Security Council consideration (20 November). On 20 November [meeting 4868], the Secretary-General addressed the Council, stating that it was meeting to mark the completion of one of the largest, most complex and unusual tasks that was ever entrusted to the UN Secretariat—the only humanitarian programme ever to have been funded entirely from resources belonging to the nation it was designed to help. In its nearly seven years of operation, the oil-for-food programme had been required to meet an almost impossible series of challenges, using some $46 billion of Iraqi export earnings on behalf of the Iraqi people. During those years, the programme delivered food rations sufficient to feed all 27 million residents of Iraq. As a result, the malnutrition rate among Iraqi children was reduced by 50 per cent, national vaccination campaigns reduced child mortality from preventable diseases and there had been no reported cases of polio in Iraq for almost three years. Electricity blackouts in Baghdad were reduced under peak summer loads and clean water became more available for personal use. The programme also enabled the overcrowded schools throughout the country to operate in two shifts instead of three. At midnight on 21 November, the United Nations would hand over all the programme's responsibilities, together with the remaining funds and assets—assets ranging from schools to electrical power stations and some $8.2 billion worth of food, medicines and other essential supplies—to the Authority. The actual delivery of those items would continue well into 2004. Any unspent or undisbursed amounts would be transferred to the Development Fund for Iraq after the programme's closure. The Authority was making arrangements to transfer most of the 2,500 Iraqis who had been working for the United Nations in the three northern governorates to posts in the local government. The Secretary-General hoped that their colleagues serving in the centre and south of Iraq, over 800 of them in all, would receive similar consideration. He also said that the United Nations took pride in the fact that it had achieved an orderly handover of such a large and expensive programme on time and in spite of the insecurity in Iraq and the disruptive bomb attack on its headquarters in Baghdad. As the United Nations was closing the oil-for-food programme, it remained determined to continue helping Iraq's long-suffering people.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (November)

On 20 November [meeting 4868], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2003/24 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council has heard the statement by the Secretary-General and has considered the briefing by the Executive Director of the Office of the Iraq Programme on the termination on 21 November 2003 of the United Nations humanitarian programme for Iraq ("the Programme") and the transfer of the responsibility for the administration of any remaining activity under the Programme to the Coalition Provisional Authority in Iraq in accordance with Council resolution 1483(2003) of 22 May 2003.

The Council underlines the exceptionally important role of the Programme in providing humanitarian assistance to the people of Iraq under the regime of sanctions imposed by the Council on the previous Government of Iraq. Under this unique programme the value of humanitarian goods delivered to Iraq during the period from December 1996 to March 2003 amounted to about 30 billion United States dollars. Those deliveries made it possible to provide to the Iraqi people essential foods and medicines, as well as to supply various equipment and materials for the key sectors of the Iraqi economy. Purchases under the Programme will in the next few months play a key role in the economic reconstruction of Iraq by providing vital goods in the amount of more than 6 billion United States dollars.

The Council expresses its deep gratitude to the Secretary-General, to the Office of the Iraq Programme, to United Nations personnel who worked on the ground in Iraq and to all other United Nations agencies and structures involved, and applauds their commitment and professionalism. It also thanks the chairmen and members of the Security Council Committee established by resolution 661(1990) for their dedicated efforts to implement the Programme since its inception, and in implementing resolution 1483(2003).

The Council emphasizes the need for continued international efforts aimed at the reconstruction of Iraq and, in this context, takes note with satisfaction of the statements made by the representatives of the United States of America and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland on the measures which the Coalition Provisional Authority intends to take in order to continue the payment mechanisms and the deliveries under the Programme.

The Council recognizes the important role of the United Nations in coordinating the termination of the Programme, including the transfer at the earliest possible time of all surplus funds in the escrow accounts to the Development Fund for Iraq.

The Council recalls the vital role foreseen for the United Nations in resolutions 1483(2003), 1500(2003) of 14 August 2003 and 1511(2003) of 16 October 2003, as circumstances permit, inter alia, in the areas of humanitarian assistance, facilitation of economic rehabilitation and reconstruction.

UN Compensation Commission and Fund

The United Nations Compensation Commission, established in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 195] for the resolution and payment of claims against Iraq for losses and damage resulting from its 1990 invasion and occupation of Kuwait [YUN 1990, p. 189], continued in 2003 to expedite the prompt settlement of claims through the United Nations Compensation Fund, which was established at the same time as the Commission.

Governing Council. The Commission's Governing Council held four sessions in Geneva during the year—the forty-seventh (11-13 March) [S/2003/195], the forty-eighth (24-26 June) [S/2003/755], the forty-ninth (16-18 September) [S/2003/914] and the fiftieth (16-18 December) [S/2003/1205]—at which it considered the reports and recommendations of the Panels of Commissioners appointed to review specific instalments of various categories of claims. The Governing Council also acted on the Executive Secretary's report submitted at each session, which, in addition to providing a summary of the previous period's activities, covered the processing, withdrawal and payment of claims.

Other matters considered by the Council during the year included Iraq's contribution to the Compensation Fund and arrangements for ensuring that payments were made into the Fund; the distribution of payments and transparency; and requests for late filings of claims.

Communication. In a 15 January letter to the Secretary-General [S/2003/57], Iraq drew attention to the fact that the Compensation Commission's practices deprived Iraq of the exercise of its right of self-defence, due to the fact that it was not given adequate time to answer claims submitted to it.

Other issues

Iraqi complaints

Iraq submitted several letters to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President on the military build-up and exercises carried out by United States and British armed forces from January to March 2003 near the DMZ between Iraq and Kuwait that was controlled by UNIKOM [S/2003/14, S/2003/107, S/2003/296].

Reaffirming its absolute rejection of the northern and southern air exclusion (no-fly) zones imposed by the United Kingdom and the United States, Iraq reported wanton military attacks by British and United States aircraft against Iraqi civilians and property, and condemned countries that provided the logistic support for those attacks, namely Kuwait and Turkey [S/2003/108].

In a series of letters to the Secretary-General, Iraq detailed violations of its international boundaries committed by British and United States warplanes flying across the DMZ [S/2003/58, S/2003/222]; violations of its territorial waters and provocation by United States naval forces [S/2003/89, S/2003/109, S/2003/123]; and violations of its airspace and international borders [S/2003/230, S/2003/310]. It also reported that during the period from 1 to 31 January 2003, it had found and disposed of 459 items of unexploded ordnance left behind during the 1991 conflict [S/2003/297].

Timor-Leste

During 2003, the United Nations worked to strengthen the newly established democratic institutions in Timor-Leste, which became an independent sovereign State in 2002. The United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor (UNMISET) assisted in developing the Timorese civil administration and police force, which gradually assumed greater responsibility for the management of day-to-day affairs in their respective areas. It also aided Timorese authorities with the investigation and prosecution of serious crimes. Violent attacks by armed elements in January and February 2003 led the Security Council to slow down UNMISET's downsizing, in order to provide greater stability and allow for further development of Timorese police and military institutions. The Council extended UNMISET's mandate for a further year, until 20 May 2004. Despite the remarkable progress achieved towards nationhood, Timor-Leste would continue to need international assistance in certain key areas after the end of UNMISET's mandate.

Relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia continued to develop and there was significant progress towards determining their joint border and making sustainable arrangements for its management, although the target date of 30 November for finalizing a provisional line for the border was not met. The two countries were also working towards, among other things, resolving residual refugee issues. The ratification of the Timor Sea Treaty between Timor-Leste and Australia, which would enable the exploitation of an offshore oil and gas field, was an important development for Timor-Leste's financial recovery.

The Secretary-General's Special Representative for Timor-Leste and UNMISET's Head, Kamallesh Sharma, briefed the Security Council on UNMISET's activities throughout the year.

UN Mission of Support in East Timor

UNMISET, established under Security Council resolution 1410(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 321], continued to carry out its mandate in Timor-Leste, which included providing assistance to the administrative, law enforcement and public security structures critical to the viability and political stability of Timor-Leste, in addition to contributing to the maintenance of its external and internal security. In the light of the rioting and violent attacks that took place in late 2002 and early 2003, the Security Council decided to slow the downsizing schedule for the military and police components of UNMISET. The Mission's mandate was extended for a further year, until 20 May 2004.

On 14 July [S/2003/716], the Secretary-General informed the Council of his intention to appoint Lieutenant General Khairuddin Mat Yusof (Malaysia) as Force Commander of UNMISET effective 31 August, replacing Major General Huck Gim Tan (Singapore). On 17 July [S/2003/717], the Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention.

Report of Secretary-General (March). Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1410(2002), the Secretary-General submitted a 3 March special report [S/2003/243] on significant changes that had taken place in Timor-Leste since his 6 November 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 325]. The events suggested the need for a review of the UNMISET downsizing schedule, as envisioned in resolution 1410(2002). Accordingly, he made specific proposals for adjustments to the downsizing plan to allow UNMISET to accomplish its mandated tasks by June 2004 within that changed environment.

The Secretary-General said that since November 2002, there had been a sharp increase in the frequency and magnitude of security-related incidents, which demonstrated the scope of problems that could still emerge and the inadequacy of the means to address them, and they also suggested the need to adjust UNMISSET's downsizing plan. The potential for grave civil disturbance became clear when riots erupted in the capital, Dili, on 4 December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 327]. Further armed attacks took place in January and February 2003. In addition, credible evidence suggested that former militias and armed groups were establishing bases within the country in order to undermine stability. Those who sought to generate unrest could draw upon a largely youthful and unskilled population, which suffered a very high rate of unemployment and had extensive exposure to violence in the past. That situation was exacerbated by elements within the former refugee population located in Indonesia close to the Tactical Coordination Line (TCL)—the informal boundary agreed to by the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor (UNTAET) and the Indonesian authorities pending formal demarcation of the border. Former militia elements retained a degree of influence among the approximately 28,000 former refugees remaining in Indonesia and were actively involved in cross-border trade. That threat was likely to remain extant throughout the remainder of the UNMISSET mandate and beyond, although supportive actions by the Indonesian military could contribute to containing and mitigating it. The Indonesian Government had indicated that it intended to resettle former East Timorese refugees; voluntary migration to other provinces could significantly improve the security environment. While Indonesia had begun the process, it had been unable to implement it fully due to financial and other constraints.

The 30 June 2003 target date for a finalized agreement on a line that constituted the border remained in effect, but the accomplishment of that objective was not assured. A meeting of a technical group on border demarcation and regulation was scheduled to take place in March. Border delineation, and subsequent demarcation, if decided, were of great importance in terms of removing a potential irritant to future relations between Indonesia and Timor-Leste. At the same time, that issue was not a panacea for all security problems and even a well-defined border would remain porous. Indonesian military authorities had indicated that their policy was not to demilitarize their side of the border, where they would maintain a troop and not a border police presence. The Timor-Leste Government was nonetheless proceeding with plans for police and civilian authorities to assume responsibility for border management.

The deterioration in the security situation suggested that serious deficiencies in Timorese and international capabilities existed and that those deficiencies would be exacerbated if UNMISSET continued to follow its downsizing plan. At least a year of further development was required before the Timorese police were in a position to address the more demanding kinds of problems that had emerged since November 2002. Their premature engagement in such activities ran the risk of weakening them and of lowering their public standing. UNMISSET's downsizing plans, if followed without change, would further weaken the Mission's real and perceived ability to respond to security challenges. Adjustments were necessary if UNMISSET was to maintain security effectively in the short term and prepare the Timorese agencies to assume their full responsibility in the future. At the request of the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations, former Military Adviser Maurice Baril (Canada) led a review and assessment mission to UNMISSET from 15 to 23 January, as the Department's first Inspector-General. The mission's aim was to review UNMISSET's capability to implement its mandate and to meet future challenges. The recommendations in the Secretary-General's special report were supported by and drew upon General Baril's findings regarding key areas where sustained or increased capacity was crucial for UNMISSET to achieve its mandate.

UNMISSET's original downsizing plan was predicated on the assumption that the threat from former militia elements would gradually diminish, that new threats of a similar scale would not emerge and that major civil disturbances would not occur, so that challenges on the ground would be on a scale for which Timor-Leste security agencies could assume an increasing level of responsibility. However, in the evolving security situation, those earlier assumptions were no longer valid. The military component lacked the necessary capacity and mobility to address the threats and had inadequate ability to obtain and process information. If downsizing continued, significantly reduced troop density would not deter the security threat posed by armed bands in rural areas, while the diminished military presence in the westernmost districts would ease the task of criminals or other elements intent on moving illegally across the TCL. At the same time, UNMISSET would face still greater obstacles in assisting in the event of large-scale civil disturbance. While planning for Timor-Leste police was being adjusted, the measures proposed to enhance their capacity could produce results only by January 2004 at the earliest.

Adjustments to UNMISSET's military strategy and configuration in a number of areas could promote stability and provide the time required for the Timorese security agencies to become operationally ready to assume their tasks. Those adjustments included: establishment within an extended zone adjacent to the TCL of a sufficient military presence to deter and respond to incursions and incidents until such time as the threat was effectively contained and the necessary Timorese capability to meet the threat was operational; maintenance of a security presence in other parts of Timor-Leste to assist the police in ensuring stability; improved ability to use information to assist in the tactical employment of the infantry forces available, in addition to greater coordination and exchange of information with UNMISSET police and with Timor-Leste security agencies to improve effectiveness; improved air and land mobility to enable more effective use of forces available and timely response in the event of incidents requiring employment of peacekeeping forces; and promotion of relations with the public and improved public information capability to enhance understanding of the military component's role and to counter potential misinformation campaigns. Those adjustments would be adopted within the context of a simplified, two-phase plan for the military component's deployment until the conclusion of UNMISSET's mandate.

During the first phase (March to December 2003), UNMISSET would retain primary responsibility for ensuring security, addressing problems that surpassed the capability of Timor-Leste security agencies. A larger military presence would be maintained in an expanded area adjacent to the TCL. A sector headquarters would be maintained in the area to unify the command of forces deployed to limit incursions. Satisfactory progress was being made towards the planned handover of border crossing points in mid-2003 and a specialized Timor-Leste police border patrol unit would be deployed to its positions along the border by the end of June 2003. Those tasks would entail the maintenance of the military deployment at the March 2003 level of 3,870 troops, although the component would be reconfigured to emphasize the proposed adjustments. To ensure that a force of that limited size was capable of timely response, it would be essential for troop-contributing countries to provide the Force Commander with the flexibility required to employ the portion of his force best placed and equipped to undertake the tasks at hand. That phase would be concluded once the relevant Timor-Leste agencies had attained adequate operational capability to respond to threats to internal security, particularly within the border area, and to respond to armed threats elsewhere. The Timor-Leste Government was reviewing plans to enhance the capability of the Timor-Leste police in both areas, while their ability to respond to civil disturbance was also being developed.

In phase two (December 2003 to May 2004), UNMISSET's military component would be reconfigured to act as a deterrent and to respond preventively to threats to the security environment. Other efforts would include operations to retain the trust and confidence of the people of Timor-Leste, in addition to close cooperation and information-sharing with Timor-Leste agencies. The military component would include 1,750 troops organized in two response battalions, one of which would be located in the west and the other centred in Dili. During that phase, final preparations would be made for the conclusion of the handover of defence responsibility to the Timor-Leste defence force (Falintil-FDTL) on 20 May 2004. On completion of the mandate, the peacekeeping force would cease operations and concentrate on the orderly extraction of remaining forces in the most expeditious manner possible.

The Timor-Leste Government was reviewing plans to strengthen the capability of its police force, which would offer a means for the Government to respond to major threats to public order without resorting to the use of the military. In that context, the composition and strength of UNMISSET's police component and the schedule for its downsizing would be adjusted to enhance its operational capability to address civil disturbances. UNMISSET's adjustments would include: inclusion of an international formed police unit for one year, in order to deal with emergencies that exceeded the capacity of the Rapid Intervention Unit; additional training capacity to provide further training to the Timor-Leste police in crowd-control skills and other critical areas, such as forensics, tactical operations and border security; and further emphasis on human rights and the rule of law in UNMISSET's development and certification process. UNMISSET's downsizing plan should also allow for the retention of a greater monitoring and advisory presence within districts that had been handed over to Timorese authorities. In downsizing, UNMISSET would ensure that the handover would take place at a pace that did not jeopardize stability while showing sensitivity to the Government's desire to assume responsibility for security issues as soon as it was feasible. Planning for the gradual transfer of policing authority to Timor-Leste would be adjusted to include safeguards and arrangements for command and control that would allow the military component to play an active role during the final phase of UNMISSET's mandate.

The Secretary-General observed that the proposed adjustments to UNMISSET's downsizing did not represent a change in the broad concept of operations of UNMISSET, in its planned date of withdrawal or in its ultimate goal, which was the creation of a viable Timor-Leste State with an adequate and appropriate security capability. The impact of the adjustments would depend on the full commitment of the Timor-Leste leadership, collaboration with Indonesia and bilateral support. It was likely that further assistance would be required once UNMISSET's mandate was terminated. A number of options could be explored by Member States, including the deployment of qualified international police to key advisory positions within the Timor-Leste police through multilateral, regional or bilateral working arrangements with the Government. The Secretary-General said that the initial successful progress that was achieved in Timor-Leste may have led to the development of unrealistic expectations. It was preferable that the international community be reminded, before downsizing progressed beyond a point of no return, of the fragility of what had been achieved so far, despite the fact that Timor-Leste's development towards statehood remained extraordinarily rapid.

Security Council consideration (March). On 10 March [meeting 4715], the Security Council discussed the situation in Timor-Leste, with particular reference to the Secretary-General's March report. The UN Under-Secretary-General (USG) for Peacekeeping Operations, Jean-Marie Guéhenno, introduced the report.

The USG said that the special report was an effort to sound an alarm at a critical time, to indicate to the Council a number of worrisome developments and to recommend, in good time, realistic and prudent adjustments of UNMISSET's troop-reduction plans so as to reflect a situation on the ground that had changed and to protect the considerable investments that the international community had made in Timor-Leste. The Secretary-General's recommendations were presented on the premise that it was easier and less expensive to pre-empt a problem than to try to fix one after it had occurred. The cost that was implied would be modest compared to the $1 billion to $2 billion that the international community had spent in Timor-Leste since 2000. The USG also drew attention to a positive development, which was the conclusion of the agreements and legislative processes in Timor-Leste and in Australia that should pave the way for exploitation of mineral resources in the Timor Sea and the sharing of revenues, 90 per cent being awarded to Timor-Leste. The development of those resources was of cardinal importance for Timor-Leste's economic future.

Timor-Leste said it was not surprising that various pro-militia groups from across the border continued to agitate and provoke strife and violence, since the independence struggle was a difficult one that had lasted for decades. The attacks in the border area in January and February reflected a coordinated plan to destroy a nation created with the help of the Security Council and the international community. Timor-Leste wholeheartedly endorsed and supported the reassessment, recommendations and proposals contained in the Secretary-General's March report, as it believed that the adjustments in downsizing would maximize UNMISSET's effectiveness. UNMISSET's contribution towards the objective of providing a secure and stable environment was significant and had to continue at the required levels while Timorese security forces developed to their full capacities.

Communication (April). On 3 April [S/2003/379], the United Kingdom transmitted to the Council President a 28 March letter from the USG for Peacekeeping Operations addressed to individual members of the Council in connection with UNMISSET. The USG said that, at the 10 March Council meeting (see above), Member States had endorsed the broad objective of the recommendations in the Secretary-General's report, namely, to reinforce UNMISSET's capability to develop Timor-Leste's police force, while taking the necessary measures to ensure the short-term security and stability that were required for that training to succeed. At the same time, several States sought to review further possible adjustments to UNMISSET's military component. Through informal discussions, interested Member States subsequently explored with the UN Secretariat the kind of option that would address some concerns over the security situation in Timor-Leste and that could meet with the support of the Council. Those discussions suggested that such an option would include the retention of two battalions within regions adjoining the TCL, and a more gradual downsizing to 1,750 military peacekeepers in December 2003, and not the full retention of 3,870 military peacekeepers up to that period as was reflected in the Secretary-General's report.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (April)

On 4 April [meeting 4735], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1473(2003). The draft [S/2003/401] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the situation in Timor-Leste, in particular resolution 1410(2002) of 17 May 2002,

Reiterating its full support for the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor,

Welcoming the progress that Timor-Leste has achieved with the assistance of the Mission since independence,

Noting the continued existence of challenges to the security and stability of Timor-Leste,

Stressing that improving the overall capabilities of the Timor-Leste police force is a key priority,

Having considered the special report of the Secretary-General on the Mission of 3 March 2003,

Having considered also the letter dated 28 March 2003 from the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations addressed to the members of the Security Council,

1. Decides that the composition and strength of the police component of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor and the schedule for its downsizing shall be adjusted in line with paragraphs 33 and 35 of the special report of the Secretary-General and shall include the following specific measures:

(a) The inclusion of an internationally formed unit for one year;

(b) The provision of additional training capacity in key areas specified in the special report of the Secretary-General;

(c) Greater emphasis on human rights and rule of law elements;

(d) The retention of a greater monitoring and advisory presence in districts where policing authority has been handed over to the Timor-Leste police force;

(e) Follow-up to the recommendations outlined in the report of the joint assessment mission on policing of November 2002;

(f) Adjustment of planning for the gradual transfer of policing authority to the Timor-Leste police force;

2. Also decides that the schedule for the downsizing of the military component of the Mission for the period until December 2003 shall be adjusted in line with the letter dated 28 March 2003 from the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations addressed to the members of the Security Council; and, accordingly, that two battalions shall be retained within regions adjoining the Tactical Coordination Line during this period, together with associated force elements, including mobility; and that the number of military peacekeepers shall be reduced to 1,750 more gradually than was foreseen in resolution 1410(2002);

3. Requests the Secretary-General to provide by 20 May 2003 for the approval of the Council a detailed military strategy for the revised schedule for the downsizing of the military component of the Mission;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to keep the Council closely and regularly informed of developments on the ground and the implementation of the revised military and police strategies;

5. Requests the Government of Timor-Leste to continue to work closely with the Mission, including in the implementation of the revised police and military strategies;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In response to resolution 1410(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 321], the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council a 21 April report [S/2003/449] on UNMISSET's activities since his November 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 325]. He also presented a detailed military strategy for UNMISSET's revised schedule, as requested in resolution 1473(2003) (above).

He said that the most striking development over the reporting period was the change in the security environment that had taken place in December and January. The search for a solution to those security problems should, however, be viewed in the context of the long-term process of establishing a viable independent State. The strengthening of Timor-Leste's political institutions and a non-political administration, together with the progressive development of a culture of responsible governance and a tradition of pluralistic, democratic debate, were essential for the country's stability and social and economic progress. During the reporting period, the Government of Timor-Leste had emphasized the importance of more open, participatory and accountable governance. Progress had been made in the development of the relationship between Indonesia and Timor-Leste. The new Ambassador of Timor-Leste had assumed his duties in Jakarta in February, and Indonesia had indicated that it would soon establish a formal embassy in Dili. The technical group for demarcation and regulation of the border between Indonesia and Timor-Leste (Dili, 18-20 March) suggested that approximately 80 per cent of the boundary between the countries could be agreed relatively easily after joint field verification. It nonetheless remained uncertain that the two countries would reach agreement by 30 June 2003 on a line that constituted a border, despite their formal commitment to that objective. Timor-Leste had also continued to develop its relationship with other States in the region and beyond. On 6 March, Timor-Leste and Australia concluded the International Unitisation Agreement on the Greater Sunrise field, straddling the Joint Petroleum Development Area in the Timor Gap, on the understanding that the Agreement did not prejudice their positions in the maritime boundary negotiations. On 2 April, the two countries ratified the Timor Sea Treaty (see p. 373).

During the reporting period, it became apparent that further assistance, especially bilateral contributions, would be required to complete the tasks undertaken by UNMISSET. The advisers in UNMISSET's Civilian Support Group continued to play a crucial role by transferring knowledge and skills to Timor-Leste counterparts, in addition to supporting the functioning of the administration. The Government had filled nearly 15,000 of 16,000 budgeted posts within the administration, which was showing increasing readiness to assume its full responsibilities. UNMISSET, in consultation with the Government of Timor-Leste and UNDP, was elaborating a strategic plan that identified areas of need where bilateral support could be required following the withdrawal of the Civilian Support Group. The plan's main purpose was to facilitate the progressive replacement of civilian advisers with bilaterally funded counterparts as required, in order to maintain continuity of training.

The functioning of Timor-Leste's judicial system continued to be hampered by severe shortages of skilled and experienced professional personnel and limited physical infrastructure. That had resulted in delays in the administration of justice, leading to prolonged pre-trial detention and detention without the necessary legal foundation, in addition to overcrowding in the prisons. A comprehensive justice sector support programme was being finalized and the five-member Superior Council of the Magistracy, responsible for the appointment, promotion, discipline and dismissal of judges, was constituted in February. However, that body was not yet operational, since the President of the Court of Appeal had not been sworn in. The Office of the Provedor for Human Rights and Justice, an independent institution provided for in the Constitution, was in the process of being established. UNMISSET, through its Serious Crimes Unit, which was set up under UNTAET for the handling of cases of egregious crimes, assisted in the conduct of investigations of serious crimes, though its work had been slower than expected owing to constraints in the justice system. Continuing external assistance would be required after June 2004 to complete investigations, especially since the majority of those accused remained outside of Timor-Leste, including 90 per cent of those accused of crimes against humanity. Through its Human Rights Unit, UNMISSET provided support and advice to the Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation, which was conducting community reconciliation procedures and holding community discussions.

Over the reporting period, UNMISSET continued to undertake executive policing while supporting the development of the National Police of Timor-Leste (PNTL), which had effectively undertaken the task of routine patrolling in 7 of Timor-Leste's 13 districts. However, further efforts were required for PNTL to play the role in internal security that was envisaged by the country's leadership. PNTL had to be ready to meet the evolving operational challenges posed by civil unrest and an apparent resurgence of activity by armed groups. Resource constraints remained significant but, more fundamentally, management and human resource policies for the force had yet to be developed. As provided for in resolution 1473(2003) (see p. 374), the adjustment of UNMISSET's capacity for police training in key areas, greater emphasis on human-rights and rule of law elements, and the retention of a greater monitoring and advisory presence in districts where policing authority had been handed over to PNTL were expected to contribute to enhancing the effectiveness, professionalism, accountability and responsiveness of PNTL. The operational responsibilities of civilian police would be reduced as responsibility for routine policing was handed over; that, in turn, would permit a gradual downsizing of UNMISSET's police component, from approximately 625 at the beginning of June 2003 to 325 at the beginning of 2004. Following the attacks of January 2003, the Government had encouraged the formation of village-based security groups to assist the police and military peacekeepers in addressing the threat posed by armed groups.

The military component of UNMISSET continued to provide support for the external security and territorial integrity of Timor-Leste, while ensuring the timely handover of responsibilities to Falintil-FDTL and to relevant public administration departments. International military capability remained essential to promote security in the border area, and to provide a short-term response to the threats posed by armed groups, whose tactics, weapons and training exceeded the capacity of any other security force, while the Timorese forces obtained the necessary capability to assume that task. The Secretary-General said that within the capacity provided by UNMISSET's revised downsizing schedule, the military component would adopt the following strategy: improve its ability to use information to assist in the tactical employment of the infantry forces available; assist in greater coordination and exchange of information with UNMISSET police and with Timor-Leste security agencies to improve effectiveness; promote relations with the public and enhance public understanding of the military component's role; and make more effective use of the forces available and seek a more timely response in the event of incidents requiring employment of peacekeeping forces. The planned configuration of the military component would be adapted in several respects to facilitate that strategy. Rather than withdrawing from the Cova Lima district, forces in Sector West would remain in place as deployed. The tactical headquarters in Sector West would continue to manage day-to-day operations in that sector. Additional flexibility would be facilitated by the assumption of responsibilities at the TCL by the agencies of the Government of Timor-Leste. The military component's public and military information capabilities would be somewhat enhanced through the addition of a number of specialist personnel. The force levels deployed in the central region would remain unchanged until the end of 2003. The implementation of elements of that strategy had already enabled the military component to make some progress in addressing the threat posed by armed groups, as cooperation between the military component and the UN police had led to joint searches for suspected weapons caches, armed groups and suspect individuals. The military component would aim to reach a total of 1,750 by the end of 2003; in the interim, it would be reduced to a total strength of 3,500 by July and to 3,300 by October. When the military component reached a strength of 1,750, it would be structured around two infantry battalions, with responsibility for the western and eastern parts of the country respectively. Development of Falintil-FDTL was making steady progress, with the second of the two planned infantry battalions expected to become operational by the end of 2003. No further handover of defence responsibility for districts was planned until 2004. Border services comprising PNTL border patrol and immigration officers had been trained and were deployed at border crossing points. UNMISSET's military component would continue its programme of active patrolling behind the border to deter and resist incursions, while retaining its ability to support PNTL.

The ratification of the Timor Sea Treaty had led to hopes of significant gas and oil revenues in the near future. Timor-Leste remained the poorest country in South-East Asia, with more than 60 per cent of the people living on less than $1 a day. The Government's immediate and longer-term development efforts drew on support provided by UNMISSET and by UN agencies, funds and programmes, the World Bank and Member States, in cooperation with civil society and the private sector. Among other things, the UN system was supporting the Transition Support Programme, which focused on poverty reduction, governance, capacity-building, expenditure and policy management, and private sector development.

The Secretary-General observed that much had been achieved since the establishment of UNMISSET in May 2002. Building on the foundations laid during UNTAET, the Timorese public administration and police force were assuming increasing levels of responsibility, with growing confidence. Much remained to be done, however, and continued assistance by the international community would be crucial to enable Timor-Leste to confront the political, practical and security challenges that lay ahead. Further bilateral efforts would be necessary alongside and after the contribution of UNMISSET, in the civilian administration, justice, police force, and defence and security sectors. The Secretary-General recommended extending UNMISSET's mandate for a further year, until 20 May 2004.

Security Council consideration (April). On 28 April [meeting 4741], the Security Council had before it the Secretary-General's April report (above) and heard a briefing on UNMISSET by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Timor-Leste and Head of Mission, Kamallesh Sharma.

Mr. Sharma said that the strengthening of the police force through a recast strategy involving accretion of capacity and mobility, reinforced training and augmentation of professionalism according to the highest policing standards, on the one hand, and a more gradual drawdown of the peacekeeping forces, on the other, were of critical importance. They would be of enormous assistance in dealing with the risk of civil disorder and the criminal and politically motivated violence in rural areas. A renewed surge of violence could potentially generate a demoralizing psychological apprehension in the population; the initial years of the State were critical in firmly entrenching the confidence both of the Government and of the people that the political, administrative and security order in the State could not be shaken or challenged. The slower drawdown of UNMISSET's military component would contribute to reducing the threat posed by armed groups. UNMISSET had been mindful to learn the appropriate lessons from the civil riots in Dili and other violence. Those first instances of security threats to the State had provided additional impetus for recasting, planning and augmenting readiness to make such challenges difficult to mount in the future.

The task of developing a professional, dedicated and responsive public administration from ground level was no less a challenge for the new State. The Council had mandated UNMISSET to prepare the groundwork for the structure of a national administration over two years, and halfway through that process the progress was satisfactory. It was clear, however, that assistance would be needed in some of the administrative sectors following UNMISSET's departure. UNDP's role, which was crucial in advocating the need for further capacity-building support and filling, in parallel, more than 200 development posts, would continue to be central. UNMISSET was keeping the civilian support programme under constant review for lessons that were progressively learned and improvements that could be effected. Despite many challenges, the Serious Crimes Unit continued to facilitate the work of the Special Panels for Serious Crimes at the Dili District Court. As at 30 April, investigations had been completed in 9 out of the 10 priority cases of crimes against humanity. Trials were proceeding in those cases where the accused were in Timor-Leste; in many other cases the trials might not commence due to the absence of defendants, a large proportion of whom remained outside Timor-Leste.

The economic situation of the country was slow to improve given the comprehensive legacy of underdevelopment inherited by the new independent State. The path of development and fulfilment of economic and social needs would be long and arduous, and in the foreseeable future the country would have to manage the political and economic pressures created by depressed economic and social indicators and, in particular, joblessness. The majority of people still practised subsistence agriculture, with extremely rudimentary means of production. The economy needed to focus on greater agricultural diversity and quantity of production, creation of professional services and opportunities for self-employment as the basis of the Timorese economy. The ratification of the Timor Sea Treaty between Timor-Leste and Australia, enabling the exploitation of an offshore oil and gas field, was an important development for the public finances of Timor-Leste. Prospects for further revenues would be enhanced through cooperation between the two countries on another identified field. The role played by other UN agencies, funds and programmes would contribute to a smooth transition to a traditional development assistance framework after completion of UNMISSET's mandate. Mr. Sharma said that the engagement of the international community in peace-building and institution-building would need to continue.

Timor-Leste said that the violence of December 2002 and the terrorist activities in the border area in January 2003 created some fears about future security. However, the firm and transparent response by the United Nations and the Government of Timor-Leste had provided reassurance and had reasserted confidence and stability.

UNMISSET's mission had been and continued to be effective. Much progress had been made in the capacity-building of the Timorese police and military. Timor-Leste fully endorsed the Secretary-General's recommendation that UNMISSET's mandate be extended for a further year, until 20 May 2004.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (May)

On 19 May [meeting 4758], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1480(2003). The draft [S/2003/545] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on Timor-Leste, in particular resolutions 1410(2002) of 17 May 2002 and 1473(2003) of 4 April 2003,

Commending the efforts of the people and Government of Timor-Leste and the progress achieved in developing the institutions of an independent State and in promoting a stable, equitable society based on democratic values and respect for human rights,

Commending also the work of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, under the leadership of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, in assisting the Government of Timor-Leste in developing the nation's infrastructure, public administration, law enforcement and defence capacities, and in planning for the completion of the mandate of the Mission, including through the creation of a mission liquidation task force,

Stressing that improving the overall capabilities of the Timor-Leste police force is a key priority,

Welcoming the continuing progress in developing a positive bilateral relationship between the Governments of Timor-Leste and Indonesia, which is crucial for the future stability of Timor-Leste, and encouraging continued efforts by both Governments to secure agreement on the issue of border demarcation, to promote security in the border area, to facilitate the resettlement of East Timorese remaining in West Timor, and to bring to justice those responsible for serious crimes committed in 1999,

Recognizing the importance of continued efforts to transfer skills and authority from the Mission to the Government of Timor-Leste in a coordinated and structured manner in the run-up to the withdrawal of the Mission, with the aim of helping to ensure the long-term security and stability of Timor-Leste,

Noting the planned end-date for the Mission of 20 May 2004, as indicated in the mandate implementation plan set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 17 April 2002, and in the special report of the Secretary-General of 3 March 2003,

Stressing the need for continued international support for Timor-Leste, and encouraging continued bilateral and multilateral development assistance,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 21 April 2003,

Taking note of the military strategy outlined in paragraphs 38 to 51 of that report,

1. Decides to extend the current mandate of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor until 20 May 2004;

2. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communication (August). On 6 August [S/2003/802], Italy transmitted to the Secretary-General a statement on Indonesia's Ad Hoc Human Rights Tribunal for Crimes Committed in East Timor issued on that day by the EU Presidency. The EU said that the recently completed trials by the Ad Hoc Tribunal, with the last verdict delivered on 5 August, had failed to deliver justice and did not result in a substantiated account of the violence committed in East Timor in 1999 (YUN 1999, p. 288). The EU was disappointed that the prosecutors did not submit all the evidence, especially that referred to by UN investigators and the Indonesian National Commission on Human Rights in their reports, suggesting that elements of the military, police and civil government had allegedly funded, trained and abetted local militia groups. In addition, no officials from the United Nations Mission in East Timor (UNAMET), or members of independent observer missions, and only a few victim witnesses from Timor-Leste, were called to testify by the prosecutors. Those deficiencies in the process had jeopardized the credibility of the verdicts, which were disproportionate to the seriousness of the crimes committed. It was of paramount importance that the Indonesian judicial authorities ensure that the appeal process was conducted in a manner consistent with international legal standards and that the appeal judgements were set out in accordance with the principle of transparency.

Report of Secretary-General (October). Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1410(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 321], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [S/2003/944] on UNMISSET's activities, covering developments since his April report (see p. 374).

He said that on 28 April, President Xanana Gusmão initiated his "open presidency" programme, which entailed visits to mainly isolated villages to discuss local matters, with a particular focus on security issues. A number of options for local government were under review by the Council of Ministers, any of which would lead to greater decentralization and would bring aspects of government decision-making and resource management closer to communities. The National Parliament concluded its first year of regular legislative activity, including adoption of the national budget. Following assumption of office in May by the President of the Court of Appeal, an additional international judge had been appointed to the Court, permitting it to resume operations in June after a one-and-a-half-year hiatus. At the Joint Ministerial Commission (Dili, 4-6 September), Indonesia and Timor-Leste agreed to finalize agreement on the international land boundary by 30 November, with negotiations on maritime border delimitation to follow thereafter; that new timetable replaced the original deadline of 30 June. The countries also reiterated their intention to encourage resettlement of the Timorese who were still in West Timor away from the area of the border, and to facilitate the return of those refugees who chose to go back to Timor-Leste. Efforts by both countries would also be required to address other aspects of border management, including speedy implementation of the arrangement on traditional border crossings and regulated markets. Timor-Leste was pursuing discussions on maritime boundary delimitation with Australia, which had been identified as the next step subsequent to the entry into force of the Timor Sea Treaty on 2 April.

During the reporting period, significant progress was made towards the major milestones identified in UNMISSET's mandate implementation plan. No major security incidents had taken place, though it was clear that it would not be possible for Timor-Leste to achieve self-sufficiency in certain key areas of the mandate by 20 May 2004. Recruitment and training in the area of public administration continued to advance; however, in several areas, including finance, justice, internal administration, infrastructure, the National Parliament and the Office of the President, international assistance would continue to be required for some time to assure that crucial tasks were discharged. The civilian advisers deployed through UNMISSET were working to transfer skills, both through on-the-job training and through more formal in-country training programmes. However, progress in preparing the civil administration continued to be undermined by delays in the provision of advisers deployed through bilateral funding. Shortages of qualified personnel and infrastructure had affected the justice sector in particular and generated chronic delays, so that as much as 22 per cent of the prison population comprised individuals in detention under expired warrants. The legislation establishing the Office of the Provodor for Human Rights and Justice was under consideration by the National Parliament. That independent institution, which could be functional by March 2004, could play a key role in supporting good governance and civil rights within Timor-Leste through its advocacy and oversight activities.

Prosecution of serious crimes continued to progress; five additional indictments were filed during the reporting period, including an indictment in the tenth "priority case" of serious crimes, and four convictions were handed down by the Special Panels on Serious Crimes in Dili. UNMISSET continued to play a key role in supporting that process through its serious crimes unit, which would be focusing in particular on trials and appeals during the remaining months of the mandate. A number of outstanding questions and issues remained, some of which would not be solved or completed by June 2004.

Over the reporting period, the internal situation in Timor-Leste had been relatively calm despite occasional reports of armed groups and criminal elements in rural areas, smuggling, extortion and robberies and, within urban areas, sporadic violence among martial arts groups and youth gangs. PNTL had continued to develop with UNMISSET assistance, although its capacity and resources in a number of key areas remained limited. PNTL assumed responsibility for the management of routine policing in a further six of Timor-Leste's 13 districts, in addition to the six districts where handover had already occurred. UNMISSET would retain management responsibility for the Dili district until December 2003. Despite those signs of progress, by the end of UNMISSET's mandate, PNTL would continue to lack skills in a number of specialized areas, including investigation, intelligence-gathering and special police operations. More fundamentally, there had been reports of police misconduct, involvement in criminal activities, bribery, excessive use of force and physical assaults of citizens. PNTL's ability to win public confidence would depend on further efforts to strengthen discipline and compliance with internationally accepted standards of policing.

There was no repetition during the reporting period of the kinds of armed attacks that took place in January and February 2003, and overall the situation had remained generally calm. That had been supported by the regular reconnaissance and surveillance activities by UNMISSET's military component, drawing on the resources made available through the revised downsizing schedule authorized in Council resolution 1473 (2003) (see p. 374). UNMISSET had sought to further institutionalize cooperation on security issues with and among Timorese agencies. Invitations had been extended to PNTL officers and the Timorese armed forces to work together in a joint information centre with international military and police in order to gain further experience in information analysis and planning. The Timorese armed forces would not take on areas of responsibility in addition to the district of Lautem prior to the handover of defence responsibilities to the Government of Timor-Leste, which was planned for 20 May 2004. Development of the Timorese armed forces would continue to depend on donor support through the provision of equipment, training and facilities. UNMISSET's military component, which comprised over 3,300 troops as at September 2003, would rapidly reduce in numbers over the coming months, beginning with the withdrawal in October of a battalion currently based in the Oecussi enclave. By the end of 2003, the military component would be reduced to 1,750, with the closure of the tactical headquarters for Sector West.

The area of the TCL remained porous, and illegal hunting, trade and crossings continued, in addition to other criminal activity. Approximately 26,000 former refugees from Timor-Leste remained in West Timor, most of them in the border areas. President Gusmão was engaged in border reconciliation meetings to promote long-term reconciliation among the Timorese. The Indonesian Government was exploring additional means to encourage return and resettlement of the refugees in West Timor, while continuing to assist and encourage voluntary return to Timor-Leste through the provision of registration and transport facilities. UNMISSET's military component had supplemented the basic police training of the border patrol unit with additional formal on-the-job training. Some initial progress had been made towards establishing a rapid deployment service, but further steps by the Timorese authorities were needed urgently, including the selection of officers and the provision of necessary equipment. UNMISSET continued to foster close and professional ties between Indonesian security agencies and Timorese counterparts to strengthen the foundations for future cooperation and security.

A significant step towards greater prosperity was made in June, with the finalization by the Government of commercial arrangements with Conoco Phillips on Bayu-Undan gas development and the enactment of relevant tax legislation by the Parliament. That development was expected to bring as much as $3 billion to Timor-Leste over approximately 17 years. As a means to address immediate needs for job creation and promote stability, the Government continued to pursue the recovery, employment and stability programme for ex-combatants and communities in Timor-Leste, which was supported by UNDP.

The Secretary-General observed that, since May 2002, when Timor-Leste celebrated its independence, the country had made remarkable progress in laying the foundations for a functioning civil service and police force. However, it was also clear that crucial work remained to be done and that, in a number of areas, requirements would remain outstanding after the conclusion of UNMISSET's mandate. It would be essential for the country's stability and development that the leaders of Timor-Leste continue to nurture respect for the rule of law, reach out to civil society and promote political dialogue and discussion, while giving full support to key institutions of democracy—a non-political civil service, a free press and an independent judiciary. In other areas, however, international assistance would continue to be indispensable; it was likely to include further guidance and advice in the areas of civil administration, justice and policing, and human rights training. In that context, the international community should take stock of what had been achieved and consider the best means through which the country's needs could be met after UNMISSET's withdrawal.

In the tragic context of the attack that took place in Baghdad, Iraq, on 19 August 2003 (see p. 346), the Secretary-General recalled the remarkable contribution that was made to Timor-Leste by his former Special Representative, Sergio Vieira de Mello. Timor-Leste mourned his loss through national ceremonies that offered an eloquent testimony to the depth of admiration and affection in which he was held as the country's transitional administrator.

Security Council consideration (October). On 15 October [meeting 4843], the Security Council discussed the Secretary-General's October report on UNMISSET (above) and was briefed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Timor-Leste, Mr. Sharma.

Mr. Sharma said that while there had been no major security challenges since April 2003, reports persisted of alleged sightings of armed groups by residents in rural areas and of the presence of criminal elements in those areas, particularly in the border districts. There was a risk that such reports might increase as UNMISSET's downsizing progressed. Although PNTL had made great progress, it was still a young and inexperienced police service, and it was doubtful that it would be able to respond effectively if tested by major internal security challenges following UNMISSET's closure. Operational support and further mentoring and training in specialized and professional police skills would be required on a longer-term basis. Ensuring that police officers maintained human rights standards remained a priority. Timor-Leste's defence force was currently responsible for only one district, thus allowing it to continue to focus on capability development and individual and collective training activities. Given the programme of capability development, the force was not likely to become fully operational at required professional standards at the battalion level until around 2005-2006.

UNMISSET's military component continued to downsize according to the revised schedule that was approved in Council resolution 1473(2003) (see p. 374). As they withdrew from border areas, the Timorese agencies, particularly the border patrol unit of PNTL, assumed greater responsibilities for border management. The members of the unit had performed commendably in the preceding few months at all border crossing points that they had taken over from UNMISSET, despite the handicaps they faced in terms of logistics, availability of facilities in the remote border areas and equipment. UNMISSET was working with the Government of Timor-Leste to address those shortcomings so that the unit could be self-sustaining. The rapid deployment of PNTL, once trained and functional, would provide a response capability to deal with armed criminal groups in rural and border districts. Despite best efforts, however, those units would continue to need advice and support following the end of UNMISSET's mandate. Post-UNMISSET, international assistance would also be needed to advise and mentor the Timorese security agencies in the various tasks of monitoring and managing the border, including assisting in liaison and thus enhancing cooperation with Indonesian security agencies at the border and providing psychological support to a population not yet prepared for the complete withdrawal of the reassuring international presence.

The evolving relationship between Timor-Leste and Indonesia was a primary asset in the rapid evolution of Timorese nationhood. Both sides were cooperating in the settlement of the border negotiations, residual refugee issues and the continuation of pension payments to former Indonesian civil servants. UNMISSET had continued to provide support to the core administrative and judicial structures of the Government and further international support would be required in the post-UNMISSET period. The Government, UNMISSET and UNDP had completed reviews of the justice and administrative sectors and developed a comprehensive support programme, identifying areas most in need of support from the international community. UNMISSET also continued to work closely with the wider UN system of agencies, funds and programmes and international financial institutions, in support of national programmes. It had also contributed, through its Human Rights Unit, to the promotion of human rights by training and advising and through capacity-building in the major institutions of the State. With seven months of its mandate remaining, UNMISSET would continue to work with the Government of Timor-Leste to realize all the objectives in the mandate implementation plan. Nevertheless, it was important that the progress that had been achieved so far should not be jeopardized by the absence of adequate support mechanisms, based on assured funding, after the completion of UNMISSET's mandate.

Timor-Leste said that the international community had invested huge financial and human resources and know-how in UNMISSET, though some resources had not arrived on time. The judicial system, law and order, finance and planning, and defence and security would require substantial assistance and support for some time. It was clear, as the Secretary-General had stated in his October report, that it would not be possible for Timor-Leste to achieve self-sufficiency in certain key areas of the mandate by 20 May 2004. Timor-Leste recommended a credible, strong UN presence in key areas in order to help consolidate stability and security. The President of the General Assembly, Jan Kavan, had visited Timor-Leste in July. Given the fundamental contribution and the crucial role played by the Security Council in the liberation of the country, Timor-Leste invited the Council to send a delegation to visit also.

Later developments. In a later report (S/2004/117), the Secretary-General said that during the last months of 2003, Timor-Leste's National Parliament approved, among other things, a bill on immigration and asylum and one on local governance. The security situation remained generally calm, with occasional demonstrations that did not pose a threat to law and order. Indonesia and Timor-Leste did not meet their target date of 30 November 2003 for the finalization of agreement on a provisional line for the border. The first round of negotiations on the maritime boundary between Timor-Leste and Australia concluded on 14 November. Further talks were scheduled for April 2004. The development of Timor-Leste's public administration had continued to progress. As foreseen, 30 of UNMISSET's 100 civil adviser positions were phased out by the end of November 2003. The remaining advisers, who were serving largely in the financial, central management and justice sectors, continued to play a key role in mentoring Timorese counterparts. PNTL assumed responsibility for routine policing throughout the country with the hand-over of responsibility in Dili district on 10 December. In October, the Border Police Unit assumed responsibility for all junction points along the 259-kilometre TCL. Following the downsizing and restructuring of UNMISSET, which was carried out as foreseen in November and December 2003, the military component comprised 1,750 personnel, including 78 military observers and two infantry battalions. The fourth Timor-Leste development partners meeting, which focused on economic recovery issues, was held in Dili from 3 to 5 December 2003.

General Assembly action. By resolution 58/112 of 17 December, the General Assembly endorsed the recommendation of the Economic and Social Council that Timor-Leste be added to the list of least developed countries (see p. 868).

By resolution 58/121 of the same date, the Assembly urged assistance for humanitarian relief, rehabilitation and development for Timor-Leste (see p. 953).

Financing of UN operations

During 2003, the General Assembly considered the financing of three UN missions in Timor-Leste—UNTAET, UNMISSET and UNAMET. UNTAET was established by Security Council resolution 1272(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 293] to administer East Timor during its transition to independence; its mandate was extended until 20 May 2002, Timor-Leste's date of independence, in accordance with resolution 1392(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 318]. UNMISSET was established by Council resolution 1410(2002) [ibid., p. 321] to provide assistance to the administrative, law enforcement and public security structures critical to the viability and political stability of Timor-Leste, in addition to contributing to the maintenance of its external and internal security. UNAMET was established by Council resolution 1246(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 283] to conduct the 1999 popular consultation on East Timor's autonomy [ibid., p. 283]; its mandate ended on 30 November 1999, in accordance with resolution 1262(1999) [ibid., p. 287].

UNTAET and UNMISSET

In December 2002 [A/57/666], the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a performance report on the budget of UNTAET and UNMISSET for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002. Expenditures for the two missions for the period totalled $454,118,000, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $942,000. The Assembly was requested to decide on the treatment of that unencumbered balance and on the treatment of other income and adjustments for the period ended 30 June 2002, amounting to $20,680,000 from interest income ($7,625,000), other/miscellaneous income ($1,642,000) and savings on or cancellation of prior period obligations ($11,413,000).

In February 2003 [A/57/689], the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly UNMISSET's budget for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, which amounted to $188,229,200, inclusive of budgeted voluntary contributions in kind in the amount of $60,000. The budget provided for the maximum monthly average deployment of 106 military observers, 3,764 military contingent members, 650 civilian police, 389 international staff, 732 national staff and 200 UN Volunteers. The Assembly was requested to appropriate $188,169,200 for the maintenance of the Mission from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 and to assess that amount at a monthly rate of $15,680,766, should the Security Council decide to continue the Mission's mandate.

Also in February [A/57/723], the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly the overview of the financing of UN peacekeeping operations: budget performance for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 and budget for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004.

In April [A/57/772/Add.1], ACABQ reviewed the Secretary-General's reports on the budgets of UNTAET and UNMISSET for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 and the proposed budget for UNMISSET for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 (see above). In connection with the first report on the financing of UNTAET and UNMISSET, ACABQ recommended that the unencumbered balance of $942,000 and interest and other income in the amount of $20,680,000 be credited to Member States in a manner to be determined by the Assembly. In connection with the second report on the financing of UNMISSET, ACABQ recommended that the estimated budget requirement of $188,169,200 gross be reduced by $3,169,200, or approximately 2 per cent. Accordingly, ACABQ recommended that the Assembly appropriate an amount of $185 million gross ($178,985,600 net), and that the amount be assessed at a monthly rate of $15,416,667 gross ($14,915,467 net) should the Security Council decide to continue the Mission's mandate. However, the reduction did not take into account any future changes in the overall strategy being considered by the Council.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (June)

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/832], adopted resolution 57/327 without vote [agenda item 129].

Financing of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1272(1999) of 25 October 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Transitional Administration, the latest of which was resolution 1392(2002) of 31 January 2002, by which the mandate was extended until 20 May 2002,

Recalling also its resolution 54/246 A of 23 December 1999 on the financing of the Transitional Administration and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 56/296 of 27 June 2002,

Recalling further Security Council resolution 1410 (2002) of 17 May 2002, by which the Council established the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as of 20 May 2002 for an initial period of twelve months, and its subsequent resolution 1480(2003) of 19 May 2003, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 20 May 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Trust Fund for the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as at 31 March 2003, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 86.1 million United States dollars, representing some 5 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Transitional Administration and the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the additional resources referred to in paragraph 20 of the report of the Advisory Committee are used to strengthen national judicial capacity consistent with the needs of the people of Timor-Leste and the mandate of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002

10. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Transitional Administration and the Mission for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

11. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor the amount of 193,337,100 dollars for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, inclusive of 185 million dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 6,384,000 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations, and 1,953,100 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

12. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 193,337,100 dollars at a monthly rate of 16,111,425 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003 as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000, 57/4 B of 20 December 2002 and for 2004, subject to the decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

13. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 12 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 7,568,200 dollars at a monthly rate of 630,683 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 6,014,400 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 1,438,300 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account, and the prorated share of 115,500 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

14. Decides that for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Transitional Administration and the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 12 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and of other income in the total amount of 21,622,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 and 57/290 A, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2002 as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B and 57/4 B;

15. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Transitional Administration and the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 21,622,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 14 above;

16. Decides further that the increase of 529,000 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 14 and 15 above, and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs as appropriate;

17. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

18. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission;

19. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-eighth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor".

In July, the Secretary-General presented to the Assembly the revised budget for UNMISSET for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/58/192]. The revised budget incorporated additional requirements for the delay in downsizing the Mission and amounted to $208,887,500 gross ($202,333,200 net), inclusive of budgeted voluntary contributions in kind of $60,000. The revision represented an increase of $23,827,500 gross from the initial approved budget of $185,000,000 and provided for the deployment of a maximum of 3,405 troops, 95 military observers, 550 civilian police, 125 civilian police in formed units, 399 international staff and 928 local staff.

In a September report [A/58/192/Add.I], the Secretary-General provided information on the proposed donation of UNMISSET assets to the Government of Timor-Leste, the inventory value of which amounted to some $35.3 million as at 30 June 2003.

In October [A/58/409], ACABQ, having considered the revised budget for UNMISSET, recommended that the Assembly appropriate the additional amount of $23,827,500 gross for the period 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004. It further recommended that the Assembly approve the donation of assets with an inventory value of $35,262,900 and a corresponding residual value of $15,879,900 to Timor-Leste on a free-of-charge basis.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (December)

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/584], adopted resolution 58/260 A without vote [agenda item 140].

Financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1272(1999) of 25 October 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Transitional Administration, the last of which was resolution 1392(2002) of 31 January 2002, by which the mandate was extended until 20 May 2002,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1410(2002) of 17 May 2002, by which the Council established the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as of 20 May 2002 for an initial period of twelve months, and its subsequent resolution 1480(2003) of 19 May 2003, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 20 May 2004,

Recalling further its resolution 54/246 A of 23 December 1999 on the financing of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and its subsequent resolutions on the financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, the latest of which was resolution 57/327 of 18 June 2003,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission and to the Trust Fund for the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as at 31 October 2003, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 65.5 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-three Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Transitional Administration and the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa, and in providing them with adequate resources;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

Revised budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

9. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor the amount of 23,827,500 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, in addition to the amount of 193,337,100 dollars already appropriated for the same period under the terms of resolution 57/327;

10. Decides also, taking into account the amount of 193,337,100 dollars previously apportioned under the terms of resolution 57/327, to apportion among Member States the amount of 23,827,500 dollars at a monthly rate of 1,985,625 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003 as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002 and the scale of assessments for 2004 as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003, subject to the decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

11. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December

1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 10 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 539,900 dollars at a monthly rate of 44,991 dollars, representing the additional estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mission;

Donation of assets to the Government of Timor-Leste

12. Approves the donation of the assets of the Mission, with a total inventory value of up to 35,262,900 dollars and corresponding residual value of up to 15,879,900 dollars, to the Government of Timor-Leste;

13. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

14. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission;

15. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

16. Decides to keep under review during its fifty-eighth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor".

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on financing of UNMISSET would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

UNAMET

On 15 September, the General Assembly decided to defer consideration of the item on the financing of UNAMET and to include it in the draft agenda of its fifty-eighth session (decision 57/599).

Other matters

Cambodia

In a 17 March letter [A/57/758], the Secretary-General, referring to General Assembly resolution 57/228 A [YUN 2002, p. 644], which requested him to resume negotiations to conclude an agreement with the Government of Cambodia on the establishment of Extraordinary Chambers within the court structure of Cambodia for the prosecution of crimes committed during the period of Democratic Kampuchea (1975-1979), informed the Assembly President that his negotiating team had established the text of a draft agreement.

In a 31 March report [A/57/769], the Secretary-General described the steps that he had taken to resume negotiations with the Government of Cambodia and described the draft agreement, which was finalized as a result of the negotiations. The Secretary-General said that, while the text was an improvement over the previously discussed one, doubts might remain as to whether it would ensure the credibility of the Extraordinary Chambers, given the precarious state of the judiciary in Cambodia. He said it would be essential for the United Nations to assist in ensuring that the Chambers functioned in conformity with the agreement and complied with international standards of justice, fairness and due process of law, as set out in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights [YUN 1966, p. 423] (see p. 669). The Secretary-General proposed that the United Nations remain engaged in the process of overseeing the implementation of the draft agreement. The report outlined the steps required by the United Nations to conclude the agreement with the Government. Annexed to the report was the draft agreement.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 May [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/57/806], adopted resolution 57/228 B without vote [agenda item 109 (b)].

Khmer Rouge trials

Recalling its resolution 57/228 A of 18 December 2002,

Welcoming the efforts of the Secretary-General and the Royal Government of Cambodia to conclude the negotiation of the draft Agreement between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia concerning the Prosecution under Cambodian Law of Crimes Committed during the Period of Democratic Kampuchea contained in the annex to the present resolution,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Approves the draft Agreement between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia concerning the Prosecution under Cambodian Law of Crimes Committed during the Period of Democratic Kampuchea contained in the annex to the present resolution;

2. Urges the Secretary-General and the Royal Government of Cambodia to take all the measures necessary to allow the draft Agreement referred to in paragraph 1 to enter into force, and to implement it fully after its entry into force;

3. Decides that the expenses of the Extraordinary Chambers to be defrayed by the United Nations in accordance with the relevant provisions of the draft Agreement shall be borne by voluntary contributions from the international community as indicated in paragraph 9 of resolution 57/228 A, and appeals to the international community to provide assistance, including financial and personnel support to the Extraordinary Chambers;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Annex

Draft Agreement between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia concerning the Prosecution under Cambodian Law of Crimes Committed during the Period of Democratic Kampuchea

Whereas the General Assembly of the United Nations, in its resolution 57/228 A of 18 December 2002, recalled that the serious violations of Cambodian and international humanitarian law during the period of Democratic Kampuchea from 1975 to 1979 continue to be matters of vitally important concern to the international community as a whole,

Whereas in the same resolution the General Assembly recognized the legitimate concern of the Government and the people of Cambodia in the pursuit of justice and national reconciliation, stability, peace and security,

Whereas the Cambodian authorities have requested assistance from the United Nations in bringing to trial senior leaders of Democratic Kampuchea and those who were most responsible for the crimes and serious violations of Cambodian penal law, international humanitarian law and custom, and international conventions recognized by Cambodia, that were committed during the period from 17 April 1975 to 6 January 1979,

Whereas prior to the negotiation of the present Agreement substantial progress had been made by the Secretary-General of the United Nations (hereinafter, "the Secretary-General") and the Royal Government of Cambodia towards the establishment, with international assistance, of Extraordinary Chambers within the existing court structure of Cambodia for the prosecution of crimes committed during the period of Democratic Kampuchea,

Whereas by its resolution 57/228 A, the General Assembly welcomed the promulgation of the Law on the Establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia for the Prosecution of Crimes Committed during the Period of Democratic Kampuchea and requested the Secretary-General to resume negotiations, without delay, to conclude an agreement with the Government, based on previous negotiations on the establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers consistent with the provisions of the said resolution, so that the Extraordinary Chambers may begin to function promptly,

Whereas the Secretary-General and the Royal Government of Cambodia have held negotiations on the establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers,

Now therefore the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia have agreed as follows:

Article 1 Purpose

The purpose of the present Agreement is to regulate the cooperation between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia in bringing to trial senior leaders of Democratic Kampuchea and those who were most responsible for the crimes and serious violations of Cambodian penal law, international humanitarian law and custom, and international conventions recognized by Cambodia, that were committed during the period from 17 April 1975 to 6 January 1979. The Agreement provides, inter alia, the legal basis and the principles and modalities for such cooperation.

Article 2

The Law on the Establishment of Extraordinary Chambers

1. The present Agreement recognizes that the Extraordinary Chambers have subject-matter jurisdiction consistent with that set forth in "the Law on the Establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia for the Prosecution of Crimes Committed During the Period of Democratic Kampuchea" (hereinafter: "the Law on the Establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers"), as adopted and amended by the Cambodian Legislature under the Constitution of Cambodia. The present Agreement further recognizes that the Extraordinary Chambers have personal jurisdiction over senior leaders of Democratic Kampuchea and those who were most responsible for the crimes referred to in Article 1 of the Agreement.

2. The present Agreement shall be implemented in Cambodia through the Law on the Establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers as adopted and amended. The Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, and in particular its Articles 26 and 27, applies to the Agreement.

3. In case amendments to the Law on the Establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers are deemed necessary, such amendments shall always be preceded by consultations between the parties.

Article 3 Judges

1. Cambodian judges, on the one hand, and judges appointed by the Supreme Council of the Magistracy upon nomination by the Secretary-General of the United Nations (hereinafter: "international judges"), on the other hand, shall serve in each of the two Extraordinary Chambers.

2. The composition of the Chambers shall be as follows:

(a) The Trial Chamber: three Cambodian judges and two international judges;

(b) The Supreme Court Chamber, which shall serve as both appellate chamber and final instance: four Cambodian judges and three international judges.

3. The judges shall be persons of high moral character, impartiality and integrity who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to judicial offices. They shall be independent in the performance of their functions and shall not accept or seek instructions from any Government or any other source.

4. In the overall composition of the Chambers due account should be taken of the experience of the judges in criminal law, international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law.

5. The Secretary-General of the United Nations undertakes to forward a list of not less than seven nominees for international judges from which the Supreme Council of the Magistracy shall appoint five to serve as judges in the two Chambers. Appointment of international judges by the Supreme Council of the Magistracy shall be made only from the list submitted by the Secretary-General.

6. In the event of a vacancy of an international judge, the Supreme Council of the Magistracy shall appoint another international judge from the same list.

7. The judges shall be appointed for the duration of the proceedings.

8. In addition to the international judges sitting in the Chambers and present at every stage of the proceedings, the President of a Chamber may, on a case-by-case basis, designate from the list of nominees submitted by the Secretary-General, one or more alternate judges to be present at each stage of the proceedings, and to replace an international judge if that judge is unable to continue sitting.

Article 4

Decision-making

1. The judges shall attempt to achieve unanimity in their decisions. If this is not possible, the following shall apply:

(a) A decision by the Trial Chamber shall require the affirmative vote of at least four judges;

(b) A decision by the Supreme Court Chamber shall require the affirmative vote of at least five judges.

2. When there is no unanimity, the decision of the Chamber shall contain the views of the majority and the minority.

Article 5

Investigating judges

1. There shall be one Cambodian and one international investigating judge serving as co-investigating judges. They shall be responsible for the conduct of investigations.

2. The co-investigating judges shall be persons of high moral character, impartiality and integrity who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to such a judicial office.

3. The co-investigating judges shall be independent in the performance of their functions and shall not accept or seek instructions from any Government or any other source. It is understood, however, that the scope of the investigation is limited to senior leaders of Democratic Kampuchea and those who were most responsible for the crimes and serious violations of Cambodian penal law, international humanitarian law and custom, and international conventions recognized by Cambodia, that were committed during the period from 17 April 1975 to 6 January 1979.

4. The co-investigating judges shall cooperate with a view to arriving at a common approach to the investigation. In case the co-investigating judges are unable to agree whether to proceed with an investigation, the investigation shall proceed unless the judges or one of them requests within thirty days that the difference shall be settled in accordance with Article 7.

5. In addition to the list of nominees provided for in Article 3, paragraph 5, the Secretary-General shall submit a list of two nominees from which the Supreme Council of the Magistracy shall appoint one to serve as an international co-investigating judge, and one as a reserve international co-investigating judge.

6. In case there is a vacancy or a need to fill the post of the international co-investigating judge, the person appointed to fill this post must be the reserve international co-investigating judge.

7. The co-investigating judges shall be appointed for the duration of the proceedings.

Article 6

Prosecutors

1. There shall be one Cambodian prosecutor and one international prosecutor competent to appear in both Chambers, serving as co-prosecutors. They shall be responsible for the conduct of the prosecutions.

2. The co-prosecutors shall be of high moral character, and possess a high level of professional competence and extensive experience in the conduct of investigations and prosecutions of criminal cases.

3. The co-prosecutors shall be independent in the performance of their functions and shall not accept or seek instructions from any Government or any other source. It is understood, however, that the scope of the prosecution is limited to senior leaders of Democratic Kampuchea and those who were most responsible for the crimes and serious violations of Cambodian penal law, international humanitarian law and custom, and international conventions recognized by Cambodia, that were committed during the period from 17 April 1975 to 6 January 1979.

4. The co-prosecutors shall cooperate with a view to arriving at a common approach to the prosecution. In case the prosecutors are unable to agree whether to proceed with a prosecution, the prosecution shall proceed unless the prosecutors or one of them requests within thirty days that the difference shall be settled in accordance with Article 7.

5. The Secretary-General undertakes to forward a list of two nominees from which the Supreme Council of the Magistracy shall select one international co-prosecutor and one reserve international co-prosecutor.

6. In case there is a vacancy or a need to fill the post of the international co-prosecutor, the person appointed to fill this post must be the reserve international co-prosecutor.

7. The co-prosecutors shall be appointed for the duration of the proceedings.

8. Each co-prosecutor shall have one or more deputy prosecutors to assist him or her with prosecutions before the Chambers. Deputy international prosecutors shall be appointed by the international co-prosecutor from a list provided by the Secretary-General.

Article 7

Settlement of differences between the co-investigating judges or the co-prosecutors

1. In case the co-investigating judges or the co-prosecutors have made a request in accordance with Article 5, paragraph 4, or Article 6, paragraph 4, as the case may be, they shall submit written statements of facts and the reasons for their different positions to the Director of the Office of Administration.

2. The difference shall be settled forthwith by a Pre-Trial Chamber of five judges, three appointed by the Supreme Council of the Magistracy, with one as President, and two appointed by the Supreme Council of the Magistracy upon nomination by the Secretary-General. Article 3, paragraph 3, shall apply to the judges.

3. Upon receipt of the statements referred to in paragraph 1, the Director of the Office of Administration shall immediately convene the Pre-Trial Chamber and communicate the statements to its members.

4. A decision of the Pre-Trial Chamber, against which there is no appeal, requires the affirmative vote of at least four judges. The decision shall be communicated to the Director of the Office of Administration, who shall publish it and communicate it to the co-investigating judges or the co-prosecutors. They shall immediately proceed in accordance with the decision of the Chamber. If there is no majority, as required for a decision, the investigation or prosecution shall proceed.

Article 8

Office of Administration

1. There shall be an Office of Administration to service the Extraordinary Chambers, the Pre-Trial Chamber, the co-investigating judges and the Prosecutors' Office.

2. There shall be a Cambodian Director of this Office, who shall be appointed by the Royal Government of Cambodia. The Director shall be responsible for the overall management of the Office of Administration, except in matters that are subject to United Nations rules and procedures.

3. There shall be an international Deputy Director of the Office of Administration, who shall be appointed by the Secretary-General. The Deputy Director shall be responsible for the recruitment of all international staff and all administration of the international components of the Extraordinary Chambers, the Pre-Trial Chamber, the co-investigating judges, the Prosecutors' Office and the Office of Administration. The United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia agree that, when an international Deputy Director has been appointed by the Secretary-General, the assignment of that person to that position by the Royal Government of Cambodia shall take place forthwith.

4. The Director and the Deputy Director shall cooperate in order to ensure an effective and efficient functioning of the administration.

Article 9

Crimes falling within the jurisdiction of the Extraordinary Chambers

The subject-matter jurisdiction of the Extraordinary Chambers shall be the crime of genocide as defined in the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, crimes against humanity as defined in the 1998 Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court and grave breaches of the 1949 Geneva Conventions and such other crimes as defined in Chapter II of the Law on the Establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers as promulgated on 10 August 2001.

Article 10

Penalties

The maximum penalty for conviction for crimes falling within the jurisdiction of the Extraordinary Chambers shall be life imprisonment.

Article 11

Amnesty

1. The Royal Government of Cambodia shall not request an amnesty or pardon for any persons who may be investigated for or convicted of crimes referred to in the present Agreement.

2. This provision is based upon a declaration by the Royal Government of Cambodia that until now, with regard to matters covered in the law, there has been only one case, dated 14 September 1996, when a pardon was granted to only one person with regard to a 1979 conviction on the charge of genocide. The United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia agree that the scope of this pardon is a matter to be decided by the Extraordinary Chambers.

Article 12

Procedure

1. The procedure shall be in accordance with Cambodian law. Where Cambodian law does not deal with a particular matter, or where there is uncertainty regarding the interpretation or application of a relevant rule of Cambodian law, or where there is a question regarding the consistency of such a rule with international standards, guidance may also be sought in procedural rules established at the international level.

2. The Extraordinary Chambers shall exercise their jurisdiction in accordance with international standards of justice, fairness and due process of law, as set out in Articles 14 and 15 of the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, to which Cambodia is a party. In the interest of securing a fair and public hearing and credibility of the procedure, it is understood that representatives of Member States of the United Nations, of the Secretary-General, of the media and of national and international non-governmental organizations will at all times have access to the proceedings before the Extraordinary Chambers. Any exclusion from such proceedings in accordance with the provisions of Article 14 of the Covenant shall only be to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the Chamber concerned and where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice.

Rights of the accused

1. The rights of the accused enshrined in Articles 14 and 15 of the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights shall be respected throughout the trial process. Such rights shall, in particular, include the right: to a fair and public hearing; to be presumed innocent until proved guilty; to engage a counsel of his or her choice; to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his or her defence; to have counsel provided if he or she does not have sufficient means to pay for it; and to examine or have examined the witnesses against him or her.

2. The United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia agree that the provisions on the right to defence counsel in the Law on the Establishment of Extraordinary Chambers mean that the accused has the right to engage counsel of his or her own choosing as guaranteed by the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Article 14

Premises

The Royal Government of Cambodia shall provide at its expense the premises for the co-investigating judges, the Prosecutors' Office, the Extraordinary Chambers, the Pre-Trial Chamber and the Office of Administration. It shall also provide for such utilities, facilities and other services necessary for their operation that may be mutually agreed upon by separate agreement between the United Nations and the Government.

Article 15

Cambodian personnel

Salaries and emoluments of Cambodian judges and other Cambodian personnel shall be defrayed by the Royal Government of Cambodia.

Article 16

International personnel

Salaries and emoluments of international judges, the international co-investigating judge, the international co-prosecutor and other personnel recruited by the United Nations shall be defrayed by the United Nations.

Article 17

Financial and other assistance of the United Nations

The United Nations shall be responsible for the following:

(a) Remuneration of the international judges, the international co-investigating judge, the international co-prosecutor, the Deputy Director of the Office of Administration and other international personnel;

(b) Costs for utilities and services as agreed separately between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia;

(c) Remuneration of defence counsel;

(d) Witnesses' travel from within Cambodia and from abroad;

(e) Safety and security arrangements as agreed separately between the United Nations and the Government;

(f) Such other limited assistance as may be necessary to ensure the smooth functioning of the investigation, the prosecution and the Extraordinary Chambers.

Article 18

Inviolability of archives and documents

The archives of the co-investigating judges, the co-prosecutors, the Extraordinary Chambers, the Pre-Trial Chamber and the Office of Administration, and in general all documents and materials made available, belonging to or used by them, wherever located in Cambodia and by whomsoever held, shall be inviolable for the duration of the proceedings.

Article 19

Privileges and immunities of international judges, the international co-investigating judge, the international co-prosecutor and the Deputy Director of the Office of Administration

1. The international judges, the international co-investigating judge, the international co-prosecutor and the Deputy Director of the Office of Administration, together with their families forming part of their household, shall enjoy the privileges and immunities, exemptions and facilities accorded to diplomatic agents in accordance with the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations. They shall, in particular, enjoy:

(a) Personal inviolability, including immunity from arrest or detention;

(b) Immunity from criminal, civil and administrative jurisdiction in conformity with the Vienna Convention;

(c) Inviolability for all papers and documents;

(d) Exemption from immigration restrictions and alien registration;

(e) The same immunities and facilities in respect of their personal baggage as are accorded to diplomatic agents.

2. The international judges, the international co-investigating judge, the international co-prosecutor and the Deputy Director of the Office of Administration shall enjoy exemption from taxation in Cambodia on their salaries, emoluments and allowances.

Article 20

Privileges and immunities of Cambodian and international personnel

1. Cambodian judges, the Cambodian co-investigating judge, the Cambodian co-prosecutor and other Cambodian personnel shall be accorded immunity from legal process in respect of words spoken or written and all acts performed by them in their official capacity under the present Agreement. Such immunity shall continue to be accorded after termination of employment with the co-investigating judges, the co-prosecutors, the Extraordinary Chambers, the Pre-Trial Chamber and the Office of Administration.

2. International personnel shall be accorded:

(a) Immunity from legal process in respect of words spoken or written and all acts performed by them in their official capacity under the present Agreement. Such immunity shall continue to be accorded after termination of employment with the co-investigating judges, the co-prosecutors, the Extraordinary Chambers, the Pre-Trial Chamber and the Office of Administration;

(b) Immunity from taxation on salaries, allowances and emoluments paid to them by the United Nations;

(c) Immunity from immigration restrictions;

(d) The right to import free of duties and taxes, except for payment for services, their furniture and effects at the time of first taking up their official duties in Cambodia.

3. The United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia agree that the immunity granted by the Law on the Establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers in respect of words spoken or written and all acts performed by them in their official capacity under the present Agreement will apply also after the persons have left the service of the co-investigating judges, the co-prosecutors, the Extraordinary Chambers, the Pre-Trial Chamber and the Office of Administration.

Counsel

1. The counsel of a suspect or an accused who has been admitted as such by the Extraordinary Chambers shall not be subjected by the Royal Government of Cambodia to any measure which may affect the free and independent exercise of his or her functions under the present Agreement.

2. In particular, the counsel shall be accorded:

(a) Immunity from personal arrest or detention and from seizure of personal baggage;

(b) Inviolability of all documents relating to the exercise of his or her functions as a counsel of a suspect or accused;

(c) Immunity from criminal or civil jurisdiction in respect of words spoken or written and acts performed by them in their official capacity as counsel. Such immunity shall continue to be accorded to them after termination of their functions as a counsel of a suspect or accused.

3. Any counsel, whether of Cambodian or non-Cambodian nationality, engaged by or assigned to a suspect or an accused shall, in the defence of his or her client, act in accordance with the present Agreement, the Cambodian Law on the Statutes of the Bar and recognized standards and ethics of the legal profession.

Witnesses and experts

Witnesses and experts appearing on a summons or a request of the judges, the co-investigating judges, or the co-prosecutors shall not be prosecuted, detained or subjected to any other restriction on their liberty by the Cambodian authorities. They shall not be subjected by the authorities to any measure which may affect the free and independent exercise of their functions.

Protection of victims and witnesses

The co-investigating judges, the co-prosecutors and the Extraordinary Chambers shall provide for the protection of victims and witnesses. Such protection measures shall include, but shall not be limited to, the conduct of in camera proceedings and the protection of the identity of a victim or witness.

Security, safety and protection of persons referred to in the present Agreement

The Royal Government of Cambodia shall take all effective and adequate actions which may be required to ensure the security, safety and protection of persons referred to in the present Agreement. The United Nations and the Government agree that the Government is responsible for the security of all accused, irrespective of whether they appear voluntarily before the Extraordinary Chambers or whether they are under arrest.

Obligation to assist the co-investigating judges, the co-prosecutors and the Extraordinary Chambers

The Royal Government of Cambodia shall comply without undue delay with any request for assistance by the co-investigating judges, the co-prosecutors and the Extraordinary Chambers or an order issued by any of them, including, but not limited to:

- (a) Identification and location of persons;
- (b) Service of documents;
- (c) Arrest or detention of persons;
- (d) Transfer of an indictee to the Extraordinary Chambers.

Article 26

Languages

1. The official language of the Extraordinary Chambers and the Pre-Trial Chamber is Khmer.

2. The official working languages of the Extraordinary Chambers and the Pre-Trial Chamber shall be Khmer, English and French.

3. Translations of public documents and interpretation at public hearings into Russian may be provided by the Royal Government of Cambodia at its discretion and expense on condition that such services do not hinder the proceedings before the Extraordinary Chambers.

Article 27

Practical arrangements

1. With a view to achieving efficiency and cost-effectiveness in the operation of the Extraordinary Chambers, a phased-in approach shall be adopted for their establishment in accordance with the chronological order of the legal process.

2. In the first phase of the operation of the Extraordinary Chambers, the judges, the co-investigating judges and the co-prosecutors will be appointed along with investigative and prosecutorial staff, and the process of investigations and prosecutions shall be initiated.

3. The trial process of those already in custody shall proceed simultaneously with the investigation of other persons responsible for crimes falling within the jurisdiction of the Extraordinary Chambers.

4. With the completion of the investigation of persons suspected of having committed the crimes falling within the jurisdiction of the Extraordinary Chambers, arrest warrants shall be issued and submitted to the Royal Government of Cambodia to effectuate the arrest.

5. With the arrest by the Royal Government of Cambodia of indicted persons situated in its territory, the Extraordinary Chambers shall be fully operational, provided that the judges of the Supreme Court Chamber shall serve when seized with a matter. The judges of the Pre-Trial Chamber shall serve only if and when their services are needed.

Article 28

Withdrawal of cooperation

Should the Royal Government of Cambodia change the structure or organization of the Extraordinary Chambers or otherwise cause them to function in a manner that does not conform with the terms of the present Agreement, the United Nations reserves the right to cease to provide assistance, financial or otherwise, pursuant to the present Agreement.

Article 29

Settlement of disputes

Any dispute between the parties concerning the interpretation or application of the present Agreement shall be settled by negotiation, or by any other mutually agreed upon mode of settlement.

Article 30

Approval

To be binding on the parties, the present Agreement must be approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations and ratified by Cambodia. The Royal Government of Cambodia will make its best endeavours to obtain this ratification by the earliest possible date.

Article 31*Application within Cambodia

The present Agreement shall apply as law within the Kingdom of Cambodia following its ratification in accordance with the relevant provisions of the internal law of the Kingdom of Cambodia regarding competence to conclude treaties.

Article 32*Entry into force

The present Agreement shall enter into force on the day after both parties have notified each other in writing that the legal requirements for entry into force have been complied with.

Done at [place] on [day, month] 2003 in two copies in the English language.

For the United Nations      For the Royal Government of Cambodia

In a 3 December report [A/58/617], the Secretary-General stated that the Agreement had been signed by the United Nations and the Government of Cambodia and was awaiting ratification through the Cambodian legislative process. In the meantime, a UN technical team would visit Cambodia to prepare a draft concept of operation, gather more precise cost parameters for an overall budget for the Chambers and ascertain the availability of facilities and utilities. A more substantive report would be submitted based on the team's findings. In conclusion, the Secretary-General expressed concern at the delays in the implementation of the Agreement and called on the Government to ensure that its ratification was accorded priority.

India-Pakistan

On 19 August, Pakistan addressed identical letters [A/58/298-S/2003/823] to the Presidents of the General Assembly and the Security Council, raising issues relating to peace and security in South Asia, in the context of India-Pakistan relations and the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. Although earlier in the year the two countries had taken steps to reduce tensions by restoring diplomatic relations at the level of High Commissioners (Ambassadors) and resuming transportation links, there had not been movement in resolving the outstanding differences between the two countries, especially over Jammu and Kashmir. Pakistan believed that the international community should urgently call on India to respond positively to Pakistan's proposals to revive the bilateral dialogue, install an effective ceasefire along the Line of Control in Kashmir, halt threatening statements and propaganda, stop its repression in Kashmir, reduce military deployments in the disputed State and evolve confidence-building measures with Pakistan to reduce the risk of accidental or deliberate conflict.

The final communiqué of the annual coordination meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 30 September) [A/58/415-S/2003/952] welcomed the measures taken by India and Pakistan to normalize their bilateral relations and urged India to enter into meaningful and result-oriented dialogue with Pakistan.

Korea question

On 24 January [S/2003/91], the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) transmitted to the President of the Security Council three statements. A letter from the DPRK Foreign Minister informed the Council of the Government's decision to put into effect its withdrawal from the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2373(XXII) [YUN 1968, p. 17], as the Government had decided in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 356]. The DPRK explained it would revoke the "suspension" on the withdrawal, which would come into effect. A statement issued by the Government on 10 January said that the United States had instigated the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to adopt a 6 January resolution demanding that the DPRK scrap its nuclear programme. Although it had pulled out of NPT, the DPRK had no intention of producing nuclear weapons. If the United States dropped its hostile policy towards it, the DPRK might allow a separate verification by the United States. The DPRK also forwarded a report of 21 January by the Korean Central News Agency on the circumstances and historical background of the DPRK's withdrawal from NPT.

On 26 June [S/2003/673], the DPRK transmitted to the Council President a statement by its Foreign Minister, which noted that one permanent member of the Council had sought to bring before it the nuclear issue on the Korean peninsula. The DPRK expressed its wish for bilateral, tripartite or multilateral talks with concerned parties and attached priority to the DPRK-United States bilateral talks. It stated that the Council should avoid giving any impression that it might apply double standards in the application of international instruments.

The DPRK, on 1 July [S/2003/681], forwarded to the Council a statement by the DPRK Chief of the Panmunjom Mission of the Korean People's Army, in which he stated that the United States was reinforcing its presence in the Republic of Korea. Its preparations for attack on the DPRK were in their final stage under the new strategy of "pre-emptive strike" instead of the previous "deterrence" strategy.

By a 28 July letter [S/2003/768], the DPRK transmitted a memorandum of the Panmunjom Mission of the DPRK Army on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the 1953 Korean Armistice Agreement [YUN 1953, p. 136]. The memorandum reviewed events on the Korean peninsula since the Agreement was signed, in particular the "hostile" policy against the DPRK adopted by the United States, and said that the United States had brought about nuclear threat and danger of war on the peninsula by having violated key provisions of the Agreement.

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, in a 20 February letter to the Secretary-General and the Council [S/2003/224], transmitted an initiative of Colonel Muammar Qaddafi on resolution of the Korean crisis through peaceful reunification on the peninsula.

India and the Russian Federation, on 21 November [A/58/611-S/2003/1134], transmitted to the Council and the General Assembly a joint declaration adopted during the visit of the Prime Minister of India, Atal Bihari Vajpayee, to the Russian Federation on 12 November. The two countries expressed support for efforts to pursue a peaceful solution to the nuclear problem on the Korean peninsula and to ensure its denuclearized status, including continuing six-way talks in Beijing, finding a mutually acceptable solution and further developing inter-Korean dialogue and cooperation.

Papua New Guinea

Significant progress was made in 2003 in UN efforts to resolve the conflict in the Papua New Guinea province of Bougainville, as implementation of the 2001 Bougainville Peace Agreement, concluded between the Government of Papua New Guinea and the Bougainville parties, entered its final stage. That Agreement, which had established the framework for a peace process, including a permanent ceasefire, as provided for in the 1998 Lincoln Agreement [YUN 1998, p. 319] and its annex, the Arawa Agreement [ibid.], covered issues of autonomy, the holding of a referendum and agreements on weapons disposal. The parties to the Peace Agreement completed phase II of the weapons disposal plan and reached agreement on the final disposal of the weapons collected, which allowed the United Nations Political Office in Bougainville (UNPOB) to carry out the necessary certification and verification. That set the stage for the next steps to be taken, particularly the entry into force of constitutional amendments to the Papua New Guinea constitution, which would lead to the drafting and presentation of a constitution for Bougainville, the delegation of police powers and expediting consultations on the functions of the interim provincial government and arrangements for elections. However, significant challenges remained, prompting the Secretary-General, in December, to accede to Papua New Guinea's request to maintain a UN presence on the island. The new mission, the United Nations Observer Mission in Papua New Guinea (UNOMB), would, among other functions, monitor the constitutional process leading to the adoption of a Bougainville constitution and verify and certify compliance by the parties with the weapons disposal plan. The Mission would work with UNDP, which would lead international reconstruction and rehabilitation efforts.

UNPOB activities

Report of Secretary-General. In March [S/2003/345], the Secretary-General, as requested by the Security Council in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 332], reported on the activities of UNPOB, including the remaining challenges and UNPOB's exit strategy. He stated that, following the 17 February adoption of an Action Plan for the Completion of Weapons Collection by political and former combatant leaders, 80.2 per cent of Bougainville had reached stage II of the weapons disposal plan under the Bougainville Peace Agreement and two districts had completely disarmed. Some 7.4 per cent of weapons had been destroyed ahead of the formal launch of stage III. Since the start of the Action Plan, the parties had re-contained one trunk of stolen weapons, held one stage I containment ceremony and scheduled more stage II containment ceremonies across the island. The parties to the peace process, the Bougainville Resistance Force (BRF) and the Bougainville Revolutionary Army (BRA), had scheduled separate discussions on the final fate of the collected weapons and were expected to reach a unified position on the matter. However, a major obstacle to completing weapons disposal was the continued non-involvement of Francis Ona and his Me'ekamu Defence Force (MDF) in the peace process, despite appeals by the parties to the Bougainville Peace Agreement. In the meantime, UNPOB was seeking ways to facilitate and expedite the completion of the stage II weapons collection in the shortest possible time.

