarded annually by OLA, and the Fellowship Programme on the International Civil Service, a training programme organized by UNITAR in cooperation with other organizations.

The report also described the legal publications issued during the year, proposed guidelines and recommendations regarding the execution of the Programme of Assistance in the 2004-2005 biennium, and outlined the administrative and financial implications of UN participation in the Programme for the 2002-2003 and 2004-2005 bienniums.

The Advisory Committee on the Programme held its thirty-seventh and thirty-eighth sessions on 21 November 2002 and on 16 October 2003, respectively, at which it considered the Secretary-General's report in interim and draft forms.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/511], adopted resolution 58/73 without vote [agenda item 149].

United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law

Considering that international law should occupy an appropriate place in the teaching of legal disciplines at all universities,

Noting with appreciation the efforts made by States at the bilateral level to provide assistance in the teaching and study of international law,

Convinced, nevertheless, that States and international organizations and institutions should be encouraged to give further support to the Programme and increase their activities to promote the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, in particular those activities which are of special benefit to persons from developing countries,

Reaffirming its resolutions 2464(XXIII) of 20 December 1968, 2550(XXIV) of 12 December 1969, 2838(XXVI) of 18 December 1971, 3106(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, 3502(XXX) of 15 December 1975, 32/146 of 16 December 1977, 36/108 of 10 December 1981 and 38/129 of 19 December 1983, in which it stated or recalled that in the conduct of the Programme it was desirable to use as far as possible the resources and facilities made available by Member States, international organizations and others, as well as its resolutions 34/144 of 17 December 1979, 40/66 of 11 December 1985, 42/148 of 7 December 1987, 44/28 of 4 December 1989, 46/50 of 9 December 1991, 48/29 of 9 December 1993, 50/43 of 11 December 1995, 52/152 of 15 December 1997, 54/102 of 9 December 1999 and 56/77 of 12 December 2001, in which, in addition, it expressed or reaffirmed the hope that, in appointing lecturers for the seminars to be held within the framework of the fellowship programme in international law, account would be taken of the need to secure the representation of major legal systems and balance among various geographical regions,

1. Approves the guidelines and recommendations contained in section III of the report of the Secretary-General and adopted by the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, in particular those designed to achieve the best possible results in the administration of the Programme within a policy of maximum financial restraint;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to carry out in 2004 and 2005 the activities specified in his report, including the provision of:

(a) A number of international law fellowships in both 2004 and 2005, to be determined in the light of the overall resources for the Programme and to be awarded at the request of Governments of developing countries;

(b) A minimum of one scholarship in both 2004 and 2005 under the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, subject to the availability of new voluntary contributions made specifically to the fellowship fund;

(c) Subject to the overall resources for the Programme, assistance in the form of a travel grant for one participant from each developing country, who would be invited to possible regional courses to be organized in 2004 and 2005;

and to finance the above activities from provisions in the regular budget, when appropriate, as well as from voluntary financial contributions earmarked for each of the activities concerned, which would be received as a result of the requests set out in paragraphs 11 to 13 below;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his constructive efforts to promote training and assistance in international law within the framework of the Programme in 2002 and 2003, in particular for the organization of the thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth sessions of the International Law Seminar, held at Geneva in 2002 and 2003, respectively, and for the activities of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat related to the fellowship programme in international law and to the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, carried out, respectively, through its Codification Division and its Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to consider the possibility of admitting, for participation in the various components of the Programme, candidates from countries willing to bear the entire cost of such participation;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to consider the relative advantages of using available resources and voluntary contributions for regional, subregional or national courses, as against courses organized within the United Nations system;

6. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the necessary resources to the programme budget for the Programme for the next and the future bienniums with a view to maintaining the effectiveness of the Programme;

7. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Office of Legal Affairs to bring up to date the United Nations Treaty Series and the United Nations Juridical Yearbook, as well as efforts made to place on the Internet the Treaty Series and other legal information;

8. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Institute for Training and Research for its participation in the Programme through the activities described in the report of the Secretary-General;

9. Also expresses its appreciation to The Hague Academy of International Law for the valuable contribution it continues to make to the Programme, which has enabled candidates under the fellowship programmes in international law to attend and participate in the Programme in conjunction with the Academy courses;

10. Notes with appreciation the contributions of The Hague Academy to the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, and calls upon Member States and interested organizations to give favourable consideration to the appeal of the Academy for a continuation of support and a possible increase in their financial contributions, to enable the Academy to carry out its activities, particularly those relating to the summer courses, regional courses and programmes of the Centre for Studies and Research in International Law and International Relations;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to publicize the Programme and periodically to invite Member States, universities, philanthropic foundations and other interested national and international institutions and organizations, as well as individuals, to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme or otherwise to assist in its implementation and possible expansion;

12. Reiterates its request to Member States and to interested organizations and individuals to make voluntary contributions, inter alia, for the International Law Seminar, the fellowship programme in international law, the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea and the United Nations Audiovisual Library in International Law, and expresses its appreciation to those Member States, institutions and individuals that have made voluntary contributions for this purpose;

13. Urges, in particular, all Governments to make voluntary contributions for the organization of regional refresher courses in international law by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, especially with a view to covering the amount needed for the financing of the daily subsistence allowance for up to twenty-five participants in each regional course, thus alleviating the burden on prospective host countries and making it possible for the Institute to continue to organize the regional courses;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the Programme during 2004 and 2005 and, following consultations with the Advisory Committee on the Programme, to submit recommendations regarding the execution of the Programme in subsequent years;

15. Decides to appoint twenty-five Member States, six from Africa, five from Asia, three from Eastern Europe, five from Latin America and the Caribbean and six from Western Europe and other States, as members of the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, for a period of four years beginning on 1 January 2004;

16. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law".

Host country relations

In five meetings held in New York between 13 February and 16 October, the Committee on Relations with the Host Country considered the following aspects of relations between the UN diplomatic community and the United States, the host country: entry visas to the host country; transportation issues regarding the use of motor vehicles, parking and related matters; the security of missions and the safety of their personnel; and host country travel regulations. The recommendations and conclusions on those items, approved by the Committee at its 16 October meeting, were incorporated in its report [A/58/26].

Entry visas

On 13 February, the Committee heard complaints from Iraq regarding delays in issuing entry or re-entry visas to Iraqi diplomats and experts, which impeded its Mission's work and, in particular, interfered with Iraq's participation in UN meetings. Iraq also reported that its diplomats had been harassed and followed within and outside the UN Headquarters premises.

In response, the United States referred to the new security requirements of its Government, which inevitably resulted in long visa delays. In the circumstances, it advised allowing at least 20 days for the processing of visa applications. It also denied Iraq's allegation that its diplomats were being followed or harassed by the United States authorities.

On 21 May, the Committee heard another complaint of a visa delay from Zimbabwe, which stated that, although established policy required 15 business days for the processing of visa applications, its mission application, submitted five months prior to the date of the official business for which the visa was needed, had yet to be issued. The United States, recalling that the application period had increased to 20 business days after the events of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60], said it would look into the particular case.

The Committee anticipated that the host country would continue to ensure the timely issuance of entry visas to representatives of Member States, including to attend official UN meetings.

Transportation

Throughout its meetings, the Committee heard complaints from 11 permanent missions to the United Nations—notably from Costa Rica, Cuba and the Russian Federation—regarding difficulties experienced in the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles, in force since November 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1338]. They complained of recurrent or daily use of their designated parking spaces by unauthorized vehicles and claimed that the remedial steps had not been successful, the appeals procedure was not functioning properly and fines were being imposed without explanation as required by the Programme.

The host country regretted the problems raised and confirmed its commitment and that of the city to resolve them, noting that an official had been designated in the United States Mission to deal solely with the Parking Programme. It reminded the permanent missions to refer their parking problems to the New York City Commission for the United Nations, Consular Corps and Protocol and/or to the United States Mission. It reiterated that the appeals procedure did not subject missions to the administrative or judicial jurisdiction of the host city or country. Addressing the Committee, the New York City Commissioner undertook to work expeditiously to resolve all problems brought to its attention. She confirmed that the Parking Programme was fully operational but that human error could not be discounted. She also offered additional information briefings for the benefit of the permanent missions and their personnel.

In May and October, the host country reported on progress made in the Parking Programme's implementation: parking violations had declined and summonses had decreased by 87 per cent. It commended the missions' compliance with paying or protesting violation notices and requested the timely notification of cases of illegal parking in their designated parking spaces. In September, the host country said that the United States Mission had exerted good-faith efforts by holding briefings, sending out notes verbales, setting up a special e-mail address and web site, and designating a focal point for parking issues. It praised as useful reminders the monthly reports issued by the Department of Finance of the City of New York listing all unpaid notices issued to mission vehicles and their staff. It invited the missions to avail themselves of the forms of recourse provided for in the Programme rather than wait for the non-renewal of their diplomatic plates.

While the host country did not object to a review of the Programme's implementation, it made clear that such a review would not entail any revision of the Programme.

The Committee decided to conduct a detailed review of the implementation of the Parking Programme, as recommended by the Legal Counsel in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1338], with a view to ensuring that it was fair, non-discriminatory, effective and consistent with international law. It asked the host country to continue to bring to the attention of New York City officials, the problems experienced by the permanent missions or their staff with regard to the Programme, in order to improve their functioning and to promote compliance with international norms regarding diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Security and safety of permanent missions

On 21 May, Cuba drew to the Committee's attention its notes verbales of 11 March and 12 May to the United States Mission concerning the reduction of the security perimeter around the Cuban Mission. Fearing the resultant easy pedestrian access to the Mission and an increased likelihood of threats to it, Cuba called on the host country immediately to restore the previous security perimeter. The host country indicated that the security zone around the Cuban Mission had been established years ago in a period of numerous attacks and that the Mission was the only one with such a security zone. The host country concluded that the Police Department's objective assessment might have indicated that the situation no longer necessitated the special security measure in question. Cuba reiterated that it had provided the Security Council with a chronological account of terrorist attacks emanating from United States soil against Cuba, including on its Permanent Mission to the United Nations. It did not consider attacks or threats against its Mission to be a thing of the past and called on the host country to fulfil its obligations in respect of the security of missions.

On 3 September, China stated that, in the light of the terrorist incidents around the world, the security of permanent missions needed to be strengthened and reinforced. It called for more stationary and mobile police. Expressing concern about the number of unauthorized vehicles in the vicinity of its Mission and fear of what could happen, China called for the establishment of a regular police presence and a no-parking zone.

The Committee appreciated the efforts made by the host country in the security of the missions accredited to the United Nations and the safety of their personnel and anticipated that it would continue to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions.

Host country travel regulations

On 9 October, the Committee heard complaints from Cuba and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya regarding the host country's policy of restricting the movement and travel of personnel of their permanent missions to the United Nations and of Secretariat officials of certain nationalities. The complaints concerned denial of requests to travel outside the 25-mile radius, beyond which the movement of certain mission personnel was restricted; denial or delays in the issuance of visas; restrictions on travel of non-dependant family members; and the degrading treatment of diplomats at New York airports, which Libya characterized as beyond what was acceptable in the name of security. In connection with its complaints, Libya invoked the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations [YUN 1946-47, p. 100, GA res. 22 A (I)], the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations [YUN 1947-48, p. 1376, GA res. 169(II)] and the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations [YUN 1961, p. 512].

The host country confirmed that there were no restrictions on official UN travel, only on personal or recreational travel, and that United States policy on official visas for dependants was very specific. The host country was sensitive to cultural differences regarding secondary or over-age dependants and did everything possible to accommodate requests to keep families together. It confirmed that arrangements had been made to ensure the privacy and courtesy of security measures directed at diplomats other than heads of State and cabinet-rank ministers. It referred to a circular issued by the United States Mission on those arrangements and to the seriousness with which the host country dealt with infractions thereof.

The Committee, in continuing to urge the host country to remove the remaining travel restrictions as soon as possible, noted the positions of the affected Member States, of the Secretary-General and of the host country.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/515], adopted resolution 58/78 without vote [agenda item 153].

3. Welcomes the decision of the Committee to conduct a detailed review of the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles, as recommended by the Legal Counsel in his opinion on 24 September 2002, with a view to addressing the problems experienced by some permanent missions during the first year of the Programme, and ensuring its proper implementation in a manner that is fair, non-discriminatory, effective and consistent with international law;

Convention against cloning of human beings

Pursuant to General Assembly decision 57/512 [YUN 2002, p. 1340], an open-ended working group of the Sixth Committee met in New York from 29 September to 3 October 2003 to continue the consideration, begun in 2002 (ibid., p. 1339), of the elaboration of a mandate for the negotiation of an international convention against the reproductive cloning of human beings. Among the documents before the group were the previous year's working group report [A/C.6/57/L.4] and Sixth Committee report [A/57/569]; the revised Secretariat information document containing, among other things, a list of selected international instruments concerning the reproductive cloning of human beings [A/AC.263/2002/INF/1/Rev.1]; a paper submitted by the Holy See [A/C.6/58/WG.1/CRP.1]; and a 2 April letter from Costa Rica [A/58/73] transmitting a draft international convention on the prohibition of all forms of human cloning, with an explanatory commentary. The working group's report [A/C.6/58/L.9] was referred to the Sixth Committee.

A November report of the Sixth Committee [A/58/520] contained two draft resolutions, one introduced by Costa Rica and the other by Belgium, by which the Assembly would decide that the Ad Hoc Committee established by Assembly resolution 56/98 [YUN 2001, p. 1255] should be reconvened in 2004 to prepare, as a matter of urgency, a draft international convention against the reproductive cloning of human beings.

On 9 December, having considered the report of the Sixth Committee (above), the Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session the item entitled "International convention against the reproductive cloning of human beings" (decision 58/523).

International economic law

In 2003, legal aspects of international economic law continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and the by Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

International trade law

At its thirty-sixth session (New York, 30 June–11 July), UNCITRAL finalized and adopted the UNCITRAL Model Legislative Provisions on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects and approved in principle the draft UNCITRAL legislative guide on insolvency law. It continued work on arbitration, transport law, electronic commerce and security interests. It monitored the implementation of the 1958 New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (the New York Convention) [YUN 1958, p. 390], the work on the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT), and training and technical assistance activities. It also considered possible future work in public procurement and commercial fraud.

The report on the session [A/58/17] described actions taken on those topics (for details, see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/513], adopted resolution 58/75 without vote [agenda item 151].

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its thirty-sixth session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Reaffirming its belief that the progressive modernization and harmonization of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would contribute significantly to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Having considered the report of the Commission on its thirty-sixth session,

Concerned that activities undertaken by other bodies in the field of international trade law without adequate coordination with the Commission might lead to undesirable duplication of efforts and would not be in keeping with the aim of promoting efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law,

Reaffirming the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field, in particular to avoid duplication of efforts, including among organizations formulating rules of international trade, and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law, and to continue, through its secretariat, to maintain close cooperation with other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law, as stated in General Assembly resolution 50/47 of 11 December 1995,

Taking note of the proposals made by the Secretary-General in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005 with a view to strengthening the secretariat of the Commission within the bounds of the resources available in the Organization so as to enable it to deal with the increased workload arising, inter alia, from the coordination of work with other organizations and growing demands for legislative technical assistance,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on its thirty-sixth session;

2. Takes note with satisfaction of the completion and adoption by the Commission of the Model Legislative Provisions on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects;

3. Commends the Commission for its approval in principle of the draft legislative guide on insolvency law, elaborated in close cooperation with other international organizations, including the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the Asian Development Bank, the International Bar Association and the International Federation of Insolvency Professionals, and requests that the draft legislative guide be made available for comment to Member States, relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, as well as private sector and regional organizations and individual experts;

4. Also commends the Commission for the progress made in the work on the draft legislative guide on secured transactions, on model legislative provisions on interim measures in international commercial arbitration and on issues of electronic contracting and transport law;

5. Requests the Commission and its secretariat, relying on its role as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to take the lead in assuring cooperation and coordination with the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, regional economic commissions and other international organizations in the work on international legal texts and propose appropriate and widely accepted international standards with due respect to the distinct objectives of the Commission and the international financial institutions;

6. Reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with training and legislative technical assistance in the field of international trade law, and in this connection:

(a) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for organizing seminars and briefing missions in Bangladesh, Botswana, Burkina Faso, Cuba, Kazakhstan, Mongolia, New Zealand, Peru, the Republic of Korea, the Russian Federation, Serbia and Montenegro, Thailand and Viet Nam;

(b) Expresses its appreciation to the Governments whose contributions enabled the seminars and briefing missions to take place, and appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Trust Fund for Symposia and, where appropriate, to the financing of special projects, and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in carrying out training and legislative technical assistance activities, in particular in developing countries;

(c) Reiterates its appeal to the United Nations Development Programme and other bodies responsible for development assistance, such as the World Bank and regional development banks, as well as to Governments in their bilateral aid programmes, to support the training and legislative technical assistance programme of the Commission and to cooperate and coordinate their activities with those of the Commission;

7. Appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the trust fund established to provide travel assistance to developing countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

8. Decides, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to continue, in the competent Main Committee during the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly, its consideration of granting travel assistance to the least developed countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

9. Stresses the importance of bringing into effect the conventions emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law, and, to this end, urges States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to those conventions;

10. Requests the Secretary-General, in view of the continuing demands on personnel resources of the secretariat of the Commission resulting, inter alia, from the need for coordination among a growing number of international organizations in the field of international trade law and the growing demand for legislative technical assistance, to keep under review the level of resources available to the Commission in order to ensure its ability to carry out its mandate.

Also on 9 December, the Assembly, by decision 58/522, took note of the consideration of the item entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order", and noted that the question could be considered in the future.

International commercial arbitration

At its 2003 session [A/58/17], UNCITRAL took note of the reports of the Working Group on Arbitration and Conciliation on its thirty-seventh (Vienna, 7-11 October 2002) [A/CN.9/523 & Add.1.2] and thirty-eighth (New York, 12-16 May 2003) [A/CN.9/524] sessions, commending the Group for the progress accomplished on the issue of interim measures of protection.

At its thirty-seventh session, the Working Group continued deliberations on the power of a court or arbitral tribunal to order interim measures of protection on the basis of a draft text proposed by the United States for a revision of article 17 of the UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration. Court-ordered interim measures of protection were also discussed, as were draft texts on the recognition and enforcement of interim measures issued by an arbitral tribunal for possible inclusion as a new provision in the Model Law. At its thirty-eighth session, the Working Group continued consideration of, among other things, the question of recognition and enforcement.

With respect to future work, UNCITRAL was informed that an expert group meeting held at the initiative of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development had found that arbitration was an appropriate method for resolving intra-corporate disputes, in particular where the disputes involved parties from different States. The question of arbitrability, considered central to that work, was a topic that UNCITRAL felt could be reassessed when considering its future programme of work. Revision of the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules (1976) and of the UNCITRAL Notes on Organizing Arbitral Proceedings (1996) could also be considered for inclusion in future work.

Implementation of the 1958 New York Convention

Under the ongoing project, approved by UNCITRAL in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1364], aimed at monitoring the legislative implementation of the 1958 New York Convention [YUN 1958, p. 390], UNCITRAL, at its 2003 session [A/58/17], noted that replies from 66 States parties to the Convention (out of the current 133) had been received to the questionnaire relating to the legal regime in those States governing the recognition and enforcement of foreign arbitral awards. UNCITRAL requested the secretariat to intensify efforts to obtain the information necessary for preparing its report and, for that purpose, to recirculate the questionnaire to States parties that had yet to reply and to request those that had replied to submit information on any new developments. The secretariat was further requested to obtain information from other sources, including from intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations.

Model Legislative Provisions on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects

In 2003, UNCITRAL had before it the draft model law on privately financed infrastructure projects, which had been completed in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1344]; an explanatory note by the Secretariat on the draft model provisions [A/CN.9/522]; the text of the draft model provisions as approved by the Working Group on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects [A/CN.9/522/Add.1]; a concordance table presenting side by side the draft model provisions and the legislative recommendations to which they related [A/CN.9/522/Add.2]; and a compilation of the comments received from Governments and international organizations on the draft model provisions [A/CN.9/533 & Add.1-7].

On 7 July, having concluded its review of the draft model provisions as revised by a drafting group, UNCITRAL adopted the Model Legislative Provisions on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects as reproduced in annex I to its report [A/58/17]; requested the Secretary-General to transmit the text, along with the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects, to Governments, relevant international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, private sector entities and academic institutions; and requested the Secretariat, subject to the availability of resources, to consolidate in due course the Model Legislative Provisions and the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide into a single publication and to retain the legislative recommendations contained in the Legislative Guide as a basis of the development of the Model Legislative Provisions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/58/513], adopted resolution 58/76 without vote [agenda item 151].

Model Legislative Provisions on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law

The General Assembly,
Bearing in mind the role of public-private partnerships to improve the provision and sound management of infrastructure and public services in the interest of sustainable economic and social development.

Recognizing the need to provide an enabling environment that both encourages private investment in infrastructure and takes into account the public interest concerns of the country,

Emphasizing the importance of efficient and transparent procedures for the award of privately financed infrastructure projects,

Stressing the desirability of facilitating project implementation by rules that enhance transparency, fairness and long-term sustainability and remove undesirable restrictions on private sector participation in infrastructure development and operation,

Recalling the valuable guidance that the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law has provided to Member States towards the establishment of a favourable legislative framework for private participation in infrastructure development through the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects,

Believing that the Model Legislative Provisions on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law will be of further assistance to States, in particular developing countries, in promoting good governance and establishing an appropriate legislative framework for such projects,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for the completion and adoption of the Model Legislative Provisions on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects, the text of which is contained in annex I to the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on its thirty-sixth session;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to publish the Model Legislative Provisions and to make all efforts to ensure that the Model Legislative Provisions along with the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects become generally known and available;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General, subject to availability of resources, to consolidate in due course the text of the Model Legislative Provisions and the Legislative Guide into one single publication and, in doing so, to retain the legislative recommendations contained in the Legislative Guide as a basis of the development of the Model Legislative Provisions;

4. Recommends that all States give due consideration to the Model Legislative Provisions and the Legislative Guide when revising or adopting legislation related to private participation in the development and operation of public infrastructure.

Transport law

UNCITRAL, at its thirty-sixth session, had before it the reports of the Working Group on Transport Law on its tenth [YUN 2002, p. 1345] and eleventh (New York, 24 March–4 April 2003) [A/CN.9/526] sessions, describing its continuing discussions on the provisions of a draft instrument on transport law covering door-to-door transport operations. It was noted that a number of controversial issues remained open for discussion regarding the scope and individual provisions of the draft instrument. The view was expressed that increased flexibility in the design of the proposed instrument should continue to be explored by the Group to allow States to opt for all or part of the door-to-door regime. To expedite the Group's work within an acceptable time frame, UNCITRAL authorized the Group, on an exceptional basis, to hold its twelfth and thirteenth sessions on the basis of two-week sessions and, if possible, hold intersessional consultations, including through electronic mail.

The Working Group's report on its twelfth session (Vienna, 6-17 October) [A/CN.9/514] began its review of the draft instrument on the carriage of goods [wholly or partly] [by sea] contained in a secretariat note and discussed various proposals on 10 of its aspects. Based on its deliberations and conclusions, the Group requested the secretariat to prepare a revised draft of a number of provisions.

Electronic commerce

UNCITRAL, at its thirty-sixth session, took note of the reports of the Working Group on Electronic Commerce on its fortieth [YUN 2002, p. 1344] and forty-first (New York, 5-9 May 2003) [A/CN.9/528] sessions, during which it continued deliberations on a preliminary draft international convention on electronic commerce dealing with selected issues related to electronic contracting.

At its forty-first session, the Group resumed deliberations by holding a general discussion on the purpose and nature of the draft convention. The question before the Group was whether and to what extent the solutions for electronic contracting being considered in the context of the preliminary draft convention could also apply to transactions involving licensing of intellectual property rights and similar arrangements. The secretariat was to seek the views of relevant international organizations on the question, in particular the World Intellectual Property Organization.

The report of the Working Group on its forty-second session (Vienna, 17-21 November) [A/CN.9/546] covered its general exchange of views on the purpose and scope of the preliminary draft convention, which had been extensively revised and restructured to reflect the Group's deliberations at its previous session. The Group was reminded of the concerns expressed at its thirty-ninth (2002) session [YUN 2002, p. 1344] concerning the risk of establishing a duality of regimes for contract formation: a uniform regime for electronic contracts under the new instrument and a different, not harmonized, regime for contract formation by any other means, except for the few types of contract already covered by uniform law, such as sales contracts falling under the 1980 United Nations Sales Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods [YUN 1980, p. 1131].

Case law on UNCITRAL texts

UNCITRAL noted the ongoing work under the established system for the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT), consisting of the preparation of case abstracts and of research aids and analytic tools, such as thesauri and indices, and the compilation of full texts of decisions. A total of 41 issues of CLOUT had been published, dealing with 476 cases.

New enhancements to the CLOUT system included the addition of a table of cases in each print edition, hyperlinks to the full text of a decision in the original language and to its translation into a UN official language, and keywords for cases interpreting the 1985 UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration [YUN 1985, p. 1192]. UNCITRAL was also informed of the preparation of a new thesaurus on the Model Law.

The Commission expressed appreciation to the national correspondents for their work in selecting decisions and preparing case abstracts. The wide distribution of CLOUT in both print and electronic formats promoted the uniform interpretation and application of UNCITRAL texts by facilitating access to decisions and awards from other jurisdictions.

Insolvency law

UNCITRAL, at its thirty-sixth session, took note of the reports of the Working Group on Insolvency Law at its twenty-seventh [YUN 2002, p. 1346] and twenty-eighth (New York, 24-28 February) [A/CN.9/530] sessions. It expressed satisfaction with the Group's progress in developing the draft legislative guide on insolvency law, commending the level of consensus achieved and the comprehensive and balanced nature of the draft text.

At its twenty-eighth session, the Group, after completing its review of the core substance of the draft legislative guide, recommended that UNCITRAL approve the scope of the work as responsive to the Group's mandate; give preliminary approval to the key objectives, general features and structure of the insolvency regimes set forth in part one of the draft legislative guide; direct the secretariat to make the draft available for comment to all Member States, relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental international organizations, the private sector and regional organizations; and direct the Group to complete its work on the legislative guide for presentation in 2004 for UNCITRAL's approval and adoption.

Following its consideration of the draft legislative guide on insolvency law, UNCITRAL adopted a resolution approving, in principle, the policy considerations reflected in the draft legislative guide and the key objectives. It asked the secretariat to disseminate the draft legislative guide as requested by the Working Group; recommended that the secretariat coordinate and cooperate with the World Bank to identify points of difference between its Principles and Guidelines for Effective Insolvency and Creditor Rights Systems, currently under revision, and the draft legislative guide and identify a process for achieving alignment of those texts; and also recommended the continued collaboration between the Working Group on Insolvency Law and the Working Group on Security Interests (see below).

The Working Group on Insolvency Law, at its twenty-ninth session (Vienna, 1-5 September) [A/CN.9/542], reviewed the draft legislative guide and considered and revised the glossary of terms, which it could not complete for lack of time.

Security interests

UNCITRAL, at its thirty-sixth session, took note of the reports of the Working Group on Security Interests on its second (Vienna, 17-20 December 2002) [A/CN.9/531] and third (New York, 3-7 March 2003) [A/CN.9/532] sessions, at which the Working Group continued its work on the development of an efficient legal regime for security rights in goods involved in a commercial activity, in the form of a legislative guide. Also before it was the report of the first joint session (Vienna, 16-17 December 2002) of that Working Group and the Working Group on Insolvency Law [A/CN.9/535].

At the joint session, the two working groups deliberated on how to coordinate their work on the treatment of security interests in the case of insolvency proceedings, and requested the secretariat to prepare a revised version of chapter IX, Insolvency, of the draft legislative guide on secured transactions.

UNCITRAL commended the progress made at the sessions and noted plans for future joint expert meetings, the presentation of the modern registration systems of security rights in movable property and the secretariat's plan to prepare a paper dealing with technical issues arising in the context of such registries.

The Working Group on Security Interests, at its fourth session (Vienna, 8-12 September) [A/CN.9/543], continued to develop a legal regime for security rights in goods involved in a commercial activity. The secretariat was requested to prepare, on the basis of the Working Group's deliberations and decisions, a revision of the chapters of the draft guide that were discussed.

Training and technical assistance

UNCITRAL had before it a note by the secretariat [A/CN.9/536] describing training and technical assistance activities it had undertaken since 2002 and the direction of future activities. Reported, among other things, were nine seminars and briefing missions organized to promote understanding of international commercial law conventions, model laws and other legal texts, and participation in 45 seminars, conferences and courses examining UNCITRAL texts for possible adoption or use. UNCITRAL also co-sponsored the tenth Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot (Vienna, 11-17 April), to disseminate information about uniform law texts and teaching international trade law.

UNCITRAL reiterated its appeal to all States, international organizations and other interested entities to consider making contributions to its trust funds to enable it to meet increasing demands on its training and technical assistance programme. It requested the secretariat to consider making an assessment of the effectiveness of the programme, as had been suggested by the Office of Internal Oversight Services in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1360]. UNCITRAL also noted the initial steps taken by the Secretary-General to increase substantially the human and financial resources to the secretariat, for its implementation of the programme and the timely publication and dissemination of UNCITRAL's work.

Future work

In 2003, UNCITRAL held discussions on its future work programme on the basis of two secretariat notes: one set out activities of international and regional organizations in the area of government procurement [A/CN.9/539 & Add.] since the adoption of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Procurement of Goods, Construction and Services [YUN 1994, p. 1328]; the other studied the impact and significance of commercial fraud, its meaning and nature, general issues of commercial law affected by it and possible courses of UNCITRAL action [A/CN.9/540].

In the light of certain issues that had arisen from the practical application of the Model Law that might justify adjustment of its text, UNCITRAL requested the secretariat to prepare detailed studies on those issues and proposals on how to address them for consideration by a working group in 2004. The secretariat's recommendation to organize an international colloquium on the various aspects of commercial fraud from the point of view of private law was strongly supported.

Chapter I

Strengthening and restructuring of the United Nations system

During 2003, the continued implementation of the Secretary-General's programme of reform of the Organization began to yield results in terms of improved servicing of the General Assembly, a sharpened focus in public information activities and results-based budgeting. In highlighting progress towards realizing the key goal of strengthening the Organization, as set out in the Millennium Declaration, the Secretary-General reported that the United Nations had become more efficient, transparent and creative. It was at the forefront of the battle against poverty and HIV/AIDS; its capacity to deploy its peacekeeping and peace-building operations had improved; and the disparate elements of the UN system worked with better coherence.

To further advance the reforms, the Secretary-General proposed reorganizing the Departments for General Assembly and Conference Management, and of Public Information, establishing a strategic planning capacity in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs, and strengthening the management of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

The Assembly, in order to revitalize its own work, adopted measures to enhance its authority and role and improve its working methods. It requested the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on improving the effectiveness of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee. It urged the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council to achieve progress on all aspects of the question, and encouraged the Office of Internal Oversight Services to continue to strengthen accountability throughout the Organization.

Programme of reform

---

In his annual report on the work of the Organization (see p. 3), the Secretary-General noted that the ongoing UN programme of reform, initiated in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1389], had taken effect in several areas. Efforts to improve the servicing of the General Assembly and to sharpen the focus of public information activities had begun to yield results. The role of the Special Adviser on Africa had been strengthened to ensure a coherent and integrated approach to UN efforts in support of the region. Delegation of administrative authority to Secretariat departments and offices and the associated accountability of programme managers had been enhanced by results-based budgeting and management. The Departments of Management and of Peacekeeping Operations were working jointly to increase support to peacekeeping missions through new field procurement arrangements. Human resources management had improved further since the introduction of, among other measures, new staff selection and revised performance appraisal systems, targeted training, managed reassignments and flexible working arrangements. Despite new security arrangements, the 19 August attack on the United Nations Office in Baghdad (see p. 346) forced the Organization to re-examine those arrangements and consider fundamental changes.

To implement the refurbishment of the UN Headquarters complex authorized under the capital master plan, a financial package from the host country and public and private contributions were being explored. The UN financial situation had shown a positive trend in the last two years, with the indicators (cash on hand, debt to Member States, unpaid UN assessments) continuing to improve. The Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) remained active in maintaining the Organization's integrity and ethics system. Major efforts were made towards ensuring that the 2004-2005 programme budget reflected the goal of the Secretary-General's agenda for further change, namely, the alignment of UN activities with the priorities agreed upon at the Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 47] and global conferences. He proposed the reorganization of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management and the Department of Public Information. He stated his intention to establish a strategic planning capacity in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) and to strengthen the management of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR).

Work was under way to bolster country-level actions relating to human rights, clarify roles and responsibilities in technical cooperation, streamline reporting and publications, and review the relationship between the Organization and civil society. UN funds and programmes had their impact at the country level by joint programming and pooling of resources; those measures were to be extended to more than 80 country programmes by 2006.

On 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on United Nations reform: measures and proposals would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Agenda for change

Strengthening of the UN system

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], reported in September [A/58/351] on progress in implementing the reform measures proposed by him in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1352] and considered in resolution 57/300. Those measures included the alignment of UN activities with agreed priorities; strengthening human rights; enhancing public information; streamlining publications and reports; managing conferences and meetings; strengthening the effectiveness of the UN presence in developing countries; clarifying roles and responsibilities for technical cooperation; strengthening the management capacity of DESA; establishment of the Office of the Under-Secretary-General and Special Adviser on Africa; promoting partnerships; allocating resources to priorities; human resources management; and managing change. The report noted that the rationale of the Secretary-General's agenda for further change was to ensure that the Organization devoted attention to the priorities established in the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] and in the outcomes of recent global conferences. The nature and pace of implementation currently under way also depended on progress made in a number of intergovernmental forums, the most significant being the Assembly, which would discuss at its fifty-eighth (2003) session systemic improvements to the planning and budgeting system. Other issues requiring further deliberation included funding for operational activities for development and the reform of treaty bodies. The report stressed that a stronger United Nations depended on commensurate changes in its intergovernmental organs, notably the Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Security Council. Revitalizing their agendas and improving their working methods would be an essential step towards improving UN efficiency and effectiveness. The implementation of the reforms also required the continued collective commitment of UN staff, managers and Member States.

Also in response to resolution 57/300, the Secretary-General submitted additional reports on a review of technical cooperation in the United Nations [A/58/382] (see p. 879), on the intergovernmental review of the medium-term plan and the programme budget [A/57/786], and on improvements to the current planning and budgeting process [A/58/395 & Corr.1, A/58/600], which the Assembly considered in resolution 58/269 of 23 December (see p. 1395).

By decision 58/565 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on strengthening of the United Nations system would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session.

Implementation of the Millennium Declaration

Note by Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, by a 4 February note [A/57/372/Add.1], transmitted his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) on the 2002 Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) report [YUN 2002, p. 1356] entitled "The results approach in the United Nations: implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration". The comments related to the two parts of the report: part one, on the results-based budgeting and planning procedures practised in the United Nations; and part two, proposing the creation of new instruments and processes to enable the UN system to adopt effective results-based approaches and to provide Member States with effective monitoring of progress towards the objectives of the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49]. The report was seen as a timely reminder of the need to keep the results approach under review. Finding the report too wide-ranging to permit a judicious overall assessment that could lead to concrete follow-up action, particularly with regard to the linkages it attempted to establish between its two parts, CEB proposed that the two parts be taken up seriatim at the intergovernmental level.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 April [meeting 83], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/57/649/Add.1], adopted resolution 57/303 without vote [agenda item 112].

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled
"The results approach in the United Nations:
implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration"

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 55/231 of 23 December 2000 and the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation,

Recalling its resolutions 56/253 of 24 December 2001 and 57/284 A and B of 20 December 2002 and its decision 57/575 of 20 December 2002,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "The results approach in the United Nations: implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration" and the comments of the Secretary-General and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit and the comments of the Secretary-General and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon;

2. Requests the Committee for Programme and Coordination to consider the report of the Joint Inspection Unit and the comments of the Secretary-General and those of the Chief Executives Board at its forty-third session and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session.

CPC action. In keeping with the foregoing Assembly resolution, the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), at its forty-third session (New York, 9 June–3 July and 9 July 2003) [A/58/16], considered the 2002 JIU report, together with the related comments of the Secretary-General and CEB (see p. 1384). CPC noted that, while the report highlighted important conceptual elements and addressed a multiplicity of issues, it was complex and not readily accessible, and its recommendations were too sweeping, ambitious and impractical.

CPC recommended that the Assembly take note of JIU's recommendations on the subject; urge JIU to improve the presentation and format of its reports, making them focused, concise and reader-friendly; and review those efforts during its fifty-eighth (2003) session.