On 1 February, the Bougainville Constitutional Commission released a draft constitution for Bougainville for island-wide consultations. On the basis of feedback, a second draft had been prepared and would be examined by the Joint Assembly of the Bougainville Interim Provincial Government and the Bougainville People's Congress. The draft would be returned to the Constitutional Commission following review by the bipartisan Ministerial Committee and the National Executive Council of the Government of Papua New Guinea. The text was expected to be finalized by the end of April and submitted for adoption to a Bougainville Constituent Assembly, which would be established on completion of stage II of weapons disposal. It was hoped that elections could then be held before the end of the year.

The Government of Papua New Guinea continued to demonstrate its commitment to implementing the Bougainville Peace Agreement. Following confidence-building cabinet-level visits to the island, the Government and the Bougainville parties signed a memorandum of understanding establishing a mechanism for consultations between them on all aspects of the autonomy arrangements, including the transfer of powers, functions and resources, and the settlement of disputes. An indication of the growing confidence between the two sides was the national Government's withdrawal on 26 March of its Defence Force from Bougainville, well ahead of schedule.

The regional Peace Monitoring Group, which had made a valuable contribution to the peace process since 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 319], including the provision of logistical support to weapons collection and meetings of the Peace Process Consultative Committee, informed the parties of its intention to cease all operations on 30 June and to withdraw thereafter. UNPOB was working to ensure that, by that date, weapons disposal would be so far advanced that it would no longer require that level of support. However, since the process was unlikely to be completed by that date, UNPOB was of the view that the parties should review the weapons disposal process and, if necessary, replace the Peace Monitoring Group with an alternative arrangement.

The Secretary-General indicated that, in accordance with its mandate, once UNPOB had verified that stage II of the weapons disposal plan had been completed, the constitutional amendments would enter into force, paving the way for the election of an autonomous Bougainville government by the end of 2003 and the closure of UNPOB. UNPOB was looking to UNDP and other UN agencies to take the lead in facilitating the reintegration and rehabilitation of former combatants and the restoration of community services and infrastructure. Consultations were being held with UNDP aimed at ensuring its valuable contribution to post-conflict peace-building, including the improvement of governance. To further solidify peace in Bougainville, the Secretary-General appealed to the donor community to continue its assistance to the island following the expected departure of UNPOB at the end of 2003.

Security Council consideration (March). On 28 March [S/PV.4728], the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Danilo Türk, updated the Security Council on developments in Bougainville. He informed the Council, which had before it the Secretary-General's report, that implementation of the Plan of Action for the Completion of Weapons Collection seemed to be proceeding well. Additional weapons had been retrieved and three new stage II containments had taken place. As a result of direct contacts with persons responsible for previous break-ins into the containers, it was expected that weapons removed would soon be returned. In several other districts, former combatants, acting on UNPOB's behalf, had been promoting reconciliation, settling issues and thus creating an atmosphere conducive to the containment of more weapons. The Assistant Secretary-General said that, after a decade of suffering, the people of Bougainville were working diligently to achieve a better future, giving confidence that, despite the remaining obstacles and political spoilers, particularly Mr. Ona, the Bougainville Peace Agreement could be fully implemented before the end of the year, allowing UNPOB to withdraw.

The Papua New Guinea representative told the Council that, with the active cooperation of ex-combatants, the break-ins and removal of weapons from containers that caused much concern in 2002 appeared to have ended and the national Government was cooperating with the police in providing financial and other support for efforts to provide security. The process was slow but UNPOB and the Peace Monitoring Group had been working hard to keep it moving ahead, as had the leaders of BRA and BRF. The Constitutional Commission had prepared a second draft of the proposed constitution, which was soon to be presented to the national Government. The Government had also appointed a high-level bipartisan National Committee to advise on its response to the Commission's proposals. The Defence Force was expected to complete its withdrawal from Bougainville under the agreed weapons disposal plan at about the same time. The establishment of the Interim Joint Supervisory Body was another initiative taken well before any legal requirement, and the two sides had already begun to cooperate in managing the implementation of the agreed autonomy arrangements. The national Government was making some $1.5 million available in 2003 and 2004 as an establishment grant to assist the autonomous Bougainville government in meeting start-up expenses. Reform in the public sector was proceeding in readiness for the establishment of the autonomous government, with the assistance of the international community. As with the deadline set for the end of the UN mission [YUN 2002, p. 332], the challenge posed by the planned withdrawal of the Peace Monitoring Group at the end of June was how to make the utmost use of its presence and conclude weapons disposal before the Group left. Its withdrawal would also leave a void for UNPOB, especially as far as communications, transport and technical support for weapons disposal were concerned. The Government believed that the stage III meeting to decide on the final fate of weapons should be brought forward.

The New Zealand representative said that it had noted UNPOB's intention to certify substantial compliance on the basis of affirmation from village and district communities in Bougainville that they were satisfied that the weapons in their areas had been contained and that the communities felt safe. UNPOB should formally declare that criterion without further delay and move quickly to certify that former combatants were in substantial compliance with stage II of weapons disposal as set out in the Bougainville Peace Agreement. There was currently a range of views on what the final fate of the weapons should be; New Zealand held the view that all weapons should be destroyed so that safety and security were not compromised by the return of weapons into the hands of those with criminal intent.

Completion of weapons disposal phase

Security Council consideration (August). The Head of UNPOB, Noel Sinclair, briefed the Security Council on 6 August [S/PV.4805]. He said that some dramatic steps had been taken since the last briefing to the Council, the most significant of which was the completion of stage II of weapons disposal, as required by the Bougainville Peace Agreement. Following an island-wide process of consultations to determine how the people of Bougainville felt as a result of what had been achieved, UNPOB informed the Peace Process Consultative Committee of its judgement that stage II of weapons disposal had come to an end and that the weapons disposal plan had served its purpose. On 30 July, UNPOB made that verification and certification to the national Government, which so advised the Governor General. It was expected that the Organic Law on Peace-Building in Bougainville would become fully operational shortly, setting the stage for the next steps to be taken, including the holding of elections for a Bougainville autonomous government. Consultations were taking place on those issues and a budget was being prepared for the funding of constitutional and electoral activities, including meetings of the Bougainville Constitutional Commission and of a constituent assembly.

Meanwhile, the process of weapons collection continued, and UNPOB was pushing ahead with its Operation Continuing Vigilance and Final Phase programmes. As to the final fate of the collected weapons, the national Government and BRF had indicated a preference for their destruction, while BRA preferred secure storage. UNPOB had been requested to preside over a consultation of the parties to seek a unified position on the question at the end of August. In the remaining months of its mandate, UNPOB would continue to ensure that the peace process kept moving forward. It was happy to have the support of the newly established Bougainville Transition Team, the successor to the Peace Monitoring Group, which completed its mission on 30 June. As responsibility for providing continuing international support for Bougainville peace consolidation efforts would devolve on UNDP, consultations were going on with a view to developing a joint approach for a smooth transition.

Mr. Sinclair observed that, with the completion of stage II of the weapons disposal plan, the parties had begun to talk seriously among themselves about stage III, for which a deadline of the middle of December had been set. The parties were also working to advance the autonomy aspects of the Peace Agreement, most importantly the finalization of a constitution and the holding of elections.

End of UNPOB and establishment of UNOMB

Security Council consideration (December). The Security Council, on 15 December [S/PV.4881], was briefed by the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs on the situation in Bougainville. He reported that, as a result of the completion of stage II of the weapons disposal programme, BRA and BRF had put more than 1,900 pieces of weapons into 16 secured containers and 68 trunks, with a key being held by the relevant commander and UNPOB pending a final decision on the fate of those weapons. The achievement of that important benchmark allowed the national Government to enact the constitutional amendment and the Organic Law on Peace-Building in Bougainville, which expedited consultations among the parties on the constitution, the delegation of police powers, functions of the interim provincial government and arrangements for elections.

As to the constitutional process, the Papua New Guinea Attorney-General presented his comments on the second draft of the Bougainville constitution in October and differences relating to the consistency between the second draft and the Papua New Guinea constitution were being resolved. On 5 December, the Papua New Guinea cabinet, the National Executive Council, reaffirmed its commitment to honour the Bougainville Peace Agreement and to implement corresponding laws. It was expected that the Bougainville constitution would be adopted during the first quarter of 2004 and endorsed by the national Government by midyear.

Regarding phase III of weapons disposal, BRA and BRG adopted a 30 November resolution declaring that the final fate of the contained weapons should be their destruction, to take place upon the finalization of the essential components of the peace process: the coming into force of the Bougainville constitution, the resolution of outstanding issues with MDF and reconciliation between MDF, and BRA and BRG. That unified position on weapons destruction would facilitate the meeting of the Peace Process Consultative Committee (16-17 December), at which the national Government and Bougainville leaders were expected to meet or modify some of the conditions enunciated by the Bougainville factions, thereby facilitating the adoption of the stage III decision on the final fate of the weapons. UNPOB had prepared a statement on the administrative and technical issues that needed to be addressed before the process of destruction could begin and was grateful for the offers of technical support pledged by regional partners to facilitate the process.

On the issue of police powers, the National Executive Council decided to delegate police powers and functions to the Bougainville interim provincial government, with the formal hand-over scheduled for 16 or 17 December. Meanwhile, arrangements were being finalized for further strengthening Bougainville's law and justice capacity through the deployment of 30 Bougainville police from the mainland and the recruitment of the first 50 to 100 Bougainvillean cadets for training. No progress was made on the so-called "no go zone", the area controlled by Francis Ona, who continued to refuse to contain MDF's weapons—a decision that could affect implementation of the BRA/BRG decision on the destruction of their weapons. Mr. Ona's supporters also maintained roadblocks to prevent the delivery of government services and development assistance to the zone.

Recalling the deadline set by the Council for the closure and withdrawal of UNPOB, the Assistant Secretary-General said that the peace process would not be completed by 31 December 2003 and the United Nations shared the view of Papua New Guinea, as expressed in its letter of 11 December to the Secretary-General, and of the Bougainville parties, that a UN presence in Bougainville was still required, albeit a downsized presence, given the maturity of the peace process and the limited tasks remaining. Moreover, since the Bougainville Transitional Team was scheduled to withdraw by the end of the year also, a continued UN political presence would contribute to building confidence among the parties in the peace process and give the autonomous government to be established a fair chance of starting out in an environment that provided a reasonable prospect for the continued strengthening of peace, security and stability on the island. The proposed successor mission, the United Nations Observer Mission in Bougainville (UNOMB), to be established for six months starting in January 2004, would have as its functions: chairing the Peace Process Consultative Committee, reporting on security and the subsequent destruction of contained weapons, monitoring the constitutional process leading to adoption of the Bougainville constitution, verifying and certifying substantial compliance by the parties with the weapons disposal plan, and performing other good offices as appropriate. Given that limited role, the UNPOB staff would be reduced from six to a head of mission, one political adviser and two support staff, and consultations were taking place on sharing office space with UNDP in Buka and Arawa, which would result in substantial savings in both instances. The new mission would continue to work with UNDP and other UN bodies on practical aspects of peace-building in Bougainville. UNDP was working on the second phase of its rehabilitation programme for Bougainville, which would include assistance in agriculture and capacity-building.

Communication. The Secretary-General, on 19 December [S/2003/1198], informed the Council President of his intention to establish, with the Council's concurrence, a small follow-on UN observer mission in Bougainville (UNOMB) for a period of six months, with the functions as outlined by the Assistant Secretary-General (above). On 23 December [S/2003/1199], the Council President informed the Secretary-General that Council members had taken note of his intention to establish UNOMB, and of the functions and staffing structure outlined.

Solomon Islands

Fiji, on behalf of the Pacific Islands Forum Group, transmitted to the Security Council President the Outcomes Statement of the Pacific Forum Foreign Affairs Ministers Meeting (Sydney, Australia, 30 June) [S/2003/753], which outlined the response of Forum members to a request from Solomon Islands for regional assistance in restoring peace and security. The Ministers agreed that the deterioration of law and order had undermined the country's stability and the situation called for a concerted regional response. In that regard, they welcomed an assistance package proposed by Australia.

On 31 July [S/2003/799], Solomon Islands forwarded documents relating to the Australia-led Regional Assistance Mission, which was deployed to Solomon Islands to restore law and order and economic recovery: a Solomon Islands government policy statement on Australia's offer of assistance; the Facilitation International Assistance Act 2003, adopted by Solomon Islands on 17 July to make provisions for assistance to restore law and order; and an Agreement between Australia, Fiji, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Solomon Islands and Tonga regarding the operations and status of the police and armed forces and other personnel deployed to Solomon Islands.

Tajikistan

The Secretary-General, on 8 May [S/2003/542], informed the Security Council of his intention to continue the activities of the United Nations Tajikistan Office of Peace-building (UNTOP) for another year, until 1 June 2004, in view of its role and the country's need for continuing support in its post-conflict peace-building efforts. The Council took note of his intention on 13 May [S/2003/543].

UNTOP was established in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 315] following the withdrawal of the United Nations Mission of Observers in Tajikistan (UNMOT). The Office continued to focus its activities during the year on the consolidation of peace and national reconciliation, promotion of the rule of law, strengthening of democratic institutions and support for national capacity-building in the area of human rights. The Secretary-General reported that during the preceding year, UNTOP continued a series of Political Discussion Club meetings, attended by a number of national and local government and military officials, and representatives of the business community, civil society and the media, which focused on issues of national reconciliation, good governance, economic reform, improvement of the electoral system, democratization of society and promotion of human rights. UNTOP played an important role in strengthening the rule of law in Tajikistan and continued its support for the social integration of ex-combatants and demobilized contractual soldiers through assistance for vocational training for 270 ex-combatants.

UNMOT financing

On 17 April [A/57/792], the Secretary-General issued the final performance report of the United Nations Mission of Observers in Tajikistan (UNMOT), whose mandate expired in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 314]. As at 30 June 2002, the total fund balance was $8,903,000. Uncollected assessments and other receivables totalled $1,552,000. The Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly suspend the return of cash available for credit to Member States in the light of the Organization's overall financial situation and the fact that, as at 15 March 2003, assessed contributions to peacekeeping in the amount of $1.5 billion remained unpaid.

Turkey

On 15 November, a suicide bomb attack against two synagogues in Istanbul, Turkey, killed 25 people. Five days later, double bomb attacks on the British consulate and the HSBC bank headquarters in Istanbul left many more dead and injured.

On 20 November, the Security Council, in resolution 1516(2003) (see p. 65), condemned the bomb attacks in Istanbul and other terrorist acts in various countries.

United Arab Emirates-Iran

Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa

The United Arab Emirates, in an 11 March letter to the Secretary-General [S/2003/302], requested that the Security Council retain on its agenda for 2003 the item entitled "Letter dated 3 December 1971 from the Permanent Representatives of Algeria, Iraq, the Libyan Arab Republic and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General (S/10409)", concerning Iran's occupation of three islands belonging to the United Arab Emirates, namely Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa, until a settlement of the related conflict was achieved by peaceful means through direct negotiation or through recourse to the International Court of Justice.

Chapter V

Europe and the Mediterranean

In 2003, the countries in post-conflict situations in Europe and the Mediterranean continued their slow and difficult progress towards the restoration of peace and stability by consolidating the progress made so far in re-establishing their governance institutions and social and economic infrastructure, especially in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo. However, many political issues and situations remained unresolved. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, through the efforts of the international community, currently led by the European Union (EU), a number of reforms were undertaken, particularly in the areas of the rule of law, refugee return and economic development, in accordance with European standards. The country thus moved one step closer to full integration into Europe through meeting the requirements of the EU Stabilization and Association Process and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Partnership for Peace. In the Kosovo province of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (renamed Serbia and Montenegro on 4 February), the United Nations continued to assist in efforts to build a modern, European, multi-ethnic society through the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK). Further progress was made in establishing the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government and in transferring authority to those institutions. By the end of the year, UNMIK had completed the transfer of all the competences under chapter V of the Constitutional Framework for Provisional Self-Government and had instituted a mechanism for involving Kosovo authorities in those competences reserved to the Special Representative, without prejudice to his authority. The Special Representative and the Security Council monitored progress made towards the fulfilment of the benchmarks for determining when the political process of deciding Kosovo's future status could begin. Advances were also made in normalizing relations between the two capitals, Belgrade and Pristina, when, on 14 October, dialogue was launched between them on matters of practical interest. That progress was marred, however, by several incidents of violence and crimes against minorities, which were condemned by the Council in December.

Efforts intensified to advance the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process. Senior officials of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General (France, Germany, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, United States) met twice in Geneva in an effort to overcome the political impasse and get the two parties to begin discussions of the 2001 Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi (Georgia's Government) and Sukhumi (the Abkhaz leadership) [YUN 2001, p. 386], which were intended to serve as a basis for substantial negotiations over the status of Abkhazia as a sovereign entity within the State of Georgia. That initiative was given a further boost by a March meeting between the Presidents of Georgia and the Russian Federation and a high-level meeting of the parties in July, which agreed to create working groups to address the issues of the return of refugees and internally displaced persons to the Gali district, the reopening of railway traffic between Sochi and Tbilisi and energy projects. Unfortunately, no progress was made with regard to the core political issue, as the Abkhaz side maintained its refusal to discuss the 2001 Basic Principles document. That process was further stalled by the complex political situation on both sides of the ceasefire line and events that led to the resignation of Georgia's President, Eduard Shevardnadze, in November.

No progress was made towards a settlement of the conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan over the Nagorny Karabakh region in Azerbaijan.

In the Mediterranean, the situation in Cyprus was marked by hope and disappointment. The direct talks initiated in 2002, which aimed to resolve the Cyprus question and lead to a reunited country, resumed, but stalled once again due to the wide differences between the two leaders. To further accommodate those differences, the Secretary-General, on 26 February, again revised his comprehensive settlement proposal "Basis for Agreement on a Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem", which required the two sides to commit themselves to finalizing negotiations by the end of February and to submit the plan for approval to separate simultaneous referendums on 30 March. In meetings with the Secretary-General in March in The Hague, the two leaders failed to reach agreement and the process came to an end. While the Secretary-General's plan remained on the table, he did not propose taking any new initiative until there was evidence that the political will existed for a successful outcome.

The former Yugoslavia

UN operations

In 2003, the United Nations maintained only one peacekeeping mission in the territories of the former Yugoslavia. Through the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK), it continued efforts to restore peace and stability to the province of Kosovo in Serbia and Montenegro (formerly the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia).

Financing and liquidation of closed peacekeeping operations

The financing of the United Nations Protection Force (UNPROFOR), which ended in 1999, the United Nations Confidence Restoration Operation in Croatia (UNCRO), which ended in 1996, the United Nations Preventive Deployment Force (UNPREDEP), which ended in 1999—known collectively as the United Nations Peace Forces (UNPF)—and UNPF headquarters (UNPF-HQ) was treated in the Secretary-General's April report on the updated financial position of closed peacekeeping missions as at 30 June 2002 [A/57/789] (see p. 85).

UNMIBH

In April [A/57/773], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) submitted its comments and recommendations on the 2002 performance report [YUN 2002, p. 365] on the budget for the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (UNMIBH), which ended on 31 December 2002, for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 [A/57/684]. ACABQ recommended that the unencumbered balance of $9,281,400, and the amount of $5,739,000 resulting from other income and adjustments, for that period be credited to Member States in a manner to be decided by the General Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/57/643/Add.1], adopted resolution 57/334 without vote [agenda item 147].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002, his report containing an overview of the financing of the United Nations peacekeeping operations and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1035(1995) of 21 December 1995 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1423(2002) of 12 July 2002, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 31 December 2002,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1437(2002) of 11 October 2002, in which the Council authorized the United Nations military observers to continue to monitor the demilitarization of the Prevlaka peninsula until 15 December 2002,

Recalling further its decision 50/481 of 11 April 1996 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was decision 57/559 of 20 December 2002,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to meet its outstanding liabilities,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina as at 31 March 2003, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 59 million United States dollars, representing some 6 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-three Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

4. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

5. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

6. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

7. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002;

8. Decides that Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission shall be credited their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 15,020,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the levels set out in its resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2002, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002;

9. Decides also that for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 15,020,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be set off against their outstanding obligations, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 8 above;

10. Decides further that the increase of 1,092,400 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 8 and 9 above, and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

11. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-eighth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina".

Bosnia and Herzegovina

In 2003, the international community continued to assist the two entities comprising the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina (the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (where mainly Bosnian Muslims (Bosniacs) and Bosnian Croats resided) and Republika Srpska (where mostly Bosnian Serbs resided)) in implementing the 1995 General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (the Peace Agreement) [YUN 1995, p. 544]. Those efforts were directed by the EU, following the conclusion and withdrawal of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (UNMIBH) in December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 359], and were accomplished through the activities of the Office of the High Representative for the implementation of the Peace Agreement, who was responsible for the Agreement's civilian aspects [YUN 1996, p. 293], and the European Union Police Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (EUPM), launched on 1 January 2003 to ensure follow-on to UNMIBH. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) continued to execute its responsibilities for the Agreement's military aspects, while the Peace Implementation Council (PIC) and its Steering Board continued to oversee and facilitate the Agreement's implementation.

The High Representative reported on the progress made in the Agreement's implementation process and related political developments during the year in the context of his Mission Implementation Plan, which set out a number of core tasks to be accomplished. Bosnia and Herzegovina undertook a number of reforms, particularly in the areas of the rule of law, refugee return and economic development, in accordance with European standards, allowing it to move one step closer to full integration into Europe through the EU Stabilization and Association Process and NATO's Partnership for Peace requirements.

Implementation of Peace Agreement

Civilian aspects

The civilian aspects of the 1995 Peace Agreement entailed a wide range of activities, including humanitarian aid, infrastructure rehabilitation, establishment of political and constitutional institutions, promoting respect for human rights and the holding of free and fair elections. The High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement, who chaired the PIC Steering Board and other key implementation bodies, was the final authority with regard to implementing the civilian aspects of the Peace Agreement [ibid., p. 547]. The reports on the activities of EUPM were submitted by the EU Secretary-General and High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy, Javier Solana, to the Security Council President through the UN Secretary-General.

Office of High Representative

Reports of High Representative. The High Representative, Lord Paddy Ashdown (United Kingdom), reported to the Council through the Secretary-General on the peace implementation process covering the periods from 12 October 2002 to 31 August 2003 [S/2003/918] and from 1 September to 31 December [S/2004/126] (for details on the reports' specific topics, see below).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 11 July [meeting 4786], the Security Council, having considered the High Representative's report [S/2002/1176] of 16 October 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 348], unanimously adopted resolution 1491 (2003). The draft [S/2003/697] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions concerning the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia and relevant statements by its President, including resolutions 1031 (1995) of 15 December 1995, 1088(1996) of 12 December 1996 and 1423(2002) of 12 July 2002,

Reaffirming its commitment to the political settlement of the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia, preserving the sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States there within their internationally recognized borders,

Emphasizing its full support for the continued role in Bosnia and Herzegovina of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina,

Underlining its commitment to support the implementation of the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as the relevant decisions of the Peace Implementation Council,

Emphasizing its appreciation to the High Representative, the Commander and personnel of the multinational Stabilization Force, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, and the personnel of other international organizations and agencies in Bosnia and Herzegovina for their contributions to the implementation of the Peace Agreement,

Emphasizing that a comprehensive and coordinated return of refugees and displaced persons throughout the region continues to be crucial to lasting peace,

Recalling the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council,

Taking note of the reports of the High Representative, including his latest report of 16 October 2002,

Determining that the situation in the region continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Determined to promote the peaceful resolution of the conflicts in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994 and the statement by its President of 9 February 2000 (S/PRST/2000/4),

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter,

I

1. Reaffirms once again its support for the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as for the Dayton Agreement on Implementing the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina of 10 November 1995, calls upon the parties to comply strictly with their obligations under those

Agreements, and expresses its intention to keep the implementation of the Peace Agreement, and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, under review;

2. Reiterates that the primary responsibility for the further successful implementation of the Peace Agreement lies with the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina themselves and that the continued willingness of the international community and major donors to assume the political, military and economic burden of implementation and reconstruction efforts will be determined by the compliance and active participation by all the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina in implementing the Peace Agreement and rebuilding a civil society, in particular in full cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, in strengthening joint institutions which foster the building of a fully functioning self-sustaining State able to integrate itself into the European structures, and in facilitating returns of refugees and displaced persons;

3. Reminds the parties once again that, in accordance with the Peace Agreement, they have committed themselves to cooperate fully with all entities involved in the implementation of this peace settlement, as described in the Peace Agreement, or which are otherwise authorized by the Security Council, including the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, as it carries out its responsibilities for dispensing justice impartially, and underlines that full cooperation by States and entities with the Tribunal includes, inter alia, the surrender for trial of all persons indicted by the Tribunal and the provision of information to assist in Tribunal investigations;

4. Emphasizes its full support for the continued role of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina in monitoring the implementation of the Peace Agreement and giving guidance to and coordinating the activities of the civilian organizations and agencies involved in assisting the parties to implement the Peace Agreement, and reaffirms that the High Representative is the final authority in the matter regarding the interpretation of annex 10 on civilian implementation of the Peace Agreement and that in case of dispute he may give his interpretation and make recommendations, and make binding decisions as he judges necessary on issues as elaborated by the Peace Implementation Council in Bonn on 9 and 10 December 1997;

5. Expresses its support for the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council;

6. Recognizes that the parties have authorized the multinational force referred to in paragraph 10 below to take such actions as required, including the use of necessary force, to ensure compliance with annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement;

7. Reaffirms its intention to keep the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina under close review, taking into account the reports submitted pursuant to paragraphs 18 and 20 below, and any recommendations those reports might include, and its readiness to consider the imposition of measures if any party fails significantly to meet its obligations under the Peace Agreement;

II

8. Pays tribute to those Member States which participated in the multinational Stabilization Force established in accordance with its resolution 1088(1996), and welcomes their willingness to assist the parties to the Peace Agreement by continuing to deploy a multinational stabilization force;

9. Notes the support of the parties to the Peace Agreement for the continuation of the Force, set out in the declaration of the ministerial meeting of the Peace Implementation Council in Madrid on 16 December 1998;

10. Authorizes the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the organization referred to in annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement to continue for a further planned period of twelve months the Force as established in accordance with its resolution 1088(1996) under unified command and control in order to fulfil the role specified in annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement, and expresses its intention to review the situation with a view to extending this authorization further, as necessary, in the light of developments in the implementation of the Peace Agreement and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina;

11. Also authorizes the Member States acting under paragraph 10 above to take all necessary measures to effect the implementation of and to ensure compliance with annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, stresses that the parties shall continue to be held equally responsible for compliance with that annex and shall be equally subject to such enforcement action by the Force as may be necessary to ensure implementation of that annex and the protection of the Force, and takes note that the parties have consented to the Force taking such measures;

12. Authorizes Member States to take all necessary measures, at the request of the Force, either in defence of the Force or to assist the Force in carrying out its mission, and recognizes the right of the Force to take all necessary measures to defend itself from attack or threat of attack;

13. Authorizes the Member States acting under paragraph 10 above, in accordance with annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, to take all necessary measures to ensure compliance with the rules and procedures established by the Commander of the Force, governing command and control of airspace over Bosnia and Herzegovina with respect to all civilian and military air traffic;

14. Requests the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina to cooperate with the Commander of the Force to ensure the effective management of the airports of Bosnia and Herzegovina, in the light of the responsibilities conferred on the Force by annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement with regard to the airspace of Bosnia and Herzegovina;

15. Demands that the parties respect the security and freedom of movement of the Force and other international personnel;

16. Invites all States, in particular those in the region, to continue to provide appropriate support and facilities, including transit facilities, for the Member States acting under paragraph 10 above;

17. Recalls all the agreements concerning the status of forces as referred to in appendix B to annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, and reminds the parties of their obligation to continue to comply therewith;

18. Requests the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the organization referred to in annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement to continue to report to the Security Council, through the appropriate channels and at least at monthly intervals;

19. Welcomes the deployment by the European Union of its Police Mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina since 1 January 2003;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit to the Council reports from the High Representative, in accordance with annex 10 of the Peace Agreement and the conclusions of the Peace Implementation Conference held in London on 4 and 5 December 1996, and later Peace Implementation Conferences, on the implementation of the Peace Agreement and in particular on compliance by the parties with their commitments under that Agreement;

21. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Mission implementation plan

The High Representative, in his September report [S/2003/918], said that the mission implementation plan of his Office, drawn up in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 359] and introduced in January 2003, had six core tasks: entrenching the rule of law; ensuring that extreme nationalists, war criminals and their organized criminal networks could not reverse peace implementation; reforming the economy; strengthening the capacity of governing institutions, especially at the State level; establishing State-level civilian command and control over the armed forces, reforming the security sector and paving the way for integration into the Euro-Atlantic framework; and promoting the sustainable return of refugees and displaced persons. Each task was divided into several sub-programmes, with departments within the Office responsible for defining and implementing the steps needed to achieve each goal.

A formal report on and assessment of the plan's first year of implementation was submitted in December to the PIC Steering Board for endorsement, said the High Representative in his later report [S/2004/126]. In the light of progress made, the core tasks were reduced from six to four: rule of law; economic reform; capacity strengthening of institutions; and establishing State-level civilian command and control of the armed forces. Each subprogramme of the updated plan identified a transition point for completing or handing over to a lead domestic authority. Overlaps with the priority goals set by the European Commission in its feasibility study and NATO in its Partnership for Peace requirements (see p. 402) were clarified.

Civil affairs

Communication. On 16 January [S/2003/81], the EU Presidency issued a statement welcoming the formation of the Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina for a four-year term of office, under the terms of the election law. It pledged to work closely with the new State Government, which should be genuinely committed to reform to move closer to the EU. In that context, a feasibility study by the European Commission would be the next step. The EU urged the new State Government to carry out all the reforms necessary for the EU's Stabilization and Association Process so that the country could move from stabilization to association. For that purpose, it had to speed up adoption of European rule-of-law standards, the functioning of State institutions, the fight against organized crime, the sustainable return of refugees and internally displaced persons, full cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and establishment of State-level civilian command and control over the armed forces.

Reports of High Representative. The High Representative, in his September report [S/2003/918], said that, following the October 2002 elections [YUN 2002, p. 349], the State-level Council of Ministers, led by Prime Minister Adnan Terzic, was in place. However, the administration was hampered by the constitutional dysfunction of the Council (the Prime Minister could not appoint or remove ministers) and the lack of capacity and support within the Council's institutions, resulting in limited legislative activity and the slow restructuring of ministries and bodies. The entity governments faced similar problems. In the Federation, the government of Canton 7 was not finalized until the end of June, while Herzegovina-Neretva Canton was the last self-governing unit in the entire country to put its elected government in place. In the divided city of Mostar, a commission, composed solely of local representatives, was established in the spring to explore options for a permanent statute for the city; by the beginning of August, it had achieved limited results. However, in Republika Srpska, major processes, such as the Independent Tax Commission, the Defence Reform Commission and the Intelligence Commission, were functioning smoothly.

The Defence Reform Commission, established by the High Representative on 9 May as part of efforts to correct the systematic weaknesses exposed by the scandal involving the illegal export of arms to Iraq by the Republika Srpska State-owned company, Orao, was mandated to propose reforms, principally to the command and control of the Bosnia and Herzegovina armed forces.

The entity defence laws and constitutions were also amended to ensure that a similar scandal did not arise again. The resignation of Mirko Sarovic as a member of the Bosnia and Herzegovina Presidency on 4 April, in the wake of that scandal, was a step towards establishing political accountability in the country.

In other developments, the Expert Commission on Intelligence Reform was launched at the end of May to make proposals for setting up a single intelligence structure. In that regard, the necessary legislative changes and other legal instruments in line with European democratic principles and practices were to be in place by mid-September. The terms of reference for the Secretary-General of the Standing Committee on Military Matters (SCMM) had been agreed upon and he had been invited to attend meetings of the Council of Ministers. The Committee's secretariat was to expand to allow it to operate as a fledgling ministry, coordinating with other ministries and acting on behalf of the State in matters of defence.

In a later report [S/2004/126], the High Representative said that the period from 1 September to 31 December was marked by political clashes between the Government and the opposition, coupled with growing tensions in the ruling coalition, dominated by the three national parties. Relations between the Party of Democratic Action (SDA) and the Nationalist Croat Democratic Party (HDZ) (the two main governing parties in the Federation) remained strained, thus sustaining parallelism along ethnic lines. Increasing political rivalry within the SDA leadership, in part triggered by the death of its founder and first President of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Alija Izetbegovic, had a particular impact on the Government of the Federation. Meanwhile, opposition parties from both entities were attempting to consolidate forces in advance of the October 2004 municipal elections, including through the signature of a joint platform, taking advantage of the country's continuing economic difficulties, and a common desire for early general elections.

In November, the European Commission, in its feasibility study on Bosnia and Herzegovina, said that it hoped to be able to recommend the opening of negotiations on a Stabilization and Association Agreement in 2004, on condition that the country made significant progress in a number of priority areas. In December, NATO issued clear benchmarks for the country's entry into the Partnership for Peace programme.

In December, two key institutions on defence and taxation, with Statewide competences, were established by the Bosnia and Herzegovina Parliament. The Defence Law gave the Bosnia and Herzegovina Presidency command and control of the armed forces across the country and established a Ministry of Defence for Bosnia and Herzegovina, while the Law on Indirect Taxation established the Statewide Indirect Taxation Authority (see p. 406).

On 15 September, following the failure of the Mostar City Council Commission to produce a new statute for the city, the High Representative established a Commission, chaired by Norbert Winterstein (Germany), to draft a permanent statute for the city. The Commission included members nominated by the Bosnia and Herzegovina political parties represented in the City Council, in addition to several local and international experts. Although agreement was reached on the majority of the items in the text of the new statute, two crucial questions—the system of elections and the status of the existing municipalities—prevented a final agreement from being reached. The Croat-dominated parties (led by HDZ) disagreed with the election system, while the Bosniac side (led by SDA) objected to the abolition of the municipalities. The Chairman proposed a compromise solution, by which an election system would be established that precluded domination of one group of people over another in the City Council, thereby protecting minority rights. The Office of the High Representative concurred with him that abolition of the municipalities was essential to unifying the city and preventing the continuation of the parallel structures that had divided Mostar along ethnic lines. In December, the High Representative asked the Commission to further explore ways to develop a permanent statute for Mostar by the end of January 2004, not ruling out the possibility of amendments to the Chairman's proposal. The interlocutors, including PIC members, agreed with the strategy of consultations and with the idea that, should the talks fail to produce a solution agreeable to the parties by the end of January, the High Representative would impose a new statute for Mostar.

The once-disputed Brcko district also moved forward in the latter part of the year, particularly in regard to judicial reform and property repossession. The Brcko Assembly adopted a long-awaited but controversial Election Law, enabling the Brcko Supervisor to schedule the District's first local elections, to be held together with the Bosnia and Herzegovina municipal elections planned for October 2004.

In the areas of security and defence, the Law on Defence (see above) was adopted, as recommended by the Defence Reform Commission. The Commission also made recommendations for a common law on the army of the Federation and the introduction of parliamentary democratic control over the armed forces, the downsizing of the defence establishment for economic reasons, and an explicit commitment by Bosnia and Herzegovina to achieving NATO membership. On 4 December, the North Atlantic Treaty Council noted that the passage of the Defence Law proved Bosnia and Herzegovina to be a credible candidate for the Partnership for Peace and emphasized that it looked forward to welcoming it into the Partnership once the conditions set by the Alliance had been met. In other developments, the Joint Defence and Steering Committee of Bosnia and Herzegovina's Parliamentary Assembly became operational, manifesting the principle of parliamentary oversight. The Presidency was urged to appoint key State-level positions quickly so that the Minister of Defence and Deputies would be in post by mid-February 2004. Preparations for the transition of the SCMM secretariat into a Ministry of Defence were initiated and progress was made towards its restructuring.

At the end of August, the expert Commission on Intelligence Reform finalized the draft law on the intelligence and security agency, which envisaged the creation of a single intelligence agency. In mid-September, the draft law was submitted to the Council of Ministers, which was reluctant to consider it. On 18 December, the High Representative submitted the draft law directly to the Bosnia and Herzegovina Parliamentary Assembly for adoption by 1 March 2004.

Srebrenica

The High Representative reported in September [S/2003/918] that phase I of construction on the Potocari burial site, identified in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 353] as the location of a cemetery and memorial for the victims of the July 1995 Srebrenica massacre [YUN 1995, p. 529], was completed at the end of January for the burials of up to 1,000 individuals. Phase II, which had started, involved the provision of grave sites for some 9,000 additional individuals and the construction of the Musala Mutual Crypt, with garden, service facilities and parking. The burials of the first 600 identified individuals took place on 31 March, and a further 400 were buried on 11 July.

On 25 March, at the request of surviving family members and following consultations with Republika Srpska authorities, the High Representative issued a decision transferring the ownership of the nearby Battery Factory site, proposed in 2002 to be added to the memorial site [YUN 2002, p. 347], to the Foundation of the Srebrenica-Potocari Memorial and Cemetery, and establishing a commission to determine the compensation to be paid by Republika Srpska to the Factory's current owners and users. The Foundation, in consultation with the families of victims, would determine the future use of the Battery Factory site. The Foundation raised some 3.5 million euros, which allowed work to begin at the site. The Human Rights Chamber, on 7 March, ordered the Republika Srpska Government to pay 2 million convertible marka (KM) by 7 September to the Foundation and another 500,000 KM each year for the next four years. Since families opposed such a decision, the Foundation's Executive Board agreed to proceed with its fund-raising activities and to consult families on how to use the funds to be paid by Republika Srpska. An additional 1.5 million euros was still needed to complete the project.

In his later report [S/2004/126], the High Representative stated that the opening ceremony of the Srebrenica-Potocari Memorial and Cemetery was held on 20 September, with former United States President William J. Clinton as the guest of honour. In conjunction with the ceremony, 107 identified individuals were buried at the site. On 28 October, the Executive Board of the Foundation appointed Beriz Belkic, a former member of the State Presidency, as co-chairman with Amor Masovic, head of the Federal Commission for Missing Persons and Exhumations, replacing the High Representative. On 6 December, the Executive Board appointed Mersed Smajlovic as Director of the Service of the Foundation, taking over from the Office of the High Representative, which continued to support and coordinate tasks until the end of 2003. In September, the Republika Srpska Government made its initial payment of 2 million KM (1 million euros) to the Foundation to compensate families of persons missing since the 1995 massacre.

On 8 September, Republika Srpska submitted a report to the Human Rights Chamber purporting to disclose information about the deceased and their whereabouts, but which still failed to provide sufficient information concerning the events that occurred during the 1995 massacre. At the urging of the High Representative, Republika Srpska, on 15 December, established the Srebrenica Commission to investigate and report on missing persons, among other duties. He indicated to the Republika Srpska President and Prime Minister on 19 December that the Commission should complete its task and publish its final report by 14 April 2004 and warned against any attempts to obstruct its work. He confirmed the nomination of Gordon Bacon as the Commission's chief of staff and Smail Cekic as its representative to the survivor community. Two international observers would also be part of the Commission. On 25 December, the Government of Republika Srpska appointed seven members to the Commission.

Judicial reform

The High Representative reported in September [S/2003/918] that further progress had been made in judicial reform, which was a priority of the programme of justice and jobs through reform outlined in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 348]. Implementation of the streamlined court system had started, with meetings held with the Ministers of Justice and courts visited to assess budget, space, renovation and equipment needs. On 1 November 2002, the High Representative imposed amendments to the laws establishing judicial training centres to make them operational and to begin the training of judges and prosecutors throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina. In December 2002, the High Judicial and Prosecutorial Councils (HJPCs) adopted two training programmes on criminal procedure for judges and prosecutors and established 13 disciplinary panels to hear complaints against incumbent judges and prosecutors. During the reporting period, 166 complaints were received and 23 judges submitted their resignations; 10 of them had been previously suspended by the High Representative.

On 16 January 2003, the Bosnia and Herzegovina HJPC appointed eight members to the Criminal Division of the State Court and a Chief Prosecutor and three assistants to the Prosecutor's Office. The Bosnia and Herzegovina Criminal Procedure Code, imposed on 24 January, entered into force on 1 March, together with the Criminal Code; it represented a significant advance in the process of reforming the criminal justice system and rendering the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina operative. The Rule of Law Pillar of the Office of the High Representative worked closely with the Prosecutor to resolve issues related to the new codes and to find additional resources to support the work of his Office. On 27 January, the newly appointed judges and prosecutors took their oaths of office and the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina officially occupied its newly renovated temporary facilities. International judges and prosecutors were currently being recruited to serve in the special criminal panels of the Court and the special division of the Prosecutor's Office.

A new Anti-Crime and Corruption Unit (formerly the Serious Crimes Unit) was created to provide the Office of the High Representative with broad support capabilities for the local prosecution, investigation and analysis of systemic organized crime and corruption. The Unit was guiding two major criminal investigation task forces, providing specialized support capacities, such as forensic audit work or specialized experts as court witnesses, and assisting in the assessment of cases to be transferred to the Prosecutor's Office as part of the implementation of the new Criminal Code and Criminal Procedure Code.

On 7 March, legal amendments were imposed in both entities to permit their banking agencies to freeze bank accounts of persons and firms providing financial support to persons impeding or obstructing implementation of the Peace Agreement. On 7 July, a further set of decisions was issued, freezing the bank accounts of several more individuals on suspicion of providing material support to Radovan Karadzic, who had been indicted by ICTY (YUN 1995, p. 1814).

The Rule of Law Pillar continued to discuss with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) and the Council of Europe the future of the Human Rights Chamber. In consultation with local officials, they devised a plan for processing the large backlog of pending cases of alleged human rights violations and to provide for future cases to be handled by other Bosnia and Herzegovina institutions. The plan was discussed with the Constitutional Court and the Human Rights Chamber to identify issues to be resolved during its implementation, and was presented to PIC in June.

In his later report [S/2004/126], the High Representative noted that PIC had endorsed the "road map" developed by the Rule of Law Pillar, the Constitutional Court, the Human Rights Chamber, Bosnia and Herzegovina officials at both the State and entity levels, and international organizations for transferring the mandate and some of the staff of the Human Rights Chamber to the Constitutional Court. An agreement to deal with the backlog of cases pending before the Human Rights Chamber and to redirect additional cases to the Constitutional Court was signed on 25 September.

In October, the Office of the High Representative worked with parliamentary leaders and Federation officials to secure the adoption by the Federation Parliament of the Civil Procedure Code, and the establishment of the State Information and Protection Agency. The draft laws relating to the Agency, which were awaiting parliamentary consideration, included an amendment to establish a State-level law enforcement agency, a law on police officials that would establish professional standards and procedures for all State-level law enforcement agencies, and laws on the prevention of money-laundering and witness protection.

The number of international judges serving on the special panel of the State Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina rose to five, while four international prosecutors were serving in the special department of the Prosecutor's Office. Amendments to the laws relating to the State Court and the Prosecutor's Office were enacted in October to remove the limits on the number of international judges and prosecutors in those bodies.

The Criminal Institutions and Prosecutorial Reform Unit continued to assist the ministries in both entities to address problems relating to court and prosecutorial restructuring, especially in developing rules for the operations of the special department of the Prosecutor's Office and the Special Chamber of the Court. The Unit presented a policy paper on the establishment of a civil asset forfeiture programme to PIC and drafted a proposed money-laundering law.

Negotiations among the Office of the High Representative, the Independent Judicial Council and Bosnia and Herzegovina officials resulted in a proposed agreement on creating a single, State-level HJPC. A draft law, which was submitted for parliamentary approval, provided for a representative and multi-ethnic HJPC, which would appoint and discipline judges and prosecutors, and regulate and supervise the administrative and budgetary affairs of the judiciary. The Independent Judicial Council developed a transition plan to phase out its own operations by the beginning of April 2004 and to shift them to the secretariat of the permanent national HJPC. The Office of the High Representative continued to advocate a single HJPC, in the face of substantial opposition from the Republika Srpska Government, as a critical step towards developing a strong and independent judiciary, free of political interference. In the meantime, Bosnia's current HJPCs, with the Independent Judicial Council acting as their secretariat, made steady progress in the reselection process for judges and prosecutors and in verifying all remaining applications. The HJPCs appointed 347 judges and prosecutors to 15 courts and six prosecutors' offices. At the end of 2003, approximately 550 appointments remained to be made before the 31 March 2004 deadline for establishing a single State-level HJPC. During the reporting period, 776 new complaints were received against judges and prosecutors. The HJPCs conducted several disciplinary proceedings.

The Office of the High Representative, through the Independent Judicial Council, continued to oversee the complete restructuring of the court system in Bosnia and Herzegovina. That process, scheduled for completion by April 2004, would significantly reduce the total number of judges (by 28 per cent), generate considerable savings (approximately 3.6 million euros annually) and involve 22 court mergers, 2 of which were successfully completed in the fourth quarter of 2003. Early in December, the final drafts of the entity laws on courts, which would harmonize the court structure of the entities to achieve uniformity throughout the country, were completed and sent to the Ministers of Justice to be submitted for parliamentary approval. The law on courts for the Federation would replace the 10 existing cantonal laws on courts. The minor offence court restructuring project to assess the entire system and provide recommendations for its future streamlining issued its preliminary report in December.

Economic reform and reconstruction

In September [S/2003/918], the High Representative reported that 13 decisions were issued on 21 October 2002 to help promote growth in Bosnia and Herzegovina through reforms in banking, statistics land registry, communications and other areas. To dismantle barriers to business growth and job creation, the Bulldozer Initiative was launched on 12 November 2002 to help businesses remove roadblocks and cut red tape. In December 2002, the Bulldozer Committee identified 50 such economic roadblocks, along with their respective legal solutions, which were presented to the State and entity authorities during the first quarter of 2003. Implementation committees coordinated by local business associations were set up to ensure proper reform implementation and follow-up. All 50 pieces of legislation were adopted by 4 June, and the domestic authorities assumed complete responsibility for the next phase of the project.

Other progress included the establishment in February 2003 of the Indirect Tax Policy Commission to promote a single customs service for Bosnia and Herzegovina and the adoption of a single State-level value added tax. On 1 July, the Commission agreed on a framework law to establish the Indirect Tax Authority (ITA), which would provide for the unification of the customs administrations in Bosnia and Herzegovina, ITA working methods and authority, and its Governing Board. That legislation was awaiting endorsement by the Council of Ministers and parliamentary approval. A number of other laws were passed, including a State-level veterinary law, a Federation forestry law and a law on telecommunications. Efforts were also made to implement the State Electricity Law.

In transportation, the State Licensing Commission commenced licensing of international and inter-entity bus services under the Law on International and Inter-entity Road Transportation. A draft of a new State law on the railways of Bosnia and Herzegovina was prepared for presentation to the Council of Ministers, which provided for State-level regulation of all railway operations. A new post of Minister of Communications and Transport was established under the new Council of Ministers structure.

In his later report [S/2004/126], the High Representative indicated that the second stage of the Bulldozer Initiative had begun; the Bulldozer Committee had identified an additional 50 economic roadblocks and discussed legal solutions to those impediments. The Office of the High Representative continued efforts to transfer the competency for the privatization of strategic enterprises from the canton to the Federation privatization agency, and to establish a single information point (web site) for privatization opportunities. Of the 15 enterprises scheduled for sale by tender by the end of 2003, 14 had been published, among which was the Holiday Inn Hotel in Sarajevo.

To capitalize on the momentum of the economic reforms, the Office identified several objectives for the next six months: full implementation of the indirect tax reforms without delay; creation of a single business registration system; and the drawing up of a comprehensive trade policy that promoted exports. Other priorities included the creation of and improvements to institutions and services supporting local businesses, such as the Foreign Investment Promotion Agency and the Standardization Institute; implementation of the domestic debt package; and acceleration of the privatization process by strengthening entity privatization agencies. On 29 December, the Parliament of Bosnia and Herzegovina adopted the Law on the Indirect Taxation System, which abolished the entity customs administrations and installed a unified Indirect Taxation Authority for the country.

The Office also oversaw an agreement on an internal debt plan for Bosnia and Herzegovina, which removed a major obstacle to investment and job creation. The State, entity and Brcko authorities agreed to settle outstanding financial claims held by citizens against the various governments, involving a combination of cash payments and bonds.

The audits of the three public telecommunications companies revealed patterns of mismanagement and incompetence. Laws on public enterprises, investment of public funds and public procurement were drafted to institutionalize management oversight and modern accounting standards. The Council of Ministers adopted laws establishing the Electricity Transmission

Company and the Independent System Operator, which were still awaiting parliamentary approval. Progress was made towards finalizing the legal framework in the utilities sector. In December, the Parliament adopted the Law on Civil Aviation, which was expected to come into force soon.

Public administration reform

In his September report [S/2003/918], the High Representative stated that the State Civil Service Agency had become fully operational on 23 January. Republika Srpska was setting up a similar agency with international technical and financial support, while the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina adopted legislation to set up its agency in May. The Office of the High Representative was working with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) to ensure that the Civil Service Agency was properly funded and staffed. Meanwhile, politically motivated replacements of members of governing boards of various public bodies and appointments to civil service positions were still taking place.

In his later report [S/2004/126], the High Representative said that, on 1 September, the public administration reform process was further strengthened by the appointment of a National Coordinator at the Ministry of Justice responsible for managing and overseeing the reform agenda; the reform process was presented to the PIC Steering Board in March 2003, including the development of a more efficient and affordable public administration, as a prerequisite for European integration. The Office of the High Representative was involved in the recruitment of the first Director of the Federation Civil Service Agency, and continued to supervise the final phase of the reform process, including the staffing and establishment of the Agency, and the full implementation of the legislation at the entity, cantonal and municipal levels. UNDP had pledged additional financial and technical support, but more funds were required.

Refugees

At the end of 2003, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) reported that the total number of registered returns to and within Bosnia and Herzegovina had risen to nearly 1 million people, including some 430,000 so-called minority returns. Approximately 350,000 refugees and displaced persons, as estimated by the Bosnia and Herzegovina Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees, still had not returned to their pre-war homes, although many among them still wanted to do so.

The High Representative noted in September [S/2003/918] that, on 30 January, PIC endorsed the strategy under annex VII of the Peace Agreement, drawn up by the Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities, UNHCR and his Office, to ensure continued progress in refugee returns. In addition to facilitating some 500,000 additional returns over the next four years, the strategy provided for the building of additional domestic capacity to take over eventually from international organizations, and called for the closure of the Reconstruction and Return Task Force of the Office of the High Representative by the end of 2003. Property law implementation progressed, reaching a country-wide repossession rate of 67 per cent. However, large urban centres, such as Sarajevo and Banja Luka, lagged behind entity averages of 71 and 61 per cent in the Federation and Republika Srpska, respectively. The current focus was on ensuring adequate budgeting for alternative accommodation in connection with the approximately 40,000 remaining property claims in the entities.

In his later report [S/2004/126], the High Representative said that there had been substantial completion of the property laws implementation, as indicated by a countrywide property repossession rate of over 90 per cent, with likely finalization in all Bosnia and Herzegovina municipalities early in 2004. While there were no major internal obstacles to achieving that goal, problems remained with those refugees in Bosnia and Herzegovina who were still unable to repossess property in their countries of origin and who continued to occupy the pre-war homes of Bosnia and Herzegovina citizens, including more than 20,000 Croatian Serbs. The High Representative welcomed recent commitments by Croatia to address that problem. The Office of the High Representative continued to transfer the responsibilities of the Commission for Real Property Claims to domestic authorities, including transferring the Commission's databases and records, putting in place entity legislation for the takeover of undecided claims, and identifying the body for reviewing the Commission's decisions. However, the Framework Agreement for realizing those activities was not signed, calling into question the actual transfer of the Commission's responsibilities and also some basic rights of the people of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

In preparation for the closure of the Refugee and Return Task Force on 31 December and the transfer of its annex VII responsibilities to the Bosnia and Herzegovina Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees authorities, the Office of the High Representative introduced a number of key legislative reforms, including amendments to the State law on refugees from and displaced persons in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The amendments, adopted by the Bosnia and Herzegovina Parliament on 30 September, identified the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees as the main policy-making and supervisory body for annex VII issues; established four regional centres (Banja Luka, Mostar, Sarajevo, Tuzla); strengthened the role of the Bosnia and Herzegovina Commission for Refugees and Displaced Persons as the main coordinating body between the State, entities and Brcko District; and established the Return Fund as a State-level institution responsible for the financial realization of return and reconstruction projects. After 31 December, the Office would retain a small annex VII Verification Unit to monitor the process and advise its domestic partners.

Significant progress was also made on sustainability, including putting in place a legal framework to ensure returnees' unbiased access to socio-economic facilities and opportunities. The Office continued developing information campaigns to inform returnees about the applicable laws and their rights under those laws, especially access to health care and reconnection to utility networks. It also developed a media programme and information booklet on agricultural production as a means of income to assist returnees, and was identifying alternative sources of funding for the ongoing return process.

Human rights

The High Representative, in September [S/2003/918], reported that, following discussions between ICTY and the Ministries of Justice, prosecutors of both entities and the State, and consultations with OSCE and the Council of Europe, recommendations for the domestic trial of war crimes in a special panel of the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina were presented to and approved by the PIC Steering Board of Political Directors on 12 June. The decision called for the establishment of a War Crimes Chamber within the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina and a war crimes department within the State Prosecutor's Office. The High Representative would establish and co-chair with Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities a Multi-Agency Implementation Task Force to coordinate implementation of the project.

In his later report [S/2004/126], the High Representative indicated that he had established that Task Force, which developed a detailed management plan. The working groups initiated by the Task Force general secretariat to address issues related to the establishment of the Chamber, such as legislation, witness protection and case review, met with all relevant national and international agencies. At its inaugural session on 5 December, members of the Joint Executive Board of the Implementation Task Force committed themselves to establishing the War Crimes Chamber and participating in the multi-agency working groups. The Office of the High Representative, EUPM and OSCE formed a group to monitor cases cleared by the ICTY "rules of the road" process of the 1996 Rome Agreement [YUN 1996, p. 1187] and returned to local law enforcement and prosecutorial agencies. The group would ensure that the cases were appropriately investigated and prosecuted after clearance by ICTY.

At a donors conference on 30 October, 15.7 million euros in pledges were made of the estimated 38 million euros needed for the operations of the War Crimes Chamber for the first two years.

The Security Council, in resolution 1503 (2003) of 28 August (see p. 1330), noted that the establishment of the War Crimes Chamber was a prerequisite to achieving the objectives of ICTY completion strategies (see below) and called on the donor community to support the High Representative in creating the special chamber within the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Security Council consideration (October). During the Security Council's consideration of the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina on 8 October [meeting 4837], the ICTY President, Judge Theodor Meron, said that the Sarajevo War Crimes Chamber would serve as a prerequisite for the success of ICTY's completion strategy—its plan for completing its mission within the time frame indicated by the Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2002/21 [YUN 2002, p. 1281]. Within that overall strategy, the establishment of an orderly process for transferring certain cases from ICTY to a judicial institution of an emerging Bosnian Government would play a vital role. The Chamber would contribute directly to the realization of the Office of the High Representative's mission implementation plan (see p. 401), contribute to the overall efforts of the Office to establish a firm foundation for the rule of law in the national institutions of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and ensure that the prosecution of war criminals took place in Bosnia and Herzegovina efficiently and fairly and in accordance with internationally recognized standards of due process.

Media issues

The High Representative reported in September [S/2003/918] that, on 31 December 2002, he had closed his Office's Media Development Department. He summarized the achievements made in implementing PIC directives regarding the media, and said that he would continue monitoring media developments and assisting where necessary. The mandate of the broadcasting agent in his Office expired on 30 June 2003 and the High Representative was working to ensure that Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities established a sustainable mechanism for financing the Communication Regulatory Agency to ensure its continued independence and the maintenance of European media standards. His Office was working also with the European Commission to monitor the adoption of legislation conforming to those standards. He had been encouraging Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities to take steps to ensure the long-term viability of a financially and editorially independent and integrated Statewide public broadcasting system sharing a common infrastructure.

Relations with other countries

A significant step was reached in Bosnia and Herzegovina/Croatia relations in January when Croatia ratified the provisionally applied agreement on the determination of border crossings of 6 April 2001. The Bosnia and Herzegovina presidency and Croatian President Stjepan Mesic agreed to complete pending procedures and negotiations regarding border issues and dual citizenship. In February, they initiated a draft agreement on the local border zone regime and the three annexes to the Co-location Treaty of 17 June 2002, which were awaiting the signature of their Foreign Ministers.

Bosnia and Herzegovina and Serbia and Montenegro (formerly the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia) ratified the October 2002 agreement on dual citizenship, which entered into force in both countries in December 2003. Also, heads of delegations to the commissions dealing with border issues initialled draft agreements on the local border zone regime and on a simplified regime to be applied in a zone in the eastern part of Bosnia and Herzegovina enmeshed in the territory of Serbia and Montenegro.

Progress was made towards reconciliation between Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia and Montenegro. On 10 September, Serbia and Montenegro President Svetozar Marovic publicly apologized to Croatian President Mesic, during his trip to Belgrade, for atrocities committed against Croatian citizens during the war, which broke out in the former Yugoslavia in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 214], and to the people of Bosnia and Herzegovina on 13 November during the Inter-State Cooperation Council meeting. On 2 October, the three countries signed the Protocol on the Three-Point Border between the countries, establishing two points where their borders met and proclaiming that those borders could not be changed. Bosnia and Herzegovina simplified the movement of people among the three countries by signing bilateral agreements separately with Croatia and with Serbia and Montenegro.

European Union Police Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina

Reports of EU Secretary-General. As requested by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2002/33 [YUN 2002, p. 363], the EU Secretary-General and High Representative for Common Foreign and Security Policy submitted two reports on the activities of the EU Police Mission (EUPM) covering the periods 1 January to 30 June [S/2003/732] and 1 July to 31 December [S/2004/106]. As at 31 December, the Mission comprised 861 personnel, including 471 civilian police officers, 58 international civilians and 322 national staff. Participants from all 15 EU member States and 18 non-EU contributing States were co-located with their Bosnia and Herzegovina counterparts in 47 locations.

In the first report, the EU Secretary-General said that EUPM began operations on 1 January upon the completion of the UNMIBH International Police Task Force (IPTF) mandate [YUN 2002, p. 362]. The transition from IPTF to EUPM concluded on 30 June when the UN liquidation team terminated its mission. EUPM's mandate was to establish sustainable policing arrangements under Bosnia and Herzegovina ownership, in accordance with European and international practice. Its goals were to preserve the levels of institutional and professional proficiency achieved during IPTF's mission, enhance police managerial and operational capacities, strengthen police professionalism at senior levels and within ministries, and monitor the exercise of political control over the police. EUPM was supported by the European Commission's institution-building programme. It launched seven programmes: crime police; criminal justice; internal affairs; police administration; public order and security; the State Border Service (SBS); and the State Information and Protection Agency (SIPA). Its operational priorities were returnee security and the fight against organized crime; another focus was the development of State-level institutions. While SBS had been established at all border points, SIPA had yet to become operational. EUPM was working with the Office of the High Representative to set up the Agency and to expand its powers to include investigative capacities.

The most significant challenge to EUPM was the repeated attempts to call into question the IPTF police certification process [YUN 2002, p. 353]. The UN Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, at the request of the EU Secretary-General, issued on 28 May a clear statement on the final and binding nature of the Bosnia and Herzegovina police certification process. EUPM remained firm that the certification process concluded with the end of the IPTF mission and its decisions on certification were binding; it refused to reopen cases or accept appeals against those decisions.

In his later report [S/2004/106], the EU Secretary-General said that, as noted in a recent European Commission feasibility study on Bosnia and Herzegovina's preparedness to negotiate a Stabilization and Association Agreement with the EU, policing in the country had improved, as had management capacity and understanding and cooperation between police services and other enforcement agencies. In November, for the first time, a joint operation was conducted by the Federation, Republika Srpska and the Brcko District Police. SBS had also improved its operational cooperation with local police forces, and inter-cantonal coordination was much enhanced. The Bosnia and Herzegovina Police Steering Board, comprising the heads of SIPA and SBS, the Police Director of the two entities, the Brcko Chief of Police and the EUPM Police Head of Mission, was established with the aim of advancing the changes required to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the police under local ownership and to promote synergies, coordination and cooperation between the different police forces.

Implementation of two EUPM projects on major and organized crime, and on the fight and intervention against human trafficking had produced improved police and SBS performance in tackling car theft, drug seizures and human trafficking. The local police forces' ability to fight organized crime had improved, but their capacity to fight it in a coherent and coordinated way was still limited, especially since their structure and size were financially and operationally inefficient.

One of the major challenges during the last quarter of 2003 was political interference in the police in the Federation, which prompted the holding of a press conference on 29 October by the High Representative and the EUPM Police Head of Mission, during which they drew attention to the issue. Their engagement, together with the involvement of senior Bosnia and Herzegovina and Federation officials, helped to stem the problem. EUPM remained vigilant and would continue to work towards the eradication of undue political influence or interference in policing. Challenges to and attempts to overturn the IPTF certification process continued, with some local courts declaring the dismissal of former police officers null and void because the Ministry of the Interior did not apply domestic legislation. The UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the Office of the High Representative, the UN representative in Bosnia and Herzegovina and EUPM agreed that UN Headquarters would examine the specifics of the issue before coming to a final assessment on how to deal with it.

Military aspects

Stabilization Force

Under the command of NATO, the multinational Stabilization Force (SFOR), also known as Operation Joint Guard, continued in 2003 to oversee the implementation of the military aspects of the 1995 Peace Agreement. Its activities from 1 December 2002 to 31 December 2003 were recorded in 11 reports [S/2003/103, S/2003/377, S/2003/512, S/2003/615, S/2003/679, S/2003/780, S/2003/851, S/2003/928, S/2003/1159, S/2004/34, S/2004/97], submitted by the NATO Secretary-General through the UN Secretary-General to the Security Council, in accordance with Council resolution 1088(1996) [YUN 1996, p. 310].

SFOR's strength decreased during the year from 12,500 troops in December 2002 to just over 11,400 in December 2003. The Council, by resolution 1491(2003) of 11 July (see p. 400), authorized the continuation of SFOR for a further period of 12 months.

During the year, SFOR continued to contribute to the maintenance of a safe and secure environment in Bosnia and Herzegovina, monitor compliance by the entity armed forces, conduct inspections and monitor consolidation of weapons storage sites, support international organizations and the Federation authorities in collecting weapons and ammunition (Operation Harvest), and monitor possible terrorist-related threats. It also conducted searches for war crime indictees, detaining Naser Oric on 10 April, Miloslav Deronjic in July and Enes Sakrac in August. On 15 October, SFOR launched a large-scale operation to support some 100 ICTY representatives searching for evidence to help prosecute war crime indictees held in the Detention Unit.

In April, President Dragan Cavic of Republika Srpska requested SFOR assistance in conducting a weapons amnesty similar to Operation Harvest in his entity. SFOR acknowledged the proposals from both entities for a national campaign and recommended that an operation be initiated by the tri-presidency and conducted through the Bosnia and Herzegovina chain of command, with monitoring by SFOR.

On 22 April, at a meeting hosted by SFOR, the Federation Minister of Defence and the Chiefs of General Staff of the Federation and Republika Srpska armies discussed the restructuring of the armed forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina to bring them under effective civilian control, as mandated by the High Representative (see p. 401). In July, the Defence Reform Commission was working on proposed legislative changes and the Joint Military Commission was helping the armed forces to prepare detailed restructuring plans. In June, representatives of the Federation and Republika Srpska agreed to form a national-level Joint Armed Forces Headquarters. On 21 August, the Republika Srpska Army (VRS) announced plans to close 32 accommodation sites and reduce the number of ammunition depots from 19 to 8. The Government of Bosnia and Herzegovina completed a review of its conscription policy and announced plans to reduce the period of military service from six to five months; a further reduction to four months was being considered. On 28 November, the Republika Srpska National Assembly passed eight amendments to the Constitution related to defence reform. The jurisdiction over the command of VRS was transferred from the entity President to the tri-presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the right to declare war was transferred from the Assembly to the State level. On 11 December, the Assembly agreed on a draft defence reform law establishing the subordination of the military to the civilian authority of Bosnia and Herzegovina. That action created the legal basis to integrate the Bosnian Ministry of Defence into the structure of an overall Bosnia and Herzegovina military command, conforming to NATO's Partnership for Peace requirement of establishing a supreme command under the civilian control of the Bosnia and Herzegovina tri-presidency.

Serbia and Montenegro

In 2003, the United Nations continued to assist the authorities and people of the Kosovo province of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) (renamed Serbia and Montenegro on 4 February) in their efforts to build a modern, European, multi-ethnic society. The United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) co-operated with the Kosovo authorities in establishing the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, mainly the Kosovo Assembly and the Kosovo Government, and in transferring authority to those institutions, in accordance with the 2001 Constitutional Framework for Provisional Self-Government [YUN 2001, p. 352]. By the end of the year, UNMIK had completed the transfer of all the competences under chapter V of the Constitutional Framework and had instituted a mechanism for involving Kosovo authorities in the competences reserved to the Special Representative of the Secretary-General under chapter VIII, without prejudice to his authority.

The Special Representative and the Security Council monitored the progress made towards the fulfilment of the benchmarks established by the Special Representative in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 369], as part of the "standards before status" policy [ibid., p. 372] for determining when the political process of deciding Kosovo's future status could begin. In that regard, a mechanism to review the progress of the Provisional Institutions in meeting those benchmarks was established, involving quarterly reviews and leading to a comprehensive review in 2005. To facilitate that process, the Special Representative and the Kosovo Prime Minister launched the "standards for Kosovo" document, setting out in clear and detailed terms the goals Kosovo had to reach. The Council, in December, welcomed the launch of the review mechanism and supported the "standards for Kosovo" document. Progress was made in reaching the objectives of one of the most challenging benchmarks, normalization of relations with Belgrade. On 14 October, dialogue on matters of practical interest between the two capitals, Belgrade and Pristina, was launched, although not with the full representation expected. Minority returns increased, reaching a total of 3,629; some were returning to areas where it would have been previously impossible. However, violence and crimes against minorities continued and were condemned by Council members in a number of press statements. Progress continued in meeting the other benchmarks: economic reconstruction was strengthened as Kosovo established its economic legislative framework; the privatization process was set in motion; and efforts continued to put a functioning and representative justice and rule-of-law system in place by consolidating Kosovo's law enforcement and judiciary structures. However, progress in other areas was hindered by Belgrade's support for parallel administrative structures in Kosovo, inadequate minority representation in Kosovo's institutions at both the central and municipal levels, the politicization of the civil service, and the overstepping of competences by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government.

New union of Serbia and Montenegro. In accordance with the constitutional arrangement signed by the leaders of the FRY constituent Republics of Serbia and Montenegro in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 383], the constitutional charter for the new union of Serbia and Montenegro was adopted by the legislature of each Republic in January 2003 and adopted and proclaimed by the FRY parliament on 4 February. On that date FRY ceased to exist and was succeeded by Serbia and Montenegro.

Situation in Kosovo

The United Nations continued to work towards the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], which set out the modalities for a political solution to the crisis in the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo, and of resolutions 1160(1998) [YUN 1998, p. 369], 1199(1998) [ibid., p. 377], 1203(1998) [ibid., p. 382] and 1239(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 349]. The civilian aspects of resolution 1244(1999) were being implemented by UNMIK and the military aspects by the international security presence (KFOR).

Appointment of Special Representative. UNMIK was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General. On 24 July, the Secretary-General appointed Harri Holkeri (Finland) to replace Michael Steiner (Germany) in that position [S/2003/761]. The Security Council took note of the appointment on 28 July [S/2003/762].

Establishment and transfer of authority to provisional institutions of self-government

In 2003, the United Nations, through UNMIK, continued to assist the Kosovo authorities in establishing the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government (the Kosovo Assembly and the Kosovo Government) and transferring authority from UNMIK to those institutions, in accordance with the Constitutional Framework for Provisional Self-Government adopted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 352].

Report of Secretary-General (January). In a January report on UNMIK [S/2003/113], the Secretary-General said that progress in transferring executive functions from international staff to Kosovo civil servants varied between the ministries, depending on their organizational structure and ability to recruit and retain qualified staff. Senior staff appointments were delayed, owing to, among other things, difficulties in identifying suitable candidates willing to accept a comparatively low salary and the politicization of senior civil servant posts. Nearly 50 per cent of senior Kosovo civil servant posts remained unfilled, requiring international staff to remain in line functions in some ministries. The level of minority community representation in most of the central bodies averaged less than 6 per cent, while minority community employment in the civil service at the municipal level averaged 12 per cent. The highest representation in municipal structures was in the Gnjilane region, where four out of five mixed municipalities reflected an acceptable level (12 per cent) of minority employment; the lowest was in the Pec region.

The transfer of responsibilities was also hindered by the lack of appropriate rules and procedures and non-adherence to existing rules, including rules of executive business of the Government, office procedure for the ministries, rules for delegation of financial and administrative powers, pay rules and accounting guidelines. UNMIK had drafted provisional rules for some of those areas and encouraged the relevant ministries to draft the rules within their purview.

Government meetings and Assembly sessions towards the end of 2002 were characterized by an increasing desire to encroach on the powers reserved for the Special Representative, such as the power to set budgetary parameters. On 15 January 2003, in the face of adverse public reaction to an income tax increase, the Government issued a statement distancing itself from the increase, which it had previously agreed to in the Economic and Fiscal Council in mid-October 2002. It called for the postponement of the implementation of the relevant regulation (UNMIK regulation 2002/4) until the Law on Financial Management and Accountability was promulgated and recommended the continuation of 2002 taxation levels until that time. In an extraordinary session on 24 January 2003, the Economic and Fiscal Council endorsed a revised scale of personal income tax rates presented by the Government and agreed to by the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Despite a stated commitment by the Provisional Institutions, particularly the Government, to fulfilling the benchmarks (referred to as "standards before status" policy) for Kosovo's future status [YUN 2002, p. 369], some Kosovo Albanian Cabinet members publicly distanced themselves from them. Despite consultations on the benchmarks, the Provisional Institutions remained reluctant to engage. Moreover, several of the New Year messages of leading Kosovo Albanian politicians called for independence in 2003. On the other hand, the majority of Kosovo Serb leaders endorsed the "standards before status" approach and took a firm stance that status should not be negotiated before the standards had been reached. However, in January 2003, the Prime Minister of Serbia called for final status negotiations to begin during the year.

The beginning of 2003 saw renewed tensions among the Kosovo Albanian coalition partners, specifically between the Democratic League of Kosovo, on the one hand, and the Democratic Party of Kosovo and the Alliance for the Future of Kosovo, on the other.

The Assembly, with the assistance of the Institution-Building Pillar's Assembly Support Initiative, formed the rudimentary structures needed for a functioning parliament. On 9 January, the Assembly adopted its rules of procedure, which UNMIK was currently reviewing to ensure compliance with the Constitutional Framework. It had become apparent that 18 committees for a 120-member Assembly was a cumbersome structure and that the work of the committees would benefit from technical expertise and public hearings. It was also difficult for the representatives of the smaller minority groups to participate adequately in committee work, thus limiting their participation in the legislative process in some areas. UNMIK initiated the formal monitoring of Assembly proceedings to ensure compliance with the Constitutional Framework and the provisional rules of procedure, with particular emphasis on respect for the rights of communities, and to make recommendations for corrective action.

Security Council consideration (February). The Secretary-General's Special Representative for Kosovo and Head of UNMIK, Michael Steiner, briefed the Security Council on 6 February [meeting 4702], during its consideration of the Secretary-General's January report on UNMIK (see p. 412). He noted that much had been accomplished in the preceding 12 months. To achieve further progress, UNMIK intended to focus in 2003 on: standards; the three priorities of jobs, security and real multi-ethnicity; the transfer of power; the establishment of direct dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade; and preparation for European integration. Within that strategy, UNMIK would concentrate on the standards required for a decent life in Kosovo, including intensifying its fight against organized crime, corruption and politically motivated violence, with the participation of the Kosovo Police Service. Unemployment continued to be the number-one concern, but the creation of jobs depended on being able to create an appropriate investment climate. With the cooperation of the Government, the Special Representative undertook to develop the legal system, institutions and basis for property rights to generate investor confidence and to open an office to speed up registration and legal requirements to facilitate business investment.

The Special Representative was concerned about ethnically defined interest politics on the part of Kosovo Albanians, Kosovo Serbs and Belgrade. Parallel structures could not be allowed to operate. While the entire Mitrovica region had been brought under international control [YUN 2002, p. 374], Belgrade continued to support structures that operated on a mono-ethnic basis and to focus exclusively on Kosovo's Serb population. By the same token, the majority Albanian community had failed to take ownership of the interests of the Kosovo Serb community and other minorities. Kosovo had to prove that it was creating a multi-ethnic society where every Kosovan, regardless of ethnic origin, could live in security and dignity.

As to the transfer of power, the Special Representative indicated his readiness to hand over all competences legally permissible to the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government by the end of 2003. However, they had to make progress in meeting the benchmarks for Kosovo's future, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 369], and to demonstrate their ability to handle added responsibilities and accomplish things. The municipalities had had over two years of running local affairs; UNMIK would soon be able to fully hand over executive responsibilities to the most successful municipalities and withdraw into a monitoring and oversight function. At the central level, UNMIK was reviewing the effectiveness of the handover of real responsibility in the transferred areas to identify, with the Provisional Institutions, all other areas that could be transferred in 2003. Less than one year had passed since the Government was set up and effective checks and balances between the executive, the legislative, the judiciary and the media were still lacking. In addition, minority protection was still weak throughout the institutions.

The Special Representative said that it was time to lay the groundwork for the political process leading towards finally resolving Kosovo's status. Dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade on issues of mutual interest was necessary and would facilitate the political dialogue at a later stage.

Noting the EU intention to outline a more energetic policy towards the Balkans, the Special Representative said that any engagement by the international community should be matched by an equal engagement of local partners in fulfilling the standards of a functioning democratic society.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 6 February [meeting 4703], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2003/1 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its continued commitment to the full and effective implementation of its resolution 1244(1999) of 10 June 1999. The Council notes the transformation of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia into Serbia and Montenegro and, in this context, reaffirms that resolution 1244(1999) remains fully valid in all its aspects. Resolution 1244(1999) continues to be the basis of the policy of the international community on Kosovo.

The Council further reaffirms its commitment to the objective of a multi-ethnic and democratic Kosovo and calls upon all communities to work towards this goal and actively participate in the public institutions as well as the decision-making process, and integrate into society. It condemns all attempts to establish and maintain structures and institutions as well as initiatives that are inconsistent with resolution 1244(1999) and the Constitutional Framework for Provisional Self-Government in Kosovo. The Council calls for the authority of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo to be respected throughout Kosovo, and welcomes the establishment of the authority of the Mission in the northern part of Mitrovica. It encourages the establishment of direct dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade on issues of practical importance to both sides.

The Council condemns the violence within the Kosovo Albanian community, as well as the violence against the Kosovo Serb community. It urges local institutions and leaders to exert influence on the climate for the rule of law by condemning all violence and actively supporting the efforts of the police and the judiciary. It underlines the responsibility of the majority to make the minority communities feel that Kosovo is their home too, and that the laws apply equally to everyone. The minority community representatives must join and work within the institutions to benefit from them. The Council stresses that all communities must make renewed efforts to inject momentum into improving inter-ethnic dialogue and promoting the reconciliation process, not least through full cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991.

The Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Mission and recent developments in Kosovo and the briefing of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the status of implementation of the benchmarks for Kosovo. The Council reiterates its full support for the "standards before status" policy with postulated targets in the eight key areas: functioning of democratic institutions, the rule of law, freedom of movement, the return of refugees and internally displaced persons, the economy, property rights, dialogue with Belgrade, and the Kosovo Protection Corps. The Council welcomes the presentation of a detailed plan for its implementation that will provide the appropriate baseline against which progress can be measured, as discussed with the Special Representative of the Secretary-General during the Security Council mission in December 2002. The fulfilment of these targets is essential to commencing a political process designed to determine the future of Kosovo, in accordance with resolution 1244 (1999). The Council strongly rejects unilateral initiatives which may jeopardize stability and the normalization process not only in Kosovo but also in the entire region. It urges all political leaders in Kosovo and in the region to shoulder responsibility for democratization, peace and stability in the region by rejecting all initiatives contravening resolution 1244 (1999). The Council rejects any attempts to exploit the question of the future of Kosovo for other political ends.

The Council welcomes the progress made in 2002, as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General. It supports the continued efforts of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, including in such priority areas as revitalizing the economy through investment, combating crime and illegal trafficking, and building a multi-ethnic society, while ensuring conditions for the sustainable return of refugees and internally displaced persons.

The Council welcomes the intention of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General to transfer remaining competencies to the provisional institutions of self-government by the end of the year, except those reserved for the Special Representative of the Secretary-General under resolution 1244(1999). It calls upon the Kosovo provisional institutions of self-government as well as all Kosovars to take on their responsibilities and genuinely cooperate for this transfer to be successful.

The Council reiterates its full support for the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and urges Kosovo's leaders once again to work in close cooperation with the Mission and the Kosovo Force for a better future for Kosovo and stability in the region.

Report of Secretary-General (April). The Secretary-General reported on 14 April [S/2003/421] that Kosovo still had some way to go in establishing representative and functioning institutions. During the first three months of 2003, the Kosovo Provisional Government took 36 policy decisions, of which 16 involved legislation. Ten draft laws were submitted to the Kosovo Assembly for review, four of which were adopted. Ad hoc inter-ministerial committees were formed on war damages, missing persons, the review of personal income tax, the levelling of public sector wages, and the transfer of responsibilities.

Although regular weekly meetings of the Kosovo Assembly continued to take place, they were affected by boycotts by both Kosovo Albanian and Kosovo Serb parties. The three major Kosovo Albanian parties and the non-Serb minorities signed a joint statement, presented to the Assembly, stating that the declaration of independence would be dealt with at a later meeting. At its 3 April meeting, the Assembly adopted the position that the Provisional Institutions should implement a law on higher education, which it had adopted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 372], even though it had not been promulgated by the Special Representative. The Special Representative issued a determination stating that the Assembly's position on that subject was without legal effect, which was supported by the Security Council in a 14 April press statement [SC/7729].

The Senior Public Appointments Committee completed the recruitment of 80 per cent of senior civil servants, including the first female Permanent Secretary, through competitive examinations. At the central level, the recruitment process complied with the Civil Service Law and minority requirements were met in setting up selection panels. However, there was a perception by civil servants that their career depended on political allegiance more than on professional skills, leading to an alignment of civil servants along party lines. The recruitment of minority representatives at the central level progressed, averaging some 13 per cent by the end of March, compared to less than 6 per cent at the beginning of the year. At the management levels, minority employment reached some 19 per cent overall. However, minority employment in most of the public and socially owned enterprises remained unsatisfactory, with less than 1 per cent employed in most public enterprises. Institutional mechanisms in support of minority participation in the civil service at the central level were further strengthened through legislation and administrative support, such as the outreach programme initiated by the Office of the Prime Minister, which resulted in a ninefold increase in minority applications, the establishment of gender/equal opportunity focal points within ministries, and a range of legal mechanisms, such as appeal procedures and fair and transparent recruitment, announced in a government administrative directive.

At the municipal level, the Gnjilane region had the best record in achieving employment goals, with three municipalities having acceptable levels of minority representation. The functioning of inter-ethnic municipal administrations varied considerably. In Kamenica, Gnjilane, Novo Brdo (all in the Gnjilane region) and Kosovo Polje (Pristina region), the municipalities' joint administrations functioned at a reasonable level. Kosovo Serbs had not taken up municipal positions in Vitina municipality (Gnjilane region), owing to several security incidents. Positions reserved for them in Lipljan municipality (Pristina region) remained vacant, as no suitable candidate had applied. Two unions of Kosovo Serb-majority municipalities were formed, the first in northern Mitrovica and the second in eastern Kosovo. UNMIK did not recognize either union as a legitimate structure, as they were based on mono-ethnicity. The UNMIK administration in Mitrovica made progress in establishing its administrative structure and in providing administration and public services in the northern part of Mitrovica city.

Much remained to be done to foster responsible and professional media. Some of the local press continued to publish inflammatory and sensational reports and to present inaccurate or provocative information. The Temporary Media Commissioner was working to ensure that retractions were issued and to enforce temporary print and broadcast codes of conduct in the absence of self-regulatory mechanisms.

The assassination of the Prime Minister of Serbia, Zoran Djindjic, which was condemned by Council members in a 12 March press statement [SC/7688], and provocative statements by Belgrade officials on the future status of Kosovo had a negative impact on the political situation in Kosovo, as did provocative statements by Kosovo Albanian leaders on Kosovo's final status. To initiate a dialogue on practical matters between the authorities in Belgrade and those of the Provisional Institutions, the Special Representative, on 2 March, invited a ministerial delegation from Belgrade for talks on a proposed agenda. However, leading Kosovo Albanian politicians reneged on their initial support for the initiative, citing preconditions for dialogue, including the need for further progress in the transfer process and the approval of a joint platform by the Kosovo Assembly. Similarly, the Belgrade authorities requested the inclusion of additional agenda items and expressed their unwillingness to participate. The process was postponed following the assassination of Prime Minister Djindjic.

Security Council consideration (April and June). The Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Hédi Annabi, briefing the Security Council on 23 April [meeting 4742], said that a significant step in the transfer to the Kosovo Provisional Institutions of Self-Government of responsibilities under the Constitutional Framework was the establishment of a joint Transfer Council, comprising UNMIK and Provisional Institutions representatives, to oversee, coordinate and manage the process. At its first meeting on 8 April, the Transfer Council established working groups on finance, recruitment and logistics; technical assistance; and monitoring and intervention. The Assistant Secretary-General said that the pace of the transfer of responsibilities would depend on the capacity of the Provisional Institutions to assume the relevant responsibilities. He noted the increasing attempts to undercut resolution 1244 (1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353] and the Constitutional Framework, especially the Kosovo Government's recent challenge of the Special Representative's reserved powers in the Transfer Council by asking for the creation of new ministries to exercise authority over reserved areas and attempts by the Kosovo Assembly to implement a law on higher education (see p. 415). UNMIK was concerned that the Assembly had not acted on four laws, including the education law, returned to it for remedial action. The Assistant Secretary-General warned that, should the Assembly not amend those laws, the Special Representative would be forced to promulgate them, after the necessary adjustments were made.

He said that radical action and pronouncements by all sides had increased since the beginning of the year. Voices of moderation were weak or muted, making the promotion of dialogue across political and ethnic lines difficult, both with regard to Kosovars and between Belgrade and the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government. UNMIK had sought to balance the competing demands of the leaders and people of Kosovo, with a view to preventing extremism, and would continue to encourage dialogue and multi-ethnicity and facilitate the acceptance and achievement of the benchmarks for Kosovo's future status [YUN 2002, p. 369].

In a further briefing to the Council on 10 June [meeting 4770], the Assistant Secretary-General said that four years into UNMIK's mandate, there had been significant progress in Kosovo, but challenges were still being faced with regard to freedom of movement, meaningful minority participation, returns, the institutional development of local bodies and dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina. Following the emergency phase, the focus had been on political and institutional development. The guiding principles for the current phase were the benchmarks set out by the Special Representative and the policy of "standards before status". Political pressure on UNMIK had increased significantly, with attempts to challenge its role under resolution 1244(1999) and the Constitutional Framework. The Provisional Institutions, particularly the Kosovo Assembly, had overstepped their competences and Belgrade, by lending support to parallel structures, supported the boycott of UNMIK policy and programmes. Unilateral calls from Kosovo Albanians, Kosovo Serbs and Belgrade for mutually exclusive solutions for Kosovo's future continued and had not contributed to reconciliation and inter-ethnic dialogue. In addition, organized criminal groups and extremist elements were increasing their intrusions into political life.

Report of Secretary-General (June). In a 26 June report on UNMIK [S/2003/675], the Secretary-General said that the Transfer Council, at its second meeting on 28 May, agreed to the transfer of 19 non-reserved competences, with a further 17 to be transferred as soon as the Provisional Institutions were ready to assume them. It agreed to return eight competences to its three working groups for further consideration. Kosovo Serb representatives did not participate in either meeting of the Transfer Council.

Between 1 April and 16 June, the Government of Kosovo took 27 policy decisions, including 12 related to legislation. That was a slight increase in the average number of decisions taken each month relative to the first three months of 2003 and a significant increase in the proportion of those having legal implications. As the decision-making process became more inclusive and transparent, there was a higher degree of ownership by Kosovo civil servants of that process. Inter-ministerial communication and coordination improved with the setting up of two inter-ministerial working groups on gender equality and disabilities. A Commission for Cooperation with ICTY was also established.

The Kosovo Assembly, in nine plenary meetings held since 1 April, with all political groups attending, made progress in adopting and forwarding legislation to the Special Representative for promulgation, including the four laws (on external trade, telecommunications, higher education, and public financial management and accountability), which had been returned to it for revision (see above). The Government undertook to implement all the laws, including those with changes introduced by UNMIK. The Assembly adopted six other laws, including one on immovable property taxes, a subject outside its area of competence. In a special procedure, the Assembly agreed to the Provisional Criminal Code and the Provisional Criminal Procedure Code, which, as reserved competences, would be issued as UNMIK Regulations. On 15 May, it endorsed a controversial resolution on the liberation war of the people of Kosovo for freedom and independence, which the Special Representative declared to be divisive and contrary to the spirit of resolution 1244(1999). In addition, on 24 April, the Assembly endorsed an initiative that instructed an "appropriate body" to draft a law on elections, even though election matters were outside its competence. The Assembly's functional committees met regularly, but there continued to be a lack of effective minority community participation in the legislative process.

In contrast to the Kosovo Assembly, policy-making and legislative development in the municipal assemblies were slow, as almost all of them were still hiring municipal civil servants and setting up municipal committees. Only four municipalities currently had an adequate number of functioning committees, and in about one third of them politicization of the civil service recruitment process continued. In two municipalities, the budget had still not been approved, and in three there was political gridlock because of the refusal of the major Kosovo Albanian parties to cooperate with each other. Meanwhile, the functioning of mixed Kosovo Serb-Kosovo Albanian municipal administrations varied considerably.

The administrative development of some Provisional Institutions and municipalities remained hampered by the continued operation of Belgrade-supported parallel administrative structures in some parts of Kosovo, especially in the health and education sectors. UNMIK was developing a comprehensive action plan to address that issue. In northern Mitrovica, UNMIK had appointed an eight-member Advisory Board, consisting of six Kosovo Serbs, one Kosovo Albanian and one Bosniac, to help communicate the concerns of residents in that region (primarily Kosovo Serbs) to the UNMIK administration. However, at its first meeting on 30 May, Kosovo Serb representatives objected to the Board's composition, while the Kosovo Albanian Municipal President expressed his reservations regarding the Board's establishment and functions.

Overall, minority representation in the Kosovo ministries was estimated to be about 10 per cent, but fell to only 1.3 per cent at management levels. The affirmative action plan "Community Proportional Representation", approved in principle in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 372] by the Special Representative and the Office of the Prime Minister, had still not been implemented.

Civic education continued in all Albanian-language lower secondary schools, but with an outdated curriculum. The Ministry of Education, Science and Technology was developing new civics curricula, to be introduced in schools in September. It was also proceeding with measures to eliminate inflammatory and/or emotive material from some Albanian-language history textbooks.

Security Council consideration (July). On 3 July [meeting 4782], the Security Council was briefed by outgoing Special Representative Michael Steiner, who reviewed Kosovo's progress in meeting the benchmark standards for its future.

He noted that, although not perfect, the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government were functioning and improving and an orderly process was in place for completing the transfer of non-reserved responsibilities to the Kosovo Government by the end of the year. As to the rule of law, a multi-ethnic judiciary and a police force of 5,407 officers had been built from scratch. Crime had dropped significantly, UNMIK had demonstrated zero tolerance for corruption, notorious criminals had been convicted and major trials were ongoing. With regard to the economy, unemployment was running at 57 per cent. However, the groundwork had been laid for a sustainable economy for the future, the euro provided monetary stability and an effective banking system had been established successfully. Kosovo had a balanced budget that relied on revenue collection, a legal framework was in place to protect investment and foster a market economy, and a privatization process had been launched. Regarding multi-ethnicity and returns, some 7,000 displaced persons had returned, a number that was still too small. However, the Framework for Returns was in place. Multi-ethnicity had been improving gradually, although a lot more work was required for Kosovo to become a truly multi-ethnic society. The slowness of returns and integration remained the most serious shortcoming.

Direct dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade, which had long been elusive, was brought on track (see p. 418) at the EU-Western Balkans Summit (Thessaloniki, Greece, 21 June).

Report of Secretary-General (October). The Secretary-General reported in October [S/2003/996] that, in accordance with the 28 May decision of the Transfer Council (see p. 416), 19 non-reserved responsibilities under chapter 5 of the Constitutional Framework had been transferred, 17 had been identified for such action and the remaining eight were expected to be completely transferred by the end of 2003. However, the Provisional Institutions had called for the transfer also of the Special Representative's reserved responsibilities under chapter 8. In that context, and in accordance with resolution 1244(1999) and the Constitutional Framework, the Prime Minister of Kosovo presented to the Special Representative proposals for closer cooperation between UNMIK and the Provisional Institutions, and for their involvement in those reserved areas. Some proposals had been accepted or were being given positive consideration, and mechanisms were being developed to gradually increase the responsibilities of the Provisional Institutions. A benchmark implementation plan was also being developed, with time lines and success criteria in line with the "standards before status" formula, while assigning clear responsibility for lead institutions in particular areas. In that context, UNMIK had produced a mission performance management plan to guide coordinated Mission action.

The Government introduced a quarterly planning and reporting cycle to allow ministers to identify their policy aims and report on progress made in those areas. Inter-ministerial coordination and governmental planning had also profited from the establishment of three new working groups on the issues of trafficking, the Government's annual legislative work programme for the period from October 2003 to October 2004 and land management. The Government approved five draft laws, which were forwarded to the Kosovo Assembly, and agreed on a general policy direction for nine others.

As public sector wage levels in Kosovo continued to cause concern, the Government instituted a recruitment freeze from 1 July to the end of the year in order to fund a 20 per cent increase in civil servant salaries in the health and education sectors. The freeze did not apply to minorities. Generally, reports indicated that recruitment procedures under the Kosovo Civil Service Law and subsequent instructions were not being followed and the service was experiencing increasing politicization, which it was hoped would be countered by the establishment of the Independent Oversight Board in November. The functioning of the Assembly improved, as did its working relationship with the Government. Several of its committees were also reaching out to the public, conducting public hearings and field visits. UNMIK and the Assembly set up a joint working group to remove obstacles to UNMIK's recognition of the Assembly's revised rules of procedure. On 10 July, the Assembly issued a declaration acknowledging the right to return of internally displaced persons from all communities.

Steps were taken to improve the effectiveness and responsiveness of municipal administrations. Political gridlocks that had affected the operations of some municipal assemblies had been resolved and fair share financing from municipal budgets improved slightly. Six municipalities had achieved the minimum level of fair share financing in all three budget lines (municipal administration, health and education), four had done so in two of them and 12 had done so in one budget line. Five had not achieved the minimum required allocation in even one budget line; UNMIK and the Ministry of Finance and Economy called on them to submit expenditure plans ensuring the minimum required percentage allocation for the 2003 fiscal year and stating that executive action would be taken, including the imposition of fiscal sanctions, should those expenditure plans still be unsatisfactory.

Minority employment in the civil service at the central and municipal levels remained unsatisfactory. The Ministry of Public Services had not issued an administrative instruction outlining affirmative action provisions and the outreach programme initiated by the Office of the Prime Minister had not resulted in a significant increase in the number of minority staff, who allegedly opted for the higher remuneration and longer-term job security offered by parallel structures operating in Kosovo. The representation of women at the professional level in the public sector improved and a senior position of Municipal Gender Officer was established in all 30 municipalities. The Assembly's Gender Equality Commission was to consider a draft law on gender equality.

Direct dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina

In his October report on UNMIK (S/2003/996), the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that direct dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina on matters of mutual interest was launched on 14 October in Vienna, with the participation of the President of Kosovo and the Assembly Speaker, and the Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister of the Republic of Serbia. Working groups of experts were to continue discussions in key areas of the agenda, notably energy, missing persons, returns and transport and communications. Meanwhile, working-level cooperation between the two capitals continued through the mediation of UNMIK officials. Cooperation had been fruitful in the areas of police, security and justice, including the return of 43 mortal remains to Kosovo.

Security Council consideration. On 30 October [meeting 4853], during consideration of the Secretary-General's October report on UNMIK, the new Special Representative, Harri Holkeri, told the Council that organizing the direct dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade had proved to be a challenging and strenuous effort. Kosovo's Prime Minister, Bajram Rexhepi, had consistently hinged the Government's participation in the dialogue on the consensual approval of the main coalition parties or a consensus of the Assembly, while some Kosovo Albanian political leaders made their participation in any talks conditional on changes in the governmental responsibilities and structures, as well as the establishment of new ministries, including in reserved areas. Stressing that there could be no linkage between the dialogue process and enhancement of the responsibilities and structures of the Provisional Institutions, the Special Representative said that such bargaining was not acceptable. Dialogue was one of the standards approved by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2002/11 [YUN 2002, p. 369]. Failure of the Government and the coalition parties to accept responsibility for contributing to the achievement of that particular benchmark resulted in only two out of three institutional leaders (Ibrahim Rugova, President of Kosovo, and Nexhat Daci, President of the Kosovo Assembly) participating in the launching of the 14 October talks in Vienna. It was regrettable that the Government's absence prevented a multi-ethnic representation from Pristina at that meeting. Although the Belgrade and Pristina delegation members did not interact, they did listen to each other and, in certain areas, their comments provided encouraging signals that progress could be made. The international community's representatives emphasized that, as one of the eight benchmarks (ibid.) to be fulfilled before talks on final status or future status could begin, the Government had to decide promptly to engage in the technical talks and determine how best it could contribute to the process. The four working groups with multi-ethnic representation on the Kosovo side should be promptly established and begin technical talks in Belgrade and Pristina at the expert level. The Special Representative appealed to the Council and to the international community to continue support for the dialogue process.

Assessment of other developments

The Special Representative, in assessing progress in other areas, told the Security Council on 30 October [meeting 4853] that, while efforts to continue direct talks between Belgrade and Pristina were ongoing, the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government and UNMIK were focused on a joint plan for implementing the eight benchmarks [YUN 2002, p. 369] by developing achievable goals within agreed time frames. The joint plan should offer clarity both to the people of Kosovo and to the international community on implementation of the standards and the evaluation of progress.

Meanwhile, UNMIK was nearing completion of the agreed transfer of competences in non-reserved areas to the Provisional Institutions based on the Constitutional Framework. It was necessary to ensure that the Provisional Institutions were in a position to absorb the new responsibilities and to carry them out with the necessary technical competence and political fairness. At the same time, Kosovo's leaders were increasingly demanding that UNMIK also transfer competences in reserved areas, but that was outside the Special Representative's mandate and would require Council action. However, the Special Representative expressed his commitment to working with the Government to enhance its effectiveness in a true spirit of partnership, and his readiness to consider establishing new structures for that purpose, in conformity with resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353] and the Constitutional Framework.

Kosovo's democratic institutions, at both the central and municipal levels, continued to develop and were gradually improving their administrative skills and effectiveness. UNMIK would receive, in mid-November, the Council of Europe mission's recommendations on decentralization in Kosovo, which should form a good basis for bringing democratic local government closer to the people and increasing its efficiency. The process of decentralization was likely to be complex and lengthy and would depend on the ability of local representatives to take on additional responsibilities.

It was of very serious concern that the Belgrade authorities continued to strengthen parallel structures in Kosovo, as evidenced by the recent unilateral appointment by the Coordination Centre for Kosovo of so-called regional and municipal coordinators, the functioning of parallel courts and the issuance of international arrest warrants against Kosovo residents. Belgrade should work with Kosovo structures and replace the unacceptable policy with a commitment to truly multi-ethnic organs of government in Kosovo. Failure to change course would impede the development of genuine multi-ethnicity in Kosovo.

The short- to medium-term outlook for Kosovo was uncertain, but the strong desire of its people to live in a peaceful, stable, lawful society was clear. Infighting and jockeying for position among politicians in advance of elections in Kosovo and Serbia proper would continue to hamper implementation of UNMIK's mandate. The public was growing increasingly frustrated with the Government's apparent inability to tackle matters affecting its well-being, such as the continued high levels of unemployment, while the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government were constantly blaming all deficiencies on their lack of authority to deal with those matters. Tensions caused by Belgrade's continued support of parallel structures and the possibility of a renewal of ethnically motivated violence, which would continue to keep many internally displaced persons from returning to Kosovo, challenged the Council to maintain a firm commitment to the principles and objectives embodied in resolution 1244(1999).

Review mechanism for "standards before status" benchmarks

On 5 November, a mechanism to review the progress of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government towards meeting the benchmarks [YUN 2002, p. 369] in the "standards before status" policy [ibid., p. 372] was launched [S/2004/71]. The mechanism envisaged quarterly reviews of progress towards meeting the benchmarks and, depending on those assessments, a first comprehensive review of progress in mid-2005. Initiation of the political process to determine Kosovo's future status would depend on the outcome of that review. The review mechanism gave new momentum to the "standards before status" policy and refocused the work of the Provisional Institutions on meeting the benchmarks contained in the eight areas covered by that policy—functioning democratic institutions; rule of law; freedom of movement; returns and integration; economy; property rights; dialogue with Belgrade; and the Kosovo Protection Corps.

On 10 December, the Special Representative and the Kosovo Prime Minister launched the "standards for Kosovo" document, which elaborated on the original standards paper [YUN 2002, p. 372] and set out in clear and detailed terms the standards that Kosovo had to reach, in full compliance with resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], the Constitutional Framework and the original standards/benchmarks statement, endorsed by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2002/11 [YUN 2002, p. 369], adhering to the primacy of the regulations promulgated by UNMIK and subsidiary instruments thereunder as the law applicable in Kosovo. The document was prepared by the Special Representative, in consultation with the Provisional Institutions, all major political parties in Kosovo, including Kosovo Serb Coalition Return, and political parties representing other smaller ethnic groups, such as Turks, Ashkali, Roma, Egyptians and Bosniacs, as well as with Belgrade. However, the document was unacceptable to Belgrade because, in its view, the consultations were insufficient and the document itself undermined resolution 1244 (1999). The Kosovo Serb leadership also distanced itself from it, as did some Kosovo Albanian leaders.

Following the launch of the "standards for Kosovo" document, and under the auspices of a steering group co-chaired by the Special Representative and the Kosovo Prime Minister, UNMIK and the Provisional Institutions convened meetings of five working groups covering the eight sets of standards. The groups would prepare an implementation work plan, setting out the policies and specific, measurable steps to be taken by the Provisional Institutions to reach the standards, including a timetable for implementing those policies and steps. The groups comprised representatives from UNMIK and the Provisional Institutions. Kosovo Serb representatives had not participated in them.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 4880], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2003/26 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council welcomes the launching of a review mechanism, under the auspices of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, as presented on 5 November 2003 in Pristina and Belgrade, on the initiative of the Contact Group (France, Germany, Italy, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, with representatives from the European Union), giving new momentum to the implementation of the 'standards before status' policy that was designed for Kosovo, Serbia and Montenegro, and endorsed by the Council in application of its resolution 1244(1999) of 10 June 1999.

The Council recalls the eight standards, namely, functioning democratic institutions, rule of law, freedom of movement, returns and reintegration, economy, property rights, dialogue with Belgrade, and the Kosovo Protection Corps. The Council in this respect urges the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government to participate fully and constructively in the working groups within the framework of the direct dialogue with Belgrade on practical issues of mutual interest to demonstrate their commitment to the process.

The Council supports the 'standards for Kosovo' document presented on 10 December 2003. The Council awaits an implementation plan, to be finalized by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General in his continuing consultation with the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, and other relevant parties as appropriate, and submitted to the Council. The plan should serve as a basis for the assessment of the progress of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government in meeting the standards.

The Council takes note of the fact that the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, within his authority as set out in resolution 1244(1999), inter alia, in the context of the review mechanism, will continue to consult closely with interested parties, in particular the Contact Group. The Council reaffirms its intention to continue to consider the regular reports of the Secretary-General, including an assessment by the Special Representative, as to the progress of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government towards meeting the standards. The Council takes note of the fact that the Contact Group intends to make a substantive contribution to the regular reviews and to submit its assessments to the Special Representative.

The Council supports the prospect of a comprehensive review of the progress of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government in meeting the standards. The Council notes that, depending on progress made as assessed during the periodical review, a first opportunity for such a comprehensive review should occur around mid-2005. Reaffirming the 'standards before status' policy, the Council stresses that further advancement towards a process to determine the future status of Kosovo in accordance with resolution 1244(1999) will depend on the positive outcome of this comprehensive review. The Council reiterates the primacy of the regulations promulgated by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and subsidiary instruments as the law applicable in Kosovo.

The Council reaffirms its full support to the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Mr. Harri Holkeri, and calls upon the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government of Kosovo and all concerned to cooperate fully with him.

Kosovo's future status

Security Council consideration. The Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, briefing the Security Council on 17 December [meeting 4886], said that further advancement leading to a determination of Kosovo's future status would depend on the positive outcome of the 2005 comprehensive review of progress towards meeting the eight standards set out in the policy of "standards before status". If the Provisional Institutions did not fulfil those standards by that time, they would be given a further period to work on meeting them, during which the periodic reviews would continue, leading up to the next general review. There was no deadline and the future status process would not start automatically on the review date. A prerequisite for any discussion on Kosovo's future status remained the achievement of those standards. At the same time, achieving them would lead to a qualitative change in Kosovo, which was an essential precondition to advance democracy and a multi-ethnic society in Kosovo.

The Under-Secretary-General noted that the introduction to the "standards for Kosovo" document (see p. 420), which included a reference to full compliance with resolution 1244(1999) (YUN 1999, p. 353), the Constitutional Framework and other applicable law and the original standards and benchmarks statement, had been omitted due to opposition by Kosovo Albanian leaders to the term "applicable law". The Special Representative was working to ensure that the introduction was incorporated in the document at a later stage.

The Under Secretary-General also reported that direct dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina (see p. 418) had not moved forward since its launching on 14 October, partly because of the failure of the Kosovo Government, for political reasons, to endorse the process publicly, even though it continued preparatory work, and the Serbian parliamentary election campaign, which made the Coordination Centre for Kosovo unwilling to discuss preparations for the dialogue.

The Serbia and Montenegro representative, addressing the Council, raised a number of concerns regarding the "standards for Kosovo" document, which, he said, failed to define the standards in a way that would open up prospects for creating a multi-ethnic society in Kosovo and Metohija. He said that UNMIK had rejected the proposals, among others, to make the unconditional and progressive return of refugees and displaced persons a key standard, to require full protection of cultural heritage and to list measures for reforming the Kosovo Protection Corps. Serbia and Montenegro considered the last-minute deletion of the introductory paragraph unjustifiable, since the references contained therein formed the basis for that important document.

Functioning of democratic institutions

Reporting on developments in Kosovo between 1 October and 31 December [S/2004/71], the Secretary-General said that the announcement of the "standards for Kosovo" document (see p. 420) and, in particular, the launch of the review process for standards implementation led to a renewed atmosphere of cooperation between UNMIK and the Kosovo Government, except in the areas of privatization (see p. 427) and direct dialogue with Belgrade.

UNMIK completed the transfer of chapter 5 responsibilities of the Constitutional Framework to the Provisional Institutions at the end of 2003. It undertook to involve the Provisional Institutions in an advisory and consultative capacity in the chapter 8 areas reserved for the Special Representative, without affecting his powers and responsibilities. As part of that process, UNMIK was reviewing the Government's proposal to create a number of offices within the Office of the Prime Minister responsible for internal coordination and liaison with UNMIK. To further improve coordination between UNMIK and the Provisional Institutions, the Special Representative had a Government Liaison Officer within his Office.

Political appointees throughout the Government had begun to take a more active role in executive functions and responsibilities. While that resulted in moving legislation and policy decisions forward, it blurred the division of responsibilities between political appointees and civil servants, who were increasingly subjected to political pressure.

During the last quarter of 2003, 20 legal initiatives and eight draft laws were approved by the Government. With EU assistance, a Standardization Unit was set up in the Office of the Prime Minister to check all laws for compatibility with EU law and the Constitutional Framework. An inter-ministerial Working Group on the Legislative Strategy for 2004 identified 117 laws to be drafted before the end of the current administration's term in late 2004. The functioning of the Kosovo Assembly in the preparation of legislation had improved. The public hearings held by the Assembly on the draft laws on gender equality, anti-discrimination and health were indicative of increased transparency in its work. However, in some instances, the Assembly had reverted to adopting declarations and decisions in areas outside its responsibility, as it did on 22 December when it passed a declaration calling for the abolition of the right of Kosovo Serbs to vote in the 28 December Serbian parliamentary elections. Recent Assembly plenary sessions were also marked by procedural violations and inconsistencies in the counting of votes. A working group was established in October to propose amendments to the Constitutional Framework. If supported by two thirds of the Assembly, the Special Representative would decide on their acceptability and compatibility with Security Council resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353] and the Constitutional Framework.

The modest positive trend in the functioning of the municipalities continued. For the first time, all of Kosovo's municipal assemblies completed their budgetary processes before the promulgation of the 2004 budget, allowing the municipal administrations to access funds earlier. The functioning of joint Kosovo Serb-Kosovo Albanian municipal administrations also improved slightly, particularly in the Gnjilane region, despite the fact that UNMIK Municipal Representatives had to intervene to suspend some decisions, particularly those relating to the misuse of public funds and attempted misappropriation of land, and to ensure compliance with the rule of law. As a result, the municipalities' actions within the scope of their responsibilities under UNMIK Regulation 2000/45 on local self-government in Kosovo improved. The mandatory municipal committees were functioning better, since their mandate and role had been clarified by UNMIK. With regard to the 2003 municipal budget, fair-share financing results at the end of September showed that there was further incremental improvement in minority spending. Following political gridlock affecting the functioning of some municipalities earlier in 2003, most municipalities were active in the field of local law-making. However, minorities still had very little impact on their decision-making process; the involvement of committees and civil society in the drafting process remained rare, and municipal regulations were not properly implemented and enforced. Translation of official documents in many municipalities remained unsatisfactory and relied on UNMIK initiatives and resources. The Council of Europe Decentralization Mission officially released its report entitled "Reform of Local Self-Government and Public Administration in Kosovo—Final Recommendations". The initial reaction of some local leaders was cautious and critical. The report was currently being reviewed by UNMIK and the Provisional Institutions. In Mitrovica, the UNMIK Administration continued to implement infrastructure projects and service delivery programmes, but Belgrade-supported parallel structures in the northern part of the city continued to exist. Those structures also hampered the work of other municipalities. The Serbia and Montenegro Coordination Centre for Kosovo, whose activities had increased during the reporting period, appeared better organized and funded, executing projects and becoming more committed to providing the Kosovo Serb community with social and administrative services. The Centre wanted to formalize the status of its offices in Kosovo, but declined to provide information on the exact function and responsibilities of each office, as required by UNMIK.

Despite a slight improvement, minority employment at the central and municipal levels remained unsatisfactory. The recent hiring freeze in the Kosovo civil service (see p. 418), except for minority communities, had led to an increase of some 1.5 per cent in the number of minority civil servants, but that was still well below target levels for all of the Provisional Institutions. The record of the Provisional Institutions in placing women in high-level and managerial positions was also poor.

The Government had still not forwarded to the Assembly a draft law on the Independent Media Commission. In the meantime, the Temporary Media Commissioner ensured that the Kosovo media conformed to international standards. As part of that task, the Commissioner issued a revised policy on radio and television licensing, which allowed for limited exceptions to the current licensing moratorium, especially for areas currently underserved by local media and applications for multi-ethnic stations. A contract signed between the public broadcaster, Radio-Television Kosovo (RTK), and the Kosovo Electricity Company in November established a public broadcasting fee collection system to provide some 57 per cent of RTK's total operating budget.

UNMIK began to prepare for the 2004 Kosovo-wide Assembly elections, with the establishment of the operational arm of the Central Election Commission, whose secretariat would be independent from but supported by the Provisional Institutions. OSCE would retain control over sensitive aspects of the election operation, including the management of the voters list, the operation of the central count and results centre and supervision of the by-mail voter programme. The Elections Working Group continued to meet to formulate recommendations to the Special Representative on the regulatory framework for the 2004 elections, to be presented by the end of January 2004.

UN Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK)

The United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo, established in June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 357] to facilitate a political process to determine Kosovo's political future, comprised five components referred to as pillars: interim administration (led by the United Nations); institution-building (led by OSCE); economic reconstruction (led by the EU); humanitarian affairs (led by UNHCR); and police and justice (led by the United Nations). UNMIK was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General. Harri Holkeri replaced Michael Steiner as Special Representative on 13 August (see p. 412).

UNMIK continued to implement its downsizing strategy in line with the approved budget for fiscal year July 2003 to June 2004 (resolution 57/326) (see p. 428).

On 1 July, the United Nations Liaison Office in Belgrade and the UNMIK Liaison Office in Belgrade were merged, becoming the United Nations Office in Belgrade, which retained the reporting and liaison functions of both offices.

Sectoral developments

Kosovo minority communities

Minority returns increased during 2003, reaching a total of 3,629 persons, including 1,487 Kosovo Serbs, 1,387 Roma/Ashkali/Egyptians, 377 Bosniacs, 133 Gorani and 245 Kosovo Albanians. While security and freedom of movement remained problematic, returns were occurring in many areas where it would have been previously impossible, including the first Kosovo Serb returns to southern Mitrovica. A key development affecting the return process was the marked increase in the engagement in, and support for, returns and minority integration among senior-level representatives of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government. In July, Kosovo Albanian and non-Serb minority leaders signed an "open letter" encouraging displaced persons to return, and Kosovo authorities took steps to follow up on that commitment. On 10 July, the President and the leader of the Democratic Party of Kosovo travelled to Urosevac (Gnjilane region) to encourage future returns to the town, while the Kosovo Assembly, in a special session, adopted a resolution supporting returns. The Prime Minister travelled to a returns site in Bica (Pec region) following a shooting incident involving Kosovo Serbs from that village. There were also signs of increasing engagement by Kosovo society generally in support of a more secure environment for all the people of Kosovo. Municipal authorities continued their engagement in the returns process through the municipal working groups formed in 29 of the 30 municipalities. They were constructively engaged in most locations where return projects were being implemented or envisaged, with the notable exception of Pec. The Kosovo Police Service was increasingly engaged in the returns process, participating in most "go and see" visits, inter-ethnic dialogue initiatives and the staffing of police offices in mixed communities. UNMIK initiated a "lessons learned" process to evaluate the results of the current returns season and further develop the 2004 returns strategy (see p. 424). A central feature of the process was to enhance the local component in returns by vesting additional responsibility in local authorities where the political will existed or could be fostered.

UNMIK continued to support the implementation of community-based projects with a wide array of initiatives throughout Kosovo, aimed at fostering inter-ethnic dialogue and cooperation between receiving communities and returnees. Some 20 projects in all four regions had enabled local non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and citizens' initiatives to develop cooperative efforts. Particular emphasis was placed on engaging the municipal-level representatives to ensure their longer-term sustainability. The Government approved a draft anti-discrimination law on 17 September, which complied with EU anti-discrimination regulations and would provide vulnerable groups with effective legal remedies and sanctions against any form of discrimination in the public or private sector.

The 7 million euros allocated by the Kosovo Government from the 2002 Kosovo Consolidated Budget surplus to support returns was directed to a broad range of returns initiatives throughout Kosovo, with 5 million euros used to fill funding gaps in projects endorsed by municipal working groups and included on the Returns Coordination Group's list of priority projects. The remaining 2 million euros was allocated to 39 municipal projects across 21 municipalities that contributed positively to returns.

The 2004 Strategy for Sustainable Returns, launched in December, provided information on funding needs amounting to 38.5 million euros. The Strategy included expanded participation of the Provisional Institutions and internally displaced persons in the return process and an improved information flow to those internally displaced. It also addressed property-related obstacles to return.

Efforts to encourage integration within the educational system continued to encounter substantial resistance from all sides. At midyear, there were 42 mixed or shared schools, although only eight of them taught both Kosovo Serb and Kosovo Albanian children (five in Gnjilane, two in Lipljan and one in Orahovac). All 39 Turkish-language and Bosniac-language schools offered the Albanian language as a subject for Bosnian and Turkish students, but no schools in the Kosovo Serb or Roma communities did so, while schools in the Kosovo Albanian communities did not offer classes in the Serbian language. To address concerns regarding the content of textbooks, a Council on Curriculum and Textbooks was established to ensure that textbooks prescribed in Kosovo schools were non-discriminatory, free from prejudices and did not offend any ethnic community.

Minority community members remained unable to use their own language and alphabet freely throughout Kosovo, including in the Provisional Institutions, municipalities and other public bodies. The translation of official municipal publications into all required languages occurred on a regular basis in only seven municipalities. Official signs were reportedly bilingual in only six municipalities and only partly bilingual in 13, although the Serbian language on those signs was usually blacked out. In 14 municipalities there was zero compliance with the requirement to post bilingual signs.

Access to public services and public utilities throughout Kosovo was still problematic. The Kosovo Electric Company continued to disconnect service to minorities for unpaid debts accumulated by previous illegal occupants. Public enterprises still failed to employ a fair proportion of minorities and remained essentially mono-ethnic.

Judicial system and rule of law

In 2003, progress continued in the prosecution of serious criminal acts, such as war crimes, terrorism and organized crime. Three war crimes trials were completed, with sentences ranging from 3 to 17 years imprisonment. On 27 October, police arrested five Kosovo Albanian males for war crimes committed against other Kosovo Albanians in 1999. The Kosovo Organized Crime Bureau continued to develop its operational and investigative capabilities. An organized crime unit comprising local Kosovo Police Service (KPS) officers was established to work in coordination with and under the supervision of the Crime Bureau. UNMIK continued to successfully address prostitution and human trafficking and its Trafficking and Prostitution Investigation Unit, consisting of UNMIK police and KPS officers, uncovered numerous cases of trafficking, made a number of arrests and closed down many establishments. With UNMIK's acquisition of an electronic surveillance capability, drug seizures and investigations relating to corruption, white-collar fraud, organized crime and terrorism increased. UNMIK also established an Investigation Task Force, comprising representatives from the UN Office of Internal Oversight Services, the EU Anti-fraud Office and the Financial Investigation Unit, to initiate, conduct and coordinate administrative investigations to identify fraud and corruption involving UNMIK, the Provisional Institutions, independent bodies and offices established under the Constitutional Framework, publicly owned enterprises, other entities operating with public assets and any other institution or entity performing activities funded in whole or in part from the Kosovo Consolidated Budget.

UNMIK continued to pursue a regional approach to combating organized crime. On 31 October, it signed a memorandum of understanding on police cooperation with Montenegro, adding to the existing protocols with the Republic of Serbia, the Republic of Albania and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

By the end of the year, KPS numbered 5,704 serving officers, including 846 women and 880 minorities. Four additional police stations were placed under its command, bringing the total number of such stations to 10. As the number of KPS officers and its capacity increased, UNMIK further downsized the international civilian police component to a strength of 3,689.

Efforts to increase minority participation in Kosovo's justice system continued with the appointment on 4 December of 26 new Kosovo judges and prosecutors, including six judges and one prosecutor from the Kosovo Serb community. The total number of Kosovo judges increased to 316, 90 per cent of whom were Kosovo Albanians, 5 per cent Kosovo Serbs and 5 per cent from other ethnic groups. Of the 53 prosecutors, some 10 per cent (including 4 per cent Kosovo Serbs) were from minority ethnic groups. Women comprised 25 per cent of judges and 17 per cent of prosecutors. A Municipal Court department and a minor offences court became operational in the Kosovo Serb majority area of Strpce (Gnjilane region), a Court Liaison Office opened in Gracanica (Pristina region) and more were being opened in Novo Brdo (Gnjilane region) and Gorazdevac (Pec region) to increase access to justice for Kosovo Serbs. However, Belgrade had yet to implement the joint declaration signed in July 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 378] on the preservation of pensions and other benefits to facilitate the integration of Kosovo Serbs into the Kosovo judicial and prosecutorial system. Owing to continuing support by the Serbian Government, parallel judicial structures still existed in Leposavic, Zubin Potok and Zvečan (Mitrovica region) and Strpce (Gnjilane region), despite the opening of UNMIK courts in those areas.

Following a riot at Dubrava Prison, Kosovo's largest correctional facility, on 4 September, during which five inmates died and 16 were injured, an independent Commission of Inquiry, comprising local and international members, was established to examine the causes of the riot and make recommendations. In its findings, submitted on 4 November, the Dubrava Commission made wide-ranging recommendations relating to security, living conditions, training and service conditions for correctional staff, funding mechanisms and incident management, which were being addressed. Although prison officials had managed to improve conditions, the situation at Dubrava and other prison facilities remained tense owing to crowded conditions throughout the penal system.

The Kosovo Correctional Service increased its staff to 1,416 (84.9 per cent Kosovo Albanians, 11.2 per cent Kosovo Serbs, 3.8 per cent non-Serbian minorities).

Security situation

Although crime rates continued to decrease in 2003, incidents of violence and crimes against minorities were a cause of concern. On 12 April, an explosion caused serious damage to a railway bridge in northern Kosovo, killing two individuals, one of whom was a Kosovo Protection Corps (KPC) officer, who were purportedly involved in planting the bomb. An ethnic Albanian extremist group claimed responsibility for the attack. On 17 April, the Special Representative issued an administrative direction defining that group as a terrorist organization. Three Kosovo Serb residents in the Obilic municipality (Pristina region) were murdered on 4 June. UNMIK established a Special Police Squad to investigate the crime, working with advisers from both Kosovo Serb and Albanian communities. In the same area, the Kosovo Serb former deputy mayor of Klokot was shot dead on 19 May and two elderly Kosovo Serbs were assaulted.

In a 6 June press statement [SC/7781], the Security Council President said that Council members strongly condemned the Obilic murders and supported the efforts of the Special Representative to investigate the incident and bring the perpetrators to justice. They underscored that such acts undermined the efforts of the international community to foster ethnic reconciliation in Kosovo, and towards building a multi-ethnic and tolerant society and conditions for the safe return of refugees and internally displaced persons.

On 13 August, two Kosovo Serb youths were killed and four injured in a shooting incident in the village of Gorazdevac near Pec. On 18 August, a Kosovo Serb male died of gunshot wounds received on 11 August, and another was seriously injured on 26 August in a shooting incident at the Bica returns site near Klina (Pec region). On 31 August, four Kosovo Serbs were injured and one killed in an explosive attack in the village of Cernica (Gnjilane region). Those violent incidents had further heightened the feelings of insecurity among Kosovo Serbs and led other minorities to keep a low profile. UNMIK police took measures to enhance security in minority areas and other sensitive locations. In three critical areas—the northern part of Mitrovica, Pec town and Pristina town—mobile reserve units conducted random vehicle checkpoints, and patrols targeted high-crime areas.

There was an increase in violent crime against UNMIK law enforcement personnel and property. On 3 August, an UNMIK international police officer was murdered in a sniper attack in the northern part of Kosovo and, on 6 September, an off-duty KPS officer was murdered near Djakovica (Pec region). Another KPS officer was shot at but not injured in Pristina on 10 September, but his companion was killed. Council members, in an 8 August press statement issued by the President [SC/7840], condemned the killing of the UNMIK police officer and appealed to all concerned to cooperate fully with UNMIK and KFOR to identify the perpetrators and bring them to justice.

Security Council consideration. The Council President issued a press statement on 14 August [SC/7845], in which Council members condemned the violence in Kosovo in the strongest terms and extended their condolences to the families affected. They expressed deep concern that four years after the conflict such brutal incidents continued to occur and demanded that no effort be spared to arrest the perpetrators and bring them to justice. Council members recalled that the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government had committed themselves to inter-ethnic reconciliation. They welcomed the arrival of the new Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Harri Holkeri, in Kosovo and stressed that his presence there was much needed.

On 18 August [meeting 4809], the Security Council considered Serbia and Montenegro's request of 14 August [S/2003/815] that the Council discuss urgently the latest developments in Kosovo and Metohija, especially the 13 August terrorist attack in Gorazdevac (see p. 425). Serbia and Montenegro said that those attacks, which occurred as the new Special Representative arrived in Kosovo and Metohija, were aimed at further destabilizing the situation in the province and represented a serious challenge to UNMIK and KFOR authority.

Addressing the Council, Serbia's Deputy Prime Minister, Nebojsa Covic, said that the killings were part of a pattern of activity by a determined Albanian minority seeking to drive all Serbs from Kosovo and Metohija, and to discourage refugees and internally displaced persons from returning. They were also sending a message to the new Special Representative that any of his decisions that did not meet their expectations would result in fresh violence and in the destabilization of the situation. Mr. Covic claimed that UNMIK and KFOR had not done as much as they could, and the international community had to recognize that the actions of Albanian extremist and terrorist groups represented the main threat to the stabilization of Kosovo and Metohija and to the region as a whole. Measures had to be taken that would lead to the full and consistent implementation of resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], major progress in the return of internally displaced persons, and security and freedom of movement for all ethnic communities. In that regard, he outlined some urgent steps that were needed to normalize the situation in Kosovo and Metohija: building a multi-ethnic and tolerant community with a solid economic foundation and functioning provisional democratic institutions; equitable implementation of resolution 1244(1999); maintaining the international security forces at least at the current level; full protection by KFOR and UNMIK of the administrative line between central Serbia and Kosovo and Metohija; investigation of ethnically motivated crimes by international law enforcement officials and bringing perpetrators to justice; full protection of witnesses by KFOR and UNMIK; the thorough and energetic disarmament of all citizens of Kosovo and Metohija; the placing of the Albanian National Army on the list of terrorist organizations; investigation of KPC, leading to its abolishment; indictment of perpetrators of war crimes by ICTY and their extradition to The Hague; closer cooperation between the security forces in Kosovo and Metohija with those in the region, and with those of Serbia and Montenegro in particular; the urging of Albanian political leaders to implement their formal support for returns, the democratization of society, the rule of law and inter-ethnic reconciliation; and holding liable officials of the international presence in Kosovo and Metohija who did not fully carry out those measures.

The United Kingdom said that every effort should be made to track down and bring to justice those responsible for the recent series of violent incidents. It welcomed the initiative of the Special Representative in setting up an inquiry and the prompt action of KFOR in deploying 300 men as a strengthened and visible presence. It therefore rejected Mr. Covic's statement about the inertia of the international community as unfounded and unfair. The international community had made clear its rejection of ethnic cleansing in Kosovo, was committed to justice and determined to succeed.

Economic reconstruction and development

Kosovo's economy continued to grow, although the projected rate of 4.5 per cent annual growth for 2003 was lower than in previous years, mainly due to the withdrawal of international donors. The estimated gross domestic product for 2003 was 1.34 billion euros, compared to 1.99 billion euros in 2002, or approximately 700 euros per capita. Growing exports and declining imports contributed to an improved trade balance for 2003 from the 2002 deficit of 1.7 billion euros, but was still grossly negative. Unemployment remained high at between 50 and 60 per cent, with the number of officially registered unemployed numbering 276,000 in July.

Total revenue collected by Customs in 2003 amounted to 424.1 million euros, some 63 million euros over target. On 18 February, the administrative and operational responsibilities for the Tax Administration were formally transferred to the Kosovo Ministry of Finance and Economy. In July, the Ministry outlined proposals to reform and amend Kosovo's tax policy during 2004, including reducing the value added tax threshold from 50,000 to 30,000 euros, transforming the current wage tax into a fully comprehensive personal income tax and absorbing the presumptive tax into the profit tax. A new law on tax administration and procedures was to be drafted. The Government and the Assembly agreed on a draft Customs Code and the Government approved laws on internal trade and on tourism and hotelier activities.

Kosovo continued to make progress in developing its economic legislative framework. The Assembly passed a law on bankruptcy on 13 March, which was promulgated by the Special Representative on 15 April. Laws on public financial management and accountability, on external trade and on telecommunications were promulgated on 12 May, following adjustments to bring them into conformity with resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353] and the Constitutional Framework. In drafting new legislative acts and revising existing ones, particular attention was given to compatibility with EU standards. A major instrument in that regard was the Stabilization and Association Process Tracking Mechanism of the European Commission, a technical working group designed to support Kosovo in its EU-compatible structural reforms through policy advice and guidance.

On 15 February, the Board of the Kosovo Trust Agency (KTA) adopted its operational policies and procedures, and approved the first six socially owned enterprises for privatization. Preparatory work was completed for a majority of the 480 socially owned enterprises that fell within KTA's purview, in preparation for their privatization or liquidation. As the privatization process entered its operational phase, the Special Representative promulgated, on 9 May, Regulation No. 2003/13 on the Transformation of the Right of Use to Socially Owned Immovable Property (referred to as the "land use" regulation), converting land use rights held by those enterprises into 99-year leaseholds. The Special Chamber of the Supreme Court, which became operational on 16 June, would adjudicate claims submitted by persons who believed that their rights had been violated by the privatization process. By October, the first six privatization tenders were in the final phase of the process. A second group of 18 socially owned enterprises was tendered on 2 July and a third group of 24 on 10 September.

The Office of Auditor General was established and local auditors were being recruited and trained. Audits were carried out in a number of publicly owned enterprises during the year, including the Kosovo Electricity Company (KEK), the Post and Telecommunications Company, UNMIK Railways, Pristina Airport and the major publicly owned utilities in the water, waste and irrigation sectors. The audits revealed shortcomings in accounting, corporate governance and human resources. KTA was following up on the audit recommendations, while the Investigation Task Force would follow up on cases of suspected fraud and misappropriations of resources. External audits and additional examinations by the Banking and Payments Authority of Kosovo were being carried out annually for all banks.

The energy situation remained a significant problem, as less than 40 per cent of the electricity supplied was paid for by customers, making it difficult for KEK to maintain a constant power supply. That, in turn, was a major deterrent to foreign investment and inhibited economic development.

OIOS report. In response to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], the Secretary-General, by a 13 November note [A/58/592], transmitted the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the results of its investigation into the fraudulent diversion of $4.3 million by a senior staff member of the UNMIK economic reconstruction pillar (pillar IV), administered by the EU. The investigation, conducted in cooperation with the European Anti-Fraud Office of the European Commission, examined reports alleging significant acts of fraud in excess of $4.3 million by Jo Hans Dieter Trutschler. The investigation established that Mr. Trutschler had caused the public electric company in Serbia to transfer $4.3 million derived from the sale of electricity on the power grid of the former Yugoslavia, and due to KEK, to a bank account under his control in Gibraltar and subsequently to his offshore account in Belize to evade recovery of the funds after they were discovered missing. OIOS confirmed that Mr. Trutschler had obtained a further amount of 220,000 euros of UNMIK funds through the submission of false invoices, and had fraudulently made use of an academic title and provided false information about his academic, professional and personal achievements on recruitment. In July 2002, the case was referred to the authorities in Germany, the country of his citizenship, where he was convicted and sentenced to a prison term of three years and six months. Most of the funds had been recovered. OIOS concluded that the employment of Mr. Trutschler without background or reference checks was a significant and alarming breakdown in human resources-related due diligence, which was mitigated neither by exigency nor by the fact that the European Agency for Reconstruction, not UNMIK, financed the contract. More alarming was the lack of management oversight, which allowed the abuses to occur and Mr. Trutschler to avoid being made to account for the failures in the execution of his responsibilities.

OIOS made a number of recommendations to correct the situation and prevent further acts of that nature, including that UNMIK's reconstruction pillar should devise standard written administrative and management procedures for personnel and financial functions, and UNMIK management should urgently review the operations of pillar IV to ensure that proper management and supervisory controls were enacted.

Financing

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, having considered the financial performance report for UNMIK for the period 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 382], the proposed budget for the period 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [ibid.] and the comments and recommendations of ACABQ thereon [A/57/772/Add.5], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/827], resolution 57/326 without vote [agenda item 128].

Financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1244(1999) of 10 June 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo,

Recalling also its resolution 53/241 of 28 July 1999 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 56/295 of 27 June 2002,

Acknowledging the complexity of the Mission,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations as stated in its resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolution of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo as at 31 March 2003, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 105.2 million United States dollars, representing some 7 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-three Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002

11. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

12. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo the amount of 329,737,100 dollars for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, inclusive of 315,518,200 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 10,887,900 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 3,331,000 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

13. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 329,737,100 dollars at a monthly rate of 27,478,092 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002, and for 2004;

14. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 13 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of

22,354,400 dollars at a monthly rate of 1,862,867 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 19,704,400 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 2,453,100 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account, and the prorated share of 196,900 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

15. Decides that for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 13 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 63,626,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 and 57/290 A, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2002 as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B and 57/4 B;

16. Decides also that for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 63,626,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 15 above;

17. Decides further that the decrease of 506,200 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be set off against the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 15 and 16 above;

18. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

19. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission;

20. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-eighth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo".

In December, the Secretary-General submitted the performance report [A/58/634] for UNMIK for the period 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 and the proposed budget [A/58/638] for the period 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005.

International security presence (KFOR)

During the year, the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council, in accordance with resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], reports on the activities of the international security presence in Kosovo (KFOR), also known as Operation Joint Guard, covering the periods 1 December 2002 to 31 May 2003 [S/2003/130,

S/2003/301, S/2003/378, S/2003/511, S/2003/616, S/2003/682], 1 July to 31 August [S/2003/855, S/2003/931] and 1 to 31 October [S/2003/1141]. A later report covered activities from 1 to 31 December [S/2004/98]. As at 31 December, the force, which operated under NATO leadership, comprised 19,168 troops.

KFOR continued to conduct intelligence-based surveillance operations and patrols throughout the province to stop illegal activities and weapons smuggling, and to minimize the risk of terrorist activity. The largest seizure of weapons occurred in March, when 150 assorted weapons, 198 grenades and mines and 102,290 rounds of ammunition were confiscated, including 97,500 rounds on the Beli Drim River, the largest in a single operation since 1999.

KFOR continued to monitor the border areas with Albania and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia for persons attempting to enter Kosovo illegally. It also began to support UNMIK in its efforts to increase security measures at the Administrative Boundary Line bordering the Presevo Valley in Serbia, following reports that extremists in the Kosovska Kamenica and Gnjilane areas were about to move towards Bujanovac and Presevo.

KFOR continued to provide assistance on request to international organizations and NGOs working throughout Kosovo, and to provide security assistance in support of UNMIK police operations. The KFOR Commander and the Special Representative co-chaired the Civil Protection Development Group, established to engage the international community and KPC as partners in the development of KPC.

Relations with Serbia and Montenegro

During 2003, contacts between UNMIK and Serbia and Montenegro continued within the framework of the UNMIK-Serbia and Montenegro High-Ranking Working Group. However, a planned meeting of the Group did not take place owing to preconditions set by Belgrade. As a result, the protocol on the recognition of Kosovo licence plates was not signed.

While efforts continued to establish political dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina (see p. 418), limited working-level contacts took place in the area of transport and communications, as did regular working contacts with regard to the return of internally displaced persons. The second meeting of the Working Group on Cultural Issues took place in May and made progress on preservation of cultural heritage and the return of documentation. Constructive working-level cooperation between the two sides continued in police cooperation, cross-boundary repatriation of human remains and exchange of experts and expertise on missing persons. The Kosovo Ministry of Labour and Social Welfare held regular monthly meetings with counterparts in Belgrade, leading to the transfer of more than 50 mentally disabled adults and children to their original homes.

Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia

Relations with Greece

Pursuant to the 13 September 1995 Interim Accord on the normalization of relations between the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) and Greece [YUN 1995, p. 599], representatives of both countries met three times during 2003 (24 April, 6 June and 27 August), under the auspices of the Secretary-General. The countries exchanged views in the context of article 5 of the Accord, which provided for the continuation of negotiations with a view to reaching agreement on their differences, as described in Security Council resolutions 817(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 208] and 845(1993) [ibid., p. 209], concerning the name of the State of FYROM. They decided to meet again at a date to be agreed upon.

Georgia

In 2003, efforts intensified to advance the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process, which had stalled when the two parties failed to begin discussions of the 2001 Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi (Georgia's Government) and Sukhumi (the Abkhaz leadership) [YUN 2001, p. 386], which were intended to serve as a basis for substantive negotiations over the status of Abkhazia as a sovereign entity within the State of Georgia. Senior officials of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General (France, Germany, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, United States) met twice in Geneva in an effort to overcome the political impasse. They recommended that the Georgian and Abkhaz sides work in parallel on economic issues, the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and political and security issues, with the help of task forces on each of the issues. That initiative was given a further boost by the March meeting between the Presidents of Georgia and the Russian Federation, and a high-level meeting of the parties in July, chaired by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, and with the participation of the Group of Friends. The two leaders agreed to create working groups to address the issues of the return of refugees and internally displaced persons to the Gali district, the reopening of railway traffic between Sochi and Tbilisi and energy projects. They also agreed that the opening of the railway would proceed in parallel with the return of refugees and displaced persons. Unfortunately, although there was some advance on those issues, no progress was made with regard to the core political issue as the Abkhaz side maintained its refusal to discuss the document on Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi. That process was further delayed by the complex political situation on both sides of the ceasefire line and the events that led to the resignation of Georgia's President, Eduard Shevardnadze, in November. The situation on the ground deteriorated in October, especially in the Gali district, which further hindered any progress in the return of refugees and displaced persons.

UN Observer Mission in Georgia

The United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia (UNOMIG), established by Security Council resolution 858(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 509], continued to monitor and verify compliance with the 1994 Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces (Moscow Agreement) [YUN 1994, p. 583] and to fulfil other tasks as mandated by Council resolution 937(1994) [ibid., p. 584]. The Mission operated in close collaboration with the collective peacekeeping forces of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) that had been in the zone of conflict, at the request of the parties, since 1994 [ibid., p. 583]. The Council extended the Mission's mandate twice during the year, the first time until 31 July 2003 (see p. 431) and the second until 31 January 2004 (see p. 435). The Council also added a civilian police component of 20 officers to the Mission to strengthen its capacity to fulfil its mandate.

UNOMIG's main headquarters was located in Sukhumi (Abkhazia, Georgia), with some administrative headquarters in Pitsunda, a liaison office in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, and team bases and a sector headquarters in each of the Gali and Zugdidi sectors. A team base in the Kodori Valley was manned by observers operating from Sukhumi. As at December 2003, UNOMIG had a strength of 118 military observers and 10 civilian police officers.

Heidi Tagliavini (Switzerland) continued as the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Georgia and Head of UNOMIG. She was assisted by Major General Kazi Ashfaq Ahmed (Bangladesh), UNOMIG's Chief Military Observer.

Political aspects of the conflict

Report of Secretary-General (January). The Secretary-General, in a 13 January report [S/2003/39] describing the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, and UNOMIG operations there since his October 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 389], observed that, after a year of strenuous efforts by the Special Representative and the Group of Friends, the two sides had not moved any closer to the start of negotiations based on the document "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and its transmittal letter [YUN 2001, p. 386]. Indeed, the tone of the parties had hardened, there was a deep mistrust between them and they showed little willingness to make the substantive compromises necessary for a meaningful peace process. The Abkhaz side, in particular, refused even to enter into discussions on the principles on which negotiations should be based. In an effort to overcome the current impasse, the Secretary-General intended to invite senior representatives of the Group of Friends to an informal brainstorming session on the way ahead (see p. 433). The Secretary-General stated that the resumption of Coordinating Council meetings, the last of which was held in January 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 378], was essential for further progress to be made in the peace process and, in particular, to turn the recommendations of its working groups into firm commitments. A prompt convening of the Council's next session would also make it possible for a timely decision to be made on convening the fourth conference on confidence-building, which had not met since March 2001 [ibid., p. 377].

On the question of the return of internally displaced persons, no progress was made in the implementation of the 1994 quadripartite agreement on the voluntary return of refugees and displaced persons [YUN 1994, p. 581]. In that regard, the recommendations of the November 2000 joint assessment mission to the Gali district [YUN 2000, p. 397] should be implemented. On the specific issue of strengthening law enforcement institutions, the Secretary-General noted that an assessment mission agreed to in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 393] had been conducted, and welcomed the full cooperation of the two sides as a positive sign of their willingness to improve the situation for returnees and internally displaced persons.

As UNOMIG's presence remained essential for maintaining stability in the conflict zone and for pursuing the process towards a political settlement of the conflict, the Secretary-General recommended a further extension of its mandate until 31 July 2003.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 January [meeting 4697], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1462 (2003). The draft [S/2003/102] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, in particular resolution 1427(2002) of 29 July 2002,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 13 January 2003,

Recalling the conclusions of the summits of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe held in Lisbon in December 1996 and in Istanbul on 18 and 19 November 1999, regarding the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia,

Recalling also the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Recalling further its condemnation of the shooting down of a helicopter of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia on 8 October 2001, which resulted in the death of the nine people on board, and deploring the fact that the perpetrators of that attack have still not been identified,

Stressing that the continued lack of progress on key issues of a comprehensive settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, is unacceptable,

Welcoming the important contributions made by the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in stabilizing the situation in the zone of conflict, and stressing its attachment to the close cooperation existing between them in the performance of their respective mandates,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 13 January 2003;

2. Reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Georgia within its internationally recognized borders, and the necessity to define the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia in strict accordance with these principles;

3. Commends and strongly supports the sustained efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative, with the assistance of the Russian Federation in its capacity as facilitator, as well as of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, to promote the stabilization of the situation and the achievement of a comprehensive political settlement, which must include a settlement of the political status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia;

4. Reiterates, in particular, its support for the document on "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and for its letter of transmittal, finalized by, and with the full support of, all members of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General;

5. Regrets the lack of progress on the initiation of political status negotiations, and recalls once again that the purpose of those documents is to facilitate meaningful negotiations between the parties, under the leadership of the United Nations, on the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia and is not an attempt to impose or dictate any specific solution to the parties;

6. Underlines further the fact that the process of negotiation leading to a lasting political settlement acceptable to both sides will require concessions from both sides;

7. Deeply regrets, in particular, the repeated refusal of the Abkhaz side to agree to a discussion on the substance of that document, again strongly urges the Abkhaz side to receive the document and its letter of transmittal, urges both parties thereafter to give them full and open consideration, and to engage in constructive negotiations on their substance, and urges those having influence with the parties to promote this outcome;

8. Welcomes, in that regard, the intention of the Secretary-General to invite senior representatives of the Group of Friends to an informal brainstorming session on the way ahead;

9. Calls upon the parties to spare no efforts to overcome their ongoing mutual mistrust;

10. Condemns any violations of the provisions of the Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994;

11. Welcomes the decrease of tensions in the Kodori Valley and the intention reaffirmed by the parties to resolve the situation peacefully, recalls its strong support for the protocol signed by the two sides on 2 April 2002 regarding the situation in the Kodori Valley, calls upon both sides, and in particular the Georgian side, to continue to fully implement this protocol, and recognizes the legitimate security concerns of the civilian populations in the area, calls upon the political leaders in Tbilisi and Sukhumi to observe security agreements, and calls upon both sides to spare no efforts to agree on a mutually acceptable arrangement for the security of the population in, and in the vicinity of, the Kodori Valley;

12. Calls upon the Georgian side to continue to improve security for joint patrols of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in the Kodori Valley to enable them to monitor the situation independently and regularly;

13. Strongly urges the parties to ensure the necessary revitalization of the peace process in all its major aspects, to resume their work in the Coordinating Council and its relevant mechanisms, to build on the results of the third meeting on confidence-building measures between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides, held in Yalta, Ukraine, on 15 and 16 March 2001, to implement the proposals agreed on that occasion in a purposeful and cooperative manner, and to consider holding a fourth conference on confidence-building measures;

14. Stresses the urgent need for progress on the question of refugees and internally displaced persons, calls upon both sides to display a genuine commitment to make returns the focus of special attention and to undertake this task in close coordination with the Mission, reaffirms the unacceptability of the demographic changes resulting from the conflict, reaffirms also the inalienable right of all refugees and internally displaced persons affected by the conflict to return to their homes in secure and dignified conditions, in accordance with international law and as set out in the Quadripartite Agreement on the Voluntary Return of Refugees and Displaced Persons of 4 April 1994 and the Yalta Declaration, recalls that the Abkhaz side bears a particular responsibility to protect the returnees and to facilitate the return of the remaining displaced population, and requests further measures to be undertaken, inter alia, by the United Nations Development Programme, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat to create conditions conducive to the return of refugees and internally displaced persons, including through quick-impact projects, to develop their skills and to increase their self-reliance, with full respect for their inalienable right to return to their homes in secure and dignified conditions;

15. Once again urges the parties to implement the recommendations of the joint assessment mission to the Gali district, carried out under the aegis of the United Nations, welcomes the recent visit of a United Nations police assessment team to the Gali and Zugdidi sectors, looks forward to its recommendations, and calls in particular upon the Abkhaz side to improve law enforcement involving the local population and to address the lack of instruction in their mother tongue for the ethnic Georgian population;

16. Calls upon both parties publicly to dissociate themselves from militant rhetoric and demonstrations of support for military options and for the activities of illegal armed groups, and encourages the Georgian side in particular to continue its efforts to put an end to the activities of illegal armed groups;

17. Welcomes the additional safeguards for helicopter flights instituted in response to the shooting down of a helicopter of the Mission on 8 October 2001, calls once again upon the parties to take all necessary steps to identify those responsible for the incident, to bring them to justice and to inform the Special Representative on the implementation of these steps;

18. Underlines the fact that it is the primary responsibility of both sides to provide appropriate security and to ensure the freedom of movement of the Mission, the collective peacekeeping force and other international personnel;

19. Welcomes the constant review by the Mission of its security arrangements in order to ensure the highest possible level of security for its staff;

20. Decides to extend the mandate of the Mission for a new period terminating on 31 July 2003, and to review further that mandate unless a decision on the presence of the collective peacekeeping force is taken by 15 February 2003;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to keep the Security Council regularly informed and to report three months from the date of the adoption of the present resolution on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia;

22. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communication. In a 30 January letter to the Security Council President [S/2003/117], Georgia reiterated its unwavering commitment to the "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and explained the challenges that the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, posed, setting them as a benchmark against which the responses of those involved in the peace process, especially the Russian Federation, were to be measured.

Georgia deplored the relatively new Security Council practice of linking the renewal of UNOMIG's mandate to that of the CIS peacekeeping forces. In fact, UNOMIG's operational capabilities were limited to merely reporting on events in the conflict zone and cast doubt on the leading role of the United Nations in the peace process. The current status quo was unacceptable and untenable, and decisive actions were needed to bring the peace process on track, including consideration of the possibility of resorting to measures under Chapter VII of the Charter, which provided for the use of armed intervention. It was high time the Council took a genuine lead in the peace process, including the launching of effective UN peacekeeping operations parallel to meaningful political negotiations on the basis of the paper on the distribution of constitutional competences, and ensured the return of displaced persons to Abkhazia, Georgia.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In a 9 April report on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia [S/2003/412], the Secretary-General stated that, at his invitation, senior representatives of the Group of Friends convened, under the chairmanship of the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, and with the participation of the Special Representative, for an informal brainstorming session (Geneva, 19-20 February) on the way ahead in the Georgian-Abkhaz peace process. The Group recommended that the Georgian and Abkhaz sides work in parallel on economic issues, the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and political and security issues, and that three task forces be established for that purpose, with the participation of representatives of the parties, the Group of Friends and external experts under UN chairmanship. They would assess the progress on each of the issues in June and, depending on their evaluation, the Group would pursue further steps, including the possibility of convening a fourth conference on confidence-building measures to address all aspects of the peace process, including the substance of the three task forces and other projects aimed at rebuilding confidence between the sides.

On 3 March, for the first time in approximately four years, the Group of Friends was received at the ambassadorial level by the Abkhaz de facto authorities in Sukhumi. They conveyed the recommendations resulting from the Geneva session, presented the international community's position and listened to the Abkhaz viewpoint. The Abkhaz side raised a number of objections to the Group's recommendations, in particular the inclusion of the political aspect in the third task force. It maintained its refusal to discuss the status issue and rejection of the paper on competences as a basis for substantive negotiations as, in its view, Abkhazia's status had long been determined. While the Abkhaz side had not formulated its final position with regard to the Geneva recommendations, the Georgian side took a cautiously positive stance towards them, declaring its readiness to work towards their implementation. Meanwhile, UNOMIG continued preparatory work for launching the task forces once final approval had been received from both sides. At the same time, the Coordinating Council remained suspended, with neither the Council itself nor its three working groups being able to convene.

The period was also marked by increased high-level bilateral activity between the Russian Federation and Georgia. During the informal summit of CIS heads of State (Kyiv, Ukraine, 28-29 January), Russian Federation President Vladimir Putin and Georgian President Eduard Shevardnadze discussed the re-establishment of the railway link between Sochi and Tbilisi and the return of internally displaced persons and refugees. At a later meeting (Sochi, 6-7 March), the two Presidents agreed to create working groups to address those two issues and the question of energy projects, including the modernization of the hydroelectric power station, Inguri-GES. It was understood that the opening of the railway would proceed in parallel with the return of the refugees and internally displaced persons. The Abkhaz de facto Prime Minister, Gennadi Gagulia, took part in some of the deliberations in Sochi.

In February, the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Georgia briefed OSCE and EU officials on the situation in the country. Subsequently, an ad hoc delegation of the European Parliament (24-28 February), the OSCE High Commissioner on National Minorities, Rolf Ekéus (25-27 March), and OSCE Permanent Representatives (27 March-1 April) visited Georgia, including Abkhazia, to meet with Georgian government officials and the Abkhaz de facto authorities and to familiarize themselves with the situation in the area. In Sukhumi, Mr. Ekéus raised the issue of the language of instruction in schools in the Gali district and discussed the situation of persons belonging to national and ethnic minorities in the region.

On 18 March, the Abkhaz de facto Parliament adopted a proposal, addressed to the Council of Federation and the State Duma of the Russian Federation, calling for the establishment of associated relations between Abkhazia and the Russian Federation. The Georgian authorities objected, stressing that it would be a violation of international legal norms.

Communications. Georgia, in a 16 May letter to the Security Council President [S/2003/547], said that the Geneva high-level brainstorming session and the Sochi meeting between the Russian Federation and Georgian Presidents gave new impetus to the peace process in Abkhazia, Georgia; implementation of the Geneva session recommendations could and should play an indispensable role in a reinvigorated and strengthened UN-led peace process. Georgia appealed to the Group of Friends and the Special Representative to intensify efforts to make the best use of opportunities opened by the Geneva session, as a way to provide for greater and more active involvement of the Council in the peace process.

On 22 May [S/2003/569], Georgia transmitted to the Council President a 19 May statement of its National Security Council, in which it expressed concern over attempts to implement separately the part of the agreements reached at Sochi between the Georgian and Russian Federation Presidents (see p. 433) relating to the restoration of railway communication between the two countries, but not fulfilling, or fulfilling only partially, the agreement on the parallel return of refugees and forcibly displaced persons. The National Security Council declared the partial selective implementation of the Sochi agreements to be unacceptable, and the unilateral restoration of railway communication without Georgia's agreement and before the start of the process of the organized and safe return of the expelled population to be illegal. It reserved the right to demand appropriate explanations and to take adequate measures.

Report of Secretary-General (July). On 21 July [S/2003/751], the Secretary-General reported that his Special Representative was continuing efforts to build upon the positive momentum begun at the February brainstorming session of the Group of Friends (see p. 433). She met with representatives of the Group in New York in May, and consulted with Valery Loshchinin, President Putin's Special Representative for the Georgian-Abkhaz conflict, in Tbilisi in April and in Moscow in June and July. She also met with Rudolf Perina, the United States Special Negotiator for Eurasian Conflicts, in New York in May. The senior representatives of the Group of Friends agreed to meet again in Geneva in July. The Georgian and Abkhaz sides accepted invitations to participate in a part of that meeting.

Of the three sets of issues identified as key in advancing the peace process at the Geneva brainstorming session (see p. 433), work on two of them—economic cooperation and refugee return—was actively pursued by the Russian Federation and Georgia within the framework of the agreements reached by the two Presidents in Sochi. Three bilateral working groups were established and UNOMIG provided expertise to them, while representatives of the UNHCR Tbilisi office attended working group meetings on the return of refugees and internally displaced persons. The Abkhaz side participated in the consultations on energy issues and was briefed about the outcome of the other working groups. The Georgian side stressed the need to proceed in parallel on railway restoration and refugee return and highlighted that the activities of all three bilateral working groups and their outcomes would best be discussed within the framework of the Geneva brainstorming session recommendations.

While the parties moved ahead on economic cooperation and refugee return, little notable progress was made on political and security matters, including the future status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia, and the question of security guarantees. The Special Representative explored with the two sides the possibility of launching consultations on those topics. Following consultations with the Russian Federation on the Abkhaz readiness to participate in a meeting on security guarantees within the framework of the Geneva recommendations, and with the Georgian side and representatives of the Group of Friends, the Special Representative was able to convene such a meeting on 15 July, during which views were exchanged on the issue and on procedural questions. As the Abkhaz side had expressed its willingness to resume participation in the Coordinating Council, the Special Representative consulted with both sides to identify an opportune time for resuming the Council's work.

Those efforts took place against the background of internal developments affecting both the Abkhaz and Georgian sides. On 7 April, the Abkhaz de facto government, headed by Gennadi Gagulia, resigned, and was succeeded on 22 April by Raul Khadzhimba, the former de facto Minister of Defence. The Georgian side continued to be sharply critical of the ongoing campaign by the Abkhaz side to acquire Russian citizenship, the functioning of the Sochi-Sukhumi railway and the flow of private, mainly Russian, investment to the area. The Abkhaz side, for its part, was disturbed by statements of some Georgian politicians that the military option for resolving the conflict had not been completely ruled out.

The Secretary-General, while expressing strong support for the enhanced cooperation between the two sides, regretted that the core political issue of the future status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia still had not been addressed. He recommended a further extension of UNOMIG's mandate until 31 January 2004, with the addition of a civilian police component of 20 officers to strengthen its capacity to carry out its mandate and, in particular, to contribute to the creation of conditions conducive to the safe and dignified return of internally displaced persons and refugees.

Security Council consideration (July). The Security Council held two meetings on 30 July: the first [meeting 4799], held in private, considered the agenda item "The situation in Georgia" and the second [meeting 4800] considered the Secretary-General's 21 July report on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia (see p. 434). At the end of the private meeting, the Council issued an official communiqué [S/PV.4799], indicating that it was briefed during that session by the Secretary-General's Special Representative and had a constructive exchange of views with her and with the representative of Georgia.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 4800], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1494(2003). The draft [S/2003/771] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, in particular resolution 1462(2003) of 30 January 2003,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 21 July 2003,

Recalling the conclusions of the summits of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe held in Lisbon in December 1996 and in Istanbul on 18 and 19 November 1999, regarding the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia,

Recalling also the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Deploring that the perpetrators of the shooting down of a helicopter of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia on 8 October 2001, which resulted in the death of the nine people on board, have still not been identified,

Stressing that the continued lack of progress on key issues of a comprehensive settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, is unacceptable,

Welcoming, however, the positive momentum given to the United Nations-led peace process by the two high-level meetings of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General in Geneva and the subsequent meeting of the Presidents of Georgia and the Russian Federation in Sochi, Russian Federation,

Welcoming also the important contributions made by the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in stabilizing the situation in the zone of conflict, and stressing its attachment to the close cooperation existing between them in the performance of their respective mandates,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 21 July 2003;

2. Reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Georgia within its internationally recognized borders, and the necessity to define the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia in strict accordance with these principles;

3. Commends and strongly supports the sustained efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative, with the assistance of the Russian Federation in its capacity as facilitator, as well as of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, to promote the stabilization of the situation and the achievement of a comprehensive political settlement, which must include a settlement of the political status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia;

4. Stresses, in particular, its strong support for the document on "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and for its letter of transmittal, finalized by, and with the full support of, all members of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General;

5. Deeply regrets the continued refusal of the Abkhaz side to agree to a discussion on the substance of that document, again strongly urges the Abkhaz side to receive the document and its letter of transmittal, urges both parties thereafter to give them full and open consideration, and to engage in constructive negotiations on their substance, and urges those having influence with the parties to promote this outcome;

6. Regrets the lack of progress on the initiation of political status negotiations, and recalls once again that the purpose of those documents is to facilitate meaningful negotiations between the parties, under the leadership of the United Nations, on the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia, and is not an attempt to impose or dictate any specific solution to the parties;

7. Underlines further the fact that the process of negotiation leading to a lasting political settlement acceptable to both sides will require concessions from both sides;

8. Welcomes the convening of two meetings of senior representatives of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General in Geneva, and particularly welcomes the participation in a positive spirit of representatives of the two parties at the second meeting;

9. Welcomes also the identification at the first Geneva meeting of three sets of issues as key to advancing the peace process (economic cooperation, the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and political and security matters) and the following work on the substance of those issues, including in bilateral working groups by the Russian Federation and Georgia as agreed by the two Presidents at their meeting in Sochi on 6 and 7 March 2003, and also at the initial high-level meeting of the parties on 15 July 2003, chaired by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and with the participation of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General;

10. Welcomes further the commitment of the parties to continue their dialogue on economic cooperation, refugee returns and political and security matters regularly and in a structured manner and their agreement to join the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General again towards the end of the year to review progress and explore future steps, and encourages them to act upon that commitment;

11. Calls upon the parties to spare no efforts to overcome their ongoing mutual mistrust;

12. Calls again upon the parties to ensure the necessary revitalization of the peace process in all its major aspects, including their work in the Coordinating Council and its relevant mechanisms, to build on the results of the third meeting on confidence-building measures between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides, held in Yalta, Ukraine, on 15 and 16 March 2001, to implement the proposals agreed on that occasion in a purposeful and cooperative manner, and to consider holding a fourth conference on confidence-building measures;

13. Reminds all concerned to refrain from any action that might impede the peace process;

14. Stresses the urgent need for progress on the question of refugees and internally displaced persons, calls upon both sides to display a genuine commitment to make returns the focus of special attention and to undertake this task in close coordination with the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and in consultation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General, recalls the understanding reached in Sochi by Georgia and the Russian Federation that the reopening of the Sochi-Tbilisi railway will be undertaken in parallel with the return of refugees and displaced persons, starting in the Gali district, reaffirms the unacceptability of the demographic changes resulting from the conflict, and reaffirms also the inalienable right of all refugees and internally displaced persons affected by the conflict to return to their homes in secure and dignified conditions, in accordance with international law and as set out in the Quadripartite Agreement on the Voluntary Return of Refugees and Displaced Persons of 4 April 1994 and the Yalta Declaration;

15. Recalls that the Abkhaz side bears a particular responsibility to protect the returnees and to facilitate the return of the remaining displaced population, and requests further measures to be undertaken, inter alia, by the United Nations Development Programme, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat to create conditions conducive to the return of refugees and internally displaced persons, including through quick-impact projects, to develop their skills and to increase their self-reliance, with full respect for their inalienable right to return to their homes in secure and dignified conditions;

16. Welcomes the positive consideration given by the parties to the recommendations of the joint assessment mission to the Gali district, urges them once again to implement those recommendations, and in particular calls upon the Abkhaz side to agree to the opening as soon as possible of the Gali branch of the human rights office in Sukhumi and to provide security conditions for its unhindered functioning;

17. Endorses the recommendations of the Secretary-General in his report of 21 July 2003 that a civilian police component of twenty officers be added to the Mission to strengthen its capacity to carry out its mandate and in particular contribute to the creation of conditions conducive to the safe and dignified return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and welcomes the commitment of the parties to implement the recommendations of the security assessment mission of October to December 2002;

18. Calls in particular upon the Abkhaz side to improve law enforcement involving the local population and to address the lack of instruction in their mother tongue for the ethnic Georgian population;

19. Condemns any violations of the provisions of the Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994;

20. Calls upon both parties publicly to dissociate themselves from militant rhetoric and demonstrations of support for military options and for the activities of illegal armed groups, and encourages the Georgian side in particular to continue its efforts to put an end to the activities of illegal armed groups;

21. Welcomes the relative calm in the Kodori Valley and the intention reaffirmed by the parties to resolve the situation peacefully, recalls its strong support for the protocol signed by the two sides on 2 April 2002 regarding the situation in the Kodori Valley, calls upon both sides, and in particular the Georgian side, to continue to fully implement this protocol, and recognizes the legitimate security concerns of the civilian populations in the area, calls upon the political leaders in Tbilisi and Sukhumi to observe security agreements, and calls upon both sides to spare no efforts to agree on a mutually acceptable arrangement for security of the population in, and in the vicinity of, the Kodori Valley;

22. Strongly condemns, however, the abduction of four Mission personnel on 5 June 2003, which is the sixth hostage-taking since the establishment of the Mission, deeply deplores that none of the perpetrators have ever been identified or brought to justice, and supports the call of the Secretary-General that this impunity must end;

23. Welcomes the additional safeguards for helicopter flights instituted in response to the shooting down of a helicopter of the Mission on 8 October 2001, calls once again upon the parties to take all necessary steps to identify those responsible for the incident, to bring them to justice, and to inform the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the implementation of these steps;

24. Calls upon the Georgian side to continue to improve security for joint patrols of the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in the Kodori Valley to enable them to monitor the situation independently and regularly;

25. Underlines the fact that it is the primary responsibility of both sides to provide appropriate security and to ensure the freedom of movement of the Mission, the collective peacekeeping force and other international personnel;

26. Welcomes the constant review by the Mission of its security arrangements in order to ensure the highest possible level of security for its staff;

27. Decides to extend the mandate of the Mission for a new period terminating on 31 January 2004, subject to a review, as appropriate, of its mandate by the Council in the event of changes in the mandate of the collective peacekeeping force;

28. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to keep the Council regularly informed and to report three months from the date of the adoption of the present resolution on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia;

29. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In a 17 October report [S/2003/1019], the Secretary-General said that, in order to move the peace process forward, his Special Representative maintained a regular dialogue with the two sides and with representatives of the Group of Friends, both in Tbilisi and in their respective capitals. At the end of July, she held separate meetings in Geneva and New York with representatives of each of the countries constituting the Group of Friends. She also met with UNOMIG troop-contributing countries in New York and, in early October, she had consultations in Moscow with the Russian President's Special Representative for the Georgian-Abkhaz conflict.

The Group of Friends, at its second meeting (Geneva, 21-22 July) to review progress in economic cooperation, return of refugees and internally displaced persons and political and security matters, expressed support for the substantive work being done on those issues, including the preparations for the deployment of the UNOMIG civilian police component and the further exploration of security guarantees. Among other proposals, the Group recommended that the Special Representative explore with the two sides how administrative arrangements in the Gali district could be made more conducive to the sustainable return of refugees and internally displaced persons. The meeting was attended for the first time by representatives of the Georgian and Abkhaz sides, which greatly enhanced the Group's understanding of the concerns vital to both parties. In that regard, the Georgian side stressed the need for measures to support and promote the process of return to the Gali district, in particular in the areas of security, human rights protection and language of instruction, as outlined in the 2000 joint assessment mission [YUN 2000, p. 397], the 2001 Yalta Declaration and Programme of Action [YUN 2001, p. 377] and the 2002 security assessment mission [YUN 2002, p. 393]. It noted, in particular, the importance of opening a Gali branch of the United Nations Human Rights Office in Abkhazia, Georgia, and advocated, as a long-term measure, a joint interim administration in the Gali district under international supervision. For its part, the Abkhaz side stressed its security concerns and the need for a mechanism to ensure the non-resumption of hostilities. It expressed its willingness to address constructively humanitarian questions related to refugee return and to consider the opening of a Gali branch of the UN Human Rights Office, as well as involvement by UNHCR in the registration of returnees, provided that those issues were not politicized. The Abkhaz representatives also expressed general support for the 2001 Yalta decisions and the recommendations of both the joint assessment mission and the security assessment mission.

Both sides were committed to further cooperation and agreed to join the Group of Friends again to review progress and explore future steps. As both sides reacted positively to the suggestion of a joint visit to a post-conflict situation to study best practices, UNOMIG made arrangements for such a visit to Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro in mid-October (see p. 439).

However, despite those signs of positive engagement, the Abkhaz side remained negatively disposed towards including the core political issue of the conflict in any negotiation framework, referring to its unilateral declaration of independence of 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 383], prompting the Georgian Parliament to adopt a resolution on 16 July calling for peace enforcement measures under Chapter VII of the UN Charter (see p. 433).

The Special Representative, in consultation with the two sides and Tbilisi-based representatives of the Group of Friends, continued preparations for a second meeting on security guarantees as a follow-up to the dialogue launched in July (see p. 434). On 8 October, she convened a high-level extraordinary meeting on security matters to address the deteriorating situation in the Gali district (see p. 440).

At the second meeting of the Georgian-Russian bilateral working group on the return of refugees and internally displaced persons (Tbilisi, 31 July), held pursuant to the March Sochi agreements between the Russian and Georgian Presidents, the Georgian side continued to insist on the establishment of a joint interim administration in the Gali district under international supervision, while the Russian side emphasized that such a proposal would not be acceptable to the Abkhaz side, which was not currently participating in the working group.

UNOMIG's efforts were affected by events in both Sukhumi and Tbilisi. On 30 September, the Abkhaz side celebrated the tenth anniversary of the takeover of Sukhumi as "independence day", while Tbilisi marked the day as one of mourning for the victims of the 1992/93 armed confrontation [YUN 1992, p. 391]. During the reporting period, the Georgian side continued to protest against the organized campaign by the Abkhaz to acquire Russian citizenship; the reopening of a Sochi-Sukhumi maritime connection (see below) and the Sochi-Sukhumi railway; the flow of private, mainly Russian, investment; and the signing by the Abkhaz side of cooperation agreements with administrative units of the Russian Federation in September. The Abkhaz side continued to be disturbed by the militant rhetoric of some Georgian politicians implying that a military solution to the conflict was not excluded.

At their summit meeting on 19 September, the CIS heads of State reaffirmed their commitment not to support secessionist regimes nor to engage in economic operations or in official contacts with the Abkhaz side without the consent of the Georgian authorities.

Communications. Georgia, in identical letters of 1 August [A/58/855, S/2003/791] addressed to the General Assembly and Security Council Presidents, complained about the Sukhumi-Sochi-Sukhumi sea voyage made on 26 July by the steamer Vega-1 and the failure of the Russian Federation to inform it of the vessel's movements. Georgia noted that there were plans to organize regular maritime service between Sochi and Sukhumi, in violation of Georgia's legislation and its 31 January 1996 decree [YUN 1996, p. 352] on the closure of the Sukhumi seaport and port facilities, the maritime area and the section of the State border lying within Abkhazia, Georgia, to all international transport. Georgia considered the Russian action as part of the continued policy of support for the separatist regime in Abkhazia, Georgia, and demanded that the offending ship be detained pending appropriate reaction from its side.

Georgia, in an 11 November letter [S/2003/1080], shared with the Security Council its views on what remained to be done, beyond the positive elements achieved during the year, so that real progress in the peace process could be achieved. It referred to the Council's unwillingness to endorse the 2001 Basic Principles on the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi [YUN 2001, p. 386], which would have given the Council the collective authority of all its members; the unilateral actions of one Council member, which were detrimental to the peace process; the continued refusal of the Abkhaz side to allow the opening of the human rights office in the Gali district; the prohibition of teaching in the native Georgian language; the continued functioning of so-called customs and border authorities of the Abkhaz separatist regime; the illegal searches, detentions and interrogations of the civilian Georgian population in the Zugdidi region by CIS peacekeepers; and the illegal operation of the Russian military base in Gudauta, Abkhazia, despite Russia's commitment to shut it down.

Further report of Secretary-General. In a later report [S/2004/26], the Secretary-General described developments in Georgia during the remainder of the year. He said that, since the 2 November parliamentary elections, developments in Georgian domestic politics had led to increased instability in the country. Following the resignation of President Eduard Shevardnadze on 23 November, the Secretary-General assured Georgia's Interim President, Nino Burjanadze, of UN support and continued engagement in the Georgian-Abkhaz peace process. To prevent that process from stalling or backsliding in the light of the volatile political situation, the Special Representative remained in close contact with the two sides and with representatives of the Group of Friends, both in Tbilisi and in their respective capitals, including separate consultations with the Russian Federation President's Special Representative for the Georgian-Abkhaz conflict, the German Special Envoy for Russia, the Caucasus and Central Asia, Norbert Baas, in Moscow and Berlin, respectively, and with the United States Special Negotiator for Eurasian Conflicts, Rudolf Perina.

The Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Jean-Marie Guéhenno, with the Special Representative, held talks with the Georgian and Abkhaz leaders in Tbilisi and Sukhumi (20-24 November), during which he impressed upon the sides the importance of further compliance with the 1994 Moscow Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 583], regular dialogue and continued practical cooperation, in particular on security matters and issues of return. On 24 November, he confirmed, in a meeting with Georgia's Interim President, the continued commitment of the United Nations to facilitating a lasting settlement with full respect for Georgia's sovereignty and territorial integrity.

UNOMIG pursued its mandated activities, despite the complex and politically volatile environment resulting from the change of leadership in Tbilisi and the pre-positioning of political forces in Sukhumi in anticipation of the 2004 elections for the de facto presidency. Following President Shevardnadze's resignation, the Abkhaz side expressed apprehension that the instability in Tbilisi could spill over to its territory or that the new leadership would adopt a harder line vis-à-vis the conflict settlement. At the same time, it expressed a keen interest in the stabilization of the situation in Tbilisi and a continuation of the negotiation process after a new president and government were in place. The Georgian side strongly criticized the invitation for simultaneous visits to Moscow by high-level Abkhaz and South Ossetian de facto officials and the head of the Autonomous Republic of Adjara at the end of November without prior consultation or coordination with the leaders of Georgia. It protested statements made by some Abkhaz de facto officials about enhanced military preparedness and continued to be sharply critical of the visa-free travel regime to the Russian Federation for Abkhaz residents, the organized campaign by the Abkhaz to acquire Russian citizenship and further Abkhaz efforts to establish associated relations with the Russian Federation. In view of those political developments, it was agreed that the next brainstorming session of the Group of Friends would be held in early 2004.

The Special Representative stepped up efforts to convene the second meeting on security guarantees, but failed to do so as the Abkhaz side refused to engage in a dialogue with the Georgian side until after the presidential elections to be held in January 2004. The planned review meeting on the implementation of the Gali protocol of 8 October (see p. 440), scheduled for December, was postponed for similar reasons.

Meanwhile, UNOMIG continued to prepare the ground for the sustainable return of refugees and internally displaced persons, initially to the Gali district. In cooperation with UNHCR, it further elaborated its draft concept paper on return, on the basis of feedback received from both sides, in preparation for a subsequent session of the Sochi working group on that issue. In line with the recommendations of the second meeting of the Group of Friends (see p. 437), the Special Representative led a joint Georgian-Abkhaz ministerial-level visit to Bosnia and Herzegovina and to the Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro to study best practices of UN-led operations in post-conflict situations, in particular policing and refugee return, and to witness the ongoing efforts towards multi-ethnic reconciliation. Both sides positively assessed the UN role in those processes and the results achieved so far, and expressed particular interest in having their police officers trained at the OSCE-led Kosovo Police Service School. UNOMIG completed its initial analysis of ways to transpose some of the lessons learned from specific post-conflict problems in the Balkans to the Georgian-Abkhaz peace process.

Communication. In a 24 November statement [S/2003/1158], the EU noted with satisfaction the peaceful outcome of the political crisis in Georgia and looked forward to working with the new political leaders. It attached the highest importance to Georgia's sovereignty and territorial integrity and declared that positive developments in Georgia might contribute to peace and stability in the whole of the South Caucasus. It stood ready to assist Georgia in the preparation and conduct of the announced elections.

Situation on the ground

Kodori Valley

In the Kodori Valley, the upper part of which was controlled by Georgia and the lower part by the de facto Abkhaz authorities, seven joint UNOMIG/CIS patrols conducted between January and March, in compliance with the 2 April 2002 protocol on security measures [YUN 2002, p. 390], observed no changes in the armed presence or activities in the upper Kodori Valley. During the 11 to 14 February patrol, the upper Kodori Valley Administration proposed a confidence-building meeting with the de facto Abkhaz authorities, who received the proposal positively. The UNOMIG Chief Military Observer was trying to arrange such a meeting. During the 25 to 28 February patrol, an unidentified jet aircraft was heard circling over the upper Kodori Valley, triggering concerns among local residents over possible bombing raids. The most serious incident occurred on 5 June when two UNOMIG military observers, one medic and a Georgian interpreter, were taken hostage by an armed group during a routine patrol in the upper Kodori Valley. They were released unharmed on 11 June following negotiations between the Georgian authorities and the hostage takers. UNOMIG patrols in the area were subsequently suspended, pending a full review of the Mission's operational procedures and the introduction of more robust security measures.

The Abkhaz de facto authorities repeated their allegations that the Kodori Valley was being used to harbour a large military force and might become a staging ground for Georgian operations into Abkhazia later in the year; the Georgian side reiterated that the armed presence in the Valley was for defensive and border control purposes only. The Abkhaz side maintained their demand that a CIS peacekeeping force checkpoint be established in the upper Kodori Valley. In an effort to establish additional confidence-building mechanisms between the two sides in the Kodori Valley, UNOMIG facilitated the establishment of a direct telephone link between the Abkhaz authorities and the senior Georgian authorities there.