Report of Secretary-General. In his September annual report [A/58/323], the Secretary-General evaluated the progress achieved by the UN system and Member States in implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] in the areas of peace and security (see p. 48), development, and human rights, democracy and good governance (see p. 736), and the obstacles encountered, and re-examined some of the underlying assumptions of the Declaration. He pointed out that the United Nations was at the forefront of the fight against poverty and HIV/AIDS, and its peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations had improved and, by and large, had responded well to unexpected challenges in Afghanistan, Kosovo (Serbia and Montenegro), Sierra Leone and Timor-Leste. Overall, the United Nations, with its disparate elements, worked with greater coherence and had built fruitful partnerships with a wide range of non-State actors. As it evolved with the times, it had become more efficient, more transparent and more creative.

The Secretary-General said he had appointed a high-level panel to review the whole range of relations between the United Nations and global civil society, the essential counterpart of which had to be a review of the UN principal organs—the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Trusteeship Council—in terms of their effectiveness, coherence, and the balance of roles and responsibilities among them. All needed to be reinvigorated or reformed. He said the Member States might wish to set 2005, the year scheduled for the five-year review of the implementation of the Millennium Declaration commitments, as a deadline for reaching agreement on the reforms needed to enable those organs to meet the new challenges outlined in his report.

By decision 58/565 of 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on the follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session.

Preparation for 2005 review

CEB action. CEB, at its first 2003 regular session (Paris, 25–26 April) [CEB/2003/1], addressed the follow-up to the Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 47], focusing on "Strategies for sustainable development", one of the themes to be given special attention in the Secretary-General's 2003 report on implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration [ibid., p. 49] (see p. 840).

CEB also considered the report of its High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP) on its fifth session (Rome, 26–27 March) [CEB/2003/4] regarding its work on preparations for the 2005 comprehensive review of follow-up to the Millennium Declaration, specifically on how the UN system should position itself in relation to that review. CEB emphasized the importance of HLCP in shaping the structure and content of the review. Accordingly, HLCP, at its sixth session (Rome, 18–19 September) [CEB/2003/7], agreed that its contribution to the review should focus on the three major themes: peace and security; human rights and governance; and development and protection of the environment. Its report should take the form of a strategic document demonstrating the UN system's response in managing for results across institutional boundaries, highlighting achievements and successes, as well as constraints on performance.

Managerial reform and oversight

Procurement

OIOS report. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], the Secretary-General, by an October note [A/58/294], transmitted to the Assembly an OIOS report on its audit of the functioning of the Headquarters Committee on Contracts (HCC) during the period from January 2000 to August 2002. HCC's primary function was to advise the Office of Central Support Services (OCSS) as to whether proposed procurement in excess of $200,000 and contracts involving income in excess of $40,000 complied with the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, procedures, administrative issuances and instructions.

The audit found that 1,498 procurement cases valued at about $3 billion were submitted for HCC review; cases valued under $1 million totalled around 68 per cent in number but only about 11 per cent in value; 90 cases valued at about $81 million (about 10 per cent of all cases reviewed) were reviewed on an ex post facto/partial ex post facto basis (after complete or partial procurement had transpired). Most of the cases did not meet the Procurement Manual's definition of exigency. Records also revealed that HCC spent only two working days for the review of certain cases with significant monetary value. In addition, the Procurement Manual did not clearly describe the provisions and criteria governing the tenure of HCC members, the voting process or the pre-clearance procedure, as established by HCC in 2000.

OIOS made 10 recommendations, among which it called for transferring HCC from the administrative authority of OCSS to that of the Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management; an increase of the current procurement threshold for review to $500,000 or $1 million; a monitoring of "walk-in", "special meeting" and "telephonic" presentations; limiting non-regular presentations to exceptions and the rejection of all submissions giving less than the required number of review days; referring ex post facto cases to the Controller; an extension of the current minimum review time for cases; assessment by HCC as to whether its review time was sufficient prior to accepting complex cases and those with high monetary value; and a revision of the Procurement Manual to clarify the tenure of HCC members, the criteria and process for their selection, voting and pre-clearance procedures.

The Under-Secretary-General for Management generally concurred with the recommendations but disagreed with some of the findings, as well as with the need to transfer HCC from its current placement.

By decision 58/564 A of 23 December, the Assembly deferred until its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session consideration of the agenda item on the report of OIOS on the audit of HCC.

Oversight activities

Internal oversight

At its resumed fifty-seventh session, the General Assembly, by decision 57/556 B of 15 April, took note of the 2002 OIOS report [YUN 2002, p. 615] on the management review of OHCHR.

At its fifty-eighth session, the Assembly had before it the reports of OIOS on its own activities for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1359] and on the 2002 investigation into sexual exploitation of female refugees by aid workers and peacekeepers in West Africa (ibid., p. 1202).

OIOS activities. In September, the Secretary-General transmitted the ninth annual report of OIOS covering its activities from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/364].

During that period, OIOS issued nine reports for transmittal by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly. Those issued in 2003, in addition to its report on its own activities (above), were on: procurement of goods and services through letters of assist [A/57/718]; implementation of all provisions of Assembly resolution 55/258 [YUN 2001, p. 1337] on human resources management [A/57/726]; review of the structure and operations of UN information centres (UNICs) [A/57/747]; audit of the Investment Management Service of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund [A/58/81]; review of duplication, complexity and bureaucracy in UN administrative processes and procedures [A/58/211]; audit of the functioning of HCC [A/58/294]; the UN capital master plan for the period January to July 2003 [A/58/342]; investigation into the fraudulent diversion of $4.3 million by a senior staff member of the reconstruction pillar of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo [A/58/592]; and the administration of peacekeeping trust funds [A/58/613].

The OIOS reports for transmittal to CPC included a proposal for two evaluation themes: post-conflict peace-building and integrated water management, for a pilot thematic evaluation [E/AC.51/2003/2]; an in-depth evaluation of the programme on the law of the sea and ocean affairs [E/AC.51/2003/3]; and two triennial reviews of the implementation of the recommendations made by CPC in 2000 on the in-depth evaluations of global development trends, issues and policies, global approaches to social and microeconomic issues and policies and the corresponding sub-programmes in the regional commissions [E/AC.51/2003/4], and of the advancement of women programme [E/AC.51/2003/5 & Corr.1].

During the reporting period, OIOS issued 2,737 recommendations, of which 789 were classified as critical. The overall implementation rate for all recommendations was 50.6 per cent; that for critical recommendations was 32.6 per cent. As at June 2003, the implementation of 72 (including 10 critical) recommendations issued during 2000/01 and 185 (including 31 critical) recommendations issued during 2001/02 had not started owing to their complexity or to the lengthy negotiations on modalities required for implementation. Of the 789 critical recommendations, 50 per cent aimed to improve operational efficiency and effectiveness; 35 per cent to improve administration and management; 11 per cent to improve accuracy of management information; and 4 per cent to improve security and disclosure of mismanagement, misconduct or fraud.

Savings and recoveries from OIOS audits and investigations totalled $15.4 million, compared to the $27.6 million reported in the previous period [YUN 2002, pp. 1359 & 1360].

The report outlined the oversight results and assessments for various UN departments and offices, which were the outcome of audit, evaluation, inspection, investigation and management consulting activities undertaken during the reporting period. It described the risk-management framework that had guided the planning of oversight assignments.

OIOS received 630 new cases for investigation, a 17 per cent increase from the previous reporting period [YUN 2002, p. 1359]. In addition to some 50 cases under investigation, 200 backlog cases were awaiting sufficient resources for resolution.

To enable it to meet the goals and objectives of the internal oversight programme and to contribute to the Organization's priorities for 2003, OIOS developed a strategy centred on five main themes: utilizing a risk-management framework to guide oversight activities; establishing an organizational integrity programme to combat fraud and corruption; promoting results-based management through enhanced monitoring and evaluation; providing change management consulting services; and rationalizing and prioritizing its investigation services. To underpin the strategy, OIOS strengthened its resource and information technology management.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 April [meeting 83], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/604/Add.1], adopted resolution 57/287 C without vote [agenda item 122].

Report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

Recalling also its resolution 56/246 of 24 December 2001,

Having considered the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002,

1. Notes with appreciation the work of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

3. Welcomes the continuing efforts of the Office of Internal Oversight Services to coordinate its programme with other oversight bodies, including the Board of Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit;

4. Stresses the need for adequate supervision and record-keeping of peacekeeping equipment, proper inventory and internal control systems, sufficient control over mission accounts and compliance with procurement guidelines, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the applicable recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services are implemented fully by the relevant departments and peacekeeping missions;

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 58/564 A, deferred to its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session consideration of the OIOS report on its activities for the period 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003.

External oversight

Joint Inspection Unit

In its thirty-fifth report to the General Assembly [A/59/34], JIU gave an overview of its activities in 2003, during which it issued seven reports, on:

review of management and administration in the United Nations Industrial Development Organization [JIU/REP/2003/1]; review of the UN budgetary process [JIU/REP/2003/2]; from the optical disk system to the official document system: status of implementation and evaluation [JIU/REP/2003/3]; multilingualism and access to information: case study on the World Health Organization [JIU/REP/2003/4]; achieving the universal primary education goal of the Millennium Declaration: new challenges for development cooperation [JIU/REP/2003/5]; management review of OHCHR [JIU/REP/2003/6]; and evaluation of the UN Volunteers programme [JIU/REP/2003/7].

During 2003, JIU began a comprehensive review to identify impediments to its effective functioning and to design possible solutions. The review stemmed from its conclusion that it needed to improve its functioning and the quality and impact of its activities and from a CPC recommendation that it undertake an in-depth review of its statute and working methods and present to the Assembly proposals for addressing its weaknesses. Accordingly, the Secretary-General, by a September note [A/58/343], transmitted to the Assembly the report of JIU on its preliminary review, identifying the weaknesses and issues to be addressed, among them the selection of inspectors, their term of office and the ratio of inspectors to research staff; meaningful follow-up of JIU's accepted recommendations, which were advisory rather than mandatory; improvement of its annual programme of work, based on suggestions received from participating organizations; and the limited powers granted by the statute to its Chairman. Annexed to the report was the outline of a strategic framework for identifying programmatic, managerial and administrative areas in the UN system that presented an element of risk.

By a November addendum to his note [A/58/343/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted JIU's in-depth analysis of the issues previously identified as the most problematic with corresponding proposals for Assembly action.

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly, on 28 February, the JIU work programme for 2003 [A/58/64] and, on 19 August, the preliminary list of reports for possible inclusion in the work programme for 2004 and beyond [A/58/291].

On 6 August [A/58/220], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly information on the status of implementation of the recommendations contained in the JIU reports on strengthening the UN system capacity for conflict prevention; sharing responsibilities in peacekeeping; the United Nations and regional organizations; and travel in the United Nations: issues of efficiency and cost savings.

By decision 58/564 A of 23 December, the Assembly deferred until its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session consideration of the item on the report of JIU; the programme of work of JIU for 2003; the preliminary list of potential reports for its work programme for 2004 and beyond; the implementation of recommendations contained in JIU reports; and the JIU reports on the preliminary and in-depth reviews of its statute and working methods.

The Assembly, in resolution 58/272 (section VI) of the same date (see p. 1418), approved the gross budget for JIU for 2004 in the amount of $4,900,800, and decided to take action on the gross budget for JIU for 2005 in the context of the first performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005.

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

By an 8 September note [A/57/861], the General Assembly President indicated that, in the continuing process of revitalizing the Assembly, open-ended informal consultations in the plenary had been held from November 2002 to June 2003 on the subject. The outcome of those consultations, which contained suggested reform measures, including those proposed in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1363], was summarized in the annex to the note.

The President announced that the amendment to rule 1 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly regularizing the opening of its annual session and of the general debate, including its duration, would take effect as from the fifty-eighth (2003) session, as decided by the Assembly in resolution 57/301 (see p. 1464). Also, in accordance with the earlier amendments contained in resolution 56/509 [YUN 2002, p. 1429], the Assembly, on 6 June, elected the incoming Assembly President, 21 Vice-Presidents and the Chairpersons of the Main Committees (see p. 1556) to allow ample time for the smooth transition to those officials and thereby contribute to improving the Assembly's work.

The Assembly also recommended for further discussion in informal consultations the report of a seminar (New York, 16-17 May) [A/57/836] entitled "From promise to practice: revitalizing the General Assembly for the new millennium", organized by the Netherlands, in collaboration with the New York-based International Peace Academy. Participants discussed issues relating to the role of and priority issues for the Assembly, the streamlining of its agenda, its decision-making processes, organization of work and suggestions for improving its efficiency and effectiveness.

By decision 57/595 of 15 September, the Assembly included in the draft agenda of its fifty-eighth (2003) session the item entitled "Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly".

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/126 [draft: A/58/L.49/Rev.1, orally revised], without vote [agenda item 55].

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions relating to the revitalization of its work,

Aware of the need to enhance its authority and role and to improve its working methods,

Decides to adopt the text contained in the annex to the present resolution.

Annex

A. Enhancing the authority and role of the General Assembly

In order to enhance the authority and role of the General Assembly, it is decided that:

1. Member States reaffirm the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the United Nations Millennium Declaration on the central position of the General Assembly.

2. The Security Council is invited to submit periodically, in accordance with Article 24 of the Charter, special subject-oriented reports to the General Assembly for its consideration on issues of current international concern.

3. The Security Council is invited to continue with initiatives to improve the quality of its annual report to the General Assembly, mandated by Article 24, paragraph 3, of the Charter, in order to provide the Assembly with a substantive, analytical and material account of its work, in accordance with resolution 51/193.

4. In carrying out the assessment of the debate on the annual report of the Security Council called for in resolution 51/241, annex, paragraph 12, the President shall inform the General Assembly of his decision regarding the need for further consideration of the Security Council report, including in respect of the convening of informal consultations, on the need for, and content of, any action by the Assembly based on the debate, as well as on any matters to be brought to the attention of the Security Council.

5. The President of the General Assembly should continue to be briefed regularly by the President of the Security Council on the work of the Council. The President of the Assembly may wish to inform Member States about the substantive issues raised during these meetings.

6. The Presidents of the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council should meet together periodically with a view to ensuring increased cooperation, coordination and comple-mentarity of the work programmes of the three organs in accordance with their respective responsibilities under the Charter. In this connection, the President of the Security Council may wish to discuss the plans of the Security Council for thematic debates with the President of the General Assembly and the President of the Economic and Social Council. The President of the Assembly will inform Member States about the outcome of these meetings.

7. In June of each year, the President-elect of the General Assembly, after taking into account the views provided by Member States and following consultations with the incumbent President and the Secretary-General, will suggest an issue, or issues, of global concern upon which Member States will be invited to comment during the general debate at the forthcoming session of the Assembly. The views provided by Member States should also be summarized and circulated to Member States. Such suggestions regarding the issue(s) for comment will be without prejudice to the sovereign right of Member States to solely and entirely determine the content of their general debate statements.

8. The work and decisions of the General Assembly should be better publicized. Accordingly, the support provided by the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat for these purposes should be intensified and strengthened. The Secretary-General is requested to present a plan to this end, within existing resources, to the next session of the Committee on Information, so that recommendations can be made to the Assembly.

9. Member States and the Secretariat should consider initiatives that might be taken for better monitoring of the follow-up of resolutions of the General Assembly, such as the provision of timely inputs for reports of the Secretary-General and giving effect to proposals that would advance the follow-up of major United Nations conferences and summits.

10. The resources available to the Office of the President of the General Assembly in personnel and other support shall be augmented from within existing resources, bearing in mind the provisions of paragraph 22 of the annex to resolution 55/285. Five additional posts shall be made available to supplement current support, of which three shall be filled on an annual basis, following consultations with the incoming President, beginning at the fifty-ninth session of the Assembly.

11. Transitional office accommodation and other support shall be provided to the President-elect of the General Assembly. The Secretary-General is requested to make the necessary arrangements for the provision of such support, within existing resources, beginning with the President-elect of the fifty-ninth session of the Assembly.

B. Improving the working methods of the General Assembly

The working methods of the General Assembly need to be further rationalized in order to improve its efficiency and effectiveness and to make its outcomes more productive. Towards this end:

1. The General Committee shall meet throughout the session and further improve its working methods to increase its efficiency and effectiveness. It will play the leading role in advising the General Assembly on the efficient organization, coordination and management of its work. In this connection, the Assembly will also consider proposals to reform the General Committee.

2. The work of the Main Committees of the General Assembly might benefit if it is scheduled over two substantive periods during the session. The rescheduling of the work of the Main Committees should not lead to additional costs, additional or longer meetings, or staggered work schedules of the Main Committees. With a view to enabling the Assembly to consider changes in this regard, with effect from the sixtieth session of the Assembly, the Secretary-General is requested to present, by 1 February 2004, various options for consideration by the General Committee, taking into account the requirements of the relevant intergovernmental bodies and the different locations of their meetings and the budget cycle. The General Committee shall hold open-ended discussions on the options presented by the Secretary-General before making recommendations to the Assembly for its decision by 1 July 2004.

3. The General Assembly will consider convening more interactive debates. At the beginning of each session, the General Committee, following recommendations from the President of the General Assembly, shall recommend to the Assembly a programme of, and format for, interactive debates during that session on items on its agenda.

4. With a view to better conceptualization of the content of the agenda of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General is requested to submit to the Assembly, for its consideration by 1 March 2004, an illustrative agenda of the Assembly, based on all the agenda items of the fifty-eighth session, organized around the priorities of the Organization for the period 2002-2005. The General Committee shall hold open-ended discussions on the illustrative agenda before making recommendations on the matter to the Assembly for its decision by 1 July 2004.

5. It would be advantageous for the General Assembly to have a shorter agenda to ensure the fullest discussion of all issues, so that its decisions may have greater impact. Accordingly, the President of the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session, in consultation with the Secretary-General, and following consultations with concerned Member States, is requested to make proposals for the further biennialization, triennialization, clustering and elimination of items of the customary agenda of the Assembly for the consideration of the General Committee by 1 April 2004. The General Committee shall hold open-ended discussions on the proposals before making recommendations on the matter to the Assembly for its decision by 1 July 2004.

6. General Assembly resolutions should be more concise, focused and action-oriented. Where practical, more actions taken by the Assembly should be in the form of decisions. Preambular paragraphs in resolutions of the Assembly should normally be kept to the minimum.

7. The heavy volume of documentation that is submitted to the General Assembly for its consideration should be reduced. In this regard, the Secretary-General is requested to continue his efforts to make proposals to Member States for the consolidation of reports on related subjects in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 20 of resolution 57/300. The proposals on a shorter agenda should be accompanied by related proposals for a reduction in the volume of documentation.

8. The Main Committees of the General Assembly are bound by the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, although they have different practices and working methods. With a view to identifying best practices and working methods, and recognizing the ongoing efforts of the Main Committees to streamline their work, the Secretary-General, drawing on the experience of previous Chairmen of the Main Committees, is requested to submit a historical and analytical note on the practices and working methods of the Main Committees for the consideration of the General Committee by 1 April 2004. The General Committee shall hold open-ended discussions on the note before making recommendations on the matter to the Assembly for its decision by 1 July 2004.

9. In accordance with paragraph 2 (a) and (c) of resolution 56/509, the General Assembly elects the President of the Assembly, the Vice-Presidents of the Assembly, and the Chairmen of the Main Committees at least three months before the opening of the session in which they will serve. In order to foster better advance planning and preparation of the work of the Main Committees, the full Bureaux of the Main Committees shall similarly be elected three months in advance of the next session.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item entitled "Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Improving the methods of work of the First Committee

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/41 without vote [agenda item 73].

Improving the effectiveness of the methods of work of the First Committee

The General Assembly,

Expressing grave concern over both existing threats to international peace and security and new threats that have become manifest in the post-September 11, 2001 period,

Reaffirming the role of the First Committee of the General Assembly in dealing with questions of disarmament and related international security issues, consistent with the functions and powers of the Assembly in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, as stipulated in Article 11, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Considering that the improvement of the methods of work of the First Committee would complement and facilitate the broader effort to revitalize the General Assembly,

Noting in this regard the relevant reports of the Secretary-General and related General Assembly resolutions on this subject, as well as the ongoing process in the open-ended informal consultations in the plenary on the revitalization of the Assembly chaired by its President, and seeking to contribute to this effort,

1. Requests the Secretary-General, within existing resources, to seek the views of Member States on the issue of improving the effectiveness of the methods of work of the First Committee, to prepare a report compiling and organizing the views of Member States on appropriate options, and to submit the report to the General Assembly for consideration at its fifty-ninth session;

2. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Improving the effectiveness of the methods of work of the First Committee".

Review of Security Council membership and related matters

The Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council, established by General Assembly resolution 48/26 [YUN 1993, p. 212], submitted a report on its work during five substantive sessions held between 29 January and 20 June [A/57/47 & Corr.1]. Discussions continued on the issues under cluster I: decision-making, including the veto, the Council's expansion and periodic review of an enlarged Council; and on those under cluster II: the Council's working methods and transparency of its work. The Working Group had before it conference papers prepared by its Bureau.

At its first session (29 January), the Working Group adopted its programme of work. At its second session (10, 12-13 February), it began consideration of clusters I and II issues, which continued into the third (18, 20-21 March) and fourth (5-8 May) sessions, on the basis of two related conference room papers annexed to the Group's previous report [YUN 2002, p. 1364]. At the third session, proposals on decision-making procedures in an enlarged Council were submitted by Italy and Japan, while the Council President (Guinea) and two other Council members (Mexico and United Kingdom), at the Group's invitation, discussed steps taken by the Council to ensure greater openness and transparency in its procedures and working methods. At its fourth session, the Assembly President briefed the Group on the results of a questionnaire that he had formulated in his personal capacity on the Group's work and working methods and distributed informally to the Group prior to the session. At its fifth session (2-20 June), the Group considered and adopted its report to the Assembly.

By decision 57/591 of 3 July, the Assembly took note of the Working Group's report; welcomed the progress achieved on issues dealing with the Security Council's working methods; and urged the Group to continue efforts during the Assembly's fifty-eighth session to achieve progress in all aspects of the question of equitable representation on and increase in the Council's membership and other related matters, taking account of progress achieved during the forty-eighth (1993) through the fifty-seventh Assembly sessions, and the views to be expressed on the question during the fifty-eighth session, and to report to the Assembly before the end of that session.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and related matters would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in a May report to the Economic and Social Council [E/2003/74], highlighted progress in implementing the key provisions of the Council's agreed conclusions 2002/1 [YUN 2002, p. 1365] on strengthening the Council further, building on its recent achievements, to help it fulfil the role ascribed to it in the Charter of the United Nations, as contained in the UN Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], and of the related provisions of General Assembly resolution 45/264 [YUN 1991, p. 749], which had called for annual reporting on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields. The report also addressed the implementation of the provisions on that subject, as contained in Assembly resolutions 50/227 [YUN 1996, p. 1249] and 52/12 B [YUN 1997, p. 1392] and in Council resolutions 1998/46 [YUN 1998, p. 1262] and 1999/51 [YUN 1999, p. 1281].

The report observed that, while the Council's working methods had significantly improved in their efficiency and in the increased involvement of its subsidiary bodies and other stakeholders in its work, modalities needed to be developed further for the integrated and effective consideration in the UN intergovernmental structure of the follow-up to the common agenda emerging from major conferences. The report recommended that the Council adopt omnibus resolutions, especially on subjects relating to the follow-up to a major UN conference or summit; continuously seek to maximize its support to, and complement, the Assembly's work, to avoid overlap; consider ways to further enhance its annual spring meetings with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund) and the World Trade Organization as a global forum for advancing the commitments made at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953]; invite non-governmental organizations to contribute to the work of its various segments; examine its Bureau's suggestions regarding the modalities of its work and provide guidance on how to put them into practice in preparing for its 2004 session; and invite its Bureau to monitor the timeliness of documentation.

Other recommendations called on the Council to: further build its operational activities segment as a global forum for providing overall policy guidance to the UN system's operational activities for development and to encourage the full cooperation of the funds and programmes; use its coordination, operational, humanitarian and general segments to mainstream implementation of conference goals in the system's work programmes and recommend new policies and measures to that end; recommend that, at the organizational session, its Bureau make further proposals for consolidating reports to be submitted at the general segment; and further encourage its subsidiary bodies to schedule their meetings at least eight weeks before the Council session so that their outcomes were fully reflected in the Council's work.

The Council, by decision 2003/308 of 25 July, deferred consideration of the item on the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/227 and 52/12 B until its resumed substantive session.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Work of the functional commissions

The Secretary-General, responding to the agreed conclusions 2002/1 [YUN 2002, p. 1365], submitted a consolidated report in June, with a later addendum [E/2003/90 & Add.1], on the work of the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council in 2003, aimed at assisting the Council in providing policy guidance to them and in coordinating their work. The report analysed selected major policy issues addressed by the commissions and highlighted their contributions to the various segments of the 2003 substantive Council session. It further examined the commissions' follow-up action to policy guidance provided by the Council in 2002, reviewed key issues relating to the coordination or procedural aspects of their work and made recommendations for the Council's consideration and action.

The Council, by decision 2003/314 of 19 December, deferred consideration of the item entitled "Implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/227 and 52/12 B: Consolidated report on the work of the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council in 2003" until its 2004 organizational session.

Chapter II

United Nations financing and programming

The overall financial situation of the United Nations continued to be generally positive in 2003, although there was some cause for concern. By year's end, unpaid assessments were significantly lower than in 2002 and the number of Member States paying their regular budget contribution in full and on time increased appreciably. However, aggregate cash fell and the cash balances of the tribunals were negative. Unpaid assessments reached $1,603 million, compared with $1,684 million in 2002, and debt to Member States for troops and contingent-owned equipment was $449 million as against $703 million at the end of 2002.

The General Assembly adopted revised budget appropriations for the 2002-2003 biennium of $2,967,727,800, an increase of $76,659,100 over the initial appropriation of $2,891,068,700. It approved appropriations totalling $3,160,860,300 for the 2004-2005 biennium.

The Assembly examined the Secretary-General's proposals for reforming the procedure for reviewing the programme budget and the medium-term plan, and for simplifying and improving the planning and budgetary processes. It agreed that the Committee for Programme and Coordination would no longer review the budget outline and asked the Secretary-General to prepare, for consideration in 2004, a strategic framework to replace the current four-year medium-term plan.

The Committee on Contributions continued to review the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments of Member States' contributions to the UN budget.

The Assembly adopted revisions to the 2002-2005 medium-term plan.

Financial situation

Although the overall financial picture of the United Nations continued to be positive in 2003, some disturbing elements began to reappear. In October [A/58/531], the Secretary-General stated that aggregate assessments increased to $3.9 billion as at 30 September, compared to $3.4 billion in 2002, and were likely to exceed $4 billion if additional peacekeeping assessments were approved before the end of the year. Cash availability under the regular budget and related reserve accounts had become critical by October, necessitating borrowing from peacekeeping accounts. On the positive side, the United States, having paid $31 million earlier in 2003, expected to make regular budget payments of between $233 million and $341 million by the end of December.

As at 30 September, unpaid assessments for the regular budget, peacekeeping, the two international tribunals and the capital master plan totalled $2.4 billion, the same as in 2002. That figure included $1,559 million for peacekeeping (compared to $1,776 million in 2002), $693 million for the regular budget, $117 million for the tribunals (the highest ever) and $11 million for the capital master plan. Member States paying their regular budget assessment in full for 2003 and prior years numbered 113 at the end of September, slightly more than the 105 at the end of September 2002.

In his end-of-year review of the financial situation [A/58/531/Add.1], the Secretary-General said that the performance of the three indicators of the Organization's financial health reflected a mixed financial picture: aggregate cash was lower, at $1,352 million, with the tribunals showing a deficit of $73 million; total unpaid assessments had been reduced to $1,603 million; and debt to Member States for troops and contingent-owned equipment was significantly lower at $439 million. The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full and on time increased to 131 in 2003 as against 117 in 2002.

On 15 September, the General Assembly included in the draft agenda of its fifty-eighth (2003) session the item entitled "Improving the financial situation of the United Nations" (decision 57/598).

Reforming the process

Intergovernmental review

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], submitted an April report [A/57/786] on strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change, which sought to clarify his 2002 proposal [YUN 2002, p. 1368] for a single-stage intergovernmental review of the programme budget and medium-term plan, within the context of his overall proposals for simplifying and improving the current planning and budgetary processes (see below). That review, currently performed by both the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee and the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), would be conducted by the Fifth Committee, which would continue to take into account the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ). Specialized intergovernmental bodies would continue to review those portions of the plan and programme of work relevant to their areas of expertise. CPC would continue to hold annual sessions, but its programme of work would concentrate on monitoring and evaluation.

The report recommended that the Assembly approve the Secretary-General's proposals for a single-stage intergovernmental review of the medium-term plan, the budget outline and the programme budget, to become effective in 2004, and for the review of the functions of CPC in order to enhance its effectiveness in monitoring and evaluation.

By decision 57/587 of 18 June, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its fifty-eighth (2003) session, under the agenda item entitled "Strengthening of the United Nations system".

Improving the planning and budgetary processes

The Secretary-General, in a September report on strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change—improvements to the current process of planning and budgeting [A/58/395 & Corr.1], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], discussed in greater detail his 2002 proposals [ibid., p. 1368] for improving those processes, including a shorter, more strategic medium-term plan linked to the budget outline. Shortcomings of the current system of programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation included a lack of precision in defining expected accomplishments, duplication between the text of the medium-term plan and the programme budget, and the considerable time spent on their review rather than on their implementation and evaluation. As exemplified by the improved format and content of the current 2002-2005 plan based on results-based budgeting, the medium-term plan should not be a listing of activities but a policy instrument that distinguished mandates requiring particular activities or delivery of specific outputs from general mandates providing the overall orientation of programmes and subprogrammes. CPC's review of the plan had consisted mainly of making editorial changes rather than in providing overall direction and guidance. Identifying common priorities often proved difficult, given the varying programme objectives of Member States, resulting in the designation of priorities for a wide range of issues covering almost every programme, with no demonstrated linkage between such designations and resource allocation. A two-year plan period, instead of the current four-year one, would ensure up-to-date mandates and limit expected accomplishments to those achievable within the reduced period. The proposal to synchronize the plan and budget outline to allow their concurrent consideration by the Assembly would ensure that decisions on resource levels were based on a clear linkage between programmatic needs and resource provisions.

As to monitoring and evaluation, the Secretary-General proposed a revamped biennial programme performance report for 2002-2003, providing more information on the attainment of expected results, rather than just a quantitative listing of outputs delivered, with more emphasis on evaluation by programme managers. CPC would continue to review the medium-term plan (to be renamed the "biennial programme plan"), while ACABQ and the Fifth Committee would review the budget outline and programme budgets, thus eliminating duplicative reviews.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly approve a two-year medium-term plan, to be renamed "part one, biennial programme plan" and combined with "part two, budget outline" to constitute a "strategic framework" for the Organization; expansion of the detail contained in the budget outline, including additional information on programmatic and resource changes; further improvement to the format and content of the proposed programme budget to facilitate decision-making at the policy level; revision of CPC's role to encompass the review of "part one, biennial programme plan", but to exclude review of "part two, budget outline"; a modified biennial programme performance report focusing on the achievement of expected results; an improved format and timing of evaluation reports; identification of resources for monitoring and evaluation activities in all budget sections; and strengthening of CPC's monitoring and evaluation functions in order to determine the continuing relevance, efficiency, effectiveness and impact of the Organization's work.

JIU report. In a September note [A/58/375], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on the review of the UN budgetary process, which appraised the efficiency and effectiveness of the current UN budgetary process and presented alternatives to the General Assembly for an improved planning, programming, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation process, taking into account experiences and practices in a number of UN system organizations.

ACABQ consideration. ACABQ, in its sixth report on the 2004-2005 programme budget [A/58/7/Add.5], stated that the proposals to replace the current medium-term plan by a biennial programme plan and to revise CPC's role required a policy decision by the General Assembly. It therefore asked the Secretary-General to submit mock-ups of the medium-term plan and a new budget outline for the Assembly's consideration. Depending on the Assembly's action, he would then report to it, through ACABQ, any consequential amendments to the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations and to the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation for further consideration. He was also to clarify, in that report, the proposed measures to improve the process of programme performance, monitoring and evaluation, including a modified biennial programme performance report and improved format and timing of evaluation reports.

Fifth Committee consideration. On 10 November, during its consideration of the Secretary-General's report on strengthening of the United Nations, including improving the current process of planning, programming and budgeting (see p. 1394), the Fifth Committee generally supported the Secretary-General's proposals and ACABQ's related recommendations. The Assistant Secretary-General for Programme Planning, Budget and Accounts said that the Secretariat would provide the requested mock-ups and flow charts and any other relevant information.

Note of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, by an 18 November note [A/58/600], submitted the requested mock-ups based on current documents to illustrate the proposed formats of a biennial programme plan and budget outline to be incorporated as parts one and two of his proposed strategic framework. Programme 5, Legal affairs, of the medium-term plan was chosen to illustrate the type of changes that would be made to the plan's format.

Budget for 2002-2003

Final appropriation

In 2003, the General Assembly adopted final budget appropriations for the 2002-2003 biennium, increasing the amount of $2,891,068,700 approved in resolutions 57/293 A [YUN 2002, p. 1373] and 57/311 (see p. 1200) by $76,659,100 to $2,967,727,800, and income estimates by $13,660,500 to $428,090,100.

Report of Secretary-General. In his second performance report on the 2002-2003 programme budget [A/58/558], the Secretary-General provided estimates of the anticipated final levels of expenditure and income for the biennium, based on actual expenditures for the first 20 months, projections for the last four months, and changes in inflation and exchange rates and cost-of-living adjustments.

The anticipated final level of expenditures and of income represented a net increase of $49.6 million, reflecting projected additional requirements of $86.5 million due to changes in exchange rates ($59.1 million), changes in inflation ($7.7 million), commitments entered into under the provisions of General Assembly resolution 56/256 [YUN 2001, p. 1322] ($19.7 million); and reduced requirements of $36.9 million due to variations in post costs and adjustments to other objects of expenditure, based on actual anticipated requirements ($23.7 million), and an increase in income ($13.2 million).

The projected expenditure for the biennium was estimated at $2,953.9 million gross, an increase of $62.8 million compared with the revised appropriation of $2,891.1 million approved in 2002. The projected income was estimated at $427.6 million, an increase of $13.2 million, compared with the revised income estimates of $414.4 million.

ACABQ, in November [A/58/604], stated that the current practice of reporting on programme and financial performance separately and on separate cycles should be reformed to make it consistent with and supportive of results-based budgeting. It recommended that a single report be issued covering both programme and financial performance for the same period, and made available during the formulation and consideration of the proposed programme budget. The first such report should be submitted to the Assembly in 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/572/Add.1], adopted resolution 58/267 A and B without vote [agenda item 120].

Also on 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 58/565, decided that the agenda item on the programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003 would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session.

Budget for 2004-2005

In introducing the proposed programme budget for the 2004-2005 biennium [A/58/6] before the Fifth Committee on 28 October, the Secretary-General said that the proposed budget of $2.9 billion before recosting represented minimal real growth of 0.5 per cent ($15 million) over the 2002-2003 programme budget, and was in accordance with the outline figure endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 57/280 [YUN 2002, p. 1382]. It also represented a projected net increase of 117 posts. The proposed budget activities were aligned with the priorities set out in his report on strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change [YUN 2002, p. 1352]. Additional resources were allocated for development and the special needs of Africa, and modest increases for drug control, crime prevention and human rights. A significant reallocation of resources ($100 million) was being proposed between subprogrammes, as were the redeployment of 810 posts and the discontinuation of more than 900 outputs that had become obsolete or marginally useful. The proposed budget also incorporated the results of the reviews of the Organization's public information and human rights activities, reflected efforts to modernize conference servicing and to strengthen the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs, set out the requirements to implement the information and communication technology strategy, and proposed more funds for training. It also represented the next stage in the implementation of results-based budgeting.

The Secretary-General was concerned that some of the recommendations already made by ACABQ regarding the proposed programme budget might subject the Organization to undue constraints, especially in its reform efforts. Recalling his proposals [YUN 2002, p. 1368] for improving the budget and planning process, the medium-term plan, the role of CPC and the system of monitoring and evaluation, he hoped that the Assembly would take decisions on those issues before the end of 2003 so that the changes could be introduced in the next budget cycle.

CPC considered the proposed programme budget at its 2003 session (New York, 9 June-3 July and 9 July) [A/58/16] and recommended that the Assembly approve the narratives of the majority of the budget sections subject to certain modifications. It took note of the preliminary estimates for the International Trade Centre (ITC) and of the submission directly to the Assembly of its detailed 2004-2005 proposed programme budget, which should reflect resolution 57/312 on the ITC budget outline (see p. 975). CPC recommended that a revised fascicle of section 14, Environment, be issued to reflect the decisions adopted by the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme at its twenty-second session (see p. 1036) and submitted to the Assembly's fifty-eighth (2003) session for consideration; and that, at that session, the Assembly review section 24, Human rights, including the programme content, in the light of all relevant Assembly mandates. CPC took note of the programme narrative of section 28, Public information, and recommended that the Assembly further consider it, taking into account the modifications it had suggested.

As requested, the Secretary-General submitted the reformulated narratives of section 13, International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO (United Nations Conference on Trade and Development/World Trade Organization) [A/58/6 (Sec. 13)/Add.1], and section 14, Environment [A/58/6 (Sec. 14)/Rev.1].