Gali and Zugdidi sectors

In the Gali and Zugdidi sectors, where UNOMIG continued daily ground patrols, the overall situation was assessed as generally calm but unstable. Local Abkhaz law enforcement agencies increased patrolling in the city of Gali and the lower Gali area to combat and apprehend criminals, but with little success. The number of criminally motivated incidents, including robberies, kidnappings, murders and explosions, increased in the Gali sector. A 15-member armed group, which committed several armed robberies in the upper Gali area, was believed to be responsible for the armed attack and robbery of a UNOMIG patrol on 24 January, north of Gumurishi. On 14 February, two buses travelling between Zugdidi and Gali were hijacked and robbed, and an Abkhaz militia officer was shot dead in the town of Gali as he tried to prevent a robbery. On the night of 22 to 23 February, a relative of the Georgian Deputy Chairman of Parliament was abducted and executed on the outskirts of Gali. Law enforcement officials struggled to address the continuing high level of criminal activity in the Gali sector. In that regard, Abkhaz law enforcement agencies conducted stop-and-search operations in the upper and lower Gali regions, the most intensive of which was launched on the eve of Georgia's Independence Day, 26 May, to address reports of the presence of illegal armed groups. The increase of UNOMIG patrols helped to limit the impact of the search operations on the local population. On 4 August, four Abkhaz de facto customs officers were killed and three others wounded close to the ceasefire line in the Gali district. A month later, Abkhaz de facto customs officers were accused of beating a number of residents of Tagiloni. The de facto Abkhaz authorities promised to take disciplinary action once those responsible had been identified.

In early October, the security environment deteriorated significantly, with the killing of 10 persons over an eight-day period. On 8 October, the Special Representative convened a high-level extraordinary meeting on security matters, with the participation of the two sides and the CIS peacekeeping force, to address the deteriorating security situation in the zone of conflict, particularly in the Gali district. A protocol was signed providing for, among other things, cooperation between the sides and immediate measures to stop all criminal activities; exchange of information on such crimes; a commitment to ensure that perpetrators would be brought to justice; and cooperation by the two sides with UNOMIG's incoming civilian police component (see above). The two sides agreed to meet in December to review the efficiency of existing security mechanisms. Implementation of the protocol was monitored at the weekly quadripartite meetings. To improve security further, UNOMIG increased its patrolling, with the deployment to the Gali sector of six additional military observers from other parts of the mission area. Although the security situation improved by mid-October, there were further periods of instability and six more killings were reported.

The report of the 2002 security assessment mission to the Gali and Zugdidi sectors [YUN 2002, p. 393] contained recommendations for assisting law enforcement agencies in both districts to perform their duties more professionally and effectively, including provision for training and equipment, strengthening human rights activities, increased recruitment of local residents into law enforcement structures, improving cooperation between law enforcement agencies on both sides of the ceasefire line and economic rehabilitation. The mission was of the view that implementation of its recommendations should be monitored by UNOMIG. The Special Representative would consult with all sides to obtain their consent for the implementation of the recommendations.

As a follow-up to the 2002 security assessment mission, the UNDP Bureau for Crisis Prevention and Recovery, in collaboration with UNHCR, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Volunteers programme and UNOMIG, led a mission to the Gali region and the adjoining conflict-affected areas of Ochamchira and Tkvarcheli districts (30 November–17 December) to assess the feasibility of a sustainable recovery process for the local population and potential returnees and to identify further actions to improve the overall security conditions and ensure sustainable return. In particular, the mission examined the social and economic rehabilitation needs and the modalities and priorities for implementation of the 2002 security mission's recommendations. It also reviewed the level of damage to the local economic and social infrastructure, rehabilitation needs in agriculture and economics, shelter and infrastructure, health and education, and institutional strengthening, and examined the feasibility of a phased holistic and area-based rehabilitation approach. The mission noted that possible rehabilitation programme efforts should contribute to the achievement of an adequate security environment and vice versa.

In the Zugdidi sector, a relatively low level of criminal activity continued, involving killings, shooting incidents, explosions and abductions, robberies and car thefts. Several peaceful demonstrations took place to protest the living conditions of displaced persons, but attempts by the local authorities to improve the situation were largely ineffective. The blocking of the main bridge over the Inguri River by internally displaced persons, which began on 6 January to protest, among other things, the extension of the CIS peacekeeping mandate, the resumption of the Sochi-Sukhumi rail link and the continued granting of Russian citizenship and passports to residents of Abkhazia, ended on 18 February, but not before several explosive devices were discovered. Frequent demonstrations and acts of civil disobedience posed a challenge for local law enforcement in the Zugdidi sector, hindering implementation of UNOMIG's mandated tasks. Further blockades of the bridge over the Inguri River took place on 1 and 5 June; the exit road of UNOMIG logistics headquarters in Zugdidi was also blocked by local residents. The quadripartite joint fact-finding group continued to investigate violent incidents, but its work was hampered by lack of continuity and poor handling of evidence, and the slow completion of investigations. Eight cases were currently under investigation.

As in the Gali sector, the number of violent and criminal acts increased in the Zugdidi sector during the latter part of the year, though the number of killings was well below that recorded in the Gali sector. On 4 December, some 65 internally displaced persons staged a peaceful protest outside the Zugdidi sector headquarters. Opposition groups also staged low-key demonstrations outside government buildings throughout November to protest the official results of the parliamentary elections.

Communication. On 29 June [S/2003/680], Georgia drew the Security Council's attention to a 25 June incident at a Russian checkpoint in the security zone in Abkhazia, Georgia, in which illegal Abkhaz formations opened mortar fire at civilians, killing two and wounding one. Another Georgian civilian was killed 10 days earlier by the "death squad" of the illegal formations, whose aim was to terrorize Georgians living in the Gali district and deter the return of internally displaced persons and refugees. Those incidents attested to the urgent need to launch the United Nations peacekeeping operation and to the need for reinforced security arrangements to secure the safe return of internally displaced persons and refugees. Georgia called on the Council to take immediate measures to avert the escalation of the situation, put an end to the killing of civilians and address the issue of their protection in the zone of conflict.

Humanitarian situation and human rights

International agencies and NGOs continued activities to alleviate acute food and medical needs and restore basic facilities. However, their work continued to be hampered by restrictions on border crossings between Abkhazia, Georgia, and the Russian Federation at the Psou River. The level of criminality in the zone of conflict also negatively affected humanitarian relief efforts.

UNHCR continued to focus on the rehabilitation of communal educational infrastructures. In addition to the 73 schools rehabilitated in 2001-2002, the Office was in the process of assisting in the rehabilitation of 10 more school buildings. By the end of the year, it had completed repairs on 7 of them, including 6 in the Gali district, benefiting more than 14,000 children. UNOMIG provided timely and targeted assistance to improve living conditions for internally displaced persons, with the completion of 16 quick-impact projects. UNHCR provided food and non-food assistance to more than 270 vulnerable and elderly persons in Sukhumi. The European Community Humanitarian Office, with an additional allocation of 2.2 million euros, continued programmes for enhancing the food security of vulnerable families on both sides of the ceasefire line. The International Committee of the Red Cross and the Spanish NGO, Acción Contra el Hambre, were to implement a World Food Programme "food for work" project, aimed at community mobilization and improvement of food security for some 13,550 vulnerable families through the rehabilitation of agricultural potential. The Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation funded a project to improve the quality of housing and the United Nations Development Fund for Women continued to work with local NGOs to promote the roles, responsibilities and rights of women.

The human rights situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, showed no sign of improvement. Basic human rights continued to be infringed upon and the de facto law enforcement agencies lacked the capacity to curb criminality, including kidnappings and murder, and effectively protect its citizens. The United Nations Human Rights Office in Abkhazia, Georgia, monitored pre-trial detention facilities, provided advisory services and carried out small field projects to promote international human rights standards, including several projects on education and the media. It noted with concern that children in the Gali district still did not have access to education in their mother tongue.

The human rights situation deteriorated further in August in the wake of the killing of Abkhaz de facto customs officers near the cease-fire line on 4 August (see p. 440) and the subsequent beating of local residents in the same area a month later. Additional reports of assault or harassment of local residents by uniformed Abkhaz personnel in the Gali district were also recorded. Although the United Nations Human Rights Office in Sukhumi had stepped up its presence in the Gali district, the absence of a full-time presence continued to hamper efforts to raise awareness of and adherence to human rights principles.

Financing

The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly the UNOMIG financial performance report for the period 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 [A/57/676], the proposed budget for the period 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/57/677] and the related ACABQ report [A/57/772/Add.1].

On 18 June [meeting 90], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/835], adopted resolution 57/333 without vote [agenda item 143].

Financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 854(1993) of 6 August 1993, by which the Council approved the deployment of an advance team of up to ten United Nations military observers for a period of three months and the incorporation of the advance team into a United Nations observer mission if such a mission was formally established by the Council,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 858(1993) of 24 August 1993, by which the Council decided to establish the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Observer Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1462(2003) of 30 January 2003,

Recalling further its decision 48/475 A of 23 December 1993 on the financing of the Observer Mission and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 56/503 of 27 June 2002,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV)

of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Observer Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia as at 31 March 2003, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 16.4 million United States dollars, representing some 9 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only twenty-two Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Observer Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

4. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

5. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

6. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Observer Mission;

7. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Observer Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy, with particular regard to air transport;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Observer Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002

10. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Observer Mission for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

11. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia the amount of 32,092,900 dollars for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, inclusive of 30,709,000 dollars for the maintenance of the Observer Mission, 1,059,700 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 324,200 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

12. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 32,092,900 dollars at a monthly rate of 2,674,408 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002, and for 2004, subject to the decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

13. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 12 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,218,100 dollars at a monthly rate of 184,841 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 1,960,200 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 238,700 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account, and the prorated share of 19,200 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

14. Decides that for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Observer Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 12 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 2,687,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 and 57/290 A, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2002, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B and 57/4 B;

15. Decides also that for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Observer Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 2,687,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 14 above;

16. Decides further that the increase of 137,200 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 14 and 15 above, and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

17. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

18. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Observer Mission;

19. Invites voluntary contributions to the Observer Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-eighth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia".

On 18 December, the Secretary-General submitted the UNOMIG financial performance report for the period 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/639] and the budget for the maintenance of UNOMIG for the period 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/640].

Georgia-Russian Federation relations

Georgia, in a 9 July letter to the Security Council President [S/2003/694], expressed concern at the 4 July statement of the self-styled "president of South Ossetia", E. Kokoity, made in Nalchik, Karbardino-Balkaria, Russian Federation, appealing to the Russian President to admit South Ossetia to membership in the Russian Federation. The statement was accompanied by provocative comments by officials of the Russian Federation State Duma and the President of the Russian Federation Republic of Karbardino-Balkaria, Valeri Kokov, in support of that appeal. Georgia considered all those actions to be an attempt to infringe upon its territorial integrity and counter to the fundamental principles of relationships between Georgia and the Russian Federation.

In an 11 December letter to the Council President [S/2003/1167], Georgia protested the unilateral introduction by the Russian Federation of a simplified entry and departure procedure for residents of Georgia's Autonomous Republic of Adjara. According to Georgia's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the implementation of the simplified visa regime with one of its regions, without preliminary agreement with the leaders of Georgia, was a blatant violation of international law and the political ethics of relations between sovereign States and contradicted the Russian Federation's repeatedly stated good-neighbourly policy.

Armenia and Azerbaijan

In 2003, the positions of Armenia and Azerbaijan remained unchanged with regard to the armed conflict between them, which had erupted in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 388] over the Nagorny Karabakh region in Azerbaijan. The Minsk Group of OSCE (France, Russian Federation, United States) continued its efforts to mediate the conflict. Both sides addressed communications to the Organization during the year regarding relations between them. Nagorny Karabakh's communications were transmitted by Armenia.

Communications. On 26 February [A/37/742-S/2003/233], Armenia transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of a memorandum entitled "Facts relating to the anti-Armenian pogroms in Sumgait (Azerbaijan) in February 1988". According to Armenia, over three days in February 1988, the entire territory of the city of a quarter of a million people became the arena for widespread, unrestrained pogroms against the Armenian population. Dozens were killed, a significant number of whom had been burned alive, after being beaten and tortured, and hundreds were wounded, many of them left disabled for life. Women and young girls were raped, more than 200 homes wrecked and looted, scores of cars set on fire or smashed up and dozens of workshops, shops, kiosks and other social facilities smashed and plundered. Thousands of people became refugees. The events of Sumgait were a natural consequence of the atmosphere of total lawlessness, spurred on by Azerbaijani leaders. Subsequent events in Azerbaijan demonstrated that the Sumgait approach to the settlement of ethnic scores would be the chosen method. In May 1988, on the initiative of the Shusha district party committee, the process of deporting Armenians from Shusha commenced and the last Armenians were driven out of Shusha in September. In November, pogroms were being waged throughout Azerbaijan. There was no response, either political or legal, to any of those actions and an atmosphere of total impunity prevailed. Armenia claimed that the Sumgait events were organized with a view to hushing up and concealing the Nagorny Karabakh problem. The organizers and perpetrators of the Sumgait atrocities had to be punished. The world had to know the truth about the cruelty and barbarity of the Azerbaijani authorities and those responsible for that notorious crime.

On 4 March [S/2003/249], Azerbaijan transmitted to the Secretary-General an appeal from the Khojaly refugees addressed to the United Nations, the Council of Europe and OSCE, to bring to world attention the truth of the February 1992 Khojaly genocide perpetrated by Armenian armed units in the Nagorny Karabakh region of Azerbaijan and to ensure that that bloody crime was given a legal and political assessment. A previous appeal was submitted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 397]. The Khojaly refugees appealed to all peace-loving peoples and international organizations not to remain indifferent and unconcerned about their suffering and grief as a result of Armenian aggression. They were certain that the world community would condemn Armenia's military aggression against Azerbaijan and assist in ensuring Azerbaijan's territorial integrity, bringing about the return of more than 1 million refugees and displaced persons and achieving a peaceful settlement of the Nagorny Karabakh conflict.

In a 28 March memorandum [S/2003/392] addressed to the Secretary-General, Armenia accused Azerbaijan of falsifying for 11 years the accounts of the Khojaly events and provided a series of accounts by Azerbaijanis themselves to prove that the deaths of Khojaly civilians were the result of a power struggle in Azerbaijan.

In identical letters of 2 May [S/2003/528] addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President, Azerbaijan, recalling the action taken by the Security Council in resolutions 822(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 502], 853(1993) [ibid.], 874(1993) [ibid., p. 504] and 884(1993) [ibid., p. 505], and by the General Assembly in resolution 48/114 [ibid., p. 1086], in response to the armed seizure of Azerbaijani territories by Armenia, noted that, 10 years later, none of those resolutions had been implemented by Armenia. The Council had consigned the problem to oblivion and turned a blind eye to the occupation and ethnic cleansings, allowing the aggressor to have a sense of impunity and to continue to commit unlawful acts. Armenia had tried to realize its territorial claims on Nagorny Karabakh and achieve a forceful solution of the conflict on the basis of fait accompli, which was unacceptable to Azerbaijan.

On 11 July [S/2003/706], Azerbaijan again drew the Council's attention to Armenia's non-compliance with its resolutions on the conflict between the two countries and emphasized that the absence of appropriate reaction from the international community would encourage continued illegal action by the aggressor. It appealed to the Secretary-General and to the Chairman-in-Office of the OSCE Minsk Conference, in accordance with the requests contained in the Council's 1993 resolutions (see above), to report to the Council on all aspects of the situation on the ground and on its development. Azerbaijan expected the Council to take decisive action to put an end to Armenia's criminal aggressive actions in occupied Azerbaijani territory.

Responding to the accusations contained in Azerbaijan's 2 May and 11 July letters, Armenia, on 28 July [S/2003/765], accused Azerbaijan of violating Council resolutions by not pursuing, as requested by the Council, negotiations within the framework of the OSCE Minsk Group and through direct contacts. The refusal to negotiate directly with the elected representatives of Nagorny Karabakh was one of the main impediments to resolving the conflict. It was unacceptable and alarming that Azerbaijani officials were openly contemplating abandoning the negotiating process in favour of a military solution of the conflict. Armenia called on the Azerbaijani side to occupy themselves constructively with the peace process rather than resorting to rhetoric.

On 12 November [A/58/594-S/2003/1090], Azerbaijan said that in view of Armenia's non-compliance with the Council's 1993 resolutions and the United Nations, and of the Council's failure to compel enforcement, it was submitting a report prepared by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs on some of the results and consequences of the Armenian aggression against Azerbaijan and recent developments in the occupied Azerbaijani territories. The report, annexed to its letter, described socio-economic damage caused by the aggression, damage to the environment and natural resources, cultural property damage, illegal activities in the occupied territories, and crimes committed and violations of the ceasefire by Armenia.

Cyprus

In 2003, hopes for achieving a comprehensive settlement of the Cyprus question were dashed as the direct talks initiated in 2002 stalled once again, despite the continued efforts of the Secretary-General's Special Adviser and the personal involvement of the Secretary-General himself. To further accommodate the positions of the two sides, the Secretary-General, on 26 February, again revised his comprehensive settlement proposal "Basis for Agreement on a Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem". The revised plan required the two sides to commit themselves to finalizing negotiations, with UN assistance, by the end of February and to submit the plan for approval to separate simultaneous referendums on 30 March. In meetings with the Secretary-General in March in The Hague, Netherlands, it became clear that it would be impossible to reach agreement on conducting such referendums and the process came to an end. Consequently, the Secretary-General took the position that, while his plan remained on the table, he did not propose taking a new initiative without solid reason to believe that the political will existed for a successful outcome.

The Security Council met twice in April to consider the Secretary-General's report on his mission of good offices. It gave its full support to the Secretary-General's plan as a basis for further negotiations.

The United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) continued to assist in the restoration of normal conditions and in humanitarian functions. The Council twice extended UNFICYP's mandate, the second time until June 2004.

By decision 57/596 of 15 September, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the agenda item "Question of Cyprus" and included it in the draft agenda of its fifty-eighth (2003) session.

Incidents

Communications. Throughout 2003, the Secretary-General received letters from the Government of Cyprus and from the Turkish Cypriot authorities containing charges and counter-charges, protests and accusations, and explanations of position regarding the question of Cyprus. The letters from the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" were transmitted by Turkey.

In communications dated between 15 January and 26 December, Cyprus reported violations of its national airspace and unauthorized intrusions into Nicosia's flight information region by Turkish military aircraft, while those from the "Representative of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" claimed, in refutation, the existence of two independent states in Cyprus and that the flights took place within the sovereign airspace of the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" [A/57/709-S/2003/35, A/57/764-S/2003/349, A/57/781-S/2003/411, A/57/843-S/2003/687, A/57/859-S/2003/828, A/58/195-S/2003/781, A/58/340-S/2003/857, A/58/433-S/2003/991, A/58/621-S/2003/1163, A/58/665-S/2003/1203].

In other communications, Cyprus, on 9 October [A/58/429-S/2003/982] and on 17 November [A/58/603-S/2003/1101], complained about attempts by the Turkish Cypriot authorities to silence voices in the Turkish Cypriot community that were in favour of a solution to the Cyprus problem and peaceful coexistence of the two communities in a reunited Cyprus. The "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" refuted those claims in letters of 27 October [A/58/541-S/2003/1049] and 10 December [A/58/628-S/2003/1179].

The "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" drew attention to the statement made by the Greek Cypriot leader at the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly on 25 September [A/58/PV.II], which, it said, contained baseless allegations against it, and outlined its own position on several questions raised in that statement, including the reasons for the failure of the direct talks on the future of Cyprus [A/58/438-S/2003/1013].

Good offices mission

Resumption of direct talks

Direct talks between the President of Cyprus, Glafkos Clerides, and the Turkish Cypriot leader, Rauf R. Denktash, on the Secretary-General's settlement plan "Basis for Agreement on a Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem" [YUN 2002, p. 400], as revised in December 2002 [ibid.], resumed on 15 January 2003 in Nicosia, in the presence of the Secretary-General's Special Adviser on Cyprus, Alvaro de Soto, in accordance with the three-track negotiation process proposed by the Secretary-General in 2002 [ibid.]. The Secretary-General reported that, during those negotiations, Mr. Denktash sought changes to the plan, some of which would have radically altered key concepts. As a result, little substantive progress was made in the talks. However, Mr. Clerides did indicate to Mr. Denktash that should they not be able to agree on the changes by the end of February, the date set for the completion of negotiations, he would be prepared to sign the plan as it stood.

In parallel with the direct talks, the second track of the negotiations moved forward, as Greece and Turkey met (Ankara, 21 February) to address security issues related to the plan. Those talks did not produce agreement or progress either. Some reasonable results were achieved, however, under the third track of the negotiations as the technical committees agreed to by the two leaders in October 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 400] began to meet after a delay of three months. The committees reached agreement on some important issues, producing a large number of draft laws for consideration and finalization, and a list of treaties and instruments for consideration, but issues of principle made real progress difficult.

The leaders authorized the United Nations to conduct a flag and anthem competition for a united Cyprus, to be included in the plan and put to a referendum, and to prepare a list of names of potential transitional Supreme Court judges for their consideration. However, the leaders did not respond to the Special Adviser's repeated requests to react to the list of judges submitted or appoint committee members to select a flag and anthem (despite the massive public response to the competitions).

The negotiations were briefly interrupted by Presidential elections on 16 February, in which Tassos Papadopoulos was elected to succeed Mr. Clerides as President of Cyprus. Mr. Papadopoulos, while indicating the continuity of Mr. Clerides's policy, raised a number of concerns regarding the workability and implementation of the Secretary-General's plan.

The Secretary-General visited Greece, Turkey and Cyprus during the last week of February. On 26 February, he formally presented a third and final version of his plan "Basis for a Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem", which contained further refinements, particularly regarding the basic requirements of the Turkish side, while meeting a number of Greek Cypriot concerns so as to maintain overall balance. The Secretary-General also filled in the remaining gaps in the core parts of the plan, particularly those relating to security, on which Greece and Turkey had been unable to agree.

The Secretary-General met jointly with Messrs. Clerides, Denktash and Papadopoulos on 27 February and proposed that the plan be submitted to simultaneous referendums on 30 March. In that regard, he recommended that they sign a "Commitment to submit the Foundation Agreement to separate simultaneous referenda in order to achieve a Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem". He invited them to The Hague, Netherlands, on 10 March, at which time they would inform him whether they were prepared to sign a commitment. The Secretary-General also proposed that the work of the technical committees should continue until the week before the referendums to finalize outstanding technical aspects.

In a 28 February press release [SG/SM/8618], the Secretary-General reported that Messrs. Denktash and Papadopoulos had accepted his invitation to meet in The Hague on 10 March, by which date he had asked them to complete all necessary internal consultations and processes so that a response regarding the commitment to submit the Foundation Agreement to referendums would be definitive. The Secretary-General said he was convinced that Greece, Turkey and the two parties on the island of Cyprus understood that the holding of referenda on 30 March was the key to the signing by a reunited Cyprus of the Treaty of Accession to the EU on 16 April. Noting that a settlement would benefit all the people of Cyprus, the region and the world, he urged the parties not to miss that unique opportunity. He believed that the settlement plan was fair and balanced, based on compromise.

The Hague consultations

During the meeting in The Hague (10-11 March), which was also attended by representatives of the guarantor States (Greece, Turkey, United Kingdom), Mr. Papadopoulos indicated his readiness to commit to putting the plan to referendum. However, before the referendum was held he wanted to ensure that the gaps in the plan regarding federal legislation and constituent state constitutions were filled. He underlined the importance of agreement and commitment by Greece and Turkey to the security provisions in the plan and claimed that considerably more time was needed than was available for a proper public campaign on the referendum. He said that he would not reopen discussion on the substantive provisions of the plan if the other side was prepared to do likewise.

For his part, Mr. Denktash said that he was not prepared to agree to putting the plan to referendum as he had fundamental objections to it on basic points. Further negotiations were likely to be successful only if they began from a new starting point and if the parties agreed on basic principles. He added that Turkey was, in any case, not in a position to sign the statement requested of the guarantors concerning underwriting the principles of the agreement. Turkey confirmed its inability to make the commitment required of the guarantors, citing previously unmentioned constitutional reasons. Mr. Papadopoulos insisted that that commitment was necessary before any referendum could be held.

To salvage the process, the Secretary-General, with the guarantor States, proposed extending the deadline for finalizing negotiations to 28 March, and taking a decision at that time on the holding of separate simultaneous referendums on 6 April. Mr. Denktash refused, making it impossible to achieve a comprehensive settlement before the signature of the accession treaty to the EU by Cyprus on 16 April. Accordingly, the Secretary-General announced that the process had come to an end, while making it clear, however, that his plan remained on the table, ready for the Greek Cypriots and the Turkish Cypriots to carry forward if they could summon the will to do so.

In an 11 March press statement [SG/SM/8630], the Secretary-General said that, although the two leaders had expressed their willingness to continue the talks, the commitment to do so was not there. He had therefore asked his Special Adviser to proceed to New York to prepare a detailed report to the Security Council. The Secretary-General also announced that the Office of the Special Adviser would be closed in the coming weeks. He wanted the people of Cyprus to know that he had not given up on them and was ready to assist whenever there was a clear and realistic prospect, with the backing of Greece and Turkey, of finalizing negotiations.

Secretary-General's assessment of the negotiations

In his 1 April report on his mission of good offices in Cyprus [S/2003/398], covering the period since his last report in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 388], the Secretary-General gave a thematic and analytical assessment of the process of negotiations, including the position of the parties during the proximity and direct talks, an explanation of his plan, observations on the reasons for the failure and a look to the future.

The Secretary-General said that, during the proximity and direct talks, the parties were far apart on all main issues. Prime Minister Clerides favoured a single State of Cyprus, comprising two politically equal communities in a bicomunal and bi-zonal federation with a single sovereignty and international personality and a single citizenship. The Turkish Cypriot leader, Mr. Denktash, favoured a Confederation of Cyprus founded by two pre-existing sovereign states, which would have a single international legal personality but would be sovereign only to the extent that sovereignty was given to it by the founding states. During the direct talks, Mr. Denktash abandoned the term "confederation" in favour of a "new Partnership State of Cyprus", but the overall concept remained the same. The dispute was, therefore, whether there would be one pre-existing state that would continue in existence and federalize itself under a new Constitution, or two pre-existing states that would establish a new confederal or partnership structure.

That difference in overall vision was matched by major differences on all core issues. On governance, the Greek Cypriots proposed a free-standing federal government, based on a federal constitution, with representation determined primarily by population ratios but with effective participation of both communities in decision-making. The Turkish Cypriots, emphasizing the need to prevent domination and maintain their separate status and identity, proposed instead channels of cooperation and coordination between the institutions of two separate but juxtaposed states, with numerical equality and consensus decision-making. The basis would be an international treaty with international arbitration in the case of disputes.

On security, the Greek Cypriot side favoured a completely demilitarized island, with all foreign troops (and "settlers") withdrawing and a United Nations-mandated international force to keep the peace, while the Turkish Cypriot side favoured the extension of the rights of the guarantor Powers (Greece and Turkey) and the stationing by them of large troop contingents in the respective constituent states.

On territory, the Greek Cypriot side took the position that a substantial territorial adjustment was necessary and justified, given the disproportionate amount of territory and coastline currently controlled by the Turkish Cypriots and Turkey, and the need for displaced persons to be able to return to their homes under Greek Cypriot administration. The Turkish Cypriot side ruled out any substantial transfer of territory, proposing only minor adjustments along the buffer zone. The Greek Cypriots wished to see a settlement based on freedom of movement, freedom of settlement and the right of displaced persons to return to their homes, while the Turkish Cypriots argued that the distrust between the two sides, the need for security, the realities on the island, the numerical and economic disparities between both sides, and the principle of bi-zonality meant that property claims should be liquidated by a global exchange and compensation scheme and that freedom of movement and residence should be strictly controlled.

Explaining his plan, the Secretary-General said that it was not a framework, but a truly comprehensive proposal, including all necessary legal instruments and leaving nothing to be negotiated subsequently. It was in the form of a covering document, to be signed by the leaders and accompanied by signatures of representatives of the guarantor States, to which was appended a Foundation Agreement, comprising main articles and a series of detailed annexes, including a Constitution. The plan foresaw that upon the entry into force of the Foundation Agreement, the leaders of the two sides would become co-Presidents of the United Cyprus Republic and, within 40 days, Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots would elect the assemblies of their constituent states, which would in turn delegate 24 members each to a transitional unicameral federal Parliament. The other institutions of State would be gradually put in place over a two-and-a-half year period. Territorial adjustment and solutions to property issues would also be implemented very gradually over two to five years, depending on the circumstances.

The Secretary-General concluded that there had been many missed opportunities over the years in the United Nations good offices efforts on Cyprus, for which both sides bore a share of the blame. In the case of the latest failure, he believed that Mr. Denktash, the Turkish Cypriot leader, bore prime responsibility by putting emphasis on overall conceptual issues and his own legal interpretation of the Cyprus problem. Mr. Denktash generally declined to engage in negotiation on the basis of give and take, which complicated the efforts to accommodate not only the legitimate concerns of principle but also the concrete and practical interests of the Turkish Cypriots. He also seemed to perceive EU accession and the EU's strong preference for welcoming a united Cyprus not as an opportunity to achieve a favourable settlement but as a trap and a threat. Despite his earlier willingness to let his people decide the issue, and notwithstanding the considerable efforts to accommodate the interests of the Turkish Cypriots at the Hague meeting, Mr. Denktash rejected the appeal to send the plan to a referendum. He wanted the negotiation to revert to square one for an open-ended discussion of principles, and refused to contemplate a work programme. Faced with Mr. Denktash's adamant opposition to considering credible ways to achieve a settlement before 16 April, the Secretary-General had no alternative but to terminate the process.

Mr. Clerides had approached the proximity talks with considerable hesitation because of the terms in which it was couched at the insistence of Mr. Denktash. He was uncomfortable with the proximity format and the somewhat hypothetical exercises that format entailed. In the direct talks, however, he sought to find ways to address the interests and concerns of the Turkish Cypriot side in exchange for reciprocity in satisfying the basic aims of the Greek Cypriots. While there were points on which he was not prepared to compromise, Mr. Clerides showed a willingness to circumvent ideological barriers and solve problems in a practical way. Throughout the process, he showed a capacity to accept his side's share of responsibility for the bitter experiences of the past.

Both the Turkish Cypriot leadership and many Turkish interlocutors were convinced, however, that having been accepted by the international community as the Government of Cyprus, and with EU accession seemingly guaranteed, the Greek Cypriots had no serious interest in reaching a settlement with the Turkish Cypriots. They were convinced that Greek Cypriots continued to see Cyprus as a Greek island and were not ready to accept the Turkish Cypriots as equal partners, not having been prepared by their leaders for the far-reaching compromises that a settlement would entail. While people on both sides promoted reconciliation and compromise, there remained, among Greek Cypriots in particular, a general reluctance to accept that the ultimate choice was not between a compromise along the lines of the plan that had been put forward and a better one, but between that and no settlement at all. There was little effort by the Greek Cypriot leadership to explain to the public that that was the case.

Mr. Papadopoulos, although thrown into the leadership of the Greek Cypriot side at a very late stage, continued the policy of his predecessor. While expressing misgivings concerning the proposed plan, he vowed to refrain from requesting substantive alterations and to seek improvements to make it workable. He did not attach great importance to achieving a settlement in time for a united Cyprus to sign the Treaty of Accession to the EU on 16 April, since, in his view, the door to a settlement would still remain open. He also laid down stringent conditions for submitting the plan to referendum, which would have made it difficult to complete the laws and treaties to be attached to the settlement in time. Turkey raised difficulties of a constitutional nature concerning Mr. Papadopoulos's insistence that the guarantor States should sign the commitment foreseen in the plan before it was submitted to referendum. Mr. Papadopoulos also argued that one or two months were required between the completion of the negotiations and the holding of the referendums; that would have exceeded the time frame and prevented the signature of the EU Treaty of Accession by a reunited Cyprus. Mr. Denktash's rejection of the request to submit the plan to referendum made it pointless to press Mr. Papadopoulos on those issues.

The role of Greece and Turkey, both as guarantors and as motherlands, was crucial to reaching a settlement, for both legal and political reasons. The Secretary-General said that he was pleased to have counted on the strong support of Greece throughout the effort.

One of the obstacles to solving the Cyprus problem was the perception on both sides that it was a zero-sum game: one side's gain was the other side's loss. The Secretary-General was convinced that, had it been accepted, his proposal would have created a win-win situation. It was in the interests of all, Greek Cypriots, Turkish Cypriots, Greece and Turkey, that there should be a settlement of the Cyprus problem.

As to the way forward, the Secretary-General stated that he did not intend to take a new initiative, unless and until he was given solid reason to believe that the political will existed for a successful outcome, and he did not believe that such an opportunity would occur any time soon. A solution could be achieved if there was an unequivocally stated preparedness on the part of both leaders, backed at the highest political level in both motherlands, to commit themselves to finalizing the plan (without reopening its basic principles or essential trade-offs) by a specific date with United Nations assistance, and to put it to separate simultaneous referendums on a date soon thereafter.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council met on 10 [meeting 4738] and 14 April [meeting 4740] to consider the Secretary-General's report on his mission of good offices (see p. 447). At the 10 April meeting, his Special Adviser told the Council that the failure to achieve a solution was due to failings of political will rather than to the absence of favourable conditions. A unique opportunity had been missed, thereby denying Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots the opportunity to vote to reunite Cyprus. The Secretary-General's plan, though not perfect, represented the best effort by the United Nations to generate a balanced and truly comprehensive proposal that resolved all issues, and a fair and honourable settlement that met the core interests and aspirations of both sides, based on a three-and-a-half-year process. The onus was on the parties and the motherlands to demonstrate the political will to solve the problem on the basis of the plan.

He noted that, since the failure of the talks, the two leaders appeared to be in agreement in their continued support for the Secretary-General's good offices mission (see p. 446). However, while Mr. Papadopoulos had called on Mr. Denktash to accept the Secretary-General's plan as the basis for a further negotiating process, Mr. Denktash had proposed instead that the leaders discuss amendments to the plan before putting it to a referendum, contrary to the Secretary-General's position that future negotiations not reopen the basic principles or key trade-offs in the plan.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 April [meeting 4740], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1475(2003). The draft [S/2003/418] was submitted by Bulgaria, France, Germany, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming all its resolutions on Cyprus, in particular resolution 1250(1999) of 29 June 1999, aimed at achieving agreement on a comprehensive Cyprus settlement,

Reiterating its strong interest in achieving an overall political settlement on Cyprus which takes full consideration of relevant Security Council resolutions and treaties,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 1 April 2003 on his mission of good offices in Cyprus,

1. Commends the extraordinary effort made by the Secretary-General and his Special Adviser and his team since 1999 in pursuance of his mission of good offices and within the framework of Security Council resolution 1250(1999);

2. Also commends the Secretary-General for taking the initiative to present to the parties a comprehensive settlement plan aimed at bridging the gaps between them, drawing upon the talks that began in December 1999 under United Nations auspices and, following negotiations, to revise that plan on 10 December 2002 and 26 February 2003;

3. Regrets that, as described in the report of the Secretary-General, due to the negative approach of the Turkish Cypriot leader, culminating in the position taken at the meeting held in The Hague on 10 and 11 March 2003, it was not possible to reach agreement to put the plan to simultaneous referenda as suggested by the Secretary-General, and thus, that the Turkish Cypriots and the Greek Cypriots have been denied the opportunity to decide for themselves on a plan that would have permitted the reunification of Cyprus and as a consequence it will not be possible to achieve a comprehensive settlement before 16 April 2003;

4. Gives its full support to the Secretary-General's carefully balanced plan of 26 February 2003 as a unique basis for further negotiations, and calls upon all concerned to negotiate within the framework of the Secretary-General's good offices, using the plan to reach a comprehensive settlement as set forth in paragraphs 144 to 151 of the report of the Secretary-General;

5. Stresses its full support for the mission of good offices of the Secretary-General as entrusted to him in resolution 1250(1999), and requests the Secretary-General to continue to make available his good offices for Cyprus as outlined in his report;

6. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

The Russian Federation, speaking after the vote, expressed support for the efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Adviser. It believed, taking into account the well-known concerns of both sides regarding individual elements of the plan, that it would be possible to adjust the plan, which would help in reaching compromise solutions.

Further developments

On 3 April [A/57/777-S/2003/406], Turkey transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of a letter from Mr. Denktash to Mr. Papadopoulos. The Turkish Cypriot leader said that, following the re-evaluation of and responses given to the Secretary-General's proposals, he had become convinced that the deep crisis of confidence between the two sides had been overlooked. He therefore proposed that the two leaders discuss his suggestions for initiating a working relationship between the two parties, which should enhance the prospects for a mutually acceptable settlement. His ideas included: transferring the fenced area of Varosha south of Dhimokrathias street, including the area extending to the UN buffer zone, to Greek Cypriot control, to be opened for resettlement; lifting all restrictions on overseas trade, transport, travel and cultural and sporting activities in both parts of Cyprus, including those imposed by Greece and Turkey; facilitating freedom of movement between the two sides and lifting restrictions on the movement of tourists; normalizing the flow of goods between the two parts of the island; lifting by the Turkish Cypriot side of measures imposed in July 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 404] regarding UNFICYP's movements; and establishing a bilateral reconciliation committee to promote understanding, tolerance, mutual respect and bilateral contacts and projects between the two parties. He also expressed his readiness to discuss the core issues of the comprehensive settlement and matters related to EU membership, with the objective of reaching a mutually satisfactory conclusion.

The Special Adviser reported to the Council during its 10 April session (meeting 4738) (see p. 449)) that Mr. Papadopoulos's response was that, in his view, the stalemate was caused not by a crisis of confidence but by Mr. Denktash and Turkey not accepting the Secretary-General's plan as the basis for negotiating a final settlement. Mr. Papadopoulos remained committed, even after 16 April, to finding a solution "within the parameters of the Annan plan" and called on Mr. Denktash to accept that plan as the basis for further negotiations.

In a 4 April letter [A/57/778-S/2003/407], transmitted to the Secretary-General by Turkey on the same date, Mr. Denktash said that he had engaged in good faith in the negotiation of the Secretary-General's suggestions and had put forward ideas for improving them. He reminded Mr. Papadopoulos of his own reservations regarding the Secretary-General's plan and the strict conditions the Greek Cypriot side had insisted on for submitting that plan to referendum. Mr. Denktash recalled his proposal made in The Hague that the two leaders discuss their respective amendments to the plan and, if agreed, put the plan to referendum. He stated that the core issues could only be tackled in the framework of such a process. Mr. Denktash said that his proposals were still on the table and encouraged Mr. Papadopoulos to look at them from a new perspective.

Mr. Denktash, in an 11 July letter, transmitted to the Secretary-General by Turkey on 14 July [A/57/849-S/2003/708], said that, following the Greek Cypriot side's refusal of his confidence-building measures package (see above), the Turkish Cypriot side had unilaterally facilitated the free movement of peoples between the two sides, to which both the Turkish Cypriot people and the Greek Cypriot people had reacted positively. In view of those encouraging results, Mr. Denktash was seeking the Secretary-General's support, within the context of the confidence-building measures proposed by his predecessor as Secretary-General in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 269], but which were not concluded, to re-open Nicosia International Airport to serve both sides, on the basis of the final 1993-1994 United Nations confidence-building proposals [YUN 1994, p. 598]. Mr. Denktash said that the Government of Turkey had confirmed its intention, if the confidence-building package was implemented, to open Turkish seaports and airports and airspace to Greek Cypriot ships and aeroplanes and to develop reciprocal trade relations. He asked the Secretary-General to use his good offices in moving the proposal forward. In any case, it was high time that the restrictions and embargo weighing so heavily on the Turkish Cypriot people, especially with regard to overseas travel, tourism, trade and exports/imports, were lifted. Mr. Denktash also confirmed, in a 24 July letter [A/57/852-S/2003/759] transmitted by Turkey, that the military authorities of the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" were prepared to discuss with UNFICYP demining in Nicosia and its close vicinity.

In a 31 July response [A/57/853-S/2003/785] to Mr. Denktash's 11 July letter, Mr. Papadopoulos pointed out to the Secretary-General that Mr. Denktash's explanation that a crisis of confidence was responsible for the stalemate in The Hague talks was unfounded, as evidenced by the interaction witnessed recently between Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots following the partial lifting of restrictions on freedom of movement, which showed that what was really lacking was a comprehensive settlement to the Cyprus problem. He said that, after the deadlock at The Hague, Mr. Denktash had consistently tried to eliminate every prospect for resuming the talks on the basis of the Secretary-General's plan and to disorient international and Turkish Cypriot public opinion about who was to blame for the failure of the talks and the current stalemate. The Greek Cypriot leader noted that the 1993-1994 discussions on confidence-building measures had deadlocked solely due to Mr. Denktash's insistence on promoting the acknowledgement of his secessionist entity. Mr. Papadopoulos said that the best hope for proceeding forward was through the resumption of negotiations; he repeated his readiness to engage in substantive negotiations on the basis of the Secretary-General's plan. However, for any resumption of the talks to be meaningful, both communities should indicate their acceptance of that plan.

On 16 April, Cyprus signed the Treaty of Accession to the EU in Athens, Greece, and ratified it in July, paving the way for the country to become an EU member when the Treaty entered into force on 1 May 2004. In accordance with the decision of the European Council (Copenhagen, Denmark, 12-13 December 2002) that, in the absence of a settlement, the application of the acquis of the northern part of the island would be suspended until the Council decided otherwise, the Council invited the European Commission to consider ways of promoting the economic development of the northern part of Cyprus and bringing it closer to the Union; that programme was launched in June 2003.

In December, parliamentary elections took place in the northern part of Cyprus, bringing to the fore a new Turkish Cypriot leadership.

Statement of Secretary-General. The Spokesman for the Secretary-General, in a 15 December statement [SC/SM/9082], said that the Secretary-General had seen the reports of the Turkish Cypriot voting. It appeared that it might take some time for a new political dispensation to be established. However, he restated his position that his plan for a comprehensive settlement remained on the table but he did not intend to take a new initiative without solid reason to believe that the political will for a successful outcome existed. The Secretary-General hoped that the Turkish Cypriot side would soon be in a position to make the necessary commitment so that a reunited Cyprus might accede to the EU on 1 May 2004.

Statement of Council President. In an 18 December press statement [SC/7961], the Security Council President said that Council members welcomed the fact that the majority of Turkish Cypriots had expressed their desire for a solution to the Cyprus problem and for accession to the EU, a result that was all the more noteworthy given the pressures they faced to support the status quo. Council members hoped that all parties in northern Cyprus and all other concerned parties would honour the desire of the majority of Turkish Cypriots. Council members reiterated their full support for the Secretary-General's good offices and urged the Turkish Cypriot leadership and all parties concerned to strongly support the Secretary-General's efforts. They called for an immediate resumption of talks on the basis of his proposals.

UNFICYP

The United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, established by Security Council resolution 186(1964) [YUN 1964, p. 165], continued in 2003 to monitor the ceasefire lines between the Turkish and Turkish Cypriot forces on the northern side and the Cypriot National Guard on the southern side of the island; to maintain the military status quo and prevent a recurrence of fighting; and to undertake humanitarian and economic activities. In the absence of a formal ceasefire agreement, UNFICYP's task was to judge whether changes in military positions constituted violations of the military status quo, as recorded by the Force in 1974.

UNFICYP, under the overall authority of the Acting Special Representative and Chief of Mission, Zbigniew Wlosowicz (Poland), continued to keep the area between the ceasefire lines, known as the buffer zone, under constant surveillance through a system of observation posts and through air, vehicle and foot patrols.

During 2003, Alvaro de Soto continued as the Secretary-General's Special Adviser on Cyprus.

As at 31 December, UNFICYP, under the command of Major General Herbert Joaquin Figoli Almandos (Uruguay), who succeeded Lieutenant-General Jin Ha Hwang (Republic of Korea) on 25 December [S/2003/1214, S/2003/1215], comprised 1,214 troops and 47 civilian police.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (May). The Secretary-General, in his 27 May report covering developments and UNFICYP activities from 16 November 2002 to 20 May 2003 [S/2003/572], said that the military situation along both ceasefire lines remained calm and air violations of the UN buffer zone decreased. The restrictions imposed on UNFICYP's movement in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 404] by the Turkish Cypriot authorities were slightly eased on 9 May, allowing it to use the newly established crossing point at Ayios Dometios/Metehan. UNFICYP was also allowed limited use of the Pergamos and Strovilia crossing points for military personnel from Sector 4 only and use of the Ledra crossing point for official purposes only. Restrictions on UNFICYP's movement along the Famagusta-Dherinia road continued. There was no change in the violation of the status quo in the village of Strovilia, where the Turkish Cypriot authorities were using a Greek Cypriot house for manning the newly established crossing point there. Crossings of the maritime security lines (the seaward extension of the median line of the buffer zone), both the western and the eastern, continued.

Normal conditions were restored on 23 April with the opening by the Turkish Cypriot authorities, for the first time in almost three decades, of the Ledra and Pergamos crossing points to the public for visits in both directions. Another checkpoint was opened near Strovilia on 26 April, allowing some 140,000 Greek Cypriots and 34,000 Turkish Cypriots to cross in both directions. On 10 May, both sides established an additional crossing point at Ayios Dometios/Metehan in Nicosia. The United Nations Civilian Police (UNCIVPOL) had to be assisted by some 100 UNFICYP soldiers in ensuring safe and orderly passage within the buffer zone until the crossing arrangements were clarified and the number of crossings stabilized. There was also a significant increase in the number of incidents requiring UNFICYP's involvement outside the buffer zone since the crossings began. As a result of its additional responsibilities, UNFICYP's requirements were reviewed and it was determined that up to 34 additional UNCIVPOL officers would be needed. UNFICYP would review and adjust its capabilities and new requirements as the need arose.

On 30 April, a set of governmental measures was announced, including: free movement of Turkish Cypriots and their goods and vehicles throughout the island; the establishment of telecommunications links to the north and to Turkey; employment opportunities for Turkish Cypriots in the south; the establishment of a bicommunal committee for humanitarian and other related issues; encouragement of contracting and subcontracting to Turkish Cypriots; issuance of identity cards, travel documents, birth certificates and other official documents; and the establishment of an office for Turkish Cypriot affairs. On 9 May, a set of Turkish Cypriot measures was announced, including offering scholarships for Greek Cypriot students to study at the tertiary educational institutions in the north and a proposal for improved telephone communications facilities and normalization of trade with the south.

UNFICYP facilitated a number of bicommunal events, such as a blood sample collection drive, a youth festival, monthly gatherings of politicians, and an international women's day celebration. It continued to perform its mandated humanitarian tasks in support of the Greek Cypriot and Maronite minorities living in the island's north and Turkish Cypriots in the south. In February, UNFICYP secured an agreement from the north for Greek Cypriots and Maronites to vote in the elections held in the south. Its support for civilian activities in the buffer zone continued.

The Secretary-General said that it was important for UNFICYP to be adequately equipped to meet its increased workload and to respond in a timely manner to developments. He therefore recommended that UNCIVPOL be complemented by 34 officers and that the Security Council extend UNFICYP's mandate until 15 December 2003.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 11 June [meeting 4771], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1486(2003). The draft [S/2003/635] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 27 May 2003 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus, and in particular the call to the parties to assess and address the humanitarian issue of missing persons with due urgency and seriousness,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that, in view of the prevailing conditions in the island, it is necessary to keep the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus beyond 15 June 2003,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

1. Reaffirms all its relevant resolutions on Cyprus, and in particular resolution 1251 (1999) of 29 June 1999 and subsequent resolutions;

2. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus for a further period, ending on 15 December 2003;

3. Endorses the increase of the civilian police component of the Force by no more than thirty-four officers in order to meet the increased workload resulting from the welcome partial easing of restrictions on island-wide freedom of movement, which has been met by goodwill from Greek and Turkish Cypriots;

4. Notes the limited steps taken by the Turkish Cypriot side to ease some of the restrictions imposed on 30 June 2000 on the operations of the Force, but urges the Turkish Cypriot side and the Turkish forces to rescind all remaining restrictions on the Force;

5. Expresses concern at the recent further violations by the Turkish Cypriot side and Turkish forces at Strovilia, and urges them to restore the military status quo which existed there prior to 30 June 2000;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report by 1 December 2003 on the implementation of the present resolution;

7. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (November). On 12 November (S/2003/1078), the Secretary-General reported that the military situation along the ceasefire lines remained unchanged. However, there was an increase in the number of forward moves by Turkish forces into the buffer zone, as well as more incidents of verbal abuse, threats, stone-throwing, and cocking and pointing of weapons by both the Cypriot National Guard and Turkish forces. The number of air violations by both sides increased. In July and August, UNFICYP observed an increase in the activity of Turkish forces/Turkish Cypriot security forces in the fenced-in area of Varosha. At the same time, Turkish forces delayed UNFICYP's routine maintenance tasks and continued to restrict its patrols to a northern sector of the fence line, static observation posts and a short patrol route inside Varosha.

As at 2 November, 2 million crossings by Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots had taken place at the Ledra, Ayios Dometios/Metehan, Pergamos and Strovila crossing points since their opening on 23 April (see p. 452). UNFICYP continued to assist in ensuring safe and orderly crossings. The arrival of additional officers helped to reinforce the civilian presence on the ground and to improve the response time in cases of incidents requiring their assistance.

The Secretary-General said that in the absence of a comprehensive settlement, UNFICYP's presence on the island continued to be necessary, and he recommended that the Council extend its mandate until 15 June 2004.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 November [meeting 4870], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1517 (2003). The draft [S/2003/1114] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 12 November 2003 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus, and in particular the call to the parties to assess and address the humanitarian issue of missing persons with due urgency and seriousness,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that in view of the prevailing conditions in the island, it is necessary to keep the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus beyond 15 December 2003,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

1. Reaffirms all its relevant resolutions on Cyprus, in particular resolution 1251 (1999) of 29 June 1999 and subsequent resolutions;

2. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus for a further period, ending 15 June 2004;

3. Urges the Turkish Cypriot side and the Turkish forces to rescind all remaining restrictions on the Force;

4. Expresses its concern at the further continuing violations by the Turkish Cypriot side and Turkish forces at Strovilia and urges them to restore the military status quo which existed there prior to 30 June 2000;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report by 1 June 2004 on the implementation of the present resolution;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Financing

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's report on UNFICYP's financial performance for the period 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 [A/57/667], the proposed budget for UNFICYP's maintenance for the period 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/57/687 & Corr.1] and ACABQ's comments and recommendations [A/57/772/Add.4 & Corr.1], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/838], resolution 57/332 without vote [agenda item 142].

Financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 186(1964) of 4 March 1964, regarding the establishment of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1486(2003) of 11 June 2003,

Recalling also its resolution 47/236 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the Force for the period beginning 16 June 1993 and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 56/502 of 27 June 2002,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force by certain Governments,

Noting that voluntary contributions were insufficient to cover all the costs of the Force, including those incurred by troop-contributing Governments prior to 16 June 1993, and regretting the absence of an adequate response to appeals for voluntary contributions, including that contained in the letter dated 17 May 1994 from the Secretary-General to all Member States,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus as at 31 March 2003, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 20.2 million United States dollars, representing some 9 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-one Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payment by Member States of their assessments;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

4. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002

11. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

12. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus the amount of 45,772,600 dollars for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, inclusive of 43,798,800 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 1,511,400 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 462,400 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

13. Notes with appreciation that a one-third share of the net appropriation, equivalent to 14,567,500 dollars, will be funded through voluntary contributions from the Government of Cyprus and the amount of 6.5 million dollars from the Government of Greece;

14. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 24,705,100 dollars at a monthly rate of 2,058,758 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002, and for 2004, subject to the decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

15. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 14 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,070,100 dollars at a monthly rate of 172,508 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 1,702,300 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 340,500 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 27,300 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

16. Decides further that, taking into account the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 5,381,600 dollars for the financial period ended 30 June 2002, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 14 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 2,747,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 and 57/290 A, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2002, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B and 57/4 B;

17. Decides that for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 2,747,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 16 above;

18. Decides also that the decrease of 38,000 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be set off against the credits from the amount of 2,747,000 dollars referred to in paragraphs 16 and 17 above, and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

19. Decides further, taking into account its voluntary contribution for the financial period ended 30 June 2002, that one third of the net unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 1,781,200 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be returned to the Government of Cyprus;

20. Decides, taking into account its voluntary contribution for the financial period ended 30 June 2002, that the prorated share of the net unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 853,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be returned to the Government of Greece;

21. Decides also to continue to maintain as separate the account established for the Force for the period prior to 16 June 1993, invites Member States to make voluntary contributions to that account, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts in appealing for voluntary contributions to the account;

22. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

23. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force;

24. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-eighth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus".

In December, the Secretary-General submitted the proposed budget for UNFICYP's maintenance for the period 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/644 & Corr.1].

Other issues

Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/99 [YUN 2002, p. 410], the Secretary-General submitted a July report with later addenda [A/58/132 & Add.1,2], containing replies received from Algeria, Italy, Jordan, Mexico, Slovenia and Venezuela, and from the Holy See and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, to his 7 March note verbale requesting the views of all States and intergovernmental organizations on ways to strengthen security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/58/467], adopted resolution 58/70 without vote [agenda item 78].

Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject, including resolution 57/99 of 22 November 2002,

Reaffirming the primary role of the Mediterranean countries in strengthening and promoting peace, security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region,

Bearing in mind all the previous declarations and commitments, as well as all the initiatives taken by the riparian countries at the recent summits, ministerial meetings and various forums concerning the question of the Mediterranean region,

Recognizing the indivisible character of security in the Mediterranean and that the enhancement of cooperation among Mediterranean countries with a view to promoting the economic and social development of all peoples of the region will contribute significantly to stability, peace and security in the region,

Recognizing also the efforts made so far and the determination of the Mediterranean countries to intensify the process of dialogue and consultations with a view to resolving the problems existing in the Mediterranean region and to eliminating the causes of tension and the consequent threat to peace and security, and their growing awareness of the need for further joint efforts to strengthen economic, social, cultural and environmental cooperation in the region,

Recognizing further that prospects for closer Euro-Mediterranean cooperation in all spheres can be enhanced by positive developments worldwide, in particular in Europe, in the Maghreb and in the Middle East,

Reaffirming the responsibility of all States to contribute to the stability and prosperity of the Mediterranean region and their commitment to respecting the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations as well as the provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting the peace negotiations in the Middle East, which should be of a comprehensive nature and represent an appropriate framework for the peaceful settlement of contentious issues in the region,

Expressing its concern at the persistent tension and continuing military activities in parts of the Mediterranean that hinder efforts to strengthen security and cooperation in the region,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that security in the Mediterranean is closely linked to European security as well as to international peace and security;

2. Expresses its satisfaction at the continuing efforts by Mediterranean countries to contribute actively to the elimination of all causes of tension in the region and to the promotion of just and lasting solutions to the persistent problems of the region through peaceful means, thus ensuring the withdrawal of foreign forces of occupation and respecting the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of all countries of the Mediterranean and the right of peoples to self-determination, and therefore calls for full adherence to the principles of non-interference, non-intervention, non-use of force or threat of use of force and the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

3. Commends the Mediterranean countries for their efforts in meeting common challenges through coordinated overall responses, based on a spirit of multilateral partnership, towards the general objective of turning the Mediterranean basin into an area of dialogue, exchanges and cooperation, guaranteeing peace, stability and prosperity, encourages them to strengthen such efforts through, inter alia, a lasting multilateral and action-oriented cooperative dialogue among States of the region, and recognizes the role of the United Nations in promoting regional and international peace and security;

4. Recognizes that the elimination of the economic and social disparities in levels of development and other obstacles as well as respect and greater understanding among cultures in the Mediterranean area will contribute to enhancing peace, security and cooperation among Mediterranean countries through the existing forums;

5. Calls upon all States of the Mediterranean region that have not yet done so to adhere to all the multilaterally negotiated legal instruments related to the field of disarmament and non-proliferation, thus creating the necessary conditions for strengthening peace and cooperation in the region;

6. Encourages all States of the region to favour the necessary conditions for strengthening the confidence-building measures among them by promoting genuine openness and transparency on all military matters, by participating, inter alia, in the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures and by providing accurate data and information to the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms;

7. Encourages the Mediterranean countries to strengthen further their cooperation in combating terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, taking into account the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and in combating international crime and illicit arms transfers and illicit drug production, consumption and trafficking, which pose a serious threat to peace, security and stability in the region and therefore to the improvement of the current political, economic and social situation and which jeopardize friendly relations among States, hinder the development of international cooperation and result in the destruction of human rights, fundamental freedoms and the democratic basis of pluralistic society;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on means to strengthen security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region".

Stability and development in South-Eastern Europe

On 10 April [A/57/784-S/2003/417], Serbia and Montenegro transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of the Belgrade Declaration, adopted at the Sixth Meeting of the Heads of State and Government of the South-East Europe Cooperation Process (Belgrade, 9 April), in which they reiterated their commitment to the basic principles and objectives of the Charter on Good-Neighbourly Relations, Stability, Security and Cooperation in South-East Europe [YUN 2000, p. 412] and all other documents adopted within the South-East Europe Cooperation Process.

Chapter VI

Middle East

In 2003, the Middle East situation was marked by both hope and disappointment as the international community set in motion a process for a settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, only to be thwarted by the intensification of the Palestinian intifada (uprising) and the defensive countermeasures adopted by Israel, stalling the political process and creating an unprecedented humanitarian and socio-economic crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

The Quartet, a coordinating mechanism for international peace efforts, comprising the Russian Federation, the United States, the European Union and the United Nations, continued its efforts to mediate a ceasefire and to revive the peace process. It formally presented to both parties at Aqaba, Jordan, on 30 April, its plan for restarting peace negotiations, the so-called "road map", which aimed to achieve progress through parallel and reciprocal steps by the two parties in the political, security, economic, humanitarian and institution-building areas, under an international monitoring system, reaching a permanent status solution by 2005. On 19 November, the Security Council endorsed the road map. In keeping with the terms of the road map, the Palestinian Authority (PA) initiated the reform of its institutions, including the creation of the post of Prime Minister, and Israel took measures to improve the lives of the Palestinian population. The two sides undertook to restart negotiations based on the road map. Also, a number of Palestinian groups declared a ceasefire in June. Those measures led to a significant reduction in the violence and a marked improvement in the security situation. A June summit meeting held at Aqaba, organized at the initiative of United States President George W. Bush, and attended by Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon and Palestinian Prime Minister Mahmoud Abbas, gave new impetus to the implementation of the road map and fostered new hopes about a peace settlement. Those hopes were dashed by the outbreak of a renewed cycle of violence in August, with a heavy loss of civilian lives on both sides. The already critical situation was made worse by the continued expansion of Israeli settlements, Israel's accelerated construction of a separation barrier to deter terrorist activities, with large parts of it cutting into Palestinian territory, with serious economic consequences for over 200,000 Palestinians, and the September decision of the Israeli Security Cabinet to "remove" PA President Yasser Arafat, who remained under siege at his headquarters.

Concerned about the deteriorating situation in the region, the Security Council convened on a monthly basis during the year, and at times even more frequently, to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question. On 16 September, a draft resolution, by which the Council would have called on Israel to desist from any act of deportation and cease any threat to the safety of President Arafat, was not adopted due to the negative vote of a permanent Council member, nor was a 14 October draft resolution on the legality of the Israeli separation barrier in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

The General Assembly, at its resumed tenth emergency special session, convened in September, October and December to discuss the item "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory", adopted three resolutions: one calling on Israel to desist from any act of deportation and cease any threat to the safety of President Arafat; another demanding that Israel stop and reverse the construction of the barrier and asking the Secretary-General to report on Israel's compliance with the resolution; and the third requesting the International Court of Justice to render an advisory opinion on the legal consequences arising from the construction of the barrier. In November, the Secretary-General reported that Israel was not in compliance with the Assembly's demands.

In southern Lebanon, Israeli forces and their main Lebanese opponents, the paramilitary group, Hizbullah, continued to face each other along the "Blue Line", the provisional border drawn by the United Nations following the withdrawal of Israeli troops from south Lebanon in June 2000. An initial period of relative calm was replaced in the second half of the year by an escalation of violence in the Shab'a farmland area, which also strained relations between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic.

Tensions escalated further in early October 2003, when, in retaliation for a suicide bombing attack carried out by the paramilitary group Islamic Jihad in the city of Haifa, the Israeli air force bombed a target inside Syrian territory. The Security Council convened in emergency session to discuss the attack, though no action was taken on a draft resolution submitted by Syria.

The mandates of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force in the Golan Heights were extended twice during the year, and the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization continued to assist both peacekeeping operations in their tasks.

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East continued to provide education and health and social services to nearly 4 million Palestinian refugees living both in and outside camps in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, as well as in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria. An emergency appeal was launched in June 2003 to provide food, health services, shelter and short-term emergency employment opportunities for refugees.

During the year, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported to the Assembly on the situation in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the Gaza Strip and the Golan Heights. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People continued to mobilize international support for the Palestinians.

By decision 58/527 of 17 December, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the agenda item "Armed Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations and its grave consequences for the established international system concerning the peaceful use of nuclear energy, the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international peace and security" and included it in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session. The item had been inscribed yearly on the Assembly's agenda since 1981, following the bombing by Israel of a nuclear research centre near Baghdad [YUN 1981, p. 275].

Peace process

Overall situation

In his October report on the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine [A/58/416-S/2003/947] (see also p. 496), the Secretary-General observed that the first half of 2003 witnessed the emergence of hope for a turning point in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. For the first time since September 2000, both parties, with the active assistance of the Quartet (the Russian Federation, the United States, the European Union and the United Nations), committed themselves to serious negotiations to halt the violence and reach a peaceful settlement. However, renewed violence in the latter half of August 2003 signalled the breakdown of the ceasefire declared by Palestinian groups in June (see p. 468) and a reversal in progress. In the renewed cycle of violence and counter-violence, suicide bombings by Palestinian militant groups and targeted assassinations of members of those groups by Israel resumed. Consequently, the implementation of the road map for resolving the conflict, formally submitted to the parties on 30 April (see p. 464), was frozen and some steps had actually been reversed.

The performance-based and goal-driven road map presented clear phases, time lines, target dates and benchmarks aimed at the progression by the two parties, through reciprocal steps in the political, security, economic, humanitarian and institution-building fields under the auspices of the Quartet, towards resolving the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and ending the occupation. A settlement would lead to the emergence of an independent, democratic and viable Palestinian State living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours. At the beginning of June, at the Aqaba Peace Summit (see p. 465), organized by the United States President, George W. Bush, and hosted by Jordan, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon and Palestinian Prime Minister Mahmoud Abbas committed themselves to begin implementing the road map. On 22 June, the Quartet principals, meeting in Amman, Jordan, reviewed the steps needed to begin that implementation. They called on the Palestinian Authority (PA) to make all possible efforts to halt the activities of groups and individuals planning and conducting terror attacks against Israelis and called on Israel, while recognizing its right to self-defence, to respect international humanitarian law and to exert maximum efforts to avoid civilian casualties among the Palestinians. They also pointed out that steps had to be taken to improve the humanitarian situation and normalize the daily lives of the Palestinian people. Steps taken by the parties to start implementation of the road map included the withdrawal of Israeli forces from parts of the Gaza Strip and Bethlehem and the declaration of a ceasefire by various Palestinian groups, which was arranged with the active involvement of Egypt. President Bush deployed Ambassador John Wolf to lead the informal monitoring structure of the road map's phase one commitments (see p. 464) on the ground, in full cooperation with other Quartet members.

In other developments, with the help of the international community, notable progress was achieved in reforming the PA. The United Kingdom hosted the Quartet's Task Force on Palestinian Reform in London on 20 February (see p. 461), which welcomed Israel's decision to resume monthly transfers of Palestinian tax revenues and the considerable progress made by the PA in its reform efforts, especially in the fiscal sector. On 18 March, President Yasser Arafat approved a bill of amendments to the PA Basic Law to create the post and define the powers of Prime Minister. On 29 April, the Palestinian Legislative Council confirmed Prime Minister Abbas and his new cabinet in office. In September, Ahmed Qurei was nominated to replace Mr. Abbas, following his resignation. Throughout that period, Israel persisted in its efforts to confine PA President Arafat to his headquarters in the West Bank. On 11 September, the Israeli security cabinet agreed in principle on the removal of Mr. Arafat from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, a decision which the Secretary-General strongly urged the Israeli security cabinet to reconsider, since, in his opinion, the action proposed would be dangerous and counterproductive given the instability in the region.

Throughout 2003, the situation in the Middle East remained the subject of extensive consultations and debates in the Security Council. The UN Secretariat continued to provide regular informal briefings to the Council on the latest developments in the region. The Secretary-General stressed his strong belief that the principle of parallelism, on which the road map was based, had to be maintained, since previous attempts had failed because of their reliance on sequentialism. A crucial role for the international community was to assist the parties to address security, economic, humanitarian and political issues at the same time.

Occupied Palestinian Territory

Communications (2-16 January). On 2 January [A/ES-10/210-S/2003/1], the Permanent Observer of Palestine to the United Nations informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President that Israel continued to wage its military campaign throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Since 26 December 2002, Israeli forces had killed 15 Palestinian civilians and raided a number of refugee camps.

On 6 January [A/57/703-S/2003/9], Israel informed the Secretary-General that on 5 January two Palestinian suicide bombers, in coordinated attacks, blew themselves up in Tel Aviv, killing 23 civilians and wounding more than 100 others; it was one of the bloodiest attacks carried out since September 2000.

Israel, in a 16 January letter [A/57/710-S/2003/62] to the Secretary-General, detailed further Palestinian attacks against Israeli civilians and security forces that took place between 12 and 16 January.

Security Council consideration (16 January). The Security Council met on 16 January [meeting 4685] to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Under-Secretary-General (USG) for Political Affairs, Kieran Prendergast, said that the Quartet, in December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 441], had finalized the road map, which would realize the creation of two States—Israel and Palestine—living side by side in peace and security, and had agreed to present it to the parties following the Israeli general elections, scheduled to be held on 28 January. The road map set out a three-phase plan for achieving a negotiated settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, as part of an effort to achieve a just, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East (see p. 464 for details).

With regard to the 5 January attack carried out in Tel Aviv (see above), the PA had condemned it and pledged to bring to justice those involved in its planning. The United Nations expected the PA to do everything in its power to fulfil that promise and called on all Palestinian groups to end such attacks. It also supported the efforts of Egypt and others to broker an end to them. The Secretary-General had also repeatedly emphasized that Israel had to act in compliance with international humanitarian law, for, almost on a daily basis, Palestinian civilians were killed and injured by Israel Defence Forces (IDF). As the occupying Power, Israel had particular responsibilities for protecting civilians, which were clearly defined in the 1949 Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention), and it should review its rules of engagement to ensure that Palestinian civilian deaths were investigated and that those guilty of misconduct were prosecuted. The Secretary-General was still awaiting a written account from Israel of the outcome of its investigation into the death of Iain Hook in November 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 440], a staff member of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA). The USG said that Israel also had to stop carrying out extrajudicial killings (targeted assassinations) and home demolitions, which the Israeli cabinet had announced would, on the contrary, be intensified following the suicide attacks in Tel Aviv.

The USG also noted that there had been no appreciable improvement in the humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In addition to curfews, Israel had imposed new travel and other restrictions on Palestinians, which exacerbated the humanitarian crisis. The international community responded to the humanitarian aid emergency. The World Food Programme extended its emergency food assistance, the World Bank announced a programme expanding support for emergency social services to the Palestinians and UNRWA continued to provide food assistance to more than a million refugees. On account of the dire circumstances, it was important that Israel honoured its commitment to transfer monthly tax revenues owed to the PA and developed a schedule for remitting the hundreds of millions of dollars in arrears. Israel's announcement that it might reconsider its commitment on that issue was consequently very troubling.

The USG also expressed concern about Israel's construction of a security barrier in the West Bank, which would adversely affect thousands of Palestinians living in its vicinity. Communities were already being cut off from their agricultural lands and from health and education services in the West Bank, and the town of Qalqilya would be almost completely enveloped by the barrier. While he acknowledged Israel's need to defend itself against infiltration, it had to ensure that its security measures were not taken at the expense of the Palestinian civilian population.

Communications (21 January–10 February). In a series of letters dated between 21 January and 6 February [A/ES-10/211-S/2003/74, A/ES-10/212-S/2003/101, A/ES-10/213-S/2003/119, A/ES-10/215-S/2003/154], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General and the Council President that Israel continued to wage a military campaign against the Palestinian people. In particular, IDF's incursion on 26 January in Gaza City caused many civilian deaths and extensive property destruction.

Israel, in letters dated 27 January [A/57/719-S/2003/110] and 10 February [A/57/729-S/2003/171], detailed Palestinian terrorist attacks against IDF, which wounded a number of soldiers, in addition to missile attacks against Israeli towns and villages.

On 30 January [A/ES-10/214-S/2003/120], the Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) said that the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to deteriorate. One disturbing aspect concerned IDF closure, on 15 January, of Hebron University and Palestine Polytechnic University as a measure aimed at fighting terrorists and suicide bombers. The Committee viewed that closure as an illegal act of collective punishment, which deprived thousands of Palestinians of their right to education. The closures also added to the mistrust and suspicion between the two peoples and further exacerbated an already dangerous situation on the ground.

Security Council consideration (13 February). The Security Council, on 13 February [meeting 4704], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The USG for Political Affairs said that parliamentary elections were held in Israel on 28 January, resulting in a substantial increase in seats for the Likud party, led by Prime Minister Ariel Sharon. Meanwhile, the violence between Israelis and Palestinians continued unabated, causing further loss of life and destruction. Since 16 January, 65 Palestinians and 7 Israelis had been killed, bringing the death toll since the outbreak of the second intifada in September 2000 to more than 2,300 Palestinians and nearly 700 Israelis. On 25 January, after a number of rockets were fired by Palestinians on Israeli communities inside the Gaza Strip, IDF entered Gaza City in their biggest operation in that region since September 2000. The incursion left 13 Palestinians dead and scores injured. Egypt, through meetings it had hosted in Cairo, tried to encourage talks among Palestinian groups on adopting a ceasefire. At the same time, stringent closures and curfews continued to cause economic conditions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to deteriorate and to hamper the work of the international donor community.

The Palestinian reform process continued to progress with active international support. The London conference on Palestinian reform, held on 14 January would be followed by a series of follow-up meetings in London between 18 and 20 February, including a meeting of Quartet envoys, a donor Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting on international assistance to the Palestinian people, and meetings of the Task Force on Palestinian Reform. The UN Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the PA, Terje Roed-Larsen, together with the ambassadors of the EU and the Russian Federation, met on 11 February with Chairman Arafat to discuss the upcoming London meetings and called on him to take bold and immediate steps to support and facilitate institutional and security reforms prior to those meetings.

Communications (18 February–19 March). In letters dated between 18 February and 17 March [A/ES-10/216-S/2003/194, A/ES-10/217-S/2003/201, A/ES-

10/219-S/2003/217, A/ES-10/220-S/2003/239, A/ES-10/221-S/2003/287, A/ES-10/222-S/2003/326], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General and the Council President of the killing and wounding of Palestinians by IDF, Israeli raids against civilian areas and the destruction of Palestinian homes; lists of the names of those killed and injured were annexed to the letters. Particular attention was devoted to Israeli military assaults in the Gaza Strip, especially in Gaza City. Refugee camps were also attacked, causing the death of many civilians.

Israel, in letters to the Secretary-General dated between 25 February and 10 March [A/57/741-S/2003/225, A/57/745-S/2003/252, A/57/750-S/2003/299], detailed Palestinian attacks against Israeli civilians and IDF. On 5 March, a Palestinian terrorist bombing in the city of Haifa killed at least 15 people and wounded more than 40 others. Between 6 and 9 March, Palestinians launched rocket attacks against southern Israeli towns and villages, including the Negev town of Sderot. Israeli security forces thwarted numerous other attacks.

On 20 February [A/ES-10/218-S/2003/202], the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian Rights expressed concern over an IDF plan to evict Palestinian residents and seize land in northern Bethlehem in order to construct a separation wall. The wall would cause major disruption of the city's economic activity and restrict the freedom of movement of Palestinians. He called on the Secretary-General to use his good offices to prevent the planned division of the city and to stop implementation of the separation plan.

The Council of the League of Arab States (LAS), in the Final Declaration of its fifteenth regular session (Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, 1 March), transmitted to the Secretary-General by Bahrain and to the Council President by the LAS Permanent Observer to the United Nations on 3 March [A/57/743-S/2003/247, S/2003/254], decided, among other things, to provide as at 1 April financial support for the PA's budget for six months, renewable automatically under arrangements established at its 2002 Beirut Summit (YUN 2002, p. 419) as long as the Israeli aggression continued.

The Islamic Summit, at its second emergency session (Doha, Qatar, 5 March) [A/57/748-S/2003/288], in a declaration on Palestine transmitted to the Secretary-General on 6 March, called on the international community, particularly the Quartet, to take action, among other things, to stop Israeli aggression against the Palestinian people and Palestinian cities, including the construction of the separation wall, halt Israeli settlement action in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, ensure international protection of the Palestinian people and resume negotiations. The statement of the Emir of Qatar [A/57/749-S/2003/289] to the special session, in his capacity as Chairman of the ninth Islamic Summit Conference, and his letter [S/2003/343] conveying the results of the Conference to the Secretary-General were transmitted on 6 and 19 March, respectively.

On 4 March [A/57/759-S/2003/332], Malaysia transmitted the documents adopted at the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of the Non-Aligned Movement (Kuala Lumpur, 20-25 February), including a statement on Palestine. The heads of State or Government expressed their support for the efforts of the Quartet and encouraged it to proceed speedily with the implementation of the road map, which had been delayed. In that regard, they stressed the need for consultation between the Movement and the Quartet.

On 18 March, Portugal, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States transmitted to the Council President a statement on Iraq (see p. 332) and a "Commitment to transatlantic solidarity" adopted at the Atlantic Summit (Azores, Portugal, 16 March) [S/2003/335]. Among other things, they reaffirmed a vision of a Middle East peace, with two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security. The leaders welcomed the fact that the road map would soon be delivered to the Palestinians and Israelis and that a Palestinian Prime Minister with sufficient authority to put an end to terrorism and consolidate reforms would be appointed. They looked to the parties to work together constructively.

Task Force on Palestinian Reform

The fourth meeting of the Quartet Task Force on Palestinian Reform, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 432] to develop and implement a comprehensive action plan for reform, was held in London on 19 and 20 February to review the status of Palestinian civil reform efforts (see also p. 503). Those efforts were also reviewed with Israeli and Palestinian representatives.

The Task Force, in a statement issued on 20 February, recognized that the continued terror and violence, restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, deterioration of the humanitarian situation and destruction of local infrastructure and facilities significantly hindered reforms. However, the Task Force welcomed the progress in several areas of civil reform, in particular in fiscal transparency and accountability and the development of the public institutions and laws needed to promote a market economy. It welcomed the Palestinian decision to appoint a Prime Minister and underscored the importance of that position being credible and fully empowered. It commended the commitment of the PA Ministerial Reform Committee and the establishment of a Reform Coordination Support Unit.

The Task Force noted that the 1 February approval by the Palestinian Legislative Council of the 2003 budget was a considerable accomplishment and looked forward to early implementation of the further reform measures announced by the Finance Minister on 31 December 2002 before the Legislative Council. The Task Force also noted the considerable progress made in public administration and civil service reform and looked forward to the early implementation of a detailed action plan in that area. Reforms in some areas, such as the judiciary, were much slower due to counterproductive steps by the Palestinian leadership. The Task Force emphasized the need to comply fully with the recently passed Basic and Judiciary Laws.

The Task Force welcomed the Israeli Government's decision to resume monthly transfers of Palestinian tax revenues and to begin clearing the arrearages. It was paramount that the revenue transfers and return of arrearages continued on a regular basis.

Other developments

Security Council consideration (19 March). The Security Council, on 19 March [meeting 4722], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Mr. Roed-Larsen, said that, for the first time since 2000, there was a real opportunity not only to begin rebuilding the shattered Israeli and Palestinian relationship, but also to start implementing a process that could lead to peace and security in the region. To achieve that, the parties needed to get back to the negotiating table, and for that to happen three critical decisions had to be taken in parallel by the key actors in the process: the PA had to make fundamental decisions on reform in order to re-establish itself as a credible partner for Israel and the international community; the Quartet had to introduce the road map, as agreed in its final draft in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 441]; and Israel had to sit down at the negotiating table and take immediate and serious steps to prevent harm to Palestinian civilians and to alleviate the widespread suffering caused by its security measures.

The decision on 18 March by the Palestinian Legislative Council and President Arafat to amend the PA Basic Law to create the post of a credible and empowered Prime Minister provided an opportunity to begin building a partnership of negotiations. Mahmoud Abbas was nominated to the new post. The amendments gave the Prime Minister a number of powers which had been held previously by the PA President, including appointing or removing cabinet ministers and supervising the work of PA ministries, especially the Ministry of the Interior. Other key areas of reform were discussed at the February meeting of the Quartet's Task Force on Palestinian Reform (see pp. 461 and 503), which agreed that the PA had made impressive progress in implementing reforms under difficult circumstances. Although the Task Force remained very critical of the lack of progress in the judicial sector, there was general consensus that financial accountability and market economy reforms continued to progress at a rapid pace.

The announcement by the United States President that the Quartet would present the road map to the parties as soon as a credible and empowered Palestinian Prime Minister was confirmed was an important step forward. Under the road map and under the auspices of the Quartet, progress would be monitored and assessed on the basis of the parties' compliance with specific performance benchmarks. The Israelis and the Palestinians had to implement in parallel a number of reciprocal obligations for implementation of the road map to be effective. The PA had to declare an unequivocal end to violence and terrorism and undertake efforts on the ground to prevent attacks on Israelis. At the same time, Israel had to end actions that undermined trust, such as proactive security operations, attacks on civilians, and confiscation and demolition of Palestinian homes and property. Israel also had to dismantle settlement outposts erected since March 2001 and, consistent with the Mitchell report [YUN 2001, p. 409], freeze all settlement activity. A second and critical feature of the road map was its clearly defined final destination. In accordance with Council resolution 1397(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 418], the final negotiated settlement would result in the emergence of an independent, democratic and viable Palestinian State living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours. The settlement would resolve the Palestinian-Israeli conflict and end the occupation that began in 1967—a vital element of international efforts to promote comprehensive peace in the region.

Turning to the security and humanitarian situations, the Special Coordinator said that the new Palestinian Government had to do everything within its power to curb terrorism and all forms of violence and threats. Since the last briefing to the Council in February (see p. 460), 162 people had lost their lives: 135 Palestinians and 27 Israelis. The PA security forces had to take action to confront those who murdered civilians in acts that could not be seen as political or justified by any means. Unless the PA exercised its monopoly on the use of force, it would have failed in its authority and leadership. During the past month, IDF conducted intensive operations in a number of Palestinian cities and refugee camps throughout the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Those operations caused high numbers of civilian casualties, particularly in Gaza, and reports indicated that IDF used excessive and at times indiscriminate force. The physical insecurity was also creating serious economic insecurity. The construction by Israel of the separation barrier in the West Bank, coupled with severe movement restrictions, had denied many communities access to their land and sources of livelihood. At the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting of all major donors (London, 18 February), participants expressed their conviction that support to the PA remained the best short-term vehicle for addressing the dire economic and humanitarian situation. They also stressed that Israel had to do more to reduce the burden of security restrictions on civilians and facilitate the provision of international assistance to communities in need. More broadly, donors stressed the urgent need to re-establish a tripartite effort involving Palestinians, Israelis and the international community, working in partnership to address those problems, along with the security and political issues that had spawned them.

Communications (31 March-9 April). On 31 March [A/57/770-S/2003/395], Israel informed the Secretary-General that on the previous day a Palestinian suicide bomber wounded 58 people at a cafe in the city of Netanya.

In two letters dated 4 April [A/ES-10/223-S/2003/405] and 9 April [A/ES-10/224-S/2003/416], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General and the Council President that Israel continued to wage its military campaign against the Palestinian people. In particular, IDF continued to launch attacks in the Gaza Strip.

On 7 April [A/57/780-S/2003/410], Qatar transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of a statement made by the Emir of Qatar at the Forum on Islamic-Christian Dialogue (Doha, 7 April), in which he stated that the use of religious doctrines for political aims and the labelling of an entire nation based on the behaviour of a handful of extremists or ignorant people were the main obstacles to cooperation between the two faiths.

Security Council consideration (16 April). The Security Council, on 16 April [meeting 4741], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Assistant Secretary-General (ASG) for Political Affairs, Danilo Türk, said that, since the last briefing on 19 March (see p. 462), the attention of the international community had been focused on the war in Iraq (see p. 333). At the same time, there was a growing realization of the urgent need to address the Middle East conflict. The Quartet would present the road map to Israel and the PA following the confirmation by the Palestinian Legislative Council of the appointment of Prime Minister Abbas. The crucial period of implementation would then begin and the parties, with the help of the Quartet, would have to take the necessary steps to end the cycle of violence. The international community should be prepared to stay the course charted by the road map. Implementation would not be easy but its goal was too important for the parties to be deterred by early difficulties. Some of those obstacles were apparent. Some 64 Palestinians and 5 Israelis had been killed since 19 March. On 30 March, a suicide bomber struck in the Israeli city of Netanya (see above). Also in March, 103 Palestinians were killed, the highest monthly death toll in the preceding 12 months. The socio-economic situation in the West Bank continued to deteriorate and no amount of donor assistance would alleviate the crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The economy needed to operate normally and for that to happen Israel would have to change its security approach by removing internal roadblocks and lifting curfews. However, the damage done to Palestinian society would likely be more difficult to reverse, as over half of the children of the Gaza Strip were suffering from acute post-traumatic stress disorder, due to exposure to violence and destruction. Similar pain and trauma had also been inflicted on Israelis, especially children. The continued construction of the separation barrier in the West Bank might constrain the delivery of basic social services to Palestinian populations and inhibit commercial exchanges if there were not sufficient access points. The placement of the barrier inside the West Bank could also have a negative impact on the Quartet's efforts, through the road map, to establish a viable Palestinian State.

Those conditions highlighted the challenges facing the new Palestinian Prime Minister, who would have to build on the progress achieved in reforming the PA, especially bringing the judicial sector up to par with the financial sector, restoring law and order and bringing to justice those involved in carrying out terrorist acts. He would have to provide the Palestinian people with a transparent and effective Government and the Israelis with the partner in peace. The Prime Minister would receive the active support of the international community, in particular the Quartet. Israel also had an important part to play in ensuring the success of the new Palestinian Government, particularly by helping to facilitate the reform process and acting to minimize the effects of its security measures. The terrorism that had beset Israel presented it with enormous challenges, but such steps could help empower the PA and its Prime Minister to take action against terrorists. Prime Minister Sharon's recent statements in support of a peace process, including his acknowledgement of the "painful concessions" Israel might need to make, were welcomed. The path ahead charted by the Quartet represented the only realistic hope for ending the current cycle of violence and counter-violence.

Communications (25 April-19 May). In letters dated between 25 April and 6 May [A/57/799-S/2003/502, A/57/804-S/2003/517, A/57/807-S/2003/527], Israel detailed a number of Palestinian attacks against Israeli civilians. The attacks included the detonation of explosives by Palestinian suicide bombers, such as the one on 24 April in the town of Kfar Saba, which wounded 14 Israelis, and the one on 30 April in Tel Aviv, which killed three civilians and wounded 60 others.

By a 1 May letter [A/ES-10/225-S/2003/518], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel, in a span of less than 24 hours, had killed at least 21 Palestinians, including 15 during an attack by IDF on the densely populated Shijaiyah neighbourhood of Gaza City.

In letters dated 12 and 19 May [A/57/810-S/2003/540, A/57/815-S/2003/557], Israel detailed Palestinian attacks against Israeli civilians and IDF. Five suicide bombing attacks occurred between 17 and 19 May, including one on 18 May inside a bus in Jerusalem, which resulted in the death of seven civilians and wounded 20 others, and another one on 19 May in the city of Afula, which killed three Israelis and wounded 47 others.

By a 16 May letter [A/ES-10/226-S/2003/548], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, since 1 May, IDF had killed 34 Palestinian civilians and wounded many others.

Road map

On 30 April, the "performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict", as affirmed in Security Council resolution 1397(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 418], was presented by the Quartet to the Israeli Government and the PA. The text of the road map, transmitted by the Secretary-General to the Council President on 7 May [S/2003/529], outlined a goal-driven plan, with clear phases, time lines, target dates and benchmarks aimed at progress through reciprocal steps by the two parties in the political, security, economic, humanitarian and institution-building fields, under the auspices of the Quartet. The final goal was a comprehensive settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict by 2005, consistent with a 24 June 2002 statement [YUN 2002, p. 431] by United States President George W. Bush, in which he called for two democratic States living side by side in peace and security.

A two-State solution would be achieved only through an end to violence and terrorism, with a Palestinian leadership acting decisively against terror and willing to build a practising democracy based on tolerance and liberty, and through Israel's readiness to do what was necessary for a democratic Palestinian State to be established, and a clear, unambiguous acceptance by both parties of the goal of a negotiated settlement. The Quartet would assist and facilitate implementation of the plan, including direct discussions between the parties as required. The initiative was a vital element of international efforts to promote a comprehensive peace on all tracks, including the Syrian-Israeli and Lebanese-Israeli tracks. The Quartet would meet regularly at senior levels to evaluate the parties' performance on implementation of the plan.