Appropriations

In his proposed programme budget for the 2004-2005 biennium [A/58/6], the Secretary-General recommended expenditures of $3,031.6 million and income of $26.6 million and staff assessment income of $380.7 million (an increase of $7.6 million), resulting in a net budget estimate of $2,650.9 million and representing a 7 per cent real growth over the 2002-2003 budget.

Extrabudgetary resources for the 2004-2005 biennium were estimated at $4,220.1 million, comprising $700 million for support activities, $1,237.9 million for substantive activities and $2,282.2 million for operational activities.

ACABQ, in its first report on the 2004-2005 programme budget [A/58/7], noting that the overall real growth in resources for the proposed budget before recosting would amount to just 0.5 per cent, was of the opinion that, should the General Assembly approve the budget at a level lower than that proposed by the Secretary-General, such reductions as might be decided by the Assembly should be based on an analysis of specific items; it accordingly proposed specific reductions in a number of areas. Regarding requests for new posts, ACABQ, taking account of the ratio of General Service to Professional posts and of the impact of the investment made in information and communication technology, recommended against additional support staff but in favour of an additional Professional post. It trusted that re-deployments would be effected Secretariat-wide, with no post being "owned" by any particular unit.

The budgetary reductions resulting from ACABQ's recommendations on posts and reclassifications totalled $12.5 million gross at 2004-2005 rates, and $437,800 in respect of consultants and experts. It recommended full restoration of the cuts in respect of information and communication technology; reductions totalling $7.5 million relating to common services facility infrastructure; cuts of $3.3 million relating to furniture and equipment, including the computer replacement cycle; and $1.9 million for general operating expenses. Owing to the sharp decline of the United States dollar since the 2004-2005 budget was first costed and the likelihood of its further fluctuation, the appropriated and assessed amounts resulting from a recosting exercise might considerably be at variance with actual requirements. ACABQ thus recommended that the Assembly schedule its consideration of additional requirements arising from currency movements and inflation when a more complete picture had emerged, such as during its consideration of the first performance report.

In October [A/58/528], the Secretary-General recommended revised estimates reflecting the latest data on actual inflation experience, the outcome of salary surveys, the movement of post adjustment indices in 2003, salary expenditure experience and the effect of the evolution of operational rates of exchange in 2003 on the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget. The recosted level of expenditure amounted to $3,167.6 million; revised estimates of income amounted to $419.4 million.

ACABQ, in its twelfth report on the 2004-2005 programme budget [A/58/7/Add.11], found no technical basis for objecting to the Secretary-General's revised estimates and transmitted them to the Fifth Committee.

Contingency fund

The contingency fund, established by General Assembly resolution 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024], accommodated additional expenditures relating to each biennium that derived from legislative mandates not provided for in the proposed programme budget or from revised estimates. Guidelines for its use were annexed to Assembly resolution 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098].

The Fifth Committee considered the Secretary-General's December report [A/C.5/58/34] containing a consolidated statement of all programme budget implications and revised estimates falling under the guidelines for use of the fund. The consolidated amount of $23,020,100 exceeded by $1,420,100 the approved level of the fund of $21,600,000. The Secretary-General proposed adjustments of $7,869,300 to bring the overall level of charges to $15,150,800, well within the balance in the fund.

ACABQ, in its thirtieth report on the 2004-2005 programme budget [A/58/7/Add.29], said that, should the Assembly accept the assumptions and suggestions contained in the Secretary-General's report, the balance available in the contingency fund would amount to $6,449,200.

Revised estimates in respect of matters of which the Security Council was seized

As a result of action taken by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council in 2003, the Secretary-General submitted on 1 December estimated resource requirements of $140,304,500 for 20 political missions [A/C.5/58/20]. That amount would be charged against the $163,178,100 (before recosting) proposed for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the 2004-2005 proposed programme budget.

In a 15 December note [A/C.5/58/33], the Secretary-General indicated that, after charging the recosted amount of $142,476,900 against the recosted provision of $169,431,700 under section 3 of the programme budget, the remaining unallocated balance for special political missions amounted to $26,954,800.

ACABQ [A/58/7/Add.28] recommended that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's 15 December note.

Revised estimates resulting from Economic and Social Council action

By an October report [A/C.5/58/10], the Secretary-General submitted estimates of requirements totalling $2,040,400 additional to the resources initially proposed in the 2004-2005 programme budget, of which $1,197,700 could be absorbed, leaving a net requirement of $842,700 resulting from Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/60 (see p. 865), and decisions 2003/242 (see p. 670), 2003/261 (see p. 754), 2003/264 (see p. 760), 2003/269 (see p. 656), 2003/280 (see p. 868) and 2003/291 (see p. 857). The net requirement, which would be charged against the contin-agency fund, related to section 1, Overall policy-making, direction and coordination ($91,900); section 2, General Assembly affairs and conference services ($557,300); section 9, Economic and social affairs ($58,300); section 24, Human rights ($135,200); and section 29D, Office of Central Support Services ($72,600), offset by an equivalent reduction under section 9.

Additional requirements of up to $326,200 for the Social Forum (see p. 760), approved as an annual meeting by Council decision 2003/264, could be avoided by scheduling the Forum during the session of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. Assembly approval of that proposal would reduce the appropriation requirement from $842,700 to $616,500.

ACABQ, in its related report [A/58/7/Add.8], recommended that the Fifth Committee take note of the estimate of $842,700, on the understanding that such appropriations as might be necessary would be requested by the Secretary-General in the context of a consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates to be submitted to the Assembly. Should the Assembly decide to proceed with the proposed scheduling of the Social Forum (see above), appropriation requirements for 2004-2005 would amount to $616,500.

Inflation and currency fluctuation

In response to General Assembly decision 57/576 [YUN 2002, p. 1381], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/400] on additional expenditures derived from inflation and currency fluctuations. Annexed to the report was tabular information on the practices followed by UN system organizations to deal with currency fluctuations and inflation. Those practices, namely, split assessments, forward purchasing and reserve accounts, which had been previously considered by the Assembly [YUN 1997, p. 1416; YUN 2002, p. 1381], entailed unavoidable costs, including the inability to realize savings in times of a strengthening of the United States dollar, or, in the case of a reserve, presenting Member States with the financial burden of advanced assessments that might prove unnecessary. The Assembly might therefore wish to continue the current system of periodically adjusting the estimate of requirements on the basis of the Secretary-General's latest forecast of inflation and exchange rates.

ACABQ, in a related report [A/58/7/Add.5], recommended that the Assembly note the Secretary-General's report.

Subvention to UNIDIR

The Secretary-General, in September [A/C.5/58/3], transmitted for the General Assembly's approval a request for a subvention of $227,600 from the UN regular budget to the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR), following a review by the UNIDIR Board of Trustees of the Director's report on UNIDIR's activities from August 2002 to July 2003.

Working capital fund

In December, the General Assembly established the Working Capital Fund for the 2004-2005 biennium at $100 million, the same level as for the 2002-2003 biennium [YUN 2001, p. 1321]. As in the past, the Fund was to be used to finance appropriations pending the receipt of assessed contributions, to pay for unforeseen and extraordinary expenses, as well as for miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and advance insurance premiums, and to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/573], adopted resolution 58/274 without vote [agenda item 121].

Working Capital Fund for the biennium 2004-2005

The General Assembly

Resolves that:

1. The Working Capital Fund shall be established for the biennium 2004-2005 in the amount of 100 million United States dollars;
2. Member States shall make advances to the Working Capital Fund in accordance with the scale of assessments adopted by the General Assembly for contributions of Member States to the budget for the year 2004;

5. The Secretary-General is authorized to advance from the Working Capital Fund:
  - (a) Such sums as may be necessary to finance budgetary appropriations pending the receipt of contribu-

(b) Such sums as may be necessary to finance commitments that may be duly authorized under the provisions of the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, in particular resolution 58/273 of 23 December 2003 relating to unforeseen and extraordinary expenses; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates for reimbursing the Working Capital Fund;

(c) Such sums as may be necessary to continue the revolving fund to finance miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and activities, which, together with net sums outstanding for the same purpose, do not exceed 200,000 dollars; advances in excess of 200,000 dollars may be made with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

(d) With the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee, such sums as may be required to finance payments of advance insurance premiums where the period of insurance extends beyond the end of the biennium in which payment is made; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates of each biennium, during the life of the related policies, to cover the charges applicable to each biennium;

(e) Such sums as may be necessary to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits; such advances shall be repaid as soon as credits are available in the Tax Equalization Fund;

6. Should the provision in paragraph 1 above prove inadequate to meet the purposes normally related to the Working Capital Fund, the Secretary-General is authorized to utilize, in the biennium 2004-2005, cash from special funds and accounts in his custody, under the conditions approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 1341 (XIII) of 13 December 1958, or the proceeds of loans authorized by the Assembly.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses

Under specific circumstances, the Secretary-General was authorized by the General Assembly to enter into commitments for activities of an urgent nature, without reverting to it for approval under the terms of resolution 56/256 [YUN 2001, p. 1322].

foreseen and extraordinary expenses arising either during or subsequent to the biennium, provided that the concurrence of the Advisory Committee shall not be necessary for:

(a) Such commitments not exceeding a total of 8 million United States dollars in any one year of the biennium 2004-2005 as the Secretary-General certifies relate to the maintenance of peace and security;

(b) Such commitments as the President of the International Court of Justice certifies relate to expenses occasioned by:

Contributions

According to the Secretary-General's report on improving the financial situation of the United Nations [A/58/581/Add.1], unpaid assessed contributions from Member States to the UN budget at the end of 2003 totalled $1,603 million (compared to $1,684 million in 2002); outstanding peacekeeping arrears totalled $1,066 million (compared to $1,335 million in 2002); and total unpaid assessments for the international tribunals more than doubled, to $88 million (compared to $43 million in 2002).

The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessment in full increased from 117 in 2002 to 131 at 31 December 2003.

Assessments

The Committee on Contributions, at its sixty-third session (New York, 2-27 June) [A/58/11], considered a number of issues related to the payment of assessments, including the scale of assessments for the period 2004-2006, multi-year payment plans, the application of Article 19 of the Charter, assessment of non-member States and measures to encourage the payment of arrears. The General Assembly took action on the Committee's recommendations in April, October and December.

Application of Article 19

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions [A/58/11] reviewed requests for exemption under Article 19, whereby a Member State would lose its vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears should equal or exceed the amount of contributions due from it for the preceding two full years.

Having reviewed requests from nine Member States, the Committee took no action on the request of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), as it was not submitted within the required two-week period prior to the Committee's session. It determined that the failure of Burundi, the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Georgia, Guinea-Bissau, the Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan to pay the full minimum amount of their arrears necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 was due to conditions beyond their control and recommended that they be allowed to vote until 30 June 2004. The Committee welcomed the Central African Republic's intention to submit a schedule for the payment of its arrears, but noted that, apart from $513,567 paid in 1998, it had made no other payments since 1994. In noting the substantial reduction in the Central African Republic's rate of assessment from 1998, it urged that country to make some payments to reduce, or at least avoid an increase in, its arrears. It urged the Comoros to do likewise and agreed to review any future request from the Comoros in the light of its payment record. The Committee noted with concern Georgia's failure to meet the terms of its 2002 multi-year payment plan and that the plan did not provide for any payment in 2003 and went well beyond the recommended six-year period for eliminating arrears. On the other hand, the Committee noted that: the Republic of Moldova had substantially adhered to its payment plan in 2001-2002 and had paid more than half the amount scheduled for 2003, despite the serious and continuing difficulties it faced; Sao Tome and Principe had submitted a multi-year payment plan in 2002 and had made the related payment for that year; and Tajikistan, despite its serious problems, had more than met the payments scheduled for 2000-2003 under its 2000 payment plan.

The Committee encouraged all Member States requesting Article 19 exemption to consider presenting a payment plan, taking into account the Committee's 2002 recommendations [YUN 2002, p. 1386], as endorsed by the Assembly in resolution 57/4 B [ibid., p. 1385]. It urged those States to submit as much information as possible in support of their exemption requests and the Secretariat to do likewise on the situation of such States. To facilitate early action on the requests for exemption before it, the Committee authorized its Chairman to convey to the Assembly, without delay, the related section of its report in respect of the requests from the above nine Member States [A/C.5/57/39].

At the conclusion of the Committee's session, nine Member States (Burundi, Central African Republic, DRC, Djibouti, Iraq, Kyrgyzstan, Liberia, Niger, Vanuatu) were in arrears under the terms of Article 19 and had no vote in the Assembly. Seven others (Comoros, Georgia, Guinea-Bissau, Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia, Tajikistan) had been permitted to vote until 30 June 2003, pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/4 A [YUN 2002, p. 1384].

The Committee noted that four Member States (Cyprus, Morocco, Pakistan, Trinidad and Tobago), availing themselves of the opportunity afforded by Assembly resolution 55/5 B [YUN 2000, p. 1311], had paid the equivalent of $1,778,949.63 in currencies other than the United States dollar.

Reports of Secretary-General. During the year, the Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly on payments made by certain Member States to reduce their level of arrears below that specified in Article 19, so that they could vote in the Assembly. As at 15 September [A/58/360], 14 Member States were below the gross amount assessed for the preceding two full years (2001-2002). That number was reduced to 13 by 18 September [A/58/360/Add.1], 12 by 7 October [A/58/360/Add.2], remaining at 12 by 16 October [A/58/440], and 11 by 18 December [A/58/440/Add.1].

Communication. On 1 October [A/C.5/58/4], the General Assembly President transmitted to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee a 26 September request from the Niger for exemption under Article 19 to permit it to retain its vote in the Assembly until June 2004, because of its continuing economic and social difficulties. It planned to submit a schedule for payment of its contributions and arrears at a later date.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 October [meeting 34], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/432], adopted resolution 58/1 A without vote [agenda item 124].

3. Also resolves that:

(a) Notwithstanding the terms of financial regulation 3.9, the Secretary-General shall be empowered to accept, at his discretion and after consultation with the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions, a portion of the contributions of Member States for the calendar years 2004, 2005 and 2006 in currencies other than the United States dollar;

(b) In accordance with financial regulation 3.8, the Holy See, which is not a Member of the United Nations but which participates in certain of its activities, shall be called upon to contribute towards the expenses of the Organization for 2004, 2005 and 2006 on the basis of a notional assessment rate of 0.001 per cent, which represents the basis for the calculation of the flat annual fees to be charged to the Holy See in accordance with General Assembly resolution 44/197 B of 21 December 1989;

4. Notes that the application of the current methodology, as set out above, leads to substantial increases in the rate of assessment of some Member States, including developing countries;

5. Emphasizes the need for future scales of assessments to reflect the principle that the expenses of the Organization shall be apportioned broadly according to capacity to pay;

6. Requests the Committee on Contributions, in accordance with its mandate and the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, to continue to review the methodology of future scales of assessments based on the principle that the expenses of the Organization shall be apportioned broadly according to capacity to pay;

7. Recalls paragraph 7 of its resolution 54/237 D of 7 April 2000, and requests the Committee on Contributions to continue its consideration of possible systematic criteria for deciding when market exchange rates should be replaced with price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates for the purposes of preparing the scale of assessments, taking into account the relevant provisions of resolution 46/221 B, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

8. Requests the Committee on Contributions to continue to make a thorough analysis of the revised method of calculating price-adjusted rates of exchange and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

9. Recalls paragraph 1 of its resolution 48/223 C of 23 December 1993, and reaffirms that the Committee on Contributions as a technical body is required to prepare the scale of assessments strictly on the basis of reliable, verifiable and comparable data;

10. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on multi-year payment plans;

11. Urges all Member States to pay their assessed contributions in full, on time and without imposing conditions;

12. Reaffirms paragraph 1 of resolution 57/4 B;

13. Notes the decision of the Committee on Contributions, contained in paragraph 130 of its report, to consider further at its sixty-fourth session the question of measures to encourage the payment of arrears, and requests the Committee to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

14. Endorses the preliminary observations of the Committee on Contributions concerning criteria for ad hoc adjustments of the rates of assessment, contained in paragraphs 45 and 47 of its report;

15. Notes the decision of the Committee on Contributions to consider the question further at its sixty-fourth session, and requests the Committee to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

16. Reaffirms paragraph 4 of its resolution 57/4 B, and urges the Committee on Contributions to expedite its work on the criteria regarding ad hoc adjustments of the rates of assessment;

17. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions contained in paragraph 122 of its report;

18. Decides to defer until its fifty-ninth session consideration of the question of the outstanding assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Scale of assessments for 2004-2006

The General Assembly decided to conduct its review of the scale of assessments for the period 2004-2006 on the basis of the elements of the methodology for the scale of assessments for the period 2001-2003, as set out in its resolution 55/5 B [YUN 2000, p. 1311].

Requests for change of assessments

The Committee on Contributions [A/58/11] considered requests from Argentina, Iran, Paraguay, Poland and Uruguay for reductions in their rate of assessment. Argentina, referring to its continuing severe economic problems and to its overvalued market exchange rate (MER) that did not accurately reflect its capacity to pay, requested that price-adjusted rates of exchange (PAREs) be used in converting its gross national income (GNI) to United States dollars. Iran requested that market or weighted average exchange rates be used instead of the official rate in preparing the scale of assessment. Paraguay requested that the additional information it had provided on its economic and social situation, in particular its high population growth and unemployment, be taken into account in the scale to be adopted for 2004-2006. Poland also provided supplementary information, including on the economic and social impact of restructuring and of a growing debt problem, which were not adequately reflected in the GNI data. Uruguay requested that PAREs be used to convert GNI for some or all of the years of the base period of the scale.

The Committee decided to replace MERs with PAREs for Argentina for 2000-2001 and for the DRC for 1999-2001. It decided to apply weighted average exchange rates for Iran for 1996-2001, to reflect a more realistic balance between official and market rates, and PAREs for Iraq for the same period; to retain PAREs for Lebanon for the overlapping part of the base period, 1996-1998, but to use MERs for 1999-2001; to apply PAREs for Myanmar for 1996-2001; to retain PAREs for Nigeria for the overlapping part of the base period, 1996-1998, but to use MERs for 1999-2001; and to apply PAREs to the Syrian Arab Republic for the full period 1996-2001, to Uruguay for 1999-2001 and to Venezuela for 1996-2001.

In terms of the criteria for ad hoc adjustments of the rates of assessment, the Committee agreed that the circumstances surrounding those requests for assessment changes should be truly exceptional and extraordinary, and based on the fullest possible information so as to give the Committee and the Assembly a sound basis on which to base their conclusions. It would consider the matter further in 2004, including on the basis of investigations by the Secretariat of the background to rule 160 of the Assembly's rules of procedure concerning the criteria for fixing assessment scales, and would report thereon to the Assembly.

Measures to encourage the payment of arrears

On 15 April [meeting 83], the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's 2002 report on measures to encourage Member States in arrears to reduce and eventually pay their arrears [YUN 2002, p. 1386], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/492/Add.2], resolution 57/4 C without vote [agenda item 117].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

The General Assembly,
Recalling all of its relevant resolutions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on measures to encourage Member States in arrears to reduce and eventually pay their arrears;

2. Requests the Committee on Contributions to make recommendations on measures with a positive impact to encourage Member States to pay their arrears, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/4 B [YUN 2002, p. 1385], the Secretary-General submitted a February report on multi-year payment plans [A/58/63], which provided information on payment plans/schedules submitted earlier by Georgia, the Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe and Tajikistan and on the status of implementation of those plans as at 31 December 2002. According to the information, Tajikistan had significantly exceeded the payments for 2000, 2001 and 2002 foreseen in its most recent schedule of payments. Sao Tome and Principe had also exceeded the planned figure for the first year of its payment schedule. Payments by the Republic of Moldova were slightly under the total planned amount, as were those by Georgia during the first year of its most recent schedule. The Secretary-General reported that no other Member States had submitted payment plans or schedules for the elimination of their arrears.

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions [A/58/11] reaffirmed the conclusions and recommendations adopted at its 2002 session [YUN 2002, p. 1386] concerning multi-year payment plans. It noted the substantial effort made by some Member States to reduce their arrears to the Organization and urged them to make every effort to meet the commitments made in their payment plans. It decided to consider further the question of measures to encourage the payment of arrears in 2004 in the light of guidance from the General Assembly and of updated information from the Secretariat on the related experience of other UN system organizations and to report to the Assembly before the end of its fifty-eighth session.

Outstanding assessed contributions

In July [A/58/189], the Secretary-General updated the information on the outstanding assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia, consequent upon the admission in 2000 of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, renamed Serbia and Montenegro (see p. 412), to membership of the United Nations. The updated information indicated a total outstanding assessed amount of $16,165,515 adjusted for credits in 2001-2003.

Accounts and auditing

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-seventh (2003) session, considered the report of the Board of Auditors on UN peacekeeping operations for the period 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 [A/57/5 (Vol. II) & Corr.5], together with the Secretary-General's report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations [A/57/416/Add.2] and related ACABQ comments and recommendations [A/57/772].

On 18 June, the Assembly, in resolution 57/278 B, endorsed the Board's report (see p. 91).

Board of Auditors report. The Assembly, at its fifty-eighth session, had before it the report of the Board of Auditors and audited financial statements of the voluntary funds administered by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for the 12-month period ended 31 December 2002 [A/58/5/Add.5]. Also before it were the Secretary-General's July note [A/58/114], submitted pursuant to resolution 52/212 B [YUN 1998, p. 1288], transmitting the report of the Board on the implementation of its recommendations relating to the 2000-2001 biennium; his second report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations on the UN accounts for the biennium ended 31 December 2001 [A/58/97]; and his second report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations on the accounts of the UN funds and programmes for the same period [A/58/97/Add.1].

ACABQ's comments and recommendations on those reports were contained in its September report to the Assembly [A/58/384] (see p. 1227).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/570], adopted resolution 58/249 A without vote [agenda item 118].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Having considered the audited financial statements and the report of the Board of Auditors on the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for the year ended 31 December 2002, the report of the Board of Auditors on the implementation of its recommendations relating to the biennium 2000-2001, the second report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations and on the accounts of the United Nations funds and programmes for the biennium ended 31 December 2001, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recognizing the difficult conditions under which the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees does its work,

1. Accepts the financial report and audited financial statements and the report and audit opinion of the Board of Auditors regarding the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2002;

2. Endorses the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its report;

3. Also endorses the observations and recommendations contained in paragraphs 2 to 18 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

4. Notes with concern the shortcomings identified by the Board of Auditors in the management of financial and human resources by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, urges the High Commissioner to continue to implement the Board's recommendations, and requests him to report regularly to the relevant governing bodies on progress made in that regard;

5. Notes the efforts of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in implementing the recommendations of the Board of Auditors;

6. Notes with concern the further depletion of the reserves of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and requests the High Commissioner to examine the causes of continued operating deficits with a view to ensuring that the Office usually operates within its income for each financial year;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on the full extent of unfunded staff termination and post-service liabilities in the United Nations and its funds and programmes and to propose measures that would ensure progress towards fully funding such liabilities;

8. Takes note of the second report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations and on the accounts of the United Nations funds and programmes for the biennium ended 31 December 2001 and the report of the Board of Auditors on the implementation of its recommendations;

9. Notes with appreciation the recommendation to consolidate the reports of the Secretary-General on the accounts of the United Nations and its funds and programmes in a single report;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to include in the consolidated report the status of implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and to clarify the recommendations that were partially implemented and those that were not implemented;

11. Requests the audited organizations to take all steps necessary to implement fully and expeditiously the outstanding audit recommendations.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly, decided that the item on the financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Financial rules and regulations

In May, the Secretary-General promulgated a revised edition of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations [ST/SGB/2003/7], containing the revisions adopted by the General Assembly in decision 57/573 [YUN 2002, p. 1390], which were to take effect as from 1 June 2003.

Administrative and budgetary coordination

CEB report. By a February note [A/57/442/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly his comments and those of CEB on the JIU report on support costs related to extrabudgetary activities in UN system organizations [YUN 2002, p. 1391]. CEB agreed that a single, system-wide support-cost rate, based on a system-wide cost average that made no distinction among cost structures, the types of extrabudgetary activity being supported and the nature of that support, would hardly have any current value. However, it supported some harmonization of the policies governing the establishment of support-cost rates. CEB noted that the long-established practice of applying a flat rate (13 per cent of project costs) was no longer responsive to the needs of the organizations concerned, and took the view that a policy framework more relevant to real needs should be considered. A new framework (as outlined by JIU) would take into account the increasing diversity of the services currently being provided by various organizations and the requirement for greater flexibility.

By decision 57/556 B of 15 April, the Assembly deferred until the second part of its resumed fifty-seventh (2003) session the Secretary-General's notes transmitting the JIU report on support costs related to extrabudgetary activities in organizations of the UN system and his comments and those of CEB thereon, and the related ACABQ report [A/57/434].

By decision 57/588 of 18 June, the Assembly further deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's notes and the ACABQ report until its fifty-eighth (2003) session.

On 23 December, the Assembly requested JIU to further clarify its recommendations 1, 4, 6, 8 and 9, and decided to continue consideration of the matter at the first part of its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/560). On the same date, the Assembly decided that the item on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth session (decision 58/565).

Programme planning

Medium-term plan

CPC, at its June/July session [A/58/16], recommended that the General Assembly, at its fifty-eighth (2003) session, approve the Secretary-General's proposed revisions to the 2002-2005 medium-term plan, with recommended modifications by CPC, in respect of programme 7, Economic and social affairs [A/58/84], and programme 8, United Nations support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) [A/58/83]. The achievement indicators under programme 8 should reflect action, results and value received; the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund) and donors should continue to be sensitized to the need to address the issue of African countries' debts, to ensure that it did not hinder the effective implementation of NEPAD. CPC also recommended further Assembly consideration of the proposed revisions to programme 23, Public information [A/58/90].

The recommendations in respect of programmes 7 and 23 were endorsed, respectively, by the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee in a 22 October letter, which also proposed additional modifications [A/C.5/58/11], and by the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee in a 4 November letter [A/C.5/58/14], both addressed to the Assembly President, who transmitted them to the Fifth Committee. On 24 November [A/C.5/58/19], the Assembly advised the Fifth Committee that on that date [meeting 64] it had endorsed CPC's recommendations relating to programme 8.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/574], adopted resolution 58/268 without vote [agenda item 122].

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 38/227 A of 20 December 1983, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 55/234 of 23 December 2000, 56/253 of 24 December 2001, 57/282 of 20 December 2002 and 58/270 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its forty-third session,

Appreciating the letters from the President of the General Assembly transmitting the recommendations of the Assembly, the Second Committee, the Third Committee and the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee), on the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on proposed revisions to programmes 7, 8 and 23 of the medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005, and on evaluation,

1. Takes note of the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its forty-third session;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the proposed revisions to the medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005 as contained in the report of the Committee on the work of its forty-third session and as endorsed by the Second Committee regarding programme 7, Economic and social affairs, by the General Assembly regarding programme 8, United Nations support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development, and by the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee) regarding programme 23, Public information;

3. Reaffirms the relevant paragraphs of its resolution 55/231 of 23 December 2000, and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, through the Committee for Programme and Coordination, a report on priority-setting;

4. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations, as contained in chapter II of the report of the Committee on the work of its forty-third session; on evaluation, as contained in section C of chapter III and as endorsed by the Third Committee and the General Assembly; on the annual overview report of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination for 2002 and on the New Partnership for Africa's Development, as contained in chapter IV; and on the Joint Inspection Unit, as contained in chapter V;

5. Decides to consider the report of the Secretary-General on the practice of involving United Nations programme managers in investigative processes, requested in section IV, paragraph 3, of its resolution 57/282, at the first part of its resumed fifty-eighth session under the item entitled "Review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations".

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on programme planning would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Programme performance

Evaluation

CPC, at its June/July session [A/58/16], having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on proposed evaluation themes, transmitted by the Secretary-General in April [E/AC.51/2003/2], deferred to its 2004 session the selection of a topic for thematic evaluation for submission to its 2005 session and for review at its 2006 session. It requested OIOS to further develop topics by elaborating the precise and comprehensive context, objective, scope, methodology and intended utilization of the findings of proposals for a pilot evaluation project.

CPC recommended approval of the OIOS recommendations on the in-depth evaluations of the programme on the law of the sea and ocean affairs [E/AC.51/2003/3] (see p. 1362); global development trends, issues and policies, global approaches to social and microeconomic issues and policies, and the corresponding subprogrammes in the regional commissions [E/AC.51/2003/4] (see p. 1001); and the evaluation of the advancement of women programme [E/AC.51/2003/5 & Corr.1] (see p. 1190) for submission to the Commission on the Status of Women for review and action.

By letters dated 10 November [A/C.5/58/15] and 24 November [A/C.5/58/21], the General Assembly President transmitted to the Fifth Committee the endorsements of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee and the Assembly, respectively, of CPC's recommendations on the evaluations of the advancement of women programme and of the law of the sea and ocean affairs.

Chapter III

United Nations staff

The United Nations suffered a severe blow on 19 August 2003 when its headquarters in Iraq was subjected to a savage terrorist attack that resulted in the death of 22 people, 15 of them UN staff members, and the wounding of 150. The General Assembly strongly condemned the attack and called for the perpetrators to be brought to justice.

During 2003, the Assembly, through the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), continued to review the conditions of service of staff of the UN common system. The Assembly adopted ICSC recommendations relating to the base/floor salary scale and methodologies for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment at Headquarters and non-Headquarters duty stations and requested the Commission to consider and decide on the level of hazard pay for local staff.

The Secretary-General reported on: the conditions of service and compensation for the ICSC Chairman and Vice-Chairman, for the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and for members of the International Court of Justice, and judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda; post structure; staff composition and the proportion of General Service to Professional staff in the regional commissions; use of gratis personnel; the status of women in the Secretariat; multilingualism in the Secretariat; staff rules and regulations; staff safety and security; and requirements for membership in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF).

The Office of Internal Oversight Services issued an evaluation of the implementation of Assembly provisions on human resources management and of the audit of investment management, procurement and contract administration of UNJSPF, while the Joint Inspection Unit reported on the implementation of multilingualism in the United Nations system.

In continuing efforts to enhance the safety and security of UN staff and associated humanitarian personnel, the Assembly urged States to take stronger action to ensure that any threat or act of violence against staff on their territory was investigated and the perpetrators brought to justice, and requested the Secretary-General to consider ways to strengthen the protection of UN and associated personnel.

Conditions of service*International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), a 15-member body established in 1974 by General Assembly resolution 3357(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 875], continued in 2003 to regulate and coordinate the conditions of service and the salaries and allowances of the UN common system. The United Nations and 12 related organizations had accepted the ICSC statute: the International Labour Organization (ILO); the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO); the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO); the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO); the World Health Organization (WHO); the Universal Postal Union (UPU); the International Telecommunication Union (ITU); the World Meteorological Organization (WMO); the International Maritime Organization (IMO); the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO); the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA); and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO). One other organization, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, had not formally accepted the statute but participated fully in ICSC work.

ICSC held its fifty-sixth (Rome, Italy, 31 March-18 April) and fifty-seventh (New York, 14-25 July) sessions, at which it considered, in addition to organizational matters, the conditions of service applicable to both Professional and General Service categories of staff, and those relating specifically to the Professional and higher categories and to the General Service and other locally recruited categories.

The deliberations, recommendations and decisions of ICSC on those matters were detailed in its twenty-ninth annual report to the Assembly [A/58/30] (see sections below).

In an 18 September statement on the administrative and financial implications of ICSC decisions and recommendations for the 2004-2005 programme budget [A/58/378], the Secretary-General estimated the resulting requirements at $1,774,000, to be accommodated within the common staff costs provision in the proposed programme budget currently before the Assembly (see p. 1339).

On 26 September [A/58/7/Add.2], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended approval of the Secretary-General's recommendation on accommodating the estimated additional requirements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, in section XXIV of resolution 58/272 of 23 December (see p. 1420), took note of the Secretary-General's statement and the related ACABQ report. In section VII of the same resolution (see p. 1418), the Assembly approved the amount of $14,724,100 for ICSC for the 2004-2005 biennium.

Also on 23 December [meeting 79], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/58/376], adopted resolution 58/251 without vote [agenda item 126].

Functioning of ICSC

The Commission had before it information submitted by its secretariat on the implementation or follow-up by common system organizations of its 2000-2002 decisions and/or recommendations. Noting that increased response by organizations in that regard had enabled it to draw more meaningful conclusions concerning the implementation rate of its recommendations and decisions, the Commission requested its Chairman to urge organizations that had not participated in the 2003 implementation exercise to do so in future and requested its secretariat to present in 2004 a statistical report on gender balance at all levels in common system organizations, including with regard to ungraded officials.

Remuneration issues

Pursuant to the standing mandate in General Assembly resolutions 47/216 [YUN 1992, p. 1055] and 55/223 [YUN 2000, p. 1331], ICSC continued to review the relationship between the net remuneration of UN staff in the Professional and higher categories (grades P-1 to D-2) in New York, and that of the current comparator, the United States federal civil service employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as the margin). In its 2003 report to the Assembly [A/58/30], ICSC noted that a net remuneration margin of 111.9 was forecast for 2003, based on existing grade equivalencies between United Nations and United States officials in comparable positions, as shown in annex II to its report. The comparator had not fully implemented the pay adjustments required to establish pay comparability with its non-federal sector, and the actual year-to-year (2002-2003) gross increase for Washington, D.C., taking into account the employment cost index and the locality pay adjustment, was 4.27 per cent, effective 1 January 2003.

In view of the increase in the comparator's civil service salaries as at 1 January 2003, the Commission found that, based on the 1995 methodology for adjusting the base/floor salary scale [YUN 1995, p. 1405], an 8.4 per cent adjustment of the UN common system's salary scale, effective 1 March 2004 on a no-loss/no-gain basis, would be required to keep it in line with that of the comparator. However, that adjustment would increase the number of duty stations, where the post adjustment classification would be equal or close to zero, resulting in real salary increases for staff at those duty stations and thereby affect the purchasing power parity between duty stations. The Commission recommended that the Assembly revert to the 1989 base/floor salary procedure [YUN 1989, p. 885], using the nationwide General Schedule (excluding locality pay) of the United States federal civil service as a reference point, which would, for the time being, maintain the current level of the UN base/floor scale adopted by the Assembly in resolution 57/285 (annex) [YUN 2002, p. 1397]. The Commission decided to study further in 2004 the issue of duty stations having no or low post adjustment.

The Commission also considered the linkage between the mobility and hardship scheme and the base/floor salary scale (see p. 1438).

Emoluments of top-echelon officials

Secretary-General and UNDP Administrator

ACABQ report (March). In a March report [A/57/7/Add.25], ACABQ recommended that the 6.3 per cent salary increase approved by the General Assembly in resolution 57/285 [YUN 2002, p. 1397] for staff at the D-2 level and above in the Professional and higher categories also be applied to the Secretary-General and the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), raising their net annual remuneration from $259,097 to $275,420 and from $208,935 to $222,098, respectively.

The financial implications of the recommendations regarding the Secretary-General's salary in the 2002-2003 programme budget were estimated at $18,000 gross ($16,400 net). There would also be a consequential increase in the maximum retirement allowance for the three former Secretaries-General, estimated at $24,000 for 2003.

ACABQ also proposed that the Staff Regulations be amended to avoid recurring inconsistencies between the amount specified in the text as the UNDP Administrator's gross salary and the amount resulting from the application of the revised methodology for determining the salary and emoluments of staff of the UN common system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (June)

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/649/Add.2], adopted resolution 57/310 without vote [agenda item 112].

Salary and retirement allowance of the Secretary-General and salary and pensionable remuneration of the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Concurs with the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions concerning the salary and retirement allowance of the Secretary-General contained in paragraph 9 of its report;

2. Also concurs with the recommendation of the Advisory Committee concerning the salary and pensionable remuneration of the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme contained in paragraph 9 of its report;

3. Approves the amendment to paragraph 1 of annex I to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations with effect from 1 January 2003, as set forth in the annex to the present resolution;

4. Requests the Advisory Committee to submit proposals to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session with a view to formalizing conditions and procedures related to the salary and retirement allowance of the Secretary-General and the salary and pensionable remuneration of the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme.

Annex

Amendment to paragraph 1 of annex I to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations

In paragraph 1, the last sentence, "With effect from 1 January 1998, the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme shall receive a gross salary of 175,344 United States dollars per annum", should be deleted.

ACABQ report (October). In response to the Assembly's request in resolution 57/310 (above) that it submit proposals for formalizing conditions and procedures relating to the Secretary-General's salary and retirement allowance and the UNDP Administrator's salary and pensionable remuneration, ACABQ, in October [A/58/7/Add.3], stated that it did not see a need for changing the current practice whereby the Assembly, on ACABQ's recommendation, approved the adjustments whenever there was a change in the salary scales for the staff in the Professional and higher categories.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (December)

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/572], adopted resolution 58/265 without vote [agenda item 120].

Salary and retirement allowance of the Secretary-General and salary and pensionable remuneration of the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme

The General Assembly,

Recalling paragraph 4 of its resolution 57/310 of 18 June 2003,

Having considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Concurs with paragraph 3 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and decides, at this time, not to change the current practice regarding the salary and retirement allowance of the Secretary-General and salary and pensionable remuneration of the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme.

Methodologies for salary surveys

In 2003, ICSC reviewed the Headquarters and non-Headquarters methodologies for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment for staff in the General Service and other locally recruited categories, based on the recommendations of the working groups it had established for that purpose.

The Commission, having reviewed the 1997 methodologies for salary surveys [YUN 1997, p. 1453], approved, with effect from 1 January 2004, the revised methodology for conducting surveys of the best prevailing conditions of employment at Headquarters duty stations and introduced a standard confidentiality pledge letter to be annexed to the methodology in order to encourage employer participation. It also approved, with effect from 1 January 2004, the revised methodology for conducting surveys at non-Headquarters duty stations, subject to the modifications approved by the staff representatives regarding further clarification of the survey process, the responsibilities of the survey participants and the reflection of some factual changes that had taken place since the last methodology review.

ICSC continued to keep under review the operation of the post adjustment system, designed to measure cost-of-living movements, and considered, in that regard, the report of its Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions on the work of its twenty-fifth session. It dealt with a range of technical questions concerning the next round of place-to-place surveys, scheduled to take place in 2005. It also considered recommendations addressing a variety of related issues, including the list of items and specifications to be used in the next round of surveys; the use of duty station-specific housing-type weights; alternative sources of price data; seasonal adjustment of prices; duty station-specific weights for the education component of the post adjustment index; the transparency of data processing; cost-of-living manuals; rules and procedures for reviewing the post adjustment classification and rental subsidy thresholds; the new computerized system for processing cost-of-living survey data; and other matters concerning external housing data, including the London congestion charge. The Commission endorsed the recommendations of its Advisory Committee, agreeing that it should hold its next meeting in 2004, prior to the next round of Headquarters duty stations place-to-place surveys.

Other remuneration issues

Conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials

Members of ICSC and Chairman of ACABQ

In March [A/C.5/57/35], the Secretary-General proposed that the 6.3 per cent salary increase approved by the General Assembly in resolution 57/285 [YUN 2002, p. 1397] for staff at the D-2 level and above in the Professional and higher categories also be applied to the net compensation of the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of ICSC and the Chairman of ACABQ in order to maintain the salary relativity of 97 per cent of the compensation of senior officials. That would raise the net salary of the three officials from $157,266 to $167,174.

The Secretary-General estimated that the financial implications of his proposals would require an additional $20,800 for the 2002-2003 biennium, representing the full cost of provision in respect of the ACABQ Chairman and the net cost to the United Nations of the provisions for the ICSC Chairman and Vice-Chairman, which were jointly financed with other UN system organizations. In accordance with Assembly resolution 55/238 [YUN 2000, p. 1300], the next comprehensive review of the compensation and other conditions of service of the three officials would be undertaken in 2005.

On 18 June, the General Assembly deferred until its fifty-eighth (2003) session consideration of the Secretary-General's report (decision 57/588).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/572], adopted resolution 58/266 without vote [agenda item 120].

Conditions of service and compensation for officials, other than Secretariat officials, serving the General Assembly: full-time members of the International Civil Service Commission and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 35/221 of 17 December 1980 and 55/238 of 23 December 2000,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Approves the suggestions outlined in paragraphs 4 to 6 of the report of the Secretary-General, due to the increase in the salary scale for staff in certain grades of the Professional and higher categories in accordance with its resolution 57/285 of 20 December 2002, with effect from 1 September 2003;

2. Decides that the additional financial requirements stemming from the proposals shall be reflected in its resolution on the second performance report for the biennium 2002-2003;

3. Also decides to maintain the procedure for adjusting the compensation of the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the International Civil Service Commission and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the basis of the movement of the consumer price index;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the issue of conditions of service and compensation of the three officials to the attention of the General Assembly when the annual compensation for the Chairman of the International Civil Service Commission and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions falls below the level of the compensation of Assistant Secretaries-General, but no sooner than at its sixty-third session;

5. Decides that the procedure outlined above shall replace the requirement for future five-year comprehensive reviews outlined in paragraph 8 of the report of the Secretary-General;

6. Reaffirms the principle that the conditions of service and compensation of the three officials shall be separate and distinct from those of officials of the United Nations Secretariat.

Judges of ICJ and the international tribunals

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a 12 March report [A/C.5/57/36] on the conditions of service of members of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) and judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR). He drew attention to the fact that the pension scheme regulations applicable to judges of ICJ and the two tribunals did not preclude payment of a retirement pension to judges who, having previously served in one of those organs, were subsequently appointed to another one. The Secretary-General recalled the Assembly's ruling contained in resolutions 55/249 [YUN 2001, p. 1335] and 57/289 [YUN 2002, p. 1291], which defined specific conditions under which the payment of such pensions to ad litem judges of the tribunals should cease. He recommended that the Assembly decide that former judges of ICJ, ICTY or ICTR should also cease to receive payment of their retirement pension when serving as judges of another of those organs and, accordingly, amend the pension scheme regulations to reflect the Assembly's decisions in resolutions 55/249 and 57/289. The proposed amended texts of the pension regulations were annexed to the report.

On 18 June, the Assembly deferred until its fifty-eighth (2003) session consideration of the Secretary-General's report (decision 57/588).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/572], adopted resolution 58/264 without vote [agenda item 120].

Conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials: members of the International Court of Justice, judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda

The General Assembly,

Recalling section VIII of its resolution 53/214 of 18 December 1998 and its resolution 56/285 of 27 June 2002 on the conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials: members of the International Court of Justice, judges of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, its resolution 55/249 of 12 April 2001 on the conditions of service and compensation for the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and its resolution 57/289 of 20 December 2002 on the financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Decides to amend article 1 of the Pension Scheme Regulations for the members of the International Court of Justice and to replace that article with the provisions set out in annex I to the present resolution;

2. Also decides to amend article 1 of the Pension Scheme Regulations for the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and to replace that article with the provisions set out in annex II to the present resolution;

3. Further decides to amend article 1 of the Pension Scheme Regulations for the judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and to replace that article with the provisions set out in annex III to the present resolution.

(f) If a judge served for less than a full term of four years, the amount of the pension shall be that proportion of the annual pension which the number of months of his or her actual service bears to forty-eight;

(g) If the judge came into office prior to 1 January 1999 and has been or is subsequently re-elected for another term, he or she shall continue to receive one one-hundred-and-thirty-third of the International Tribunal's pension benefit for each further month subsequent to his or her initial term, up to a maximum pension equivalent to eight twenty-sevenths of the annual salary. Judges elected to terms of office commencing after 31 December 1998 shall not be entitled to an increase in their pension benefit in case of re-election.

3. #### Mobility and hardship allowance

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/285 [YUN 2002, p. 1397], ICSC reviewed the linkage between the mobility and hardship allowance and the base/floor salary scale. The Commission recognized that the mobility and hardship allowance, approved in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 885], was designed to compensate for service at difficult duty stations and to encourage operational mobility. However, concern was expressed about its linkage to the base/floor salary scale, which resulted in an automatic adjustment of the allowance whenever the base/floor scale was revised, leading to increasing costs. The Commission requested its secretariat to provide more detailed information to allow it to study the question at its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

Hazard pay

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/285 [YUN 2002, p. 1397], ICSC reviewed its 2002 decision regarding hazard pay [ibid., p. 1402], particularly the question of increasing the level granted to locally recruited staff. The Commission decided to uphold its decision that the level of hazard pay granted to locally recruited staff should be increased to 30 per cent of the midpoint of the local salary scale, effective 1 January 2004. The financial impact of the increase was estimated at approximately $2,700,000 yearly system-wide.

In response to a request from the Federation of International Civil Servants' Associations (FICSA) concerning hazard pay for staff of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Commission recalled its 2002 conclusion [YUN 2002, p. 1402] that UNRWA's Commissioner-General had full authority to deal with the issue by applying the relevant procedures in place for that category of staff.

Mission subsistence allowance

In 2003, ICSC reviewed the criteria and practice for the payment of mission subsistence allowance (MSA) in the UN system, based on updated information provided by its secretariat on the practices of other common system organizations using the special operations approach and the extended monthly evacuation allowance, and the views of those organizations on the feasibility of harmonizing their practices vis-à-vis staff assigned to non-family locations. The information showed that different arrangements existed at different UN organizations regarding remuneration packages and conditions of service of staff assigned to special and non-family missions. The Commission stressed the need for further harmonization of practices with respect to the allowances of staff serving in non-family duty stations, in order to avoid competition and to promote staff mobility. It requested organizations to continue developing arrangements applicable to all and to report on the issue in 2004. Its secretariat, in cooperation with common system organizations, was asked to report on the feasibility of linking the MSA rates to the established rates for daily subsistence allowance.

Human resources management

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-seventh session in 2003, had before it reports of the Secretary-General, consideration of which had been deferred from previous sessions, on: the employment of retirees in 1998-1999 [YUN 2000, p. 1352]; amendments to the 100, 200 and 300 series of Staff Rules, submitted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1347]; staff composition in 2001 [ibid., p. 1342]; the implications of changing the mandatory age of separation for staff members appointed prior to 1 January 1990 from 60 to 62 years [ibid., p. 1354]; the placement of staff serving in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General [YUN 2002, p. 1407]; the hiring and use of consultants and individual contractors in 2000 [YUN 2001, p. 1343]; the report of ICSC on its fifty-fourth and fifty-fifth (2002) sessions [YUN 2002, p. 1396]; amendments to the 100, 200 and 300 series of Staff Rules, submitted in 2002 [ibid., p. 1413]; establishment of a capacity in the UN Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) for monitoring all relevant Secretariat activities regardless of the source of funding [ibid., p. 1403]; results of the implementation of the provisions contained in resolution 55/258 [YUN 2001, p. 1337] on human resources management reform [YUN 2002, p. 1403]; the hiring and use of consultants and individual contractors in 2001 [ibid., p. 1409]; the employment of retirees in 2000-2001 [ibid., p. 1418]; staff composition in 2002 [ibid., p. 1407]; and lists of staff of the UN Secretariat in 2001 [A/C.5/56/L.7] and 2002 [A/C.5/57/L.3]. It also had before it a note by the Secretary-General transmitting an Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) report on implementation of the provisions of resolution 55/258 on human resources management [A/57/726] (see below); a Secretariat note on streamlining staff rules and regulations [YUN 2001, p. 1347]; and related ACABQ reports [A/56/7, A/56/846, A/57/469].

OIOS report. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362], 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274] and 56/253 [YUN 2001, p. 1297], the Secretary-General transmitted a February OIOS report [A/57/726] on the implementation of Assembly resolution 55/258 [YUN 2001, p. 1337] on human resources management reform. The report focused on a number of critical strategic human resources management reform drivers, including human resources planning, the new staff selection system, mobility, competencies, continuous learning and career development, the performance appraisal system (e-PAS), monitoring, enhanced conditions of service, and the streamlining of rules and procedures.

OIOS observed that, although it was too early to assess the full impact of the human resources reform, OHRM had made significant progress in implementing a number of reform initiatives. It recognized that, although OHRM could take the lead in introducing new initiatives, their successful implementation at the organizational level depended on mutual cooperation between different partners and bodies in the Organization in support of a culture of change. To be perceived as a strategic asset, OHRM should strengthen its ability to measure the impact of its activities on the Organization's performance and, if necessary, refocus initiatives to achieve stronger alignment with the Organization's operational goals.

To further advance the human resources management reform process, OIOS proposed a number of specific actions, grouped under four main themes: strategic orientation, focusing on the functions and activities needed by OHRM's clients to promote productive behaviour in the Organization; result-oriented evaluation systems, involving concise assessments concentrating on the results of new initiatives and demonstrating OHRM's impact on the Organization's performance; enhanced systemic linkages between components of the human resources management reform and parts of the larger organizational reform strategy; and maximized efficiency of administrative human resources processes.

The report also included an overview of the new approach by OIOS to supporting OHRM in fully realizing the reform goals; assessing and refining its primary objectives, current roles, responsibilities and core functions; and aligning them with its ongoing reform efforts. Following consultations, a revised OHRM mission statement was formulated and guiding principles for further implementation of envisaged change were developed.

4. Stresses that the hiring of retired former staff should be on an exceptional basis, and in this regard encourages the Secretary-General to fill vacant posts at senior and decision-making levels through the established staff selection process;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the employment of retired former staff, including the criteria for selection of staff in the Professional categories, the number of staff hired for periods exceeding two years and the number of retired former staff serving in posts that affect the decision-making process, in particular in the areas of recruitment and promotion within the Secretariat and in the field, as well as instances in which representative responsibilities before intergovernmental bodies are assigned to retired staff;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to include in the report referred to in paragraph 5 of the present section information on economy and efficiency gains envisaged in the context of language posts;

7. Discourages the Secretary-General from using retired former staff to present reports to any intergovernmental body;

Amendments to Staff Rules

Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General.

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred until its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session consideration of the agenda item on human resources management (decision 58/564 A).

Pay and benefits system

ICSC, in its ongoing review of the UN pay and benefits system, endorsed the new conceptual model for reforming the job evaluation system, developed in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1404]. Validation exercises to assess its viability provided feedback, particularly on the use of language in the application of the Master Standard and grade level descriptors—the two evaluation tools around which the new model was designed. The model was then revised, in terms of language, design and utility, and a new release of the automated system developed. The new job evaluation system, comprising the Master Standard, grade level descriptors and post illustrators in automated format, was sent to all common system organizations in June and a draft handbook with guidelines was developed. Workshops and management briefings were scheduled to take place between September 2003 and March 2004 to support the implementation of the new system.

The Commission delegated to its Chairman the authority to promulgate the system by 1 January 2004. It asked its secretariat to report annually on the implementation of the new standards in organizations, including information on the number of jobs that, on application of the new standard, were found to be undergraded or overgraded and the levels affected, and the impact of change on, and the difficulties encountered by, the organizations involved. Its secretariat should conduct a comprehensive assessment of the system after 18 to 24 months and submit to the Commission for review and approval any substantive design changes that might be required. The secretariat should also conduct, in consultation with common system organizations and staff representatives, further research on reforming the job evaluation system for the General Service and related categories, and report to the Commission.

Regarding broadbanding/performance pay, under which grades would be grouped into broad salary bands that excluded steps between the minimum and maximum pay within particular bands, ICSC selected three models to be tested in a pilot study. It requested its Chairman to recruit a full-time project manager, subject to the availability of resources, and decided that a task force should be established, led by its secretariat, to further develop reform concepts. A comprehensive project plan should also be developed to guide the preparation for and conduct of the pilot study. The Commission requested its secretariat, in consultation with administration and staff representatives, to present proposals on the conduct of the pilot study.

Contractual arrangements

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/285 [YUN 2002, p. 1397], ICSC considered the issue of contractual arrangements, one of the core elements identified in the integrated framework for human resources management [YUN 2000, p. 1337]. It had before it an analysis of the experience of ILO, ITU, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and WHO, and proposals for developing a general framework within which organizations could operate, including three types of contractual arrangements that would be common to organizations of the common system.

ICSC agreed that there were too many types of contracts across organizations and that the number should be reduced. However, while considerable information was available on the current situation in common system organizations, more work was needed before a recommendation could be made to the Assembly. To facilitate that, and taking into account the need for flexibility in common system organizations, the Commission requested its secretariat to prepare, for consideration at its fifty-ninth (2004) session, a model contract for each of the three categories proposed, namely, continuing appointments, fixed-term appointments and temporary appointments, with subgroups in each category that would distinguish their key characteristics. The secretariat would also provide for each subgroup details on the conditions of employment; requirements for mobility and for a probationary period; procedures for progression to other contract types; the compensation package; social security and health insurance provisions; and procedures for extension and/or termination.

Mobility

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/258 [YUN 2001, p. 1337], ICSC continued its review of staff mobility. Based on information from common system organizations, the Commission examined various rationales for mobility, constraints and a framework for enhancing mobility in the common system. That framework identified areas where supportive programmes could be established to enhance internal or inter-organizational mobility, including mobility from Headquarters to the field and vice versa, inter-agency mobility and mobility between common system organizations and other public or private organizations. Such supportive programmes would facilitate efficient mobility policies and could be developed in the areas of: career management; information technology support; development of a young professionals scheme; transparency of terms of contract; effective recruitment processes; development of induction and orientation programmes; promotion of external mobility; building a culture of mobility;

the role of the United Nations System Staff College (see p. 1456); review of promotions while on inter-agency assignments; amendment of inter-agency agreements; work/family agenda; knowledge management; and financial aspects.

Recognizing that mobility was a key element in the system's reform efforts, ICSC emphasized its importance as a means of developing a more versatile, multi-skilled and experienced international civil service capable of fulfilling complex mandates. It decided to approach staff mobility in a comprehensive manner, in harmony with contractual arrangements, conditions of employment, work/life agendas and spouse employment.

CEB action. The High-level Committee on Management (HLCM) of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), at its fifth session (New York, 12-13 June) [CEB/2003/3], considered a note by the CEB secretariat on a number of initiatives for enhancing mobility among agencies and perceived impediments to inter-agency mobility. HLCM invited the CEB secretariat to circulate a draft "vision" statement reflecting the UN system's ongoing commitment to inter-agency mobility and the need to develop solutions to its inherent impediments. It asked the secretariat to convene a working group to further examine mobility issues, to pursue its work on the participating agencies' mobility systems and its contacts with international organizations outside the UN system, and with the private sector, in order to boost spouse employment, and to list current provisions for the issuance of work permits for spouses or domestic partners. HLCM also agreed to: invite the human resources network to contribute to the working group's work on the harmonization of entitlements; encourage organizations to join the United Nations Development Group (UNDG) initiative on spouse employment; underline the importance of maintaining the current mobility and hardship scheme as a vital support to mobility in general; discourage duplication of effort in reviewing human resources-related problems and ask the human resources network to report thereon at its next session; request UN resident representatives to facilitate spouse or domestic partner employment; and forge a common approach for recognizing domestic partners.

Post structure

In response to General Assembly decision 57/574 [YUN 2002, p. 1405], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/398] in which he provided additional information regarding his 2002 comparative review of the UN Secretariat's post structure with that of other UN system organizations [YUN 2002, p. 1405]. He concluded that the comparative review did not reflect any top-heaviness of the UN Secretariat structure compared to those of common system organizations, which supported and further reinforced the findings contained in his 2002 report. He acknowledged, however, that the comparative review was subject to a number of critical constraints, including the fact that the validity of the exercise depended on the establishment of accurate grade equivalencies, which was a complex and sometimes controversial process. Moreover, organizations were different in size, structure and span of control, due to their functions or management philosophy or culture. Also, some organizations, particularly those outside the common system, and some Governments, considered data on grade structure to be sensitive and were reluctant to share such information.

ACABQ report. In October [A/58/7/Add.5], ACABQ, citing the constraints identified in the report, expressed concern that the Secretary-General was not in a position to obtain all the data needed for the purposes of the review.

The Assembly, in section II of resolution 58/272 (see p. 1417), took note of the Secretary-General's report and the related ACABQ report.

Staff composition

In a December annual report on the UN Secretariat's staff composition [A/58/666], the Secretary-General updated information on the demographic characteristics of the Secretariat's staff and on the system of desirable ranges for geographical distribution. As at 30 June 2003, Secretariat staff numbered 15,082, 551 less than at 30 June 2002. Of the total, 5,525 were in the Professional and higher categories, 8,726 were in the General Service and related categories, and 831 were project personnel; 7,543 were paid from the regular budget and 7,539 from extrabudgetary sources. Staff in posts subject to geographical distribution numbered 2,491, of whom 1,040 (41.8 per cent) were female. Seventeen Member States were unrepresented in all staff categories, while 10 were underrepresented, compared to 16 and 11, respectively, in 2002. Appointments to posts subject to geographical distribution between 1 July 2002 and 30 June 2003 totalled 168. Of those, 34 (20.2 per cent) were nationals of underrepresented Member States, 105 (62.5 per cent) of within-range Member States, 26 (15.5 per cent) of overrepresented Member States, 2 (3.4 per cent) from a newly admitted Member State, and 1 was a stateless person. Changes in representation status resulted from appointments or separation from service, adjustments to desirable ranges, owing to an increase or decrease in the number of posts subject to geographical distribution, and to changes in the number of Member States, scale of assessments, population of Member States and status of individual staff members.

The report also gave information on the demographic profile of Secretariat staff, Secretariat staff movement between 1 July 2002 and 30 June 2003 and forecasts of anticipated retirements between 2003 and 2007.

As requested in Assembly resolution 57/305 (see p. 1440), the report provided initial information on progress made by UN departments in implementing their human resources action plans, a management scheme established in 1999 throughout the Secretariat, under the central authority of OHRM and in accordance with Assembly resolution 53/221 [YUN 1999, p. 1324]. A pilot programme, launched in 1999-2001, enabled OHRM to develop and define the scope, criteria and tools to be used in those plans, and provided the Secretariat with valuable experience that was used to improve the methodology and tools for the second planning cycle, launched in 2001. In that cycle, covering a two-year period, additional indicators were introduced and progress reviews with departments were increased to two per year. Also, a variety of tools was created to assist departments in monitoring their progress throughout the planning cycle and in preparing for end-of-year assessment meetings between the head of OHRM and heads of departments. The biannual reviews allowed OHRM to provide more timely guidance and assistance to departments/offices in reaching their targets. In addition, new electronic tools were being developed to enable departments and offices to access human resources data online and improve departments' self-monitoring capacity. In 2003, OHRM completed the second planning cycle and began the third, with 26 departments and offices participating. The data and information gathered from the pilot programme and from the second cycle were being compiled and cross-evaluated in order to produce an analytical report at the Secretariat level, and would constitute the baseline for analysis and comparison in subsequent cycles. Comprehensive information on human resources action planning would be submitted to the Assembly at its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

Proportion of General Service to Professional staff in regional commissions

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/253 [YUN 2001, p. 1297], the Secretary-General, in an October report [A/58/403], reviewed the proportion of General Service staff compared to Professional staff in the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA), the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP), the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE), the Economic Commission for Latin American and the Caribbean (ECLAC) and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA). Information was also gathered from the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) on the number of staff assigned to each function within the General Service and related categories for the 1998-1999, 2000-2001 and 2002-2003 bienniums. Each office or department also estimated resources applied towards technology and innovation to automate support activities during those periods, and which could impact the number of General Service staff assigned to support functions.

The review confirmed an overall higher ratio of General Service staff to Professional staff within four of the regional commissions than in UNCTAD and DESA, the exception being ECE. The situation had resulted from the broader coverage of services under the programme support component in the regional commissions, which, in addition to traditional support functions, included the management of technical cooperation programmes, conference and library services, security and safety and other services. Although investment in information technology could lead to improvements in the efficiency of support services, most regional commissions continued to rely heavily on their own staff for support services owing to limited outsourcing opportunities. Moreover, it was difficult to define an optimal post structure for any regional commission because each of them needed to be viewed as a separate entity to ensure that the requisite resources were available for implementation of mandated activities.

ACABQ report. In October [A/58/7/Add.5], ACABQ recommended that the information contained in the Secretary-General's report be considered in the context of the Assembly's review of the proposed resource requirements for the regional commissions for the 2004-2005 biennium.

The Assembly, in resolution 58/272, section XX (see p. 1420), took note of the Secretary-General's report and the related ACABQ report.

Recruitment, promotion and placement

On 15 April, the General Assembly, in resolution 57/305, section II (see p. 1440), reiterated the value of a transparent process of recruitment, placement and promotion in the Organization and requested the Secretary-General to ensure the accountability of programme managers in the staff selection process and to report thereon in 2004. On the same date, the Assembly, by decision 57/556 B, deferred until the second part of its resumed fifty-seventh (2003) session consideration of the OIOS report on the investigation of possible discrimination due to nationality, race, sex, religion and language in recruitment, promotion and placement and the comments of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) thereon [YUN 2002, p. 1406].

By decision 58/564 A of 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the agenda item "Human resources management" and related documents to its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session.

Gratis personnel

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in February, submitted to the General Assembly his annual report [A/57/721] on the use of gratis personnel between 1 January and 31 December 2002. Type I gratis personnel serving under an established regime included interns, associate experts and technical cooperation experts obtained on non-refundable loans, while type II gratis personnel comprised personnel provided by a Government or other entity pursuant to Assembly resolution 51/243 [YUN 1997, p. 1469]. The Secretary-General reported that during 2002 the number of type I gratis personnel increased by 60.9 per cent, from 187 to 301. The increase was due mainly to a 108 per cent rise in the number of interns, from 68 to 142. Associate experts rose from 105 to 124 and technical cooperation experts from 14 to 35 during the year. The number of type II gratis personnel decreased from 3 to 1 by the end of 2002. The remaining individual was a hydrology expert, whose services were provided to ESCWA by Germany. He was expected to separate by 31 December 2003.

ACABQ report. In February [A/57/735], ACABQ, having considered the Secretary-General's report (above), noted that, in view of the steps taken, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 51/243, to phase out the number of gratis personnel, the Secretary-General should provide, on a biennial basis, information on their status within the context of his report on the composition of the Secretariat. Information on type I gratis personnel should be expanded to include nationality, duration and functions performed.

By decision 57/556 B of 15 April, the Assembly deferred until the second part of its resumed fifty-seventh (2003) session consideration of the Secretary-General's report on gratis personnel and the related ACABQ report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/603/Add.1], adopted resolution 57/281 B without vote [agenda items 111 & 118].

Gratis personnel provided by Governments and other entities

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 51/243 of 15 September 1997, 52/234 of 26 June 1998, 53/11 of 26 October 1998, 53/218 of 7 April 1999 and 57/281 of 20 December 2002 and its decision 55/462 of 12 April 2001,

Having considered the annual report of the Secretary-General on gratis personnel provided by Governments and other entities, covering the period from 1 January to 31 December 2002, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the annual report of the Secretary-General;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to provide in subsequent reports, on a biennial basis, information on the use of gratis personnel, indicating, inter alia, their nationality and duration of service, department where employed and functions performed.

Status of women

In a January report [E/CN.6/2003/8] to the Commission on the Status of Women, the Secretary-General provided a statistical update, as at 30 November 2002, of the gender distribution of staff, particularly at the Professional and higher levels, in the UN Secretariat and in organizations of the UN common system (see p. 1189).

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/180 [YUN 2002, p. 1411], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/58/374] on the status of women in the UN system. He noted that, as at 30 June 2003, the number of women in the Professional and higher categories with appointments subject to geographical distribution rose, from 1,022 (41 per cent) in 2002 to 1,041 (41.8 per cent). The 0.8 per cent rise was less than the approximately 1 percentage point annual average increase recorded yearly for the group since 1989. At senior policy-making levels (D-1 and above), the overall proportion of women decreased slightly from 33.7 per cent to 33.3 per cent. There were notable increases at the Under-Secretary-General (from 16.7 per cent to 20.8 per cent) and D-2 (from 29.4 per cent to 31.2 per cent) levels, no improvement at the Assistant Secretary-General level, which remained at 23.5 per cent, and a decrease at the D-1 level (from 37.8 to 36.3 per cent). At the P-1 to P-5 levels, where women comprised 43.1 per cent, gender balance was achieved only at the P-2 level (55.3 per cent). The proportion of women holding appointments of one year or more increased slightly from 35 per cent to 35.6 per cent (1,971 out of a total of 5,530 staff members).

The report concluded that, notwithstanding increases in the number of women in some categories of staff, the overall representation of women did not improve significantly during the reporting period. Additional steps to achieve the goal of 50/50 gender balance would include recruitment and retention efforts; establishing the goal of selecting women to 50 per cent or more of vacancies; increasing appointments at the senior and policy-making levels; and extending the ongoing training and sensitization of managers on gender balance issues.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/501], adopted resolution 58/144 without vote [agenda item 110].

Improvement of the status of women in the United Nations system

The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 1 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations, as well as Article 8, which provides that the United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs,

Recalling also the goal, contained in the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, of achieving overall gender equality, particularly at the Professional level and above, by 2000 and the further actions and initiatives set out in the outcome document adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Recalling further its resolution 57/180 of 18 December 2002, as well as its resolution 57/305 of 15 April 2003, in particular section II, paragraphs 39 to 41 thereof,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/44 of 23 April 2003 on integrating the human rights of women throughout the United Nations system, in particular paragraph 15 thereof, in which the Commission recognized that gender mainstreaming would strongly benefit from the enhanced and full participation of women, including at the higher levels of decision-making within the United Nations system,

Taking into account the continuing lack of representation or underrepresentation of women from certain countries, in particular from developing countries, including least developed countries and small island developing States, from countries with economies in transition and from unrepresented or largely underrepresented Member States,

Noting with appreciation the efforts of the Office of Programme Planning, Budget and Accounts, the Office of Human Resources Management, the Department of Public Information, the Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management and the Executive Office of the Secretary-General and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research in achieving or maintaining the goal of gender balance, as well as those departments and offices that have met or exceeded the goal of 50 per cent in the selection of women candidates for vacant posts in the past year,

Expressing particular concern that, for the second consecutive year, there was a slowing of progress towards achieving the target of 50/50 gender balance and that between 1998 and 2003 there has been almost no progress in the rate of representation of women in appointments of one year or more at the Professional and higher levels,

Expressing concern that there is still only one female special representative of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the work of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat in issuing guidance for field missions on the procedures to be followed for handling disciplinary issues and allegations of serious misconduct involving mission personnel, and encouraged by the agreement in the Staff-Management Coordination Committee that the procedure for dealing with all forms of sexual harassment will be reviewed and incorporated in a new administrative instruction covering all forms of harassment,

Welcoming also the new flexible working arrangements authorized in all departments and offices of the Secretariat,

Noting with concern that the statistics on the representation of women in some organizations of the United Nations system are not fully up to date,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General and the actions described therein;

2. Regrets that the goal of 50/50 gender distribution was not met by the end of 2000, and urges the Secretary-General to redouble his efforts to realize significant progress towards this goal in the very near future;

3. Reaffirms the urgent goal of achieving 50/50 gender distribution in all categories of posts within the United Nations system, especially at senior and policy-making levels, with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, and also taking into account the continuing lack of representation or underrepresentation of women from certain countries, in particular from developing countries, from countries with economies in transition and from unrepresented or largely underrepresented Member States;

4. Expresses concern that in three departments and offices of the Secretariat women still account for less than 30 per cent of professional staff and that in three organizations of the United Nations system women still account for less than 20 per cent of professional staff, and encourages the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations system to intensify their efforts to meet the goal of gender balance within the United Nations system;

5. Welcomes:

(a) The ongoing personal commitment of the Secretary-General to meeting the goal of gender equality and his assurance that gender balance will be given the highest priority in his continuing efforts to bring about a new management culture in the Organization;

(b) The pledge of the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations system to intensify their efforts to meet the gender equality goals set out in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action;

(c) The inclusion of the objective of improving gender balance in action plans on human resources management for individual departments and offices, and encourages further cooperation, including the sharing of best-practice initiatives, between heads of departments and offices, the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women and the Office of Human Resources Management of the Secretariat in the implementation of those plans, which include specific targets and strategies for improving the representation of women in individual departments and offices;

(d) The decision, within the context of the new staff selection system, to hold heads of departments and offices accountable for meeting the gender targets in departmental human resource action plans through their performance compacts;

(e) The continuing designation of focal points for women in the United Nations system, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the focal points are designated at a sufficiently high level and enjoy full access to senior management, both at Headquarters and in the field;

(f) The continuing provision of specific training programmes on gender mainstreaming and gender issues in the workplace, tailored to meet the special needs of individual departments, commends those heads of departments and offices who have launched gender training for their managers and staff, and strongly encourages those who have not yet organized such training to do so as soon as possible;

(g) The formulation of a project by the Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management to strengthen the efforts of the Secretary-General to achieve gender balance by adopting a more coordinated and integrated approach to this issue, with the purpose of setting and achieving verifiable goals to ensure that gender balance targets are attained by 2006;

(h) The preparation of a research-based analysis by the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, to be presented to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, of the probable causes of the slow advancement in the improvement of the status of women in the United Nations system, with a view to elaborating new strategies for achieving gender parity;

(i) The commitment of the Office of Human Resources Management and the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women to explore ways to better integrate the departmental focal points in the new staffing system, so that the focal points can continue to play an important role for the periodic and systematic monitoring of the recruitment, retention and career advancement of women, and looks forward to information on this matter in the next report;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to achieve and maintain the goal of 50/50 gender distribution with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter:

(a) To continue to develop innovative recruitment strategies to identify and attract suitably qualified women candidates, particularly from and in developing countries and countries with economies in transition and other Member States that are unrepresented or underrepresented in the Secretariat, and in occupations in which women are underrepresented;

(b) To encourage the United Nations system and its agencies and departments to make more effective use of existing information technology resources and systems and other established methods to disseminate information about employment opportunities for women and to better coordinate rosters of potential women candidates;

(c) To continue to monitor closely the progress made by departments and offices in meeting the goal of gender balance, to ensure that the appointment and promotion of suitably qualified women represents at least 50 per cent of all appointments and promotions until the goal of 50/50 gender distribution is met;

(d) To strongly encourage heads of departments and offices to continue selecting female candidates when their qualifications are the same as, or better than, those of male candidates, and to effectively encourage, monitor and assess the performance of managers in meeting targets for improving women's representation;

(e) To encourage consultation by heads of departments and offices with departmental focal points on women during the selection process and to ensure that the focal points are designated at a sufficiently high level and enjoy full and effective access to senior management;

(f) To extend ongoing training and sensitization of managers on gender balance issues;

(g) To enable the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women to effectively contribute to, monitor and facilitate the setting and implementation of gender targets in human resource action plans, including by ensuring access to the information required to carry out that work;

10. Strongly encourages Member States:

(a) To support the efforts of the United Nations and the specialized agencies, funds and programmes to achieve the goal of 50/50 gender distribution, especially at senior and policy-making levels, by identifying and regularly submitting more women candidates for appointment to positions in the United Nations system, by identifying and proposing national recruitment sources, including through the establishment of networks with professional organizations, that will assist the organizations of the United Nations system in identifying suitable women candidates, in particular from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, by creating awareness among their nationals, particularly women, of available vacancies throughout the United Nations system, and by encouraging more women to apply for positions within the Secretariat, the specialized agencies, funds and programmes and the regional commissions, including in areas in which women are underrepresented, such as peacekeeping, peace-building and other non-traditional areas;

Multilingualism

JIU report. By a June note [A/58/93], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on the implementation of multilingualism in the UN system. JIU noted that, although most organizations considered multilingualism as a corollary to their universal character and their governing bodies had insisted on the strict application of rules establishing language parity, many meetings attended by Member States continued to be held without interpretation or documents available in all prescribed languages. Such a situation might contribute to the marginalization of some linguistic groups, particularly from developing countries, by not allowing them to contribute on an equal basis to the outcomes of those meetings.

JIU made a number of recommendations for improving the situation, including the holding of a review by common system organizations and legislative bodies to clarify the status of the different languages used in their organization so as to provide further guidance. Executive heads should submit in their budget proposals predefined objectives for improved multilingualism and expected results from phased priorities. They should also indicate the languages in which planned publications would be issued and languages in which information materials would be posted on different web sites.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 56/262 [YUN 2002, p. 1413], the Secretary-General submitted a September report on activities to implement the Assembly's resolution on multilingualism [A/58/363]. He provided information on issues relating to the Secretariat's working languages, the use of languages in meetings and public information, and provided statistical updates on, and a detailed survey of, the language capacities of UN web sites. The Secretary-General observed that the greatest obstacle to multilingualism in outputs was the shortage of resources; while consistent funding was available for translating parliamentary documents into the six official languages, the same was not true for publications. Meanwhile, the maintenance of web sites in various languages was being largely accomplished within existing resources. Departments were therefore preparing their sites in the official languages selectively, in terms of both the materials and the languages covered. The Secretary-General outlined steps to facilitate the further development of competence in the six official languages among Secretariat staff, including training programmes. Secretariat departments were encouraged to identify clearly in their budget submissions the resources required to ensure production of outputs (other than official documents) in the six official languages and in relevant non-official languages, as applicable.

Staff rules and regulations

In accordance with staff regulation 12.3 stipulating that the full text of provisional staff rules and amendments should be reported annually to the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/283], outlined amendments to the 100 and 200 series of Staff Rules, together with the rationale for the changes. Amendments to the 100 series related to education grant travel, re-employment, permanent appointments, home leave and appeals, while amendments under the 200 series related to education grant and types of appointment and re-employment.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly take note of the amendments in the annex to the report, which he proposed to implement as from 1 January 2004.

Safety and security

Attack on UN offices in Baghdad. On 19 August, the UN headquarters in Baghdad, Iraq, was subjected to a terrorist attack that resulted in the death of 22 persons, including the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Iraq, Sergio Vieira de Mello, and the wounding of more than 150 (see also p. 346). On 20 August, the Security Council President made statement S/PRST/2003/13 on behalf of the Council, in which members condemned the attack (see p. 347).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 September [meeting 94], the General Assembly adopted resolution 57/338 [draft: A/57/L.83/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 10].