The road map was divided into three phases. Phase I, which was to be implemented by the end of May 2003, focused on ending terror and violence, normalizing Palestinian life and building Palestinian institutions. During that phase, the Palestinians had to call for and undertake an unconditional cessation of violence against Israelis anywhere. Likewise, Israel had to call for and undertake an unconditional cessation of violence against Palestinians everywhere. Both sides had to resume security cooperation to end violence, terrorism and incitement through restructured and effective Palestinian security services. The PA had to undertake political reform in preparation for statehood, including drafting a Palestinian constitution, and free, fair and open elections on the basis of those measures. Israel had to take all necessary steps to normalize Palestinian life, withdraw from Palestinian areas occupied from 28 September 2000, and freeze all settlement activity, consistent with the Mitchell report [YUN 2001, p. 409]. In phase II, from June to December 2003, efforts would focus on creating an independent Palestinian State with provisional borders and attributes of sovereignty, based on the new constitution, as a way station to a permanent status settlement. Its goals would be to further build on and sustain the goals outlined in phase I: ratification of a democratic Palestinian constitution, formal establishment of the office of Prime Minister and consolidation of political reform. The objectives of phase III, (2004-2005), were consolidation of reform and stabilization of Palestinian institutions, sustained Palestinian security performance and Israeli-Palestinian negotiations aimed at a permanent status agreement in 2005. The Quartet would convene a second international conference in 2004 to endorse agreement on an independent Palestinian State, leading to a final status solution in 2005, including borders, Jerusalem, refugees, settlements, and progress towards a comprehensive Middle East settlement between Israel and Lebanon and Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic soon after.

On 30 April [S/2003/519], the Russian Federation, in a statement issued by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding the official release of the road map, said that the agreed approach of the Quartet, which had presented the road map that day to Israel and the PA (see p. 464), was the best path towards peace, the point of departure for Palestinian-Israeli negotiations and a framework programme of action.

On 1 May [S/2003/520], the Russian Federation welcomed the approval by the Palestinian Legislative Council of the cabinet of Prime Minister Abbas, thus removing the existing obstacles impeding implementation of the road map for a Middle East settlement.

Security Council consideration (19 May). The Security Council, on 19 May [meeting 4757], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General said that the success of the road map, and, consequently, of the new tentative peace process, would depend on the good faith and performance of the parties, key regional actors and the determination of the international community. The obstacles to peace in the region were numerous, especially since 79 Palestinians and 16 Israelis had been killed since the last briefing to the Council on 16 April (see p. 463). The PA had to bring to justice those involved in planning and carrying out suicide bombing attacks against Israelis. It needed assistance to rebuild and re-focus its security forces, and Israel needed to support the new Palestinian Government in that regard so as to allow it to increase security for Palestinians and prevent terror attacks on Israelis. Reciprocal confidence-building measures were essential in order to create legitimacy and popular support for Prime Minister Abbas's anti-terror policies. Under the first phase of the road map, Israel was required to take no actions undermining trust, including attacks on civilians or confiscation and/or demolition of Palestinian homes. However, only hours after the presentation of the road map, IDF operations in Gaza City resulted in the death of at least 13 Palestinians and injury to many more, in addition to the destruction of Palestinian property. The Special Coordinator said that, while taking into consideration Israel's right to self-defence, Israel had to abandon the use of excessive force in densely populated areas. He also pointed out that illegal armed elements in Palestinian areas were responsible for violence that affected Palestinian civilians by basing themselves in civilian areas, and noted that Prime Minister Abbas had made the disarming of such groups one of his Government's goals.

At the same time, the humanitarian and socio-economic conditions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip continued to deteriorate, due mainly to movement restrictions imposed by IDF. The situation in Gaza was exacerbated by a draconian closure regime recently instituted by Israeli authorities that had resulted in the closing of Gaza to all but those with diplomatic passports. Holders of valid UN laissez-passer and service visas for Israel were also barred from entering or leaving Gaza, with the result that a significant number of UN staff were stuck on either side of the boundary and unable to carry out their work. The United Nations would be unable to carry out its operations in Gaza if the closure situation continued. The humanitarian situation also significantly complicated the task ahead for Prime Minister Abbas. Nevertheless, he had made substantial progress in implementing the first phase of the road map, such as action towards a draft constitution for Palestinian statehood and the establishment of an independent Palestinian election commission. The fate and credibility of his Government would depend on a radical and credible change of policy in the security sector, an area in which the PA had failed over the past two years. Israel, on the other hand, had yet to endorse the road map and commit to its implementation. Prime Minister Abbas's work would be aided by Egypt's planned renewed attempt to induce all Palestinian groups to agree to a ceasefire.

Aqaba Peace Summit

At the initiative of the United States President, and hosted by King Abdullah of Jordan, the Middle East Peace Summit was held in Aqaba, Jordan, on 4 June. Both Israeli Prime Minister Sharon and Palestinian Prime Minister Abbas attended the meeting. It was preceded on 3 June by a meeting in Sharm el-Sheikh, which was attended by the United States President, King Abdullah, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, King Hamad of Bahrain, Crown Prince Abdullah of Saudi Arabia and Prime Minister Abbas.

In his statement following the meeting, Prime Minister Sharon said that Israel supported the United States President's vision of two States—Israel and a Palestinian State—living side by side in peace and security and welcomed the opportunity to resume direct negotiations according to the road map, as adopted by the Israeli Government, to achieve that vision. It was not in Israel's interest to govern the Palestinians, but for the Palestinians to govern themselves in their own State. A democratic Palestinian State fully at peace with Israel would promote the long-term security and well-being of all Israelis. However, there could be no peace without the abandonment and elimination of terrorism, violence and incitement. Israel would work with the Palestinians to fight terrorism and would seek to restore normal Palestinian life, improve the humanitarian situation, rebuild trust and promote progress. Israel understood the importance of territorial contiguity in the West Bank for a viable Palestinian State and would begin to remove any unauthorized outposts. It accepted the principle that no unilateral actions by any party could prejudice the outcome of negotiations.

Prime Minister Abbas said that the PA had accepted the road map without any reservations and, like Israel, was prepared to meet its responsibilities. He stressed that there could be no military solution to the conflict and thus reaffirmed the Palestinians' renunciation of terror against Israelis anywhere. Such methods were inconsistent with Palestinian religious and moral traditions and were obstacles to the achievement of an independent, sovereign Palestinian State. The PA would exert all of its efforts to end the militarization of the intifada and establish a democratic Palestinian State based on the rule of law, with a single political authority and weapons only in the hands of official law enforcement officers.

United States President Bush said that pledges made by Prime Minister Sharon were meaningful signs of respect for the rights of the Palestinians and their hope for a viable, democratic, peaceful Palestinian State. The efforts pledged by Prime Minister Abbas demonstrated his leadership and commitment to building a better future for the Palestinian people. However, the two leaders alone could not bring about peace. It required the support of other nations in the region. In that regard, Arab leaders, at the meeting in Sharm el-Sheikh the previous day, promised to cut off assistance and the flow of money and weapons to terrorist groups and to help Prime Minister Abbas rid Palestinian areas of terrorism.

The United States would strive to see that the commitments made by both sides were fulfilled and would provide training and support for a new, restructured Palestinian security service. It would also place a mission on the ground, led by Ambassador John Wolf, to help the parties move towards peace, monitor their progress and state clearly who was fulfilling their responsibilities. President Bush had also asked Secretary of State Colin Powell and National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice to give the matter the highest priority.

The Secretary-General, in a statement [SG/SM/8736] issued by his Spokesman, welcomed the impetus given to the Middle East peace process by the Aqaba Summit and believed that the statements made by Prime Ministers Sharon and Abbas opened the way for both parties to implement the Quartet's road map. The Secretary-General pledged through his personal efforts, together with the Quartet partners, to continue to assist the parties.

Further developments

Communications (3-13 June). By a 3 June letter to the Secretary-General [A/57/824-S/2003/619], Iran transmitted the texts of the final communiqué, the Tehran Declaration and the resolutions adopted by the Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers at its thirtieth session (Tehran, Iran, 28-30 May). The Conference adopted eight resolutions on Palestinian affairs, with a focus on the Arab-Israeli conflict and Al-Quds Al-Sharif (Jerusalem), and on an Islamic boycott of Israel.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine, in two communications dated 10 and 12 June [A/ES-10/227-S/2003/638, A/ES-10/228-S/2003/643], informed the Secretary-General and the Council President that IDF had carried out three extrajudicial executions, using helicopter gunship missiles, killing at least 19 Palestinians and wounding many more.

On 13 June [A/57/839-S/2003/645], Israel informed the Secretary-General that, since the convening of the Middle East Peace Summit at Aqaba (see above), a new wave of Palestinian attacks had killed 25 Israelis. On 11 June alone, 16 Israelis were killed and 112 wounded in Jerusalem. Israel stated that on 23 May it had agreed to accept the steps set out in the road map (see p. 464), indicating the desire of the people of Israel to renew direct negotiations, and had already started to implement the commitments it made at the Summit, by releasing Palestinian detainees, dismantling unauthorized outposts and easing security restrictions. The PA, on the other hand, had yet to take a single step towards fulfilling its obligations to dismantle the terrorist in-infrastructure which it continued to sustain. By refusing to take real steps to confront terrorism, the Palestinian side was endangering any prospect for peace and compelling Israel to continue to take self-defence measures. Israel hoped that the new Palestinian leadership would prove its seriousness about ending violence, including confronting and eradicating terrorist organizations, such as Hamas.

Security Council consideration (13 June). The Security Council, on 13 June [meeting 4773], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Mr. Prendergast, said that President Bush's initiative to hold the Aqaba Summit gave an important impetus to the renewal of the peace process. However, the Summit was followed by a sharp rise in violence, re-igniting the familiar spiral of violence, counter-violence and revenge. The situation had reached a crossroads where either the promise of peace or a resumption of violence would define the course of the political process in the months ahead. Not unexpectedly, Prime Ministers Sharon and Abbas had each met resistance at home to the commitments they made at Aqaba. In the circumstances, the international community had to help the parties to remain on track and provide active support throughout the road map implementation process.

The circulation of Palestinians within the West Bank had been reduced since the suicide bomb attack in Afula on 19 May (see p. 464), while the movement of West Bank residents with permits to Jerusalem had been completely halted since 2 June. The movement of international personnel and goods into the Gaza Strip remained subject to a stringent Israeli security closure regime. Representatives of the United Nations and the broader international community had met on 27 and 29 May with the Israeli Government to discuss the movement restrictions imposed by IDF, particularly on the Gaza Strip (see p. 465), which continued to have a detrimental effect on their efforts to provide humanitarian assistance. The renewal of the closure regime, after assurances by the Israeli authorities that the situation would improve, was worrying. The United Nations would continue efforts to resolve the issue at the local level. However, the security of staff and goods remained a serious concern.

Communication (20 June). In a 20 June letter [A/37/842-S/2003/662], Israel detailed Palestinian attacks against Israelis, which included suicide bombers and rocket attacks. Israel reiterated that, since the Aqaba Summit, and in accordance with its acceptance of the steps set out in the road map, it had released Palestinian detainees, dismantled unauthorized outposts, eased security restrictions and held security meetings with the Palestinian leadership. Failure on the part of the PA to take real and genuine steps to eliminate terrorism would prevent any progress in the peace process.

Quartet meeting (22 June)

Representatives of the Quartet—the UN Secretary-General, the Russian Foreign Minister, the Greek Foreign Minister, the United States Secretary of State, the High Representative for European Common Foreign and Security Policy and the European Commissioner for External Affairs—met at the Dead Sea in Jordan on 22 June to review developments since their last meeting [YUN 2002, p. 441]. In a statement issued following the meeting [S/2003/672], which was transmitted to the Security Council President by the Secretary-General on 25 June, the representatives welcomed the appointment of Prime Minister Abbas and the acceptance by Israel and the PA of the road map. They endorsed the results of the Red Sea Summit meetings (see p. 465) and pledged to support Prime Ministers Abbas and Sharon in carrying out the commitments made at those meetings. They also welcomed the decision by the United States President to place a mission on the ground to help the parties to move towards peace (see p. 466), and shared his expectation that both parties would meet their obligations in full.

The Quartet condemned the terror attacks against Israeli citizens carried out by Palestinian military groups and called on the Palestinian authorities to take all possible steps to halt immediately the activities of those groups. It supported immediate Palestinian action to restructure and consolidate under Prime Minister Abbas all security services and called on both sides to reach agreement as soon as possible on workable security arrangements. It expressed concern over Israeli military action that resulted in the killing of innocent Palestinians and other civilians, and, while recognizing Israel's right to self-defence, the Quartet called on the Israeli Government to respect international humanitarian law and to exert maximum efforts to avoid such civilian casualties, as well as to ease the plight of the Palestinian people by facilitating movement of people and goods, in addition to access by international humanitarian organizations. Recalling its position that settlement activity had to stop, the Quartet welcomed Prime Minister Sharon's undertaking at Aqaba (see p. 465) and the first steps taken by Israel on the ground to remove unauthorized outposts. The Quartet reaffirmed its commitment to a just, comprehensive and lasting settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict, including progress towards peace between Israel and Syria and Israel and Lebanon.

In comments made after the meeting, the Secretary-General said that in keeping with the approach laid out in the road map, the principle of parallelism should be maintained. Security, humanitarian and political issues had to be addressed at the same time. The Secretary-General called on Israel not to use disproportionate force in civilian areas, carry out house demolitions or engage in extrajudicial killings, for unless Palestinians felt that positive change in their daily lives, including ending movement restrictions, freezing settlement activities and re-establishing economic activity, there would not be sufficient public support to sustain peace. Simultaneously, the PA had to spare no effort to bring to an end all acts of terror against Israelis anywhere. Terror was counterproductive to the ultimate goals of ending occupation, establishing a Palestinian State, and the universal recognition of the State of Israel and the State of Palestine.

The Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, in a 22 June statement regarding the outcome of the Quartet meeting, transmitted to the Secretary-General on 24 June [S/2003/666], said that the situation remained tense and the latest outbreak of violence testified to the fact that the forces opposed to a settlement had not abandoned their attempts to defeat the implementation of the road map. Everything possible, therefore, should be done to prevent a new cycle of confrontation and preserve the opportunity for resolving the crisis. The Russian Minister said that it was time to develop a programme for resuming the negotiating process on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks, as it could ensure greater stability in moving the road map forward.

Developments between 27 June and 19 August

Communications (27 June–10 July). On 27 June [A/ES-10/229-S/2003/677], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said IDF, on that day, had carried out a military attack on a civilian neighbourhood in Gaza City, killing four men and wounding more than 15 other Palestinians.

On 10 July [A/57/846-S/2003/699], Israel detailed Palestinian shooting and mortar attacks against Israeli civilians, which resulted in the death of two Israelis.

Security Council consideration (17 July). The Security Council, on 17 July [meeting 4788], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Mr. Roed-Larsen, said that, since the last Council briefing on 13 June (see p. 467), the revived peace process based on the road map had made encouraging progress. Israelis and Palestinians were meeting regularly and working together at all levels, which had resulted in greater mobility for Palestinians in the Gaza Strip and Bethlehem and in greater security for Israelis. IDF had withdrawn from parts of Gaza and Bethlehem, enabling the PA to re-establish control over those areas. Announced on 30 June, a ceasefire that suspended attacks on Israelis was reached among Palestinian groups and was largely being honoured. The ceasefire was achieved through the efforts of the Palestinian leadership and with the support of Egypt. Regular meetings were occurring between the Palestinian and Israeli Prime Ministers, and both sides met frequently at the ministerial level to discuss such issues as security, prisoners, incitement, economic development, investment and health. Though the challenges to the peace process remained numerous, there had been a sharp decrease in violent attacks and incitement during the reporting period. IDF had largely ceased security activities in those areas in which the PA had re-established its authority. In addition, with the announcement of the Palestinian ceasefire, IDF had refrained from extrajudicial killings. The humanitarian situation had seen little improvement, despite the decrease in violent clashes following the declaration of a ceasefire by Palestinian groups. The withdrawal of IDF from parts of the Gaza Strip had been accompanied by some easing of restrictions on the movement of Palestinian workers and commodities. The movement of humanitarian agencies in entering and leaving the Gaza Strip had improved. However, closures, curfews and checkpoints had not been relaxed significantly in the West Bank and the construction of the separation barrier was continuing. In order to further the peace process, Prime Minister Sharon had to demonstrate to the Israeli people that participation in the road map process would lead to an end to violence and terror. Prime Minister Abbas had to continue to carry out the reform and consolidation of the Palestinian security forces, and in order to do so he needed the active support of Mr. Arafat, who was the Chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and President of the PA.

Communications (17 July–12 August). On 17 July [A/ES-10/230-S/2003/730], the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian Rights reported that IDF had ordered the closure of the Palestine Polytechnic University for an additional month. The University had been closed by IDF since January 2003 (see p. 460).

On 12 August [A/57/858-S/2003/809], Israel said that on that day Palestinian suicide bombers killed two Israelis and wounded 13 others in two separate attacks. Israel said that it held the Palestinian leadership fully responsible for its failure to suppress the campaign of terror, and only when terrorism and incitement were fully and finally rejected would the peace process advance.

Security Council consideration (19 August). The Security Council, on 19 August [meeting 4810], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The ASG for Political Affairs, Mr. Türk, said that the situation in the Middle East remained fragile. However, the overall level of violence in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, compared to previous months, had dropped considerably, even though lives continued to be lost. Despite setbacks, progress continued in the implementation of some areas of the road map. Since the PA resumed security responsibility in July for the Gaza Strip and Bethlehem, violence in those areas had significantly decreased. However, six weeks into the 30 June ceasefire, the parties had been unable to agree on the conditions under which the PA would resume security responsibility in the remaining seven West Bank Palestinian cities. Both parties needed to deepen their commitment to security cooperation, as it was at the heart of further progress.

Israel's settlement policy was one of the key challenges to the fulfilment of the road map's goal of a two-State solution. Israel had to recognize that that policy, as well as the construction of the separation barrier and its route in the West Bank, undermined the possibility of a future viable and contiguous Palestinian State. According to an Israeli monitoring group, some 60 settlement outposts were established between March 2001 and June 2003. Since the last briefing, new settlement expansion plans were being discussed by the Israeli Government, which had approved new bypass roads in three locations in the West Bank. On 31 July, the Israeli Defence Ministry approved the issuance of a tender to build new housing units at the Neveh Dekalim settlement in the Gaza Strip, in addition to significant expansion of the lands surrounding the Morag settlement. The building of the separation wall and the continued presence of settlement outposts had caused many Palestinians to question Israel's intent in the peace process.

There had been a marked improvement in July in the humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, although the situation remained dire. The movement of UN staff into and within Gaza had eased considerably and fewer access incidents had been reported by international organizations. IDF removed several key roadblocks in July, although some of them were replaced by manned checkpoints. However, most villages and towns continued to experience severe access problems. In fulfilment of Prime Minister Sharon's commitments made at the Aqaba Summit (see p. 465), Israel had released over 400 Palestinian prisoners as at 18 August; over 6,000 more remained in Israeli detention centres.

Escalation of violence

Communications (25 August–11 September). In a series of communications dated between 25 August and 10 September [A/ES-10/231-S/2003/834, A/ES-10/232-S/2003/843, A/ES-10/233-S/2003/848, A/ES-10/234-S/2003/853, A/ES-10/235-S/2003/865, A/ES-10/236-S/2003/874], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General and the Council President of the killing, including extrajudicial executions, and imprisonment of Palestinians by Israeli forces, and submitted lists of those killed and injured. On 21 August, IDF killed Ismail Abu Shanab, a political leader of Hamas; destroyed large areas of farmland in the Gaza Strip on 28 August; dropped a 550-pound bomb in Gaza City on 6 September in an attempt to kill the spiritual leader of Hamas, Sheikh Ahmed Yassin, which wounded 15 Palestinians; and dropped another bomb in Gaza City on 10 September, which killed two Palestinians and wounded 20 others.

On 10 September [A/57/862-S/2003/875], Israel informed the Secretary-General and the Council President of two terrorist attacks on 9 September by Palestinian suicide bombers, one of whom attacked a cafe in Jerusalem, killing at least seven civilians and wounding 40 others, while the other carried out an attack near a bus depot in Rishon Letzion in central Israel, killing seven Israelis and wounding 30 others. Those attacks were preceded by other acts of terrorism, including the one on 19 August by a Palestinian suicide bomber who detonated a bomb inside a bus in Jerusalem, killing 22 people and wounding 135. Israel expected the new Palestinian leadership to put an absolute end to terrorism by working to fulfil their obligations, which consisted of, among other things, completely dismantling terrorist networks, confiscating and destroying illegal weapons, and bringing terrorists to justice. In the light of the continuing rejection by the Palestinian leadership of those obligations, Israel was compelled to take the necessary measures to defend its citizens, while making every effort to minimize harm to innocent civilians.

On 11 September [S/2003/892], the European Union (EU) Presidency, in a statement condemning the 9 September attack, said that the resurgence of terrorist attacks was obstructing the international community's efforts to restore peace and was damaging the cause of the Palestinian people. In the context of the global fight against terrorism, the EU had decided (Riva del Garda, Spain, 5-6 September) to place the political branch of Hamas on the European list of terrorist organizations. Noting the resignation of Palestinian Prime Minister Abbas, it urged the new Prime Minister, Ahmed Qurei, to continue on the same path. It called on the PA to reorganize its security forces, re-establish public order and undertake visible efforts to dismantle the terrorist organizations. At the same time, it called on Israel, among other actions, to withdraw its army from the autonomous areas, put an end to targeted killings, and relieve the Palestinian people of roadblocks and other restrictions.

Security Council consideration (12-16 September). On 12 September, the Council met at the request of the Non-Aligned Movement caucus and the Arab Group to discuss the situation in the Middle East, and in particular Israel's decision in principle to expel Chairman Arafat. In a press statement [SC/7871] issued by its President, the Council expressed the view that such action would be unhelpful and should not be implemented. It also condemned the violence and urged both parties to act with maximum restraint.

At the request of the Sudan, on behalf of the Arab Group [S/2003/880], the Security Council, on 15 September [meeting 4824], considered the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question. With the Council's consent, the President invited, among others, Israel, Syria [S/2003/887] and the Permanent Observer of Palestine [S/2003/886], at their request, to participate in the deliberations. The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General said that, since the last Council briefing on 19 August (see p. 469), the Israeli-Palestinian peace process had stalled. The cycle of terror attacks and extrajudicial killings had broken the Palestinian ceasefire, bringing the process to a standstill. A combination of violence and slow implementation of the road map peace plan had brought the region to a potential turning point. Once again, the parties and the international community were confronted with the question whether the parties would recommit themselves to peace or whether the debilitating conflict would grind on. Without a major change in the situation on the ground, further deterioration would be inevitable. Since 19 August, violence had increased. On that day, a suicide bombing in Jerusalem killed 23 people, after IDF had carried out two military operations that resulted in the death of four Palestinians. Israel responded by declaring all-out war against Hamas and other terrorist elements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including a stepped-up campaign of attempted extrajudicial killings of Hamas leaders. After two more suicide bombings on 9 September, the Israeli Government announced that it had decided in principle to remove PA President Arafat "in a manner and at a time of its choosing".

The Special Coordinator said that the implementation of the road map never effectively began, as neither party actively addressed the core concerns of the other side. For Israelis, that concern was security and freedom from terrorist attacks. The PA failed again to grasp control of the security situation, and while the unilateral ceasefire declared by Palestinian militant groups was a useful step, other steps such as the consolidation of security forces and security reforms could have been taken. For Palestinians, the core concern was an assurance that the peace process would lead to the end of the occupation and the establishment of a viable, independent Palestinian State on the basis of the 1967 borders. The settlement activity and continued construction of the separation barrier caused Palestinians to wonder whether that goal was achievable. In addition, Israel had never fully endorsed the road map. Thus, the two key issues in the peace process were terrorism and occupation and real action had to be taken to end both. The very limited approach to implementing the road map never effectively tackled either issue. A core concept of the road map, the principle of parallelism, or reciprocal steps by both sides in all fields, was not emphasized during the preceding four months of half-hearted implementation of the road map, leading to the single issue of the Israelis' security from terrorism becoming its sole focus. As a result, violent groups were allowed to set the pace and the agenda for the process. The principle of parallelism should, therefore, be reasserted by taking steps to end both terrorism and occupation and regain control of the process.

Despite the setbacks, the Quartet needed to redouble its efforts. Its principals had agreed to meet in late September to address all relevant issues, including devising ways of putting the peace process back on track. Palestinian Prime Minister Abbas had resigned and the new nominee, Ahmed Qurei, had not been able to take up the reins of power. The rapid appointment and confirmation of a credible and fully empowered Prime Minister was an essential step in order for the PA to disarm militant groups and establish law and order. For its part, Israel had to make significant concessions, for without them neither the peace process nor any peace-minded Palestinian leader would be credible in the eyes of the Palestinian people.

Given the current situation, the Special Coordinator said that it might be appropriate to speed up the road map process. Bold steps in the areas of settlements and security, and involving increased activity by the international community, might be necessary to jump-start a resumption of the process.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel's threats reached a new level with its decision to remove President Arafat and to request the Israeli army to draw up a plan for his expulsion. Mr. Sharon and his Government represented a threat to the stability of the region, for they did not seek a permanent settlement but only long-term transitional arrangements. Mr. Sharon's vision was the imposition of a number of walled and separate enclaves, confining the Palestinians to less than half of the West Bank and to slightly more than half of the Gaza Strip. The Israeli Government had not accepted the road map, only the "steps" in the plan, and had attached 14 reservations, which effectively undermined most of it. The essential problem was Israel's policy of settlement building, its refusal to end the occupation of Palestinian land and its failure to accept an independent and sovereign Palestinian State with East Jerusalem as its capital. Without a change in that policy, there would be no peace process and no implementation of the road map. The revival of the road map would require new and serious implementation, with both sides facing up to their responsibilities. The Council could play an important role in that respect, by providing strong support to the road map and officially ordering the two sides to comply with its provisions and to implement them. The Quartet, with the help of the Council, should build the agreed-upon monitoring mechanism and have a real international presence, perhaps even international troops.

Israel said that it had come to the conclusion that Mr. Arafat had not been truthful about his intentions. His continuing rejection of Israel's right to exist and his support of terrorists and their tactics had brought suffering to the region and denied the promise of peace to Israelis and Palestinians alike. In addition, he had undermined the road map at every step of the way. In fact, he actively sought to prevent the Palestinian Prime Minister from fulfilling the Palestinian obligations under the road map and had sabotaged attempts to establish a new and different leadership in the PA. Mr. Arafat had refused to allow the consolidation of security forces under the control of an empowered minister for internal security, who would have worked towards the dismantling of the terrorist infrastructure. In so doing, he had undermined former Prime Minister Abbas, forcing him to resign. Mr. Arafat had kept terrorist groups like the Tanzim under his direct control and prevented efforts to introduce accountability in the PA's finances, so that money could continue to be funnelled into his private accounts. The decision by the Israeli cabinet to remove him merely stated the obvious, namely, that Mr. Arafat was an obstacle to peace. Israel hoped that a new and different Palestinian leadership would be ready to implement its obligations to fight terrorism. If that did happen, the new Palestinian leadership would find in Israel a willing partner ready to make painful compromises.

The Russian Federation expressed concern about Israel's decision to expel Mr. Arafat, for such a step would erase any prospects for a peaceful settlement of the conflict. Russia condemned terrorism in all its forms and called on both sides to act with the utmost responsibility. Russia stressed that the road map provided the only chance of finding a way out of the crisis.

The United States said that, while all parties had responsibilities in bringing peace to the Middle East, ending terrorism had to be the highest priority. Those responsible for targeting civilians and obstructing the Quartet's efforts and Palestinian prospects for an independent State were known groups: Hamas, the Palestinian Islamic Jihad and the Al-Aqsa Martyrs Brigade. The Council had to take a clear stand against those terrorist groups and call for decisive action against them. Any Council resolution on the Middle East that the United States would support had to contain a robust condemnation of the acts of those Palestinian terrorist groups, and call for the dismantling of their support infrastructure, wherever located, consistent with Council resolution 1373(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 61]. The next Palestinian Prime Minister had to have real political authority to act against terrorist organizations, in addition to control over all the security organizations within the PA. For its part, Israel had to move forward and fulfil its obligations and commitments under the road map. The United States did not support either the elimination of Mr. Arafat or his forced exile and, accordingly, had cautioned Israel against that.

On 16 September [meeting 4828], the Council resumed discussion of the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question. It had before it a draft resolution [S/2003/891] submitted by Pakistan, South Africa, the Sudan and the Syrian Arab Republic, by which the Council would have reiterated its demand for the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including terrorism, demanded that Israel desist from any act of deportation and cease any threat to the safety of the PA President, and expressed full support for the Quartet and called for increased efforts to ensure implementation of the road map. The draft resolution was not adopted, owing to the negative vote of the United States, a permanent member of the Council.

Speaking after the vote, the United States said that the draft resolution was flawed, as it failed to include a robust condemnation of acts of terrorism, an explicit condemnation of Palestinian terrorist groups, and a call for the dismantlement of infrastructure that supported those terror operations wherever located. The United States, along with Quartet partners, would continue to work towards the implementation of President Bush's vision of a two-State solution to the conflict, as set forth in the road map.

The Syrian Arab Republic said that the United States veto of the draft resolution would only further complicate an already complex situation in the Middle East and would have a negative impact on the general situation in the region.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine regretted that the United States had accepted Israeli positions almost completely and to such an extent that it did not permit it to play an unbiased role in the Arab-Israeli conflict or to act as an honest sponsor of the peace process.

Israel said that the draft resolution was lopsided. It did not focus on terrorism that killed innocent people or on the legal responsibility of the Palestinian leadership to dismantle the terrorist infrastructure. Instead, it focused its criticism on the victims of terrorism and on the response to terrorists rather than on terrorism itself. To advance the cause of peace, both sides needed to commit themselves to resolving the dispute through dialogue in an atmosphere free from terrorism, violence and incitement.

Emergency special session

In accordance with General Assembly resolution ES-10/11 [YUN 2002, p. 435] and at the request of the Sudan [A/ES-10/237], on behalf of the Arab Group and LAS, as well as the request of Malaysia, in its capacity as Chairman of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement [A/ES-10/238], the tenth emergency special session of the Assembly resumed on 19 September to discuss "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory". The session was first convened in April 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 394] and resumed in July and November of that year, as well as in March 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 425], February 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 402], October 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 421], December 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 414], May 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 428] and resumed in August of that year [ibid., p. 435].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 September [meeting 20], the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/12 [draft: A/ES-10/L.12 & Add.1, as orally amended] by recorded vote (133-4-15) [agenda item 5].

Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory

The General Assembly,

Recalling the previous resolutions adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, 1402(2002) of 30 March 2002, 1403(2002) of 4 April 2002, 1405(2002) of 19 April 2002 and 1435(2002) of 24 September 2002,

Reiterating its grave concern at the tragic and violent events that have taken place since September 2000 which have caused enormous suffering and many innocent victims throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in Israel,

Condemning the suicide bombings and their recent intensification, and recalling in that regard that in the framework of the road map, the Palestinian Authority has to take all necessary measures to end violence and terror,

Deploring the extrajudicial killings and their recent escalation, and underlining that they are a violation of international law and international humanitarian law and compromise the efforts to relaunch the peace process and must be stopped,

Reaffirming the illegality of the deportation of any Palestinian by Israel, the occupying Power, and affirming its opposition to any such deportation,

Reiterating the need for respect, in all circumstances, of international humanitarian law, including the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949,

1. Reiterates its demand for the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terrorism, provocation, incitement and destruction;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, desist from any act of deportation and cease any threat to the safety of the elected President of the Palestinian Authority;

3. Expresses its full support for the efforts of the Quartet, and demands that the two sides fully implement their obligations in accordance with the road map, and emphasizes in this context the importance of the forthcoming meeting of the Quartet in New York;

4. Decides to adjourn the tenth emergency special session temporarily and to authorize the current President of the General Assembly to resume its meeting upon request from Member States.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION ES-10/12:

In favour: Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gambia, Germany, Greece, Grenada, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine, speaking before the vote, said that threats by Israel against the Palestinian people and its leadership reached an unprecedented level on 11 September, with the decision by the Israeli security cabinet to remove and expel President Arafat from his land and country, proving once again the intentions of Mr. Sharon's Government to attack the PA and to destroy the Palestinians' socio-economic conditions. Any implementation of those threats would be considered a terrorist act that would lead to the end of the PA and the demise of the peace process. Israel had carried out a military campaign against the Palestinians for almost three years, during which its military forces had committed war crimes. At the same time, Israel was trying to depict all that had happened and was happening in the region as a battle against terrorism. The PA had been very clear in its condemnation of actions committed by Palestinian groups in contravention of international law, specifically the suicide bombings that had targeted Israeli civilians. The main issue of contention remained Israel's occupation of Palestinian land, the settler population and Israel's rejection of the Palestinian right to national independence. If the occupation and Israeli violence continued, Palestinian violence would also go on. The road map should be revived and implemented in a real and honest way.

Israel said that the Assembly was convening to consider an initiative that relapsed into the familiar preoccupation with one-sided resolutions that had contributed little to the security and peace of Israelis and Palestinians. The Security Council had just rejected a draft resolution (see p. 472) that would have defended a man (Mr. Arafat) who had devoted all of his energies to scuttling a long list of peace efforts. Like so many other resolutions presented by the Palestinian side, the draft resolution imagined an alternate reality where acts of terrorism garnered merely a passing mention. By focusing criticism on the response to terrorism and not on terrorism itself, the draft resolution was devoid of moral substance. The first clauses of the road map demanded the dismantling of Palestinian terrorist organizations. The failure of the Palestinian leadership to live up to that obligation should take a prominent role in any balanced assessment of the obstacles to peace. Israel continued to hold out hope for a new Palestinian leadership that would live up to its obligations, for it was committed to resolving the conflict through dialogue and to making compromises so as to realize the vision of two States living side by side in mutual dignity and security.

The Russian Federation said that the emergency special session was taking place against the backdrop of the tragic situation in the Palestinian territories. Despite diplomatic efforts, Palestinian and Israeli relations had been plunged into a vicious cycle of violence, including terrorism and acts of retribution. Russia called on the PA to undertake immediate measures to stop terrorist actions, and on Israel to implement its obligations under the road map. The Council's lack of readiness to adopt a resolution in connection with the exacerbation of Palestinian-Israeli confrontation reaffirmed the need for more active international efforts aimed at solving the crisis.

The United States said that the draft resolutions that had been considered that week by the Council and the Assembly were flawed in their lack of balance, because they singled out Israel and ignored those groups whose aim it was to sabotage the road map.

Quartet meeting (26 September)

The Quartet, meeting in New York on 26 September, issued a statement [S/2003/951], transmitted to the Security Council President by the Secretary-General on 6 October, in which it viewed with concern the stalled implementation of the road map. It reminded both parties of the need to take into account the long-term consequences of their actions and their obligation to make rapid progress towards full implementation of the road map. Condemning the terror attacks of August and September (see p. 469) carried out by Palestinian groups, they called on Palestinians to take immediate, decisive steps against those groups, and on all States to end harbouring and supporting any groups or individuals using terror and violence to advance their goals. The Quartet also affirmed that the PA security services had to be consolidated under the clear control of an empowered Prime Minister.

ter and Interior Minister, and made the sole armed authority in the West Bank and Gaza. The PA should ensure that its rebuilt security apparatus began effective operations to confront terror and dismantle terrorist capabilities and infrastructure. The Quartet called on Israel to take no action that undermined trust, including deportations, confiscation and/or demolition of Palestinian homes and property and destruction of Palestinian institutions, and to ease the humanitarian and economic plight of the Palestinians. It also called for a halt to settlement activity and expressed concern over the proposed and actual route of Israel's West Bank barrier, which could prejudice the final borders of a future Palestinian State.

Construction of separation barrier

Communications (1-13 October). On 1 October [A/58/399-S/2003/929], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel continued to plan and erect a separation wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The first stage, approximately 150 kilometres in length, had already been built, beginning in the northern areas of the West Bank. The wall, which consisted of a complex system of concrete barriers, trenches, electric fences and barbed wire, cut deep inside Palestinian territory, at some points as deep as 6 kilometres. That construction had involved the destruction of extensive tracts of fertile Palestinian farmland, the separation of villages and cities, and the destruction of the livelihood of thousands of Palestinians, who were being cut off from their land, work, schools and institutions and even from each other. As the course of the wall expanded southward, parts of it were being built in and around East Jerusalem. The Israeli cabinet had approved plans for the construction of the wall's central section, which would go even deeper into Palestinian land and would begin with a segment at least 22 kilometres from the 1967 line. The Permanent Observer called on the Security Council to address that grave matter and bring a halt to the illegal actions.

On 2 October [A/58/420], Malaysia transmitted to the Secretary-General a declaration and statement on Palestine adopted by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Non-Aligned Movement (New York, 26 September), expressing support for the idea that the General Assembly, during its fifty-eighth (2003) session, should focus on the expansionist Israeli wall, which had confiscated and destroyed Palestinian land and isolated Palestinian cities, towns and villages. They also supported the proposal for a comprehensive Council resolution in line with the road map, which would set forth positions on the components of a final settlement of the conflict.

By a 3 October letter [A/58/411-S/2003/938], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, on the previous day, the Israeli Government had publicized its intention to build another 600 settlement housing units in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, a decision that should be viewed in the context of the building of the wall on Palestinian land.

On the same day [A/58/415-S/2003/952], Iran transmitted to the Secretary-General the final communiqué of the Annual Coordination Meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Member States of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) (New York, 30 September), in which they condemned, among other things, the construction of the separation wall and the expansion of Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

On 6 October [S/2003/981], Italy, on behalf of the EU, condemned the 4 October Palestinian suicide bombing in Haifa, which killed 21 Israelis and wounded at least 60 others (see p. 523).

On 10 October [A/ES-10/239-S/2003/985] and 13 October [A/ES-10/241-S/2003/990], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General and the Council President that Israeli forces continued to carry out their military campaign against the Palestinian people and the PA. On 10 October, IDF carried out a raid inside the Rafah refugee camp in the Gaza Strip, which caused the death of seven Palestinians and injured 50 others. At least 120 homes were reported destroyed inside the camp.

Security Council consideration (14 October). At the request of the Syrian Arab Republic, on behalf of the Arab Group and LAS [S/2003/973], supported by Malaysia [S/2003/974] and Iran [S/2003/977], on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement and OIC, respectively, the Security Council, on 14 October [meetings 4841 and 4842], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question. Those countries had requested that the Council discuss, in particular, the construction by Israel of a separation wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Israeli settlement activity. With the Council's consent, the President invited, among others, Israel, the Permanent Observer of Palestine [S/2003/988], the Permanent Observer of LAS [S/2003/975] and the Deputy Permanent Observer of OIC [S/2003/989], at their request, to participate in the discussion.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, with the continuing extension of the separation wall, Israel would have effectively transferred large numbers of Palestinians, confined the others in several walled enclaves with secondary walls inside them, effectively destroying the possibility of the existence of an independent, sovereign State of Palestine and the potential for achieving a political settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The construction of the wall and the confiscation of Palestinian land had partially or completely separated those civilians from their land and water resources. Severe restrictions had been placed on the movement of Palestinians, including the complete walling of the city of Qalqilya and the control of entry and exit of the city through one gate for its 40,000 inhabitants. In East Jerusalem, Israel had built a separation wall up to 8 kilometres long and similar plans were in store for Bethlehem. The construction of the wall was illegal and violated the UN Charter, the Fourth Geneva Convention and relevant Security Council resolutions.

The construction of the wall complemented Israeli settlement activities. Israel had transferred more than 400,000 settlers to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, placing them in more than 200 settlements built on more than 8 per cent of Palestinian land, in addition to the land in their vicinity and the additional land they attempted to control. It had established a separate infrastructure and a complete network of roads for those settlers, enabling them to exploit Palestinian natural resources. With the building of the wall, Israel was attempting to annex the Palestinian land on which half of those settlers were living, while leaving enough room for the expansion of the rest of the settlements. Settlements and the wall had to be stopped in order to rescue the potential for achieving peace and a final settlement based on the existence of two States.

Israel said that the Assembly had gathered for yet another meeting to censure Israel for its measures to prevent terrorism, rather than to address the terrorism itself. Israel had decided to construct a security fence with great reluctance because of three factors, the most important of which was Yasser Arafat and the PA. Mr. Arafat had proved that he was incapable of and uninterested in making peace with Israel and unwilling to do so. He had chosen a partnership with Palestinian terrorist groups rather than with Israel, thereby flouting Council resolutions, the road map and undertakings in peace agreements between the two sides, which required the PA to dismantle terrorist infrastructure, prevent terrorism and incitement and bring those responsible to justice. In fact, he prevented the emergence of a Palestinian leadership that would do something other than sponsor terrorism or tolerate the smuggling of weapons into the hands of terrorist groups. The occasional half-hearted condemnations of terrorist activities by the Palestinian leadership were just a tactic. In short, had there been any concerted action by the Palestinian leadership to confront and prevent the terrorists, the security fence might not have been necessary.

The fence was also constructed because there were no other options available. In a situation where terrorists were operating with impunity in the heart of civilian centres, there was no perfect way for Israel to obstruct them without having an impact on the lives of the Palestinians among whom they were hiding. The construction of the security fence, therefore, was one of the most effective non-violent methods of preventing the passage of terrorists and their armaments from Palestinian terrorist areas to civilian areas in Israel. That had been the case in the Gaza Strip, where, since the construction of a similar fence, under an Israeli-Palestinian agreement of 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 616], not a single terrorist had succeeded in penetrating into Israel from Gaza. Likewise, in those areas of the West Bank where a fence had been constructed, a reduction in terrorist attacks was already evident. The construction of the fence would also enable Israel to reduce its involvement in the daily lives of Palestinians. The net effect of the construction of the fence would be a reduction in terrorism and an overall improvement in the quality of life for both the Israelis and the Palestinians. Israel would also be able to significantly reduce the presence of its forces in Palestinian areas, further diminish the necessity for defensive action within Palestinian cities, including the removal of roadblocks and checkpoints, and help create an atmosphere conducive to peaceful negotiations. The fence was a crucial measure in taking terrorism out of the equation.

In determining the route of the fence, Israel had sought to create a barrier between those areas from which the terrorists originated and those that they sought to target. Constructing the fence along the so-called Green Line, as suggested by some, would create far greater humanitarian problems, arbitrarily dividing villages and separating others from access to water and other basic services on a large scale. Israel had taken into consideration humanitarian and environmental concerns, for the rights and interests of local populations had to be weighed against the rights of civilians to protection from terrorism. Local Palestinian residents had been engaged and consulted throughout that process, with a view to providing individual solutions and ensuring access to schools, health resources and other facilities. Dozens of agricultural gates had been established along the route of the fence to enable farmers to continue cultivating their lands. Any private land used in building the fence was requisitioned for military purposes, in full conformity with international humanitarian law and local laws. Compensation matching the properties' value was provided, as well as for the full value of crop yield as long as the property was needed. Israel refuted the allegations that the fence was an act of de facto annexation and an attempt to prejudice final-status negotiations, for the fence had no political significance as it did not annex territories to the State of Israel nor did it change the status of the land, its ownership or the legal status of the residents in those areas. Israel was ready, at great cost, to adjust or dismantle the fence if so required as part of a political settlement. The fence was a response to Palestinian terror, designed not to establish a border, but to create a terror-free environment in which a border could be agreed through negotiations.

The Syrian Arab Republic said that Israel's statement was part of a campaign to distort reality and mislead international public opinion. Israel failed to mention that the wall had been built on the remains of Palestinian territories and under the logic of sheer force. By building the wall, Israel was in fact annexing vast expanses of the territories of the West Bank. Its aim was to put an end to the peace process and any real chance of implementing it.

The United Kingdom said that it had consistently condemned the intolerable suicide bombings that Israel had suffered, but stressed that the separation wall undermined the trust between the parties that was necessary for negotiations, had a negative impact on the daily lives of Palestinians and called into question the two-State solution. Facts on the ground created by Israeli settlement activity also threatened the viability of a Palestinian State and made the possibility of a negotiated settlement more difficult to reach.

The United States said that ending terrorism had to be the highest priority. Any Council resolution concerning the Middle East had to take into account the security situation, including the devastating suicide attacks that Israelis had had to endure over the last three years. The United States views on the construction of the Israeli fence had been made clear by its National Security Adviser, Condoleezza Rice, who had said that the fence was not really consistent with the United States view of what the Middle East would one day have to look like: two States living side by side in peace. It was extremely important, if the fence was going to be built, that it should not intrude on the lives of Palestinians and that it should not look as if it was trying to prejudice the outcome of a peace agreement. The United States had urged Israel to consider carefully the consequences of its actions. However, a Council resolution focused on the fence did not further the goals of peace and security in the region. The United States urged both sides to avoid actions that exacerbated the situation.

Following discussion on the agenda item [meeting 4842], the Security Council voted (10-1-4) on a draft resolution [S/2003/980] submitted by Guinea, Malaysia, Pakistan and the Syrian Arab Republic. The draft resolution was not adopted owing to the negative vote of the United States, a permanent member of the Council.

Resumed emergency special session (October)

In accordance with General Assembly resolution ES-10/12 (see p. 472) and at the request of the Syrian Arab Republic [A/ES-10/242], on behalf of the Arab Group and LAS, of Malaysia [A/ES-10/243], in its capacity as Chairman of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement, and of Iran [A/ES-10/244], in its capacity as Chairman of the OIC Group at the United Nations, the tenth emergency special session of the Assembly resumed on 20 and 21 October. The Assembly had before it two draft resolutions [A/ES-10/L.13 and A/ES-10/L.14] on illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, on 14 October, the Security Council had failed to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security because of the exercise of veto by one of its permanent members, which prevented it from adopting a binding resolution declaring the separation wall illegal and from demanding that Israel cease its construction and dismantle the existing parts. The practical result of the veto was that the construction of the wall would continue with catastrophic consequences, unless the Assembly and the Council did something about it. The September report [E/CN.4/2004/6] (see p. 488) of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory highlighted the fact that the wall did not follow the Green Line, the de facto boundary between Israel and Palestine, but incorporated substantial areas of the West Bank into Israel, affecting over 210,000 Palestinians by its construction. Israel could build walls on its own land along the armistice line, which, while not being conducive to coexistence between the two sides, would not be illegal.

Israel had used the security pretext in the past to justify its illegal settlement activities throughout the territories occupied since 1967 and was currently doing that again with anti-terrorism measures. Israel should not be allowed to exploit the battle against international terrorism and its own civilian casualties as a cover for its illegal policies and measures and for the continuation of its settlements, expansionism and obstruction of peace. To save hope and peace in the region, the Assembly had to formulate a unanimous international position against the wall, one that would help terminate its construction. It could also request an advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) on Israel's obligations regarding the wall, the cessation of its construction and the dismantling of its existing parts.

Israel said the only reason why the Security Council did not adopt the draft resolution on 14 October was because its sponsors had refused to negotiate a fair and balanced text that would have properly referred to Palestinian responsibilities to end support and encouragement of terrorism. Israel added that the Palestinian side had become all too confident in its ability to abuse the Assembly and push through one-sided resolutions, full of acrimony and blame. It turned to the Assembly each and every time to rubber-stamp what it failed to garner in the Council, and was currently relying on the Assembly to approve the exploitation of yet another UN organ in an ill-conceived and manipulative request for an advisory opinion. That request would not enhance the prospects for peace in the region, for it involved outstanding political issues that the parties had themselves agreed to resolve through negotiations. It could only undermine, complicate and further delay efforts to resolve the dispute. The request was another attempt by the Palestinians to divert attention from the one thing that continued to prevent a peaceful settlement and that had necessitated Israeli security measures, including the fence itself: the continuing refusal by the Palestinians to fight terrorism. In seeking to politicize the Court and to bring an issue that was the subject of dispute before the Court in its advisory capacity risked causing serious harm to the reputation, independence and authority of the UN's principal judicial organ.

The United States said that it opposed the call for an ICJ advisory opinion—a move that would only complicate the international community's efforts to realize a two-State solution.

On 21 October, with the consent of the sponsors of the two draft resolutions before the Assembly, Italy, on behalf of the EU, submitted a compromise replacement draft resolution (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 October [meeting 22], the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/13 [draft: A/ES-

10/L.15, as orally corrected] by recorded vote (144-4-12) [agenda item 5].

Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions of the tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 267(1969) of 3 July 1969, 298(1971) of 25 September 1971, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 452(1979) of 20 July 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 904(1994) of 18 March 1994, 1073(1996) of 28 September 1996 and 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002,

Reaffirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Reaffirming also its vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Condemning all acts of violence, terrorism and destruction,

Condemning in particular the suicide bombings and their recent intensification with the attack in Haifa,

Condemning the bomb attack in the Gaza Strip, which resulted in the death of three American security officers,

Deploring the extrajudicial killings and their recent intensification, in particular the attack on 20 October 2003 in Gaza,

Stressing the urgency of ending the current violent situation on the ground, the need to end the occupation that began in 1967, and the need to achieve peace based on the vision of two States mentioned above,

Particularly concerned that the route marked out for the wall under construction by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, could prejudice future negotiations and make the two-State solution physically impossible to implement and would cause further humanitarian hardship to the Palestinians,

Reiterating its call upon Israel, the occupying Power, to fully and effectively respect the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949,

Reiterating its opposition to settlement activities in the Occupied Territories and to any activities involving the confiscation of land, disruption of the livelihood of protected persons and the de facto annexation of land,

1. Demands that Israel stop and reverse the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, which is in departure of the Armistice Line of 1949 and is in contradiction to relevant provisions of international law;

2. Calls upon both parties to fulfil their obligations under relevant provisions of the road map, the Palestinian Authority to undertake visible efforts on the ground to arrest, disrupt and restrain individuals and groups conducting and planning violent attacks, and the Government of Israel to take no actions undermining trust, including deportations and attacks on civilians and extrajudicial killings;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report on compliance with the present resolution periodically, with the first report on compliance with paragraph 1 above to be submitted within one month and upon receipt of which further actions should be considered, if necessary, within the United Nations system;

4. Decides to adjourn the tenth emergency special session temporarily and to authorize the current President of the General Assembly to resume its meeting upon request from Member States.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION ES-10/13

In favour: Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Burundi, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Honduras, Malawi, Nauru, Nicaragua, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda, Tuvalu, Uruguay.

Communications (21 October–11 November).

On 21 October [A/ES-10/246-S/2003/1029], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President that on 20 October IDF carried out air strikes in Gaza City, killing at least 10 Palestinians and wounding at least 90 other civilians.

On 22 October [A/ES-10/247-S/2003/1031], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel had declared its intention to continue building the separation wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

On 4 November [S/2003/1072], the Permanent Observer of LAS informed the Council President that the Head of the Auditing Bureau and Governor of the Islamic Development Bank in Palestine reported that the total losses and damage inflicted on the Palestinian people by Israel during the past three years had amounted to $17,262,500,000.

On 11 November [S/2003/1079], the Secretary-General of LAS transmitted to the Council President a written plea from the Palestinian residents of the city of Qalqilya, which described the developments that were taking place in that city as a consequence of the construction of the Israeli separation wall. According to the plea, the 42,000 inhabitants were blocked on all four sides of the city, with only a single entrance controlled by IDF.

Compliance with resolution ES-10/13

In November [A/ES-10/248], the Secretary-General submitted a report pursuant to General Assembly resolution ES-10/13 (see p. 477), which required that he report on compliance with its request in paragraph 1 that Israel "stop and reverse the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem". The report, which focused on the period from 14 April 2002, when the Israeli Government decided to build the barrier, to 20 November 2003, examined the route of the barrier and its economic and social impact. Annexed to the report were summaries of the legal positions of the Government of Israel and the PLO.

The Secretary-General stated that Israel was not in compliance with the Assembly's request, as UN field monitoring had shown ongoing construction in the Occupied Palestinian Territory along the north-east boundary of the West Bank and East Jerusalem; levelling of land for a section in the north-west of the West Bank; ongoing issuance of land requisition orders; and release of the first official map showing the planned route of the barrier and declaration of intent to complete it by 2005. The Secretary-General noted that, on 1 October 2003, after nearly a year of construction on various sections, the Israeli Government approved a full barrier route, which, according to the plan, would form one continuous line stretching 720 kilometres along the West Bank. The planned route, if constructed, would deviate up to 22 kilometres in places from the Green Line. Based on the Israeli Ministry of Defence's official map, approximately 975 square kilometres, or 16.6 per cent of the entire West Bank, would lie between the barrier and the Green Line, the home to about 17,000 Palestinians in the West Bank and 220,000 in East Jerusalem. The barrier complex consisted of a fence with electronic sensors designed to alert IDF of infiltration attempts; a ditch (up to 4 metres deep); an asphalt two-lane patrol road; a trace road (a strip of sand smoothed to detect footprints) parallel to the fence; and a stack of six coils of barbed wire marking the complex's perimeter. Various observation systems were being installed along the barrier. Concrete walls covered about 8.5 kilometres of the approximately 180 kilometres of the barrier completed or under construction. Those parts of the barrier were generally found where Palestinian population centres shared common boundaries with Israel, such as the towns of Qalqilya and parts of Jerusalem. Phase A of the barrier, which ran 123 kilometres from the Salem checkpoint north of Jenin to the settlement of Elkana in the central West Bank, was completed in July, although work continued in some parts. Much of Phase A construction, which deviated from the Green Line, incorporated Israeli settlements. Phase B was planned to run 45 kilometres east from the Salem checkpoint along the northern part of the Green Line to the Jordan Valley and was scheduled for completion in December. The existing barrier and planned route around Jerusalem was also beyond the Green Line. Completed sections included two parts totalling 19.5 kilometres that flanked Jerusalem and a 1.5-kilometre concrete wall in an eastern Jerusalem neighbourhood.

The barrier appeared likely to further deepen the fragmentation of the West Bank created by the closure system of checkpoints and blockades imposed by Israel after the outbreak of hostilities in September/October 2000 that restricted the movement of Palestinian people and goods and caused serious socio-economic harm. The construction of the barrier had increased such damage in communities along its route, primarily through the loss of, or severely limited access to, land, jobs and markets. Palestinians living in enclaves were facing some of the harshest consequences of the barrier's construction. Towns such as Qalqilya had only one entry and exit point controlled by IDF, which resulted in the isolation of the town from all its agricultural land.

The Secretary-General observed that the scope of construction and the amount of occupied West Bank land that was requisitioned for the barrier's route or that would end up between the barrier and the Green Line were of serious concern and had implications for the future. In the midst of the road map process, when each party should be making good-faith confidence-building gestures, the barrier's construction could not be seen as anything but a deeply counterproductive act. The placing of most of the structure on occupied Palestinian land could impair future negotiations. The Secretary-General acknowledged and recognized Israel's right and duty to protect its people against terrorist attacks. That duty, however, should not be carried out in a way that could damage the longer-term prospects of peace by making the creation of a viable and contiguous Palestinian State more difficult.

Resumed emergency special session (December)

Following a request [A/ES-10/249] from Kuwait, as Chairman of the Arab Group and on behalf of LAS, the General Assembly resumed its tenth emergency special session on 8 December. Support for the request to resume the session was voiced by Malaysia on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement [A/ES-10/251]. The Assembly had before it the Secretary-General's November report (see p. 478).

Kuwait said that the draft resolution before the Assembly showed in clear terms the legal implication of the construction of the wall, reaffirmed the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention and its Additional Protocol to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the need to end the conflict on the basis of the establishment of two States according to the 1949 Armistice Line, and underlined the fact that, with the passage of time, conditions on the ground would become more difficult because of the construction of the wall. It also called on ICJ to render an advisory opinion on what were the legal consequences arising from the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem—as described in the Secretary-General's report—bearing in mind the rules and principles of international law and relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel, as observed by the Secretary-General in his report, was not in compliance with Assembly resolution ES-10/13 and therefore further actions had to be taken. In the absence of any specific practical measures to compel Israel to stop building the wall and to dismantle the existing parts, there was a need to affirm, at a minimum, the legal aspects of the matter, such as the illegality of the wall and its non-recognition by the UN system. If Israel continued building the wall, it would be the end of the road map and resolution 1515(2003) (see p. 483) endorsing it. The Security Council had to react in the form of a comprehensive resolution, in which the form of a final settlement would be defined, while calling on the parties to negotiate the details.

Israel stated that it did not deny that, in exercising its right to self-defence against terrorism, it had to act within the limits of international law, but it rejected attempts to apply that law selectively to misrepresent the nature and purpose of the security fence and to ignore the context in which its actions were taken. Israel reiterated that the security fence was a temporary, proven, necessary and non-violent measure adopted in accordance with international and local laws to defend the people of Israel from a continuing terrorist campaign. As long as the Palestinian leadership continued to flout its obligations to fight terrorism, there was simply no alternative to the fence. Israel was ready to dismantle or alter the fence's route in accordance with any political settlement reached. That route was determined not by politics, but by a balance between security, humanitarianism and topographical considerations. The fence was not an obstacle to a two-State solution nor to the creation of a contiguous and viable Palestinian State. Prompted by a clearly one-sided resolution, the Secretary-General's November report lacked fairness, balance and perspective. The silence of the report on the threat posed by Palestinian terrorism and the complicity of the Palestinian leadership was incomprehensible, given that the fence was a response to that threat. The question of whether Israel's defensive measures were permissible depended on whether they were proportionate to the threat faced by Israel and its citizens. The draft resolution presented for adoption was a politically biased text, rife with supposed legal conclusions, which made a mockery of ICJ and threatened to undermine its status.

Italy, speaking on behalf of the EU, said that it shared the concerns expressed by the Secretary-General in his report (see p. 478) and supported his observations. However, it believed that the proposed request for an advisory opinion from ICJ would not help the efforts of the two parties to relaunch a political dialogue and was therefore inappropriate. The EU stressed that the Palestinian leadership had to concretely demonstrate its determination in the fight against extremist violence in compliance with the road map, while Israel, in exercising its right of self-defence, had to respect international law, in particular human rights and international humanitarian law.

The United States said the Assembly's emergency special session did not contribute to the shared goal of implementing the road map. The path to peace was the Quartet plan for a permanent two-State solution to the conflict. Involving ICJ in that conflict could delay that solution and negatively impact the road map implementation. Furthermore, referral of that issue to ICJ risked politicizing the Court. The United States policy on Israel's fence was clear and consistent, for it opposed any activity by either party that prejudged final status negotiations. However, the Assembly's meeting and the draft resolution undermined rather than encouraged direct negotiations between the parties to resolve their differences.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 23], the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/14 [draft: A/ES.10/L.16] by recorded vote (90-8-74) [agenda item 5].

Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Aware of the established principle of international law on the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Aware also that developing friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling relevant General Assembly resolutions, including resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947, which partitioned mandated Palestine into two States, one Arab and one Jewish,

Recalling also the resolutions of the tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 267(1969) of 3 July 1969, 298(1971) of 25 September 1971, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 452(1979) of 20 July 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 904(1994) of 18 March 1994, 1073(1996) of 28 September 1996, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002 and 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention as well as Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Recalling the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention Respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907,

Welcoming the convening of the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention on measures to enforce the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, at Geneva on 15 July 1999,

Expressing its support for the declaration adopted by the reconvened Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention at Geneva on 5 December 2001,

Recalling in particular relevant United Nations resolutions affirming that Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, are illegal and an obstacle to peace and to economic and social development as well as those demanding the complete cessation of settlement activities,

Recalling relevant United Nations resolutions affirming that actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, to change the status and demographic composition of Occupied East Jerusalem have no legal validity and are null and void,

Noting the agreements reached between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization in the context of the Middle East peace process,

Gravely concerned at the commencement and continuation of construction by Israel, the occupying Power, of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, which is in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949 (Green Line) and which has involved the confiscation and destruction of Palestinian land and resources, the disruption of the lives of thousands of protected civilians and the de facto annexation of large areas of territory, and underlining the unanimous opposition by the international community to the construction of that wall,

Gravely concerned also at the even more devastating impact of the projected parts of the wall on the Palestinian civilian population and on the prospects for solving the Palestinian-Israeli conflict and establishing peace in the region,

Welcoming the report of 8 September 2003 of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967, in particular the section regarding the wall,

Affirming the necessity of ending the conflict on the basis of the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine living side by side in peace and security based on the Armistice Line of 1949, in accordance with relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions,

Having received with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General, submitted in accordance with resolution ES-10/13,

Bearing in mind that the passage of time further compounds the difficulties on the ground, as Israel, the occupying Power, continues to refuse to comply with international law vis-à-vis its construction of the above-mentioned wall, with all its detrimental implications and consequences,

Decides, in accordance with Article 96 of the Charter of the United Nations, to request the International Court of Justice, pursuant to Article 65 of the Statute of the Court, to urgently render an advisory opinion on the following question:

What are the legal consequences arising from the construction of the wall being built by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, as described in the report of the Secretary-General, considering the rules and principles of international law, including the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949, and relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions?

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION ES-10/14:

In favour: Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, China, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Egypt, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Ethiopia, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Tonga, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela.

Speaking after the vote, Israel said that over half of the UN Member States did not vote for the resolution, which it regarded as a moral victory. Most of the world's enlightened democracies had chosen to not support the resolution, while about 90 other States, mostly tyrannical dictatorships, corrupt and human rights-defying regimes, supported it.

Also on 8 December, the Assembly adopted decision ES-10/22 [draft: A/ES-10/L.17 & Add.1] by recorded vote (111-7-55) [agenda item 5].

Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory

At its 23rd plenary meeting, on 8 December 2003, the General Assembly decided to adjourn the tenth emergency special session temporarily and to authorize the current President of the General Assembly to resume its meetings upon request from Member States.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION ES-10/22:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Burundi, Canada, Colombia, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Tonga, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Vanuatu.

Communications (10-11 December). On 10 December [A/ES-10/253], South Africa, on behalf of the African Group, said that Israel used the forum of the General Assembly to make derogatory and offensive remarks specifically directed at the sponsors of the draft resolution, the majority of which were African Group members.

On 11 December [A/ES-10/252-S/2003/1168], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that on that day, IDF carried out a raid inside the Rafah refugee camp, which killed at least six Palestinians and wounded 17 others. The raid followed other attacks carried out by IDF in and around the city of Ramallah during the previous week, which resulted in the death of four Palestinians.

Follow-up to resolution ES-10/14

On 19 December, further to the request by the Assembly for an advisory opinion on the question of the legal consequences of the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, ICJ made an Order fixing 30 January 2004 as the time limit within which UN Member States could submit written statements on the question. It also decided that Palestine could submit to the Court a written statement on the question within the above time limit. The Court fixed 23 February 2004 as the date for the opening of the oral hearings. (For further information, see p. 1309.)

Communications (23-26 December). On 23 December [A/ES-10/254-S/2003/1202] and on 26 December [A/ES-10/255-S/2003/1206], the Permanent Observer of Palestine detailed Israeli attacks against Palestinians. IDF carried out an attack on the Rafah refugee camp on 23 December, killing eight Palestinians and wounding at least 40 others. On 25 December, IDF carried out an extrajudicial execution in the Gaza Strip, killing five Palestinians and wounding 14 others.

In a later communication [A/58/673-S/2004/7], Kuwait transmitted to the Secretary-General the texts of the closing statements and the Kuwait Declaration, adopted by the Supreme Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council at its twenty-fourth session (Kuwait, 21-22 December). The Council, among other things, took note of a speech made by Prime Minister Sharon indicating Israel's determination to take unilateral action to implement its so-called "disengagement plan", thereby rejecting any negotiations with the Palestinian side. It also expressed concern about the separation fence, which was viewed as designed to seize more Palestinian land and to abort the road map.

Further developments in the peace process

Security Council consideration (21 October). On 21 October [meeting 4846], the Security Council discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The USG for Political Affairs said that the Council was meeting at a low point. It was urgent to re-establish momentum towards a lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East. Since the previous briefing on 15 September (see p. 470), there had been an escalation of violence that had crossed formerly respected lines, principles and borders. Events in the past month included a suicide bomb in Haifa (see p. 523); the first Israeli air strike into the Syrian Arab Republic in 30 years (see p. 522); serious and fatal violations of the Blue Line; Israeli incursions into Rafah in the Gaza Strip; increasingly tight closures in the West Bank and Gaza Strip that had exacerbated the already dire humanitarian conditions of the Palestinians; and a terrorist attack on a United States diplomatic convoy that killed three American security officers. During the preceding three days alone, 21 Palestinians and three Israeli soldiers were killed. The parties were unable to return to the negotiating table on their own and there was a need for the international community, and the Quartet in particular, to assist them along the road map to peace. If Israelis and Palestinians were to re-engage with the negotiation process, they had to be in a position to send to the negotiating table representatives who could commit to credible confidence-building measures. Noteworthy were the PA's efforts to appoint a new Prime Minister, who should be empowered and to whom, together with the Minister of the Interior, the consolidated Palestinian security force should report. Israel, for its part, had to reverse its policy of settlement expansion, implement a settlement freeze and halt the construction of the security barrier and remove those sections already constructed in order to address Palestinian concerns about the viability of a future Palestinian State. A rare positive note amid the general gloom was the track-two effort, led by Israeli and Palestinian civil society leaders Yossi Beilin and Yasser Abed Rabbo and others, referred to as the Geneva Accord, which led Israelis and Palestinians through a process of imagining a future final status settlement that detailed possible solutions based on the same goals as those of the road map: a two-State solution and the end of the occupation. Though the Secretariat had yet to see the text of that plan, the United Nations welcomed any initiative that brought Israelis and Palestinians together to discuss their common future.

Security Council consideration (19 November). On 19 November [meeting 4861], the Security Council again discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The USG for Political Affairs said that, though the situation on the ground had been relatively quiet, the period since his briefing of 21 October (see above) was marked by inaction. The Israeli Government had waited for the PA to form an empowered Government and for terrorism to end, while the PA had waited for Israel to halt military operations and take steps to ease the closures, for the international community to lead the parties towards peace, and for its own political wrangling to end. The international community had waited also for the parties to make progress on their own, despite evidence of their inability to make peace without international intervention. Progress towards Middle East peace could not just be contingent on the actions expected of others. Even if Israelis and Palestinians were not at the negotiating table, there was much they could do to meet their road map obligations. Ahmed Qurei, whose appointment as Prime Minister was confirmed during the preceding week by the Palestinian Legislative Council, should take immediate steps to establish law and order, control violence and start operations to confront those who engaged in terror. Such steps would begin to address Israel's security concerns and build the confidence necessary to develop a partnership for peace. The United Nations would assist Mr. Qurei and his Government to implement the road map and pursue the path to peace.

The humanitarian situation continued to worsen, largely caused by Israeli security measures. The Israeli Government had given multiple assurances that donor activity and humanitarian aid would be fully facilitated. However, those assurances contrasted with the facts on the ground. In the absence of significant improvement of the conditions under which the international community operated, many donors were reviewing the basis on which their operations in the West Bank and Gaza could continue. The USG called on Israel to live up to its assurances and do all it could to facilitate humanitarian and emergency aid efforts.

The USG concluded that inertia, excuses and conditionality in Middle East peacemaking had to end. Advantage should be taken of the current conditions to make progress. The Geneva Accord (see p. 482) and the July 2002 Ayalon-Nusseibeh statement of principles (the "People's Voice") underlined the glaring vacuum in Middle East peacemaking.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 November [meeting 4862], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1515 (2003). The draft [S/2003/1100] was submitted by Bulgaria, Chile, China, France, Germany, Guinea, Mexico, the Russian Federation, Spain and the United Kingdom. With the Council's consent, the President invited Israel and the Permanent Observer of Palestine [S/2003/1102], at their request, to participate in the meeting.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous relevant resolutions, in particular resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, and the Madrid principles,

Expressing its grave concern at the continuation of the tragic and violent events in the Middle East,

Reiterating its demand for an immediate cessation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terrorism, provocation, incitement and destruction,

Reaffirming its vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Emphasizing the need to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, including the Israeli-Syrian and Israeli-Lebanese tracks,

Welcoming and encouraging the diplomatic efforts of the international Quartet and others,

1. Endorses the Quartet performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict;

2. Calls upon the parties to fulfil their obligations under the road map in cooperation with the Quartet and to achieve the vision of two States living side by side in peace and security;

3. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Security Council consideration (12 December). On 12 December [meeting 4879], the Security Council discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Mr. Roed-Larsen, said that, with no major terror attacks by Palestinians and a marked decline in Israeli military operations, there was a narrow window of opportunity, one in which the parties needed to take positive steps to put the peace process back on track. A number of factors were behind the opening of that window. The new Palestinian Prime Minister, Mr. Qurei, who had a long history of negotiating with Israel, had reiterated since assuming office in November the PA's full commitment to the road map and expressed a willingness to resume talks with Israeli authorities. Israeli Prime Minister Sharon had also made clear his desire to meet with his Palestinian counterpart and restart the peace process, based on the Quartet's road map. The Egyptian Government continued efforts to secure a new ceasefire, working with the PA and a variety of Palestinian groups. Civil society initiatives, such as the Geneva Accord and the People's Voice, showed that Israelis and Palestinians could work together to bridge their differences, and the Council's endorsement of the road map deepened the international community's support of the peace process.

The only viable route towards a renewal of the peace process was a step-by-step approach assisted by bold confidence-building measures, particularly bilateral negotiations based on the road map and facilitated by the international community. To that end, the Special Coordinator met with his Quartet counterparts in Rome, Italy, on 10 December, after a high-level donor meeting (see p. 484). The Quartet reaffirmed that it would assist the nascent bilateral efforts and guide the parties in their implementation of the road map. The issue was how to spark that process. To do so, each of the parties would need to address the core concerns of the other side, and both parties and the international community would have to overcome the fundamental dilemmas facing them. For Israelis, the closure system in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was a catch-22 situation that developed as a response to terrorist attacks. If those closures were eased, the potential for new terrorist attacks would rise, but if they persisted, the living conditions of the Palestinians would only deteriorate. For Palestinians, the crisis was more than the hardship they were enduring; it was a struggle for their identity and national aspirations. The donor community also faced a dilemma, in that the more than $1 billion provided annually, while helping to alleviate the suffering of the Palestinian people, in some eyes also helped to subsidize an Israeli occupation that increased the hardship for the average Palestinian. The peace process could proceed if those core issues and dilemmas were recognized and accepted as a reality by all interested parties, and addressed in parallel, not sequentially or with preconditions.

Since the last briefing to the Council, on 19 November (see p. 482), 27 people had lost their lives to the conflict—24 Palestinians and three Israelis, a relatively low number compared to previous periods. The overall death toll since September 2000 was 2,969 Palestinians and 863 Israelis. There had not been a completed suicide bombing since 4 October, due in part to attempts being thwarted by Israeli security forces. In Rome, the main donors that provided support to the PA met in the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee for the Coordination of International Assistance to Palestinians to review their assistance programmes. New proposals for assisting the Palestinian people included a possible new performance-based trust fund to help alleviate the estimated $650 million shortfall in the PA budget and a proposed new tripartite framework for the donors, the PA and Israel to work together in a spirit of cooperation. Donors voiced concerns that the humanitarian crisis had forced them to redirect funding from development to emergency relief. That in turn was often hampered by Israeli security actions. Many donors would require a renewed peace process in order to sustain their levels of support. Those humanitarian and other concerns were exacerbated by the continuing construction of the barrier in the West Bank.

Jerusalem

East Jerusalem, where most of the city's Arab inhabitants lived, remained one of the most sensitive issues in the Middle East peace process and a focal point of concern for the United Nations in 2003.

Committee on Palestinian Rights. In its annual report [A/58/35], the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) said that Israel had stepped up the construction of a separation wall in the West Bank. In August, the Israeli authorities issued land expropriation orders for the "Jerusalem envelope" barrier, which could leave thousands of Palestinians isolated on the Israeli side. In September, Israel provided $112 million to complete the separation barrier in the Jerusalem area, and, on 1 October, it approved the construction of the second phase of the wall, running from Elkana to Jerusalem, where a separate network of barriers was being built. The Committee stressed that the wall could prejudice the outcome of future permanent status negotiations and inhibit the establishment of a contiguous Palestinian State.

Transfer of diplomatic missions

Report of Secretary-General. On 13 August [A/58/278], the Secretary-General reported that eight Member States, including Israel, had replied to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement General Assembly resolution 57/111 [YUN 2002, p. 444], which addressed the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem in violation of Security Council resolution 478(1980) [YUN 1980, p. 426] and called on them to abide by the relevant UN resolutions. Israel viewed those resolutions as unbalanced and said that they threatened to prejudge the outcome of the Middle East peace process. They undermined the principle that a lasting peace in the region was possible only through direct bilateral negotiations. The Syrian Arab Republic said that the resolution determined that all legislative and administrative measures enacted by Israel concerning Jerusalem were null and void and had to be rescinded forthwith.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/22 [draft: A/58/L.27 & Add.1] by recorded vote (155-8-7) [agenda item 37].

Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947, in particular its provisions regarding the City of Jerusalem,

Recalling also its resolution 36/120 E of 10 December 1981 and all subsequent resolutions, including resolution 56/31 of 3 December 2001, in which it, inter alia, determined that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, which have altered or purported to alter the character and status of the Holy City of Jerusalem, in particular the so-called "Basic Law" on Jerusalem and the proclamation of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, were null and void and must be rescinded forthwith,

Recalling further Security Council resolutions relevant to Jerusalem, including resolution 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, in which the Council, inter alia, decided not to recognize the "Basic Law" and called upon those States which had established diplomatic missions in Jerusalem to withdraw such missions from the Holy City,

Expressing its grave concern at any action taken by any body, governmental or non-governmental, in violation of the above-mentioned resolutions,

Reaffirming that the international community, through the United Nations, has a legitimate interest in the question of the City of Jerusalem and the protection of the unique spiritual, religious and cultural dimension of the city, as foreseen in relevant United Nations resolutions on this matter,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reiterates its determination that any actions taken by Israel to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Holy City of Jerusalem are illegal and therefore null and void and have no validity whatsoever;

2. Deplores the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem in violation of Security Council resolution 478(1980), and calls once more upon those States to abide by the provisions of the relevant United Nations resolutions, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Stresses that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of the City of Jerusalem should take into account the legitimate concerns of both the Palestinian and Israeli sides and should include internationally guaranteed provisions to ensure the freedom of religion and of conscience of its inhabitants, as well as permanent, free and unhindered access to the holy places by the people of all religions and nationalities;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/22:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Costa Rica, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, Uganda, United States.

Abstaining: El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Rwanda, Solomon Islands, Tonga.

Economic and social situation

A June report on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of Palestinians in the occupied territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan [A/58/75-E/2003/21] was prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/31 [YUN 2002, p. 446] and General Assembly resolution 57/269 [ibid., p. 447]; it covered developments since the last ESCWA report [ibid., p. 445].

The report noted that the occupation of Palestinian territory by Israel continued to have a serious detrimental effect on all aspects of the living conditions of the Palestinian people. IDF continued to resort to excessive use of force, arbitrary detentions, house demolitions, increasingly severe mobility restrictions and closure policies, in addition to the confiscation and bulldozing of Palestinian agricultural land. The Palestinian economy accumulated losses and unemployment increased threefold, while two thirds of the population was living below the poverty line. Women and children bore a special and enduring burden resulting from the occupation. In particular, Palestinian children faced exposure to mounting violence, and their access to educational opportunities and health facilities had been reduced to extremely low levels. Educational levels were consistently declining, as were nutritional standards and public health conditions.

Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained one of the principal issues fuelling the conflict. The geographic distribution of Israeli settlements severely restricted the growth of Palestinian communities and was an obstacle to their economic and social development. Israel contended that the expansion of settlements was a function of the existing population's natural growth. Successive Israeli Governments had strongly encouraged migration from Israel to the settlements by offering financial benefits and incentives. The annual increase of 11 to 12 per cent in settler numbers far exceeded the 2 per cent population growth inside Israel. A critical factor affecting Palestinian life was the allotment of land resources for settlement. Though planning maps remained largely inaccessible to the public, available data indicated that Israeli authorities had allotted 41.9 per cent of all the West Bank to settlements as building, planning and development zones. The Israeli-occupied Syrian Golan Heights continued to witness settlement expansion beyond the 33 settlements already in place. Social services such as schooling, higher education and medical facilities remained insufficient for the Arab population.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 48], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/59 [draft: E/2003/L.26] by recorded vote (48-2-3) [agenda item 11].

Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 57/269 of 20 December 2002,

Recalling also its resolution 2002/31 of 25 July 2002,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, and recalling relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980 and 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Stressing the importance of the revival of the Middle East peace process on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, and the principle of land for peace as well as compliance with the agreements reached between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people,

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of peoples under foreign occupation over their natural resources,

Convinced that the Israeli occupation impedes efforts to achieve sustainable development and a sound economic environment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan,

Gravely concerned about the deterioration of the economic and living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan and the exploitation by Israel, the occupying Power, of their natural resources,

Expressing grave concern over the continuation of the recent tragic and violent events since September 2000 that have led to many deaths and injuries,

Aware of the important work being done by the United Nations and the specialized agencies in support of the economic and social development of the Palestinian people,

Conscious of the urgent need for the reconstruction and development of the economic and social infrastructure of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as the urgent need to address the humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people,

Welcoming the acceptance of the Quartet road map for peace, presented by the Secretary-General, the United States of America, the Russian Federation and the European Union, as well as the Summit at Aqaba, Jordan, and stressing the importance of prompt and full implementation in good faith by the two sides of the road map and further steps to reduce the level of violence,

1. Stresses the need to preserve the territorial integrity of all of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to guarantee the freedom of movement of persons and goods in the Territory, including the removal of restrictions on going into and from East Jerusalem, and the freedom of movement to and from the outside world;

2. Also stresses the vital importance of the construction and operation of the seaport in Gaza and safe passage to the economic and social development of the Palestinian people;

3. Demands the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction;

4. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to end its occupation of Palestinian cities and other populated centres, to end all kinds of closures and to cease destruction of homes and economic facilities and agricultural fields;

5. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the Palestinian people and the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan to all their natural and economic resources, and calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, not to exploit, endanger or cause loss or depletion of these resources;

6. Also reaffirms that Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan, are illegal and an obstacle to economic and social development;

7. Stresses the importance of the work of the organizations and agencies of the United Nations and of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority;

8. Urges Member States to encourage private foreign investment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in infrastructure, job-creation projects and social development in order to alleviate the hardship of the Palestinian people and improve living conditions;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, through the Economic and Social Council, a report on the implementation of the present resolution and to continue to include, in the report of the United Nations Special Coordinator, an update on the living conditions of the Palestinian people, in collaboration with relevant United Nations agencies;

10. Decides to include the item entitled "Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan" in the agenda of its substantive session of 2004.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2003/59:

In favour: Andorra, Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, India, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Sweden, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Zimbabwe.

Against: Georgia, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Guatemala, Nicaragua.

On the same date, the Council took note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report prepared by ESCWA on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan (decision 2003/292).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/58/493], adopted resolution 58/229 by recorded vote (157-4-10) [agenda item 103].

Permanent sovereignty of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/269 of 20 December 2002, and taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/59 of 24 July 2003,

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of peoples under foreign occupation over their natural resources,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, and recalling relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980 and 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Expressing its concern at the exploitation by Israel, the occupying Power, of the natural resources of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Expressing its concern also at the extensive destruction by Israel, the occupying Power, of agricultural land and orchards in the Occupied Palestinian Territory during the recent period, including the uprooting of a vast number of olive trees,

Aware of the detrimental impact of the Israeli settlements on Palestinian and other Arab natural resources, especially the confiscation of land and the forced diversion of water resources, and of the dire economic and social consequences in this regard,

Aware also of the detrimental impact on Palestinian natural resources of the wall being constructed by Israel inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and of its grave effect on the economic and social conditions of the Palestinian people,

Reaffirming the need for the immediate resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process, on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, the principle of land for peace and the Quartet performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, as endorsed by the Security Council in its resolution 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003, and for the achievement of a final settlement on all tracks,

Recalling the need to end all acts of violence, including acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction,

Taking note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the population of the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources, including land and water;

2. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, not to exploit, cause loss or depletion of or endanger the natural resources in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan;

3. Recognizes the right of the Palestinian people to claim restitution as a result of any exploitation, loss or depletion of, or danger to, their natural resources, and expresses the hope that this issue will be dealt with in the framework of the final status negotiations between the Palestinian and Israeli sides;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to it at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution, and decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Permanent sovereignty of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/229:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozam-

Other aspects

Special Committee on Israeli Practices. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/124 [YUN 2002, p. 450], the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, in August, reported for the thirty-fifth time to the General Assembly on events and the human rights situation in the territories it considered occupied—the Golan Heights, the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip [A/58/311]. The report contained information obtained from, among others, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), including Palestinian and Israeli NGOs; testimony from persons from the occupied territories; and communications and reports from regional Governments, organizations and individuals. As in the past, the Committee received no response from Israel to its request for cooperation and was unable to obtain access to the occupied territories, which had been the case since 1968, when the Committee was established [YUN 1968, p. 556].

The Committee's review of the human rights situation in the occupied territories focused on the right of self-determination; the right to liberty of movement; the right to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food, clothing and housing; the right to just and favourable conditions of work; the right to education; the right to health; the right to liberty and security of person; the rights to freedom of opinion and of association; and the right to life. The Committee stated that the human rights situation had drastically deteriorated since Israel's military incursions; despite some hopes generated by the official presentation and launching of the road map in April 2003 (see p. 464), the construction by Israel of a separation wall was perceived by the Palestinians as an annexation of parts of their homeland.

The Special Committee observed that the increased military occupation of the Palestinian territory and its related curfews, road closures and multiplication of checkpoints made the life of the Palestinians and other Arabs unbearable. The legitimate security arguments used by Israel could not overlook the fact that many human rights were being ignored in non-combat situations. The Occupied Palestinian Territory and the Gaza Strip were on the verge of a major humanitarian collapse, with 60 per cent of the Palestinians living below the poverty line, given their inability to go to work and earn a living and their increased dependency on foreign food assistance.

The Special Committee visited the Syrian Arab Republic and reported on the Israeli-occupied Syrian Golan Heights (for details, see p. 523).

Report of Secretary-General. On 15 July [A/58/156], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his June request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 57/127 [YUN 2002, p. 448], demanding that Israel, among other things, cease all practices and actions that violated the human rights of the Palestinian people, and condemning all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force by Israeli forces against Palestinian civilians.

Commission on Human Rights. In an 8 September report [E/CN.4/2004/6], the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights, John Dugard (South Africa), described the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967. The Special Rapporteur observed that the occupation continued to result in the widespread violation of human rights, affecting both civil and socio-economic rights, and of international humanitarian law. Israel's justification for those actions was that they were necessary in the interests of its own national security. The lawfulness of Israel's response was to be measured in accordance with the principle of proportionality. The Special Rapporteur found it difficult to accept that the excessive use of force that disregarded the distinction between civilians and combatants, the creation of a humanitarian crisis by restrictions on the mobility of goods and people, the killing of children, the destruction of property and territorial expansion could be justified as a proportionate response to the violence and threats to which Israel was subjected. The construction of a separation wall and the continued expansion of settlements raised serious doubts about the good faith of Israel's justification in the name of security (for details, see p. 826).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], following consideration of the Special Committee's annual report and five reports of the Secretary-General on specific aspects of the situation in the occupied territories [A/58/155, A/58/156, A/58/263, A/58/264, A/58/310], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/58/473 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/99 by recorded vote (150-6-19) [agenda item 84].

Israeli practices affecting the human rights of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at its tenth emergency special session, and the resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the reports of the Secretary-General,

Taking note of the report of the Human Rights Inquiry Commission established by the Commission on Human Rights and the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Aware of the responsibility of the international community to promote human rights and ensure respect for international law,

Reaffirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Reaffirming also the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Reaffirming further the obligation of the States parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention under articles 146, 147 and 148 with regard to penal sanctions, grave breaches and responsibilities of the High Contracting Parties,

Stressing the need for full compliance with the Israeli-Palestinian agreements reached within the context of the Middle East peace process and the implementation of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Concerned about the continuing systematic violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people by Israel, the occupying Power, including the use of collective punishment, the reoccupation and closure of areas, the confiscation of land, the establishment and expansion of settlements, the construction of a wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949, the destruction of property and all other actions by it designed to change the legal status, geographical nature and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Gravely concerned about the tragic events that have occurred since 28 September 2000 and that have led to thousands of deaths and injuries among Palestinian civilians,

Gravely concerned also about the use of suicide bombing attacks against Israeli civilians resulting in extensive loss of life and injury,

Expressing deep concern about the extensive destruction caused by the Israeli occupying forces, including the destruction of homes and properties, of religious, cultural and historical sites, of vital infrastructure and institutions of the Palestinian Authority, and of agricultural land throughout Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps,

Also expressing deep concern about the Israeli policy of closure and the severe restrictions, including curfews, imposed on the movement of persons and goods, including medical and humanitarian personnel and goods, throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the consequent impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestinian people, which has resulted in a dire humanitarian crisis,

Expressing concern that thousands of Palestinians continue to be held in Israeli prisons or detention centres, and also expressing concern about the ill-treatment and harassment of any Palestinian prisoners and all reports of torture,

Convinced of the need for an international presence to monitor the situation, to contribute to ending the violence and protecting the Palestinian civilians and to help the parties to implement agreements reached, and, in this regard, recalls the positive contribution of the Temporary International Presence in Hebron,

Stressing the necessity for the full implementation of all relevant Security Council resolutions,

1. Determines that all measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in violation of the relevant provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and contrary to the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, are illegal and have no validity;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949 and cease immediately all measures and actions taken in violation of the Convention, including the extrajudicial executions;

3. Condemns all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force by Israeli forces against Palestinian civilians, resulting in extensive loss of life, vast numbers of injuries and massive destruction;

4. Also condemns the events that have occurred in the Jenin refugee camp in April 2002, including the loss of life, injury, destruction and displacement inflicted on many of its civilian inhabitants;

5. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, cease all practices and actions that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people;

6. Stresses the need to preserve the territorial integrity of all the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to guarantee the freedom of movement of persons and goods within the Palestinian territory, including the removal of restrictions on movement into and from

East Jerusalem, and the freedom of movement to and from the outside world;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/89:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Australia, Cameroon, Costa Rica, Czech Republic, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Georgia, Germany, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Rwanda, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu, United Kingdom.