Condemnation of the attack on United Nations personnel and premises in Baghdad

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the selfless commitment of the United Nations staff members who serve the ideals of the United Nations around the world,

1. Strongly condemns the atrocious and deliberate attack on the United Nations Office in Baghdad on 19 August 2003, which killed fifteen United Nations staff members, the largest number ever in one incident, and seven others, and wounded more than one hundred persons;

2. Pays special tribute to Sergio Vieira de Mello, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Iraq, and his colleagues who perished in this senseless tragedy;

3. Expresses its condolences to all the families and loved ones of those who lost their lives;

4. Urgently calls for international cooperation to find and bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of this vicious act;

5. Calls for intensified international cooperation to prevent and eradicate such acts of terrorism and to hold accountable all those who participate in such acts;

6. Reaffirms the determination of the United Nations to assist the Iraqi people to build peace and justice in their country and to determine their own political future by themselves, and welcomes in this regard the determination of the Organization to continue its operation in Iraq to fulfil its mandate in the service of the Iraqi people and not to be intimidated by such attacks.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/155 [YUN 2002, p. 144], the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/58/344], updated information on threats against the safety and security of UN personnel between 1 July 2002 and 30 June 2003. He stated that UN personnel continued to face significant security threats in all regions. Apart from deaths resulting from illness or vehicle and aircraft accidents, 196 UN civilian staff members had been killed since 1992, excluding uniformed peacekeepers and losses resulting from the 19 August attack in Baghdad (see above). During the reporting period, five staff members were killed and seven incidents of hostage-taking and kidnapping occurred, involving 14 UN personnel in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Georgia, Nigeria, Pakistan and Somalia. More than 258 incidents of assault were reported, including 69 in Afghanistan, 30 in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and 53 in the Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro. Also reported were at least 168 incidents of staff harassment, some 270 violent attacks against related compounds and convoys, and 550 incidents of theft of office equipment, official vehicles and staff property. The number of staff arrested, detained or missing, and regarding whom the Organization had been unable to exercise fully its right to protection, declined slightly from the previous reporting period, from 39 to 34 cases. The report described efforts to further improve the current security management system towards strengthening staff security and safety at Headquarters and in the field, including measures relating to accountability, minimum operating security standards, security training programmes, stress management and security collaboration between the United Nations and NGOs. The Secretary-General observed that, while many factors beyond the Organization's control would continue to influence the level of threats and risk faced by UN personnel, the fact that fatality had decreased markedly over the past years gave cause for optimism that ongoing efforts to strengthen the security management system were on the right track. He stated that all aspects of the system had been evaluated and that the findings, currently being reviewed, would be reported in due course.

Security Council action. The Security Council, on 26 August, adopted resolution 1502(2003) condemning violence against UN and other humanitarian personnel (see p. 921).

CEB action. CEB, in its annual overview report for 2003 [E/2004/67], noted that a main concern of the system during the period under review was to ensure that urgent measures were taken to strengthen system-wide security policies and infrastructure in the aftermath of the tragic events in Baghdad (see p. 1452). The findings and recommendations of independent panels commissioned by the Secretary-General, as well as internal reviews, had all confirmed the need for such measures. CEB endorsed and/or agreed to reinforce a number of system-wide initiatives covering issues relating to risk and threat assessments, UN premises, accommodation and movement control, and other related issues, including security at headquarters locations, accountability, security for women, air travel safety and consideration of the institution of United Nations Guard Contingents to provide staff security in high-risk areas. During 2003, CEB continued to monitor the development of emergency preparedness plans by common system organizations and knowledge-sharing among them. A comprehensive review of progress in that regard was planned for 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/122 [draft: A/58/L.47 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40].

Safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 on strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 53/87 of 7 December 1998, 54/192 of 17 December 1999, 55/175 of 19 December 2000, 56/217 of 21 December 2001 and 57/155 of 16 December 2002 on safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel, as well as resolutions 52/167 of 16 December 1997 on safety and security of humanitarian personnel and 52/126 of 12 December 1997 on protection of United Nations personnel, and Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/5 of 15 July 2003,

Welcoming the adoption by the Security Council of resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003 on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the protection of civilians in armed conflict and of Security Council resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000 and the recommendations made therein, as well as the statements by the President of the Council of 30 November 1999, on the role of the Council in the prevention of armed conflicts, 13 January 2000, on humanitarian assistance to refugees in Africa, 9 February 2000, on protection of United Nations personnel, its associated personnel and humanitarian personnel in conflict zones, 9 March 2000, on humanitarian aspects of issues before the Council, and 15 March 2002, on the aide-memoire for the consideration of issues pertaining to the protection of civilians in armed conflict, and noting in that context the range of views expressed during all open debates of the Council on these issues,

Reaffirming the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international humanitarian law,

Concerned by the increasingly difficult context in which humanitarian assistance takes place in some areas, in particular the continuous erosion, in many cases, of respect for the principles and rules of international humanitarian law,

Deeply concerned by the dangers and security risks faced by humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel at the field level, and mindful of the need to improve the current security management system in order to improve their safety and security,

Gravely concerned at the acts of violence in many parts of the world against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, in particular deliberate attacks, which are in violation of international humanitarian law as well as other international law that may be applicable,

Expressing profound regret at the deaths of all international and national humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel who were involved in the provision of humanitarian assistance, and strongly deploring the rising toll of casualties among such personnel in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations,

Commending the courage and commitment of those who take part, often at great personal risk, in humanitarian operations, especially of locally recruited staff,

Strongly condemning acts of murder and other forms of violence, rape and sexual assault, intimidation, armed robbery, abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention to which those participating in humanitarian operations are increasingly exposed, as well as attacks on humanitarian convoys and acts of destruction and looting of their property,

Emphasizing that there are existing prohibitions under international law against attacks knowingly and intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission undertaken in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, which in situations of armed conflicts constitute war crimes,

Recalling the inclusion of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which entered into force on 1 July 2002, and noting the role that the Court could play in appropriate cases in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law,

Expressing concern that the occurrence of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel is a factor that increasingly restricts the ability of the Organization to provide assistance and protection to civilians in fulfilment of its mandate under the Charter,

Recalling that primary responsibility under international law for the security and protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel lies with the Government hosting a United Nations operation conducted under the Charter or its agreements with relevant organizations,

Urging all other parties involved in armed conflicts, in compliance with international humanitarian law, in particular their obligations under the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the obligations applicable to them under the Additional Protocols thereto, of 8 June 1977, to ensure the security and protection of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel,

Bearing in mind that reaching the vulnerable is essential for providing adequate protection and assistance in the context of natural disasters and complex emergencies as well as for strengthening local capacity to cope with humanitarian needs in such contexts,

Welcoming the fact that the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which entered into force on 15 January 1999, has been ratified or acceded to by sixty-nine States as at the present date, and mindful of the need to promote universality of the Convention,

Reaffirming the need to ensure adequate levels of safety and security for United Nations personnel and humanitarian personnel and a culture of accountability at all levels,

Reaffirming also that ensuring the safety and security of United Nations personnel constitutes an underlying duty of the Organization, which must be based on a necessary cost-sharing arrangement with the relevant agencies, funds and programmes within the United Nations system,

Guided by the relevant provisions on protection contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations of 13 February 1946, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies of 21 November 1947, the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949 and the Additional Protocols to the Geneva Conventions, and Amended Protocol II of 3 May 1996 to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects of 10 October 1980,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General, while noting that it does not cover developments after 30 June 2003;

4. Calls upon all other parties involved in armed conflicts, in compliance with international humanitarian law, in particular their obligations under the 1949 Geneva Conventions and the obligations applicable to them under the Additional Protocols thereto, to ensure the safety and protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, to refrain from abducting or detaining them in violation of their immunity under relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law, and speedily to release, without harm, any abductee or detainee;

5. Calls upon all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, in countries in which humanitarian personnel are operating, in conformity with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, to cooperate fully with the United Nations and other humanitarian agencies and organizations and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel in order to allow them to perform efficiently their task of assisting the affected civilian population, including refugees and internally displaced persons;

6. Strongly condemns any act or failure to act, contrary to international law, which obstructs or prevents humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel from discharging their humanitarian functions, or which entails being subjected to threats, the use of force or physical attack, frequently resulting in injury or death, and affirms the need to hold accountable those who commit such acts and, for that purpose, the need to enact national legislation, as appropriate;

7. Expresses deep concern that, over the past decade, threats against the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel have escalated at an unprecedented rate and that perpetrators of acts of violence seemingly operate with impunity;

8. Strongly urges all States to take stronger actions to ensure that any threat or act of violence committed against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel on their territory is investigated fully and to ensure that the perpetrators of such acts are brought to justice in accordance with international law and national law, and notes the need for States to end impunity for such acts;

12. Calls upon all States to provide adequate and prompt information in the event of the arrest or detention of humanitarian personnel or United Nations and its associated personnel, to afford them the necessary medical assistance and to allow independent medical teams to visit and examine the health of those detained, and urges them to take the necessary measures to ensure the speedy release of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation who have been arrested or detained in violation of their immunity, in accordance with the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law;

13. Reaffirms the obligation of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel to observe and respect the national laws of the country in which they are operating, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation, and to continue to consider ways and means to strengthen the protection of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation, notably by seeking the inclusion, in negotiations of headquarters and other mission agreements concerning United Nations and its associated personnel, of the applicable conditions contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies and the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

24. Stresses the need to ensure that all United Nations staff members receive adequate security training, including physical and psychological training, prior to their deployment to the field, the need to attach a high priority to the improvement of stress and trauma counselling services available to United Nations staff members, including through the implementation of a comprehensive security and stress and trauma management training, support and assistance programme for United Nations staff throughout the system, before, during and after missions, and the need to make available to the Secretary-General the means for that purpose;

27. Recognizes the need for enhanced coordination and cooperation, both at the headquarters and the field levels, between the United Nations security management system and non-governmental organizations on matters relating to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, with a view to addressing mutual security concerns in the field;

28. Underlines the need to allocate adequate and predictable resources to the safety and security of United Nations personnel, including through the Consolidated Appeals Process, and encourages all States to contribute to the Trust Fund for Security of Staff Members of the United Nations System;

29. Recalls the essential role of telecommunication resources in facilitating the safety of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, calls upon States to consider acceding to or ratifying the Tampere Convention on the Provision of Telecommunication Resources for Disaster Mitigation and Relief Operations of 18 June 1998, and encourages them to facilitate and expedite, consistent with their national laws and regulations, the use of communications equipment in such operations, and emphasizes the importance of States facilitating communications, inter alia, through limiting and, whenever possible, lifting the restrictions placed on the use of communications equipment by United Nations and its associated personnel;

30. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a compre-

Staff College

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/278 [YUN 2001, p. 1355], the Secretary-General, by an August note [A/58/305 & Corr.1], transmitted the first report of the Director of the United Nations System Staff College, covering the period from 1 January 2002, when its new statute, approved by Assembly resolution 55/278, came into force, to 30 June 2003. In May 2003, a new Director was appointed.

In the 18 months covered by the report, the College organized and/or participated in 97 learning events in which 2,456 persons took part. The College also supported UN agencies and organizations with advice and a range of services in adult learning and training.

The report concluded that the College had made considerable progress as a distinct entity within the UN family, and had been supported in its work by Italy, the host country, with which it was to sign a formal host-country agreement. Additional support was provided by key common system organizations, programmes and entities, and by Member States.

Joint Staff Pension Fund

As at 31 December 2003, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF) had 85,245 active participants compared to 82,715 at the end of 2002; the number of periodic payments in award increased from 51,028 to 52,496 over the year. The breakdown of the periodic benefits in award was 16,713 retirement benefits; 11,730 early retirement benefits; 6,575 deferred retirement benefits; 8,294 widows' and widowers' benefits; 8,221 children's benefits; 921 disability benefits; and 42 secondary dependants' benefits. In the course of the year, 12,978 full withdrawals and other settlements were paid.

The Fund was administered by the 33-member United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board (UNJSPB), which did not meet in 2003 because of the biennialization of the work of the Fifth Committee. Instead, the Board's Standing Committee met on its behalf (New York, 7-11 July) [A/58/214 & Corr.1] and discussed, among other subjects, matters relating to the Fund's administration and operation, revised budget estimates for the 2002-2003 biennium, budget estimates for the 2004-2005 biennium and the authorization for contributions to the Emergency Fund for 2004-2005.

ACABQ, commenting in November [A/58/7/Add.9] on the Standing Committee's report, recommended approval of revised estimates for administrative expenses of $80,278,200 for the 2002-2003 biennium and $94,685,200 for the 2004-2005 biennium. It also agreed with the Standing Committee's proposal to supplement voluntary contributions to the Emergency Fund by an amount not exceeding $200,000 for 2004-2005.

Those recommendations were approved by the General Assembly in resolution 58/272, section X, of 22 December (see p. 1418).

Pension Fund investments

The market value of UNJSPF assets as at 31 December 2003 was $26,084 million, an increase of $5,095 million from the previous year. The total investment return for 2003 was 24.8 per cent, which, after adjusting for inflation, represented a "real" rate of return of 22.5 per cent. Investment income for the 2002-2003 biennium from interest and dividends amounted to $1,539.4 million. New funds that became available for investment (contributions plus investment income, less benefit payment and administrative expenses) totalled $1,294.3 million for the biennium. The Fund's investment income during the 2002-2003 biennium amounted to $2.1 billion, comprising $1.6 billion in interest and dividends and $457 million in net profit on sales of investments. Investment management costs amounted to $41.7 million.

The Fund remained one of the most diversified pension funds in the world, with 51.9 per cent of its assets exposed to currencies other than the United States dollar, which was the Fund's unit of account.

OIOS audit

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], the Secretary-General, in May [A/58/81], transmitted to the Assembly an OIOS audit of the Investment Management Service of UNJSPF, carried out between September 2001 and March 2002.

In its audit of the Service's investment management activities, OIOS identified weaknesses in the internal control system, inadequate procedures for documenting the investment process and a need to improve the efficiency and transparency of investment operations. Its audit of the Service's procurement and contract administration revealed a number of problems, including the absence of documented procedures, non-compliance with UN procurement policies, inadequate monitoring of vendor performance and insufficient tracking and monitoring of the procurement process and contract administration. OIOS made a series of recommendations to rectify those shortcomings.

The Secretary-General took note of the OIOS findings and concurred with the recommendations made in the report.

Chapter IV

Institutional and administrative matters

In 2003, the United Nations continued to address administrative and institutional matters in order to ensure the efficient functioning of the Organization. The General Assembly resumed its fifty-seventh session and its tenth emergency special session; it opened its fifty-eighth session on 16 September. It granted observer status to the International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance, the Eurasian Economic Community, the GUUAM (a regional agreement among Georgia, Ukraine, Uzbekistan, Azerbaijan and the Republic of Moldova) and the East African Community. The World Tourism Organization became a UN specialized agency.

The Security Council held 208 formal meetings to deal with regional conflicts, peacekeeping operations and a number of other issues related to the maintenance of international peace and security. The expansion of its membership was again considered by the Assembly.

In addition to its organizational and substantive sessions, the Economic and Social Council held a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund) and the World Trade Organization.

The Committee on Conferences examined requests for changes to the 2003 calendar of conferences and meetings and sought ways of optimizing the use of conference-servicing resources. It urged the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management to maintain high quality services during its ongoing reform process.

The Joint Inspection Unit made recommendations for the improvement of certain operations of the UN system organizations: the management of information systems; revenue-producing activities; outsourcing practices; and common services for the Vienna-based organizations. The Assembly took note of the review of the duplication in UN administrative processes and procedures conducted by the Office of Internal Oversight Services. It adopted a resolution aimed at strengthening political impetus in the implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of major UN conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields.

Progress was reported on the early stages of implementation of the capital master plan for refurbishing the UN complex and on measures to strengthen the security and safety of UN premises.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item entitled "Admission of new Members to the United Nations" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Amendment to rule 1 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and opening date and duration of the general debate

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/241 of 31 July 1997, 52/232 of 4 June 1998, 53/224 of 7 April 1999, 53/239 of 8 June 1999 and 55/14 of 3 November 2000 concerning, inter alia, the opening date of the regular session of the General Assembly,

Recalling in particular paragraph 1 of its resolution 55/14, in which it decided to amend rule 1 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly to read: "The General Assembly shall meet every year in regular session commencing on the Tuesday following the second Monday in September",

Also recalling in particular paragraph 19 of the annex to its resolution 51/241, in which it decided that there should continue to be only one general debate each year, beginning in the third week of September, and paragraph 20 (a) of the annex, in which it decided that the general debate should be organized over a period of two weeks so as to maximize possibilities for inter-ministerial contacts,

Recalling that ad hoc arrangements had to be made regarding the dates and duration of the general debate at its fifty-fourth, fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth sessions,

Recalling also its decision 56/468 of 1 May 2002, by which it decided to hold an eight-day general debate at its fifty-seventh session, from Thursday, 12 September, to Sunday, 15 September, and from Tuesday, 17 September, to Friday, 20 September 2002,

Noting that the advancement of the opening date of the regular session as decided in its resolution 55/14 has resulted in insufficient time to ensure preparedness for the session,

Concerned about the impact that the fluctuation of the opening date and the interruption in the course of the general debate have had on its work and on Member States,

Strongly convinced that resetting the opening date of the regular session of the General Assembly and pre-determining the dates for the opening and duration of the general debate at future sessions will facilitate the organization of its work, including the work of its Main Committees, and will benefit Member States in their planning,

1. Decides to amend rule 1 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly to read: "The General Assembly shall meet every year in regular session commencing on the Tuesday of the third week in September, counting from the first week that contains at least one working day";

2. Also decides that the general debate in the General Assembly shall open on the Tuesday following the opening of the regular session of the General Assembly and shall be held without interruption over a period of nine working days;

3. Further decides that the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 above shall be implemented as from the fifty-eighth regular session; the fifty-eighth regular session shall therefore open on Tuesday, 16 September 2003, and the general debate shall open on Tuesday, 23 September 2003, and end on Friday, 3 October 2003; the fifty-seventh regular session shall therefore close on Monday, 15 September 2003;

4. Decides to annex paragraph 2 above to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.

Coordination, monitoring and cooperation

Institutional mechanisms

CEB activities

According to its annual overview report for 2003 [E/2004/67], the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) continued to focus on ensuring coherent and coordinated UN-system implementation of the Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49]. The themes around which the CEB agenda was framed included strategies in the context of the follow-up to the 2002 World Conference on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] and the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [ibid., p. 953]; curbing transnational crime; bridging the digital divide through projects, including the UN system Extranet (see p. 859); HIV/AIDS and its linkages with food security and governance (see p. 1250); system-wide support for Africa's development and the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 939); and conflict prevention (see p. 55).

CEB also considered assistance to countries invoking Article 50 of the Charter of the United Nations on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions and, through its High-level Committee on Management (HLCM), endorsed and/or agreed to a number of system-wide initiatives to strengthen the security system of the United Nations (see p. 1453).

CEB held two regular sessions in 2003: the first in Paris (25-26 April) [CEB/2003/1] and the second in New York (31 October-1 November) [CEB/2003/2]. Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows: HLCM, fifth (12-13 June) [CEB/2003/3] and sixth (20-21 October) [CEB/2003/5] sessions, both in New York; HLCP (High-level Committee on Programmes), fifth (26-27 March) [CEB/2003/4] and sixth (18-19 September) [CEB/2003/7] sessions, both in Rome, Italy, with two intersessional meetings (Geneva, 2 July [CEB/2003/6] and New York, 3 November [CEB/2003/8]).

Report for 2002

The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) [A/58/16] considered CEB's annual overview report for 2002 [E/2003/55]. It requested that future reports be results-oriented and incorporate expected accomplishments, indicators of achievement and progress made and called on CEB to strengthen further coordination among UN agencies at the country level in harmonizing and streamlining their practices and procedures. CPC recommended that CEB play a role in better coordinating analysis of the problems of countries invoking Article 50 of the Charter and develop new methodologies to identify the damage to affected States and mechanisms to determine appropriate compensation. It stressed that CEB keep under review the issue of inter-agency coordination on NEPAD and include in its annual report information on coordination and cooperation in the fields of human resources and finance.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2003/288 of 24 July, took note of CEB's 2002 report.

Programme coordination

The Committee for Programme and Coordination held an organizational meeting on 5 May and its forty-third session from 9 June to 3 July and on 9 July, all in New York [A/58/16].

CPC reviewed the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations, the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget and the proposed revisions to the 2002-2005 medium-term plan. It considered a number of OIOS reports on proposed evaluation themes, an in-depth programme evaluation, and two triennial reviews of the implementation of CPC recommendations on specific in-depth evaluations (see p. 1387). In addition to its review of CEB's 2002 annual report (see above), CPC also considered the Secretary-General's report on the UN system's future engagement with NEPAD (see p. 939) and the 2002 JIU report on the results approach in the United Nations for implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2002, p. 1356], together with the related comments of the Secretary-General and CEB (see p. 1384).

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2003/288 of 24 July, took note of CPC's report.

Joint Inspection Unit

JIU, in its thirty-fourth report to the General Assembly, covering the period 1 January to 31 December 2002 [A/58/34], examined relations and cooperation with participating organizations and other oversight bodies and follow-up on its reports and recommendations. JIU continued to review the administration and management of its participating organizations (see p. 1387).

As requested by the Assembly in resolution 56/245 [YUN 2001, p. 1286], JIU continued to cooperate and coordinate with other external and internal oversight bodies of the UN system, reaching agreements on the handling of follow-up of its reports with the secretariats of six additional organizations.

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 56/279 [YUN 2002, p. 1457], JIU reported on progress in the development and consolidation of common services at Geneva and other duty stations. The Management Ownership Committee, comprising the heads of all Geneva-based agencies and chaired by the Director-General of the UN Office at Geneva, provided strategic direction and high-level support for all common service initiatives. The Task Force on Common Services had been instrumental in the realization of developments in the areas of travel, the provision of electrical archives and records management (see p. 1494).

By decision 58/564 A of 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of JIU's report until its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session. In resolution 58/272, section VI (see p. 1418), it approved a gross budget for JIU of $4,900,800 for 2004.

Other coordination matters

Follow-up to international conferences

In a 15 May report [E/2003/67], the Secretary-General analysed how the Economic and Social Council could promote an integrated approach to the follow-up and implementation of the outcomes of recent major UN conferences and summits. It contained suggestions on how the Council could use its segments to sustain progress towards internationally agreed goals and address policy, coordination and operational aspects of common conference themes, and on how it could perform its follow-up functions in respect of recent conferences and summits. It put forward proposals for enhancing the Council's dialogue with and oversight of the boards of UN funds and programmes, improving further the contribution of the functional commissions to the implementation of conference outcomes, and developing the regional commissions' role in reviewing progress towards achieving internationally agreed goals. It also recommended ways to build a closer relationship with the specialized agencies and inter-agency bodies and to foster partnerships and alliances with all stakeholders.

The Secretary-General's report was to be read in conjunction with the report of the open-ended Ad Hoc Working Group of the General Assembly on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits in the economic and social fields, established by General Assembly resolution 57/270 [YUN 2002, p. 1435]. The Group's report [A/57/48] covered its deliberations during its formal meetings on 27 January, 3-4, 7 and 24 February, 27 March, 22 April, 12-13 May and 4-6, 13 and 17 June, and at a series of informal meetings held between January and June.

On 17 June, the Ad Hoc Working Group adopted its report and recommended a draft resolution for adoption by the Assembly (see below).

By decision 2003/227 of 16 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of the Secretary-General and that of the Ad Hoc Working Group.

(For the Secretary-General's 23 May progress report [E/2003/74] on the implementation of the key provisions of the Economic and Social Council's agreed conclusions 2002/1 [YUN 2002, p. 1365], see p. 1391.)

75. Stresses that there is scope for a major event in 2005, possibly a comprehensive review, which could be politically attractive and powerful, bearing in mind that the General Assembly has decided to review in 2005 the progress achieved in implementing all the commitments made in the Millennium Declaration, on the basis of a comprehensive report of the Secretary-General.

The United Nations and the World Tourism Organization agree to develop, in the interests of uniform standards of international employment and to the extent feasible, common personnel standards, methods and arrangements designed to avoid unjustified differences in terms and conditions of employment, to avoid competition in recruitment of personnel and to facilitate any mutually desirable and beneficial interchange of personnel. For this purpose the World Tourism Organization agrees to accept the Statute of the International Civil Service Commission and participate in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund in accordance with the Regulations of the Fund and accept the jurisdiction of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal in matters involving applications alleging non-observance of those Regulations.

6. The World Tourism Organization agrees to transmit its proposed budgets to the United Nations not later than when the said budgets are transmitted to its members so as to enable the General Assembly of the United Nations to examine them and make recommendations, in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations.

7. Representatives of the World Tourism Organization shall be entitled to participate, without vote, in the deliberations of the General Assembly or any committee thereof established by it, at all times when the budget of the World Tourism Organization or general administrative or financial questions concerning the World Tourism Organization are under consideration.

conversion to a specialized agency of the UN system. Subsequently, the Council President received a request from the ICDO Secretary-General for further postponement of the item.

Non-governmental organizations

Committee on NGOs

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations, at its resumed 2002 session (New York, 8-24 January 2003) [E/2003/11], considered 147 applications from NGOs for consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, including those deferred from its 1998-2002 sessions, and eight requests for reclassification. It recommended 89 NGOs for consultative status, three for reclassification and three to maintain their current status. It further recommended that three organizations not be granted consultative status, deferred consideration of 52 applications and closed consideration of three. The Committee took note of 11 quadrennial reports submitted by NGOs in general and special consultative status with the Council, deferred consideration of six such reports pending responses to questions posed by the Committee and of two others pending its review of special reports from the NGOs concerned, and recommended three draft decisions for action by the Council.

The Committee reviewed its working methods relating to the implementation of Council resolution 1996/31 [YUN 1996, p. 1360], including the process of NGO accreditation, and of decision 1995/304 [YUN 1995, p. 1445]. It considered the implementation of Council decision 1996/302 [YUN 1996, p. 1368] on NGO applications for consultative status placed on the Roster for the purpose of the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development, five special NGO reports responding to complaints by Iran, and complaints by Member States against five NGOs. The Committee recommended the participation of three NGOs of indigenous people not in consultative status with the Council in the open-ended inter-sessional working group of the Commission on Human Rights, established pursuant to Council resolution 1995/32 [YUN 1995, p. 777].

On 1 May, the Council noted the Committee's report on its resumed 2002 session, decided that its 2003 session would be held from 5 to 23 May and approved that session's provisional agenda and documentation (decision 2003/217). On the same date, it granted special consultative status to 72 NGOs, placed 17 on the Roster and reclassified three from the Roster to special consultative status; it decided not to grant consultative status to three NGOs and not to reclassify three others from special to general consultative status; it took note of 11 quadrennial reports and noted the Committee's decision to close consideration of three NGO applications and its closure of States' complaints against four NGOs (decision 2003/216).

The Committee held its 2003 regular session (5-23 May) [E/2003/32 (Parts I & II & Part II/Corr.1)] and its resumed 2003 session (15-19 December) [E/2003/32 (Part III)], both in New York. In May, the Committee recommended 57 NGOs for consultative status and deferred consideration of 48 applications (two organizations having withdrawn their applications). It recommended that two of three NGOs requesting reclassification to consultative status be so reclassified, deferring consideration of the third to its resumed 2003 session. It took note of 65 quadrennial reports, deferred consideration of six others already deferred from previous sessions and of four new ones, and closed consideration of two complaints by States.

The Committee adopted a resolution, which it brought to the Council's attention, and recommended five draft decisions for action by the Council. By the resolution, the Committee recommended that the Council decide to introduce for the Committee on NGOs an electronic meeting system ("Paperless Committee") on a one-year trial basis.

On 24 July, the Council, on the Committee's recommendation, granted special consultative status to 57 NGOs, placed 14 others on the Roster, and reclassified two from the Roster to special consultative status, and noted that the Committee had taken note of 65 quadrennial reports and had closed the case of two complaints submitted by States against NGOs (decision 2003/275). It suspended for one year the special consultative status of one organization (decision 2003/276). It took note of the Committee's resolution on the electronic meeting system, decided that the Committee should try the system for one year and, if successful, implement it permanently; it also requested the Secretary-General to provide adequate staff and facilities in that regard (decision 2003/277). It authorized the Committee to hold a resumed session from 15 to 19 December to complete the work of its 2003 session (decision 2003/278) and took note of the Committee's report on its 2003 regular session (decision 2003/279).

At its resumed 2003 session, the Committee considered 129 NGO applications for consultative status with the Council, including 47 deferred from previous sessions, and six requests for reclassification. It recommended 69 NGOs for consultative status, three for reclassification and one to maintain its current status. It deferred to its 2004 regular session further consideration of 59 applications for consultative status (one application having been withdrawn) and two reclassification applications. It reviewed 65 quadrennial reports and recommended two draft decisions for action by the Council in 2004.

Requests for hearing

On 22 May, the Committee on NGOs approved 20 NGO requests to be heard during the Council's high-level segment, seven during the coordination segment and two during the general segment.

Withdrawal of status

On 16 May, the Committee took note of the request for withdrawal of status submitted by the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) and agreed to remove it from its list. IPU had been granted observer status by the General Assembly in 2002 by resolution 57/32 [YUN 2002, p. 1445].

Conferences and meetings

Committee on Conferences (2002)

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-seventh (2003) session, continued consideration of the 2002 reports of the Committee on Conferences and ACABQ [YUN 2002, p. 1450] on the Secretary-General's report on improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services (DGAACS) [ibid., p. 1459], which changed its name to the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management (DGACM) in 2003.

II

A. Utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities

2. Urges the secretariats and bureaux of bodies that underutilize their conference resources to work more closely with the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management and to consider changes to their programme of work, including adjustments based on previous patterns for recurring agenda items, with a view to reducing underutilization;

3. Notes with appreciation that, as a result of the establishment of a permanent interpretation service at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, the number of meetings at which interpretation services have been provided increased by 23.5 per cent in 2001 and the number of events held increased by 10 per cent;

4. Notes with concern that the severe constraint of adequate conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi poses a serious challenge for any further increase in utilization;

5. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General, contained in section II, paragraph 24, of its resolution 56/242, to consider improving and modernizing the conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi in order to accommodate adequately major meetings and conferences and to report thereon to the General Assembly at the main part of its fifty-eighth session through the Advisory Committee and the Committee on Conferences;

6. Welcomes the efforts made during the previous year to improve the utilization of conference services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi;

11. Reiterates its encouragement to the Secretary-General to continue to intensify efforts being made by the United Nations Office at Nairobi to attract more meetings to its facilities;

12. Notes, in the report of the Secretary-General, that the percentage of requests met for meetings with interpretation in New York by regional and other major groupings of Member States continued to increase, from 92 per cent during the period 2000-2001 to 97 per cent during the period from July 2001 to April 2002, and that overall, for the four duty stations, 98 per cent of the requests were met, and encourages the Secretariat to maintain that trend;

13. Requests the Secretary-General, in this regard, to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session, through the Committee on Conferences, on the methodology that accurately reflects the situation of the provision of conference services to regional and other major groupings of Member States, taking into account the concerns raised in its resolutions 56/254 D and 56/287;

for services, estimated on the basis of current experience;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report in writing on the utilization rates of interpretation services and conference facilities at all duty stations;

19. Also requests the Secretary-General to develop methods and indicators for assessing the performance of conference services from a full-system standpoint, in particular their cost-effectiveness, efficiency and productivity in carrying out their mandates, taking into account the best practices and experiences of other bodies and organizations that provide analogous services, including, specifically, their experience in developing unit cost measures of full work processes, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session, through the Committee on Conferences;

20. Encourages the Committee on Conferences to keep under continued review the procedures for the participation of observers in the work of the Committee;

3. Notes the proposal to integrate the functions of the technical servicing secretariats of the Fifth and Sixth Committees of the General Assembly into the Department, and requests the Secretary-General to submit this proposal in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005 for further consideration;

4. Recognizes the need to develop or update existing workload standards so as to reflect functions performed by language staff not currently included, taking into account the best practices and experience of other bodies and organizations engaged in analogous work and drawing on expert advice, while taking into consideration the impact of technological innovations;

5. Invites the Secretary-General, in the light of the complex intellectual nature of the language services, to develop further the performance indicators in order to evaluate the quality of the functions performed by them to the satisfaction of the Member States;

6. Reaffirms the concepts of delegation of authority and enforcement of accountability, which should be applied in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

7. Stresses that the Department is responsible for the implementation of policy, the formulation of stand-

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the structural and name changes of the Department will be consistent with the existing mandates, inter alia, the medium-term plan, as well as ensuring the implementation of these mandates, and not lead to any involuntary personnel departures, and that they should improve and not negatively affect the quality and timeliness of technical support services being provided to intergovernmental bodies and not negatively affect the quantity of production and distribution of documents in hard copies, as requested by Member States, simultaneously in the six official languages, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session;

13. Concurs with the observation of the Advisory Committee contained in paragraph 6 of its report, that a pragmatic approach should be followed in order not to introduce unnecessary restrictions on the ability of an intergovernmental body or conference to reach a successful conclusion;

III

Documentation- and publication-related matters

6. Notes with appreciation that some progress has been made by the Secretary-General to comply with some of the provisions of section III, paragraph 5, of its resolution 56/242, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to direct all departments to include, where appropriate, the following elements in reports originating in the Secretariat:

10. Reiterates its decision that, if a report is submitted late to conference services, the reasons therefor should be included in a footnote to the document;

11. Notes with concern the current situation of late submission and issuance of documents, as well as its negative impact on the functioning of intergovernmental and expert bodies;

13. Also notes the intention of the Secretary-General to improve the current situation of late submission and issuance of documents with this approach, in order to comply more effectively with the existing rules on the issuance of documentation, and stresses in this regard that such an approach should be aimed at improving the functioning of the Secretariat and, at the same time, facilitating the work of Member States, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session;

14. Reiterates the need to develop a responsibility and accountability system within the Secretariat in

The Committee examined requests for changes to the approved calendar of conferences and meetings for 2003 [A/AC.172/2003/2] and the draft revised calendar for the 2004-2005 biennium [A/AC.172/2003/CRP.1 & Add.1]. On 10 September, the Committee, having considered the biennialization of the item entitled "Pattern of conferences" on the Assembly's agenda, concluded that its current procedures should be retained. The Committee also considered the utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities, requests for exceptions to General Assembly resolution 40/243 [YUN 1985, p. 1256] concerning meetings of subsidiary bodies, documentation- and publication-related matters (submission, availability and distribution of documents), translation and interpretation, the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget and information technology. (The Committee's deliberations and recommendations on those matters are detailed in the sections below.)

The Committee approved requests from a number of bodies for changes to the approved calendar for 2003. It adopted the draft 2004-2005 calendar of conferences and meetings of subsidiary organs of the Economic and Social Council and recommended that the Assembly approve it, on the understanding that the budgetary implications of certain items, such as the decisions and recommendations of the Council adopted at its 2003 substantive session and included in the calendar, would be reviewed by the responsible legislative bodies, and authorize adjustments to the calendar that might become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the Assembly at its fifty-eighth session.

On 24 July, the Council approved the 2004-2005 calendar of conferences and meetings in the economic, social and related fields (decision 2003/272).

Reform of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/283 B (see p. 1481), the Secretary-General submitted a 5 August report [A/58/213] on the reform of DGACM (formerly the UN Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services). He summarized the measures taken by DGACM during its first year of reform and outlined the future course of action. The Secretary-General noted that, since the second half of 2002, DGACM had instituted proactive managerial policies and working methods in order to implement the reform measures contained in his 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 1449]. The measures and mechanisms introduced were aimed at achieving full-system benefits by instilling a new managerial culture focused on the Department's overall performance and synergy within and across work units, and closer interdepartmental and intergovernmental coordination; integrated global management of conference-related resources; optimized use of technology; alleviation of the documentation situation; and high-quality performance during the course of reform.

The report concluded that the first year of the reform had laid a solid foundation for fundamentally changing DGACM's existing philosophy and mentality and overhauling its modus operandi. The effort had resulted in considerable reductions in temporary assistance and overtime expenditures, enabling DGACM in New York to stay within its 2002 budget allotment and placing it in a good position to discharge its functions within its 2002-2003 budgetary appropriations.

Recommended follow-up steps included: work towards full electronic processing of documents in all official languages; the replacement of outdated traditional printing equipment and identifying the most appropriate mix of printing and distribution technology; extending the concordance of selected draft resolutions to all Assembly resolutions; upgrading and expanding e-Meets (electronic meetings management) to include information from other duty stations; increasing the integration of the electronic management systems for the meetings and documents chains to synchronize documentation requirements with meeting schedules; undertaking a major study of the integrated global management of conference-related resources in cooperation with OIOS; and a comprehensive study by DGACM of workload standards and performance measurement.

The Committee on Conferences [A/58/32], having considered the Secretary-General's report, sought DGACM's assurance that documents would be equally accessible in all official languages under the electronic documents flow system. The Department was urged to maintain high-quality services during the reform process and assist Member States in the transition to the electronic submission and retrieval of documents. Recommendations on those issues were formulated by the Committee in a proposed draft resolution that was subsequently incorporated in Assembly resolution 58/250 (see p. 1486).

Use of conference services

The Committee on Conferences [A/58/32] considered a September report of the Secretary-General [A/58/194 & Corr.1,2] providing analytical information on the improved utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities; documentation- and publication-related matters; translation- and interpretation-related matters; and information technology.

The Committee noted that the 2002 utilization factor for the four duty stations of 75 per cent was one percentage point higher than in 2001, but six percentage points lower than in 2000. The slight improvement was due solely to a decrease in time lost owing to late starts and early endings at three duty stations. There was little change in the number of cancellations. The Committee also noted that the 75 per cent utilization factor was five percentage points lower than the benchmark figure established by the General Assembly and remained an unacceptable loss of resources. The Committee Chairman again conducted consultations with the chairpersons and/or secretaries of those bodies that had underutilized for three consecutive years, urging them to consider changes in their work programme and to introduce more discipline into the way they operated. The Chairman was asked to continue such consultations with a view to making recommendations for achieving optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources.

Use of regional conference facilities

Nairobi

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/283 B (see p. 1481), the Secretary-General submitted a May report [A/57/809] providing statistical information on the utilization of conference facilities and services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON) for the period 2000-2003. The data related to the planning and coordination of meetings, interpretation assignments, translation and editorial services, text processing and printing and distribution.

In response to Assembly resolutions 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387], 56/242 [YUN 2001, p. 1378] and 57/283 B, the Secretary-General, in October [A/58/530], presented the results of a Secretariat review, which indicated a pressing need to modernize the UNON conference facilities. The proposed modernization, at an estimated cost of $3,479,000, would increase seating capacity, install modern simultaneous interpretation equipment and upgrade the sound, air-conditioning and data- distribution systems. The possibility of constructing three additional conference rooms at a cost of $4,228,800 was also considered but the Secretariat felt that such construction should be reviewed at a later stage in the light of experience gained from operating the modernized facilities during the 2006-2007 biennium.

Annexed to the report was information on existing and projected conference facilities capacity, conference services workload and a sketch of possible expansion of conference facilities at UNON.

The Committee on Conferences [A/58/32] noted that further reporting on improving and modernizing the UNON conference facilities would be done through ACABQ, in accordance with established procedures.

ACABQ report. In October [A/58/7/Add.6], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly authorize the modernization of the existing conference facilities at UNON and the funding of the estimated cost of $3,479,000, as described and outlined in the Secretary-General's report.

By resolution 58/272, section IV, of 23 December (see p. 1417), the Assembly authorized the proposed modernization and decided to appropriate resources to finance it in the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget.

Vacancies at UNON. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/283 B, the Secretary-General reported on 9 April [A/57/783] on efforts to fill vacancies in the Arabic and English Units of UNON's Interpretation Section. He said that unexpected delays in the recruitment process for those vacancies had occurred and that measures had been taken to ensure that by year's end the Section would be completely staffed with Nairobi-based staff.

Economic Commission for Africa

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/283 B (see p. 1481), the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/194 & Corr.1,2], discussed options to increase further the utilization of the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia). The report noted that, while the high occupancy rate achieved in 2002 as a result of the reorganized management of the centre was maintained in the first half of 2003, there were possibilities for further improvement. To that end, measures being planned included integrating all operating phases of the centre into one system, with standardized procedures to ensure competitive service standards; attracting large-scale events outside the traditional and consultative formats; and adopting international best practices with regard to package rates, and promoting the centre by targeting key publics and forums using advanced channels of communications and the services of a marketing officer.

The Committee on Conferences [A/58/32] expressed appreciation that in 2002 ECA had reorganized its conference centre by establishing a Conference Coordination Unit to enable it to better respond to clients' needs and an Integrated Conference Management System to further enhance the provision of services. It noted that occupancy at the centre in 2002 had increased by more than 80 per cent over the previous year, an increase that was being maintained in 2003. It further noted ECA plans to further increase utilization of the centre.

Interpretation for regional and other groupings

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/283 B (see p. 1481), the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/194 & Corr. 1,2], reported on the provision of interpretation services to the meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States for the period from 1 May 2002 to 30 April 2003. During that period, New York met 90 per cent of requests for interpretation services (compared to 97 per cent during the 2001/02 period), Geneva 98 per cent and Nairobi 100 per cent. No requests for interpretation were made in Vienna.

The Committee on Conferences [A/58/32] expressed regret that the percentage of meetings held in the four duty stations by regional and other major groupings that were provided with interpretation services in the reporting period had decreased to 92 per cent from 98 per cent over the same period in 2001/02.

Cost implications of providing conference services

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/283 B (see p. 1481), the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/397] on the cost implications of providing more predictable and adequate conference services to the meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States. The report noted that such meetings were currently serviced on an ad hoc basis from within the existing capacity of DGACM and that no resources had been allocated in the UN programme budget for those services. An analysis of the existing mandate, the capacity of the departments and offices involved in the servicing of conferences and meetings of UN organs and the level of resources currently available for that purpose had led to the conclusion that a change in the mandate for servicing such meetings, dedicated conference-servicing time and the allocation of the related financial resources would be the only means of providing more predictable and adequate conference services to those groupings. Should the Assembly decide to change that mandate and to establish, effective in the 2004-2005 biennium, more predictable and adequate conference-servicing arrangements for the meetings of those groups, an adequate resource provision would need to be made, in addition to the resources initially requested in the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget. Based on average annual demand for such services over the past five years, that provision was estimated at $7,966,000, subject to the procedure for the use and operation of the contingency fund established by Assembly resolution 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098].

The demand for services for such meetings would be kept under review and, should actual demands in 2004-2005 exceed the assumptions in the current report, the financial requirements would be reported to the Assembly in the context of the second budget performance report for that biennium.

ACABQ report. On 23 October [A/58/7/Add.5], ACABQ noted that whether or not to change the existing mandate for the provision of conference services to regional and other major groupings of Member States was a policy decision to be made by the General Assembly. However, should the Assembly decide to approve such a change, ACABQ recommended that an estimate of $4,740,600 be approved, subject to the procedures set out in Assembly resolutions 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024] and 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098] for the use and operation of the contingency fund. It asked the Secretary-General to report on the utilization of the amount appropriated in the context of the first performance report on the 2004-2005 programme budget.

The Assembly, in resolution 58/272, section XV, of 23 December (see p. 1419), took note of the reports of the Secretary-General and ACABQ.

Documentation

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/283 B (see p. 1481), the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/194 & Corr.1,2], described measures to ensure compliance with the Assembly's request in resolution 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387] that all documents be distributed simultaneously in the six UN official languages before being made available on UN web sites. The gradual opening of the Official Document System (ODS) to the public represented the single most effective corrective measure to ensure simultaneous availability of parliamentary documentation in the official languages on the UN web site.

In a 5 August report [A/58/213], the Secretary-General said that, to address the late issuance of documents caused by their late and often uncoordinated submission for processing, DGACM had begun implementing on a trial basis in 2003 a slotting system whereby documents were assigned a week-long "slot" based on the scheduled dates on which they were to be considered by intergovernmental bodies, for issuance four weeks at the latest prior to those dates. An initial assessment indicated the author departments' growing awareness of the importance of staying within their assigned slot.

Other matters discussed concerned the enforcement of restrictions and guidelines on the length of reports originating in and outside the Secretariat, including waiver requests for specific documents; the amelioration of the late issuance of summary records; and the concordance of Assembly draft resolutions.

The Committee on Conferences [A/58/32] expressed the view that the simultaneous and timely availability of official documents in all six languages required substantial resources; the consolidation of reports, as called for in the context of DGACM's reform, would contribute in that regard.

ESCWA documents

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/283 B (see p. 1481), which reaffirmed that all documents and publications of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) be issued in Arabic, the Secretary-General reported in July [A/58/194 & Corr.1,2] that ESCWA had kept the matter under review. Based on data available as at July, projections for documents and publications to be issued in Arabic in 2004-2005 were 100 per cent and 92 per cent, respectively (compared to an estimated 82 per cent and 55.5 per cent in 2002-2003 and actual 95 per cent and 62.5 per cent in 2000-2001).

Translation and interpretation matters

Recruitment in language services

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/283 B (see p. 1481), the Secretary-General reported in July [A/58/194 & Corr.1,2] on efforts to fill vacant posts in the UN translation services. Total vacancies for Spanish had dropped from 28 to 16 for all duty stations, with eight vacancy reductions at Headquarters alone, and the six vacancies in the Chinese Translation Service at Headquarters had been filled. The overall vacancy situation at all duty stations, however, needed to be improved further. The depletion of the current roster was a major reason why vacancies in the Arabic, English, French and Spanish services had not been filled. Rosters established after the completion of competitive examinations in those languages during the year would alleviate the high vacancy rate in the translation services.

The Secretary-General noted that the rate of self-revision improved in the first half of 2003 and that efforts would continue to bring the rate closer to the target of 45 per cent set by the Assembly.

The Committee on Conferences [A/58/32], while expressing satisfaction at the vacancy reduction, requested complete vacancy data in all language services. It expressed concern about the number of anticipated retirements and about the working conditions in New York not being as attractive as those in Europe. Concerned also about occasional lapses in the quality of interpretation, it stressed the usefulness of dialogue on terminology between interpreters and delegates, possibly through the format of language-specific informational meetings for delegations organized by DGACM (see below).

Informational meetings

In response to the General Assembly's request in resolution 57/283 B (sec p. 1481) that informational meetings be organized to brief Member States on the terminology used and that consultations be held with them on the improvement of translation services, DGACM organized, for each of the six UN official languages, language-specific meetings where delegations posed questions relating to terminology used by the UN language services and on the provision of language services in general.

Information and communication technology

In April, the General Assembly continued consideration of the Secretary-General's 2002 report [A/57/620] on the revised information and communication technology (ICT) strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1454].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 April [meeting 83], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/649/Add.1], adopted resolution 57/304 without vote [agenda item 112].

Information and communication technology strategy

The General Assembly,
Recalling its resolutions 56/239 and 56/253 of 24 December 2001,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on an information and communication technology strategy, and welcomes the significant step it repre- sents in developing a strategic framework to guide the further development of information and communication technology in the United Nations, as called for in its resolution 56/239;

2. Stresses the importance of information and communication technology as a strategic tool for strengthening the functioning of the United Nations, and recognizes its potential for application throughout the Organization to improve effectiveness and work practices, to facilitate multilingualism, including public information activities, and to enhance programme delivery, as mandated;

3. Notes with interest key elements of the approach set out by the Secretary-General, notably the three broad areas of sharing and dissemination of information, administration and management, and the servicing of United Nations organs and governing bodies as a framework for classifying initiatives; priority given to robust infrastructure, system security, reliable field connectivity, and internal human resources capacity-building; a governance structure; and the requirement to ensure that investments in information and communication technology generate tangible returns commensurate with their cost;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide further information and to make proposals, to be considered in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005, on the further strengthening of governance and central leadership arrangements, including a mechanism to assess the results achieved and apply the lessons learned and the suggestion made by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions that the head of the Information Technology Services Division of the Office of Central Support Services of the Secretariat be enabled to act as a chief information and communication technology officer of the United Nations, and requests the Secretary-General also to make proposals on how best to reflect this function in the organizational structure of the Organization;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the information and communication technology requirements for the various duty stations and the regional commissions, in particular those located in developing countries, are fully integrated into the strategy, and that appropriate provision is made to allow for the implementation of information and communication technology in those offices;

6. Further requests the Secretary-General to provide, in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005, the following additional information:

(a) An update on the status of projects identified in the strategy;

(b) The return on investment anticipated for planned and proposed major projects, in terms which are as quantitative as possible;

(c) Specific plans to strengthen the information and communication technology infrastructure and the functionality this would provide, measures to strengthen system security and the means to ensure system reliability and maintenance, indicating, where possible, how they compare with practices in similar organizations;

(d) The specific objectives for the planned or proposed further development of connectivity with the various duty stations, field missions, regional commissions, the International Court of Justice, the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to address, in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005, the optimum placement in the Organization of technical functions currently housed in the Information Technology Services Division that are not information and communication technology functions;

8. Notes that the provisions of the present resolution include guidelines that should assist the Advisory Committee in its consideration of the information and communication technology strategy, and decides to revert to this question and the report of the Secretary-General in the light of the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee thereon, in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to the Assembly's request in the above resolution, the Secretary-General, in September [A/58/377], provided further information on the proposals contained in his 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 1454] on the revised ICT strategy, first outlined in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1387]. He updated the status of projects identified in that strategy: of 34 related projects and initiatives, 11 had experienced implementation delays, owing largely to resource constraints and, in some cases, to modifications in initial requirements. He described actions taken with regard to: strengthening governance and central leadership arrangements and ensuring that the ICT requirements of duty stations were integrated into the strategy and provided for adequately; the development of the standard project methodology for projecting returns on investment in major projects; plans to strengthen the ICT infrastructure, including system security, reliability and maintainability; the further development of connectivity with duty stations, field missions, regional commissions, the International Court of Justice and the international tribunals; and the optimum placement in the Organization of support activities that were not ICT functions.

The Secretary-General stated that reduced funding for contractual services and general operating expenses had forced the Secretariat to cancel or cut service coverage for several infrastructure components needed to provide, among other things, Internet services and support for central services. The power outage in the United States on 14 and 15 August 2003 and its impact on UN activities had illustrated the risks in operating an ICT infrastructure with inadequate safeguards and support services. Reliance on a single Internet provider due to the lack of funding for a back-up provider had prevented the immediate reinstatement of Internet services as electrical power was restored and connectivity with the field was interrupted, as were the operations of the Integrated Management Information System, electronic mail, the UN web site and ODS.

JIU report. The Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly in May [A/58/82] a JIU report giving an overview of the computerized management information (MI) systems in the human resources, financial and administrative areas in use in the organizations in the UN system.

JIU called on legislative organs of the system's organizations to request their respective executive heads to prepare a comprehensive strategy for MI systems, giving due regard to the UN results-based approach; to designate a chief information officer (CIO) or unit to ensure proper management of the information technology (IT) infrastructure and to seek compatibility in MI systems-related policies and practices with other UN organizations; and to streamline existing work processes, procedures and practices within the UN system, and establish a plan for integrating the various management systems with a view to developing an integrated system-wide MI system. It was recommended that the Secretary-General take steps to enhance transparency and comparability of the financial implications of MI system projects through a standardized cost classification for such projects and enhance cooperation and coordination in designing and implementing MI systems throughout the UN system.

CEB action. CEB [A/58/82/Add.1], while agreeing with the actions recommended by JIU to foster greater cost-effectiveness and inter-organization sharing and learning in the exploitation of modern ICTs to improve management, pointed out that the terms of reference of each proposed CIO should be decided upon by each organization on the basis of its requirements. Standardization of cost classifications would be difficult to implement, as it would need to take account of a range of complex factors, namely, the scope of the MI system projects to be included, business processes and methods of analysis.

ACABQ report. ACABQ [A/58/389] pointed to the continuing need for a technical analysis of the various IT systems to enable decision makers to obtain an understanding of relative costs and benefits and requested clarification of CEB's response to the proposed appointment of a CIO.

General Assembly action. The Assembly, in resolution 58/272, section I, of 23 December (see p. 1417), took note of the reports of the Secretary-General and JIU and the related comments of CEB and ACABQ.

International cooperation in informatics

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/35 [YUN 2002, p. 1455], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2003/75] on international cooperation in the field of informatics, which summarized the activities of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics and of the UN Secretariat.

The Working Group continued to coordinate high-level information exchange via conferences and working meetings among Member States, the Secretariat and private and public sector organizations. In addition, it served as a bridge between Member States and the Secretariat on ICT issues. In 2003, the Working Group organized the Global E-commerce Summit: Secure E-commerce and E-government Operations in a Troubled World (New York, 14-15 May), during which expert panels covered the latest developments in software, hardware platforms, network applications, hackers, viruses, worms and terrorist disruptions that had a significant impact on e-commerce and e-government applications and initiatives; and the latest advances in e-commerce and e-government applications and initiatives. Other meetings heard presentations on distance learning, known as e-education or e-learning. A service to allow delegates to download information from the UN web site through palm-sized personal computers or personal digital assistants was proposed by Andorra. With its support, a pilot project was to take place during the year.

The report also described the activities of various Secretariat offices and departments.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/48 [draft: E/2003/L.11/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 7 (d)].

The need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on international cooperation in the field of informatics and the initiatives of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics,

Recognizing the interest of Member States in taking full advantage of information and communication technologies for the acceleration of economic and social development,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the need to harmonize and improve United Nations information systems for optimal utilization and access by all States, with due regard to all official languages,

1. Reiterates the high priority that it attaches to easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access for States Members and observers of the United Nations, as well as non-governmental organizations accredited to the United Nations, to the computerized databases and information systems and services of the United Nations, provided that the unhindered access of non-governmental organizations to such databases, systems and services shall not prejudice the access of Member States nor impose an additional financial burden for their use;

2. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to convene the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics for one more year to enable it to carry out, from within existing resources, its work of facilitating the successful implementation of the initiatives being taken by the Secretary-General with regard to the use of information technology and of continuing the implementation of measures required to achieve its objectives, and, in this regard, requests the Working Group to continue its efforts in order to act as a bridge between the evolving needs of Member States and the actions of the Secretariat;

3. Supports the efforts of the Working Group to keep intact the network of national focal points established in connection with the year 2000 problem as a vehicle for the diffusion of best practices and lessons learned, in particular for the exchange of information on locally and regionally appropriate solutions, and, in this regard, appeals once again to countries and other sources to provide the extrabudgetary resources necessary to maintain the mailing list of the national focal points;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to extend full cooperation to the Working Group and to give priority to implementing its recommendations;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council at its substantive session of 2004 on the action taken to follow up the present resolution, including the findings of the Working Group and an assessment of its work and mandate.

United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (CTBTO).

JIU called on the legislative organs of the Vienna-based organizations (VBOs) jointly to draw up proposals for the establishment of a single common services administrative unit under UNOV, to be implemented no later than in the 2006-2007 budget cycle; to decide whether or not the Catering Services and the Commissary should receive subsidies for utilities and/or buildings services, with UNIDO to make available the internal audit of the current catering contract; to request their executive heads jointly to review the costs of running parallel language training services at VIC, renew efforts to expand common services in procurement, ICT, human resources management, and financial and public information services, and monitor the costs of maintaining separate library services for the 2002-2003 and 2004-2005 bienniums; and to request the UNOV, UNIDO, IAEA and CTBTO executive heads to establish a joint management advisory committee for the Joint Medical Service and the Security and Safety Service and jointly to review the cost-sharing formulas, including the costs of administrative support for each common service.

Other recommendations called for proposals for a common printing service for all VBOs; IAEA to consult with UNOV, UNIDO and CTBTO regarding drawing up proposals for a fully unified conference service facility at VIC, to be managed by the United Nations and implemented no later than in the 2006-2007 budget cycle; the renegotiation of the 1977 Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) regarding common services to reflect current realities; and UNIDO and IAEA to report comprehensively every two years on their activities as common and joint services providers and users, in order to improve the effectiveness of Member States' oversight role regarding those services.

CEB action. On 25 August [A/58/258/Add.1], CEB reported that the Consultative Committee on Common Services, which had considered the JIU report, did not believe it desirable to establish a single common services administrative unit under UNOV management, although all common services arrangements would continue to be reviewed with a view to improving administrative efficiency and had concluded that establishing a formal management advisory committee would merely add a bureaucratic layer without advantages. The Secretary-General was

Common services

Common services at Vienna

JIU report. On 7 August [A/58/258], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report on common and joint services of UN system organizations based at the Vienna International Centre (VIC), which included the United Nations Office at Vienna (UNOV), the of the opinion that the current conference service arrangements should strike an optimal balance between centrally provided common services and IAEA's customized supplementary arrangements. A possible gain through common service arrangements in ICT was acknowledged so that the issue would be carefully studied. On the issue of library services, currently under review pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], a physical library facility at any one location might no longer be needed due to rapid changes in the library field. IAEA and UNIDO did not support the need to review cost-sharing formulas, but would take into consideration the biennial reports required of them. Other recommendations were generally acceptable.

ACABQ report. In September [A/58/389], ACABQ stated that it would revert to the JIU report in the context of its future consideration of the issue, which was of continuing concern to it.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/571], adopted resolution 58/278 without vote [agenda item 119].

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit on common and joint services of United Nations system organizations at Vienna

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on common and joint services of United Nations system organizations at Vienna, the comments of the Secretary-General and the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon and the related comments of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Welcomes the comprehensive and timely preparation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit;
2. Decides to revert at its fifty-ninth session to the consideration of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit and the comments of the Secretary-General and the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon upon the issuance of the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions.

Common services at Geneva

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/279 [YUN 2002, p. 1457], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/439] on the implementation of JIU's 2001 recommendations concerning the UN system common services in Geneva [YUN 2001, p. 1391]. He described the most salient joint initiatives carried out towards the development of an action plan for common services in Geneva, including the provision of electricity and travel, mail and banking services. He observed that flexibility was key to enhancing cooperation and that participating organizations tended to favour a pragmatic approach geared towards the completion of specific projects within the existing common services framework, rather than the establishment of additional structures in order to define and implement the action plan. The three-tier mechanism outlined in the Secretary-General's 2001 report [ibid., p. 1392], comprising the Management Ownership Committee, the Task Force on Common Services and the various ad hoc working groups, was under review to enhance its efficiency further.

UN commercial activities

Revenue-producing activities

JIU report. In January [A/57/707], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report on UN system revenue-producing activities. The activities covered were those implemented by common-system organizations as an integral part of their work programmes that also afforded opportunities to generate income, ranging from dispensable product lines (such as the sale of souvenir items) to constitutional fee-for-service activities at the World Intellectual Property Organization and ancillary services (catering, rental, garage and news-stand operations). Others, notably the United Nations Postal Administration (UNPA) and the Visitors' Services (mainly the guided tours), were established purposely to publicize the Charter goals and project the Organization's public image. Considerable attention was given to the sale of publications, currently the most important common revenue-producing activity, and to other activity lines holding promise for effectively promoting the Organization's value system and public visibility, among them audio-visual productions and related products, and electronic databases.

JIU recommended that the Secretary-General consider merging the revenue-producing activities into a single division, relocating such retail operations as bookstores and gift shops to enhance public access and visibility, extending the geographical spread of some activities, and exploring outsourcing possibilities for eligible operations. He should seek from the Assembly the authority to review existing agreements between the United Nations and host countries regarding UNPA to establish the continuing validity of the cost- and revenue-sharing formula for UNPA operations.

Other recommendations urged all UN system organizations to strengthen existing directives covering revenue-producing activities; increase revenue from publications; identify public information products with marketable value that could be developed for advocacy and income-generation; emulate best UN practices in the on-line marketing of databases, and develop and market software programmes that promoted the mandates of organizations; strengthen their comparative advantages in the international procurement of goods and services for third parties; formulate a common science and technology policy on patents; establish substantive training and public-lecture programmes for non-State actors on a fee-paying basis; and reinforce the marketing function through market research studies, price discounts, subscription fees and cooperative distribution strategies.

CEB action. In an April note [A/57/707/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted CEB's comments and his own on the JIU report. Although CEB generally found the JIU recommendations to be relevant, in some cases greater specificity and agreement on the means of implementation were essential before they could be considered. CEB observed that the focus tended to be more on the production and sale of publications and related products than on the development of new income-generating activities that were supportive of organizations' mandates. It also expressed reservations with respect to issues raised in the report concerning the sale of publications.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/572], adopted resolution 58/263 without vote [agenda item 120].

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit on the revenue-producing activities of the United Nations system

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on United Nations system revenue-producing activities and the comments of the Secretary-General and the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon,

1. Agrees with the concepts expressed in paragraph (a) of recommendation 1 of the Joint Inspection Unit concerning consolidation of the management of revenue-producing activities on the basis of sound business practices, bearing in mind the related legislative mandates, and awaits with interest the specific proposals of the Secretary-General;

2. Takes note of paragraph (b) of recommendation 1 of the Unit and the related comments of the Secretary-General;

3. Endorses recommendation 2 of the Unit;

4. Notes paragraph (a) of recommendation 3 of the Unit, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at the second part of its resumed fifty-eighth session on the possibility of operating guided tours, bookstores and gift shops at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and the cost implications thereof;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to explore the possibility of selling products of the gift centre and the book shop via the Internet, in addition to existing arrangements;

6. Endorses paragraphs (b) and (c) of recommendation 3 of the Unit, and agrees with the comments of the Secretary-General in connection with paragraph (a) of that recommendation;

7. Recognizes that in its recommendation 4 the Unit outlines some general factors that should be considered in connection with the outsourcing of revenue-generating activities in the framework of approved outsourcing policies;

8. Agrees with the comments of the Secretary-General in connection with recommendation 5, and looks forward to further proposals of the Secretary-General concerning the United Nations Postal Administration consequent to its resolution 57/292 of 20 December 2002;

9. Agrees also that the competent legislative organs, when considering strengthening the policy frameworks for revenue-generating activities in their organizations, should consider drawing on the objectives set out by the Unit in its recommendation 6, bearing in mind the specificities of each organization and the comments of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination with respect to the generation of income from intellectual property;

10. Agrees further with the comments of the Chief Executives Board for Coordination on recommendation 7 of the Unit;

11. Endorses recommendation 8, which should not affect existing practices concerning the free distribution of public information materials;

12. Also endorses recommendation 9, and agrees with the Chief Executives Board for Coordination that the application of this approach needs to be tailored to the specific objectives and circumstances of the organizations concerned;

13. Takes note of recommendations 11 to 13 of the Unit and the related comments of the Chief Executives Board for Coordination.

UN Postal Administration

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/292, section VI [YUN 2002, p. 1378], the Secretary-General submitted a November report [A/58/558/Add.1 & Corr.1] on efforts to reverse the downward trend in the business of UNPA. He stated that, within the context of the second performance report on the 2002-2003 programme budget, a comprehensive review of UNPA's operations had been undertaken, with the involvement of an outside consultant specializing in philatelic market operations. A number of recommendations stemming from the review had been or were in the process of being implemented.

The report concluded that UNPA continued to play an important role in promoting the United Nations through the issuance of stamps and other philatelic products. Initiatives taken to reverse the downward trend in its revenues had shown encouraging results, with a projected modest surplus of $189,000 in the current biennium. The report recommended that the Organization gradually build a financial reserve to meet contingent liabilities arising from the sale of stamps. The current arrangements, whereby a net surplus from revenue-producing activities under Income section 3, Services to the public, of the programme budget was used to offset the expenditure part of the regular budget, should be modified to credit the surplus to a reserve fund to be established as from the 2004-2005 biennium. If that proposal was accepted, any net revenue realized would, as an exception to financial rule 103.7, be retained at the close of the biennium in a revenue account.

ACABQ report. Commenting on the Secretary-General's report on 18 November [A/58/604], ACABQ, referring to the issue of contingent liability, noted that, according to the Secretariat, while in the past only a small percentage of UN stamps sold were actually used for postage by customers, the percentage of postage charges paid to the United States Postal Service of the gross stamp sale revenue had increased from 6 per cent in 1980 to 18 per cent in 2002. More importantly, the United Nations was currently incurring expenditures for products sold in past periods, for which the accounts had been closed. Also, accurate estimates of the contingent liability were not available. ACABQ encouraged efforts to achieve success in the negotiations that were under way between UNPA and the postal authorities of Austria, Switzerland and the United States to obtain more favourable agreements that might positively impact on the contingent liabilities of UNPA. Meanwhile, it recommended the continuation of current accounting arrangements for the sale of UN stamps.

Outsourcing practices

JIU report. In June [A/58/92], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report on its management audit review of outsourcing in the United Nations and its funds and programmes, to establish the extent to which outsourcing practices in 1999 and 2000 were consistent with the policy directives set out in General Assembly resolution 55/232 [YUN 2000, p. 1401]. JIU focused its inquiry on the contractual and managerial phases of outsourcing procedures. It observed that, since its 1997 report on the subject [YUN 1997, p. 151], outsourced operations had not evolved significantly in value and scope and had remained a relatively small portion of the financial resources of the United Nations and its funds and programmes.

JIU recommended that the managerial processes of the outsourced service or activity should be owned and controlled by the contractor, outsourcing should be geared mostly to providing services to support the contracting organization's substantive programme requirements, and, as a rule, an outsourcing arrangement implied a business relationship lasting one year or more; the term "outsourcing" should be restricted to contractual relations with commercial vendors, as distinct from "national execution" of technical cooperation, humanitarian and other projects; existing outsourcing policy guidelines should be reinforced by incorporating the policy directives in resolution 55/232 in policy documents, services to be outsourced should be made explicit in the programme budget narrative and the associated resources should be approved; the Inter-Agency Procurement Working Group (IAPWG) should standardize and generalize the application of due diligence procedures; IAPWG should seek agreement on standard contract provisions emphasizing cost-effectiveness and efficiency; arrangements involving the regular presence of supplier personnel on UN premises should include safety and security assessment in the pre-contract phase and periodically thereafter; the Secretary-General should review with national authorities all cases involving the levying of taxes on the organizations for their outsourced services; IAPWG should consider disseminating the evolving experience of the UN Procurement Division in the use of its new formats for monitoring, evaluating and certifying supplier performance under outsourced contracts; and adequate resources should be budgeted for the training of programme managers at all duty stations in contract oversight.

Note by Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in June [A/58/92/Add.1], commented that the JIU report would have been more useful had it examined the factors that actually influenced the implementation of the basic policy and guidelines in outsourcing experience during 1999-2000 and, more importantly, had derived useful lessons learned. It appeared that events over time had overtaken the usefulness of some of JIU's findings.

ACABQ report. In September [A/58/389], ACABQ concurred with the Secretary-General's comments on the JIU report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/571], adopted two resolutions, both without vote [agenda item 119]: the first was resolution 58/276; the second, resolution 58/277.

Outsourcing practices

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/256 of 7 April 2000 and 55/232 of 23 December 2000,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on outsourcing practices and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the recommendations contained in paragraphs 10 and 11 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the provisions of its resolution 55/232 and on activities outsourced during the years 2002 and 2003, including information on the location and type of outsourced activities and more detailed reasoning therefor.

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit on the management audit review of outsourcing in the United Nations and the United Nations funds and programmes

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the Joint Inspection Unit, in particular resolutions 50/233 of 7 June 1996, 54/16 of 29 October 1999, 55/230 of 23 December 2000, 56/245 of 24 December 2001 and 57/284 A and B of 20 December 2002,

Also reaffirming its resolutions 54/256 of 7 April 2000 and 55/232 of 23 December 2000 on outsourcing practices,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on the management audit review of outsourcing in the United Nations and the United Nations funds and programmes, the comments of the Secretary-General thereon and paragraphs 5 to 7 and 9 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of recommendation 1 of the Joint Inspection Unit;

4. Takes note of recommendations 4 and 5 of the Unit, as well as the related comments of the Secretary-General and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
5. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that contractors whose staff are present on the United Nations premises on a regular basis are held accountable for conducting individual background checks at their own expense;
6. Endorses recommendations 7 to 9 of the Unit;
7. Requests the Secretary-General to share the experience of the Procurement Division of the Office of Central Support Services of the Secretariat in the use of its new formats for monitoring, evaluating and certifying supplier performance under outsourced contracts with the members of the Inter-Agency Procurement Working Group and to report thereon to the General Assembly in the context of his next report on outsourcing practices.

Review of administrative processes and procedures

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362], 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274] and 56/253 [YUN 2001, p. 1297], the Secretary-General, on 4 August [A/58/211], transmitted an OIOS report on the review of duplication, complexity and bureaucracy in the UN administrative processes and procedures. The review focused on processes in travel, procurement and the administration of staff entitlements. It found that the Secretariat's administrative environment was not fully leveraging the advantages of technology, nor was it applying modern management processes adopted by other organizations.

OIOS recommended: establishment by the Department of Management of a project team to commission a detailed needs analysis for the automation of the travel process, identification of an Organization-wide application for procurement, and further automation of the processes for rental subsidy, education grant and dependency allowances; streamlining of the travel process, exempting the claims procedure for travel that did not deviate from the authorized itinerary; implementation of an information security and data privacy policy and of employee self-certification, with a mechanism for random check of supporting documentation for rental subsidy and dependency allowances; redefining the role of the executive office and the administrative officers in departments and offices; and the implementation of a central project registry for computerized systems.

The Department of Management agreed with most of the recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/871], adopted resolution 58/280 without vote [agenda item 119].

Review of duplication, complexity and bureaucracy in United Nations administrative processes and procedures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999 and 56/253 of 24 December 2001,

Having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of duplication, complexity and bureaucracy in United Nations administrative processes and procedures, Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services.

UN premises and property

Addis Ababa office facilities

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 56/270 [YUN 2002, p. 1459], the Secretary-General reported in July [A/58/154] that the preparations for the construction of additional office facilities at ECA, Addis Ababa, were progressing. The project schedule was revised due to difficulties encountered early in the year that caused a 10-month delay.

ACABQ report. In its first report to the General Assembly on the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget [A/58/7 & Corr.1], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

By decision 58/561 of 23 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report and the related ACABQ report.

Transfer of buildings to UNLB

On 14 November [A/58/596], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a proposal to accept a pledge by Italy to transfer five additional buildings with a total floor space of 1,760 square metres to the United Nations Logistics Base (UNLB) at Brindisi. Under an MOU between the Government of Italy and the United Nations, the United Nations would renovate the five buildings for some $140,000, and thereafter bear an estimated $15,000 yearly for maintenance. As acceptance of the buildings would involve an additional financial liability in respect of maintenance costs, the Assembly's approval was sought, in line with financial regulation 3.11.

ACABQ report. On 20 November [A/58/609], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve acceptance of the five additional buildings pledged by Italy.

The Assembly, by decision 58/557 of 23 December, expressed appreciation for Italy's offer, took note of the related Secretary-General's note and ACABQ report, approved the transfer of the buildings to UNLB and decided to keep under review during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session the question of the financing of the Base.

Capital master plan

Report of Board of Auditors. In response to section II of General Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/321], transmitted the report of the Board of Auditors on the capital master plan (CMP), which outlined the broad audit objectives and confirmed the scope of the audit. Noting that the activities and actual expenditures related to CMP were currently limited, the Board stated that the first audit of the financial statements would cover the biennium ending 31 December 2003. Accordingly, the Board's first report on CMP would be transmitted to the Assembly for consideration at its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

OIOS report. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362], 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274] and 57/292, the Secretary-General, in September [A/58/342], transmitted a report by OIOS on its monitoring of the CMP project during the period from 1 January to 31 July 2003 to ascertain whether adequate internal controls were in place for the project's design development phase. According to the implementation plan, a key activity to be completed in 2003 and 2004 was the search for competent architectural and engineering firms to design the various CMP components. The Procurement Division of the Office of Central Support Services posted an expression-of-interest notice on its web page, which it followed with requests for proposals to 85 firms, 69 of which expressed interest in the project; from those, 21 were shortlisted. OIOS observed that the design development process had advanced satisfactorily and, thus far, had been transparent and fair. It had developed an oversight strategy and a preliminary audit plan covering the project's design development phase in anticipation of contract negotiations with the firms selected to provide an architectural and engineering design that would meet the requirements set by the Secretariat and the expectations of Member States. Based on projected CMP activities, OIOS would request additional resources for 2004 and beyond, to enable it to provide the necessary oversight as the project progressed.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General submitted in November his first annual progress report on the implementation of CMP [A/58/599]. He stated that ongoing discussions with the host country were expected to result in a proposal for funding CMP in early 2004, with possible funding availability in 2005. As Member States were still considering the modalities for a financial package, the Secretary-General felt it premature to establish an advisory board or to approach other public and private sources for contributions. Availability of the so-called swing space, that is, the proposed new building to be known as UNDC-5, was projected for the second half of 2007. The architect for that building, Maki and Associates (Japan), was selected in December. In preparation for the detailed design development work, the CMP Office had awarded contracts to 21 vendors for a total of $12.3 million.

Of the $8 million appropriated by General Assembly resolution 55/238 [YUN 2000, p. 1299] for preparing the comprehensive design plan and cost analysis of CMP, $7,996,300 had been expended, leaving a balance of $3,700, reported as savings in the second performance report for the 2000-2001 biennium [YUN 2001, p. 1294]. Resolution 57/292 appropriated a further $25.5 million for the 2002-2003 biennium, of which $16,870,300 had been committed for CMP implementation. It had also authorized the Secretary-General to enter into commitments of up to $26 million for 2004-2005 for the remaining work related to the design, project management and management of pre-construction services.

The Secretary-General believed that tangible progress had been made in all areas of implementation of the CMP project. The final construction schedule would determine the actual completion date of implementation.