By resolution 58/163 of 22 December, the Assembly reaffirmed the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including their right to a State, and urged all States and UN specialized agencies and organizations to continue to support the Palestinian people in their quest for self-determination (see p. 721).

Work of Special Committee

In an August report [A/58/310], the Secretary-General stated that all necessary facilities were provided to the Special Committee on Israeli Practices, as requested in General Assembly resolution 57/124 [YUN 2002, p. 450]. Arrangements were made for it to meet in June, and a field mission was carried out to Egypt, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic from 13 to 24 June. Due to the restrictions imposed on the elaboration of Assembly reports, the Special Committee gave up the submitting of periodic reports during the period under review. The UN Department of Public Information continued to provide press coverage of Special Committee meetings and to disseminate information materials on its activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/473 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/96 by recorded vote (87-7-78) [agenda item 84].

Work of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Guided also by international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, as well as international standards of human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 2443(XXIII) of 19 December 1968 and 57/124 of 11 December 2002, and the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights,

Recalling also relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Convinced that occupation itself represents a gross and grave violation of human rights,

Gravely concerned about the continuation of the tragic events that have taken place since 28 September 2000, including the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, resulting in thousands of deaths and injuries,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Recalling the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the subsequent implementation agreements between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Expressing the hope that the Israeli occupation will be brought to an early end and that therefore the violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people will cease,

1. Commends the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories for its efforts in performing the tasks assigned to it by the General Assembly and for its impartiality;

2. Reiterates its demand that Israel, the occupying Power, cooperate with the Special Committee in implementing its mandate;

3. Deplores those policies and practices of Israel that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people and other Arabs of the occupied territories, as reflected in the report of the Special Committee covering the reporting period;

4. Expresses grave concern about the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, since 28 September 2000, as a result of Israeli practices and measures, and especially condemns the excessive and indiscriminate use of force against the civilian population, including extrajudicial executions, which has resulted in more than 2,600 Palestinian deaths and tens of thousands of injuries;

5. Requests the Special Committee, pending complete termination of the Israeli occupation, to continue to investigate Israeli policies and practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, especially Israeli violations of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and to consult, as appropriate, with the International Committee of the Red Cross according to its regulations in order to ensure that the welfare and human rights of the peoples of the occupied territories are safeguarded and to report to the Secretary-General as soon as possible and whenever the need arises thereafter;

6. Also requests the Special Committee to submit regularly to the Secretary-General periodic reports on the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

7. Further requests the Special Committee to continue to investigate the treatment of prisoners and detainees in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

8. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To provide the Special Committee with all necessary facilities, including those required for its visits to the occupied territories, so that it may investigate Israeli policies and practices referred to in the present resolution;

(b) To continue to make available such additional staff as may be necessary to assist the Special Committee in the performance of its tasks;

(c) To circulate regularly to Member States the periodic reports mentioned in paragraph 6 above;

(d) To ensure the widest circulation of the reports of the Special Committee and of information regarding its activities and findings, by all means available, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat and, where necessary, to reprint those reports of the Special Committee that are no longer available;

(e) To report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the tasks entrusted to him in the present resolution;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/96:

Fourth Geneva Convention

Report of Secretary-General. In July [A/58/155], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his June request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 57/125 [YUN 2002, p. 451] demanding that Israel accept the de jure applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and that it comply scrupulously with its provisions. The Secretary-General noted that he had drawn the attention of all States parties to the Convention to paragraph 3 of resolution 57/125 calling on them to exert all efforts to ensure respect by Israel for the Convention's provisions, and to paragraph 6 of resolution 57/128 [ibid., p. 482] calling on States not to recognize any legislative or administrative measures and actions taken by Israel in the occupied Syrian Golan.

The High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention had reaffirmed the applicability of the Convention to the Occupied Palestinian Territory at meetings in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 415] and in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 425].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/473 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/97 by recorded vote (164-6-4) [agenda item 84].

Applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the other occupied Arab territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Recalling the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and relevant provisions of customary law, including those codified in Additional Protocol 1 to the four Geneva Conventions,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Considering that the promotion of respect for the obligations arising from the Charter of the United Nations and other instruments and rules of international law is among the basic purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Noting the convening of the meeting of experts of High Contracting Parties to the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, at Geneva from 27 to 29 October 1998, at the initiative of the Government of Switzerland in its capacity as the depositary of the Convention, concerning problems of application of the Convention in general and, in particular, in occupied territories,

Noting also the convening for the first time, on 15 July 1999, of the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention, as recommended by the General Assembly in its resolution ES-10/6 of 9 February 1999, on measures to enforce the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to ensure respect thereof in accordance with article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions, and aware of the statement adopted by the Conference,

Welcoming the reconvening of the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention on 5 December 2001 in Geneva and stressing the importance of the Declaration adopted by the Conference, and underlining the need for the parties to follow up the implementation of the Declaration,

Welcoming and encouraging the initiatives by States parties to the Convention, both individually and collectively, according to article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions, aimed at ensuring respect for the Convention,

Stressing that Israel, the occupying Power, should comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law,

1. Reaffirms that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, is applicable to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

2. Demands that Israel accept the de jure applicability of the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, and that it comply scrupulously with the provisions of the Convention;

3. Calls upon all High Contracting Parties to the Convention, in accordance with article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions, to continue to exert all efforts to ensure respect for its provisions by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

4. Reiterates the need for speedy implementation of the relevant recommendations contained in its resolutions of the tenth emergency special session with regard to ensuring respect by Israel, the occupying Power, for the provisions of the Convention;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/97:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas,

Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Cameroon, Honduras, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda.

Israeli settlements

Report of Secretary-General. On 8 August [A/58/263], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his June request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement the relevant provisions of resolution 57/126 [YUN 2002, p. 443], demanding that Israel, among other things, cease all construction of new settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/473 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/98 by recorded vote (156-6-13) [agenda item 84].

Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at its tenth emergency special session, as well as relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 497(1981) of 17 December 1981 and 904(1994) of 18 March 1994,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Taking note of the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967.

Recalling the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the subsequent implementation agreements between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Welcoming the presentation by the Quartet to the parties of the road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and noting its call for a freeze on all settlement activity,

Aware that Israeli settlement activities have involved, inter alia, the transfer of nationals of the occupying Power into the occupied territories, the confiscation of land, the exploitation of natural resources and other illegal actions against the Palestinian civilian population,

Bearing in mind the detrimental impact of Israeli settlement policies, decisions and activities on efforts to achieve peace in the Middle East,

Expressing grave concern about the continuation by Israel of settlement activities in violation of international humanitarian law, relevant United Nations resolutions and the agreements reached between the parties, including the construction and expansion of the settlements in Jabal Abu-Ghneim and Ras Al-Amud in and around Occupied East Jerusalem,

Expressing grave concern also about the construction by Israel of a wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and expressing its concern in particular about the route of the wall in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949, which could prejudge future negotiations and make the two-State solution physically impossible to implement and would cause the Palestinian people further humanitarian hardship,

Reiterating its opposition to settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to any activities involving the confiscation of land, the disruption of the livelihood of protected persons and the de facto annexation of land,

Recalling the need to end all acts of violence, including acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction,

Gravely concerned about the dangerous situation resulting from actions taken by the illegal armed Israeli settlers in the occupied territory, as illustrated in the recent period,

Taking note of the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan are illegal and an obstacle to peace and economic and social development;

2. Calls upon Israel to accept the de jure applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan and to abide scrupulously by the provisions of the Convention, in particular article 49;

3. Reiterates its demand for the complete cessation of all Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan;

4. Demands that Israel stop and reverse the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, which is in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949 and is in contradiction to relevant provisions of international law;

5. Stresses the need for full implementation of Security Council resolution 904(1994), in which, among other things, the Council called upon Israel, the occupying Power, to continue to take and implement measures, including confiscation of arms, with the aim of preventing illegal acts of violence by Israeli settlers, and called for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilians in the occupied territory;

6. Reiterates its calls for the prevention of all acts of violence by Israeli settlers, particularly in the light of recent developments;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/98:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Cameroon, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu.

Palestinian women

The Secretary-General, in a report [E/CN.6/2003/3] to the Commission on the Status of Women, reviewed, in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/25 [YUN 2002, p. 453], the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by UN organizations from September 2001 to September 2002. He said that during the period under review, the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was characterized by continued violence, which left hundreds of civilians dead and thousands of Palestinians, including women and children, wounded. Women were injured near or inside their homes or when attempting to cross checkpoints. They had also assumed the major responsibility as caregivers to the injured.

The expansion of Israeli settlements, the demolition of Palestinian homes, the destruction of land and the building of bypass roads in the occupied territory continued to create difficulties for the Palestinians, especially for women who carried household responsibilities. Lack of domestic economic activity had led to an almost 20 per cent contraction of employment. That decline had affected women's participation in the labour force, which had remained persistently low. Women had also been severely affected by the decline in the agriculture sector as they played a major role in agriculture production for the household economy, while loss of land, or of access to land, deprived them of a vital source of income. The conflict had an impact on the nutritional and health status of women and children, as border closures, curfews and checkpoints affected access to high-protein food and, in particular, to infant formula and powdered milk. The adverse impact of closures and prolonged curfews on Palestinian villages restricted the access of civilians, especially women, to life-saving services such as emergency obstetric care. The crisis affected the psychosocial well-being of Palestinians, particularly women and young people.

While the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory had made it difficult for international organizations to provide direct assistance to Palestinian women, the UN system continued to respond to their needs. In its 2002-2005 medium-term plan and its 2002-2003 programme of work and priorities [YUN 2002, p. 1020], ESCWA gave special attention to the socio-economic situation of Palestinian women. Likewise, the United Nations Development Programme continued to provide support and services to women-owned household economy projects. The United Nations Development Fund for Women launched and continued to support a regional resource network of women's small and microenterprises in the Gaza Strip, and UNRWA, among other things, granted almost 3,000 loans, valued at $1.36 million, to women through its microfinance and micro-enterprise programme. It also provided maternal and child health care and family planning services as an integral part of its primary health care. The International Labour Organization developed several projects aimed at strengthening women's security and employability in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and women's participation in Palestinian trade unions. The World Bank, among other things, implemented its emergency services support project in order to improve the availability of basic services in the health sector. The World Food Programme (WFP) provided assistance to thousands of non-refugee vulnerable Palestinians who had no reliable source of income. Women were the primary recipients of WFP's food aid in the Palestinian territories. They also participated in WFP's food-for-work schemes in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The Secretary-General observed that the situation of Palestinian women was inextricably linked to overall developments in the region and to progress in the peace process. There existed, however, important differences in the way that women and men, respectively, were affected by the socio-economic and political situation, particularly in such areas as basic social services, economic opportunities and means of livelihood, which required particular attention in terms of data collection and analysis, in addition to remedial action. Further opportunities should be sought to highlight the impact of the crisis on women so that targeted action could be taken to mitigate their specific condition. Continued support by UN system entities was critical to secure benefits for Palestinian women in the occupied territories and in the refugee camps. As the conflict exacerbated existing hardships and created new difficulties, continued assistance needed to focus on such areas as women's employment and economic empowerment, education, health, social welfare and violence against women. Further efforts had to be undertaken to identify and address gender perspectives in all international assistance programmes, in addition to implementing projects specifically targeted to women.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2003/27], adopted resolution 2003/42 by recorded vote (42-2-4) [agenda item 14 (a)].

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Recalling also its resolution 2002/25 of 24 July 2002 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Expressing the urgent need for the resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and towards the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides.

Concerned about the grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlement activities as well as the harsh economic conditions and other severe consequences of the continuing Israeli attacks and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, which has resulted in the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the immediate resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Regulations annexed to The Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907 and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949, in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century";

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those laid out in his report, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-eighth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2003/42:

In favour: Andorra, Argentina, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Egypt, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, India, Iran, Iceland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, Nigeria, Pakistan, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Sweden, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom.

Against: Georgia, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Germany, Nicaragua, Peru.

Palestinian children

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/504], adopted resolution 58/155 by recorded vote (106-5-65) [agenda item 113].

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian children

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Recalling also the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and the Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s, adopted by the World Summit for Children, held in New York on 29 and 30 September 1990,

Recalling further the Declaration and Plan of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-seventh special session,

Concerned that the Palestinian children under Israeli occupation remain deprived of many basic rights under the Convention,

Concerned also about the continued grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of the continuing Israeli assaults and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, resulting in the dire humanitarian crisis,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all children in the whole Middle East region,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, resulting in extensive loss of human life and injuries, including among Palestinian children,

Deeply concerned about the severe consequences, including psychological consequences, of the Israeli military actions for the present and future well-being of Palestinian children,

1. Stresses the urgent need for Palestinian children to live a normal life free from foreign occupation, destruction and fear in their own State;

2. Demands, in the meanwhile, that Israel, the occupying Power, respect relevant provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in order to ensure the well-being and protection of Palestinian children and their families;

3. Calls upon the international community to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian children and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions.

Issues related to Palestine

General aspects

The General Assembly continued to consider the question of Palestine in 2003. Having discussed the annual report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) [A/58/35], the Assembly adopted four resolutions, reaffirming, among other things, the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the Palestine question—the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict—and stressing the need for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinians, primarily the right to self-determination, for Israeli withdrawal from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967 and for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees. The Assembly called on the Secretariat to continue its activities to promote and raise awareness of Palestinian rights.

In observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, celebrated annually on 29 November in accordance with Assembly resolution 32/40 B [YUN 1977, p. 304], the Committee held a solemn meeting and other activities on 1 December. In cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine, the Committee presented an exhibit entitled "Palestine: Reflections of Resilience and Hope".

Report of Secretary-General. In an October report on the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine [A/58/416-S/2003/947], submitted in response to Assembly resolution 57/110 [YUN 2002, p. 455], the Secretary-General made observations on the Middle East peace process. By notes verbales of 16 and 19 June, the Secretary-General had sought the positions of Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the PLO regarding steps taken by them to implement the resolution. As at 17 September, Israel, Jordan, Syria and the PLO had responded.

Israel said that it viewed the resolution as unbalanced and an undue interference in the Israeli-Palestinian bilateral negotiations. The ongoing violence was a result of the Palestinian decision to abandon negotiations and to pursue goals through violence and terrorism. The approach of the resolution sought to dictate the outcome of the negotiation process and rewarded violence when the Palestinian side should be compelled to renounce violence and return to peaceful dialogue.

Jordan stated that it was committed to achieving a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East on the basis of UN resolutions in implementation of the principle of land for security and recognition. Jordan had worked to create conditions conducive to the resumption of negotiations between the two sides, participated in the finalization of the road map and was working on its implementation after acceptance of it by both sides at the June Aqaba Summit. Jordan was convinced that the 30 June declaration of a truce by Palestinian groups (see p. 468) was a positive development and that all parties had to consolidate it by abiding by their obligations under the road map. Furthermore, Jordan had stressed the role of the United Nations and of the international community in bringing about a comprehensive peace in the region.

Syria affirmed that Israeli settlements in the territory occupied since 1967 and actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem represented obstacles to the conclusion of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine and that successive Israeli Governments had had no political will to conclude a lasting peace in the region based on UN resolutions.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that the resolution had been adopted by an overwhelming majority of Member States, reaffirming long-established convictions and positions of the international community on the issue. It was regrettable that Israel had chosen to vote against the resolution and had continued illegal actions and measures against the Palestinian people. In addition, Israel had yet to comply with any of its obligations under the road map, for, among other things, it continued its settlement activities, including the building of a separation wall that isolated many Palestinian communities from one another, destroying their means of livelihood. The situation on the ground had calmed down as a result of the efforts made by the Palestinian Government to secure assurances from all Palestinian groups to a ceasefire agreement.

The Secretary-General said that, since September 2000, more than 2,800 Palestinians and more than 800 Israelis had been killed, while thousands had been injured. The overwhelming majority of casualties in Israel resulted from terrorist attacks by various Palestinian militant groups. Bombs had been set off in cafes and restaurants and attacks carried out against public transport, including school buses, creating a climate of fear and constant watchfulness. A large number of Palestinian civilian casualties had resulted from Israeli Defence Forces (IDF) operations, including incursions, pre-emptive strikes and targeted assassinations of suspected militants in Palestinian areas. The use of heavy weaponry in densely populated Palestinian areas had been of particular concern. Since the declaration of a ceasefire and redeployment at the end of June, there had been a marked decline in violence. The Secretary-General said that he had repeatedly stressed the obligation of the PA to assume full security responsibility in the areas under its control, and had urged Israel to refrain from the excessive and disproportionate use of deadly force in civilian areas.

Israel continued its policy of demolishing houses as a reaction to security incidents. From 1 January to 21 August, 158 homes of Palestinians who had carried out attacks against Israel or who were suspected of involvement in or of planning future attacks were destroyed. The confiscation of land and the levelling of agricultural land continued unabated, particularly in border areas, around settlements and settler roads and in connection with the construction of the separation wall. Continued Israeli settlement construction and the building of a separation wall were two key challenges to the fulfilment of the road map's goal of the two-State solution. Over time, they had made the creation of a viable and contiguous Palestinian State more difficult. Despite the obligation set out in phase I of the road map to dismantle settlement outposts and to freeze all settlement expansion, the Israeli Government had not taken decisive action in that direction.

The humanitarian and economic situation of the Palestinian people continued to deteriorate, a direct result of the impact of the policy of systematic closures and curfews on Palestinian social and economic life. According to the World Bank, two thirds of the population of the West Bank and Gaza Strip lived on less than $2 per day, and gross national income per capita had fallen to nearly half of its 2001 level. More than half of the workforce was unemployed and more than half of the population was receiving some form of donor-financed food assistance. The limited steps taken by Israel to lift closures, curfews and other restrictions were not sufficient to significantly ease the economic deterioration in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The humanitarian situation had also worsened because of the unprecedented movement restrictions imposed on UN and NGO personnel, limiting their access into and out of the Gaza Strip.

The Secretary-General said that he would continue to press for the implementation of the road map, which he believed provided the best opportunity to move forward in the peace process. He called on the international community to provide the resources for UN programmes to address the deteriorating economic and humanitarian situation of the Palestinian people, and especially to UNRWA so that it could continue to deliver the necessary services to the Palestinian refugees.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/21 [draft: A/58/L.26/Rev.1 & Add.1] by recorded vote (160-6-5) [agenda item 38].

Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at the tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also the relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002 and 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003,

Welcoming the affirmation by the Security Council of the vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Noting that it has been fifty-six years since the adoption of resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947 and thirty-six years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 57/110 of 3 December 2002,

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects,

Convinced that achieving a final and peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of a comprehensive and lasting peace and stability in the Middle East,

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Reaffirming the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the territory occupied since 1967 and of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem, and affirming that the construction by Israel of a wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, is in contravention of relevant provisions of international law,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the existing agreements concluded between the two sides, and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Welcoming the endorsement by the Security Council, in resolution 1515(2003), of the Quartet performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and stressing the need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Noting with satisfaction the establishment of the Palestinian Authority, and recognizing the urgent need to rebuild, reform and strengthen its damaged institutions,

Welcoming the positive contribution of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority to the peace process, including in the framework of the activities of the Quartet,

Welcoming also the convening of international donor meetings, as well as the establishment of international mechanisms to provide assistance to the Palestinian people,

Expressing its grave concern over the tragic events in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, since 28 September 2000 and the continued deterioration of the situation, including the rising number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, the deepening humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people and the widespread destruction of Palestinian property and infrastructure, both private and public, including many institutions of the Palestinian Authority,

Expressing its grave concern also over the repeated incursions into Palestinian-controlled areas and the re-occupation of many Palestinian population centres by the Israeli occupying forces,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians in the whole Middle East region, and condemning all acts of violence and terror against civilians on both sides, including the suicide bombings and extrajudicial executions,

Gravely concerned over the increased suffering and casualties on both the Palestinian and Israeli sides, the loss of confidence on both sides and the dire situation facing the Middle East peace process,

Aware of the urgent need for revitalized and active international involvement to support both parties in overcoming the current dangerous impasse in the peace process,

Affirming the urgent need for the parties to cooperate with all international efforts, including the efforts of the Quartet, to end the current tragic situation and to resume negotiations towards a final peace settlement,

Welcoming recent initiatives and efforts undertaken by civil society in pursuit of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects and of intensifying all efforts towards that end;

2. Also reaffirms its full support for the Middle East peace process, which began in Madrid, and the existing agreements between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, stresses the necessity for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and welcomes in this regard the efforts of the Quartet;

3. Welcomes the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002;

4. Calls upon both parties to fulfil their obligations in implementation of the road map by taking parallel and reciprocal steps in this regard, and stresses the importance and urgency of establishing a credible and effective third-party monitoring mechanism including all members of the Quartet;

5. Stresses the necessity for a commitment to the vision of the two-State solution and the principle of land for peace, and the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973), 1397(2002) and 1515(2003);

6. Also stresses the need for a speedy end to the re-occupation of Palestinian population centres and for the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including military attacks, destruction and acts of terror;

7. Calls upon the concerned parties, the Quartet and other interested parties to exert all efforts and undertake initiatives necessary to halt the deterioration of the situation and to reverse all measures taken on the ground since 28 September 2000, and to ensure a successful and speedy resumption of the peace process and the conclusion of a final peaceful settlement;

8. Stresses the need for:

(a) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967;

(b) The realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination and the right to their independent State;

9. Also stresses the need for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees in conformity with its resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948;

10. Urges Member States to expedite the provision of economic, humanitarian and technical assistance to the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority during this critical period to help to alleviate the suffering of the Palestinian people, rebuild the Palestinian economy and infrastructure and support the restructuring and reform of Palestinian institutions;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts with the parties concerned, and in consultation with the Security Council, towards the attainment of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine and the promotion of peace in the region and to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on these efforts and on developments on this matter.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/21:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, Uganda, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Honduras, Nauru, Rwanda, Tonga.

Speaking before the vote, Israel said that the draft resolution went against the agreements already achieved between the parties and undermined the peace process it professed to support. As with other Assembly resolutions on Arab-Israeli issues, it pretended that Israel had responsibilities with no rights and that Palestinians had rights but no responsibilities. In addition, the draft resolution sought to predetermine issues that had to be resolved through negotiations and undermined the integrity and the foundations of the peace process.

Speaking after the vote, the United Kingdom said that it voted in favour of the resolution because it supported the need to find a just and peaceful solution to the Israeli-Palestine conflict, even though it regretted that the resolution was not better balanced. The United Kingdom condemned terrorism and stressed that both sides had obligations to fulfil in order to make progress on the road map.

By decision 58/565 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda items entitled "Question of Palestine" and "The situation in the Middle East" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session.

Committee on Palestinian Rights

As mandated by General Assembly resolution 57/107 [YUN 2002, p. 458], the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People continued to review the situation relating to the Palestine question, reported on it and made suggestions to the Assembly and the Security Council.

The Committee continued to follow the Palestine-related activities of intergovernmental bodies, such as the African Union and the Non-Aligned Movement, and, through its Chairman, participated in high-level meetings of those bodies. In September, the Committee's Bureau held consultations with EU representatives as part of the continuing effort to build a constructive relationship on issues of common concern. Throughout the year, the Committee held a number of international events, including the United Nations International Meeting in Support of Middle East Peace (Kyiv, Ukraine, 13-14 May); a Public Forum in Support of Middle East Peace (Kyiv, 15 May); the United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People (Geneva, 15-16 July); and the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People (New York, 4-5 September).

In its annual report to the Assembly [A/58/35] covering the period from 11 October 2002 to 9 October 2003, the Committee welcomed the presentation of the road map, but expressed concern that, while the PA had accepted it without reservations, Israel had not fully endorsed it, putting forward a series of conditions for its acceptance that threatened to render most of the plan ineffective. During the year, IDF conducted regular military raids in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, reoccupied Palestinian cities, imposed closures and curfews and used disproportionate and indiscriminate force in civilian areas. The army operations were often backed by heavy armour, helicopters and fighter jets. IDF also continued to carry out extrajudicial executions of Palestinians and imposed restrictions on the movement of PA President Arafat, who had been confined to his headquarters in Ramallah. The situation with respect to Palestinian prisoners remained unresolved; an estimated 6,500 prisoners, including children, remained in Israeli detention facilities.

Israel continued its territorial expansion through the illegal construction of settlements and outposts, road networks and the demolition of Palestinian homes and property. The removal of some outposts by Israel, as required by the road map, was quickly followed by the construction of new ones by settlers; consequently there was no real improvement in the situation concerning the outposts. At the same time, Israel had stepped up the construction of a barrier in the West Bank.

Overall, the humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained dire.

The most significant impediment to recovery of the Palestinian economy and improvement in the humanitarian situation was the closure regime, which forced many Palestinians to use long detours to reach their jobs, medical facilities or schools. Although the movement of people and goods was eased in some areas, frequent incursions by IDF into Palestinian areas, the re-establishment of roadblocks and the imposition of curfews continued to stifle the Palestinian livelihood. Even though security responsibilities were transferred to the PA in the Gaza Strip, Palestinians were still unable to move around freely. Such restrictions, combined with Israeli military operations, had virtually paralysed the Palestinian economic life. Constant water shortages and the deteriorating hygiene situation affected health and living conditions of thousands of families. The problem had become even more acute with the construction of the separation barrier, for its route limited Palestinian access to water wells.

The Committee, in its conclusions and recommendations, expressed concern about the lack of serious headway in the political process and, consequently, the absence of any tangible improvement in the security area. The initial positive steps aimed at creating confidence between the parties had collapsed, stalling the political process. The Committee remained hopeful that the situation could be redressed through the efforts of the Quartet, its individual members and other regional and international players. It emphasized that the United Nations should maintain its responsibility with respect to all aspects of the question of Palestine until it was resolved in a satisfactory manner, in conformity with relevant UN resolutions, in accordance with international legitimacy and until the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people were fully realized.

The Committee intended to continue promoting support for the road map. It stressed its opposition to the construction by Israel of the barrier in the occupied West Bank and in areas close to East Jerusalem, which had devastating immediate and long-term implications for the livelihood of the Palestinian people and endangered international efforts aimed at resolving the conflict. The Committee called on the Security Council and the General Assembly to attach the necessary importance to that issue, with a view to stopping its construction and the de facto annexation of Palestinian land. In its programme of work for the following year, the Committee would address such issues as the status of the peace process and the implementation of the road map, the security situation, the construction of the separation barrier and its implications, the humanitarian and socio-economic situation and the further involvement of civil society.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/18 [draft: A/58/L.23 & Add.1] by recorded vote (97-7-60) [agenda item 38].

Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 181(II) of 29 November 1947, 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 3236(XXIX) of 22 November 1974, 3375(XXX) and 3376(XXX) of 10 November 1975, 31/20 of 24 November 1976 and all subsequent relevant resolutions, including those adopted by the General Assembly at its emergency special sessions and resolution 57/107 of 3 December 2002,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, as well as the existing agreements between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Welcoming the official presentation by the Quartet of the performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Reaffirming that the United Nations has a permanent responsibility towards the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner in accordance with international legitimacy,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for its efforts in performing the tasks assigned to it by the General Assembly, and takes note of its annual report, including the conclusions and recommendations contained in chapter VII thereof;

2. Requests the Committee to continue to exert all efforts to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, to support the Middle East peace process and to mobilize international support for and assistance to the Palestinian people, and authorizes the Committee to make such adjustments in its approved programme of work as it may consider appropriate and necessary in the light of developments and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session and thereafter;

3. Also requests the Committee to continue to keep under review the situation relating to the question of Palestine and to report and make suggestions to the General Assembly, the Security Council or the Secretary-General, as appropriate;

4. Further requests the Committee to continue to extend its cooperation and support to Palestinian and other civil society organizations in order to mobilize international solidarity and support for the achievement by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights and for a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, and to involve additional civil society organizations in its work;

5. Requests the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, established under General Assembly resolution 194(III), and other United Nations bodies and entities working on various aspects of the question of Palestine to continue to cooperate fully with the Committee and to make available to it, at its request, the relevant information and documentation which they have at their disposal;

6. Invites all Governments and organizations to extend their cooperation to the Committee in the performance of its tasks;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate the report of the Committee to all competent bodies of the United Nations, and urges them to take the necessary action, as appropriate;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Committee with all necessary facilities for the performance of its tasks.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/18:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Costa Rica, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Tonga, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Uzbekistan.

Division for Palestinian Rights

Under the guidance of the Committee on Palestinian Rights, the Division for Palestinian Rights of the UN Secretariat continued to research, monitor, prepare studies, and collect and disseminate information on all issues related to the Palestine question. The Division responded to requests for information and issued the following publications: a monthly bulletin covering action by the United Nations and intergovernmental organizations concerned with the issue of Palestine; a monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources; reports of meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee; a special bulletin on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (29 November); periodic reviews of developments relating to Middle East peace efforts; and an annual compilation of relevant General Assembly and Security Council action.

The Committee, in its annual report [A/58/35], stressed that the Division should continue its programme of publications and other informational activities, including further development of the electronic United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) documents collection. It requested that the training programme for PA staff be continued.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/19 [draft: A/58/L.24 & Add.1] by recorded vote (98-6-63) [agenda item 38].

Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Taking note in particular of the relevant information contained in chapter V.B of that report,

Recalling its resolution 32/40 B of 2 December 1977 and all subsequent relevant resolutions, including resolution 57/108 of 3 December 2002,

1. Notes with appreciation the action taken by the Secretary-General in compliance with its resolution 57/108;

2. Considers that the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat continues to make a useful and constructive contribution;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division with the necessary resources and to ensure that it continues to carry out its work as detailed in the relevant earlier resolutions, in consultation with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and under its guidance, including, in particular, the organization of meetings and conferences in various regions with the participation of all sectors of the international community, the further development and expansion of the documents collection of the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, the preparation and widest possible dissemination of publications and information materials on various aspects of the question of Palestine and the provision of the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the continued cooperation of the Department of Public Information and other units of the Secretariat in enabling the Division to perform its tasks and in covering adequately the various aspects of the question of Palestine;

5. Invites all Governments and organizations to extend their cooperation to the Division in the performance of its tasks;

6. Requests the Committee and the Division, as part of the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November, to continue to organize an annual exhibit on Palestinian rights in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations, and encourages Member States to continue to give the widest support and publicity to the observance of the Day of Solidarity.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/19:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Special information programme

As requested in General Assembly resolution 57/109 [YUN 2002, p. 460], the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) in 2003 continued its special information programme on the question of Palestine, which included the organization of its annual training programme for Palestinian broadcasters and journalists, and the launching, in January, of the Arabic version of the United Nations News Centre web site (www.un.org/news). The Radio Section provided extensive coverage of various aspects of the question in its daily live broadcasts in all six UN official languages. The updated permanent exhibit "The United Nations and the Question of Palestine" was on display in the General Assembly Hall. The quarterly UN Chronicle continued to cover the Palestine question and reported on relevant UN action. DPI's Video Section produced a World Chronicle programme entitled "Palestine Refugees: Present and Future Challenges".

DPI, in cooperation with the Foundation of the Three Cultures of the Mediterranean, organized an international media seminar on peace in the Middle East (Seville, Spain, 21-22 October). With the overall theme "Towards a two-State solution", the seminar provided an opportunity for media representatives and international experts to discuss the status of the road map; the role of culture, literature and education in facilitating a dialogue for peace; and the media's coverage of the conflict.

As in previous years, the United Nations information centres (UNICs) and other UN offices carried out activities in connection with the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. Throughout the year, many UNICs dealt with the Palestine question and organized related outreach activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/20 [draft: A/58/L.25 & Add.1] by recorded vote (159-6-6) [agenda item 38].

Special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Taking note in particular of the information contained in chapter VI of that report,

Recalling its resolution 57/109 of 3 December 2002,

Convinced that the worldwide dissemination of accurate and comprehensive information and the role of civil society organizations and institutions remain of vital importance in heightening awareness of and support for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, as well as the existing agreements concluded between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Welcoming the official presentation by the Quartet of the road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

1. Notes with appreciation the action taken by the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat in compliance with resolution 56/35 of 3 December 2001;

2. Considers that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department is very useful in raising the awareness of the international community concerning the question of Palestine and the situation in the Middle East and that the programme is contributing effectively to an atmosphere conducive to dialogue and supportive of the peace process;

3. Requests the Department, in full cooperation and coordination with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, to continue, with the necessary flexibility as may be required by developments affecting the question of Palestine, its special information programme for the biennium 2004-2005, in particular:

(a) To disseminate information on all the activities of the United Nations system relating to the question of Palestine, including reports on the work carried out by the relevant United Nations entities;

(b) To continue to issue and update publications on the various aspects of the question of Palestine in all fields, including materials concerning the recent developments in that regard, in particular the prospects for peace;

(c) To expand its collection of audio-visual material on the question of Palestine and to continue the production and preservation of such material and the updating of the exhibit in the Secretariat;

(d) To organize and promote fact-finding news missions for journalists to the area, including the territory under the jurisdiction of the Palestinian Authority and the Occupied Territory;

(e) To organize international, regional and national seminars or encounters for journalists, aiming in particular at sensitizing public opinion to the question of Palestine;

(f) To continue to provide assistance to the Palestinian people in the field of media development, in particular to strengthen the training programme for Palestinian broadcasters and journalists initiated in 1995.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Honduras, Rwanda, Tonga, Uganda, Uzbekistan.

Assistance to Palestinians

UN activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/147 [YUN 2002, p. 462], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [A/58/88-E/2003/84 & Corr.1] describing UN and other assistance to the Palestinian people between June 2002 and May 2003.

During the reporting period, the cycle of violence between Israelis and Palestinians continued, with hundreds of victims on both sides. Tight internal and external closures, widespread curfews, incursions and other measures taken by IDF led to a further deterioration of economic indicators and to an increase in poverty and unemployment levels among Palestinians. The PA's capacity was diminished just as needs increased. The UN system continued to work to maintain Palestinian capacities to provide essential services, to repair damage to infrastructure and to meet urgent needs. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) continued its technical assistance and infrastructure support and played an important role in the PA's reform efforts, especially in the establishment of the Palestinian Central Elections Commission. Other UN agencies continued to carry out technical assistance projects and programmes. However, the planning, management and implementation of those projects were hampered by restrictions placed on UN staff, notably locally recruited Palestinian staff, a deteriorating security environment and problems of access, often requiring the rescheduling of programme activities and a shift in emphasis from development to emergency activity.

Overall donor commitments increased by 57 per cent during the period under review. However, while emergency and budgetary assistance increased, development assistance declined by 70 per cent. International community support focused on the PA's institutional reform efforts, direct support to the PA budget and mitigating the impact of the economic and social crisis.

The Quartet's Task Force on Palestinian Reform, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 432], continued to monitor and support implementation of Palestinian civil reforms and guided the international donor community in its support for the Palestinian reform agenda. At its meeting in London on 20 February 2003, the Task Force recognized that the conflict, continued restrictions on freedom of movement of persons and goods, deterioration of the humanitarian situation and destruction of local infrastructure and facilities constituted a significant hindrance to reforms. Noting the difficult security situation, it welcomed the considerable progress made in several areas of Palestinian civil reform, in particular the implementation of higher standards of fiscal transparency and accountability, as well as work towards development of the public institutions and laws needed to promote a market economy. It also welcomed Israel's decision to resume monthly transfers of Palestinian tax revenues, which permitted the Palestinian Ministry of Finance to submit a fully financed budget for 2003. The Task Force commended efforts to develop appropriate legislation and to coordinate economic policy with Palestinian business leaders, but noted that progress in some areas, such as judicial reform, had been much slower. While acknowledging Israel's legitimate security concerns, there was consensus in the Task Force that mobility restrictions constituted a major impediment to reform, slowing progress and undermining the credibility of the reform process in many areas.

The Secretary-General observed that the humanitarian and socio-economic crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory had reached unprecedented levels. The Palestinians' capacity to manage their own affairs had been dramatically reduced, making them dependent on budgetary, technical and humanitarian aid. The challenge ahead was how to meet urgent needs without undermining the prospects for a viable Palestinian State. The PA's depleted administrative, financial and service delivery capacities had to be restored, while efforts continued to meet emergency requirements. Both parties had to make every effort to facilitate the work of UN agencies and partners. The Secretary-General called especially on Israel to lift restrictions, revive the economy, restore Palestinian livelihood and facilitate the work of the assistance community, and on the international community to provide the resources for the assistance programmes to the Palestinian people.

The Economic and Social Council, on 24 July, took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 2003/273).

UNCTAD assistance to Palestinians

At its fiftieth session (Geneva, 6-17 October) [A/58/15], the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) took note of the report on UNCTAD assistance to the Palestinian people [TD/B/50/4] and of the statements made by delegations during deliberations on that item. UNCTAD intensified its programme of assistance to the Palestinian people in close cooperation with the PA, focusing on building capacities for effective economic policy-making and management and strengthening the enabling environment for the private sector. Its technical cooperation was directed at trade policies and strategies, trade facilitation and logistics, finance and development, and enterprise, investment and competition policy. Despite the intensification of the conflict, which interrupted the development process and rendered the provision of technical assistance increasingly difficult, UNCTAD was able to make concrete progress in its technical assistance programmes. It contributed to an initiative to support the Palestinian olive oil industry through international trade and targeted markets, and provided advisory services, observations, a mission and reports on several areas of economic policy and trade, including proposals for "Israeli economic facilitation measures" submitted by the PA as part of confidence-building measures and a World Bank study on long-term policy options for the Palestinian economy.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/113 [draft: A/58/L.33/Rev.1 & Add.1] by recorded vote (170-0-2) [agenda item 40 (e)].

Assistance to the Palestinian people

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/147 of 16 December 2002, as well as previous resolutions on the question,

Recalling also the signing of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993, by the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the subsequent implementation agreements concluded by the two sides,

Gravely concerned at the deterioration in the living conditions of the Palestinian people throughout the occupied territory, which constitutes a mounting humanitarian crisis,

Conscious of the urgent need for improvement in the economic and social infrastructure of the occupied territory,

Aware that development is difficult under occupation and is best promoted in circumstances of peace and stability,

Noting the great economic and social challenges facing the Palestinian people and their leadership,

Conscious of the urgent necessity for international assistance to the Palestinian people, taking into account the Palestinian priorities,

Welcoming the results of the Conference to Support Middle East Peace, convened in Washington, D.C., on 1 October 1993, the establishment of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee and the work being done by the World Bank as its secretariat and the establishment of the Consultative Group, as well as all follow-up meetings and international mechanisms established to provide assistance to the Palestinian people,

Welcoming also the work of the Joint Liaison Committee, which provides a forum in which economic policy and practical matters related to donor assistance are discussed with the Palestinian Authority,

Stressing the continued importance of the work of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee in the coordination of assistance to the Palestinian people,

Noting the convening of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meetings, held in London on 18 and 19 February 2003 and in Rome on 10 December 2003, to review the state of the Palestinian economy,

Stressing the need for the full engagement of the United Nations in the process of building Palestinian institutions and in providing broad assistance to the Palestinian people, and welcoming in this regard the support to the Palestinian Authority by the Task Force on Palestinian Reform established by the Quartet in 2002,

Noting, in this regard, the active participation of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority in the activities of the Special Envoys of the Quartet,

Welcoming the endorsement by the Security Council, in its resolution 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003, of the performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and stressing the need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Expressing grave concern at the continuation of the recent tragic and violent events that have led to many deaths and injuries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Personal Humanitarian Envoy of the Secretary-General on the humanitarian conditions and needs of the Palestinian people;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his rapid response and efforts regarding assistance to the Palestinian people;

4. Also expresses its appreciation to the Member States, United Nations bodies and intergovernmental, regional and non-governmental organizations that have provided and continue to provide assistance to the Palestinian people;

5. Stresses the importance of the work of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority and of the steps taken under the auspices of the Secretary-General to ensure the achievement of a coordinated mechanism for United Nations activities throughout the occupied territories;

6. Urges Member States, international financial institutions of the United Nations system, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and regional and interregional organizations to extend, as rapidly and as generously as possible, economic and social assistance to the Palestinian people, in close cooperation with the Palestine Liberation Organization and through official Palestinian institutions;

7. Calls upon relevant organizations and agencies of the United Nations system to intensify their assistance in response to the urgent needs of the Palestinian people in accordance with Palestinian priorities set forth by the Palestinian Authority;

8. Urges Member States to open their markets to exports of Palestinian products on the most favourable terms, consistent with appropriate trading rules, and to implement fully existing trade and cooperation agreements;

9. Calls upon the international donor community to expedite the delivery of pledged assistance to the Palestinian people to meet their urgent needs;

10. Stresses, in this context, the importance of ensuring the free passage of aid to the Palestinian people and the free movement of persons and goods;

11. Urges the international donor community, United Nations agencies and organizations and non-governmental organizations to extend as rapidly as possible emergency economic and humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian people to counter the impact of the current crisis;

12. Stresses the need to implement the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations of 29 April 1994, fifth annex to the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, signed in Washington, D.C., on 28 September 1995, in particular with regard to the full and prompt clearance of Palestinian indirect tax revenues, and welcomes the progress made in this regard;

13. Suggests the convening in 2004 of a United Nations-sponsored seminar on assistance to the Palestinian people;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, through the Economic and Social Council, on the implementation of the present resolution, containing:

(a) An assessment of the assistance actually received by the Palestinian people;

(b) An assessment of the needs still unmet and specific proposals for responding effectively to them;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the sub-item entitled "Assistance to the Palestinian people".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/113:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Israel, Kenya.

Speaking before the vote, Israel said that it shared the concern of the international community over the deterioration in the humanitarian situation in the Middle East and that it had done its utmost to cooperate with international actors in an effort to facilitate their humanitarian work aimed at improving the Palestinians' living conditions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. However, Palestinian terrorists had viewed measures intended to increase freedom of movement as opportunities to infiltrate Israeli cities, and had used the immunity granted to medical and humanitarian vehicles to smuggle weapons and explosives. It was therefore disingenuous to suggest that Israeli policies were the source of the hardships facing the Palestinian people. If the international community was serious about alleviating the Palestinian humanitarian plight, the single most important thing it could do was to insist that the Palestinian leadership end its campaign of violence, terror and incitement. Unlike previous years, Israel would abstain on the resolution because it included new language unrelated to humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian people, including reference to Security Council resolution 1515(2003) (see p. 483). It expressed regret that the Assembly session had been used to further a partisan and political agenda, and had denied Israel the opportunity to present for a vote a draft resolution on the welfare of Israeli children, after adopting a similar draft resolution on Palestinian children.

Speaking after the vote, the Observer of Palestine said that he regretted the fact that Israel chose to break away from the consensus on the resolution and to depart from the only positive tradition regarding the Middle East which had been in effect for 10 years. Israel took that stand because of an added paragraph that welcomed the unanimous adoption of Council resolution 1515(2003) and, in its statement before the vote, tried to convince the international community that it had no responsibility for the humanitarian tragedy being endured by the Palestinian people.

UNRWA

In 2003, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East continued to provide vital education, health and relief and social services to an ever-growing refugee population, despite a severe budget deficit and cash flow crisis.

As at 30 June, 4.08 million refugees were registered with UNRWA, an increase of 2.7 per cent over the 2002 figure of 3.97 million. The largest refugee population was registered in Jordan (42.1 per cent of the Agency-wide total), followed by the Gaza Strip (22.2 per cent), the West Bank (16 per cent), the Syrian Arab Republic (10 per cent) and Lebanon (9.6 per cent). Of the registered population, 51 per cent were 18 years of age or under.

In his annual report on the work of the Agency from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/13 & Corr.1], the UNRWA Commissioner-General said that UNRWA was actively involved in the UN contingency planning efforts before the conflict in Iraq erupted (see p. 333) and had followed developments closely as they affected tens of thousands of Palestinians living in Iraq, many of them Palestine refugees. The Agency, among other things, participated in delivering emergency assistance to Palestinian families fleeing the conflict and temporarily accommodated them in tented camps on the Jordanian-Iraqi border. The Agency was also forced to relocate non-essential staff and their dependants between March and April 2003.

During the reporting period, the conditions of strife in the Occupied Palestinian Territory persisted. Suicide bombings inside Israel continued, causing heavy loss of life, while the reoccupation by IDF of almost all of the West Bank and Gaza Strip and ensuing large-scale military operations caused heavy loss of life and widespread damage to and destruction of Palestinian property. The incidence of large-scale military incursions into refugee camps, in particular in the Gaza Strip, increased significantly. The severe economic downturn in the Palestinian economy since September 2000 intensified, as closures and other measures kept large numbers of Palestinians unemployed. At the end of 2002, real gross national income had shrunk by 38 per cent from its 1999 level, while real per capita income fell by 46 per cent during the same period. As a result, approximately 60 per cent of the Palestinian population was living below the poverty line.

The environment in which UNRWA carried out its operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to affect negatively its ability to deliver services. Israeli military operations in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip and internal closures led to severe disruption in the delivery of UNRWA humanitarian supplies to distribution centres. Moreover, six UNRWA staff members were killed during the reporting period and 64 others were detained by the Israeli authorities. IDF also destroyed some UNRWA installations, such as schools, training centres and health-care facilities. Some UNRWA school buildings were taken over by IDF and used as bases and detention centres. Instances in which Palestinian militants entered UNRWA premises were also reported. The Agency took immediate steps to effect their removal from the installations and protested to the PA.

The Agency put into place an extensive emergency assistance programme for refugees affected by the strife in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, providing temporary accommodation and emergency assistance to refugees when their shelters were destroyed. It also launched several housing projects to afford the refugees new dwellings which conformed to standards of minimum human decency. In the West Bank, after a year of heavy destruction caused by Israeli military operations, UNRWA expanded its shelter rehabilitation and rehousing programmes, including the reconstruction of the destroyed area in the Jenin camp. To facilitate UNRWA's activities under its emergency programme, the Operational Support Officers programme was expanded in the West Bank and reintroduced in the Gaza Strip. The programme played a crucial role in facilitating the delivery of humanitarian goods and safe passage of UNRWA staff through checkpoints, and enhanced the implementation of Agency programmes in accordance with UN norms. During the reporting period, emergency programme appeals were launched for 2002 ($172.8 million) and for the first half of 2003 ($93.7 million). By the end of 2002, only $96.8 million had been pledged towards that year's appeals, and only 40 per cent ($37.3 million) of the appeal for the first half of 2003. It was clear that other crises had to some extent diverted the attention of traditional donors from the Palestinian issue. In addition, the Agency feared that the construction of a separation barrier by Israel inside the West Bank, when completed, would impoverish and isolate thousands of refugee families and would constitute a new and formidable obstacle to the delivery of UNRWA services to refugees in its vicinity.

UNRWA's internal reforms during the reporting period focused, among other things, on improving the efficiency and effectiveness of its resource management, the cultivation of an open management culture, the strengthening of strategic planning capabilities, and expansion and improvement in the Agency's relations with donor countries, host countries and other UN agencies and programmes.

Advisory Commission. By a 25 September letter to the Commissioner-General, which was included in his annual report [A/58/13 & Corr.1], the Chairperson of the Advisory Commission of UNRWA noted with concern the continuing deteriorating political, economic and social situation in the region and the humanitarian crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The crisis was evidenced primarily by rising levels of malnutrition among children, high levels of poverty and unemployment, deteriorating health conditions, and the displacement of an increasing number of Palestinians following the destruction of their homes. He noted that the Agency had launched appeals totalling $196.6 million for 2003, though the response of the international community to those appeals had been slow, with only $76.8 million pledged as at mid-September. In addition, it was noted that, against planned regular budget expenditure of $315.1 million during 2003, pledges of only $293.3 million had been received as at the end of August.

Report of Conciliation Commission. The United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, in its fifty-seventh report covering the period from 1 September 2002 to 31 August 2003 [A/58/256], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 57/117 [YUN 2002, p. 466], noted its August 2002 report [ibid., p. 471] and observed that it had nothing new to report since its submission.

Communication. In a 6 November response [A/58/557] to the Commissioner-General's report (see p. 506), Israel said that its officials had been continuously available to meet and coordinate matters with UNRWA officials regarding both general and practical issues arising out of UNRWA operations. Israel remained committed to its obligations to facilitate UNRWA humanitarian activities and would continue to explore pragmatic solutions to facilitate such activity. There was, however, little recognition by UNRWA in its report that the conditions under which it operated had been determined by the continuing violence in the region. That violence necessitated self-defence actions, including military operations. In addition, terrorist organizations used and exploited UNRWA installations as hideouts and places of refuge. While recognizing that UNRWA was not responsible for security in refugee camps, Israel did expect the organization to draw greater attention to the violent actions taking place in those camps. At least 16 Palestinian employees of UNRWA were in custody; the alleged crimes included involvement in a variety of security-related crimes, such as membership in terrorist organizations, and armed attacks against Israeli targets.

Projects

During the reporting period, project funding enabled UNRWA to complete, among other things, the construction of eight schools and the rehabilitation of shelters and health centres. In recognition of the fact that project funding had taken on an increasing financial and programmatic importance over the years, and in order to establish a more targeted fund-raising approach, UNRWA established Agency-wide project priorities that formed the basis for the projects component of its biennium budget. UNRWA received pledges in the amount of $20.5 million towards its project budget, of which $9.9 million was allocated to the health sector, $4.1 million to education, $3.9 million to the relief and social services sector and $2.6 million to other projects. The Peace Implementation Programme, established in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 569] to fund extrabudgetary activities within the Agency's major service areas, was merged under the projects budget following the adoption of the 2000-2001 programme-based biennium budget [YUN 2000, p. 450].

Lebanon appeal

Most of the over 389,000 registered Palestine refugees in Lebanon continued to face deplorable living conditions and depended almost entirely on UNRWA for basic services. By the end of June 2003, the Agency had received the $11 million pledged under the special emergency appeal, launched in 1997 to support essential health, education, relief and social services activities for Palestine refugees in Lebanon, and had expended $9.1 million of that amount. During the reporting period, UNRWA completed the mechanization of a solid waste collection and disposal system project and offered short-term vocational courses.

Emergency appeals

UNRWA continued its programme of emergency assistance, focusing on food aid, emergency employment creation, shelter repair and rebuilding, cash assistance, health and education. In December 2002, UNRWA launched a $93.7 million appeal to cover emergency needs for the period January to June 2003. The appeal was developed under the Humanitarian Action Plan prepared by the United Nations Technical Assessment Mission which visited the region following the visit by the Secretary-General's Personal Humanitarian Envoy, Catherine Bertini, to the area [YUN 2002, p. 455]. As at 30 June, confirmed pledges amounted to $38.4 million. Another appeal totalling $102.9 million covering the period July to December 2003 was launched in June.

By the end of June 2003, UNRWA had provided 41,000 Palestine refugees in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip with short-term emergency employment, and more than 250,000 people had benefited from short-term jobs managed directly by the Agency. Many more benefited from work opportunities created through private sector construction projects contracted by UNRWA.

Major service areas

UNRWA continued to provide educational, health, and relief and social services to, and carried out microfinance and microenterprise activities for, Palestine refugees throughout the occupied territories.

The Agency's education programme, its largest activity, operated 651 schools providing basic and preparatory education to approximately 490,000 pupils, as well as five secondary schools in Lebanon, eight vocational training centres and three teacher training colleges. It continued to be supported by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), which funded senior managerial and technical posts within UNRWA and provided it with technical assistance and general guidance. As the Agency's schools followed the national curricula of the host countries, it was required to implement all improvements and enhancements to the curriculum introduced by the host country authorities, but had been struggling to keep pace with those enhancements because of its precarious financial situation. The Agency's university scholarship programme was being discontinued due to financial constraints, a decision which in time would affect UNRWA's capacity to attract trained medical staff to its health centres. Financial constraints had also hampered the modernization of the curriculum and the infrastructure of the Agency's vocational training centres. Despite the financial challenges, UNRWA's Education Department continued to reform and improve its internal processes within the framework of its five-year development plan, in addition to projects such as the initiative in computer information technology. In the reporting period, UNRWA continued to introduce limited secondary schooling in Lebanon, as a result of continued access restrictions for Palestine refugees to the Lebanese public education system. In the West Bank and Gaza Strip, because operations were severely hampered by the ongoing crisis, UNRWA's emergency programme included remedial and compensatory education for approximately 40,000 pupils.

Technical supervision of UNRWA's health programme was provided by the World Health Organization (WHO), which also supplied the services of senior management staff and short-term consultants, technical literature and publications. The Agency focused on sustaining adequate levels of investment in primary health care, enhancing institutional capacity-building and developing its human resources. Management reforms implemented led to the introduction of new health information, hospital management and drug supply management systems. UNRWA's health services continued to face abnormally high workloads, and studies also warned of breakdowns in preventive services to women and children. UNRWA incurred additional expenditure following the breakdown of cost-sharing arrangements in the West Bank regarding secondary care, while in Lebanon the Agency strengthened its cooperation with the Palestinian Red Crescent Society, providing cost-effective secondary health care to refugees unable to afford the cost of private hospitalization. UNRWA also continued its environmental health services in refugee camps, introducing and/or improving sewerage disposal, storm water drainage and the provision of safe drinking water. Major projects were under way in the Syrian Arab Republic and Lebanon for construction of water and sewerage systems in various refugee camps.

UNRWA's relief and social services programme addressed the needs of the most vulnerable among the refugee population and applied a community development (self-help) approach in fostering community-based organizations with a focus on women, children and youth, and physically/mentally challenged refugees. The Agency's special hardship programme was in increasing demand due to the difficult socio-economic situation in Jordan, continuing restrictions on the employment of Palestine refugees in Lebanon, and the crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The number of refugees in households that met the programme's eligibility criteria—no male adult medically fit to earn an income and no other identifiable means of financial support above a defined threshold—increased by 1.6 per cent, from 229,404 in June 2002 to 233,044 in June 2003. The trends in the programme pointed to a feminization of poverty among the refugees, as the incidence of female-headed households increased. Shelter rehabilitation continued according to the availability of extrabudgetary funding, as the state of the General Fund did not allow such activities to be funded from the Agency's regular budget. During the reporting period, the provision of land by the host authority enabled UNRWA to launch rehousing projects in Gaza, following large-scale destruction of refugee shelters.

The Agency continued to promote income-generation activities within the context of its relief and social services programme and as a commercial, self-sustaining and market-oriented microfinance and microenterprise programme. The latter programme expanded its operations into Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic, providing almost 9,000 loans worth $6.01 million, with women entrepreneurs receiving 43 per cent of the loans. On account of the decline in economic conditions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the programme was unable to maintain its normal state of financial self-sufficiency for the second year in a row. By June 2003, the lending outreach in Gaza increased to 1,141 loans valued at $806,175, compared to 923 in the previous period valued at $655,276, but was still less than the 1,304 loans amounting to $1.46 million in September 2000.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/472], adopted resolution 58/91 by recorded vote (167-1-8) [agenda item 83].

Assistance to Palestine refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948 and all its subsequent resolutions on the question, including resolution 57/117 of 11 December 2002,

Recalling also its resolution 302(IV) of 8 December 1949, by which, inter alia, it established the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions,

Aware of the fact that the Palestine refugees have, for more than five decades, lost their homes, lands and means of livelihood,

Affirming the imperative of resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees for the achievement of justice and for the achievement of lasting peace in the region,

Acknowledging the essential role that the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East has played for more than fifty-three years since its establishment in ameliorating the plight of the Palestine refugees in the fields of education, health and relief and social services,

Taking note of the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003,

Aware of the continuing needs of Palestine refugees throughout all the fields of operation, namely Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic, and the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Expressing grave concern at the especially difficult situation of the Palestine refugees under occupation, including with regard to their safety, well-being and living conditions, and the continuous deterioration of those conditions during the recent period,

Noting the signing of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements on 13 September 1993 by the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization and the subsequent implementation agreements,

Aware that the Multilateral Working Group on Refugees of the Middle East peace process has an important role to play in the peace process,

1. Notes with regret that repatriation or compensation of the refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of its resolution 194(III), has not yet been effected and that, therefore, the situation of the Palestine refugees continues to be a matter of concern;

2. Also notes with regret that the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine has been unable to find a means of achieving progress in the implementation of paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194(III), and requests the Commission to exert continued efforts towards the implementation of that paragraph and to report to the Assembly as appropriate, but no later than 1 September 2004;

3. Affirms the necessity for the continuation of the work of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the importance of its operation and services for the well-being of the Palestine refugees and for the stability of the region, pending the resolution of the question of the Palestine refugees;

4. Calls upon all donors to continue to make the most generous efforts possible to meet the anticipated needs of the Agency, including those mentioned in recent emergency appeals.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/93:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel.

Abstaining: Cameroon, Honduras, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Tuvalu, United States.

The Assembly, also on 9 December [meeting 72] and on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/58/472], adopted resolution 58/93 by recorded vote (162-5-8) [agenda item 83].

Operations of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 212(III) of 19 November 1948, 302(IV) of 8 December 1949 and all subsequent related resolutions, including resolution 57/121 of 11 December 2002,

Recalling also the relevant Security Council resolutions,

Having considered the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003,

Taking note of the letter dated 25 September 2003 from the Chairperson of the Advisory Commission of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East addressed to the Commissioner-General,

Deeply concerned about the continuing critical financial situation of the Agency and its effect on the continuing provision of necessary Agency services to the Palestine refugees, including its emergency-related programmes and its development programmes,

Recalling Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations,

Affirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem,

Aware of the continuing needs of Palestine refugees throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in the other fields of operation, namely, in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic,

Also aware of the valuable work done by the refugee affairs officers of the Agency in providing protection to the Palestinian people, in particular Palestine refugees,

Gravely concerned about the increased suffering of the Palestine refugees, including the loss of life, injury and destruction and damage to their shelters and properties, during the ongoing crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing grave concern about the continuing impact of the events that occurred in the Jenin refugee camp in April 2002, including the loss of life, injury, destruction and displacement inflicted on many of its civilian inhabitants,

Aware of the extraordinary efforts being undertaken by the Agency for the repair and rebuilding of thousands of destroyed and damaged refugee shelters,

Gravely concerned about the safety of the Agency's staff and about the damage caused to facilities of the Agency as a result of Israeli military operations during the reporting period,

Deploring the killing of six Agency staff members by the Israeli occupying forces during the reporting period,

Expressing deep concern about the continuing policies of closure and severe restrictions, including the curfews, that have been imposed on the movement of persons and goods throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and which have had a grave impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestine refugees and have greatly contributed to the dire humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people,

Deeply concerned about the continuing restrictions on the freedom of movement of the Agency staff, vehicles and goods, including the harassment of personnel, which adversely affect the ability of the Agency to provide its services, including its education, health and relief and social services,

Recalling the signing, on 13 September 1993, of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements by the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization and the subsequent implementation agreements,

Aware of the agreement between the Agency and the Government of Israel,

Aware also of the establishment of a working relationship between the Advisory Commission of the Agency and the Palestine Liberation Organization in accordance with General Assembly decision 48/417 of 10 December 1993,

Taking note of the agreement reached on 24 June 1994, embodied in an exchange of letters between the Agency and the Palestine Liberation Organization,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, as well as to all of the staff of the Agency, for their tireless efforts and valuable work, particularly in the light of the increasingly difficult conditions throughout the past year;

2. Also expresses its appreciation to the Advisory Commission of the Agency, and requests it to continue its efforts and to keep the General Assembly informed of its activities, including the full implementation of decision 48/417;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, for its efforts to assist in ensuring the financial security of the Agency, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and assistance to the Working Group for the conduct of its work;

4. Commends the continuing efforts of the Commissioner-General to increase the budgetary transparency and efficiency of the Agency, as reflected in the Agency's programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005;

5. Acknowledges the support of the host Governments for the Agency in the discharge of its duties;

6. Takes note of the functioning of the headquarters of the Agency in Gaza City on the basis of the Headquarters Agreement between the Agency and the Palestinian Authority;

7. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

8. Also calls upon Israel to abide by Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations with regard to the safety of the personnel of the Agency, the protection of its institutions and the safeguarding of the security of its facilities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

9. Urges the Government of Israel to compensate the Agency for damage to its property and facilities resulting from actions by the Israeli side, particularly during the reporting period;

10. Calls upon Israel particularly to cease obstructing the movement of the personnel, vehicles and supplies of the Agency and to cease the levying of extra fees and charges, which have a detrimental effect on the Agency's operations;

11. Requests the Commissioner-General to proceed with the issuance of identification cards for Palestine refugees and their descendants in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

12. Affirms that the functioning of the Agency remains essential in all fields of operation;

13. Notes the success of the Agency's microfinance and microenterprise programme, and calls upon the Agency, in close cooperation with the relevant agencies, to continue to contribute towards the development of the economic and social stability of the Palestine refugees;

14. Reiterates its request to the Commissioner-General to proceed with the modernization of the archives of the Agency through the Palestine Refugee Records Project, and to indicate progress in his report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

15. Reiterates its previous appeals to all States, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to augment the special allocations for grants and scholarships for higher education to Palestine refugees in addition to their contributions to the regular budget of the Agency and to contribute towards the establishment of vocational training centres for Palestine refugees, and requests the Agency to act as the recipient and trustee for the special allocations for grants and scholarships;

16. Urges all States, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to increase their contributions to the Agency so as to ease the ongoing financial constraints, exacerbated by the current humanitarian situation on the ground, and to support the Agency's valuable work in assistance to the Palestine refugees.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/93:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.
Abstaining: Burundi, Cameroon, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on UNRWA would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

UNRWA financing

UNRWA ended 2002 with a positive working balance of $18.7 million, despite the decreased level of donor contributions ($282.4 million in 2001 and $275.8 million in 2002). It also achieved a relatively favourable financial result due to the depreciation of the United States dollar against other currencies; the Agency made $13 million in exchange rate gains in 2002, compared to a loss of $3.5 million in 2001. The Agency's total working capital stood at $18.7 million as at 31 December 2002.

The Agency's cash flow position remained critical owing to repeated funding shortfalls in previous years. As at mid-2003, expected cash expenditure in the regular programme was $315.1 million, as against expected cash income of $290.8 million. As at 31 December 2002, outstanding cash pledges under all accounts amounted to $5.1 million, of which $4.9 million pertained to the regular budget and $0.2 million to the emergency appeal. In addition, UNRWA had not yet been fully reimbursed by the PA in respect of payments made against value added tax (VAT) and related charges, although the Agency had made some progress in that regard. As at 30 June 2003, UNRWA had received from the PA a reimbursement of VAT charges of approximately $7.7 million.

The Commissioner-General said that the Agency's 2004-2005 budget [A/58/13/Add.1], developed on the results-based format, was a programme-based budget structured around UNRWA's mandated service-providing role and programme plans. It was derived from a biennial programme of work specifying objectives, expected accomplishments, planned activities and key performance indicators to measure the performance of each programme; the budget preparation was guided by planning assumptions rather than budget ceilings. The Agency's budget requirements for 2004-2005 were estimated at $805 million.

Working Group. The Working Group on the Financing of UNRWA held three meetings in 2003, on 10 September and 17 and 20 October. In its report to the General Assembly [A/58/450], the Working Group said that, by the end of September, UNRWA faced the prospect of a funding gap in its 2003 regular cash budget of $8.3 million. Income for 2003 was expected to be $306.8 million, against a net cash expenditure of $315.1 million. Furthermore, of the $303.8 million in income expected for the regular budget in 2003, $279.4 million was received by the end of September, with $24.4 million still outstanding. The Working Group expressed concern about the increasing shortfalls in funding for UNRWA's 2002-2003 emergency appeals. Against a total request of $172.8 million for emergency appeals during 2002, the Agency had received $95.9 million in pledges, and $82.9 million against a total request of $196.6 million for emergency appeals in 2003. The shortfalls in emergency appeal contributions had curtailed UNRWA's humanitarian activities, among others, its food distribution and emergency employment generation programmes.

The Working Group said that the austerity measures adopted in the previous years and continuing funding shortfalls had affected the Agency's ability to expand its programmes at a rate commensurate with the growth in the refugee population and, in some cases, had necessitated curtailments of programme activities. The Working Group appealed to the international community to do its utmost to meet the target of $103 million for the emergency appeal issued in June. The services provided by UNRWA had to be viewed as the minimum required to enable the refugees to lead productive lives. Any further reduction in those services not only would deprive them of the minimum level of support, but could have a destabilizing effect on the entire region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/472], adopted resolution 58/95 by recorded vote (133-0-35) [agenda item 83].

Assistance to Palestine refugees and support for the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 212(III) of 19 November 1948, on assistance to Palestine refugees, and 302(IV) of 8 December 1949, by which, inter alia, it established the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East,

Recalling also all its subsequent resolutions on the question, including resolution 56/52 of 10 December 2001,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions,

Acknowledging the essential role that the Agency has played for more than fifty years since its establishment in ameliorating the plight of the Palestine refugees in the fields of education, health and relief and social services,

Aware of the continuing needs of Palestine refugees throughout all the fields of operation, namely the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic,

Gravely concerned about the increased suffering of the Palestine refugees, including the loss of life, injury and destruction and damage to refugee shelters and properties, as well as the safety of the staff and the damage to the facilities of the Agency,

Regretting the death of six Agency staff members during the reporting period,

Deeply concerned about the continuing restrictions on the freedom of movement of the Agency's staff, vehicles and goods, which adversely affect the ability of the Agency to provide its services, including its educational, health and relief and social services,

Stressing the necessity for compliance with Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations with regard to the safety of the personnel of the Agency, the protection of its institutions and the safeguarding of the security of its facilities, including throughout the occupied territories,

Stressing also the need for respect of international humanitarian law,

Emphasizing the obligations of all parties in accordance with the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,

Having considered the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003, the report of the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the letter dated 25 Septem- ber 2003 from the Chairperson of the Advisory Commission of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East addressed to the Commissioner-General, and the report of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine for the period from 1 September 2002 to 31 August 2003,

Deeply concerned about the continuing financial situation of the Agency, which has affected and affects the continuing provision of necessary Agency services to Palestine refugees, including the emergency-related and humanitarian programmes,

1. Affirms the necessity for the continuation of the work of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the importance of its operation and services for the well-being of the Palestine refugees and for the stability of the region, pending the resolution of the question of the Palestine refugees;

2. Calls upon all States to make the most generous efforts possible to meet the anticipated needs of the Agency, including those mentioned in recent emergency appeals, and to support the Agency's valuable work in providing assistance to the Palestine refugees;

3. Takes note with approval of the report of the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, for its efforts to assist in ensuring the financial security of the Agency, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and assistance to the Working Group for the conduct of its work;

4. Endorses the efforts of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to continue to provide humanitarian assistance, as far as practicable, on an emergency basis and as a temporary measure, to persons in the area who are currently displaced and in serious need of continuing assistance as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities;

5. Strongly appeals to all Governments and to organizations and individuals to contribute generously to the Agency and to the other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned for the above-mentioned purposes;

6. Reiterates its previous appeals to all States, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to augment the special allocations for grants and scholarships to Palestine refugees, in addition to their contributions to the regular budget of the Agency;

7. Appeals to all States, specialized agencies and other international bodies to extend assistance for higher education to Palestine refugee students and to contribute towards the establishment of vocational training centres for Palestine refugees, and requests the Agency to act as the recipient and trustee for the special allocations for grants and scholarships;

8. Expresses its appreciation to the Commissioner-General of the Agency, as well as to all of the staff of the Agency, for their tireless efforts and valuable work, particularly in the light of the increasingly difficult conditions throughout the past year;

9. Also expresses its appreciation to the Advisory Commission of the Agency, and requests it to continue its efforts and to keep the General Assembly informed of its activities, including the full implementation of Assembly decision 48/417 of 10 December 1993;

10. Commends the efforts of the Commissioner-General to increase the budgetary transparency and efficiency of the Agency, as well as the support of the host Governments for the Agency in the discharge of its duties;

11. Calls upon all relevant parties to take effective measures to ensure the safety of the personnel of the Agency, the protection of its institutions and the safeguarding of the security of its facilities;

12. Notes the success of the Agency's microfinance and enterprise programmes, and calls upon the Agency, in close cooperation with the relevant agencies, to continue to contribute towards the development of the economic and social stability of the Palestine refugees.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/95:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kazakhstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lesotho, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Mozambique, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sri Lanka, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Bahrain, Belize, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, China, Comoros, Cuba, India, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritania, Mauritius, Morocco, Myanmar, Nauru, Oman, Pakistan, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, Turkey, Tuvalu, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Yemen.

Displaced persons

In a July report [A/58/119] on compliance with General Assembly resolution 57/119 [YUN 2002, p. 469], which called for accelerated return of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to their homes or former places of residence in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, the Secretary-General said that, since UNRWA was not involved in arrangements for the return of either refugees or displaced persons not registered with it, the Agency's information was based on requests by returning registered refugees for the transfer of their entitlements to their areas of return. Displaced refugees known by UNRWA to have returned to the West Bank and Gaza Strip since 1967 totalled about 23,900. As far as UNRWA knew, between 1 July 2002 and 30 June 2003, 879 registered refugees had returned to the West Bank and 154 to Gaza. Some of those refugees might not have been displaced since 1967, but were possibly family members of a displaced registered refugee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/472], adopted resolution 58/92 by recorded vote (168-5-3) [agenda item 83].

Persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2252(ES-V) of 4 July 1967, 2341 B (XXII) of 19 December 1967 and all subsequent related resolutions,

Recalling also Security Council resolutions 237(1967) of 14 June 1967 and 259(1968) of 27 September 1968,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of its resolution 57/119 of 11 December 2002,

Taking note also of the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003,

Concerned about the continuing human suffering resulting from the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities,

Taking note of the relevant provisions of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993 with regard to the modalities for the admission of persons displaced in 1967, and concerned that the process agreed upon has not yet been effected,

1. Reaffirms the right of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to return to their homes or former places of residence in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

2. Expresses deep concern that the mechanism agreed upon by the parties in article XII of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993 on the return of displaced persons has not been effected, and stresses the necessity for an accelerated return of displaced persons;

3. Endorses, in the meanwhile, the efforts of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to continue to provide humanitarian assistance, as far as practicable, on an emergency basis and as a temporary measure, to persons in the area who are currently displaced and in serious need of continuing assistance as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities;

4. Strongly appeals to all Governments and to organizations and individuals to contribute generously to the Agency and to the other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned for the above-mentioned purposes;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, after consulting with the Commissioner-General, to report to the General Assembly before its fifty-ninth session on the progress made with regard to the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/92:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas,

Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Honduras, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda.

Property rights

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/122 [YUN 2002, p. 472], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/58/206] on steps taken to protect and administer Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel, and establish a fund for income derived therefrom, on behalf of the rightful owners. He indicated that he had transmitted the resolution to Israel and all other Member States, requesting information on any steps taken or envisaged to implement it.

In a 1 July reply, reproduced in the report, Israel stated that its position on the resolutions on Palestine refugees had been set forth in successive annual replies, the latest of which had been included in the Secretary-General's 2002 report on the subject [YUN 2002, p. 471]. Israel regretted that the resolutions continued to be rife with irrelevant politicized rhetoric that detracted from important efforts at hand. Israel fully supported UNRWA's humanitarian mission and believed that the Agency contributed to the alleviation of the suffering of the Palestinian refugees. However, on several occasions, UNRWA had issued anti-Israeli statements that ignored the right and duty of Israel to defend its citizens from the campaign of terror being waged against them for close to three years.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/472], adopted resolution 58/94 by recorded vote (164-5-4) [agenda item 83].

Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 36/146 C of 16 December 1981 and all its subsequent resolutions on the question,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of its resolution 57/122 of 11 December 2002,

Taking note also of the report of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine for the period from 1 September 2002 to 31 August 2003,

Recalling that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the principles of international law uphold the principle that no one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his or her property,

Recalling in particular its resolution 394(V) of 14 December 1950, in which it directed the Conciliation Commission, in consultation with the parties concerned, to prescribe measures for the protection of the rights, property and interests of the Palestine refugees,

Noting the completion of the programme of identification and evaluation of Arab property, as announced by the Conciliation Commission in its twenty-second progress report, and the fact that the Land Office had a schedule of Arab owners and file of documents defining the location, area and other particulars of Arab property,

Expressing its appreciation for the work done to preserve and modernize the existing records, including the land records, of the Conciliation Commission and the importance of such records for a just resolution of the plight of the Palestine refugees in conformity with General Assembly resolution 194(III),

Recalling that, in the framework of the Middle East peace process, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel agreed, in the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993, to commence negotiations on permanent status issues, including the important issue of the refugees,

1. Reaffirms that the Palestine refugees are entitled to their property and to the income derived therefrom, in conformity with the principles of equity and justice;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take all appropriate steps, in consultation with the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, for the protection of Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel;

3. Calls once again upon Israel to render all facilities and assistance to the Secretary-General in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Calls upon all the parties concerned to provide the Secretary-General with any pertinent information in their possession concerning Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel that would assist him in the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Urges the Palestinian and Israeli sides, as agreed between them, to deal with the important issue of Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues in the framework of the final status negotiations of the Middle East peace process;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/94:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas,

Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.
Abstaining: Cameroon, Honduras, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda.

Education, training and scholarships

In a September report [A/58/339], the Secretary-General transmitted responses to the General Assembly's appeal in resolution 57/120 [YUN 2002, p. 470] for States, specialized agencies and NGOs to augment special allocations for scholarships and grants to Palestine refugees, for which UNRWA acted as recipient and trustee.

In 2002/03, Japan awarded 12 fellowships to Palestine refugees employed by UNRWA as vocational staff at the eight vocational training centres in the Agency's area of operations. During the 2002/03 academic year, owing to the cancellation in 1999 of the portion of the university scholarship fund for secondary school graduates financed from UNRWA's General Fund budget and the fact that financing was not forthcoming from donors to fund the subprogramme, UNRWA's Education Department used funds already available from contributions from Japan and Switzerland to finance the studies of some students until their graduation. WHO provided 15 fellowships/study tours for qualified Palestinian candidates in 2002/03 and UNESCO granted 10 scholarships during the 2001-2002 biennium. Through the Scholarship Fund for Palestine Refugee Women in Lebanon, financed by the International Development Research Centre, 90 students were enrolled in specializations at Lebanese universities in 2002/03. Other financing was pledged or received from private individuals and foundations.

Proposed University of Jerusalem "Al-Quds"

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/123 [YUN 2002, p. 471], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on the proposal to establish a university for Palestine refugees in Jerusalem [A/58/205]. First mentioned by the Assembly in resolution 35/13 B [YUN 1980, p. 443], the issue had been the subject of annual reports by the Secretary-General.

To assist in the feasibility study and at the Secretary-General's request, the Rector of the United Nations University again asked expert Mihaly Simai to visit the area and meet with Israeli officials. In response to the Secretary-General's note verbale of 13 June, Israel, in a 26 June reply, stated that it had consistently voted against the resolution on the proposed university and that its position remained unchanged. It charged that the resolution's sponsors sought to exploit higher education for political purposes extraneous to genuine academic pursuit. Accordingly, Israel was of the opinion that the proposed visit would serve no useful purpose. The Secretary-General reported that it had not been possible to complete the study as planned.

In response to the Secretary-General's note verbale to Member States of 19 June concerning the implementation of Assembly resolutions 57/117 to 57/123 [YUN 2002, pp. 466-472], the Syrian Arab Republic, in a 3 July reply, expressed concern with the occupying Power's continued rejection of UN resolutions, its failure to cooperate with the international community and its obstruction of implementation of the UNRWA proposal regarding the need to establish the University of Jerusalem "Al-Quds".

Peacekeeping operations

In 2003, the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO), originally set up to monitor the ceasefire called for by the Security Council in resolution S/801 of 29 May 1948 [YUN 1947-48, p. 427] in newly partitioned Palestine, continued its work. UNTSO's unarmed military observers fulfilled changing mandates—from supervising the original four armistice agreements between Israel and its neighbours (Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic) to observing and monitoring other ceasefires, as well as performing a number of additional tasks. During the year, UNTSO personnel worked with the two remaining UN peacekeeping forces in the Middle East—the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) in the Golan Heights and the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL).

Lebanon

The relative calm that marked the first half of 2003 was replaced in the second half by a renewed escalation of violence in the Shab'a farmlands area on the Lebanese-Israeli border. The paramilitary group Hizbullah carried out attacks against positions of the Israel Defence Forces (IDF) in the farmlands and targets inside Israel, and IDF continued to carry out attacks within Lebanon. The Shab'a farmlands had been a source of contention since the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon in June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 465]. According to the Lebanese Government, Israel's withdrawal from southern Lebanon was incomplete, as Israeli forces continued to occupy the Shab'a farms, while Israel held the view that the area was occupied Syrian territory and thus within the purview of Security Council resolution 242(1967) [YUN 1967, p. 257] on the Israeli-Syrian conflict, and not resolution 425 (1978) [YUN 1978, p. 312], which dealt with Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon. However, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic maintained that the Shab'a farmlands were inside Lebanese territory.

In their monthly briefings to the Security Council on the Palestinian question, including East Jerusalem, the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Terje Roed-Larsen, and the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Kieran Prendergast, also reported on developments in southern Lebanon.

Staffan de Mistura continued to act as the Secretary-General's Personal Representative for Southern Lebanon, responsible for coordinating UN activities in the area.

Communications. In a series of communications received throughout the year [A/57/713-S/2003/73, A/57/722-S/2003/148, A/57/755-S/2003/314, A/57-782-S/2003/414, A/57/844-S/2003/698, A/57/856-S/2003/804, A/58/405-S/2003/932, A/58/418-S/2003/966, A/58/442-S/2003/1020, A/58/443-S/2003/1021, A/58/551-S/2003/1068, A/58/624-S/2003/1166, A/58/668-S/2003/1220], Lebanon detailed Israel's violations of the Blue Line, the provisional border drawn by the United Nations following the withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon in June 2000, and consequently, of Lebanese sovereignty and territorial integrity.

In communications throughout 2003 [A/57/717-S/2003/96, A/57/820-S/2003/603, A/57/851-S/2003/758, A/58/425-S/2003/976], Israel reported attacks carried out by Hizbullah against Israeli military and civilian targets across the Blue Line. Israel also alleged that Hizbullah was supported by the Governments of Iran, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic.

By a 12 February letter [A/57/730-S/2003/178], the Syrian Arab Republic refuted Israel's allegations, stating that the Lebanese national resistance emerged as a response to Israel's policy of occupation.

UNIFIL

In 2003, the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon continued to discharge its mandate by observing, monitoring and reporting on developments in its area of operation. The Security Council twice extended UNIFIL's mandate in 2003, in January and in July, each time for a six-month period.

UNIFIL, established by Council resolution 425(1978) following Israel's invasion of Lebanon [YUN 1978, p. 296], was originally entrusted with confirming the withdrawal of Israeli forces, restoring international peace and security, and assisting Lebanon in regaining authority in southern Lebanon. Following a second invasion of Lebanon in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 428], the Council, in resolution 511(1982) [ibid., p. 450], authorized the Force to carry out the additional task of providing protection and humanitarian assistance to the local population. With the withdrawal of IDF from Lebanon in June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 465], UNIFIL's operational role changed. A reinforcement was initiated to enable UNIFIL to monitor Israel's withdrawal, which included extending its operations into those territories previously occupied by IDF [ibid.]. In 2001, having fulfilled those responsibilities, UNIFIL began a reconfiguration and redeployment phase [YUN 2001, p. 453], which was completed in December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 478].

The Force headquarters, based in Naqoura, provided command and control, and liaison with Lebanon and Israel, UNDOF, UNTSO and a number of NGOs.

Composition and deployment

As at 31 December 2003, UNIFIL comprised 2,000 troops from France (202), Ghana (650), India (650), Ireland (7), Italy (53), Poland (238) and Ukraine (200). The Force was assisted in its tasks by 52 UNTSO military observers. It employed 415 civilian staff, of whom 119 were recruited internationally and 296 locally. Major General Lalit Mohan Tewari (India) continued as Force Commander.

Since UNIFIL's establishment, 244 members had lost their lives: 78 as a result of firings or bomb explosions, 104 in accidents and 62 from other causes.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (January). In a report on developments from 13 July 2002 to 14 January 2003 in the UNIFIL area of operations [S/2003/38], the Secretary-General said that the situation on the ground was one of general stability, despite some incidents in the Shab'a farms area and attacks across the Blue Line. UNIFIL completed its reconfiguration and redeployment in December 2002 and had stabilized at a strength of about 2,000 troops.

The Secretary-General observed that UNIFIL would continue to discharge its mandate by observing, monitoring and reporting on developments in its area of operations, liaising with parties to maintain peace and security. The Lebanese Government had further demonstrated its capacity to exercise its authority effectively throughout southern Lebanon, strengthening administrative structures and extending the reach of the Lebanese Army. The Secretary-General recommended that the Force's mandate be extended for another six months, until 31 July 2003.

Communication. By a 9 January letter [S/2003/36] to the Secretary-General, Lebanon requested that UNIFIL's mandate, due to expire at the end of the month, be extended for a further six-month period, especially in the light of Israel's violations of Lebanese sovereignty.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (January)

On 30 January [meeting 4696], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1461(2003). The draft [S/2003/111] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its resolutions on Lebanon, in particular resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1428(2002) of 30 July 2002 as well as the statements by its President on the situation in Lebanon, in particular the statement of 18 June 2000 (S/PRST/2000/21),

Recalling also the letter dated 18 May 2001 from the President of the Security Council addressed to the Secretary-General,

Recalling further the conclusion of the Secretary-General that, as of 16 June 2000, Israel had withdrawn its forces from Lebanon in accordance with resolution 425(1978) and met the requirements defined in the report of the Secretary-General of 22 May 2000, as well as the conclusion of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon had essentially completed two of the three parts of its mandate, focusing now on the remaining task of restoring international peace and security,

Emphasizing the interim nature of the Force,

Recalling its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

Recalling also its resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

Recalling further the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon, as stated in the letter dated 9 January 2003 from the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Endorses the report of the Secretary-General of 14 January 2003 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and in particular its recommendation to renew the mandate of the Force for a further period of six months;

2. Decides to extend the present mandate until 31 July 2003;

3. Takes note of the completion of the reconfiguration of the Force as outlined in paragraph 26 of the report of the Secretary-General and in accordance with the letter dated 18 May 2001 from the President of the Security Council addressed to the Secretary-General;

4. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries;

5. Commends the Government of Lebanon for taking steps to ensure the restoration of its effective authority throughout the south, including the deployment of Lebanese armed forces, and calls upon it to continue to extend these measures and to do its utmost to ensure a calm environment throughout the south;

6. Calls upon the parties to ensure that the Force is accorded full freedom of movement in the discharge of its mandate throughout its area of operation as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General;

7. Reiterates its call upon the parties to continue to fulfil the commitments they have given to respect fully the withdrawal line identified by the United Nations, as set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 16 June 2000, to exercise the utmost restraint and to cooperate fully with the United Nations and the Force;

8. Condemns all acts of violence, expresses great concern about the serious breaches and the air, sea and land violations of the withdrawal line, and urges the parties to put an end to these violations and to abide scrupulously by their obligation to respect the safety of the personnel of the Force and other United Nations personnel;

9. Supports the continued efforts of the Force to maintain the ceasefire along the withdrawal line through mobile patrols and observation from fixed positions and through close contacts with the parties to correct violations, resolve incidents and prevent the escalation thereof;

10. Welcomes the continued contribution of the Force to operational demining, encourages further assistance in mine action by the United Nations to the Government of Lebanon in support of both the continued development of its national mine action capacity and emergency demining activities in the south, commends donor countries for supporting these efforts through financial and in-kind contributions and encourages further international contributions, takes note of the communication to the Government of Lebanon and the Force of maps and information on the location of mines, and stresses the necessity to provide the Government of Lebanon and the Force with any additional maps and records on the location of mines;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned on the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the Council before the end of the present mandate as well as on the activities of the Force and the tasks presently carried out by the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization;

12. Looks forward to the early fulfilment of the mandate of the Force;

13. Stresses the importance of, and the need to achieve, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In response to Security Council resolution 1461(2003) (see p. 517), the Secretary-General submitted a July report on UNIFIL covering 15 January to 23 July [S/2003/728]. He said that the situation on the ground remained generally quiet but tense through a reporting period marked by regional conflict. The most significant sources of tension were the persistent Israeli violations of Lebanese airspace and instances of Hizbullah anti-aircraft fire directed across the Blue Line towards Israeli villages. A ceasefire breach in the Shab'a farms area occurred on 21 January when Hizbullah fired 56 mortar rounds at an IDF position. Israeli forces retaliated with artillery and mortar fire and two aerial bombs directed at the area from which the Hizbullah fire had emanated. One Lebanese civilian was killed and at least two others injured by IDF fire.