ACABQ report. In November [A/58/7/Add.15], ACABQ stated that, as CMP was a time-limited and specialized Secretariat project, to be implemented on a phased basis, additional staffing for it should be requested according to actual workload requirements in each phase. ACABQ trusted that, before such staffing requirements were proposed, full account would be taken of available expertise within the Secretariat.

The Assembly, by resolution 58/272, section XXII, of 23 December (see p. 1417), took note of the report of Secretary-General, his notes transmitting the OIOS and Board of Auditors reports, and the related ACABQ report (see above).

Security

Strengthening security of UN premises

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 56/286 [YUN 2002, p. 1461], the Secretary-General, in his second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003, submitted in November [A/58/558/Add.1 & Corr.1], summarized work undertaken and/or planned by the Secretariat to strengthen the security and safety of UN premises, the status of the related appropriations and expenditures as at 31 October, and/or projections for the rest of 2003. Construction, training and other projects at Headquarters, Geneva, Nairobi, Vienna and the offices of the UN regional commissions were described.

The report concluded that the approved programme for strengthening the security and safety of UN premises in Vienna, Nairobi, Bangkok, Santiago and Beirut had nearly been completed. At Headquarters, Geneva and Addis Ababa, programme implementation was at an early stage.

ACABQ report. On 18 November [A/58/604], ACABQ noted that the Secretary-General would report in 2004 on additional measures needed to improve the security and safety of UN premises and personnel. After its review of that report, ACABQ would present its comments and recommendations.

Chapter I

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

In 2003, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued to act as a catalyst for the development and transfer of peaceful nuclear technologies; to build and maintain a global nuclear safety regime; and to assist in efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons. The year marked the fiftieth anniversary of the "Atoms for Peace" speech delivered to the General Assembly by United States President Dwight D. Eisenhower, which offered a vision that would enable humanity to make full use of the benefits of nuclear energy and which eventually led to the establishment of IAEA.

The forty-seventh session of the IAEA General Conference (Vienna, 15-19 September) adopted resolutions and decisions on strengthening IAEA's activities in nuclear science, technology and applications; strengthening international cooperation in nuclear, radiation, transport and waste safety; improving the effectiveness and efficiency of the safeguards system; strengthening IAEA technical cooperation activities; applying safeguards in the Middle East; implementing the safeguards agreement between IAEA and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK); Security Council resolutions relating to Iraq; Israel's nuclear capabilities; and measures against nuclear and radiological terrorism.

In 2003, IAEA had 137 member States.

Activities

Nuclear safety and security

IAEA continued to provide nuclear safety services and assistance worldwide. During 2003, two publications on safety standards were published, and a strategy to enhance safety standards and their global application was submitted to the Board of Governors and the General Conference. The events of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60] gave rise to a review of IAEA programmes on nuclear and radiological terrorism, which resulted in the adoption of a plan of activities to protect against such acts. The International Nuclear Security Advisory Service was developed to identify measures for additional or improved security for nuclear-related activities. Member States received assistance in evaluating their national physical protection systems through the International Physical Protection Advisory Service missions. Moreover, IAEA delivered an extensive programme of physical protection, which included training courses, workshops and seminars, in addition to border evaluation missions for customs and other personnel.

Radiation safety

IAEA's radiation safety programme continued to focus on the development of a unified set of safety standards and their application; implementation of the Agency's radiation protection rules; and the provision of advice and services to member States. In September, the Board of Governors approved an action plan for improving programmes to protect workers from radiation, based on the findings and recommendations of IAEA's 2002 international conference on occupational radiation protection [YUN 2002, p. 1465]. The IAEA international conference on the security of radioactive sources (Vienna, March) updated the 1999 Action Plan for the Safety of Radiation Sources and the Security of Radioactive Material. IAEA convened a conference on the safety of transport of radioactive material (Vienna, 7-11 July), which addressed radiation protection, compliance and quality assurance, emergency preparedness and response, packaging and transport of radioactive material, and regulatory issues.

Nuclear power

IAEA continued to assist member States in planning and implementing programmes for the utilization of nuclear power, supported them in achieving improved safety and provided them with information and training. Four publications were completed on various aspects of improving nuclear power plant performance and management. IAEA convened an international conference on innovative technologies for nuclear fuel cycles and nuclear power (Vienna, 23-26 June).

Nuclear fuel cycle

In 2003, IAEA and the Nuclear Energy Agency of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD/NEA) published Uranium 2003: Resources, Production and Demand, the foremost reference on uranium supplies. In June, the Agency hosted an international conference on the storage of spent fuel from power reactors to identify the most important directions for national efforts and international cooperation. Potential initiatives emphasized at the conference included assistance to member States in coordinating research on the long-term behaviour of spent fuel, and the continuing exchange of information on related technology and public acceptance matters.

Radioactive waste management

IAEA's Board of Governors approved the Action Plan on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management which took into account the findings of a 2002 Agency conference on issues and trends in radioactive waste management [YUN 2002, p. 1466]. In addition, a position paper by international experts was published. During the first Review Meeting of the Contracting Parties to the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management (Vienna, 3-11 November) (see p. 553), participants agreed that it was important for all States to have a long-term strategy for managing spent fuel and radioactive waste. IAEA organized an international conference on the protection of the environment from the effects of ionizing radiation (Stockholm, Sweden, 6-10 October), which recommended the preparation of an international action plan to protect the environment from the effects of radiation exposure.

Marine environment and water resources

In 2003, IAEA's eleventh international symposium on isotope hydrology and integrated water resources management (Vienna, 19-23 May) reviewed isotope techniques and their application to water resources management. IAEA made a substantive contribution to the third World Water Forum (Kyoto, Japan, 16-23 March) and launched the first world water development report. The Agency provided assistance to member States through its analytical quality control service programme for the analysis of radionuclides in the marine environment, and its Marine Environment Laboratory participated in the first global expedition for marine isotope studies in the southern hemisphere oceans.

Food and agriculture

In 2003, the Agency made substantial progress in developing improved crop varieties through mutation induction, particularly in relation to rice. The twenty-sixth session of the Codex Alimentarius Commission (Rome, Italy, 30 June-7 July) adopted a revised "Codex General Standard for Irradiated Foods", and a revised "Codex Recommended International Code of Practice for Radiation Processing of Food". In April, IAEA and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations agreed on cooperative arrangements in food and agriculture in the event of a nuclear or radiological emergency.

Human health

IAEA continued to address needs related to the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of health problems in developing member States through the development and application of nuclear techniques. It provided radiotherapy equipment and staff training through national and regional technical cooperation projects. An international conference, organized by IAEA (Vienna, June), identified potential opportunities for developing countries to apply a broad range of isotopic and nuclear analytical techniques in health and environmental studies.

Technical cooperation

IAEA's secretariat delivered $76.1 million worth of training, expert services, equipment and other assistance to member States under its technical cooperation programme in 2003, which was $1.3 million higher than in 2002. As a follow-up to the 2002 evaluations of the technical cooperation programme [YUN 2002, p. 1467], in-depth reviews were carried out of internal processes and programming tools to ensure greater performance and better linkage with international development priorities.

Safeguard responsibilities

In 2003, IAEA continued efforts to implement a strengthened safeguard system, though a number of States had yet to bring into force their comprehensive safeguards agreements. The Agency withdrew its inspectors from Iraq on 17 March due to the impending military conflict (see p. 333). IAEA inspectors returned to Iraq in June to verify nuclear material stored at a nuclear material storage facility near the Tuwaitha complex, south of Baghdad. The inspectors found that some dispersal of natural uranium compounds had occurred due to looting (see p. 322). As the DPRK remained in non-compliance with its safeguards agreement, IAEA was unable to verify the non-division of nuclear material. IAEA carried out a range of verification activities in the context of Iran's safeguards agreement. In June, IAEA reported that Iran had failed to meet its obligations under its safeguards agreement with respect to the reporting of nuclear material, the subsequent processing and use of that material and the declaration of facilities where the material was stored and processed. It also noted that corrective actions had been taken by Iran. On 18 December, Iran signed a protocol additional to its safeguards agreement and decided to voluntarily suspend all enrichment and reprocessing activities as a confidence-building measure. On 19 December, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya announced its decision to eliminate all materials, equipment and programmes which led to the production of internationally proscribed weapons. On 27 December, the Agency began an in-depth verification of Libya's undeclared nuclear activities. Libya also announced that, as at 29 December, it would pursue a policy of full transparency and active cooperation with IAEA.

Nuclear information

During 2003, the Agency discussed and explained, in a variety of forums, the importance of verification in preventing the proliferation of nuclear weapons, and, at the same time, the peaceful application of nuclear techniques for the benefit of humanity. The Agency also launched information campaigns on radiation treatment for cancer and the search for sustainable water resources. In September, IAEA, together with OECD/NEA, the World Association of Nuclear Operators and the World Nuclear Association, supported the founding of the World Nuclear University. The International Nuclear Information System, the Agency's largest database, was incorporated as an integral part of its new nuclear knowledge initiative.

Secretariat

At the end of 2003, IAEA secretariat staff totalled 2,255, including 1,048 in the Professional and higher categories and 1,207 in the General Service category.

Budget

The 2003 regular budget amounted to $249 million. Actual budget expenditure amounted to $254.9 million. A total of $39.5 million in extra-budgetary funds was provided by member States, the United Nations, international organizations and other sources.

Chapter II

International Labour Organization (ILO)

In 2003, the International Labour Organization (ILO) continued to promote social justice and economic stability and improve labour conditions. ILO's strategic objectives were to promote and realize fundamental principles and rights at work; create greater opportunities for women and men to secure decent employment and income; enhance the coverage and effectiveness of social protection; and strengthen tripartism and social dialogue.

In 2003, ILO membership increased to 177.

Meetings

The ninety-first session of the International Labour Conference (ILC) (Geneva, 3-19 June) adopted a new Convention on Seafarers' Identity Documents, replacing ILO Convention No. 108, adopted in 1958 [YUN 1958, p. 436]. The new Convention established a more rigorous seafarers' identity regime, in order to develop effective security from terrorism, ensure that the world's 1.2 million seafarers would be given the freedom of movement necessary for their well-being and facilitate international commerce.

The Director-General submitted to the Conference a global report on equity at work, as follow-up to the 1998 ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work [YUN 1998, p. 1375]. The highlight of the Conference was a discussion on the global fight against poverty. The Director-General also submitted a report on the situation of workers in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

Sectoral and other meetings convened in Geneva during 2003 included: Joint Meeting on Public Emergency Services: Social Dialogue in a Changing Environment (27-31 January); Fourth Meeting of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization (16-18 February); Tripartite Meeting on the Future of Employment in the Tobacco Sector (24-28 February); Tripartite Meeting on the Employment Effects of Mergers and Acquisitions in Commerce (7-11 April); Tripartite Meeting on Challenges and Opportunities Facing Public Utilities (19-23 May); Meeting of Experts to Develop a Code of Practice on Violence and Stress in Services: A Threat to Productivity and Decent Work (8-15 October); Tripartite Meeting on Best Practices in Work-Flexibility Schemes and their Impact on Quality of Working Life in the Chemical Industries (27-31 October); Seventeenth International Conference of Labour Statisticians (24 November-3 December); Tenth African Regional Meeting (2-5 December); and Tripartite Meeting of Experts on Security, Health and Safety in Ports (8-17 December).

International standards

During 2003, ILO activities with regard to Conventions and Recommendations included standard-setting and the supervision and promotion of the application of standards. Supervisory bodies reviewed existing procedures and standard-setting policy, withdrawing outdated Recommendations.

In June, ILC adopted the Convention on Seafarers' Identity Documents (see above).

Employment and development

ILO continued to help constituents combat unemployment and poverty through the creation of employment opportunities and improvement of existing jobs. It provided advice and guidance on employment and labour market policies and on their labour market information and statistical systems. Activities to promote employment included support to constituents to develop entrepreneurship through the creation of cooperatives and small and micro-enterprises.

Regarding human resources development, ILO emphasized the need for the adaptation of training policy and delivery to the rapidly changing skill requirements and special needs of vulnerable groups. It also responded to the needs of countries affected by conflict.

Field activities

In 2003, expenditure on technical cooperation programmes totalled approximately $138 million compared to $117.4 million in 2002. The leading fields of activity were the standards and fundamental principles and rights at work sector with 37.7 per cent ($52.1 million), followed by the employment sector with 31.4 per cent ($43.4 million), the social dialogue sector with 14.3 per cent ($19.8 million) and the social protection sector with 10.6 per cent ($14.7 million).

In terms of regional distribution, Africa accounted for 23.4 per cent of total expenditure ($32.2 million), Asia and the Pacific for 22.4 per cent ($30.9 million), Latin America and the Caribbean 17.4 per cent ($24 million), Europe 6.4 per cent ($8.8 million) and the Arab States 2.1 per cent ($2.8 million). Interregional and global activities accounted for the greatest share at 28.4 per cent ($39.1 million).

Educational activities

The Turin Centre and the International Institute for Labour Studies, both autonomous institutions within ILO, reported to the ILO Governing Body. The Centre continued to carry out training and related activities in a wide range of technical areas as an integral part of ILO technical cooperation activities. The Institute continued to carry out research, encouraged networking related to emerging labour policy issues, and acted as a catalyst for future ILO programme development. The Institute analysed the relationships between social exclusion, labour institutions and poverty, and explored the changing global organization of production and its social implications at the local level.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, ILO employed a total of 2,418 full-time staff, of whom, 1,019 were in the Professional and higher categories and 1,399 were in the General Service category.

Budget

ILO, in 2001, had adopted a budget of $473 million for the 2002-2003 biennium. At its 2003 session, ILC adopted a budget of $529.6 million for 2004-2005.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to work towards achieving sustainable global food security by raising nutrition levels and living standards, improving agricultural productivity and advancing the condition of rural populations.

At its one hundred and twenty-fourth session (Rome, Italy, 23-28 June), the FAO Council reconfirmed the crucial importance of the Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries and its related International Plans of Action in promoting long-term sustainable development in fisheries and aquaculture. The FAO Council, in November, endorsed the recommendations of the Joint Meeting of the Programme Committee and the Finance Committee, aimed at strengthening the independent role of the Evaluations Service.

As part of the follow-up to the World Food Summits, held in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1129] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1225], FAO helped its members in meeting the goal of halving the number of hungry by 2015 and in the preparation of food security and agricultural development programmes. With the collaboration of financial institutions, FAO also helped to formulate projects that would hasten a reversal of declining resources to agriculture.

In 2003, FAO membership increased to 187 countries and the European Community.

World food situation

World cereal production for 2003 was estimated at 1,874 million tonnes (including rice in milled equivalent), 6 million tonnes lower than the previous year's level, the result of a deliberate national policy to downsize cereal inventories by increasing exports. World livestock production was estimated at 249.1 million tonnes of meat and 599.1 million tonnes of dairy products. World fish output stood at 130 million tonnes, of which about 30 per cent was from aquaculture, a sub-sector under continuous expansion.

FAO's Global Information and Early Warning System, in cooperation with the World Food Programme, continued to alert the international community to impending emergency situations and fielded crop and food supply to affected countries.

The FAO Trust Fund for Food Security and Food Safety continued through its regional programmes to initiate projects aimed at sustainable increased food availability and to finance projects to combat animal and plant diseases that threatened food security.

Activities

FAO's Emergency Operation and Rehabilitation Division continued to provide emergency assistance in the agricultural, livestock and fisheries sectors to developing countries affected by exceptional natural or man-made calamities. In 2003, FAO's emergency assistance programme received over $73 million to fund 160 projects in more than 50 countries, and $114 million for the execution of the agricultural component of the oil-for-food programme in Iraq.

Through its field programmes, FAO provided technical assistance in food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry and rural development, totalling $405.1 million. FAO's Investment Centre assisted developing and transition countries to identify and assess investment opportunities, and formulated 157 investment projects worth over $5 billion. The Special Programme for Food Security assisted developing countries, particularly low-income food-deficit countries, to improve national and household food security on an economically and environmentally sustainable basis. By the end of 2003, 89 countries were participating in the programme.

In 2003, FAO continued to participate in activities related to plant biological diversity, crop management and diversification, seed production and improvement, crop protection, agricultural engineering, the prevention of food losses, and food and agricultural industries. It also contributed to the development of animal production and health programmes. The Global Rinderpest Eradication Programme continued its work to eliminate the fatal livestock virus by 2010. The 1998 Rotterdam Convention on the Prior Informed Consent Procedure for Certain Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides in International Trade [YUN 1998, p. 997], which served to protect people and the environment from hazardous chemicals, including pesticides, was ratified in 2003 and would enter into force in 2004.

The FAO Forestry Department continued its work in forest resource management, policy and planning, and forest products. The first International Mountain Day was celebrated on 11 December 2003, as an outgrowth of the International Year of Mountains in 2002.

The FAO Fisheries Department promoted sustainable development of responsible fisheries and contributed to food security through activities in fishery resources, policy, industries and information. The Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Conservation and Management Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas, an integral part of FAO's Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries, came into force in 2003.

In 2003, the Codex Alimentarius Commission, responsible for implementing the joint FAO/World Health Organization Food Standards Programme, adopted new assessment guidelines for risks associated with foods derived from biotechnology.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, FAO staff numbered 3,897, of whom 1,610 were in the Professional or higher categories and 2,287 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The regular programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium was $651.8 million.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) continued in 2003 to promote cooperation in education, science, culture and communication among its member States.

The biennial General Conference, at its thirty-second session (Paris, 29 September–17 October), adopted the organization's 2004–2005 programme budget. The 58-member Executive Board held its one hundred and sixty-sixth (4–16 April), one hundred and sixty-seventh (15 September–15 October) and one hundred and sixty-eighth (20 October) sessions, all in Paris.

In 2003, UNESCO membership increased to 190, plus six associate members.

Activities

Education

UNESCO continued to coordinate Education for All (EFA) partners and maintained their collective momentum through two mechanisms—the Working Group and the High-level Group meetings on EFA. The fourth Working Group meeting (Paris, 22–23 July) sought better ways to ensure the integration of international initiatives into national planning processes and development frameworks. The third meeting of the High-level Group (New Delhi, India, 10–12 November) resulted in an Action Agenda, which focused on immediate supportive and strategic actions towards gender parity by 2005 and gender equality by 2015.

The Director-General convened a Round Table of Ministers of Physical Education and Sport (9–10 January), which recommended that an international convention against doping in sport be prepared, under the coordination of UNESCO and in close cooperation with the UN system, the Council of Europe, the International Olympic Committee, the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) and the International Intergovernmental Consultative Group on Anti-Doping in Sport. The convention would provide to WADA and its World Anti-Doping Code a comprehensive set of rules and regulations to bind the sporting movement.

As follow-up to the 1998 World Conference on Higher Education (WCHE) [YUN 1998, p. 1380], UNESCO organized the Meeting of Higher Education Partners (WCHE+5), in June, to review the progress achieved in implementing the Framework for Priority Action for Change and Development, to measure its impact on the development of higher education worldwide and to define the orientations for future action.

Efforts to promote a better understanding among stakeholders and the international community on the importance of secondary education reform and expansion of the EFA process, and more specifically its impact on primary education's expansion, were pursued in 2003 through regional seminars involving high-level officials from ministries of education and other experts. In order to promote and support the New Flagship Programme on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, UNESCO and the International Working Group on Disability and Development produced the publication Towards Inclusive Practices in Secondary Education, which provided a selection of best practices worldwide in that area.

Natural sciences

Through its active involvement in the International Global Observing Strategy, the Committee on Earth Observation Satellites and Earth Observation Ministerial Summit Process, as well as the Group on Earth Observation, created in July, UNESCO contributed to the development of the 10-year (2005–2015) Implementation Plan for an improved, integrated, operational and sustained Earth Observation System of Systems. The System of Systems would strengthen Earth observation monitoring activities for sustainable development planning and for improving the in situ and space-borne sensor measurements of the environment.

UNESCO's Intergovernmental Oceanic Commission (IOC) approved the Guidelines for the Transfer of Marine Technology and the new IOC Data Exchange Policy, recognizing the essential nature of the timely, free and unrestricted international exchange of oceanographic data.

In 2003, the First World Water Development Report was published by the World Water Assessment Programme whose secretariat was hosted by UNESCO. UNESCO played a lead role in the International Year of Freshwater 2003 (see p. 1033), and its International Hydrological Programme completed the first global map of groundwater. The UNESCO-IHE (Institute for Hydrological Education) Institute for Water Education in Delft, Netherlands, was established.

Social and human sciences

UNESCO prepared the International Declaration on Human Genetic Data, which was finalized by a meeting of government experts in June and by a working group set up at the thirty-second General Conference. It was adopted unanimously and by acclamation by the General Conference on 16 October.

The Sector for Social and Human Sciences continued to make efforts to respond to the contemporary challenges to democracy and democratic development. UNESCO's Executive Board, at its one hundred and sixty-seventh session, adopted the Integrated Strategy on Democracy within the Framework of the International Centre for Human Sciences, Byblos. The Strategy aimed at fostering comparative empirical research on democracy and its relationship to culture; promoting international dialogues and prospective analysis on the future of democracy; and supporting democracy in post-conflict societies.

Culture

At its thirty-second session, the General Conference adopted new standard-setting instruments: the UNESCO Declaration concerning Intentional Destruction of Cultural Heritage, the preparation of which was initiated following the 2001 destruction of the Bamian Buddhas in Afghanistan (YUN 2001, p. 1019); and the Convention for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage. The General Conference also approved the elaboration of the International Instrument on Cultural Diversity.

Communication

UNESCO continued its efforts to defend and promote freedom of expression and press freedom, notably through the observance of World Press Freedom Day (3 May) in more than 80 countries. UNESCO also successfully promoted the explicit inclusion of the principle of freedom of expression in the World Summit on the Information Society Declaration of Principles and Plan of Action (see p. 857).

Major reforms were put in place to reinforce and increase the efficiency of the International Programme for the Development of Communication, the only multilateral forum in the UN system that mobilized the international community to support media development in developing countries.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, UNESCO employed 2,156 full-time staff, of whom 1,029 were in the Professional or higher categories and 1,127 were in the General Service category.

Budget

In October 2003, the UNESCO General Conference approved a budget of $610 million for the 2004-2005 biennium.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

In 2003, the World Health Organization (WHO) continued to implement its corporate strategy by addressing the burden of ill-health among poor populations; tracking and assessing health risks and helping societies take action to reduce them; improving the performance of health systems; and encouraging national health policies.

The World Health Assembly, WHO's governing body, at its fifty-sixth session (Geneva, 19-28 May), adopted the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, the first global health treaty aimed at reducing global tobacco consumption and cutting the number of tobacco-related deaths (see p. 1251). The Assembly also adopted resolutions on tropical diseases, including the pan-African tsetse and trypanosomiasis eradication campaign; control of neurocysticercosis; WHO's contribution to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 51] and to the follow-up to the General Assembly's 2001 special session on HIV/AIDS [YUN 2001, p. 1125]; the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]; the strategy for child and adolescent health and development; innovations in public health; strengthening health systems in developing countries; revision of the International Health Regulations; and the joint Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations/WHO evaluation of the work of the Codex Alimentarius Commission. WHO observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Alma-Ata International Conference on Primary Health Care [YUN 1978, p. 1107].

The one hundred and eleventh session of the WHO Executive Board (Geneva, 20-28 January) endorsed a global health-sector strategy for HIV/AIDS; and adopted resolutions on the reduction of global measles mortality and on the prevention and control of influenza pandemics and annual epidemics. It also implemented the recommendations of the World Report on Violence and Health, released by WHO in 2002. At its one hundred and twelfth session (Geneva, 29-30 May), the Board discussed the report of the WHO Advisory Committee on Health Research; human organ and tissue transplantation; a proposal for a ".health" Internet domain; and various staffing matters.

In 2003, WHO membership remained at 192, with two associate members.

2003 activities

In 2003, WHO continued to work with national health authorities worldwide to achieve progress in health care policies, establish better health systems and provide improved health care. A $40 million trust fund was established to help the world's least developed countries set food safety standards through the Codex Alimentarius Commission. A meeting of health experts, international researchers and development and donor agencies from 40 developing countries on the theme "Global Consultation on Increasing Investment in Health Outcomes for the Poor" (Geneva, 28-30 October) resulted in a declaration pledging to establish and strengthen appropriate national and subregional mechanisms for the development of national health investment plans. The plans focused on capacity-building, leadership skills and incentives for retention and utilization of skilled human resources.

WHO investigated reports of several cases of atypical pneumonia in Hong Kong and Viet Nam, the first signs of what was later diagnosed as severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS). On 12 March, WHO alerted the world to the new disease of undetermined cause. Global cooperation and the collaboration of scientists and public health officials, coordinated by WHO, resulted in the identification of a new coronavirus as the cause of the disease. Following a four-month globally coordinated effort, WHO reported on 5 July that it had broken the chain of human-to-human transmission of SARS worldwide. As at 7 August, 8,422 cases of infection and 916 deaths were attributed to SARS. Due to the risk of a recurrence during the winter season, WHO continued SARS vigilance throughout the year.

On World AIDS Day (1 December), WHO and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS announced an ambitious strategy to provide antiretroviral therapy to 3 million people living with HIV/AIDS by the end of 2005. The "3 by 5" strategy included urgent and sustained country support, and standard procedures for delivery.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, WHO employed a staff of 3,842, including 1,490 in the Professional and higher categories and 2,139 in the General Service category. The remaining 213 were employed under other contracts.

Budget

WHO, in 2001, had adopted a budget of $855.7 million, including miscellaneous income, for the 2002-2003 biennium. Extrabudgetary resources were expected to be about $1.4 million. In 2003, the World Health Assembly appropriated $960.1 million under the regular budget for the biennium 2004-2005.

Chapter VI

World Bank (IBRD and IDA)

The World Bank consisted of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) and the International Development Association (IDA). Collectively, the following five institutions were known as the World Bank Group: IBRD, IDA, the International Finance Corporation (IFC), the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA) and the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID).

In fiscal 2003 (1 July 2002–30 June 2003), the World Bank continued to promote sustainable economic development by providing loans, guarantees and related technical assistance for projects and programmes in developing nations. Within the context of the Bank's central objective of poverty reduction, key focal points of its assistance were human development, infrastructure, finance and private sector development, agriculture and the environment, and public sector management.

In April, the Bank and three partner organizations launched the Investment Partnership for Polio, an innovative financing programme that supported the eradication of poliomyelitis worldwide by 2005. In December, the Bank sponsored the first Urban Research Symposium, which focused on urban poverty in developing and transition countries.

At the end of fiscal 2003, IBRD membership had increased to 184.

Lending operations

IBRD continued to promote sustainable development through loans, guarantees and non-lending, including analytical and advisory services. As at 30 June 2003, its cumulative lending totalled $383 billion.

IBRD's loan commitment for fiscal 2003 totalled $11.2 billion for 99 new operations in 37 countries, compared to $11.5 billion in 2002 for 96 new operations. The share of adjustment lending totalled $419 billion in fiscal 2003, down from $738 billion in 2002.

In fiscal 2003, IBRD lending commitments were highest in Latin America ($5.7 billion), followed by Europe and Central Asia ($2 billion) and East Asia and the Pacific ($1.8 billion). Law, justice and public administration was the leading sector for IBRD lending, receiving $2.6 billion, or 23 per cent of the total, followed by lending to health and other social services, representing

$2.1 billion, or 18 per cent of the total. In fiscal 2003, Argentina, Brazil, China, Colombia and Mexico had combined commitment volume equalling 49 per cent of total lending.

International Development Association

Established in 1960 as the Bank's concessional lending arm, IDA provided interest-free loans and other services to low-income countries to reduce poverty and improve the quality of life. In fiscal 2003, IDA commitments totalled $7.3 billion in grants, compared to $8.1 billion in 2002. Although below the previous year's record high, IDA lending commitments in fiscal 2003 represented the third highest on record and were above the average annual total for the previous five years. Lending to Africa constituted 51 per cent of total IDA commitments, with $3.7 billion financing 60 new operations. South Asia followed with $2.1 billion for 29 operations. Bangladesh, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ethiopia, India and Uganda represented the largest single recipients of IDA financing.

In fiscal 2003, about 17 per cent of total IDA operational financing came in the form of grants in the following categories: operations benefiting the poorest countries ($241 million); poorest and debt-vulnerable countries ($406 million); post-conflict countries ($306 million); HIV/AIDS projects and components ($214 million); and natural disaster reconstruction projects ($65 million). Health, social services, law and justice and public administration were the leading sectors for IDA support, each receiving 19 per cent of the total ($1.4 billion).

Fiscal 2003 marked the first year of IDA-13, which funded commitments for fiscal years 2003 through 2005. IDA-13 provided a total of 18 billion special drawing rights (about $24 billion) of concessional resources to IDA-eligible borrowers over the three-year period.

At the end of fiscal 2003, IDA membership increased to 164 countries.

International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes

ICSID, established in 1966, continued to encourage foreign investments by providing international facilities for coordination and arbitration of investment disputes. It also conducted research and publishing activities in the areas of arbitration law and foreign investment law. In 2003, 26 new cases were registered with the Centre.

In 2003, ICSID membership totalled 139.

Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency

MIGA, established in 1988, continued to encourage foreign direct investment in developing countries by providing guarantees to foreign investors against losses caused by non-commercial risks. MIGA also provided technical assistance and advisory services to help developing countries strengthen the capacity of investment promotion intermediaries and disseminate information on investment opportunities.

In fiscal 2003, MIGA had 162 members and issued $1.4 billion in guarantee coverage, for a cumulative total of $12.4 billion.

World Bank Institute

In 2003, the World Bank Institute continued to organize global training activities in an effort to empower people through knowledge- and capacity-building. The Institute adopted a country-focused business model, customizing its capacity-building programmes to countries' priority needs, applying best-practice pedagogy, maintaining a sustained presence at the country level, and collaborating with key figures who could implement policy decisions. To increase its reach, the Institute helped clients gain access to information resources through e-learning, web-casting facilities, web sites and the Global Development Learning Network, which reached more than 36,000 participants in fiscal 2003 via video conferencing-based distance learning.

Co-financing

In fiscal 2003, co-financing amounted to $3 billion, a decrease of $1.7 billion from 2002. Major co-financing partners included the Inter-

American Development Bank, the Global Environment Facility and the European Investment Bank. By region, the majority of co-financing went to Latin America and the Caribbean ($0.87 billion), followed by Africa ($0.85 billion) and Asia and the Pacific ($0.64 billion).

Financial activities

During fiscal 2003, IBRD raised $19 billion in medium- and long-term debt, compared to $22 billion in fiscal 2002. The decrease in funding was primarily attributed to lower borrowing requirements. IBRD followed a strategy of selective bond issuance, composed of cost-effective private placements, public issues placed with large institutional investors, and public issues targeted to retail investors. During fiscal 2003, IBRD repurchased or called $6 billion of its outstanding borrowings (net of unamortized discounts, premiums and issuance costs).

Capitalization

As at 30 June 2003, the total subscribed capital of IBRD was $190.8 billion, of which $189.5 billion had been subscribed. Of the subscribed capital, $11.4 billion had been paid in and $178.1 billion was callable.

Income and reserves

IBRD's net income rose to $5.34 billion in fiscal 2003, from $2.78 billion in fiscal 2002. As at 30 June 2003, the Bank's liquid asset portfolio was $27 billion, up from $25 billion in fiscal 2002.

Secretariat

At the end of fiscal 2003, IBRD's regular, fixed-term and long-term consultants and long-term temporary staff in Washington, D.C., and local offices numbered 8,800.

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

The International Finance Corporation (IFC), part of the World Bank Group, continued in fiscal 2003 (1 July 2002–30 June 2003) to promote sustainable growth in developing countries by financing private sector investments, helping to mobilize capital in the international financial markets and providing technical assistance and advice to Governments and businesses. To address the environmental and social consequences of development, IFC made sustainability a top priority in its investment and advisory activities.

During fiscal 2003, IFC's membership remained at 175.

Financial and advisory services

In fiscal 2003, more than 67 per cent of IFC's new investments were in the priority sectors of finance, infrastructure, information technology, health and education. The share of those investments in frontier countries, either high-risk or low-income, was 28 per cent. IFC intensified its efforts in the areas of trade facilities, micro-finance, housing finance, risk mitigation, local currency financing and securitization. Its structured finance operations included the use of bond issues to mobilize funding for clients beyond IFC's own exposure. In addition, IFC's activities responded creatively to the evolving needs of the private sector in developing countries and staked out new ways of doing business.

The Private Sector Advisory Services, jointly managed by IFC and the World Bank, continued to advise Governments on policy, regulatory issues related to the investment climate and the private provision of public services. It included the rapid response online knowledge service that offered clients databases of research, case studies, toolkits, benchmarking indicators and online discussion boards on private sector development.

The Foreign Investment Advisory Service (FIAS) continued to assist Governments to develop policies and institutions to attract more foreign investment. FIAS completed 49 advisory projects in fiscal 2003, with the largest programmes in Africa (12 projects), followed by Europe and Central Asia (11), and Asia and the Pacific (11).

Throughout fiscal 2003, the donor community provided cumulative contributions of $178 million to support the technical assistance trust funds (TATF) programme, which included a budgetary allocation from IFC's own resources of $11 million. Since inception of the programme in 1988, donors had approved more than 1,250 technical assistance projects. The TATF programme financed feasibility studies, sector studies, advisory activities on privatization and policies to strengthen the business environment in developing countries, and assessed the environmental and social impacts of investment projects.

Regional projects

In fiscal 2003, the new projects for which IFC committed about $5 billion were grouped under six regions.

In sub-Saharan Africa, despite a difficult political environment, IFC completed projects with significant development impact in particularly challenging countries and sectors and supported leading investments in conflict-affected countries. IFC's commitments in the region amounted to $167 million.

In East Asia and the Pacific, IFC strategic priorities included assistance to improve the investment climate, develop local financial markets, and expand private provision of physical and social infrastructure. IFC also aided domestic enterprises, promoted corporate and financial sector restructuring and reached out to small businesses. IFC's commitments in the region totalled $583 million.

In South Asia, IFC provided loans and technical assistance to help companies restructure their operations, access longer-term funding, forge effective partnerships, adopt innovative technologies and reach new markets. IFC commitments totalled $386 million in new investments in the region.

In Europe and Central Asia, IFC priorities emphasized the financial sector, small businesses and privatization, and focused on investments that had a broad development impact with a commitment to responsible environment and social performance. IFC also provided technical support to small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). It committed financing in the region for a total of $1.4 billion.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, political or economic issues hampered the performance of the private sector in Bolivia, Colombia, the Dominican Republic and Jamaica, while Venezuela suffered a serious economic downturn stemming from internal political issues. Given the retreat of external financing, demand for lending was strong. Demand also increased for IFC support for refinance, corporate finance and trade financing. In fiscal 2003, IFC committed financing amounting to $2.1 billion in the region.

In the Middle East and North Africa, increased turmoil marked the year. The war in Iraq, the continued unrest in the West Bank and Gaza, and concerns about spillover effects reduced the economic prospects in much of the region. IFC's focus in the region reflected corporate objectives: frontier markets, high-impact sectors, SMEs and sustainability. IFC commitments in the region amounted to $279 million.

Financial performance

In fiscal 2003, IFC's operating income was $528 million, compared with $161 million in fiscal 2002. IFC's committed portfolio at the end of fiscal 2003 was $16.8 billion, up from $15.1 billion in fiscal 2002. The portfolio consisted of loans, equity investments, risk management products, and guarantees in 1,378 companies in 117 countries.

Capital retained earnings

As at 30 June 2003, IFC's net worth reached $6.8 billion, compared with $6.3 billion at the end of fiscal 2002.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, IFC employed 2,206 staff, of whom 1,487 were in the Professional or higher categories and 719 were in the General Service category.

Chapter VIII

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

During 2003, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) continued to work with its members to foster sustainable growth and financial stability through its surveillance activities and policy advice; lending in support of stabilization and reform programmes; and technical assistance in formulating sound policies and building robust institutions. IMF supported low-income developing countries through low-interest loans, under the poverty reduction and growth facility, and through debt relief, under the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative. It also continued to counter money-laundering.

In fiscal 2003 (1 May 2002–30 April 2003), IMF membership increased to 184.

IMF facilities and policies

In fiscal 2003, IMF continued to update its lending policies and policy conditionality—the conditions it attached to its financial assistance to guarantee that it was repaid and that external viability, financial stability and sustainable economic growth were restored in the borrowing member country—to ensure that they met member country needs. IMF concluded a two-year review of the conditions attached to IMF-supported programmes and approved new guidelines for designing and implementing the conditionality to enhance country ownership and programme effectiveness.

The Independent Evaluation Office, established in 2001, studied the prolonged use of IMF resources; the Fund's role in three current capital account crises (Brazil, Indonesia, Republic of Korea); and IMF-supported programmes.

In order to enhance surveillance and crisis prevention, IMF's Executive Board proposed improvements to assessment exercises under the Fund's standards and codes initiative and the joint IMF-World Bank Financial Sector Assessment Program, and also adopted a new framework for debt sustainability assessments. After the completion in 2003 of the 12-month IMF-World Bank pilot programme for assessing anti-money-laundering/combating the financing of terrorism policies and practices, the Board decided that such work should be included in all financial sector assessment programme reports and offshore assessments.

Financial assistance

New IMF lending commitments in fiscal 2003 totalled 29.4 billion special drawing rights (SDR) compared with SDR 39.4 billion in fiscal 2002. Commitments were largely dominated by the lending arrangement for Brazil (SDR 22.8 billion), which was approved in September 2002 and was the largest in IMF history. Colombia and Argentina also received new large commitments.

IMF approved 10 new standby arrangements totalling SDR 27.1 billion and an existing commitment to Uruguay was augmented by SDR 1.5 billion. In addition, two new extended fund facility arrangements were approved: SDR 0.7 billion for Serbia and Montenegro and SDR 0.1 billion for Sri Lanka. Drawings under the poverty reduction and growth facility (PRGF) amounted to SDR 1.2 billion compared with SDR 1 billion in fiscal 2002. IMF also committed SDR 1.6 billion in HIPC grants to 27 countries, of which SDR 1 billion was disbursed.

As at April 2003, 15 standby arrangements, 3 extended arrangements and 36 PRGF arrangements were in effect with members, while outstanding IMF credit amounted to SDR 72.9 billion, compared with SDR 58.7 billion a year earlier.

Liquidity

As at 30 April, IMF's usable resources totalled SDR 98 billion, a decrease from SDR 104 billion in fiscal 2002. Net uncommitted usable resources totalled SDR 60.6 billion at the end of fiscal 2003, compared with 64.7 billion in fiscal 2002.

The Fund's liquid liability totalled SDR 68 billion, compared with SDR 55.3 billion in 2002, while the ratio of the Fund's net uncommitted usable resources to its liquid liabilities decreased to 89.1 per cent at the end of April 2003, from 117 per cent a year earlier.

SDR activity

In fiscal 2003, total transfer of SDRs increased to SDR 15.6 billion from SDR 14 billion in fiscal 2002.

Transfers of SDRs among participants and prescribed holders rose to SDR 6 billion in 2003 from SDR 5.1 billion. Transfer from participants to the general resources account (GRA) increased significantly to SDR 4.6 billion, due to increased payments for members' quotas. Drawings from IMF in SDRs continued to decrease to SDR 2.2 billion from SDR 2.4 billion in fiscal 2002, representing the largest category of transfers from the GRA, followed by remuneration payments of SDR 1.2 billion to members with creditor positions.

IMF holdings of SDRs in the GRA declined to SDR 1 billion from SDR 1.5 billion in fiscal 2002, while SDRs held by prescribed holders amounted to SDR 0.6 billion. SDR holdings by participants increased to SDR 19.9 billion from SDR 19.6 billion in fiscal 2002. SDR holdings of industrial and net creditor countries relative to their net cumulative allocations decreased from a year earlier. SDR holdings of non-industrial members amounted to 72 per cent of their net cumulative allocations compared with 56.9 per cent a year earlier.

Policy on arrears

Financial obligations to IMF decreased from SDR 2.36 billion in 2002 to SDR 2 billion as at 30 April 2003. Almost all arrears were protracted (outstanding for more than six months), about evenly divided between overdue principal and overdue charges and interest. The Sudan and Liberia accounted for more than 79 per cent of the overdue financial obligations, while Somalia and Zimbabwe accounted for most of the remainder. The application of remedial measures against Iraq and Somalia had been delayed or suspended because of civil conflicts, the absence of a functioning Government and/or international sanctions. As at 30 April 2003, Liberia, Somalia, the Sudan and Zimbabwe were ineligible to use IMF's general resources. In addition, Liberia's voting and related rights had been suspended; Zimbabwe had been removed from the PRGF list; and for both Liberia and Zimbabwe declarations of non-cooperation had been imposed.

Technical assistance and training

During fiscal 2003, the Executive Board endorsed measures to introduce an institution-wide methodology for monitoring and evaluating technical assistance activities, and for implementing a formal three-year rolling programme of evaluations. It also created a comprehensive financial accounting system to capture the full cost of technical assistance delivery, both in the field and at IMF headquarters.

The IMF Institute continued to strengthen its training curriculum, delivering 119 courses and seminars to over 3,800 participants. A number of courses were cancelled because of the security situation in Côte d'Ivoire, the war in Iraq and the outbreak of severe acute respiratory syndrome in Asia.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, IMF employed 2,693 staff members, of whom 1,954 were Professional staff and 739 assistant staff.

Budget

The Fund's administrative budget for fiscal 2003 was approved at $794.3 million ($746.4 million, net of estimated reimbursements). In April, the Board approved $837.5 million ($785.5 million, net of reimbursements) for fiscal 2004.

Chapter IX

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) continued in 2003 to promote the safety and efficiency of civil air transport by prescribing standards and recommending practices and procedures for facilitating international civil aviation operations. Its objectives were set forth in annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation, adopted in Chicago, United States, in 1944 (the Chicago Convention).

In 2003, domestic and international scheduled traffic of the world's airlines increased to some 404 billion tonne-kilometres. Overall, passenger traffic increased by just over 1 per cent to some 1.66 billion, and freight carriage increased by almost 10 per cent to about 35 million tonnes. The passenger load factor on scheduled services in 2003 remained at approximately 71 per cent. Air freight increased by almost 5 per cent to 125.2 billion tonne-kilometres, and airmail traffic increased by 1 per cent to 4.6 billion tonne-kilometres. Overall passenger/freight/mail tonne-kilometres increased by almost 2 per cent, while there was little change in international tonne-kilometres.

The Council of ICAO held three regular sessions in 2003. The thirty-fourth ICAO Assembly elected a new Council and, among other things, adopted a resolution to finance aviation security activities of member States.

ICAO observed International Civil Aviation Day (7 December) under the theme "For 60 Years ... Setting the Standards for International Civil Aviation", to mark the creation of ICAO on that day in 1944.

In 2003, ICAO membership remained at 188 countries.

Activities

Air navigation

ICAO continued to update and implement international specifications and regional plans, with particular emphasis on safety, communications, navigation and surveillance/air traffic management (CNS/ATM) systems. The specifications consisted of International Standards and Recommended Practices contained in 18 technical annexes to the 1944 Chicago Convention, and Procedures for Air Navigation Services (PANS).

In 2003, seven air navigation meetings were convened, all in Montreal. The meetings dealt with, among other things, aeronautical telecommunications, airworthiness of aircraft, the safe transport of dangerous goods by air, flight crew licensing and training, standards, and recommended practices relating to aeronautical navigation issues and operational issues.

The Council adopted amendments to 10 technical annexes to the Chicago Convention and approved amendments to three PANS documents.

Other projects that were given special attention in 2003 included accident prevention, investigation and incident data reporting; aviation environmental matters; aerodromes, including licensing/certification; the aeronautical electromagnetic spectrum, with particular regard to ICAO's position for the International Telecommunication Union's World Radiocommunication Conference (2003); aeronautical information services; aeronautical meteorology; airworthiness; aviation medicine; bird strikes to aircraft; controlled flight into terrain; flight safety and human factors; operations; personnel licensing and training; safety aspects of aviation security; safety oversight; and the TRAINAIR Programme, which established and maintained training standards.

Air transport

ICAO's air transport programmes were directed towards economic analysis, policy, forecasting and planning; collection and publication of air transport statistics; airport and route facility management; economic and organizational aspects of CNS/ATM systems coordination; economic aspects of environmental protection; the promotion of greater facilitation in international air transport; and aviation security.

The Fifth Worldwide Air Transport Conference (Montreal, 24-28 March) focused on developing a global framework for ongoing liberalization and adopted a Declaration of Global Principles for Liberalization of International Air Transport.

Significant progress was made in the implementation of the ICAO Aviation Security Plan of Action. The Aviation Security Audit Unit continued the implementation of the Universal Security Audit Programme. Twenty member States were audited by ICAO aviation security audit teams. New and emerging threats to civil aviation, such as man-portable air defence systems (MANPADS), were the subject of the Aviation Security Panel deliberations. In order to assist States in the development of countermeasures against MANPADS, additional guidance material was developed.

ICAO continued to provide secretariat services to three regional civil aviation bodies—the African Civil Aviation Commission, the European Civil Aviation Conference and the Latin American Civil Aviation Commission.

Legal matters

On 9 June, the Council of ICAO approved the draft participation agreement relating to the global aviation war risk insurance scheme. On 4 November, the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules for International Carriage by Air, signed at Montreal on 28 May 1999, entered into force, having been ratified by 30 States. By the end of the year, the Convention had 34 parties.

Technical cooperation

In 2003, the ICAO technical cooperation programme undertook 123 projects in 59 developing countries. The programme, financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), trust funds, management service agreements and the Civil Aviation Purchasing Services, had total expenditures of $105.4 million. Some 86.7 per cent of that amount was provided by Governments to fund their own projects on the basis of cost-sharing with UNDP.

A total of 507 fellowships were awarded in 2003, of which 474 were taken up.

ICAO employed 420 experts from 38 countries, of whom 77 were on assignment under UNDP and 358 on trust fund projects. Equipment purchases in 2003 totalled $82.8 million, compared to $39.16 million in 2002. ICAO had resident missions in 68 countries.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, ICAO employed 794 staff members, including 345 in the Professional and higher categories and 449 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

Appropriations for the ICAO budget in 2003 were $58,415,389.

Chapter X

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

In 2003, the Universal Postal Union (UPU) continued to promote and develop a fast and reliable universal postal service through international collaboration among its member countries.

UPU's 190 members remained the largest physical distribution network in the world, with more than 5 million postal employees in some 650,000 post offices.

Activities of the UPU organs

Universal Postal Congress

The Universal Postal Congress, UPU's supreme legislative authority, met every five years. It last met in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1408] and was scheduled to meet in 2004, in Bucharest, Romania.

Council of Administration

The Council of Administration, which ensured the continuity of the Union's work between Congresses and studied regulatory, administrative, legislative and legal issues, held its annual session in Berne, Switzerland (9-27 October). It adopted a resolution on extraterritorial offices of exchange and approved the objectives of the future World Postal Strategy that would be adopted at the 2004 Bucharest Congress.

Postal Operations Council

During 2003, the Postal Operations Council (POC) dealt with the operational, economic and commercial aspects of international postal services. At its annual session (Berne, 31 March-11 April), POC endorsed the principles of the future terminal dues system and finalized the quality link for industrialized countries, which would be presented to the 2004 Bucharest Congress for final approval.

Actions to combat money-laundering and terrorist-financing activities topped the agenda of the Postal Security Action Group in April. Conferences were also held on postal financial services and international parcels development.

International Bureau

In 2003, UPU continued to provide support, liaison, information and consultation to postal administrations of member countries. It studied developments in the postal environment, monitored the quality of postal service on a global scale, and published information and statistics on international postal services.

UPU's Postal Technology Centre, which was responsible for managing the postal application of electronic data interchange, introduced new technology applications and information solutions to improve the quality, reliability and speed of national and international postal services through, among other methods, tracking-and-tracing of mail items.

As at 31 December 2003, the Bureau's permanent staff numbered 151, of whom 58 were in the Professional or higher categories and 93 were in the General Service category.

Budget

Under UPU's self-financing system, contributions were payable in advance by member States based on the following year's budget. The Council of Administration approved a budget of 71.4 million Swiss francs for the 2003-2004 budget.

Chapter XI

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

The International Telecommunication Union (ITU) continued in 2003 to promote the worldwide development and efficient operation of telecommunication systems and to provide technical assistance.

At its annual session (Geneva, 5-16 May), the ITU Council discussed preparations for the World Summit on the Information Society, the first phase of which took place in Geneva (10-12 December) (see p. 857), while the second phase was scheduled for 2005. Other issues addressed were the 2004-2005 biennial budget, international telecommunication regulations and satellite network filings. The Council also considered mechanisms to link strategic, operational and financial planning, in addition to general provisions regarding conferences and assemblies.

During the year, the Union staged numerous events, including ITU TELECOM WORLD 2003 (Geneva, 12-18 October), which focused on restoring confidence and building growth in the industry.

ITU membership remained at 189 in 2003.

Radiocommunication Sector

ITU's Radiocommunication Sector (ITU-R) continued to develop operational procedures and technical characteristics for terrestrial and space-based wireless services and systems. ITU-R study groups prepared over 150 new and revised recommendations for many services, including spectrum management, fixed-satellite and broadcasting. ITU-R convened the 2003 World Radiocommunication Conference (Geneva, 9 June-4 July), which concluded with a blueprint for the global radiocommunication sector that reflected its current and future needs. The Radiocommunication Bureau substantially improved satellite notification and filing by reducing the waiting time for the processing of notices.

Telecommunication Standardization Sector

The Telecommunication Standardization Sector (ITU-T) continued to ensure the efficient and on-time production of high-quality standards covering all areas of telecommunications. It streamlined its work in data networks, open systems communications and telecommunication software, and organized workshops and seminars worldwide.

ITU-T adopted 257 recommendations and supplements, including standards for security architecture for systems providing end-to-end communications, which were expected to quadruple fibre optic transmission capacity and lower costs, and a standard that encouraged innovation in interactive television.

Telecommunication Development Sector

The Telecommunication Development Sector (ITU-D) continued to promote investment and foster expansion of telecommunication infrastructure in developing countries.

The Telecommunication Development Bureau (BDT), the administrative arm of ITU-D, continued to assist countries to reform and restructure their telecommunication sectors through new technologies, developing the human resources necessary to ensure sustainability in management and operations, and promoting financing and partnerships as a strategy to attract investment in the sectors. BDT's Sector Reform Unit carried out an annual survey on telecommunication regulation. The fifth annual Trends in Telecommunication Reform report focused on universal access to information and communication technologies.

The fourth annual Global Symposium for Regulators (GSR) (Geneva, 8-9 December) established a set of universal access regulatory best practice principles.

The fourth Forum on Telecommunication Regulation in Africa (Accra, Ghana, November) developed universal access recommendations addressed to Governments, telecommunication regulators and other stakeholders that were presented to GSR.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, ITU had 765 staff members, comprising 5 elected officials, 312 in the Professional and higher categories and 448 in the General Service category.

Budget

The 2002-2003 budget for ITU amounted to 341,947,736 Swiss francs (SwF). The ITU Council set the 2004-2005 budget at SwF 328,872,000.

Chapter XII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

In 2003, the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) continued to facilitate worldwide cooperation in the generation and exchange of meteorological and hydrological information and the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, water problems, agriculture and other activities. It also promoted operational hydrology and encouraged research and training in meteorology.

During the year, anniversaries of two initiatives that ultimately led to the establishment of WMO were observed: the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Brussels Maritime Conference (1853), which initiated formal global cooperation in meteorology; and the one hundred and thirtieth anniversary of the first (1873) Congress of the International Meteorological Organization.

The Fourteenth World Meteorological Congress (Geneva, 5-24 May), WMO's governing body, reviewed programme implementation and activities, and adopted the Sixth Long-term Plan (2004-2011) and three new programmes on natural disaster reduction and mitigation, space and the least developed countries. The Congress also established the Consultative Meetings on High-level Policy on Satellite Matters.

The WMO Executive Council, at its fifty-fifth session (Geneva, 26-28 May), re-established the Working Group on Long-term Planning, the Advisory Group on the International Exchange of Data, the Panel of Experts on Education and Training and the Advisory Group of Experts on Technical Cooperation.

WMO's membership increased to 181 States and six Territories in 2003.

World Weather Watch Programme

In 2003, the World Weather Watch Programme marked its fortieth anniversary. Its scientific and technical programme provided meteorological data and products to member States, offering worldwide weather information, analysis and forecasts through its Global Observing System, Global Telecommunications System, Global Data-processing System and data management and system support activities, collectively known as the basic system. It also included the Tropical Cyclone Programme, the Instruments and Methods of Observation Programme and WMO satellite and environmental emergency response activities.

The ITU World Radiocommunication Conference (Geneva, June/July) safeguarded and consolidated several frequency band allocations for meteorological operations. The Commission for Instruments and Methods of Observation (CIMO), at its first session (Los Angeles, United States, 13-15 February), finalized the structure of CIMO Open Programme Area Groups and terms of reference of each expert team. A joint meeting of the CIMO Expert Team on Surface-based Instrument Inter-comparisons and Calibration Methods and the International Organizing Committee on Surface-based Instrument Inter-comparisons (Trappes, France, 24-28 November) marked the first step in organizing a series of inter-comparisons. Substantive work was completed on the Guide to Meteorological Instruments and Methods of Observation (seventh edition); five instrument and observing methods reports were published in CD-ROM format and on the CIMO/Instruments and Methods of Observation Programme web site.

The Second International Conference on Women in Meteorology and Hydrology (Geneva, 24-27 March), organized by WMO, reviewed progress made in women's participation in those areas and developed strategies to increase their involvement.

World Climate Programme

In 2003, the World Climate Application and Service Programme, including Climate Information and Prediction Services, focused on food and agriculture, water resources, health and urban climate, and continued to support regional climate outlook forums, particularly in Africa, where it established a regional climate network for journalists.

In January, the International Research Center on El Niño was established in Guayaquil, Ecuador, to focus on the El Niño/Southern Oscillation and its impacts, and climate applications.

Publications issued in 2003 included the seventh Global Climate System Review covering the period from June 1996 to December 2001 and the Statement on the Status of the Global Climate.

Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme

During 2003, significant progress was made in the implementation of component programmes of the Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme. The new World Weather Research Programme "THORPEX: a Global Atmospheric Research Programme", which aimed to improve the accuracy of high-impact 1- to 14-day weather forecasts, progressed in its organization and development.

The World Climate Research Programme (WCRP) in 2003 successfully concluded the WCRP Arctic Climate System Study (ACSYS). The aim of the new WCRP core project, Climate and Cryosphere, a sequel to ACSYS, was to enhance systematically monitoring, understanding and modelling of complex processes through which the cryosphere interfaced with the global climate system.

Applications of meteorology

The Applications of Meteorology Programme continued to support member States in a wide range of socio-economic activities, including the protection of life and property and safeguarding the environment. The Agricultural Meteorology Programme held joint activities with the Climate Information and Prediction Services (CLIPS) Programme through the organization of the Regional Technical Meeting on CLIPS and Agrometeorological Applications for the Andean Countries (Guayaquil, 8-12 December). The aeronautical meteorology activities were devoted to putting in place guidance and regulatory material and conducting training events in preparation for the final (2005) phase of the World Area Forecast System.

At its first meeting in February, a task team on resources, established to assist in identifying and securing resources to implement the capacity-building programme of the Joint WMO/Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission Technical Commission for Oceanography and Marine Meteorology, decided on the development of a database of key funding agencies to link capacity-building projects to potential funding sources and to advise on the project evaluation and selection process.

Hydrology and water resources

The Hydrology and Water Resources Programme continued to provide assistance to national hydrological services, particularly in their water resources assessment activities, through conferences, seminars, training courses and field projects. A meeting on improved meteorological and hydrological forecasting for flood situations (Geneva, 1-2 April) highlighted the need for an action programme to focus on the ability of national meteorological services and hydrological services to cooperate in an effective manner to provide improved flood forecasting services.

Technical cooperation

In 2003, WMO technical assistance, valued at $23.58 million, was financed by the WMO Voluntary Cooperation Programme ($7.7 million), the United Nations Development Programme ($2.19 million), trust funds ($12.76 million) and the WMO regular budget ($0.93 million).

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, WMO staff totalled 258, including 116 in the Professional and higher categories and 142 in the General Service category.

Budget

A regular budget of 127,169,800 Swiss francs (SwF) for the 2004-2005 biennium was approved by the WMO Executive Council in 2003. The Fourteenth World Meteorological Congress, also in 2003, approved a maximum expenditure of SwF 253,800,000 for the fourteenth financial period (2004-2007).

Chapter XIII

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

In 2003, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) continued to improve the safety and security of international shipping and protect the marine environment from pollution by ships.

IMO's twenty-third Assembly (London, 24 November–5 December) adopted 30 resolutions, including new guidelines on places of refuge for ships in distress and on ship recycling. The Assembly also approved IMO's strategic plan (2004-2010), adopted a resolution on the voluntary IMO member State audit scheme and elected a new 40-member Council for 2004-2005. During 2003, member States worked towards the implementation of the 2002 maritime security measures [YUN 2002, p. 1489].

In 2003, IMO membership increased to 163 with three associate members.

Activities in 2003

Prevention of pollution

In December, IMO's Marine Environment Protection Committee adopted a revised, accelerated phase-out scheme for single hull oil tankers, along with other measures, including a new regulation banning the carriage of heavy grade oil in single-hull tankers. Those amendments to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 (MARPOL 73/78), were expected to enter into force in April 2005.

IMO designated Paracas National Reserve, Peru, as a particularly sensitive sea area (PSSA). MARPOL 73/78 defined certain areas as PSSAs in which, for technical reasons relating to their sea traffic, the adoption of special mandatory methods for the prevention of sea pollution was required. Other PSSAs included the Great Barrier Reef, Australia; the Sabana-Camagüey Archipelago, Cuba; Malpelo Island, Colombia; the area around the Florida Keys, United States; and the Wadden Sea, Northern Europe.

In May, a diplomatic conference held in London, adopted a Protocol to the International Convention on the Establishment of an International Fund for Compensation for Oil Pollution Damage, 1971, establishing an International Oil Pollution Compensation Supplementary Fund, designed to increase levels of compensation to victims of oil pollution from oil tanker accidents. Total compensation payable for any one incident was limited to 750 million special drawing rights, just over $1.15 billion.

Ship security and safety at sea

During 2003, model courses and guidelines on maritime security were approved and an International Ship and Port Facility Security Code Database was established. IMO's Integrated Technical Cooperation Programme assisted developing countries to contribute to the global effort to protect shipping from terrorist attacks.

The Maritime Safety Committee (MSC) and subsidiary bodies continued to work on technical safety issues. In June, MSC adopted a revised annex to the 1988 Protocol to the International Convention on Load Lines, 1966, which was expected to have a beneficial impact on the safety of bulk carriers in particular.

Secretariat

As at 31 December, IMO employed 276 staff members, of whom 123 were in the Professional and higher categories and 153 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The IMO Assembly, in 2003, approved budget appropriations of 46,194,900 pounds sterling for the 2004-2005 biennium.

Chapter XIV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

The World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) continued to help ensure that the rights of creators and owners of intellectual property were protected worldwide, thus ensuring that inventors and authors were recognized and rewarded for their ingenuity.

The governing bodies of WIPO and the Unions administered by the organization held their thirty-eighth series of meetings (Geneva, 26-27 May).

During 2003, WIPO membership remained at 179. The number of States adhering to the treaties administered by WIPO increased: as at 31 December 2003, 164 States were parties to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, 151 to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works, and 122 to the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT). A significant development was the entry into force, on 23 December, of the Geneva Act of the Hague Agreement Concerning the International Registration of Industrial Designs.

World Intellectual Property Day was observed on 26 April, under the theme "Make Intellectual Property Your Business".

Activities in 2003

Development cooperation

During 2003, WIPO continued to assist developing countries in optimizing their intellectual property systems for economic, social and cultural benefit. Some 17,000 representatives from 98 developing countries participated in 228 seminars held under WIPO Cooperation for Development auspices. Staff members undertook some 300 missions to developing countries to implement the organization's work programme, which addressed such areas as intellectual property policy options, intellectual property asset management, training, legislative advice, computerization, administrative advice and public awareness promotion. A cooperation agreement relating to geographical indications was signed by WIPO, the African Intellectual Property Organization and France. In other activities, a second WIPO/League of Arab States regional coordination meeting for heads of industrial property and copyright offices was organized in Muscat, Oman; and the ministerial-level meeting on intellectual property for Caribbean countries (Antigua, November) signed a multilateral agreement to promote the use of intellectual property and the development of intellectual property assets and cultural industries in the region. WIPO organized a forum on the theme "Intellectual Property: A Powerful Tool for Economic Growth" in cooperation with the University of Khartoum and the Sudanese Businessmen and Employers Federation. The first WIPO Worldwide Academy (WWA) session for least developed countries' Ambassadors (Geneva) discussed the role and contribution of the intellectual property system for economic growth and development.

WWA's Distance Learning Programme delivered the "General Course on Intellectual Property" in seven languages; some 8,300 students from 180 countries participated. Three specialized courses, copyright and related rights, traditional knowledge and biotechnology, were piloted for launch in 2004.

Intellectual property law

In 2003, WIPO provided legislative advice on draft intellectual property laws and consultations on the modernization of national intellectual property legislation. It also participated in the drafting of the intellectual property section of the Model Civil Code for the Commonwealth of Independent States and advised officials from six countries concerning the accession to, or implementation of, WIPO-administered treaties.

The Standing Committee on the Law of Patents held one session on the harmonization of substantive aspects of patent law, as set out in the draft Substantive Patent Law Treaty and related Regulations and Practice Guidelines.

The Standing Committee on the Law of Trademarks, Industrial Design and Geographical Indications continued work on the revision of the Trademark Law Treaty, and focused on provisions regarding the electronic filing of trademark applications and other communications.

The Standing Committee on Copyright and Related Rights made progress in identifying beneficiaries and discussing the scope of rights to be granted to broadcasting organizations.

Arbitration and Mediation Centre

In 2003, the Arbitration and Mediation Centre, the leading provider of services for domain name and other intellectual property disputes, received 1,100 new cases. It organized workshops to train intellectual property specialists in the mechanics of dispute resolution procedures, and issued a new publication describing the features of those procedures in comparison with court litigation of intellectual property disputes.

International registration activities

PCT. The number of international patent applications filed in 2003 exceeded 100,000 for the third consecutive year.

Madrid system. In the trademark system under the Madrid Agreement concerning the International Registration of Trademarks and its 1989 Protocol, the number of new international registrations totalled 21,847 in 2003, bringing the total number of international registrations to 412,000 as at 31 December 2003.

Hague system. The Hague Agreement concerning industrial designs registered 13,152 industrial designs in 2003.

Lisbon system. During the year, the International Bureau recorded six new registrations for appellations of origin under the Lisbon system.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, WIPO employed some 980 staff members representing 94 countries.

Budget

The approved programme and budget for 2004-2005 amounted to 638.8 million Swiss francs. Contributions by member States represented 6 per cent of the overall budget. WIPO remained largely a self-funding agency, financing its activities from revenues acquired through the provision of services to the private sector.

Chapter XV

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) continued in 2003 to promote the economic advancement of the rural poor by providing low-interest loans and grants.

The twenty-sixth session of the Governing Council (Rome, Italy, 19-20 February) approved a document entitled "Enabling the rural poor to overcome their poverty: report of the Consultation on the Sixth Replenishment of IFAD's Resources 2004-2006". The document set out guidelines on major policy issues, including a performance-based allocation system, field presence, results and impact measurement, a more independent evaluation function and external evaluation of IFAD.

In 2003, IFAD membership increased to 163 States, of which 23 were in List A (developed countries), 12 in List B (oil-exporting developing countries) and 128 in List C (other developing countries), of which 49 were in Sub-List C1 (Africa), 48 were in Sub-List C2 (Europe, Asia and the Pacific) and 31 in Sub-List C3 (Latin America and the Caribbean).

Resources

The Governing Council adopted the sixth replenishment of IFAD's resources at a target level of $560 million for the 2004-2006 period, which represented the largest negotiated target in the organization's history. The 2003 programme of work was approved for $450 million.

Activities

In 2003, loans approved and finalized through IFAD amounted to $403.6 million; grants worth $20 million were also approved. The total cost of the 25 new projects and programmes was estimated at $712.6 million, of which $124.9 million would be provided by other external financiers, and $184.1 million by financiers in the recipient countries—primarily Governments.

Regular Programme lending was distributed as follows: Asia and the Pacific, $93.5 million for four projects (23.2 per cent); Western and Central Africa, $84.9 million for seven projects (21 per cent); Eastern and Southern Africa, $74.5 million for five projects (18.5 per cent); Latin America and the Caribbean, $74 million for four projects (18.3 per cent); and the Near East and North Africa, $76.8 million for five projects (19 per cent).

During 2003, 30 projects were completed; 195 projects remained effective at the end of the year.

Secretariat

As at 12 November 2003, the IFAD secretariat employed 295 staff members, comprising 118 in the Professional and higher categories and 177 in the General Service category.

Income and expenditure

At the end of 2003, IFAD's income on loans was $47 million and on cash and investments was $114.5 million. Operating expenses for the year totalled $124 million.

Chapter XVI

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)

The United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) continued in 2003 to promote the sustainable industrial development of developing countries and economies in transition.

The Industrial Development Board, at its twenty-seventh session (Vienna, 26-28 August), considered UNIDO's programme and budget for the 2004-2005 biennium. Member States welcomed the establishment of an informal consultative group on voluntary contributions and discussed UNIDO's corporate strategy.

The tenth session of the UNIDO General Conference (Vienna, 1-5 December) adopted the medium-term programme framework for 2004-2007 and invited the Director-General to develop a strategic long-term (10 to 15 years) vision statement for adoption at its General Conference in 2005. It also adopted resolutions on, among other things, South-South cooperation, UNIDO's activities in countries emerging from crises and poverty reduction in developing countries, particularly in Latin America and the Caribbean, in the context of sustainable development.

UNIDO membership rose to 171 in 2003.

Global forum activities

Through its global forum activities, UNIDO continued to promote industrial development and cooperation between countries, partnerships, knowledge-sharing, technology and investment. It also assisted developing countries and economies in transition in the implementation of multilateral environmental agreements.

Global forum activities included the compilation and dissemination worldwide of the 2003 edition of UNIDO's industrial statistics databases through various media, including CD-ROM, hard copy publication and the Internet; ongoing implementation of a research programme on combating marginalization and poverty through industrial development; and a workshop on policy tools (Monterrey, Mexico, 6-7 November) for the promotion of industrial clusters in Latin America. The Nordic Partnership's scope of cooperation was extended and members signed an annex to the memorandum of understanding [YUN 2002, p. 1494] that outlined the objectives and modalities.

Technical cooperation

UNIDO continued to provide technical cooperation through its integrated programmes and country service frameworks, most of which dealt with capacity-building; many were geared towards increasing productivity and competitiveness with a particular emphasis on small and medium-sized enterprises and on environmental protection. During 2003, UNIDO's technical cooperation programmes and projects totalled some $94.6 million, compared to $81.8 million in 2002.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, UNIDO employed 645 staff members: 255 were in the Professional or higher categories, 385 were in the General Service category and 5 were national officers.

Budget

The ninth (2001) session of the UNIDO General Conference approved the organization's 2002-2003 regular budget in the amount of 133,689,800 euros. The tenth (2003) session approved the 2004-2005 regular budget in the amount of 142,000,000 euros.

Chapter XVII

World Trade Organization (WTO)

During 2003, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the legal and institutional foundation of the multilateral trading system, continued to oversee the rules of international trade, settle trade disputes and organize trade negotiations.

WTO's Fifth Ministerial Conference (Cancun, Mexico, 10-14 September), WTO's highest authority, failed to make any significant progress towards the implementation of the Doha Development Agenda, adopted by the Fourth (2001) Ministerial Conference [YUN 2001, p. 1432]. The Conference suggested that work continue to resolve outstanding issues. A General Council meeting was held in December, though no major breakthroughs were reported.

As at 31 December 2003, WTO membership (members and observers) totalled 146.

General activities

The three working groups set up by the First (1996) Ministerial Conference [YUN 1996, p. 1441] met during 2003. Pursuant to directions and guidelines provided by the Doha Development Agenda, the Working Group on the Relationship between Trade and Investment focused on the clarification of core issues related to a possible multilateral framework on investment; investors' and home governments' obligations; and on the question of whether or not it was desirable to launch negotiations on investment in WTO. The Working Group on the Interaction between Trade and Competition Policy focused on the clarification of core principles of transparency, non-discrimination, procedural fairness and provisions on hard-core cartels; modalities for voluntary cooperation; and support for progressive reinforcement of competition institutions in developing countries through capacity-building. The Working Group on Transparency in Government Procurement discussed, among other issues, the definition and scope of government procurement; publication of information on national legislation and procedures; information on procurement opportunities, tendering and qualification procedures; transparency of decisions on qualification and contract awards; domestic review procedures; information to other Governments; WTO dispute settlement procedures; and technical cooperation.

WTO continued to settle trade disputes between members covered by the Understanding on Rules and Procedures Governing the Settlement of Disputes; provided technical assistance and capacity-building to developing countries; and cooperated with the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank in promoting greater coherence in international economic policy-making.

During the year, the Trade Policy Review Body carried out reviews of Bulgaria, Burundi, Canada, Chile, El Salvador, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Maldives, Morocco, New Zealand, the Niger, Senegal, the Southern African Customs Union (Botswana, Lesotho, Namibia, South Africa, Swaziland), Thailand and Turkey.

Trade in goods

During 2003, the Council for Trade in Goods continued to monitor the implementation of multilateral trade agreements and examined and approved requests for waivers and waiver extensions from members in connection with the transposition of their schedules into the Harmonized System. It carried out a transitional review under the Protocol of accession of China, and discussed a review of the operation of the trade-related investment measures agreement and the work programme on electronic commerce as set out in the Doha Ministerial Declaration.

The Committee on Agriculture continued to review the implementation of WTO commitments resulting from the Uruguay Round agricultural reform programme, or from accession to WTO.

The Committee on Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures continued to monitor the implementation of the Agreement on the Application of Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures, which set out the rights and obligations of members to ensure food safety, protect humans from plant- or animal-spread diseases, or protect plants and animals from pests and diseases.

The Committee on Safeguards continued to review national safeguard legislation and/or regulations.

Trade in services

In 2003, the Council for Trade in Services held five formal meetings, which addressed proposals for a technical review of the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS) provisions; reviewed air transport under the Annex on Air Transport; conducted a transitional review under the Protocol of accession of China; and discussed Albania's request for a waiver from specific commitments under GATS.

Intellectual property

The TRIPS Agreement provided for minimum international standards of protection in copyright, trademarks, geographic indications, industrial designs, patents, layout designs of integrated circuits and undisclosed information. In 2003, the Council for TRIPS continued to review national implementing legislation of developing countries and economies in transition.

Regional trade agreements

As at December 2003, WTO received notifications of 18 additional regional trade agreements, bringing the total number of notified agreements in force to 193.

Trade and development

The Committee on Trade and Development continued to consider special and differential treatment of developing countries to facilitate their participation in world trade, technical cooperation and training, and market access for least developed countries. It also considered implementation issues and identified and debated the developmental aspects of negotiations.

Plurilateral agreements

The Committee on Government Procurement continued negotiations on expanding the coverage of the Agreement on Government Procurement, its simplification and improvement, including adaptation to advances in information technology and the elimination of discriminatory measures and practices that distorted open procurement.

The Agreement on Trade in Civil Aircraft eliminated customs duties and other charges on imports of civil aircraft products and repairs, bound them at zero level and required the adoption or adaptation of end-use customs administration. Although part of the 1994 WTO Agreement, it remained outside the organization's framework. The Committee on Trade in Civil Aircraft continued to eliminate customs duties and other charges on imports of civil aircraft products and repairs.

International Trade Centre

The International Trade Centre, operated jointly by WTO and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (see p. 974), continued to play a crucial role in trade-related technical cooperation and trade-related capacity-building. In 2003, it focused its technical assistance for developing and transition economies on helping businesses understand WTO rules, strengthening enterprises, competitiveness and developing new trade promotion strategies.

Budget

The WTO budget for 2003 totalled 155 million Swiss francs.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2003, WTO staff numbered 601.

Appendix II

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971 and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED

to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

3. #### Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.

2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.

3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.

2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

- a. the interpretation of a treaty;
- b. any question of international law;
- c. the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
- d. the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.

4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.

5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.

6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

Chapter III

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.
3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.

3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.

2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.

2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.

2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.

3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.

4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

Chapter V AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

USING THE SUBJECT INDEX

To assist the researcher in reading and searching the Yearbook index, three typefaces have been employed.

ALL BOLD CAPITAL LETTERS are used for major subject entries, including chapter topics (e.g., DEVELOPMENT, DISARMAMENT), as well as country names (e.g., TAJIKISTAN), region names (e.g., AFRICA) and principal UN organs (e.g., GENERAL ASSEMBLY).

CAPITAL LETTERS are used to highlight major sub-topics (e.g., POVERTY), territories (e.g., MONTSERAT), subregions (e.g., CENTRAL AMERICA) and official names of specialized agencies (e.g., UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION) and regional commissions (e.g., ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR EUROPE).

Regular body text is used for single entries and cross-reference entries, e.g., armed conflict, mercenaries, terrorism.

1—An asterisk (*) next to a page number indicates the presence of a text (reproduced in full) of General Assembly, Security Council or Economic and Social Council resolutions and decisions, or Security Council presidential statements.

2—Entries, which are heavily cross-referenced, appear under key substantive words, as well as under the first word of official titles.

3—United Nations bodies are listed under major subject entries and alphabetically.