The Lebanese Joint Security Forces and the Lebanese Army continued to operate in the areas vacated by Israel; their activities increased, with a more visible presence, including along the Blue Line. The Lebanese Government maintained its position that, so long as there was no comprehensive peace with Israel, the Lebanese armed forces would not be deployed along the Blue Line. Hizbullah maintained a visible presence near the line and reinforced some positions, but its interference with the freedom of movement of UNIFIL staff during the reporting period was negligible. Official local governing structures were extending their authority throughout the south at a steady pace. Communications, infrastructure, health and welfare systems and postal services continued their slow progress towards integration with the rest of the country.

UNIFIL provided assistance to the civilian population in the form of medical care, water projects, equipment or services for schools and orphanages, and supplies of social services to the needy. In southern Lebanon, collaboration between the United Nations, the Lebanese Government and various donors had led to dramatic progress in demining efforts, and advocacy efforts began emphasizing socio-economic needs to rehabilitate formerly mine-affected areas. The Secretary-General's Personal Representative continued to collaborate with UNDP and the World Bank to facilitate funding for and implementation of development projects.

The Secretary-General observed that almost six months had passed since the January incidents across the Blue Line, the longest period of relative calm since Israel withdrew from Lebanon in 2000 after 22 years of occupation. However, despite encouraging trends, tensions between Israel and Lebanon remained high and the relative calm along the Blue Line was an uneasy one. The Secretary-General called on both parties to respect fully the withdrawal line identified by the United Nations and to refrain from any action that could destabilize the situation on the ground. As the Lebanese Government demonstrated its capacity to increase its authority throughout southern Lebanon, the relative improvement in terms of security in that area coupled with the achievements in demining pointed to the need for an increased focus on the economic development of the area.

Communication. By a 2 July letter to the Secretary-General [S/2003/685], Lebanon requested that UNIFIL's mandate be extended for a further six months, as a reaffirmation of the international community's commitment to the restoration of Lebanon's sovereignty over its entire territory.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (July)

The Security Council, in a closed meeting on 25 July [meeting 4795], exchanged views with UNIFIL troop-contributing countries and heard a briefing from the Director of the Asia and Middle East Division of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations.

On 31 July [meeting 4802], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1496(2003). The draft [S/2003/778] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its resolutions on Lebanon, in particular resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1461(2003) of 30 January 2003, as well as the statements by its President on the situation in Lebanon, in particular the statement of 18 June 2000 (S/PRST/2000/21),

Recalling also the letter dated 18 May 2001 from the President of the Security Council addressed to the Secretary-General,

Recalling further the conclusion of the Secretary-General that, as of 16 June 2000, Israel had withdrawn its forces from Lebanon in accordance with resolution 425(1978) and met the requirements defined in the report of the Secretary-General of 22 May 2000, as well as the conclusion of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon had essentially completed two of the three parts of its mandate, focusing now on the remaining task of restoring international peace and security,

Emphasizing the interim nature of the Force,

Recalling its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

Recalling also its resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

Recalling further the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon, as stated in the letter dated 2 July 2003 from the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Endorses the report of the Secretary-General of 23 July 2003 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and in particular its recommendation to renew the mandate of the Force for a further period of six months;

2. Decides to extend the present mandate until 31 January 2004;

3. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries;

4. Welcomes the steps already taken by the Government of Lebanon to ensure the return of its effective authority throughout the south, including the deployment of Lebanese armed forces, and calls upon it to continue to extend these measures and to do its utmost to ensure a calm environment throughout the south;

5. Calls upon the parties to ensure that the Force is accorded full freedom of movement in the discharge of its mandate throughout its area of operation as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General;

6. Reiterates its call upon the parties to continue to fulfil the commitments they have given to respect fully the withdrawal line identified by the United Nations, as set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 16 June 2000, to exercise utmost restraint and to cooperate fully with the United Nations and the Force;

7. Condemns all acts of violence, expresses great concern about the serious breaches and the air, sea and land violations of the withdrawal line, and urges the parties to put an end to these violations and to abide scrupulously by their obligation to respect the safety of the personnel of the Force and other United Nations personnel;

8. Supports the continued efforts of the Force to maintain the ceasefire along the withdrawal line through mobile patrols and observation from fixed positions and through close contacts with the parties to correct violations, resolve incidents and prevent the escalation thereof;

9. Welcomes the continued contribution of the Force to operational demining, applauds the progress in demining efforts noted by the Secretary-General in his report, encourages further assistance in mine action by the United Nations to the Government of Lebanon in support of both the continued development of its national mine action capacity and emergency demining activities in the south, commends donor countries for supporting these efforts through financial and in-kind contributions and encourages further international contributions, takes note of the communication to the Government of Lebanon and the Force of maps and information on the location of mines, and stresses the necessity to provide the Government of Lebanon and the Force with any additional maps and records on the location of mines;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned on the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the Council before the end of the present mandate, as well as on the activities of the Force and the tasks presently carried out by the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization;

11. Looks forward to the early fulfilment of the mandate of the Force;

12. Stresses the importance of, and the need to achieve, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all its relevant resolutions, including its resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973.

Further developments. In a report on developments during the second half of 2003 [S/2004/56], the Secretary-General said that the situation in UNIFIL's area of operation was marked by numerous incidents threatening the fragile stability of southern Lebanon. The relative calm that had prevailed in the first half of the year gave way to renewed exchanges of fire in the Shab'a farms area. Air strikes and shooting incidents across the Blue Line resulted in the death of three Israelis, two soldiers and one civilian, and three Lebanese civilians. The persistent Israeli violations of Lebanese airspace and several instances of Hizbullah anti-aircraft fire directed towards Israeli villages contributed to the tension. Roadside explosive devices found on four occasions along the Blue Line adjacent to the IDF patrol route further strained relations between the parties. The Lebanese Joint Security Forces and the Lebanese Army continued to operate in the areas vacated by Israel in 2000. Their strength and activity remained the same, apart from a more visible presence in the first half of October, when regional and local tensions were heightened. Hizbullah maintained its visible presence near the border line through its network of mobile and fixed positions, as Lebanese armed forces were not deployed along the withdrawal line.

UNIFIL continued to provide assistance to the civilian population and cooperated on humanitarian matters with Lebanese authorities, UN agencies, the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and other organizations operating in Lebanon. The presence of a large number of minefields in UNIFIL's area of operation, which were largely concentrated along the Blue Line as other sectors had been cleared of mines, remained a matter of serious concern. Approximately 4.8 million square metres of land had been cleared of mines in other parts of southern Lebanon. The Secretary-General's Personal Representative and UNDP continued to coordinate international assistance to the Lebanese Government in the framework of the International Support Group for Mine Action.

The Secretary-General said that the situation along the Blue Line was susceptible to volatile regional developments. That underscored the need to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all the relevant Security Council resolutions.

Financing

Reports of Secretary-General and ACABQ. In June, the General Assembly considered the performance report on UNIFIL's budget for the period 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 [A/57/662 & Corr.1]. Total expenditures for the period amounted to $131,112,200, compared with a total apportionment of $136,816,100, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $5,703,900.

The Assembly also had before it UNIFIL's proposed budget for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 in the amount of $91,752,400 [A/57/663] and the overview of the financing of UN peacekeeping operations: budget performance for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 and budget for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/57/723]. Also considered were the comments and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [A/57/772/Add.6].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/57/829], adopted resolution 57/325 by recorded vote (135-2) [agenda item 127 (b)].

Financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 423(1978) of 19 March 1978 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1461(2003) of 30 January 2003,

Recalling also its resolution S-8/2 of 21 April 1978 on the financing of the Force and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 56/214 B of 27 June 2002,

Reaffirming its resolutions 51/233 of 13 June 1997, 52/237 of 26 June 1998, 53/227 of 8 June 1999, 54/267 of 15 June 2000, 55/180 A of 19 December 2000,

55/180 B of 14 June 2001, 56/214 A of 21 December 2001 and 56/214 B,

Reaffirming also the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874 (S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon as at 31 March 2003, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 108.3 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only twenty-three Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

3. Expresses its deep concern that Israel did not comply with General Assembly resolutions 51/233, 52/237, 53/227, 54/267, 55/180 A, 55/180 B, 56/214 A and 56/214 B;

4. Stresses once again that Israel should strictly abide by General Assembly resolutions 51/233, 52/237, 53/227, 54/267, 55/180 A, 55/180 B, 56/214 A and 56/214 B;

5. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

6. Takes note of the fact that indemnities have been paid to staff working on fixed-term contracts without a clear or detailed legislative basis, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that similar cases do not occur in the future without previous specific authorization by the General Assembly;

7. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

8. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

9. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

10. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

11. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on

Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation without prejudice to a future discussion and decision on the proposal to create the post of Deputy Force Commander;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

14. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to take the measures necessary to ensure the full implementation of paragraph 8 of its resolution 51/233, paragraph 5 of its resolution 52/237, paragraph 11 of its resolution 53/227, paragraph 14 of its resolution 54/267, paragraph 14 of its resolution 55/180 A, paragraph 15 of its resolution 55/180 B, paragraph 13 of its resolution 56/214 A and paragraph 13 of its resolution 56/214 B, stresses once again that Israel shall pay the amount of 1,117,005 dollars resulting from the incident at Qana on 18 April 1996, and requests the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-eighth session;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002

15. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

16. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon the amount of 94,055,900 dollars for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, inclusive of 90 million dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 3,105,700 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 950,200 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

17. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 94,055,900 dollars at a monthly rate of 7,837,992 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003 as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002, and for 2004, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

18. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 17 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 4,555,000 dollars at a monthly rate of 379,583 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 3,799,100 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 699,700 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 56,200 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

19. Decides that for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 17 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 20,861,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 and 57/290 A, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2002, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B and 57/4 B;

20. Also decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 20,861,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be set off against their outstanding obligations in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 19 above;

21. Further decides that the increase of 398,800 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 19 and 20 above and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

22. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

23. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force;

24. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-eighth session, under the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 57/325:

In favour: Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Egypt, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe

Against: Israel, United States.

Subsequently, the delegations of Maldives, Mauritius and Portugal informed the Secretariat that they had intended to vote in favour.

The Assembly and the Committee each had adopted the fourth preambular paragraph and operative paragraphs 3, 4 and 14 by a single recorded vote of 85 to 2, with 45 abstentions, and 80 to 2, with 47 abstentions, respectively.

Syrian Arab Republic

In 2003, the General Assembly again called for Israel's withdrawal from the Golan Heights in the Syrian Arab Republic, which it had occupied since 1967. The area was effectively annexed by Israel when it extended its laws, jurisdiction and administration to the territory towards the end of 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 309].

Tension escalated in the region on 5 October, when, in retaliation to a suicide bombing attack carried out by Islamic Jihad in Haifa, Israeli military forces bombed a site inside Syrian territory. The Security Council convened on that same day in an emergency session to discuss the Israeli raid; no action was taken on a draft resolution submitted by Syria, though the Council decided to continue discussion of the subject in informal consultations.

Israeli policies and measures affecting the human rights of the population in the Golan Heights and other occupied territories were monitored by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (Committee on Israeli Practices) and were the subject of resolutions adopted by the Commission on Human Rights (see PART TWO, Chapter III) and the Assembly.

Escalation of tension

Communications. On 5 October [S/2003/940], the Syrian Arab Republic informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President that, on that day, the Israeli air force violated Syrian and Lebanese airspace and launched a missile attack in the village of Ain Al Sahib, north-west of the capital, Damascus, causing material damage. Syria invited the Council to convene an emergency meeting to consider the Israeli aggression.

Also on 5 October [S/2003/949], the League of Arab States (LAS) issued a statement, in which it declared that Israel's targeting of a civilian site in Syrian territory was a serious escalation that threatened regional security and a further defiance of all international charters and treaties and principles of international law. It called on the Council to bring an immediate and decisive end to Israeli occupation practices against the Palestinians and against Syria and Lebanon.

Security Council consideration (5 October). At the request of the Syrian Arab Republic [S/2003/939] and Lebanon [S/2003/943], the Security Council, on 5 October [meeting 4836], met to discuss the violations of Syrian and Lebanese airspace committed that day by the Israeli air force and the missile attack carried out by the latter against a civilian site situated inside Syrian territory. With the Council's consent, the President invited, among others, Israel and the Permanent Observers of LAS [S/2003/941] and Palestine [S/2003/942], at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote.

Syria said that the act of aggression that Israel committed that day was part of the Israeli Government's strategic policy to escalate tension in the Middle East. Syria had exercised maximum self-restraint and had turned to the Council in order to condemn Israel's action. In that regard, it had officially submitted the text of a draft resolution that responded to the Israeli challenge, in accordance with the principles of the UN Charter.

Israel said that on 4 October a suicide bomber killed 19 Israelis and wounded at least 60 others inside a restaurant in the city of Haifa. According to Israel, Islamic Jihad, a terrorist organization that operated from PA territory, with its headquarters in Damascus, claimed responsibility for the attack. The attack in Haifa was the latest of over 40 atrocities committed by Islamic Jihad in the past few years. Among the many terrorist groups that operated and benefited from the auspices of Syria were Islamic Jihad, Hams, Hizbullah and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. Safe harbour and training facilities were provided throughout Syria for those terrorist organizations, both in separate facilities and in Syrian army bases. The Ein Saheb base, which was targeted on that day by Israel's measured defensive operation, was just one of those facilities sponsored by Syria and Iran. Recruits at camps such as Ein Saheb were taught how to assemble bombs, conduct kidnapping, prepare suicide belts and establish terrorist cells. Syria facilitated and directed acts of terrorism by coordination and briefings via phone and Internet and by calling activists to Damascus for consultations. Using the Syrian and Palestinian banking systems, Iran sustained a systematic money transfer system and large sums had been transferred to Islamic Jihad. Council resolution 1373(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 61] made clear that States were obligated to prevent acts of terrorism and refrain from any form of financing, support or toleration of terrorist groups. Israel's response to the suicide bombings against a terrorist training facility in Syria was a clear act of self-defence.

The United States called on all sides to avoid heightening the tension in the Middle East and to think carefully about the consequences of their actions. It also called on Syria to stop harbouring and supporting the groups that perpetrated terrorist acts such as the one that occurred in Haifa on 4 October.

Lebanon said that Israel's violations of relevant UN resolutions and of international agreements were the cause of the pain and turbulence throughout the Middle East. Israel's actions would only further fuel the cycle of violence. Lebanon hoped that the Council would condemn Israel's aggression against a Syrian village.

Following the meeting, in accordance with the understanding reached in prior consultations, the Council President invited the members to continue discussion of the subject in informal consultations.

Committee on Israeli Practices. In its annual report [A/58/311], the Committee on Israeli Practices stated that it had visited Damascus and Quneitra province, which bordered the occupied area, where it met with Syrian authorities and received information from witnesses with personal knowledge of the occupied Syrian Arab Golan. Syrian government officials emphasized that the situation of human rights in the occupied Syrian Golan had further deteriorated and that Israel was still pursuing its policy of occupation. In addition, the Israeli Government was offering compensation and favourable loans to encourage additional settlers to move into the occupied Golan during the next 10 years. At the same time, Israeli authorities continued to confiscate a large portion of land. Syrian villagers were also compelled to buy allocated water supplies at a higher price than those paid by Jewish settlers. Life in general was becoming increasingly difficult for the 500,000 Syrian Arabs, many of whom were refugees from the occupied Golan. For the first time, several checkpoints had been set up on the border separating Syria from the occupied Syrian Golan, which was perceived by the Syrians as a provocative measure since there was hardly any population movement from both sides of the borders.

Reports of Secretary-General. On 8 August [A/58/264], the Secretary-General reported that no reply had been received from Israel to his June request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement General Assembly resolution 57/128 [YUN 2002, p. 482], which called on Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the Golan, and from its repressive measures against the population.

By a 13 August report [A/58/278], the Secretary-General transmitted replies received from eight Member States, including Israel, in response to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 57/112 [YUN 2002, p. 481], which dealt with Israeli policies in the Syrian territory occupied since 1967, and resolution 57/111 (ibid., p. 444), on the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem (see p. 484).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/23 [draft: A/58/L.28 & Add.1] by recorded vote (104-5-61) [agenda item 37].

The Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "The situation in the Middle East",

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Reaffirming the fundamental principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming once more the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Deeply concerned that Israel has not withdrawn from the Syrian Golan, which has been under occupation since 1967, contrary to the relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions,

Stressing the illegality of the Israeli settlement construction and other activities in the occupied Syrian Golan since 1967,

Noting with satisfaction the convening in Madrid on 30 October 1991 of the Peace Conference on the Middle East, on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 and 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 and the formula of land for peace,

Expressing grave concern over the halt in the peace process on the Syrian track, and expressing the hope that peace talks will soon resume from the point they had reached,

1. Declares that Israel has failed so far to comply with Security Council resolution 497(1981);

2. Also declares that the Israeli decision of 14 December 1981 to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan is null and void and has no validity whatsoever, as confirmed by the Security Council in its resolution 497(1981), and calls upon Israel to rescind it;

3. Reaffirms its determination that all relevant provisions of the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention of 1907, and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, continue to apply to the Syrian territory occupied by Israel since 1967, and calls upon the parties thereto to respect and ensure respect for their obligations under those instruments in all circumstances;

4. Determines once more that the continued occupation of the Syrian Golan and its de facto annexation constitute a stumbling block in the way of achieving a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the region;

5. Calls upon Israel to resume the talks on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks and to respect the commitments and undertakings reached during the previous talks;

6. Demands once more that Israel withdraw from all the occupied Syrian Golan to the line of 4 June 1967 in implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

7. Calls upon all the parties concerned, the co-sponsors of the peace process and the entire international community to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the resumption of the peace process and its success by implementing Security Council resolutions 242(1967) and 338(1973);

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/23:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.
Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Costa Rica, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Kazakhstan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Nauru, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Rwanda, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Tonga, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Uruguay.

On 9 December [meeting 72], the Assembly, under the agenda item on the report of the Committee on Israeli Practices and on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/58/473 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/100 by recorded vote (163-1-11) [agenda item 84].

The occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories,

Deeply concerned that the Syrian Golan, occupied since 1967, has been under continued Israeli military occupation,

Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Recalling also its previous relevant resolutions, the last of which was resolution 57/128 of 11 December 2002,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of resolution 57/128,

Recalling its previous relevant resolutions in which, inter alia, it called upon Israel to put an end to its occupation of the Arab territories,

Reaffirming once more the illegality of the decision of 14 December 1981 taken by Israel to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan, which has resulted in the effective annexation of that territory,

Reaffirming that the acquisition of territory by force is inadmissible under international law, including the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 237 (1967) of 14 June 1967,

Welcoming the convening at Madrid of the Peace Conference on the Middle East on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 aimed at the realization of a just, comprehensive and lasting peace, and expressing grave concern about the stalling of the peace process on all tracks,

1. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply with the relevant resolutions on the occupied Syrian Golan, in particular Security Council resolution 497 (1981), in which the Council, inter alia, decided that the Israeli decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan was null and void and without international legal effect, and demanded that Israel, the occupying Power, rescind forthwith its decision;

2. Also calls upon Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan and in particular to desist from the establishment of settlements;

3. Determines that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken or to be taken by Israel, the occupying Power, that purport to alter the character and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan are null and void, constitute a flagrant violation of international law and of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and have no legal effect;

4. Calls upon Israel to desist from imposing Israeli citizenship and Israeli identity cards on the Syrian citizens in the occupied Syrian Golan and from its repressive measures against the population of the occupied Syrian Golan;

5. Deplores the violations by Israel of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

6. Calls once again upon Member States not to recognize any of the legislative or administrative measures and actions referred to above;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/100:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel.

Abstaining: Cameroon, Equatorial Guinea, Honduras, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, Rwanda, Tonga, Tuvalu, United States.

UNDOF

The mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, established by Security Council resolution 350(1974) [YUN 1974, p. 205] to supervise the observance of the ceasefire between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic in the Golan Heights and ensure the separation of their forces, was renewed twice in 2003, in June and December, each time for a six-month period.

UNDOF maintained an area of separation, which was some 80 kilometres long and varied in width between approximately 10 kilometres in the centre to less than 1 kilometre in the extreme south. The area of separation was inhabited and policed by the Syrian authorities, and no military forces other than UNDOF were permitted within it.

As at 30 November, UNDOF comprised 1,046 troops from Austria (365), Canada (188), Japan (45), Poland (353) and Slovakia (95). It was assisted by 78 UNTSO military observers. The Secretary-General appointed Major General Franciszek Gagor (Poland) as Force Commander from 13 August [S/2003/726] to succeed Major General Bo Wrangler (Sweden), who completed his tour of duty on 12 August. The Security Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention on 18 July [S/2003/727].

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on UNDOF activities between 6 December 2002 and 18 June 2003 [S/2003/655] and between 19 June and 9 December 2003 [S/2003/1148]. Both reports noted that the UNDOF area of operation remained calm, except in the Shab'a farms area (see p. 520). The ceasefire in the Israel-Syria sector remained generally quiet, with the exception of a 5 October Israeli air strike on a target north-west of Damascus (see p. 522). UNDOF continued in 2003 to supervise the area of separation between Israeli and Syrian troops in the Golan Heights, to ensure that no military forces of either party were deployed there, by means of fixed positions and patrols. The Force, accompanied by liaison officers from the party concerned, carried out fortnightly inspections of equipment and force levels in the area of limitation. As in the past, both sides denied inspection teams access to some of their positions and imposed restrictions on the Force's freedom of movement. Mines, especially in the area of separation, continued to pose a threat to UNDOF personnel and local inhabitants. The Force supported the United Nations Children's Fund in mine-awareness activities.

UNDOF assisted ICRC with facilities for mail and the passage of persons through the area of separation. Within the means available, medical treatment was provided to the local population on request.

The Secretary-General observed that tension in the Israel-Syria sector had been high since the Israeli air strike of 5 October. The overall situation in the Middle East was also very tense and was likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the problem could be reached. He hoped that determined efforts would be made by all concerned to tackle the problem, with a view to arriving at a just and durable peace settlement, as called for by Security Council resolution 338(1973) [YUN 1973, p. 213]. Stating that he considered the Force's continued presence in the area to be essential, the Secretary-General, with the agreement of both Israel and Syria, recommended that UNDOF's mandate be extended until 31 December 2003 in the first instance and until 30 June 2004 in the second.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 June [meeting 4778], the Security Council held a closed meeting and had a constructive exchange of views with UNDOF troop-contributing countries.

On 26 June [meeting 4779], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1488(2003). The draft [S/2003/668] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 18 June 2003 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and reaffirming its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

1. Calls upon the parties concerned to implement immediately Security Council resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;

2. Decides to renew the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for a period of six months, that is, until 31 December 2003;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on the developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

On 11 December, the Council, in a closed meeting [meeting 4878], had an exchange of views with UNDOF troop-contributing countries and heard a briefing from the Director of the Asia and Middle East Division of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations.

On 22 December [meeting 4889], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1520(2003). The draft [S/2003/1176] was prepared during consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 9 December 2003 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and reaffirming its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

1. Calls upon the parties concerned to implement immediately its resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;

2. Decides to renew the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for a period of six months, that is, until 30 June 2004;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on the developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

After the adoption of each resolution, the President, following consultations among Council members, made identical statements S/PRST/2003/9 [meeting 4779] on 26 June and S/PRST/2003/29 [meeting 4889] on 22 December, on behalf of the Council:

In connection with the resolution just adopted on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, I have been authorized to make the following complementary statement on behalf of the Security Council:

As is known, the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force states in paragraph 11: "The situation in the Middle East is very tense and is likely to remain so unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the Middle East problem can be reached". That statement of the Secretary-General reflects the view of the Security Council.

Financing

Reports of Secretary-General and ACABQ. On 18 December 2002, the Secretary-General presented a performance report on UNDOF's budget for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002

[A/57/668]. Expenditures totalled $34,422,900 gross ($33,464,700 net), resulting in an unencumbered balance of $113,400. On 19 December, he submitted UNDOF's budget for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/57/688], totalling $40,212,900 gross ($39,192,400 net). On 6 February 2003, he also submitted an overview report on the financing of UN peacekeeping operations: budget performance for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 and budget for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/57/723].

ACABQ's comments and recommendations on the two December reports were contained in an April report to the Assembly [A/57/772/Add.7].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/57/837], adopted resolution 57/324 without vote [agenda item 127 (a)].

Financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 350(1974) of 31 May 1974 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1451(2002) of 17 December 2002,

Recalling also its resolution 3211 B (XXIX) of 29 November 1974 on the financing of the United Nations Emergency Force and of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 56/294 of 27 June 2002,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force as at 31 March 2003, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 25.7 million United States dollars, representing some 2 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-three Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Urges all Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

5. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

9. Takes note of the observation contained in paragraph 20 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and endorses the remaining conclusions and recommendations, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation, without prejudice to a future discussion and decision on the proposal to create the post of Deputy Force Commander, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

10. Authorizes the Secretary-General to fill the three general staff posts referred to in paragraph 22 of the report of the Advisory Committee for a period not to exceed one year, and invites the Secretary-General to resubmit with full justification this request in connection with the budget request for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005;

11. Invites the Secretary-General to resubmit with full justification his request concerning the proposed upgrade of the Chief Administrative Officer in connection with the budget proposal for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005;

12. Decides to eliminate the vacant Field Service driver position in the Office of the Force Commander;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

15. Notes with appreciation the implementation of paragraph 10 of its resolution 56/294 through making allowance for difficulties resulting from the relocation of the headquarters of the Force from Damascus to Camp Faouar;

16. Welcomes the Secretary-General's observation in paragraph 17 of his report that all outstanding issues have been satisfactorily resolved, and in this regard recognizes the need for continuing dialogue between staff and management, consistent with the existing mechanisms in all peacekeeping missions;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the modernization programme should fully respect the relevant mandates of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002

18. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

19. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force the amount of 41,812,200 dollars for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, inclusive of 40,009,200 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 1,380,600 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations, and 422,400 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

20. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 41,812,200 dollars at a monthly rate of 3,484,350 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002, and for 2004, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

21. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 20 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 1,318,100 dollars at a monthly rate of 109,842 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 982,100 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 311,000 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account, and the prorated share of 25,000 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

22. Decides that for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 20 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 2,488,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002, in accordance with the levels set out in resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 and 57/290 A, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2002, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B and 57/4 B;

23. Decides also that for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 2,488,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be set off against their outstanding obligations in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 22 above;

24. Decides further that the increase of 200,800 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2002 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 22 and 23 above, and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs as appropriate;

25. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

26. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force;

27. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

28. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-eighth session, under the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Disengagement Observer Force".

Chapter VII

Disarmament

In 2003, despite continuing differences among Member States on many disarmament issues, progress was made in addressing problems relating to small arms and light weapons, and in promoting transparency in armaments.

The Conference on Disarmament did not reach consensus on a comprehensive programme of work, which made it unable, for the fifth consecutive year, to take action on its agenda items. Marked disagreements among Member States also prevented the Disarmament Commission from adopting concrete proposals on substantive issues.

Member States, UN bodies and regional and subregional organizations pressed forward with measures and activities to implement the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, including through weapons collection and destruction and other practical disarmament measures. The first biennial meeting of States on the implementation process reviewed experiences in coping with related problems. The Group of Governmental Experts established to address the issue of tracing illicit stockpiles of the weapons concluded that it was desirable to develop an international instrument to enable States to identify and trace them in a timely and reliable manner. The General Assembly established an open-ended working group to begin negotiations on the instrument and decided to convene, in 2006, a UN conference to review progress made in implementing the Programme of Action.

In April and May, the First Review Conference of the States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction reviewed the Convention's operation and considered its role in enhancing international peace and security, as well as measures to ensure its universality. In November, the first of three scheduled annual meetings of States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction considered the adoption of national measures to implement the prohibitions set forth in the Convention and national mechanisms to establish and maintain the security and oversight of pathogenic micro-organisms and toxins. A November meeting of the States parties to the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects adopted a new legally binding instrument, Protocol V, on Explosive Remnants of War and related weapons, which would be annexed to the Convention.

In August, the Group of Governmental Experts on the continuing operation and further development of the UN Register of Conventional Arms recommended a number of measures to enhance its effectiveness and global relevance. The Secretary-General established a Group of Governmental Experts mandated to undertake the second review since 1981 of the relationship between disarmament and development, for consideration in 2004.

In June, the 2002 Strategic Offensive Reductions Treaty (SORT) between the United States and the Russian Federation entered into force. SORT, also known as the Moscow Treaty, established a new strategic framework for further reductions of the parties' strategic offensive weapons.

UN role in disarmament

UN machinery

Disarmament issues before the United Nations were considered mainly through the General Assembly and its First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee, the Disarmament Commission (a deliberative body) and the Conference on Disarmament (a multilateral negotiating forum, which met in Geneva).

The Department for Disarmament Affairs of the UN Secretariat continued to support the work of Member States and treaty bodies, to service the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters and to administer the UN disarmament fellowship programme.

General Assembly issues

Fourth special session devoted to disarmament

The General Assembly had decided, by resolution 51/45 C [YUN 1996, p. 447], to convene the fourth special session of the Assembly devoted to disarmament in 1999, subject to the emergence of a consensus on its agenda and objectives, which had not been achieved.

In 2002, the Assembly, in resolution 57/61 [YUN 2002, p. 487], established an open-ended working group to consider, on the basis of consensus, the objectives and agenda of the special session and to make substantive recommendations thereon.

Working group activities. The Open-ended Working Group to consider the objectives and agenda of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament held three sessions (New York, 10-14 March, 19-23 May and 23-27 June) [A/57/848] and conducted informal consultations during an intersessional period. The Group, in accordance with its mandate, also considered the possible establishment of a preparatory committee for the special session. The Chairman, in an effort to facilitate agreement, prepared a working paper [A/AC.268/2003/WP.3] containing salient points from various proposals and views put forth by the Non-Aligned Movement, the European Union (EU) and other delegations. As the Group was unable to reach consensus on any of the agenda items, on 27 June it adopted its report to the Assembly, which was limited to procedural questions. The Group underlined the need to refer back to the Assembly for consideration the session's objectives and agenda.

On 15 September, the Assembly took note of the Group's report (decision 57/592).

On 8 December, the Assembly, taking further note of the Group's report and of the requests made for Member States to continue consultations, decided to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session the item entitled "Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament" (decision 58/521).

Disarmament Commission

In 2003, the Disarmament Commission, composed of all UN Member States, held six plenary meetings (New York, 31 March-17 April) [A/58/42] and an organizational meeting on 6 November [A/59/42], at which the Commission considered the agenda items "Ways and means to achieve nuclear disarmament" (see p. 535) and "Practical confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms" (see p. 567). The Commission did not reach consensus on concrete proposals regarding either of the two items. The Commission decided that its next substantive session would be held in April 2004 and requested its Chairman to undertake informal consultations as to the agenda items to be considered. Although the Chairman held 35 such consultations with various groups of States and delegations, a lack of consensus persisted.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/464], adopted resolution 58/67 without vote [agenda item 75 (c)].

Report of the Disarmament Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Disarmament Commission,

Recalling its resolutions 47/54 A of 9 December 1992, 47/54 G of 8 April 1993, 48/77 A of 16 December 1993, 49/77 A of 15 December 1994, 50/72 D of 12 December 1995, 51/47 B of 10 December 1996, 52/40 B of 9 December 1997, 53/79 A of 4 December 1998, 54/56 A of 1 December 1999, 55/35 C of 20 November 2000, 56/26 A of 29 November 2001 and 57/95 of 22 November 2002,

Considering the role that the Disarmament Commission has been called upon to play and the contribution that it should make in examining and submitting recommendations on various problems in the field of disarmament and in the promotion of the implementation of the relevant decisions adopted by the General Assembly at its tenth special session,

Bearing in mind its decision 52/492 of 8 September 1998,

1. Takes note of the report of the Disarmament Commission;
2. Reaffirms the importance of further enhancing the dialogue and cooperation among the First Committee, the Disarmament Commission and the Conference on Disarmament;
3. Also reaffirms the role of the Disarmament Commission as the specialized, deliberative body within the United Nations multilateral disarmament machinery that allows for in-depth deliberations on specific disarmament issues, leading to the submission of concrete recommendations on those issues;
4. Requests the Disarmament Commission to continue its work in accordance with its mandate, as set forth in paragraph 118 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and with paragraph 3 of Assembly resolution 37/78 H of 9 December 1982, and to that end to make every effort to achieve specific recommendations on the items on its agenda, taking into account the adopted "Ways and means to enhance the functioning of the Disarmament Commission";
5. Recommends that the Disarmament Commission consider the following items at its 2004 substantive session:

(a) [To be determined];

(b) [To be determined];

6. Requests the Disarmament Commission to meet for a period not exceeding three weeks during 2004, namely, from 5 to 23 April, and to submit a substantive report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Disarmament Commission the annual report of the Conference on Disarmament, together with all the official records of the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly relating to disarmament matters, and to render all assistance that the Commission may require for implementing the present resolution;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure full provision to the Disarmament Commission and its subsidiary bodies of interpretation and translation facilities in the official languages and to assign, as a matter of priority, all the necessary resources and services, including verbatim records, to that end;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Report of the Disarmament Commission".

Conference on Disarmament

The Conference on Disarmament, a multilateral negotiating body, held a three-part session in Geneva in 2003 (20 January–28 March, 12 May–27 June and 28 July–10 September) [A/58/27].

The Conference again considered the cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament; prevention of nuclear war; prevention of an arms race in outer space; effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons; new types of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons; a comprehensive programme of disarmament; and transparency in armaments.

During the session, successive Presidents of the Conference conducted consultations, with a view to reaching consensus on the programme of work. However, the Conference did not agree on a programme of work and did not establish or re-establish any mechanism to deal with the agenda items. In an effort to break the impasse that had undermined progress in the Conference for many years, five former Presidents (Algeria, Belgium, Chile, Colombia, Sweden), whose previous joint proposal [YUN 2002, p. 489] was not agreed upon, introduced in 2003 another cross-group proposal ("A-5 proposal") on the work programme [CD/1693/Rev.1]. The proposal included a presidential declaration by which the Conference would have decided to establish a programme of work and required Member States to build on converging points that could lead to international instruments acceptable to all. The proposal envisaged the establishment of ad hoc committees on negative security assurances, nuclear disarmament, a treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices and prevention of an arms race in outer space. It also envisaged the appointment of three special coordinators to deal with new types of WMDs and new systems of such weapons, a comprehensive programme of disarmament and transparency in armaments. Although many delegations expressed support for the proposal, the consensus sought remained elusive for the fifth consecutive year. Thus, the Conference concluded its 2003 session without reaching agreement on a programme of work. It decided to hold its 2004 session between January and September, and requested its current President and the incoming President to hold consultations during the intersessional period and to make recommendations, taking into account relevant proposals, views and discussions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/464], adopted resolution 58/66 without vote [agenda item 75 (d)].

Report of the Conference on Disarmament

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Conference on Disarmament,

Convinced that the Conference on Disarmament, as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum of the international community, has the primary role in substantive negotiations on priority questions of disarmament,

Recognizing the need to conduct multilateral negotiations with the aim of reaching agreement on concrete issues,

Recalling, in this respect, that the Conference has a number of urgent and important issues for negotiation,

Taking note of active discussions held on the programme of work during the 2003 session of the Conference, as duly reflected in the report and the records of the plenary meetings,

Taking note also of significant contributions made during the 2003 session to promote substantive discussions on issues on the agenda in the plenary meetings, as well as of discussions held on other issues that could also be relevant to the current international security environment,

Stressing the urgent need for the Conference to commence substantive work on its agreed agenda items at this juncture,

1. Reaffirms the role of the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum of the international community;

2. Urges the Conference to fulfil that role in the light of the evolving international situation, with a view to making early substantive progress on priority items on its agenda;

3. Welcomes the strong collective interest of the Conference in commencing substantive work as soon as possible during its 2004 session;

4. Also welcomes the decision of the Conference to request its current President and the incoming President to conduct consultations during the inter-sessional period and, if possible, to make recommendations, taking into account all relevant proposals, including that contained in CD/1693/Rev.1, views presented and discussions held, and to endeavour to keep the membership of the Conference informed, as appropriate, of their consultations, as expressed in paragraph 38 of its report;

5. Requests all States members of the Conference to cooperate with the current President and successive Presidents in their efforts to guide the Conference to the early commencement of substantive work in its 2004 session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure the provision to the Conference of adequate administrative, substantive and conference support services;

7. Requests the Conference to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Report of the Conference on Disarmament".

Multilateral disarmament agreements

As at 31 December 2003, the following numbers of States had become parties to the multilateral agreements listed below (in chronological order, with the years in which they were initially signed or opened for signature).

(Geneva) Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare (1925): 133 parties

Nuclear disarmament

Conference on Disarmament

In 2003, owing to the continuing impasse over its programme of work, the Conference on Disarmament was not able to establish any subsidiary body to deal with nuclear disarmament, despite the fact that the idea of setting up such a body, as suggested in the proposal put forth by five former Presidents [CD/1693/Rev.1], remained uncontested. Consequently, the question of nuclear disarmament was addressed by delegations during plenary meetings, with frequent references to the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) [YUN 2000, p. 487], particularly the 13 practical steps for systematic and progressive efforts towards nuclear disarmament. Many Western countries emphasized that negotiations on the fissile material cut-off treaty (see below), together with an early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (see p. 547), constituted the next essential steps in nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation. Non-aligned countries, on the other hand, emphasized that they attached the highest priority to nuclear disarmament.

Fissile material

Persisting difficulties in reaching agreement on a comprehensive programme of work (see p. 531) prevented the Conference on Disarmament from establishing an ad hoc committee on the prohibition of the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices. As a result, the issue was discussed only in plenary meetings. Western countries had intensified efforts to stimulate substantive discussion on the item and, in that context, the Netherlands organized informal meetings on banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices on 4 April [CD/1705] and on 26 September [CD/1719], both in Geneva, while Japan submitted an August working paper on the item [CD/1714].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/57 without vote [agenda item 78].

The Conference on Disarmament decision (CD/1547) of 11 August 1998 to establish, under item 1 of its agenda entitled "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", an ad hoc committee to negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator (CD/1299) and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/75 L of 16 December 1993, 53/77 I of 4 December 1998, 55/33 Y of 20 November 2000, 56/24 J of 29 November 2001 and 57/80 of 22 November 2002,

Convinced that a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices would be a significant contribution to nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation,

Recalling the 1998 report of the Conference on Disarmament, in which, inter alia, the Conference recorded that, in proceeding to take a decision on this matter, that decision was without prejudice to any further decisions on the establishment of further subsidiary bodies under agenda item 1 and that intensive consultations would be pursued to seek the views of the members of the Conference on Disarmament on appropriate methods and approaches for dealing with agenda item 1, taking into consideration all proposals and views in that respect,

1. Recalls the decision of the Conference on Disarmament to establish, under item 1 of its agenda entitled "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", an ad hoc committee which shall negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices;

2. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to agree on a programme of work that includes the immediate commencement of negotiations on such a treaty.

Security assurances

The Conference on Disarmament addressed the issue of security assurances for non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons in the framework of overall discussions on the agenda and programme of work. During plenary meetings, delegations reaffirmed or further elaborated their respective positions on the item.

Communication. The Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of the Non-Aligned Countries (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 20-25 February) [A/57/759-S/2003/332] said that, pending the total elimination of nuclear weapons, it would pursue, as a matter of priority, the conclusion of a universal, unconditional and legally binding instrument on security assurances to non-nuclear-weapon States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/460], adopted resolution 58/35 by recorded vote (119-0-58) [agenda item 71].

Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the need to allay the legitimate concern of the States of the world with regard to ensuring lasting security for their peoples,

Convinced that nuclear weapons pose the greatest threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Welcoming the progress achieved in recent years in both nuclear and conventional disarmament,

Noting that, despite recent progress in the field of nuclear disarmament, further efforts are necessary towards the achievement of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Convinced that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Determined to abide strictly by the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations on the non-use of force or threat of force,

Recognizing that the independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of non-nuclear-weapon States need to be safeguarded against the use or threat of use of force, including the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering that, until nuclear disarmament is achieved on a universal basis, it is imperative for the international community to develop effective measures and arrangements to ensure the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons from any quarter,

Recognizing that effective measures and arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons can contribute positively to the prevention of the spread of nuclear weapons,

Bearing in mind paragraph 59 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, in which it urged the nuclear-weapon States to pursue efforts to conclude, as appropriate, effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and desirous of promoting the implementation of the relevant provisions of the Final Document,

Recalling the relevant parts of the special report of the Committee on Disarmament submitted to the General Assembly at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, and of the special report of the Conference on Disarmament submitted to the Assembly at its fifteenth special session, the third special session devoted to disarmament, as well as the report of the Conference on its 1992 session,

Recalling also paragraph 12 of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, contained in the annex to its resolution 35/46 of 3 December 1980, which states, inter alia, that all efforts should be exerted by the Committee on Disarmament urgently to negotiate with a view to reaching agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Noting the in-depth negotiations undertaken in the Conference on Disarmament and its Ad Hoc Committee on Effective International Arrangements to Assure Non-Nuclear-Weapon States against the Use or Threat of Use of Nuclear Weapons, with a view to reaching agreement on this question,

Taking note of the proposals submitted under the item in the Conference on Disarmament, including the drafts of an international convention,

Taking note also of the relevant decision of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, as well as the relevant recommendations of the Organization of the Islamic Conference,

Taking note further of the unilateral declarations made by all the nuclear-weapon States on their policies of non-use or non-threat of use of nuclear weapons against the non-nuclear-weapon States,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, as well as the difficulties pointed out in evolving a common approach acceptable to all,

Taking note of Security Council resolution 984(1995) of 11 April 1995 and the views expressed on it,

Recalling its relevant resolutions adopted in previous years, in particular resolutions 45/34 of 4 December 1990, 46/32 of 6 December 1991, 47/50 of 9 December 1992, 48/73 of 16 December 1993, 49/73 of 15 December 1994, 50/68 of 12 December 1995, 51/43 of 10 December 1996, 52/36 of 9 December 1997, 53/75 of 4 December 1998, 54/52 of 1 December 1999, 55/31 of 20 November 2000, 56/22 of 29 November 2001 and 57/56 of 22 November 2002,

1. Reaffirms the urgent need to reach an early agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

2. Notes with satisfaction that in the Conference on Disarmament there is no objection, in principle, to the idea of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, although the difficulties with regard to evolving a common approach acceptable to all have also been pointed out;

3. Appeals to all States, especially the nuclear-weapon States, to work actively towards an early agreement on a common approach and, in particular, on a common formula that could be included in an international instrument of a legally binding character;

4. Recommends that further intensive efforts be devoted to the search for such a common approach or common formula and that the various alternative approaches, including, in particular, those considered in the Conference on Disarmament, be explored further in order to overcome the difficulties;

5. Also recommends that the Conference on Disarmament actively continue intensive negotiations with a view to reaching early agreement and concluding effective international arrangements to assure the non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, taking into account the widespread support for the conclusion of an international convention and giving consideration to any other proposals designed to secure the same objective;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/35:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyz-

Against: None.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Belarus, Belgium, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Disarmament Commission

In April [A/58/42], Working Group I of the Disarmament Commission considered its Chairman's working paper on ways and means to achieve nuclear disarmament. Based on comments and ideas presented on the paper, the Chairman prepared further papers and a proposal, on which the Group did not achieve consensus. The proposal, which was annexed to the Commission's report, addressed the importance of nuclear disarmament and the interrelationship between nuclear disarmament and international peace, security and stability; achievements and current developments in nuclear disarmament; and mechanisms dealing with nuclear disarmament and the role of the United Nations.

START and other bilateral agreements and unilateral measures

On 1 June, the 2002 Strategic Offensive Reductions Treaty (SORT) [YUN 2002, p. 493] between the Russian Federation and the United States entered into force following the completion of the ratification procedures. SORT, also known as the Moscow Treaty, established a new framework for further reductions of their strategic offensive weapons following the completion of reductions agreed upon under the 1991 Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START I). SORT committed the parties to reducing the level of their deployed strategic nuclear warheads to between 1,700 and 2,200 by 31 December 2012, which superseded their agreement for reductions to between 3,000 and 3,500 under the 1993 START II process [YUN 1993, p. 117]. In a 1 June joint statement on the new strategic relationship embodied in SORT (Saint Petersburg, Russian Federation) [A/58/91-S/2003/617], Presidents George W. Bush of the United States and Vladimir V. Putin of the Russian Federation pledged to intensify efforts to confront the global threats of terrorism and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) and their means of delivery, declared their intention to advance concrete joint projects in the field of missile defence and reaffirmed their commitment on issues relating to space exploration.

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 57/59 [YUN 2002, p. 495], 57/79 [ibid., p. 500] and 57/84 [ibid., p. 502], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/58/162], assessed progress made towards a nuclear-weapon-free world. Noting that 2003 marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Assembly's tenth special session, the first devoted to disarmament [YUN 1978, p. 17], the Secretary-General observed that WMDs, particularly nuclear weapons, remained a grave concern and that the implementation of disarmament and non-proliferation measures continued to pose a major challenge to international peace and security. Regarding efforts being made to reduce existing nuclear arsenals and to strengthen the nuclear non-proliferation regime, the Secretary-General said there had been some progress through measures taken by nuclear-weapon States. Despite the progress made, he added, further steps were required to advance the process of nuclear disarmament agreements and non-proliferation. Existing arms limitation and disarmament agreements needed to be reinforced by ensuring effective implementation of their provisions and universality. The Secretary-General suggested that efforts intensify towards the full implementation of the recommendations to significantly reduce the risk of nuclear war put forth in 2001 by the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters [YUN 2001, p. 474]. As to the proposal to convene an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear danger, contained in the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], the Secretary-General stated that consultations with Member States demonstrated that the time had not yet come for consideration of interim measures for convening such a conference. However, pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/84, he would continue to encourage Member States to create the conditions that would facilitate international consensus to hold the conference.

In a September report [A/58/323] on progress made to implement the goals contained in the Millennium Declaration (see also p. 48) relating to international security and disarmament, the Secretary-General addressed the need to strengthen and complement existing WMD regimes, the threat posed by small arms and the importance of cooperation in tightening export controls and facilitating the identification of sources of illicit weapons.

Communications. France and the Russian Federation adopted the French-Russian declaration on strategic issues (Paris, 10 February) [CD/1700], which expressed their determination to strengthen cooperation in combating the growing threat posed by the proliferation of WMDs and their means of delivery, and reaffirmed their commitment to the Group of Eight (G-8) major industrialized countries' Global Partnership Against the Spread of Weapons and Materials of Mass Destruction, launched in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 494].

The heads of State or Government of non-aligned countries, at their Thirteenth Conference (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 20-25 February) [A/37/759-S/2003/332], expressed concern at the slow pace of progress towards nuclear disarmament and called for an international conference to draw up an agreement on a phased programme for the total elimination of nuclear weapons.

On 31 May, President Bush, during a State visit to Poland, announced the proliferation security initiative, designed by the United States and a number of its close allies to reinforce the fight against WMD proliferation, including through agreements to search planes and ships carrying suspect cargo and the seizure of illegal weapons or missile technologies.

The G-8 major industrialized countries (Evian, France, 1-3 June) [CD/1708] adopted a declaration recognizing the proliferation of WMDs and their means of delivery, together with the spread of international terrorism, as the pre-eminent threat to international peace and security: a global challenge demanding a multi-faceted solution. They called for the effective control of the transfer of materials, technology and expertise that might facilitate the development or use of WMDs, and reviewed the implementation status of their 2002 initiative: the Global Partnership Against the Spread of Weapons and Materials of Mass Destruction [YUN 2002, p. 494].

Similar declarations on the non-proliferation of WMDs were made by the European Council (Thessaloniki, Greece, 20 June) [CD/1711], and by the Asia-Europe Meeting (Bali, Indonesia, 23-24 July) [CD/1712], an informal forum for dialogue and cooperation between the 15 European Union (EU) member States and 10 Asian countries (Brunei, China, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore, South Korea, Thailand, Viet Nam).

The Foreign Ministers of the New Agenda Coalition countries (Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico,

New Zealand, South Africa, Sweden) (New York, 23 September) [A/58/406] reviewed nuclear disarmament developments relating to their joint initiative, "Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: the need for a new agenda", launched in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 496].

The EU adopted an official strategy against the proliferation of WMDs (Brussels, Belgium, 12-13 December) [CD/1724], conceived to prevent, deter, halt and possibly eliminate proliferation programmes of concern worldwide. It was termed a "living action plan", subject to regular revision and updating every six months.

On 19 December [A/58/664], the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya stated that it had satisfied all its obligations under treaties and conventions relating to the elimination of all types of WMDs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted five resolutions and one decision related to nuclear disarmament. The Assembly adopted resolution 58/47 by recorded vote (114-47-17) [agenda item 73 (x)].

Reducing nuclear danger

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Reaffirming that any use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would constitute a violation of the Charter of the United Nations,

Convinced that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects would seriously enhance the danger of nuclear war,

Convinced also that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Considering that, until nuclear weapons cease to exist, it is imperative on the part of the nuclear-weapon States to adopt measures that assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering also that the hair-trigger alert of nuclear weapons carries unacceptable risks of unintentional or accidental use of nuclear weapons, which would have catastrophic consequences for all mankind,

Emphasizing the imperative need to adopt measures to avoid accidental, unauthorized or unexplained incidents arising from computer anomaly or other technical malfunctions,

Conscious that limited steps relating to dargetting have been taken by the nuclear-weapon States and that further practical, realistic and mutually reinforcing steps are necessary to contribute to the improvement in the international climate for negotiations leading to the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Mindful that reduction of tensions brought about by a change in nuclear doctrines would positively impact on international peace and security and improve the conditions for the further reduction and the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Recalling that in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons it is stated that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Recalling also the call in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to seek to eliminate the dangers posed by weapons of mass destruction and the resolve to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

1. Calls for a review of nuclear doctrines and, in this context, immediate and urgent steps to reduce the risks of unintentional and accidental use of nuclear weapons;

2. Requests the five nuclear-weapon States to take measures towards the implementation of paragraph 1 above;

3. Calls upon Member States to take the necessary measures to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to promote nuclear disarmament, with the objective of eliminating nuclear weapons;

4. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 57/84 of 22 November 2002;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify efforts and support initiatives that would contribute towards the full implementation of the seven recommendations identified in the report of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters that would significantly reduce the risk of nuclear war, and also to continue to encourage Member States to endeavour to create conditions that would allow the emergence of an international consensus to hold an international conference as proposed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Reducing nuclear danger".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/47:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Brazil, China, Georgia, Israel, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Paraguay, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Tajikistan, Ukraine, Uzbekistan.

The Assembly adopted resolution 58/50 by recorded vote (128-4-43) [agenda item 73 (c)].

Reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/33 D of 20 November 2000 and 57/58 and 57/59 of 22 November 2002,

Stressing the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States, in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties to the Treaty are committed under its article VI,

Recognizing that disarmament and non-proliferation are essential for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Reaffirming the necessity of strict compliance at all times and in all circumstances by all parties with their obligations under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the necessity of upholding their commitments in the decisions and final documents agreed at the 1995 and 2000 Review Conferences,

Noting the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued at The Hague on 8 July 1996,

Reiterating the responsibility of the nuclear-weapon States for transparent, verifiable and irreversible reductions in nuclear weapons leading to nuclear disarmament,

Stressing the commitment made in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference to the further reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons,

Convinced that the further reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons constitutes an integral part of the nuclear-arms reduction and disarmament process,

Concerned about the threat posed by non-strategic nuclear weapons due to their portability and proximity to areas of conflict, and thus about the risk of proliferation and of use,

Concerned also about emerging approaches to the broader role of nuclear weapons as part of security strategies, including the possible development of new types of low-yield non-strategic nuclear weapons,

Taking into consideration the lack of transparency and of formal agreements with regard to non-strategic nuclear weapons,

Emphasizing that further reductions of non-strategic nuclear weapons should be accorded a higher priority, as an important step towards the elimination of nuclear weapons, and be carried out in a comprehensive manner,

1. Agrees that further reductions in and elimination of non-strategic nuclear weapons should be based on unilateral initiatives and included as an integral part of the nuclear-arms reduction and disarmament process;

2. Also agrees that reductions of non-strategic nuclear weapons should be carried out in a transparent, verifiable and irreversible manner;

3. Further agrees on the importance of preserving, reaffirming and implementing the 1991 and 1992 presidential nuclear initiatives of the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics/Russian Federation on non-strategic nuclear weapons;

4. Calls upon the Russian Federation and the United States of America to formalize their presidential nuclear initiatives into legal instruments and to initiate negotiations on further reductions of such weapons;

5. Stresses the importance of the enhancement of special security and physical protection measures for the transport and storage of non-strategic nuclear weapons, their components and related materials through, inter alia, the placing of such weapons in physically secure central storage sites, with a view to their removal and subsequent elimination by the nuclear-weapon States as a part of the nuclear disarmament process to which they are committed under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and calls upon all nuclear-weapon States in possession of such weapons to take the necessary steps in this regard;

6. Calls for further confidence-building and transparency measures to reduce the threats posed by non-strategic nuclear weapons;

7. Also calls for concrete agreed measures to reduce further the operational status of non-strategic nuclear weapons systems so as to reduce the risk of use of non-strategic nuclear weapons;

8. Stresses the need for an undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States that possess such weapons not to increase the number or types of weapons deployed and not to develop new types of these weapons or rationalizations for their use;

9. Calls for the prohibition of those types of non-strategic nuclear weapons that have already been removed from the arsenals of some nuclear-weapon States and the development of transparency mechanisms for the verification of the elimination of these weapons;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/50:

In favour: Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, United States.
Abstaining: Albania, Armenia, Australia, Belarus, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, India, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Micronesia, Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Switzerland, Tajikistan, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Uzbekistan.

The Assembly adopted resolution 58/51 by recorded vote (133-6-38) [agenda item 73 (d)].

Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: a new agenda

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/77 Y of 4 December 1998, 54/54 G of 1 December 1999, 55/33 C of 20 November 2000 and 57/59 of 22 November 2002,

Convinced that the existence of nuclear weapons is a threat to the survival of humanity and that the only real guarantee against the use or threat of use of these weapons is their complete elimination and the assurance that they will never be used or produced again,

Convinced also that the retention of nuclear weapons carries the inherent risk of proliferation of those weapons and their falling into the hands of non-State actors,

Reaffirming that nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament are equally important and mutually reinforcing processes requiring continuous irreversible progress on both fronts,

Declaring that the participation of the international community as a whole is central to the maintenance and enhancement of international peace and stability, and that international security is a collective concern requiring collective engagement,

Declaring also that internationally negotiated treaties in the field of disarmament have made a fundamental contribution to international peace and security, and that unilateral and bilateral nuclear disarmament measures complement the treaty-based multilateral approach towards nuclear disarmament,

Noting the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued at The Hague on 8 July 1996,

Declaring that any presumption of the indefinite possession of nuclear weapons by the nuclear-weapon States is incompatible with the integrity and sustainability of the nuclear non-proliferation regime and with the broader goal of the maintenance of international peace and security,

Declaring that each article of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons is binding on the States parties at all times and in all circumstances and that it is imperative that all States parties be held fully accountable with respect to the strict compliance with their obligations under the Treaty, and that the undertakings therein on nuclear disarmament have been given and implementation of them remains imperative,

Expressing its deep concern at the limited progress made to date in implementing the thirteen steps on nuclear disarmament, and determined to implement these thirteen practical steps, to which all States parties agreed at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Expressing its deep concern at the continued failure of the Conference on Disarmament to deal with nuclear disarmament and to resume negotiations on a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other devices, taking into consideration both nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation objectives,

Expressing grave concern that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty has not yet entered into force,

Stressing the importance of regular reporting in promoting confidence in the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Noting the successful completion in September 2002 of the first phase of the Trilateral Initiative, involving the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Russian Federation and the United States of America, which aims to enable the placement of excess nuclear materials from dismantled weapons under international safeguards,

Convinced that the further reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons constitutes an integral part of the nuclear arms reduction and disarmament process,

Noting that, despite bilateral agreements, there is no sign of engagement of all of the five nuclear-weapon States in the multilateral process leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons,

Declaring that it is essential that the fundamental principles of transparency, verification and irreversibility apply to all nuclear disarmament measures,

Expressing its deep concern at the continued retention of the nuclear-weapons option by those three States, India, Israel and Pakistan, that have not yet acceded to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and that operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, in particular given the effects of regional volatility on international security, and, in this context, the continued regional tensions and deteriorating security situation in South Asia and the Middle East,

Expressing also its deep concern at the announcement by the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to withdraw from the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and at its decision to restart the Yongbyon nuclear reactor without International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards,

Expressing concern that the development of missile defences could impact negatively on nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation and lead to a new arms race on earth and in outer space,

Stressing that no actions be taken that would lead to the weaponization of outer space,

Expressing its deep concern about emerging approaches to the broader role of nuclear weapons as part of security strategies, including rationalizations for the use, and the possible development, of new types of nuclear weapons,

Welcoming further the progress in the development of nuclear-weapon-free zones,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which the heads of State and Government resolved to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, and to keep all options open for achieving this aim, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

Taking into consideration the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States, in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all the States parties to the Treaty are committed under article VI of the Treaty,

1. Reaffirms that any possibility that nuclear weapons could be used represents a continued risk for humanity;

2. Calls upon all States to refrain from any action that could lead to a new nuclear-arms race or that could impact negatively on nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation;

3. Calls upon all States to fulfil all their obligations under international treaties and international law in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation;

4. Calls upon all States parties to pursue, with determination, the full and effective implementation of the agreements reached at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the outcome of which provides the requisite plan to achieve nuclear disarmament;

5. Agrees on the importance and urgency of signatures and ratifications required to achieve the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

6. Calls for the upholding and maintenance of the moratorium on nuclear-weapon-test explosions or any other nuclear explosions pending the entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

7. Underlines the urgency of the entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty in the context of the progress achieved in implementing the international monitoring system;

8. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to implement the commitments made in the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, as well as in other nuclear disarmament or reductions agreements or initiatives, and to apply the principle of irreversibility by destroying their nuclear warheads and avoid keeping them in a state that lends itself to their possible redeployment;

9. Acknowledges that the reductions in the number of deployed strategic nuclear warheads envisaged by the Treaty on Strategic Offensive Reductions ("the Moscow Treaty") represent a positive first step, and calls on the United States of America and the Russian Federation to make the Treaty verifiable, irreversible and transparent and to address non-operational warheads, thus making it an effective nuclear disarmament measure;

10. Agrees that the further reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons should be accorded a higher priority as an important step towards the elimination of nuclear weapons and be carried out in a comprehensive manner, including:

(a) Further reductions in and elimination of non-strategic nuclear weapons based on unilateral initiatives and as an integral part of the nuclear-arms reduction and disarmament process;

(b) The implementation of reductions in a transparent, verifiable and irreversible manner;

(c) The preservation, reaffirmation and implementation of the 1991 and 1992 presidential nuclear initiatives of the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics/Russian Federation on non-strategic nuclear weapons;

(d) The formalization by the Russian Federation and the United States of America of their presidential nuclear initiatives into legal instruments and the initiation of negotiations on further reductions of such weapons;

(e) The enhancement of special security and physical protection measures for the transport and storage of non-strategic nuclear weapons, their components and related materials through, inter alia, the placing of such weapons in physically secure central storage sites with a view to their removal and subsequent elimination by the nuclear-weapon States as a part of the nuclear disarmament process to which they are committed under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, as well as the necessary steps to be taken by all nuclear-weapon States in possession of such weapons in this regard;

(f) The achievement of further confidence-building and transparency measures to reduce the threats posed by non-strategic nuclear weapons;

(g) The achievement of concrete agreed measures to reduce further the operational status of non-strategic nuclear weapons systems so as to reduce the risk of use of non-strategic nuclear weapons;

(h) The undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States that possess these weapons not to increase the number or types of weapons deployed and not to develop new types of these weapons or rationalizations for their use;

(i) The prohibition of those types of non-strategic nuclear weapons that have already been removed from the arsenals of some nuclear-weapon States and the development of transparency mechanisms for the verification of the elimination of these weapons;

11. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to increase their transparency and accountability with regard to their nuclear weapons arsenals and their implementation of disarmament measures;

12. Agrees that the Conference on Disarmament should establish, without delay, an appropriate ad hoc committee to deal with nuclear disarmament;

13. Agrees that the Conference on Disarmament should resume negotiations on a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, taking into consideration both nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation objectives;

14. Agrees that the Conference on Disarmament should complete the examination and updating of the mandate on the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects, as contained in its decision of 13 February 1992, and re-establish an ad hoc committee as early as possible;

15. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to undertake the necessary steps towards the seamless integration of all five nuclear-weapon States into a process leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons;

16. Notes that the third and, as appropriate, fourth meetings of the Preparatory Committee for the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, taking into account the deliberations and results of the previous sessions, should make every effort to produce a report containing recommendations to the Review Conference;

17. Stresses the importance of regular reporting in promoting confidence in the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

18. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to respect fully their existing commitments with regard to security assurances pending the conclusion of multilaterally negotiated legally binding security assurances for all non-nuclear-weapon States parties;

19. Notes the proposals on security assurances that have been submitted to the States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and calls upon the Preparatory Committee for the 2005 Review Conference to allow time to thoroughly consider the matter of security assurances at its third meeting so as to make recommendations to the Review Conference on how to take the matter forward;

20. Calls upon those three States, India, Israel and Pakistan, which are not yet parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and which operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, to accede to the Treaty as non-nuclear-weapon States promptly and without condition, to bring into force the required comprehensive safeguards agreements, together with additional protocols, consistent with the Model Protocol Additional to the Agreement(s) between State(s) and the International Atomic Energy Agency for the Application of Safeguards approved by the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency on 15 May 1997, for ensuring nuclear non-proliferation and to reverse clearly and urgently any policies to pursue any nuclear weapons development or deployment and refrain from any action that could undermine regional and international peace and security and the efforts of the international community towards nuclear disarmament and the prevention of nuclear weapons proliferation;

21. Reaffirms the conviction that the establishment of internationally recognized nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the regions concerned enhances global and regional peace and security, strengthens the nuclear non-proliferation regime and contributes towards realizing the objective of nuclear disarmament;

22. Expresses concern at tensions in the Middle East and South Asia, and renews support for the establishment of a Middle East zone free of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction and of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia;

23. Calls upon those States that have not yet done so to conclude full-scope safeguards agreements with the International Atomic Energy Agency and to conclude additional protocols to their safeguards agreements on the basis of the Model Protocol;

24. Calls upon the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to reconsider its recent announcements, with a view to being in full compliance with the provisions of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and in this connection supports all diplomatic efforts for an early, peaceful resolution of the situation and for the establishment of an area free of nuclear weapons on the Korean peninsula;

25. Stresses that the International Atomic Energy Agency must be able to verify and ensure that nuclear facilities of the States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons are being used for peaceful purposes only, and calls on States to cooperate fully and immediately with the Agency in resolving issues arising from the implementation of their respective obligations towards it;

26. Calls upon the Russian Federation and the United States of America to approach the International Atomic Energy Agency to carry out the verification requirements set forth in the Plutonium Management and Disposition Agreement signed by the two States on the basis of the model legal framework that has been agreed on and that is now available to be used in new verification agreements between the Agency and each of the two States;

27. Calls upon all nuclear-weapon States to make arrangements for the placing, as soon as practicable, of their fissile material no longer required for military purposes under International Atomic Energy Agency or other relevant international verification and to make arrangements for the disposition of such material for peaceful purposes in order to ensure that such material remains permanently outside military programmes;

28. Affirms that a nuclear-weapon-free world will ultimately require the underpinning of a universal and multilaterally negotiated legally binding instrument or a framework encompassing a mutually reinforcing set of instruments;

29. Acknowledges the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 57/59, and requests him to prepare a report, within existing resources, on the implementation of the present resolution;

30. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: a new agenda", and to review the implementation of the present resolution at that session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/51:

The Assembly adopted resolution 58/56 by recorded vote (112-45-20) [agenda item 73 (i)].

Nuclear disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 49/75 E of 15 December 1994 on a step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat, and its resolutions 50/70 P of 12 December 1995, 51/45 O of 10 December 1996, 52/38 L of 9 December 1997, 53/77 X of 4 December 1998, 54/54 P of 1 December 1999, 55/33 T of 20 November 2000, 56/24 R of 29 November 2001 and 57/79 of 22 November 2002 on nuclear disarmament,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Bearing in mind that the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1972 and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1993 have already established legal regimes on the complete prohibition of biological and chemical weapons, respectively, and determined to achieve a nuclear weapons convention on the prohibition of the development, testing, production, stockpiling, loan, transfer, use and threat of use of nuclear weapons and on their destruction, and to conclude such an international convention at an early date,

Recognizing that there now exist conditions for the establishment of a world free of nuclear weapons, and stressing the need to take concrete practical steps towards achieving this goal,

Bearing in mind paragraph 50 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, calling for the urgent negotiation of agreements for the cessation of the qualitative improvement and development of nuclear-weapon systems, and for a comprehensive and phased programme with agreed time frames, wherever feasible, for the progressive and balanced reduction of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery, leading to their ultimate and complete elimination at the earliest possible time,

Reaffirming the conviction of the States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons that the Treaty is a cornerstone of nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament and the importance of the decision on strengthening the review process for the Treaty, the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament, the decision on the extension of the Treaty and the resolution on the Middle East, adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Stressing the importance of the thirteen steps for the systematic and progressive efforts to achieve the objective of nuclear disarmament leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons, as agreed to by the States parties in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Noting with appreciation the entry into force of the Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START I), to which Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America are States parties,

Reiterating its call for an early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty,

Noting with appreciation the entry into force of the Treaty on Strategic Offensive Reductions ("the Moscow Treaty") between the United States of America and the Russian Federation as a significant step towards reducing their deployed strategic nuclear weapons, while calling for further irreversible deep cuts in their nuclear arsenals,

Noting with appreciation also the unilateral measures taken by the nuclear-weapon States for nuclear arms limitation, and encouraging them to take further such measures,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral negotiations on nuclear disarmament, and that bilateral negotiations can never replace multilateral negotiations in this respect,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and the multilateral efforts in the Conference on Disarmament to reach agreement on such an international convention at an early date,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996, and welcoming the unanimous reaffirmation by all Judges of the Court that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Mindful of paragraph 74 and other relevant recommendations in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, calling upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, as soon as possible and as the highest priority, an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament and to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Recalling paragraph 11 of the declaration of the Meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Non-Aligned Movement, held in New York on 26 September 2003,

Bearing in mind the principles and guidelines on the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones, adopted by the Disarmament Commission at its substantive session of 1999,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which heads of State and Government resolve to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, and to keep all options open for achieving this aim, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

Reaffirming that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, States should refrain from the use or the threat of use of nuclear weapons in settling their disputes in international relations,

Seized of the danger of the use of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, in terrorist acts and the urgent need for concerted international efforts to control and overcome it,

1. Recognizes that, in view of recent political developments, the time is now opportune for all the nuclear-weapon States to take effective disarmament measures with a view to achieving the elimination of these weapons;

2. Reaffirms that nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation are substantively interrelated and mutually reinforcing, that the two processes must go hand in hand and that there is a genuine need for a systematic and progressive process of nuclear disarmament;

3. Welcomes and encourages the efforts to establish new nuclear-weapon-free zones in different parts of the world on the basis of agreements or arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the regions concerned, which is an effective measure for limiting the further spread of nuclear weapons geographically and contributes to the cause of nuclear disarmament;

4. Recognizes that there is a genuine need to diminish the role of nuclear weapons in strategic doctrines and security policies to minimize the risk that these weapons will ever be used and to facilitate the process of their total elimination;

5. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to stop immediately the qualitative improvement, development, production and stockpiling of nuclear warheads and their delivery systems;

6. Also urges the nuclear-weapon States, as an interim measure, to de-alert and deactivate immediately their nuclear weapons and to take other concrete measures to reduce further the operational status of their nuclear-weapon systems;

7. Reiterates its call upon the nuclear-weapon States to undertake the step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat and to carry out effective nuclear disarmament measures with a view to achieving the total elimination of these weapons;

8. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States, pending the achievement of the total elimination of nuclear weapons, to agree on an internationally and legally binding instrument on a joint undertaking not to be the first to use nuclear weapons, and calls upon all States to conclude an internationally and legally binding instrument on security assurances of non-use and non-threat of use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear-weapon States;

9. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to commence plurilateral negotiations among themselves at an appropriate stage on further deep reductions of nuclear weapons as an effective measure of nuclear disarmament;

10. Underlines the importance of applying the principle of irreversibility to the process of nuclear disarmament, nuclear and other related arms control and reduction measures;

11. Underscores the importance of the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States, in the Final Document of the Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, held in New York from 24 April to 19 May 2000, to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties are committed under article VI of the Treaty, and the reaffirmation by the States parties that the total elimination of nuclear weapons is the only absolute guarantee against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

12. Calls for the full and effective implementation of the thirteen steps for nuclear disarmament contained in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

13. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to carry out further reductions of non-strategic nuclear weapons, based on unilateral initiatives and as an integral part of the nuclear arms reduction and disarmament process;

14. Calls for the immediate commencement of negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament on a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein;

15. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to agree on a programme of work which includes the immediate commencement of negotiations on such a treaty with a view to their conclusion within five years;

16. Calls for the conclusion of an international legal instrument or instruments on adequate security assurances to non-nuclear-weapon States;

17. Also calls for the early entry into force and strict observance of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

18. Expresses its regret that the Conference on Disarmament was unable to establish an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament at its 2003 session, as called for in General Assembly resolution 57/79;

19. Reiterates its call upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, on a priority basis, an ad hoc committee to deal with nuclear disarmament early in 2004 and to commence negotiations on a phased programme of nuclear disarmament leading to the eventual total elimination of nuclear weapons;

20. Calls for the convening of an international conference on nuclear disarmament in all its aspects at an early date to identify and deal with concrete measures of nuclear disarmament;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

22. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Nuclear disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/56:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia, India, Ireland, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Mauritius, Pakistan, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Sweden, Tajikistan, Ukraine, Uzbekistan.

The Assembly adopted resolution 58/59 by recorded vote (164-2-14) [agenda item 73].

A path to the total elimination of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 H of 15 December 1994, 50/70 C of 12 December 1995, 51/45 G of 10 December 1996, 52/38 K of 9 December 1997, 53/77 U of 4 December 1998, 54/54 D of 1 December 1999, 55/33 R of 20 November 2000, 56/24 N of 29 November 2001 and 57/78 of 22 November 2002,

Recognizing that the enhancement of international peace and security and the promotion of nuclear disarmament mutually complement and strengthen each other,

Expressing deep concern regarding the growing dangers posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction,

Convinced that every effort should be made to avoid nuclear devastation,

Reaffirming the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons as the cornerstone of the international regime for nuclear non-proliferation and as an essential foundation for the pursuit of nuclear disarmament, and welcoming accession by Timor-Leste to the Treaty,

Bearing in mind that challenges to the Treaty and to the nuclear non-proliferation regime have further increased the necessity of full compliance and that the Treaty can fulfil its role only if there is confidence in compliance by all States parties,

Recognizing the progress made by the nuclear-weapon States in the reduction of their nuclear weapons unilaterally or through their negotiations, including the recent entry into force of the Treaty on Strategic Offensive Reductions ("the Moscow Treaty") by the United States of America and the Russian Federation, which should serve as a step for further nuclear disarmament, and the efforts for nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation by the international community,

Reaffirming the conviction that further advancement in nuclear disarmament will contribute to consolidating the international regime for nuclear non-proliferation, ensuring international peace and security,

Welcoming the continuation of a moratorium on nuclear-weapon-test explosions or any other nuclear explosions since the last nuclear tests,

Welcoming also the successful adoption of the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and stressing the importance of implementing its conclusions,

Welcoming further the constructive discussions at the second session, held from 28 April to 9 May 2003, of the Preparatory Committee for the Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to be held in 2005,

Welcoming the successful convening of a series of seminars and conferences aiming at further reinforcement of International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards, including the International Conference on Wider Adherence to Strengthened International Atomic Energy Agency Safeguards, held in Tokyo on 9 and 10 December 2002, and sharing the hope that, by making utmost use of the outcomes from the foregoing seminars and conferences, the International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards system will be further strengthened, by means of universalization of safeguards agreements and the additional protocols,

Encouraging the Russian Federation and the United States of America to continue their intensive consultations in accordance with the Joint Declaration on the New Strategic Relationship between the two States,

Welcoming the Final Declaration of the third Conference on Facilitating the Entry into Force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, convened in Vienna from 3 to 5 September 2003 in accordance with article XIV of the Treaty,

Recognizing the importance of preventing terrorists from acquiring or developing nuclear weapons or related materials, radioactive materials, equipment and technology and underlining the role of the International Atomic Energy Agency in this regard,

Stressing the importance of education on disarmament and non-proliferation for future generations, and welcoming the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations study on disarmament and non-proliferation education, submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session,

1. Reaffirms the importance of achieving the universality of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and calls upon States not parties to the Treaty to accede to it as non-nuclear-weapon States without delay and without conditions;

2. Also reaffirms the importance for all States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to fulfil their obligations under the Treaty;

3. Stresses the central importance of the following practical steps for the systematic and progressive efforts to implement article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and paragraphs 3 and 4 (c) of the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament of the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty:

(a) The importance and urgency of signatures and ratifications, without delay and without conditions and in accordance with constitutional processes, to achieve the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty as well as a moratorium on nuclear-weapon-test explosions or any other nuclear explosions pending the entry into force of that Treaty;

(b) The establishment of an ad hoc committee in the Conference on Disarmament as early as possible during its 2004 session to negotiate a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, in accordance with the report of the Special Coordinator of 1995 and the mandate contained therein, taking into consideration both nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation objectives, with a view to its conclusion within five years and, pending its entry into force, a moratorium on the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons;

(c) The establishment of an appropriate subsidiary body with a mandate to deal with nuclear disarmament in the Conference on Disarmament as early as possible during its 2004 session in the context of establishing a programme of work;

(d) The inclusion of the principle of irreversibility to apply to nuclear disarmament, nuclear and other related arms control and reduction measures;

(e) An unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States, as agreed at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals, leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties to the Treaty are committed under article VI of the Treaty;

(f) Deep reductions by the Russian Federation and the United States of America in their strategic offensive arsenals, while placing great importance on the existing multilateral treaties, with a view to maintaining and strengthening strategic stability and international security;

(g) Steps by all the nuclear-weapon States leading to nuclear disarmament in a way that promotes international stability, and based on the principle of undiminished security for all:

- (i) Further efforts by all the nuclear-weapon States to continue to reduce their nuclear arsenals unilaterally;
- (ii) Increased transparency by the nuclear-weapon States with regard to their nuclear weapons capabilities and the implementation of agreements pursuant to article VI of the Treaty and as voluntary confidence-building measures to support further progress on nuclear disarmament;
- (iii) The further reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons, based on unilateral initiatives and as an integral part of the nuclear arms reduction and disarmament process;
- (iv) Concrete agreed measures to reduce further the operational status of nuclear weapons systems;

- (v) A diminishing role for nuclear weapons in security policies to minimize the risk that these weapons will ever be used and to facilitate the process of their total elimination;
- (vi) The engagement, as soon as appropriate, of all the nuclear-weapon States in the process leading to the total elimination of their nuclear weapons;
- (h) Reaffirmation that the ultimate objective of the efforts of States in the disarmament process is general and complete disarmament under effective international control;

4. Recognizes that the realization of a world free of nuclear weapons will require further steps, including deeper reductions by all the nuclear-weapon States in the process of working towards achieving their elimination;

5. Invites the nuclear-weapon States to keep the Members of the United Nations duly informed of the progress or efforts made towards nuclear disarmament;

6. Emphasizes the importance of a successful Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons in 2005, as the third session of the Preparatory Committee will be convened in 2004;

7. Welcomes the ongoing efforts in the dismantlement of nuclear weapons, notes the importance of the safe and effective management of the resultant fissile materials, and calls for arrangements by all the nuclear-weapon States to place, as soon as practicable, fissile material designated by each of them as no longer required for military purposes under International Atomic Energy Agency or other relevant international verification and arrangements for the disposition of such material for peaceful purposes to ensure that such material remains permanently outside of military programmes;

8. Stresses the importance of further development of the verification capabilities, including International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards, that will be required to provide assurance of compliance with nuclear disarmament agreements for the achievement and maintenance of a nuclear-weapon-free world;

9. Calls upon all States to redouble their efforts to prevent and curb the proliferation of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction, confirming and strengthening, if necessary, their policies not to transfer equipment, materials or technology that could contribute to the proliferation of those weapons, while ensuring that such policies are consistent with the obligations of States under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

10. Also calls upon all States to maintain the highest possible standards of security, safe custody, effective control and physical protection of all materials that could contribute to the proliferation of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction in order, inter alia, to prevent those materials from falling into the hands of terrorists;

11. Welcomes the adoption of resolution GC(47)/RES/11 on 19 September 2003 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, in which it is recommended that States members of the Agency continue to consider implementing the elements of the plan of action outlined in resolution GC(44)/RES/19, adopted on 22 September 2000 by the General Conference of the Agency, and in the Agency's updated plan of action of April 2003, with the aim of facilitating the entry into force of comprehensive safeguards agreements and additional protocols, and calls for the early and full implementation of that resolution;

12. Encourages the constructive role played by civil society in promoting nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/59:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: India, United States.

Abstaining: Bhutan, Brazil, China, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Egypt, Ireland, Israel, Mexico, Myanmar, New Zealand, Pakistan, South Africa, Sweden.

The Assembly adopted decision 58/517 [agenda item 73 (z)].

United Nations conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers in the context of nuclear disarmament

At its 71st plenary meeting, on 8 December 2003, the General Assembly, by a recorded vote of 133 to 6, with 38 abstentions, and on the recommendation of the First Committee, recalling its resolution 57/69 of 22 November 2002, decided to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "United Nations conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers in the context of nuclear disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 58/517:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, Israel, Monaco, Poland, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey.

ABM Treaty and other missile issues

In 2003, Member States continued to express concern over the United States unilateral withdrawal, effective 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 504], from the Treaty on the Limitation of Anti-Ballistic Missile Systems (ABM Treaty). Delegates at the second session of the Preparatory Committee for the 2005 Review Conference of NPT (see p. 549) maintained that the withdrawal brought an additional element of uncertainty to international security, impacted negatively on strategic stability and would have negative consequences for nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation.

Other missile-related issues, particularly the proliferation of long-range ballistic missiles and United States efforts to build a missile defence system [YUN 1999, p. 469], remained an area of concern. On 20 May, the United States, in a statement on its national policy on ballistic missiles, announced plans to begin deploying its missile defence capabilities in 2004, as a starting point for fielding improved and expanded versions of such systems at a later stage. In response to perceived threats in the region, Australia announced, on 4 December, that it had in principle decided to join the United States missile defence system, and, on 19 December, the Government of Japan announced that it would build a missile defence system based on technology from the United States. In June, Defence Ministers of North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) member States announced that the organization had secured funding for a new missile defence feasibility study, to be launched in October to examine alternatives for protecting NATO territory and forces from missile threats, determine the best mix of systems and capabilities to obtain a NATO missile defence and recommend options for system elements that were consistent with NATO and national missile defence capabilities. The subscribing States to the international code of conduct against ballistic missile proliferation, also known as the Hague code of conduct, adopted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 504], held their first (Vienna, 24-25 June) and second (New York, 2-3 October) regular meetings [A/58/595-S/2003/1091]. In June, they discussed, among other things, the exchange of annual declarations on national ballistic missile and space launch vehicle policies and pre-launch notifications. In October, they discussed the standardization and qualitative improvement of the annual declarations and pre-launch notifications of ballistic missiles and space launch vehicles. The subscribing States held an outreach seminar (New York, 1 October), aimed at strengthening the profile of the code by reaching out to non-subscribing States, the media, interested non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and other external parties. At year's end, subscribing States numbered 109. In December, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya declared its agreement to restrict the range of its missiles to no more than 300 kilometres, in line with standards agreed upon under the Missile Technology Control Regime.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/71 [YUN 2002, p. 505], the Secretary-General, in a July report with later addenda [A/58/117 & Add.1,2], presented the views of 10 Member States on the issue of missiles in all its aspects.

Communication. In January [CD/1690], the Russian Federation stated that the abandonment of the principles of the ABM Treaty, from which the United States had withdrawn unilaterally, could only lead to a weakening of strategic stability, a new arms race, including the proliferation of WMDs and their missile delivery systems, and the diversion of resources from efforts to combat real present-day challenges and threats, particularly international terrorism.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/37 by recorded vote (113-3-57) [agenda item 73 (mi)].

Missiles

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/54 F of 1 December 1999, 55/33 A of 20 November 2000, 56/24 B of 29 November 2001 and 57/71 of 22 November 2002,

Reaffirming the role of the United Nations in the field of arms regulation and disarmament and the commitment of Member States to take concrete steps to strengthen that role,

Realizing the need to promote regional and international peace and security in a world free from the scourge of war and the burden of armaments,

Convinced of the need for a comprehensive approach towards missiles, in a balanced and non-discriminatory manner, as a contribution to international peace and security,

Bearing in mind that the security concerns of Member States at the international and regional levels should be taken into consideration in addressing the issue of missiles,

Underlining the complexities involved in considering the issue of missiles in the conventional context,

Expressing its support for the international efforts against the development and proliferation of all weapons of mass destruction,

Considering that the Secretary-General, in response to resolution 55/33 A, with the assistance of a Panel of Governmental Experts, submitted a report for the consideration of the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session on the issue of missiles in all its aspects,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on the issue of missiles in all its aspects,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General containing the replies from Member States on the report on the issue of missiles in all its aspects, submitted pursuant to resolution 57/71;

2. Requests the Secretary-General further to seek the views of Member States on the report on the issue of missiles in all its aspects and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a Panel of Governmental Experts, to be established in 2004 on the basis of equitable geographical distribution, to explore further the issue of missiles in all its aspects and to submit a report for consideration by the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Missiles".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/37:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Micronesia, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Paraguay, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Uzbekistan.

wait, Kyrgyzstan, Mauritania and Oman. In accordance with article XIV, CTBT was to enter into force 180 days after the 44 States possessing nuclear reactors, listed in annex 2 of the Treaty, had deposited their instruments of ratification. By year's end, 32 of those States had ratified the Treaty.

Conference on facilitating entry into force

The third Conference on Facilitating the Entry into Force of CTBT (Vienna, 3-5 September) [CTBT-Art.XIV/2003/5] was convened in accordance with article XIV of the Treaty, which stipulated that if the Treaty had not entered into force three years from the date it had opened for signature [YUN 1996, p. 452], the depositary should convene a conference at the request of a majority of ratifying States to consider and decide by consensus measures to facilitate an early entry into force. The first such Conference took place in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 471], and the second, in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 482].

On 5 September, the Conference adopted a Final Declaration and measures to promote the Treaty's entry into force. Participants called on States that had not done so to sign and ratify the Treaty promptly, particularly those whose ratification was needed to enable the Treaty to take effect. They agreed to select one of the ratifying States as coordinator, to be assisted by a special representative, to promote cooperation and further signatures and ratifications, and recommended that ratifying States consider establishing a trust fund, financed through voluntary contributions, to support an outreach programme to promote the Treaty. They further recommended that the provisional technical secretariat of the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban-Treaty Organization (CTBTO) (see p. 548) continue to provide States with legal assistance regarding the ratification process and implementation measures, and asked it to act as a focal point where information about the activities of ratifying and signatory States could be collected, in order to promote the Treaty's entry into force.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/468], adopted resolution 58/71 by recorded vote (173-1-4) [agenda item 79].

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

The General Assembly,

Reiterating that the cessation of nuclear-weapon test explosions or any other nuclear explosions constitutes an effective nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation measure,

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

Status

As at 31 December 2003, 170 States had signed the 1996 Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT), adopted by General Assembly resolution 50/245 [YUN 1996, p. 454], and 108 had ratified it. During the year, instruments of ratification were deposited by Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Côte d'Ivoire, Cyprus, Eritrea, Honduras, Ku-

Recalling that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, adopted by its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, was opened for signature on 24 September 1996,

Stressing that a universal and effectively verifiable Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty constitutes a fundamental instrument in the field of disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation,

Encouraged by the signing of the Treaty by one hundred and sixty-nine States, including forty-one of the forty-four needed for its entry into force, and welcoming the ratification of one hundred and seven States, including thirty-two of the forty-four needed for its entry into force, among which there are three nuclear-weapon States,

Recalling its resolution 57/100 of 22 November 2002,

Welcoming the Final Declaration of the third Conference on Facilitating the Entry into Force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, held at Vienna from 3 to 5 September 2003, pursuant to article XIV of the Treaty,

1. Stresses the importance and urgency of signature and ratification, without delay and without conditions and in accordance with constitutional processes, to achieve the earliest entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

2. Welcomes the contributions by the States signatories to the work of the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, in particular to its efforts to ensure that the Treaty's verification regime will be capable of meeting the verification requirements of the Treaty upon its entry into force, in accordance with article IV of the Treaty;

3. Urges States to maintain their moratoriums on nuclear-weapons test explosions or any other nuclear explosions, pending the entry into force of the Treaty;

4. Urges all States that have not yet signed the Treaty to sign and ratify it as soon as possible and to refrain from acts that would defeat its object and purpose in the meanwhile;

5. Urges all States that have signed but not yet ratified the Treaty, in particular those whose ratification is needed for its entry into force, to accelerate their ratification processes with a view to their earliest successful conclusion;

6. Urges all States to remain seized of the issue at the highest political level;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/71:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Colombia, India, Mauritius, Syrian Arab Republic.

Preparatory Commission for the CTBT Organization

The Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, established in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 452], continued to develop the Treaty's verification regime. Steady progress was made in establishing the International Monitoring System (IMS) [YUN 1999, p. 472], the global network of 337 facilities in 90 countries designed to track and detect nuclear explosions prohibited by CTBT via a global satellite communication system, and to transmit relevant information to the International Data Centre (IDC) in Vienna. During the year, 12 additional facilities were certified, bringing the total to 67. Site surveys were completed for 91 per cent of IMS stations, of which 52 per cent substantially met specifications. Some 70 secure signatory accounts (one for each requesting signatory State) had been established, with over 490 users authorized to access IMS data and IDC products. The development of the draft on-site inspections operational manual remained a priority task for the Commission's provisional technical secretariat.

The Preparatory Commission held its twentieth (24-25 June) [CTBT/PC-20/1] and twenty-first (10-13 November) [CTBT/PC-21/1] sessions, both in Vienna, to consider the reports of its working groups and to discuss organizational, budgetary and other matters. The Commission adopted its 2004 programme budget, totalling $95 million, of which $45 million was earmarked for the IMS network. The remainder would be used to develop IDC, the global communications infrastructure, and procedures and guidelines for on-site inspection and evaluation once the Treaty entered into force.

Note by Secretary-General. In September [A/58/385], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly of the availability of the report of the Commission's Executive Secretary covering 2002.

Non-Proliferation Treaty

Status

As at 31 December, the number of States party to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2373(XXII) [YUN 1968, p. 17], stood at 188. In 2003, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) withdrew from the Treaty (see p. 391) and Timor-Leste acceded to it. NPT entered into force on 5 March 1970.

2005 review conference

Quinquennial review conferences, as called for under article VIII, paragraph 3, of the Treaty, were held in 1975 [YUN 1975, p. 27], 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 51], 1985 [YUN 1985, p. 56], 1990 [YUN 1990, p. 50], 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 189] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 487].

As decided by the NPT parties in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 507], the Preparatory Committee for the 2005 Review Conference held its second session (Geneva, 28 April–9 May) [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/50] to consider the implementation of the Treaty's provisions relating to non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, disarmament and international peace and security; safeguards and nuclear-weapon-free zones; and the right of States parties to research, produce and use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. Also discussed were the decision on the principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and the resolution on the Middle East, both adopted at the 1995 Review Conference, the final document of the 2000 Review Conference and the safety and security of peaceful nuclear programmes. Documents before the Committee included a note by the Secretariat on the estimated cost of the 2005 Review Conference [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/1]; a statement by the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean regarding its work [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/3/Rev.1]; a report by CTBTO updating the work of its Preparatory Commission (see p. 548) [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/4]; a joint statement by the Russian Federation and the United States on SORT (see p. 535) [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/21]; reports by the New Agenda Coalition (see p. 536 et seq.) [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/16] and by 25 other States on implementation of NPT and of the 1995 decision [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/2, 5, 7, 8, 10 & Corr.1, 13, 14, 17, 18, 19, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 32, 33, 34, 37, 39, 41, 42]; reports by 14 States on steps they had taken to promote the establishment of the Middle East as a zone free of nuclear weapons [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/6, 9, 12, 15, 20, 30, 31, 35, 36, 43, 44, 46, 47, 48]; and numerous working papers. The Committee's third session was scheduled to take place from 26 April to 7 May 2004.

Communication. A ministerial declaration by the Foreign Ministers of the New Agenda Coalition countries (Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, South Africa, Sweden) (New York, 23 September) [A/C.I./58/4] expressed concern at the lack of progress in implementing the 13 practical steps on nuclear disarmament to which all

IAEA safeguards

As at 31 December, the Model Protocol Additional to Safeguards Agreements strengthening the safeguards regime of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), approved by the IAEA Board of Governors in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 486], had been signed by 79 States, including the five nuclear-weapon States, and the European Atomic Energy Community, and was in force or being provisionally applied in 38 States.

The IAEA General Conference [GC(47)/RES/11], as in previous years, requested concerned States and other parties to safeguards agreements that had not done so to sign the additional protocols promptly. Encouraging those that had signed the protocols to bring them into force, the Conference advocated cooperation among member States to facilitate exchange of equipment, material and scientific and technological information for implementing those protocols. It commended member States that had implemented elements of a plan of action outlined in a 2000 resolution of the Conference [YUN 2000, p. 505] and recommended that other member States consider doing the same to facilitate the entry into force of comprehensive safeguards agreements and additional protocols.

On 17 March, IAEA inspectors in Iraq withdrew upon notice from the United States Government that coalition forces were about to begin hostilities. Agency inspectors returned to Iraq in June to re-verify the nuclear material subject to safeguards following reports of looting at a nuclear storage facility south of Baghdad. They found that, although some uranium compounds could have been dispersed, neither the quantity nor the material involved was sensitive from a proliferation perspective, as was confirmed by the General Conference [GC(47)/DEC/12]. (See also p. 319.)

IAEA was not able to verify that the DPRK had declared all the nuclear material subject to Agency safeguards, nor could it provide any assurance of its diversion given that the DPRK had prevented IAEA inspectors from carrying out any verification activities within the country in 2003. On 19 September [GC(47)/RES/12], the General Conference, deploring the DPRK's continuing unwillingness to accept the dialogue proposed by IAEA, urged it to reconsider its actions, to dismantle completely any nuclear weapons programme promptly and to accept comprehensive IAEA safeguards.

During the year, IAEA took action regarding the implementation of NPT safeguards agreements in Iran and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya.

On 12 September [GOV/2003/69], the Board of Governors, referring to Iran's failure to meet its safeguards obligations with respect to the reporting of nuclear material, facilities and activities, decided it was essential and urgent that Iran remedy that failure and cooperate to ensure verification of its compliance. In November [GOV/2003/81], the Board noted that Iran had taken specific actions as requested, welcomed its decision to voluntarily suspend all enrichment-related and re-processing activities, and requested it to adhere to that decision.

Following Libya's revelation that it had been engaged in an undeclared development of uranium enrichment capability and had obtained nuclear weapon design documents, IAEA conducted verification activities to ascertain the extent of the country's programme. However, on 19 December [A/58/664-SC/2003/1196], Libya announced its decision to eliminate all materials, equipment and programmes relevant to the production of internationally proscribed weapons, including nuclear weapons, and agreed to pursue with IAEA a policy of full transparency and active cooperation.

Note by Secretary-General. In August [A/58/312], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly of the availability of the forty-seventh report of IAEA [GC(47)/2] for 2002.

Communications. On 17 January [CD/1696], Peru transmitted the text of a communiqué issued by countries of the Permanent Body for Political Consultation and Coordination (Rio Group) (Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela), which regretted the DPRK's decision to withdraw from NPT and the IAEA safeguards system (see p. 549).

On 14 February [A/57/733-S/2003/182], the Secretary-General conveyed to the Presidents of the General Assembly and of the Security Council the text of a 12 February resolution of the IAEA Board of Governors, which declared that the DPRK was in further non-compliance with its obligations under its safeguards agreement pursuant to NPT.

On 8 October [A/58/431], Cuba announced that it had signed, in September, the comprehensive safeguards agreement with IAEA and the Additional Protocol thereto, in order to expedite the fulfilment of its obligations as a State party to NPT and to the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) (see p. 555).

Middle East

In 2003, the General Assembly (see below) and the IAEA General Conference [GC(47)/RES/13] took action regarding the risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East. While the Assembly once again called on the non-party in the region to place all its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards, IAEA continued to emphasize the need for States in the region to accept the application of full-scope Agency safeguards to all their nuclear activities.

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/97 [YUN 2002, p. 508], the Secretary-General reported in October [A/58/137 (Part II)] that, apart from the IAEA resolution on the application of IAEA safeguards in the Middle East, which was annexed to his report, he had not received any additional information since 2002.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/465], adopted resolution 58/68 by recorded vote (162-4-10) [agenda item 76].

The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind its relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the latest of which is resolution GC(47)/RES/13, adopted on 19 September 2003,

Cognizant that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in the region of the Middle East would pose a serious threat to international peace and security,

Mindful of the immediate need for placing all nuclear facilities in the region of the Middle East under full-scope safeguards of the International Atomic Energy Agency,

Recalling the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference urged universal adherence to the Treaty as an urgent priority and called upon all States not yet parties to the Treaty to accede to it at the earliest date, particularly those States that operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities,

Recognizing with satisfaction that, in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the Conference undertook to make determined efforts towards the achievement of the goal of universality of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, called upon those remaining States not parties to the Treaty to accede to it, thereby accepting an international legally binding commitment not to acquire nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices and to accept International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards on all their nuclear activities, and underlined the necessity of universal adherence to the Treaty and of strict compliance by all parties with their obligations under the Treaty,

Recalling the resolution on the Middle East adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference noted with concern the continued existence in the Middle East of unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, reaffirmed the importance of the early realization of universal adherence to the Treaty and called upon all States in the Middle East that had not yet done so, without exception, to accede to the Treaty as soon as possible and to place all their nuclear facilities under full-scope International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards,

Noting that Israel remains the only State in the Middle East that has not yet become party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Concerned about the threats posed by the proliferation of nuclear weapons to the security and stability of the Middle East region,

Stressing the importance of taking confidence-building measures, in particular the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East, in order to enhance peace and security in the region and to consolidate the global non-proliferation regime,

Emphasizing the need for all parties directly concerned to consider seriously taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and, as a means of promoting this objective, inviting the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards,

Noting that one hundred and sixty-nine States have signed the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, including a number of States in the region,

1. Welcomes the conclusions on the Middle East of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Reaffirms the importance of Israel's accession to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and placement of all its nuclear facilities under comprehensive International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards, in realizing the goal of universal adherence to the Treaty in the Middle East;

3. Calls upon that State to accede to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons without further delay and not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons, and to renounce possession of nuclear weapons, and to place all its unsafeguarded nuclear facilities under full-scope International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards as an important confidence-building measure among all States of the region and as a step towards enhancing peace and security;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/68:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Cameroon, Canada, Ethiopia, India, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Vanuatu.

The First Committee adopted the sixth preambular paragraph by a separate recorded vote of 142 to 2, with 11 abstentions. The Assembly retained the paragraph by a recorded vote of 162 to 2, with 10 abstentions.

Prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons

In 2003, the Conference on Disarmament was unable to undertake negotiations on a convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, as called for in General Assembly resolution 57/94 [YUN 2002, p. 509].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/463], adopted resolution 58/64 by recorded vote (118-46-13) [agenda item 74 (f)].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Convinced that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to the survival of mankind,

Bearing in mind the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 8 July 1996 on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons,

Convinced that a multilateral, universal and binding agreement prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would contribute to the elimination of the nuclear threat and to the climate for negotiations leading to the ultimate elimination of nuclear weapons, thereby strengthening international peace and security,

Conscious that some steps taken by the Russian Federation and the United States of America towards a reduction of their nuclear weapons and the improvement in the international climate can contribute towards the goal of the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

Recalling that, in paragraph 58 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, whose twenty-fifth anniversary is being marked this year, it is stated that all States should actively participate in efforts to bring about conditions in international relations among States in which a code of peaceful conduct of nations in international affairs could be agreed upon and that would preclude the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming that any use of nuclear weapons would be a violation of the Charter of the United Nations and a crime against humanity, as declared in its resolutions 1653(XVI) of 24 November 1961, 33/71 B of 14 December 1978, 34/83 G of 11 December 1979, 35/152 D of 12 December 1980 and 36/92 I of 9 December 1981,

Determined to achieve an international convention prohibiting the development, production, stockpiling and use of nuclear weapons, leading to their ultimate destruction,

Stressing that an international convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons would be an important step in a phased programme towards the complete elimination of nuclear weapons, with a specified framework of time,

Noting with regret that the Conference on Disarmament, during its 2003 session, was unable to undertake negotiations on this subject as called for in General Assembly resolution 57/94 of 22 November 2002,

1. Reiterates its request to the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations in order to reach agreement on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report to the General Assembly on the results of those negotiations.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/64:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Ukraine, Uzbekistan.

Advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/85 [YUN 2002, p. 510] on the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice that the threat or use of nuclear weapons was contrary to the UN Charter [YUN 1996, p. 461], the Secretary-General presented information received from five States (Antigua and Barbuda, Cuba, Malaysia, Mexico, Venezuela) on measures they had taken to implement the resolution and towards nuclear disarmament [A/58/162 & Add.1].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/46 by recorded vote (124-29-22) [agenda item 73 (y)].

Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 K of 15 December 1994, 51/45 M of 10 December 1996, 52/38 O of 9 December 1997, 53/77 W of 4 December 1998, 54/54 Q of 1 December 1999, 55/33 X of 20 November 2000, 56/24 S of 29 November 2001 and 57/85 of 22 November 2002,

Convinced that the continuing existence of nuclear weapons poses a threat to all humanity and that their use would have catastrophic consequences for all life on Earth, and recognizing that the only defence against a nuclear catastrophe is the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the certainty that they will never be produced again,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the creation of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Mindful of the solemn obligations of States parties, undertaken in article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, particularly to pursue negotiations in good faith on effective measures relating to cessation of the nuclear-arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament,

Recalling the principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted at the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Emphasizing the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, adopted at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Recalling the adoption of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty in its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, and expressing its satisfaction at the increasing number of States that have signed and ratified the Treaty,

Recognizing with satisfaction that the Antarctic Treaty and the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba are gradually freeing the entire southern hemisphere and adjacent areas covered by those treaties from nuclear weapons,

Stressing the importance of strengthening all existing nuclear-related disarmament, arms control and reduction measures,

Recognizing the need for a multilaterally negotiated and legally binding instrument to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the threat or use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming the central role of the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, and regretting the lack of progress in disarmament negotiations, particularly nuclear disarmament, in the Conference during its 2003 session,

Emphasizing the need for the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Expressing its deep concern at the lack of progress in the implementation of the thirteen steps to implement article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons agreed to at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Desiring to achieve the objective of a legally binding prohibition of the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, threat or use of nuclear weapons and their destruction under effective international control,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996,

Taking note of the relevant portions of the report of the Secretary-General relating to the implementation of resolution 57/85,

1. Underlines once again the unanimous conclusion of the International Court of Justice that there exists an obligation to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control;

2. Calls once again upon all States immediately to fulfil that obligation by commencing multilateral negotiations leading to an early conclusion of a nuclear weapons convention prohibiting the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, transfer, threat or use of nuclear weapons and providing for their elimination;

3. Requests all States to inform the Secretary-General of the efforts and measures they have taken on the implementation of the present resolution and nuclear disarmament, and requests the Secretary-General to apprise the General Assembly of that information at its fifty-ninth session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/46:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Belgium, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Marshall Islands, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russian Federation, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Japan, Kazakhstan, Liechtenstein, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Serbia and Montenegro, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Uzbekistan.

The First Committee adopted paragraph 1 by a recorded vote of 140 to 4, with 5 abstentions. The Assembly retained the paragraph by a recorded vote of 165 to 4, with 3 abstentions.

Radioactive waste

In September [GC(47)/RES/71], the IAEA General Conference requested the Agency to develop an action plan addressing the safety of the transport of radioactive material based on the findings of the IAEA International Conference on the Safety of Transport of Radioactive Material (Vienna, 7-11 July). It urged member States that did not have national regulatory documents governing the transport of radioactive materials by sea to adopt them.

The first Review Meeting of the Contracting Parties (Vienna, 3-14 November) to the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management [YUN 1997, p. 487], which entered into force in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 487], reviewed States parties national reports and discussed, among other issues, the need for all countries to have in place a long-term strategy for managing spent fuel and radioactive waste.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/40 without vote [agenda item 73 (b)].

Prohibition of the dumping of radioactive wastes

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind resolutions CM/Res.1153(XLVIII) of 1988 and CM/Res.1225(L) of 1989, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity, concerning the dumping of nuclear and industrial wastes in Africa,

Welcoming resolution GC(XXXIV)/RES/530 establishing a Code of Practice on the International Transboundary Movement of Radioactive Waste, adopted on 21 September 1990 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its thirty-fourth regular session,

Taking note of the commitment by the participants in the Summit on Nuclear Safety and Security, held in Moscow on 19 and 20 April 1996, to ban the dumping at sea of radioactive wastes,

Considering its resolution 2602 C (XXIV) of 16 December 1969, in which it requested the Conference of the Committee on Disarmament,* inter alia, to consider effective methods of control against the use of radiological methods of warfare,

Aware of the potential hazards underlying any use of radioactive wastes that would constitute radiological warfare and its implications for regional and international security, in particular for the security of developing countries,

Recalling all its resolutions on the matter since its forty-third session in 1988, including its resolution 51/45 J of 10 December 1996,

Also recalling resolution GC(45)/RES/10 adopted by consensus on 21 September 2001 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-fifth regular session, in which States shipping radioactive materials are invited to provide, as appropriate, assurances to concerned States, upon their request, that the national regulations of the shipping State take into account the Agency's transport regulations and to provide them with relevant information relating to the shipment of such materials; the information provided should in no case be contradictory to the measures of physical security and safety,

Welcoming the adoption at Vienna, on 5 September 1997, of the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management, as recommended by the participants at the Summit on Nuclear Safety and Security,

Noting with satisfaction that the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management entered into force on 18 June 2001,

Noting that the first Review Meeting of the Contracting Parties to the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management was convened in Vienna from 3 to 14 November 2003,

Desirous of promoting the implementation of paragraph 76 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

1. Takes note of the part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament relating to a future convention on the prohibition of radiological weapons;

2. Expresses grave concern regarding any use of nuclear wastes that would constitute radiological warfare and have grave implications for the national security of all States;

3. Calls upon all States to take appropriate measures with a view to preventing any dumping of nuclear or radioactive wastes that would infringe upon the sovereignty of States;

4. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to take into account, in the negotiations for a convention on the prohibition of radiological weapons, radioactive wastes as part of the scope of such a convention;

5. Also requests the Conference on Disarmament to intensify efforts towards an early conclusion of such a convention and to include in its report to the General

Assembly at its sixtieth session the progress recorded in the negotiations on this subject;

6. Takes note of resolution CM/Res.1356(LIV) of 1991, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity, on the Bamako Convention on the Ban on the Import of Hazardous Wastes into Africa and on the Control of Their Transboundary Movements within Africa;

7. Expresses the hope that the effective implementation of the International Atomic Energy Agency Code of Practice on the International Transboundary Movement of Radioactive Waste will enhance the protection of all States from the dumping of radioactive wastes on their territories;

8. Appeals to all Member States that have not yet taken the necessary steps to become party to the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management to do so as soon as possible;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Prohibition of the dumping of radioactive wastes".

*The Conference of the Committee on Disarmament became the Committee on Disarmament as from the tenth special session of the General Assembly. The Committee on Disarmament was redesignated the Conference on Disarmament as from 7 February 1984.

Nuclear-weapon-free zones

Africa

As at 31 December, 22 States had ratified the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) [YUN 1995, p. 208], which was opened for signature in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 486]. China, France and the United Kingdom had ratified Protocols I and II thereto, and France had also ratified Protocol III. The Russian Federation and the United States had signed Protocols I and II. The Treaty had 55 signatories.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/454], adopted resolution 58/30 without vote [agenda item 65].

African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba)

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/53 of 10 December 1996 and 56/17 of 29 November 2001 and all its other relevant resolutions, as well as those of the Organization of African Unity,

Recalling also the signing of the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) at Cairo on 11 April 1996,

Recalling further the Cairo Declaration adopted on that occasion, which emphasized that nuclear-weapon-free zones, especially in regions of tension, such as the Middle East, enhance global and regional peace and security,

Taking note of the statement made by the President of the Security Council on behalf of the members of the Council on 12 April 1996, affirming that the signature of the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty constituted an important contribution by the African countries to the maintenance of international peace and security,

Considering that the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones, especially in the Middle East, would enhance the security of Africa and the viability of the African nuclear-weapon-free zone,

1. Calls upon African States that have not yet done so to sign and ratify the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) as soon as possible so that it may enter into force without delay;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the nuclear-weapon States that have signed the Protocols that concern them, and calls upon those that have not yet ratified the Protocols concerning them to do so as soon as possible;

3. Calls upon the States contemplated in Protocol III to the Treaty that have not yet done so to take all necessary measures to ensure the speedy application of the Treaty to territories for which they are, de jure or de facto, internationally responsible and that lie within the limits of the geographical zone established in the Treaty;

4. Calls upon the African States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons that have not yet done so to conclude comprehensive safeguards agreements with the International Atomic Energy Agency pursuant to the Treaty, thereby satisfying the requirements of article 9 (b) of and annex II to the Treaty of Pelindaba when it enters into force, and to conclude additional protocols to their safeguards agreements on the basis of the Model Protocol approved by the Board of Governors of the Agency on 15 May 1997;

5. Expresses its gratitude to the Secretary-General, the Chairman of the Commission of the African Union and the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency for the diligence with which they have rendered effective assistance to the signatories to the Treaty;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty".

Asia

Central Asia

In 2003, the five Central Asian States (Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan) continued consultations with the five nuclear-weapon States on the draft text of a treaty for a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia. Four of the nuclear five had submitted their comments on the draft earlier in the year, and the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific (see p. 588), in collaboration with IAEA, organized several meetings to help the regional States examine those comments. The process resulted in a proposal for a revised treaty text.

On 8 December, the General Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia" (decision 58/518).

Mongolia

In a report to the NPT Preparatory Committee (see p. 549), Mongolia described its nuclear-weapon-free status as a reaffirmation of its commitment to the goals of nuclear non-proliferation and highlighted ongoing efforts to institutionalize that status at the international level [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.II/40].

South-East Asia

In 2003, the States parties to the Treaty on the South-East Asia Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone (Bangkok Treaty) continued to focus on establishing an institutional framework to implement the Treaty. Consultations with nuclear-weapon States on the Treaty's Protocols, with a view to securing their accession, also continued within the organizational framework of the Association of South-east Asian Nations (ASEAN). Some progress was made, as China and ASEAN countries reached agreements on the Protocols. With no new ratifications, the number of States that had ratified the Treaty remained at 10.

Latin America and the Caribbean

The eighteenth regular session of the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (OPANAL) (Havana, Cuba, 5-6 November) [A/58/622] adopted the Havana Declaration, which committed OPANAL members to promoting the convening of a conference of States parties and signatories that had established nuclear-weapon-free zones and to strengthening the integrity of the statute of denuclearization provided for in the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) [YUN 1967, p. 13].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/455], adopted resolution 58/31 (as orally amended) without vote [agenda item 66].

Consolidation of the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco)

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) was opened for signature at Mexico City on 14 February 1967,

Recalling also that, in its preamble, the Treaty of Tlatelolco states that military denuclearized zones are not an end in themselves but rather a means for achieving general and complete disarmament at a later stage.

Recalling further that, in its resolution 2286(XXII) of 5 December 1967, it welcomed with special satisfaction the Treaty of Tlatelolco as an event of historic significance in the efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons and to promote international peace and security.

Recalling that in 1990, 1991 and 1992 the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean approved and opened for signature a set of amendments to the Treaty of Tlatelolco, with the aim of enabling the full entry into force of that instrument.

Highlighting that, with the ratification of Cuba, the Treaty of Tlatelolco is now in force for thirty-three sovereign States of the region, thereby consolidating the first nuclear-weapon-free zone established in a densely populated region.

Noting with satisfaction the interest that the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean has manifested to promote mechanisms of cooperation and consultation in other nuclear-weapon-free zones.

Reaffirming the importance of strengthening the Agency as the appropriate legal and political forum for ensuring cooperation with the agencies of other nuclear-weapon-free zones.

1. Welcomes the fact that the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) is now in force for the sovereign States of the region, and that this fact was officially acknowledged by the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean at its eighteenth session, held at Havana on 5 and 6 November 2003, and takes note of the results of the aforementioned session of the General Conference, including the adoption of the Havana Declaration;

2. Urges the countries of the region that have not yet done so to deposit their instruments of ratification of the amendments to the Treaty of Tlatelolco approved by the General Conference of the Agency in its resolutions 267(E-V), 268(XII) and 290(E-VII);

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Consolidation of the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco)".

Middle East

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/55 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East [YUN 2002, p. 514], the Secretary-General, in a July report with later addendum [A/58/137 (Part I) & Add.1 & Add.1/Corr.1], reported on the resolution's implementation. He said he was encouraged by new developments, including the presentation of the road map: an international plan for peace in the Middle East developed by the Quartet—the coordinating mechanism for international peace efforts in the region, comprising the Russian Federation, the United States, the EU and the United Nations [YUN 2002, p. 423] (see pp. 467 and 473). The Secretary-General hoped that recent developments in the region would have a positive influence towards securing a stable environment that would facilitate the establishment of the zone. The report included the views of Egypt, Israel, Italy (on behalf of the EU), Mexico and Venezuela.

In September, the IAEA General Conference, in a resolution on the Middle East [GC(47)/RES/13], called on all parties directly concerned to take the steps required for the implementation of the proposal for a mutually and effectively verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/459], adopted resolution 58/34 without vote [agenda item 70].

Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3263(XXIX) of 9 December 1974, 3474(XXX) of 11 December 1975, 31/71 of 10 December 1976, 32/82 of 12 December 1977, 33/64 of 14 December 1978, 34/77 of 11 December 1979, 35/147 of 12 December 1980, 36/87 A and B of 9 December 1981, 37/75 of 9 December 1982, 38/64 of 15 December 1983, 39/54 of 12 December 1984, 40/82 of 12 December 1985, 41/48 of 3 December 1986, 42/28 of 30 November 1987, 43/65 of 7 December 1988, 44/108 of 15 December 1989, 45/52 of 4 December 1990, 46/30 of 6 December 1991, 47/48 of 9 December 1992, 48/71 of 16 December 1993, 49/71 of 15 December 1994, 50/66 of 12 December 1995, 51/41 of 10 December 1996, 52/34 of 9 December 1997, 53/74 of 4 December 1998, 54/51 of 1 December 1999, 55/30 of 20 November 2000, 56/21 of 29 November 2001 and 57/55 of 22 November 2002 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East,

Recalling also the recommendations for the establishment of such a zone in the Middle East consistent with paragraphs 60 to 63, and in particular paragraph 63 (d), of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Emphasizing the basic provisions of the above-mentioned resolutions, which call upon all parties directly concerned to consider taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East and, pending and during the establishment of such a zone, to declare solemnly that they will refrain, on a reciprocal basis, from producing, acquiring or in any other way possessing nuclear weapons and nuclear explosive devices and from permitting the stationing of nuclear weapons on their territory by any third party, to agree to place their nuclear facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards and to declare their support for the establishment of the zone and to deposit such declarations with the Security Council for consideration, as appropriate,

Reaffirming the inalienable right of all States to acquire and develop nuclear energy for peaceful purposes,

Emphasizing the need for appropriate measures on the question of the prohibition of military attacks on nuclear facilities,

Bearing in mind the consensus reached by the General Assembly since its thirty-fifth session that the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East would greatly enhance international peace and security,

Desirous of building on that consensus so that substantial progress can be made towards establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East,

Welcoming all initiatives leading to general and complete disarmament, including in the region of the Middle East, and in particular on the establishment therein of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons,

Noting the peace negotiations in the Middle East, which should be of a comprehensive nature and represent an appropriate framework for the peaceful settlement of contentious issues in the region,

Recognizing the importance of credible regional security, including the establishment of a mutually verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Emphasizing the essential role of the United Nations in the establishment of a mutually verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 57/55,

1. Urges all parties directly concerned to consider seriously taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and, as a means of promoting this objective, invites the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Calls upon all countries of the region that have not done so, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards;

3. Takes note of resolution GC(46)/RES/16, adopted on 20 September 2002 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-sixth regular session, concerning the application of Agency safeguards in the Middle East;

4. Notes the importance of the ongoing bilateral Middle East peace negotiations and the activities of the multilateral Working Group on Arms Control and Regional Security in promoting mutual confidence and security in the Middle East, including the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone;

5. Invites all countries of the region, pending the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East, to declare their support for establishing such a zone, consistent with paragraph 63 (d) of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and to deposit those declarations with the Security Council;

6. Also invites those countries, pending the establishment of the zone, not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons or permit the stationing on their territories, or territories under their control, of nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices;

7. Invites the nuclear-weapon States and all other States to render their assistance in the establishment of the zone and at the same time to refrain from any action that runs counter to both the letter and the spirit of the present resolution;

8. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

9. Invites all parties to consider the appropriate means that may contribute towards the goal of general and complete disarmament and the establishment of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction in the region of the Middle East;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to pursue consultations with the States of the region and other concerned States, in accordance with paragraph 7 of resolution 46/30 and taking into account the evolving situation in the region, and to seek from those States their views on the measures outlined in chapters III and IV of the study annexed to his report of 10 October 1990 or other relevant measures, in order to move towards the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East".

South Pacific

In 2003, the number of States that had ratified the 1985 South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Rarotonga) [YUN 1985, p. 58] remained at 17. China and the Russian Federation had ratified Protocols 2 and 3, and France and the United Kingdom had ratified all three Protocols.

Under Protocol 1, the States internationally responsible for territories situated within the zone would undertake to apply the relevant prohibitions of the Treaty to those territories; under Protocol 2, the five nuclear-weapon States would provide security assurances to parties or territories within the same zone; and under Protocol 3, the five would not carry out nuclear tests in the zone.

Southern hemisphere and adjacent areas

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/49 by recorded vote (168-3-8) [agenda item 73 (e)].

Nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/45 B of 10 December 1996, 52/38 N of 9 December 1997, 53/77 Q of 4 December 1998, 54/54 L of 1 December 1999, 55/33 I of 20 November 2000, 56/24 G of 29 November 2001 and 57/73 of 22 November 2002,

Welcoming the adoption by the Disarmament Commission at its 1999 substantive session of a text entitled

"Establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned",

Determined to pursue the total elimination of nuclear weapons,

Determined also to continue to contribute to the prevention of the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to the process of general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control, in particular in the field of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction, with a view to strengthening international peace and security, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the provisions on nuclear-weapon-free zones of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Stressing the importance of the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba establishing nuclear-weapon-free zones, as well as the Antarctic Treaty, to, inter alia, achieve a world entirely free of nuclear weapons,

Underlining the value of enhancing cooperation among the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaty members by means of mechanisms such as joint meetings of States parties, signatories and observers to those treaties,

Recalling the applicable principles and rules of international law relating to the freedom of the high seas and the rights of passage through maritime space, including those of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea,

1. Welcomes the continued contribution that the Antarctic Treaty and the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba are making towards freeing the southern hemisphere and adjacent areas covered by those treaties from nuclear weapons;

2. Also welcomes the ratification by all original parties of the Treaty of Rarotonga, and calls upon eligible States to adhere to the treaty and the protocols thereto;

3. Further welcomes the efforts towards the completion of the ratification process of the Treaty of Pelindaba, and calls upon the States of the region that have not yet done so to sign and ratify the treaty, with the aim of its early entry into force;

4. Calls upon all concerned States to continue to work together in order to facilitate adherence to the protocols to nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties by all relevant States that have not yet done so;

5. Welcomes the steps taken to conclude further nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned, and calls upon all States to consider all relevant proposals, including those reflected in its resolutions on the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones in the Middle East and South Asia;

6. Affirms its conviction of the important role of nuclear-weapon-free zones in strengthening the nuclear non-proliferation regime and in extending the areas of the world that are nuclear-weapon-free, and, with particular reference to the responsibilities of the nuclear-weapon States, calls upon all States to support the process of nuclear disarmament and to work for the total elimination of all nuclear weapons;

7. Calls upon the States parties and signatories to the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and

Pelindaba, in order to pursue the common goals envisaged in those treaties and to promote the nuclear-weapon-free status of the southern hemisphere and adjacent areas, to explore and implement further ways and means of cooperation among themselves and their treaty agencies;

8. Welcomes the vigorous efforts being made among States parties and signatories to those treaties to promote their common objectives, and considers that an international conference of States parties and signatories to the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties might be held to support the common goals envisaged in those treaties;

9. Encourages the competent authorities of the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties to provide assistance to the States parties and signatories to those treaties so as to facilitate the accomplishment of these goals;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/49:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Bhutan, Georgia, India, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Russian Federation, Spain.

The First Committee adopted paragraph 5 and its last three words, "and South Asia", by separate recorded votes of 145 to 1, with 11 abstentions, and 142 to 2, with 11 abstentions, respectively. The Assembly retained paragraph 5 and its last three words by recorded votes of 163 to 2, with 9 abstentions, and 159 to 3, with 9 abstentions, respectively.

Bacteriological (biological) and chemical weapons

Bacteriological (biological) weapons

The potential use of chemical and biological weapons and related materials and technology by terrorists continued to be of concern to the international community. Calls were made for further strengthening of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction (BWC) and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction, and for efforts by States parties to implement national measures that would respond to those calls.

Meeting of States parties

As decided in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 516] by the Fifth Review Conference of the States parties to BWC, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2826(XXVI) [YUN 1971, p. 19], the first of three annual meetings of States parties to the Convention was convened (Geneva, 10-14 November) [BWC/MSP/2003/4 (vols. I & II)]. Working sessions focused on national measures to implement the prohibitions set forth in the Convention, national mechanisms to establish and maintain the security and oversight of pathogenic micro-organisms and toxins, enforcement, biosecurity evaluation and the implementation of biosecurity procedures, identification and licensing/registration, and efforts by relevant international organizations. The States parties noted that, notwithstanding the differing legal and constitutional arrangements among them, they had all adopted similar basic approaches and shared common principles. They agreed on the value of reviewing, enacting or updating national legal measures to ensure effective implementation of the Convention's prohibitions and enhance the security of pathogens and toxins; the positive effect of cooperation between States parties with differing legal and constitutional arrangements; the need for those in a position to do so to consider assisting others in framing and/or expanding their legislation and controls in the fields of national implementation and biosecurity; and the need for comprehensive and concrete national measures to secure pathogen collections and the control of their use for peaceful purposes. Participants considered a number of working papers submitted by States parties, of which a list was annexed to the meeting's report, as were statements, presentations and other contributions from delegations. Participants also drew on a CD-ROM-based repository of information, prepared by the Secretariat, which contained a listing of relevant national implementation measures adopted by many States parties and other relevant information that was updated in the course of the meeting. The States parties decided that their next meeting would be held in Geneva from 6 to 10 December 2004.

Expert meeting. In accordance with a decision of the Fifth Review Conference [YUN 2002, p. 516], the meeting of States parties (see above) was preceded by a preparatory expert meeting (Geneva, 18-29 August) [BWC/MSP.2003/MX/4 (Parts I & II)], which discussed issues relevant to the agenda items of the meeting of States parties. The expert meeting heard national statements and thematic presentations from delegates. On 29 August, the meeting adopted its report, to which was annexed a list of the working papers, presentations and other contributions that the experts had considered.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/469], adopted resolution 58/72 without vote [agenda item 80].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions relating to the complete and effective prohibition of bacteriological (biological) and toxin weapons and to their destruction,

Noting with satisfaction that there are one hundred and fifty States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, including all of the permanent members of the Security Council,

Bearing in mind its call upon all States parties to the Convention to participate in the implementation of the recommendations of the Review Conferences, including the exchange of information and data agreed to in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, and to provide such information and data in conformity with standardized procedure to the Secretary-General on an annual basis and no later than 15 April,

Welcoming the reaffirmation made in the Final Declaration of the Fourth Review Conference that under all circumstances the use of bacteriological (biological) and toxin weapons and their development, production and stockpiling are effectively prohibited under article I of the Convention,

Recalling the decision reached at the Fifth Review Conference to hold three annual meetings of the States parties of one week duration each year commencing in 2003 until the Sixth Review Conference and to hold a two-week meeting of experts to prepare for each meeting of the States parties,

1. Notes with satisfaction the increase in the number of States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, reaffirms the call upon all signatory States that have not yet ratified the Convention to do so without delay, and calls upon those States that have not signed the Convention to become parties thereto at an early date, thus contributing to the achievement of universal adherence to the Convention;

2. Welcomes the information and data provided to date, and reiterates its call upon all States parties to the Convention to participate in the exchange of information and data agreed to in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention;

3. Recalls the decision reached at the Fifth Review Conference, and calls upon the States parties to the Convention to participate in its implementation;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to render the necessary assistance to the depositary Governments of the Convention and to provide such services as may be required for the implementation of the decisions and recommendations of the Review Conferences, including all necessary assistance to the annual meetings of the States parties and the meetings of experts;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction".

Chemical weapons

Chemical weapons convention

In 2003, Afghanistan, Cape Verde, Guatemala and Kyrgyzstan ratified the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction (CWC); Andorra, Belize, Palau, Timor-Leste and Tonga acceded to the Convention and Sao Tome and Principe accepted it. At year's end, the total number of States parties stood at 158, with 165 signatories. CWC was adopted by the Conference on Disarmament in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 65] and entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 499].

The second special session of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention (The Hague, Netherlands, 30 April) [C-SS-2/3] adopted a decision [C-SS-2/Dec.1] on the staff tenure policy of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) (see p. 561).

The eighth session of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention (The Hague, 20-24 October) [C-8/7] considered, among other issues, the status of the Convention's implementation, fostering international cooperation for peaceful purposes in the field of chemical activities, agreements on the privileges and immunities of OPCW, ensuring the Convention's universality, and administrative and budgetary matters. The Conference adopted decisions on the extension of deadlines for destruction of category 1 chemical weapons stockpiles; understandings regarding declarations under article VI of the Convention relating to activities not prohibited; and administrative, financial and oversight matters, including OPCW's programme and budget for 2004 and other issues relevant to its work. The Conference approved procedures for revising the technical specifications for approved equipment and a plan of action regarding the implementation of obligations assumed under article VII of the Convention. It decided to hold its ninth session in November/December 2004.

Review Conference

The First Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention (The Hague, 28 April-9 May) [RC-1/5] reviewed the Convention's operation since its entry into force. The Conference considered the role of the Convention in enhancing international peace and security, measures to ensure its universality, implementation of its provisions, including general obligations and verification provisions, chemical weapons and chemical weapons production facilities, activities not prohibited under CWC, national implementation measures, assistance and protection against chemical weapons, economic and technological development, the protection of confidential information and the functioning of OPCW. On 9 May, the Conference adopted its report, which contained its agreed assessment of those issues. It adopted a Political Declaration [RC-1/3] and recommended that the OPCW Executive Council develop and implement an action plan to further encourage adherence to the Convention. Regarding the impact of science and technology on prohibited activities, the Conference noted that, although definitions contained in the Convention relating to chemical weapons and their production facilities adequately covered relevant developments, science was rapidly advancing and new chemicals might need to be assessed within the context of the schedules of chemicals set out in the Convention. The Conference also addressed the importance of effective verification of chemical weapons stockpiles and recommended that the Council intensify its study of how to further optimize the OPCW verification system, with a view to providing recommendations that could possibly take effect in 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/52 without vote [agenda item 73 (v)].

Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject of chemical weapons, in particular resolution 57/82 of 22 November 2002, adopted without a vote, in which it noted with appreciation the ongoing work to achieve the objective and purpose of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction,

Determined to achieve the effective prohibition of the development, production, acquisition, transfer, stockpiling and use of chemical weapons and their destruction,

Noting with satisfaction that since the adoption of resolution 57/82, eleven additional States have ratified the Convention or acceded to it, bringing the total number of States parties to the Convention to one hundred and fifty-eight,

1. Emphasizes that the universality of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction is fundamental to the achievement of its objective and purpose;

2. Underlines that the Convention and its implementation contribute to enhancing international peace and security, and emphasizes that its full, universal and effective implementation will contribute further to that purpose by excluding completely, for the sake of all humankind, the possibility of the use of chemical weapons;

3. Stresses that the full and effective implementation of all provisions of the Convention is in itself an important contribution to the efforts of the United Nations in the global fight against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

4. Emphasizes the necessity of universal adherence to the Convention, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Convention without delay;

5. Notes with appreciation the outcome of the First Special Session of the Conference of the States Parties to Review the Operation of the Chemical Weapons Convention, convened in The Hague from 28 April to 9 May 2003, and the Political Declaration, in which the States parties reaffirm their commitment to achieving the objective and purpose of the Convention;

6. Stresses the importance to the Convention that all possessors of chemical weapons, chemical weapons production facilities or chemical weapons development facilities, including previously declared possessor States, should be among the States parties to the Convention, and welcomes progress to that end;

7. Notes that the effective application of the verification system builds confidence in compliance with the Convention by States parties;

8. Stresses the importance of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in verifying compliance with the provisions of the Convention as well as in promoting the timely and efficient accomplishment of all its objectives;

9. Urges all States parties to the Convention to meet in full and on time their obligations under the Convention and to support the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in its implementation activities;

10. Notes the undertaking of the States parties to foster international cooperation for peaceful purposes in the field of chemical activities of the States parties and the importance of that cooperation and its contribution to the promotion of the Convention as a whole;

11. Notes with appreciation the ongoing work of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons to achieve the objective and purpose of the Convention, to ensure the full implementation of its provisions, including those for international verification of compliance with it, and to provide a forum for consultation and cooperation among States parties;

12. Welcomes the cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons within the framework of the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the Organization, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction".

Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons

In 2003, OPCW continued efforts to achieve the objective and purpose of CWC. Between the Convention's entry into force in 1997 and 31 July 2003, OPCW inventoried and verified the non-diversion of over 8 million chemical munitions and bulk agent, of which it monitored the destruction of over 22 per cent. No fewer than 70,000 metric tonnes of chemical agent, otherwise classified as exceedingly lethal weapons, had been secured, of which 11 per cent was verifiably destroyed, while over two thirds of former production facilities for those weapons had been destroyed or converted to peaceful purposes.

The OPCW Executive Council, at its thirty-second (18-21 March), thirty-third (24-26 June), thirty-fourth (23-26 September) and thirty-fifth (2-5 December) sessions, addressed issues relating to deadlines for the destruction of chemical weapons stockpiles, the conversion to peaceful purposes of related production facilities, the optimization of verification activities, the agenda of the First Review Conference of the States Parties (see p. 560) and administrative and financial questions. The Council adopted decisions on the list of new validated data for inclusion in the OPCW central analytical database and privileges and immunities agreements between OPCW and Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Cyprus and Slovakia.

Programme of Action on illicit trade in small arms

Expert meeting. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 56/24 V [YUN 2001, p. 503], the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/138], transmitted the report of the Group of Governmental Experts he had appointed to examine the feasibility of developing an international instrument to help identify and trace illicit small arms and light weapons, which completed its work during the year. The 30-member Group, at its second (Geneva, 24-28 March) and final (New York, 2-6 June) sessions, considered the nature and scope of the problem posed by the weapons and a variety of issues relating to the definition and other aspects of tracing, including the questions of marking, record-keeping and cooperation. The Group concluded that it was desirable to develop an international instrument to help clarify, develop and strengthen standards and practices with regard to marking and record-keeping on those weapons. The proposed instrument would also help to foster and promote international cooperation in tracing activities, enhance existing international and regional agreements to prevent, combat and eradicate those weapons, and strengthen States' commitments on the issue. The Group recommended that the Assembly take a decision at its fifty-eighth (2003) session to negotiate, under UN auspices, the international instrument.

The Assembly, in resolution 58/241 of 23 December (see p. 564), decided to establish an open-ended working group to negotiate the proposed instrument.

Biennial Meeting of States. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/72 [YUN 2002, p. 523], the First Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects [YUN 2001, p. 499] was convened (New York, 7-11 July) [A/CONF.192/BMS/2003/1]. The Meeting, which was facilitated by the voluntary submission of national reports by over 80 Member States, held thematic discussions on implementation, international cooperation and assistance issues. Annexed to the Meeting's report was the Chairperson's summary of the discussions. The Meeting had before it national reports regarding efforts to implement the Programme of Action [A/CONF.192/BMS/2003/CRP.1-98]; a list of initiatives undertaken at the regional and subregional levels to address the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons [A/CONF.192/BMS/2003/CRP.99]; and the report of the Group of Governmental Experts to study the feasibility of developing an international instrument to help identify and trace such weapons (see above).

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 57/70 [YUN 2002, p. 522] and 57/72 [ibid., p. 523], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/207] covering the period from July 2002 to July 2003, summarized national, subregional and regional activities undertaken in Africa, in response to States' requests for UN assistance in curbing the illicit trade in small arms and to collect and dispose of them. He also described other activities undertaken by the UN system and by States to implement the Programme of Action. The Secretary-General concluded that, during the period under review, Member States, international and regional organizations and civil society had remained strongly committed to implementing the Programme of Action, and had used the First Biennial Meeting of States (see above) to consolidate existing partnerships and to forge new ones around programmes focusing on concrete action. The UN system, through the Coordinating Action on Small Arms mechanism, relevant departments, agencies and funds, and with the support of interested partners, was determined to continue to play its role in global efforts to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons. Annexed to the report were the views of nine States on further steps they had taken to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating brokering in those weapons.

In a September report [A/58/323] on progress towards implementing the UN Millennium Declaration, as set out in Assembly resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49], the Secretary-General said small arms, which were readily available at very low cost, even in the most remote corners of the world, were continuing to be used to kill millions of people. However, with the cooperation of all countries, it should be possible to tighten export controls and facilitate the identification of the sources of illicit weapons through the use of markings.

In response to presidential statement S/PRST/2002/30 [YUN 2002, p. 521], the Secretary-General, in a December report [S/2003/1217], described initiatives undertaken to implement the recommendations contained in his 2002 report regarding the Security Council's contribution to dealing with the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in situations under its consideration [YUN 2002, p. 521]. He stated that significant progress had been achieved in implementing the recommendations on tracing illicit weapons; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration in post-conflict situations; control of the export and transit of small arms and light weapons; and transparency in armaments. Efforts were being made to implement recommendations on the Interpol Weapons and Explosives Tracking System, the small arms advisory service and links between illicit weapons and illicit exploitation of natural and other resources. Considering further recommendations, he noted that the issue of end-user certificates and illicit brokering activities had emerged as areas of common efforts by the Council and the Assembly. Although progress on the enforcement of Council resolutions and sanctions and on coercive measures against Member States that deliberately violated arms embargoes depended on the political will of Member States, further efforts by the Council were required to stimulate Member States to fulfil their obligations and to assist them in strengthening their capacity to address the issue. The implementation of the recommendation on the use of arms embargoes presented a mixed picture, for while some of those embargoes were employed to consolidate the peace process in certain conflict situations, the restriction on ammunition supply to areas of instability required more attention and vigorous action in order to achieve the desired objectives. The recommendation on the need to finance disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes through the assessed budgets for peacekeeping remained an issue of concern, as voluntary funding available for relevant activities, particularly at the early stages, was often very limited.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/58 without vote [agenda item 73].

Assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them

The General Assembly,

Considering that the illicit proliferation and circulation of and traffic in small arms impede development, constitute a threat to populations and to national and regional security and are a factor contributing to the destabilization of States,

Deeply disturbed by the magnitude of the illicit proliferation and circulation of and traffic in small arms in the States of the Sahelo-Saharan subregion,

Noting with satisfaction the conclusions of the United Nations advisory missions dispatched by the Secretary-General to the affected countries of the subregion to study the most appropriate way of halting the illicit circulation of small arms and collecting them,

Welcoming the designation of the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat as a centre for the coordination of all activities of United Nations bodies concerned with small arms,

Congratulating the Secretary-General for his report on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa, and bearing in mind the statement on small arms made by the President of the Security Council on 24 September 1999,

Welcoming the recommendations resulting from the meetings of the States of the subregion held at Banjul, Algiers, Bamako, Yamoussoukro and Niamey to establish close regional cooperation with a view to strengthening security,

Welcoming also the decision taken by the Economic Community of West African States to renew the Declaration of a Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa, adopted by the heads of State and Government of the Community at Abuja on 31 October 1998,

Recalling the Algiers Declaration adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-fifth ordinary session, held at Algiers from 12 to 14 July 1999,

Emphasizing the need to advance efforts towards wider cooperation and better coordination in the struggle against the illicit proliferation of small arms through the common understanding reached at the meeting on small arms held at Oslo on 13 and 14 July 1998 and the Brussels Call for Action adopted by the International Conference on Sustainable Disarmament for Sustainable Development, held at Brussels on 12 and 13 October 1998,

Bearing in mind the Bamako Declaration on an African Common Position on the Illicit Proliferation, Circulation and Trafficking of Small Arms and Light Weapons, adopted at Bamako on 1 December 2000,

Recalling the millennium report of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, and calling for its expeditious implementation,

Recognizing the important role that the organizations of civil society play in detection, prevention and raising public awareness, in efforts to curb the illicit traffic in small arms,

1. Notes with satisfaction the Declaration of the Ministerial Conference on Security, Stability, Development and Cooperation in Africa, held at Abuja on 8 and 9 May 2000, and encourages the Secretary-General to pursue his efforts in the context of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 49/75 G of 15 December 1994 and the recommendations of the United Nations advisory missions, aimed at curbing the illicit circulation of small arms and collecting such arms in the affected States that so request, with the support of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa and in close cooperation with the African Union;

2. Welcomes the decision of the Economic Community of West African States to renew the Declaration of a Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa for a three-year period, until October 2004, and encourages the international community to support the implementation of the moratorium;

3. Encourages the establishment in the countries of the Sahelo-Saharan subregion of national commissions to combat the illicit proliferation of small arms, and invites the international community to lend its support wherever possible to ensure the smooth functioning of the commissions;

4. Also encourages the involvement of organizations and associations of civil society in the efforts of the national commissions to combat the illicit traffic in small arms and their participation in the implementation of the moratorium on the importation, exportation and manufacture of small arms and light weapons in West Africa as well as in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

5. Further encourages cooperation among State organs, international organizations and civil society in combating the illicit traffic in small arms and supporting operations to collect the said arms in the subregions;

6. Calls upon the international community to provide technical and financial support to strengthen the capacity of civil organizations to take action to combat the illicit trade in small arms;

7. Takes note of the conclusions of the meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Economic Community of West African States, held at Bamako on 24 and 25 March 1999, on the modalities for the implementation of the Programme for Coordination and Assistance for Security and Development, and welcomes the adoption by the meeting of a plan of action;

8. Takes note also of the conclusions of the African Conference on the Implementation of the United Nations Programme of Action on Small Arms: Needs and Partnerships, held at Pretoria from 18 to 21 March 2002;

9. Invites the Secretary-General and those States and organizations that are in a position to do so to provide assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to consider the matter and to report to it at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them".

On 23 December [meeting 79], the Assembly, also on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/241 without vote [agenda item 73 (n)].

The illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects

The General Assembly,
Reaffirming its resolution 57/72 of 22 November 2002,

Recalling its resolutions 50/70 B of 12 December 1995, 52/38 J of 9 December 1997, 53/77 E and 53/77 T of 4 December 1998, 54/54 R of 1 December 1999, 54/54 V of 15 December 1999, 55/33 Q of 20 November 2000 and 56/24 V of 24 December 2001,

Emphasizing the importance of early and full implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects,

Welcoming the adoption by consensus of the report of the First Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, held in New York from 7 to 11 July 2003,

Welcoming also the efforts by Member States to submit, on a voluntary basis, national reports on their implementation of the Programme of Action,

Noting with satisfaction regional efforts being undertaken in support of the implementation of the Programme of Action,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 57/72,

Welcoming the report on the feasibility of developing an international instrument to enable States to identify and trace, in a timely and reliable manner, illicit small arms and light weapons, prepared by the Group of Governmental Experts established pursuant to resolution 56/24 V,

Conscious of its decision to convene a conference, no later than 2006, to review progress made in the implementation of the Programme of Action, the date and venue to be decided by the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session,

1. Decides to convene a United Nations conference to review progress made in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects in New York for a period of two weeks between June and July 2006;

2. Also decides that a session of the preparatory committee for the conference is to be held in New York for a period of two weeks in January 2006, and that, if necessary, a subsequent session may be held;

3. Further decides to convene in 2005 the second biennial meeting of States as stipulated in the Programme of Action to consider the national, regional and global implementation of the Programme of Action;

4. Determines that it is feasible to develop an international instrument to enable States to identify and trace, in a timely and reliable manner, illicit small arms and light weapons;

5. Notes that the character of the international instrument will be determined in the course of negotiations;

6. Also notes that the international instrument should be complementary to, and not inconsistent with, the existing commitments of States under relevant international instruments;

7. Further notes that the international instrument should take into account the national security and legal interests of States;

8. Decides to establish an open-ended working group, to meet in three sessions of two weeks each, to negotiate an international instrument to enable States to identify and trace, in a timely and reliable manner, illicit small arms and light weapons;

9. Also decides that the open-ended working group shall hold an organizational session in New York on 3 and 4 February 2004 in order to set the dates for its substantive sessions;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the open-ended working group with the assistance and services that may be required for the discharge of its tasks;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to hold broad-based consultations, within available financial resources and with any other assistance provided by Member States in a position to do so, with all Member States, interested regional and subregional organizations, international agencies and experts in the field, on further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons, taking into consideration the views of States provided to the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the outcome of his consultations;

12. Continues to encourage all initiatives to mobilize resources and expertise to promote the implementation of the Programme of Action and to provide assistance to States in its implementation;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to collate and circulate data and information provided by States on a voluntary basis, including national reports, on the implementation by those States of the Programme of Action, and encourages Member States to submit such reports;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "The illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects".

(For regional initiatives regarding implementation of the Programme of Action, see pp. 573-579.)

Convention on excessively injurious conventional weapons and Protocols

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/98 [YUN 2002, p. 525], the Secretary-General reported on the status, as at 10 July [A/58/163], of the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects and its annexed Protocols [YUN 1980, p. 76] on Non-Detectable Fragments (Protocol I); on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices, as amended on 3 May 1996 (Protocol II) [YUN 1996, p. 484]; and on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Incendiary

Weapons (Protocol III); as well as the 1995 Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV) [YUN 1995, p. 221], which took effect on 30 July 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 330].

The accessions of Burkina Faso and Honduras and the acceptance of Chile brought the number of States parties to 93 as at 31 December.

The Group of Governmental Experts established by the Second Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention [YUN 2001, p. 504] to consider the issues of explosive remnants of war, mines other than anti-personnel mines, small-calibre weapons and ammunition, and promotion of compliance with the Convention and its annexed Protocols, held its fourth (10-14 March) [CCW/GGE/IV/2], fifth (16-27 June) [CCW/GGE/V/3] and sixth (17-24 November) [CCW/GGE/VI/2] sessions, all in Geneva. The Group discussed issues relating to the weapons under consideration and working papers and presentations from delegations, international organizations and other experts. On 24 November, the Group endorsed the recommendations of its working groups on explosive remnants of war and on mines other than anti-personnel mines, which were annexed to the report on its sixth session, as was the text of a proposed protocol on explosive remnants of war, which the Group recommended for adoption by the Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention (see below). The Group agreed that intersessional work of five weeks would be undertaken in three sessions during 2004, on dates to be decided by the Meeting of States Parties, which was scheduled to be held in conjunction with the Sixth (2004) Annual Conference of the States Parties to Amended Protocol II.

The Fifth Annual Conference of the States Parties to Amended Protocol II (Geneva, 26 November) [CCW/APII/CONF.5/2] reviewed the operation and status of amended Protocol II, considered other major related issues and examined national reports received from 50 States parties. The Conference adopted a final document containing conclusions and recommendations, and an appeal to States that had not done so to accede to amended Protocol II as soon as possible. It recommended that the Secretary-General, as depositary, and the President of the Conference exercise their authority to achieve the goal of universality of the Protocol and called on the High Contracting Parties to promote wider adherence. The Sixth Annual Conference was scheduled to take place in 2004, on dates to be decided by the Meeting of the States Parties (see below).

As decided by the Meeting of the States Parties in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 525], the States parties met (Geneva, 27-28 November) [CCW/MSP/2003/3] to consider the work of the Group of Governmental Experts (see p. 565). As recommended by the Experts, the Meeting decided to adopt a new legally binding instrument—a protocol on explosive remnants of war, which would be annexed to the Convention. The Meeting also decided that the Group of Governmental Experts should continue its work in 2004 in three sessions scheduled for March, July and November, and approved new mandates for its working groups. The working group on explosive remnants of war was mandated to continue to consider the implementation of existing principles of international humanitarian law and possible preventive measures aimed at improving the design of certain types of munitions, including sub-munitions, with a view to minimizing the humanitarian risk of those munitions becoming explosive remnants of war. The working group on mines other than anti-personnel mines was charged to consider all proposals on that category of mines, with the aim of making appropriate recommendations for consideration in 2004. The Meeting decided that the Sixth Annual Conference of the States Parties would be held in November 2004 in Geneva, and that its Chairman-designate should undertake consultations during the intersessional period on possible options to promote compliance with the Convention and its annexed Protocols.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/466], adopted resolution 58/69 without vote [agenda item 77].

Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/98 of 22 November 2002 and previous resolutions referring to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects,

Recalling with satisfaction the adoption, on 10 October 1980, of the Convention, together with the Protocol on Non-Detectable Fragments (Protocol I), the Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (Protocol II) and the Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Incendiary Weapons (Protocol III), which entered into force on 2 December 1983,

Also recalling with satisfaction the adoption by the First Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, on 13 October 1995 of the Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV), and on 3 May 1996 of the amended Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (Protocol II), which entered into force on 30 July 1998 and 3 December 1998 respectively,

Welcoming the results of the Second Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, and commending the efforts of the President of the Conference,

Recalling with satisfaction the decision by the Second Review Conference, on 21 December 2001, to extend the scope of the Convention and the Protocols thereto to include armed conflicts of a non-international character,

Recalling the decision by the Second Review Conference to commission follow-up work under the oversight of the Chairman-designate of a meeting of States parties to the Convention and in this context the decision to establish an open-ended group of governmental experts with two separate coordinators on explosive remnants of war and on mines other than anti-personnel mines,

Welcoming the additional ratifications and acceptances of or accessions to the Convention and to amended Protocol II and Protocol IV, as well as accessions to the amendment of article I of the Convention, as adopted in 2001,

Recalling the role played by the International Committee of the Red Cross in the elaboration of the Convention and the Protocols thereto,

Noting that the rules of procedure of the First Annual Conference of States Parties to Amended Protocol II provide for the invitation of States not parties to the Protocol, the International Committee of the Red Cross and interested non-governmental organizations to take part in the Conference,

Welcoming the particular efforts of various international, non-governmental and other organizations in raising awareness of the humanitarian consequences of explosive remnants of war,

Welcoming also the results of the Fourth Annual Conference of States Parties to Amended Protocol II, held at Geneva on 11 December 2002,

1. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to take all measures to become parties, as soon as possible, to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects and the Protocols thereto, as amended, as well as the amendment of article I extending the scope of the Convention, with a view to achieving the widest possible adherence to these instruments at an early date, and calls upon successor States to take appropriate measures so that ultimately adherence to these instruments will be universal;

2. Calls upon all States parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to express their consent to be bound by the Protocols to the Convention;

3. Calls upon all States parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to notify the depositary at an early date of their consent to be bound by the amendment extending the scope of the Convention and the

Protocols thereto to include armed conflicts of a non-international character;

4. Notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention held on 12 and 13 December 2002 that the Working Group on Explosive Remnants of War would continue its work in 2003 with the mandate to negotiate an instrument on post-conflict remedial measures of a generic nature that would reduce the risks of explosive remnants of war and to explore and determine whether these negotiations could successfully address preventive generic measures for improving the reliability of munitions and, separate from these negotiations, to continue to consider the implementation of existing principles of international humanitarian law and to further study, on an open-ended basis, possible preventive measures aimed at improving the design of certain specific types of munitions, including sub-munitions, with a view to minimizing the humanitarian risk of these munitions' becoming explosive remnants of war;

5. Also notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention that the Working Group on Mines Other Than Anti-Personnel Mines would continue its work in 2003 with the mandate to explore the issue of mines other than anti-personnel mines, and consider the most appropriate way to reduce the risks posed by the irresponsible use of mines other than anti-personnel mines, including the possibility of concluding a negotiating mandate for a new instrument and other appropriate measures, taking into account the issues specified in the decision;

6. Further notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention that the Chairman-designate should continue to undertake consultations during the intersessional period on possible options to promote compliance with the Convention and the Protocols thereto, taking into account proposals put forward;

7. Expresses support for the work conducted by the Group of Governmental Experts, and encourages the Chairman-designate and the Group to conduct work expeditiously with a view to submitting a possible proposal for an instrument on explosive remnants of war to States parties for consideration at their meeting on 27 and 28 November 2003 and with a view to submitting to the States parties' reports on mines other than anti-personnel mines and on compliance;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to render the necessary assistance and to provide such services, including summary records, as may be required for the Meeting of States Parties to the Convention to be held on 27 and 28 November 2003, as well as for any possible continuation of work after the Meeting, should the States parties deem it appropriate;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as depositary of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, to continue to inform the General Assembly periodically, by electronic means, of ratifications and acceptances of and accessions to the Convention and the Protocols thereto;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects".

Practical disarmament

The group of interested States, established in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 531] to examine and support concrete projects of practical disarmament, met three times during 2003 to address practical disarmament measures in Kenya, Mozambique and Slovenia, and to continue its consideration of the disarmament education project conceived jointly by the Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA) and the Hague Appeal for Peace, an NGO. In so doing, the group accorded priority attention to the provisions of the Programme of Action adopted by the UN Conference on small arms [YUN 2001, p. 499]. The group also reassessed its purpose and operation after five years of activities and would continue to do so in the light of the conclusions of the first biennial meeting of States, held to consider efforts to implement the Programme of Action (see p. 562), in order to better position itself to assist Member States to implement the Programme of Action.

Disarmament Commission action. In 2003 [A/58/42], the Disarmament Commission allocated to Working Group II the item entitled "Practical confidence-building measures (CBMs) in the field of conventional arms". Based on intersessional informal consultations, the Chairman submitted a working paper, which the Group adopted as a basis for discussion, during which many delegations put forth proposals on the item. Subsequently, the Chairman submitted four revised versions of his working paper, on which the Group was unable to achieve consensus. The paper discussed the scope of CBMs, the significance of the purposes and principles of the UN Charter within the context of CBMs, the status of existing CBMs in the field of conventional arms and the way forward in addressing the subject, including measures to strengthen and improve confidence among States.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/81 [YUN 2002, p. 526], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/207], presented an overview of the activities of States, including the group of interested States and regional and subregional organizations, regarding practical disarmament measures during the period from July 2002 to July 2003. The report focused on efforts to implement the Programme of Action, and concluded that Member States, international and regional organizations and civil society had remained strongly committed to doing so.

On 8 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report and, taking into consideration the work of the group of interested States (see above), deferred consideration of the item entitled "Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures" until its fifty-ninth (2004) session and decided to consider it biennially in the future; the Assembly included the item in the provisional agenda of its 2004 session (decision 58/519).

Transparency

Conference on Disarmament. In 2003, the issue of transparency in armaments was considered during plenary meetings of the Conference on Disarmament [A/58/27], within the context of discussions on how to achieve consensus on a comprehensive programme of work. A joint proposal on the item put forth by five former Presidents of the Conference (see p. 531) had envisaged, among other things, the appointment of a special coordinator to seek the views of Conference members on the most appropriate way to deal with transparency in armaments. However, owing to the persisting lack of agreement over the programme of work, the Conference did not establish or re-establish any mechanism to deal with the subject.

UN Register of Conventional Arms

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/75 [YUN 2002, p. 528], the Secretary-General submitted the eleventh annual report on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms [A/58/203 & Corr.1,2 & Add.1], established in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 75] to promote enhanced levels of transparency on arms transfers.

The report presented information provided by 119 Governments on imports and exports in 2002 in the seven categories of conventional arms (battle tanks, armoured combat vehicles, large-calibre artillery systems, attack helicopters, combat aircraft, warships and missiles and missile launchers). Governments also provided information on procurement from national production and military holdings, on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development and on transparency measures related to weapons of mass destruction. The report indicated a slight reduction in the number of submissions compared with the previous year.

In response to the Assembly's request in resolution 57/75 that the Secretary-General implement the recommendations contained in the 2000 report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the continuing operation and further development of the Register [YUN 2000, p. 524], the report outlined regional activities undertaken by the Secretariat during the year, through DDA, in collaboration with Governments and regional organizations, to enhance familiarity and greater participation in the Register.

Group of Governmental Experts. In response to resolution 57/75, the Secretary-General transmitted an August report [A/58/274] on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development, prepared by the Group of Governmental Experts he had appointed and which had concluded its work in three sessions held between March and August (New York). The report summarized periodic reviews of the Register undertaken since its establishment, analysed available data on reporting, including reporting patterns among regions, assessed the Register's operation and examined in some detail issues related to its further development, including the expansion of its scope and technical adjustments to the seven categories of arms covered. The Group concluded that, although the Register had made significant progress since its inception and had entered a period of increased participation, renewed efforts were required to ensure regular reporting and progress towards universal participation, as well as continued attention to its further development and increased relevance. Wide variations in the level of participation among and within some regions called for targeted regional and subregional efforts to encourage wider participation. The Group's recommendations, designed to enhance the effectiveness of the Register, included technical adjustments to two of the seven categories of conventional arms covered. In that context, it proposed the lowering of the reporting threshold for artillery pieces from 100- to 75-millimetre-calibre systems, including man-portable air-defence systems in the category of missiles and missile launchers. The Group addressed a number of other recommendations to Member States towards achieving the shared goals of the instrument and proposed that the General Assembly consider providing additional resources to strengthen the Secretariat's role in that regard. In December, the Assembly endorsed the report and the Group's recommendations and decided to adapt the Register's scope in conformity with the Group's recommendations (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/54 by recorded vote (150-0-27) [agenda item 73 (q)].

Transparency in armaments

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 46/36 L of 9 December 1991, 47/52 L of 15 December 1992, 48/75 E of 16 December 1993, 49/75 C of 15 December 1994, 50/70 D of 12 December 1995, 51/45 H of 10 December 1996, 52/38 R of 9 December 1997, 53/77 V of 4 December

1998, 54/54 O of 1 December 1999, 55/33 U of 20 November 2000, 56/24 Q of 29 November 2001 and 57/75 of 22 November 2002 entitled "Transparency in armaments",

Continuing to take the view that an enhanced level of transparency in armaments contributes greatly to confidence-building and security among States and that the establishment of the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms constitutes an important step forward in the promotion of transparency in military matters,

Welcoming the consolidated report of the Secretary-General on the Register, which includes the returns of Member States for 2002,

Welcoming also the response of Member States to the request contained in paragraphs 9 and 10 of resolution 46/36 L to provide data on their imports and exports of arms, as well as available background information regarding their military holdings, procurement through national production and relevant policies,

Stressing that the continuing operation of the Register and its further development should be reviewed in order to secure a Register that is capable of attracting the widest possible participation,

1. Reaffirms its determination to ensure the effective operation of the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms, as provided for in paragraphs 7 to 10 of resolution 46/36 L;

2. Endorses the report of the Secretary-General on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development and the recommendations ensuing from the consensus report of the 2003 group of governmental experts contained therein;

3. Decides to adapt the scope of the Register in conformity with the recommendations contained in the 2003 report of the Secretary-General;

4. Calls upon Member States, with a view to achieving universal participation, to provide the Secretary-General by 31 May annually with the requested data and information for the Register, including nil reports if appropriate, on the basis of resolutions 46/36 L and 47/52 L, the recommendations contained in paragraph 64 of the 1997 report of the Secretary-General on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development, the recommendations contained in paragraph 94 of the 2000 report of the Secretary-General and the appendices and annexes thereto as well as the 2003 report of the Secretary-General;

5. Invites Member States in a position to do so, pending further development of the Register, to provide additional information on procurement from national production and military holdings and to make use of the "Remarks" column in the standardized reporting form to provide additional information such as types or models;

6. Reaffirms its decision, with a view to further development of the Register, to keep the scope of and participation in the Register under review;

7. Recalls, to that end, its request to Member States to provide the Secretary-General with their views on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development and on transparency measures related to weapons of mass destruction;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to implement the recommendations contained in his 2003 report on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development and to ensure that sufficient resources are made available for the Secretariat to operate and maintain the Register;

9. Reiterates its call upon all Member States to cooperate at the regional and subregional levels, taking fully into account the specific conditions prevailing in the region or subregion, with a view to enhancing and coordinating international efforts aimed at increased openness and transparency in armaments;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on progress made in implementing the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/54:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lesotho, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Mozambique, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Algeria, Bahrain, China, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Egypt, Iran, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Morocco, Myanmar, Oman, Qatar, Rwanda, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, Yemen.

The First Committee adopted by separate recorded votes paragraph 2 (138 to none, with 22 abstentions); paragraph 3, together with the last nine words of paragraph 4 ("as well as the 2003 report of the Secretary-General") and paragraph 8 (138 to none, with 22 abstentions); and paragraph 4 (137 to none, with 22 abstentions). The Assembly retained those paragraphs by separate recorded votes of 153 to none, with 23 abstentions; 152 to none, with 22 abstentions; and 152 to none, with 22 abstentions, respectively.

Also on 8 December [meeting 71], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/42 without vote [agenda item 73 (i)].

National legislation on transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation are essential for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Recalling that effective national control of the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, including those transfers that could contribute to proliferation activities, is an important tool for achieving those objectives,

Recalling also that the States parties to the international disarmament and non-proliferation treaties have undertaken to facilitate the fullest possible exchange of materials, equipment and technological information for peaceful purposes, in accordance with the provisions of those treaties,

Considering that the exchange of national legislation, regulations and procedures on the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology contributes to mutual understanding and confidence among Member States,

Convinced that such an exchange would be beneficial to Member States that are in the process of developing such legislation,

Reaffirming the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence in accordance with Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Invites Member States that are in a position to do so to enact or improve national legislation, regulations and procedures to exercise effective control over the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, while ensuring that such legislation, regulations and procedures are consistent with the obligations of States parties under international treaties;

2. Encourages Member States to provide, on a voluntary basis, information to the Secretary-General on their national legislation, regulations and procedures on the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, as well as the changes therein, and requests the Secretary-General to make this information accessible to Member States;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "National legislation on transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology".

Transparency of military expenditures

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/14 [YUN 2001, p. 508], the Secretary-General, in August, presented reports from 75 Member States on military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data were available [A/58/202 & Add.1,2]. The reporting instrument was that recommended by the Assembly in resolution 35/142 B [YUN 1980, p. 88].

The report noted that DDA, in cooperation with Canada, Germany, Japan and the Netherlands, organized regional workshops on transparency in armaments devoted to the Register of Conventional Arms and the standardized instrument for reporting military expenditures. It also published a booklet devoted to the standardized instrument, which contained basic information regarding global participation in the instrument since 1981.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/451], adopted resolution 58/28 (as orally amended) without vote [agenda item 62 (b)].

Objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/72 of 4 December 1998, 54/43 of 1 December 1999 and 56/14 of 29 November 2001 on objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures,

Also recalling its resolution 35/142 B of 12 December 1980, which introduced the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures, and its resolutions 48/62 of 16 December 1993, 49/66 of 15 December 1994, 51/38 of 10 December 1996 and 52/32 of 9 December 1997, calling upon all Member States to participate in it, and its resolution 47/54 B of 9 December 1992, endorsing the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters and inviting Member States to provide the Secretary-General with relevant information regarding their implementation,

Noting that since then, national reports on military expenditures and on the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters have been submitted by a number of Member States belonging to different geographic regions,

Convinced that the improvement of international relations forms a sound basis for promoting further openness and transparency in all military matters,

Also convinced that transparency in military matters is an essential element for building a climate of trust and confidence between States worldwide and that a better flow of objective information on military matters can help to relieve international tension and is therefore an important contribution to conflict prevention,

Noting the role of the standardized reporting system, as instituted through its resolution 35/142 B, as an important instrument to enhance transparency in military matters,

Conscious that the value of the standardized reporting system would be enhanced by a broader participation of Member States,

Welcoming, therefore, the report of the Secretary-General on ways and means to implement the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters, including, in particular, how to strengthen and broaden participation in the standardized reporting system.

Recalling that the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters recommended certain areas for further consideration, such as the improvement of the standardized reporting system,

Noting the efforts of several regional organizations to promote transparency of military expenditures, including standardized annual exchanges of relevant information among their member States,

1. Calls upon Member States to report annually, by 30 April, to the Secretary-General their military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data are available, using, preferably and to the extent possible, the reporting instrument as recommended in its resolution 35/142 B or, as appropriate, any other format developed in conjunction with similar reporting on military expenditures to other international or regional organizations, and, in the same context, encourages Member States to submit nil returns, if appropriate;

2. Recommends the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters to all Member States for implementation, fully taking into account specific political, military and other conditions prevailing in a region, on the basis of initiatives and with the agreement of the States of the region concerned;

3. Encourages relevant international bodies and regional organizations to promote transparency of military expenditures and to enhance complementarity among reporting systems, taking into account the particular characteristics of each region, and to consider the possibility of an exchange of information with the United Nations;

4. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, within available resources:

(a) To continue the practice of sending an annual note verbale to Member States requesting the submission of data to the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures, together with the reporting format and related instructions, and to publish in a timely fashion in appropriate United Nations media the due date for transmitting data on military expenditures;

(b) To circulate annually the reports on military expenditures as received from Member States;

(c) To continue consultations with relevant international bodies, within existing resources, with a view to ascertaining requirements for adjusting the present instrument, with a view to encouraging wider participation, and to make recommendations, based on the outcome of those consultations and taking into account the views of Member States, on necessary changes to the content and structure of the standardized reporting system;

(d) To encourage relevant international bodies and organizations to promote transparency of military expenditures and to consult with those bodies and organizations with emphasis on examining possibilities for enhancing complementarity among international and regional reporting systems and for exchanging related information between those bodies and the United Nations;

(e) To encourage the United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament in Africa, in Asia and the Pacific, and in Latin America and the Caribbean to assist Member States in their regions in enhancing their knowledge of the standardized reporting system;

(f) To promote international and regional/sub-regional symposiums and training seminars to explain the purpose of the standardized reporting system and to give relevant technical instructions;

(g) To report on experiences gained during such symposiums and training seminars;

6. Encourages Member States:

(a) To inform the Secretary-General about possible problems with the standardized reporting system and their reasons for not submitting the requested data;

(b) To continue to provide the Secretary-General, in time for deliberation by the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, with their views and suggestions on ways and means to strengthen and broaden participation in the standardized reporting system, including necessary changes to its content and structure;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures".

Verification

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/15 [YUN 2001, p. 509], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/58/128] updating developments since 2001 on verification measures. The report contained the views of two Member States (Bolivia, Mexico) on the recommendations contained in the expert study on verification in all its aspects, including the UN role in verification [YUN 1995, p. 233].

On 8 December, the Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session the item entitled "Verification in all its aspects, including the role of the United Nations in the field of verification" (decision 58/515).

Anti-personnel mines

1997 Convention

The number of States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction (Mine-Ban Convention), which was adopted in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 503] and entered into force in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 498], totalled 141 as at 31 December. During the year, 11 States ratified or acceded to the Convention.

The Fifth Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention (Bangkok, Thailand, 15-19 September) [APLC/MSP.5/2003/5], convened pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/74 [YUN 2002, p. 530], reviewed the Convention's general status and operation; victim assistance and socio-economic reintegration; mine clearance; mine-risk education and related technologies; the destruction of stockpiled anti-personnel mines; and the development of technologies to clear anti-personnel mines. The Meeting noted that over 110 States parties no longer stockpiled anti-personnel mines, considerable areas of mined land had been cleared over the past year, casualty rates had been reduced in several of the world's most mine-affected areas and more and better efforts were being made to assist landmine victims. However, the States parties acknowledged that challenges remained in achieving the Convention's humanitarian aims and expressed determination to sharpen their focus on areas most directly related to those aims. The Meeting endorsed the final reports of the Standing Committees (Geneva, February and May), as annexed to its report, and agreed to hold the Convention's First Review Conference in Nairobi, Kenya, from 29 November to 3 December 2004, with preparatory meetings in February and June 2004. It welcomed the President's action programme, also annexed to the report, as a practical means of focusing the collective efforts of States parties and other relevant actors on achieving the Convention's humanitarian aims in the period leading up to the Conference.

The Meeting adopted the Bangkok Declaration, in which States reaffirmed their commitment to the total eradication of anti-personnel mines, called on Governments and people to join in meeting the challenges of mine action and urged non-State actors to embrace the international norm established by the Convention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/53 by recorded vote (153-0-23) [agenda item 73 (b)].

Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/54 B of 1 December 1999, 55/33 V of 20 November 2000, 56/24 M of 29 November 2001 and 57/74 of 22 November 2002,

Reaffirming its determination to put an end to the suffering and casualties caused by anti-personnel mines, which kill or maim hundreds of people every week, mostly innocent and defenceless civilians and especially children, obstruct economic development and reconstruction, inhibit the repatriation of refugees and internally displaced persons, and have other severe consequences for years after emplacement,

Believing it necessary to do the utmost to contribute in an efficient and coordinated manner to facing the challenge of removing anti-personnel mines placed throughout the world, and to assure their destruction,

Wishing to do the utmost in ensuring assistance for the care and rehabilitation, including the social and economic reintegration, of mine victims,

Welcoming the entry into force, on 1 March 1999, of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction, and noting with satisfaction the work undertaken to implement the Convention and the substantial progress made towards addressing the global landmine problem,

Recalling the First Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, held at Maputo from 3 to 7 May 1999, and the reaffirmation made in the Maputo Declaration of a commitment to the total eradication of anti-personnel mines,

Recalling also the Second Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, held at Geneva from 11 to 15 September 2000, and the Declaration of the Second Meeting of States Parties, reaffirming the commitment to implement completely and fully all provisions of the Convention,

Recalling further the Third Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, held at Managua from 18 to 21 September 2001, and the Declaration of the Third Meeting of States Parties, reaffirming the unwavering commitment both to the total eradication of anti-personnel mines and to addressing the insidious and inhumane effects of those weapons,

Recalling the Fourth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, held at Geneva from 16 to 20 September 2002, and the Declaration of the Fourth Meeting of States Parties reaffirming the commitment of the States parties to intensify further their efforts in those areas most directly related to the core humanitarian objectives of the Convention,

Recalling also the Fifth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, held at Bangkok from 15 to 19 September 2003, and the Declaration of the Fifth Meeting of States Parties committing the States parties, one year before their First Review Conference, to pursue, with renewed vigour, efforts to clear mined areas, assist victims, destroy stockpiled anti-personnel mines and promote universal adherence to the Convention,

Noting with satisfaction that additional States have ratified or acceded to the Convention, bringing the total number of States that have formally accepted the obligations of the Convention to one hundred and forty-one,

Emphasizing the desirability of attracting the adherence of all States to the Convention, and determined to work strenuously towards the promotion of its universalization,

Noting with regret that anti-personnel mines continue to be used in conflicts around the world, causing human suffering and impeding post-conflict development,

1. Invites all States that did not sign the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction to accede to it without delay;

2. Urges all States that signed but have not ratified the Convention to ratify it without delay;

3. Stresses the importance of the full and effective implementation of, and compliance with, the Convention;

4. Urges all States parties to provide the Secretary-General with complete and timely information as required under article 7 of the Convention, in order to promote transparency and compliance with the Convention;

5. Invites all States that have not ratified the Convention or acceded to it to provide, on a voluntary basis, information to make global mine action efforts more effective;

6. Renews its call upon all States and other relevant parties to work together to promote, support and advance the care, rehabilitation and social and economic reintegration of mine victims, mine risk education programmes, and the removal of anti-personnel mines placed throughout the world and the assurance of their destruction;

7. Invites and encourages all interested States, the United Nations, other relevant international organizations or institutions, regional organizations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and relevant non-governmental organizations to participate in the programme of intersessional work established at the First Meeting of States Parties to the Convention and further developed at subsequent Meetings of the States parties;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with article 12, paragraph 1, of the Convention, to undertake the preparations necessary to convene the Convention's First Review Conference, at Nairobi from 29 November to 3 December 2004;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General, on behalf of States parties and in accordance with article 12, paragraph 3, of the Convention, to invite States not parties to the Convention, as well as the United Nations, other relevant international organizations or institutions, regional organizations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and relevant non-governmental organizations to attend the First Review Conference as observers, and urges participation at the highest possible level in a high-level segment to be held at the end of the Review Conference;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/53:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Latvia, Lesotho, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Mozambique, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Regional and other approaches to disarmament

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/77 [YUN 2002,

p. 537], the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/130], presented the views of one State (Colombia) regarding conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels.

Africa

In 2003, African States maintained efforts to implement the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on small arms [YUN 2001, p. 499]. A regional framework in that regard continued to be provided by the Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa, adopted by the Economic Community of West African States in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 537] and renewed in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 511]. During the year, an extensive disarmament campaign across the region resulted in the destruction of a great number of small arms and light weapons. Eleven States had established national commissions on small arms and light weapons, although some were not fully operational. The Moratorium's implementation was also facilitated by a number of other factors and by disarmament initiatives launched by the Programme for Coordination and Assistance for Security and Development, established by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) to address security challenges that were linked to small arms proliferation. Efforts were under way to harmonize legislation in the region, enhance border patrols and establish efficient national registration and relevant arms control schemes.

Member States of the Southern African Development Community continued efforts to promote the ratification of the Community's 2001 Protocol on the Control of Firearms, Ammunition and Other Related Materials, which outlined minimum standards for national legislation and committed regional states to harmonize firearms control legislation.

Standing Advisory Committee

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/88 [YUN 2002, p. 532], the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/177], described the activities of the Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa. He observed that, although the Committee continued to play a vital role in promoting peace and security in the region, much remained to be done in order to establish conditions for lasting peace, disarmament and development. It was incumbent on Committee members to strive to become the driving force in that regard, but continuing international support was imperative.

At its eighteenth (Bangui, Central African Republic, 26-30 August 2002) and nineteenth (Brazzaville, Congo, 14-17 May 2003) [A/57/823-S/2003/610] ministerial meetings, the Committee reviewed the geopolitical and security situation of its member States, as well as progress made in implementing its previous decisions and recommendations. It organized a subregional seminar on the implementation in Central Africa of the 2001 Programme of Action on small arms, adopting a two-year programme of activities at the national and subregional levels, which addressed priority areas such as the establishment of national commissions or structures to coordinate national policies to combat the proliferation of small arms and light weapons, and their collection and destruction.

In November, Equatorial Guinea transmitted the report of the Committee's twentieth ministerial meeting (Malabo, 27-31 October) [A/58/360-S/2003/1075]. The Committee continued to consider its member States' geopolitical and security situation, security cooperation among them and its previous recommendations and decisions. It also considered the activities of other relevant subregional organizations and adopted its 2003-2004 work programme.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/463], adopted resolution 58/65 without vote [agenda item 74 (b)].

Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the purposes and principles of the United Nations and its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 43/78 H and 43/85 of 7 December 1988, 44/21 of 15 November 1989, 45/58 M of 4 December 1990, 46/37 B of 6 December 1991, 47/53 F of 15 December 1992, 48/76 A of 16 December 1993, 49/76 C of 15 December 1994, 50/71 B of 12 December 1995, 51/46 C of 10 December 1996, 52/39 B of 9 December 1997, 53/78 A of 4 December 1998, 54/55 A of 1 December 1999, 55/34 B of 20 November 2000, 56/25 A of 29 November 2001 and 57/88 of 22 November 2002,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken at the initiative and with the participation of all States concerned and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability and to international peace and security,

Convinced that the resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of the developing countries,

Recalling the guidelines for general and complete disarmament adopted at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Convinced that development can be achieved only in a climate of peace, security and mutual confidence both within and among States,

Bearing in mind the establishment by the Secretary-General on 28 May 1992 of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, the purpose of which is to encourage arms limitation, disarmament, non-proliferation and development in the subregion,

Recalling the Brazzaville Declaration on Cooperation for Peace and Security in Central Africa, the Bata Declaration for the Promotion of Lasting Democracy, Peace and Development in Central Africa, and the Yaoundé Declaration on Peace, Security and Stability in Central Africa,

Bearing in mind resolutions 1196(1998) and 1197 (1998), adopted by the Security Council on 16 and 18 September 1998 respectively, following its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the capacity for conflict prevention and peacekeeping in Africa,

Recalling the decision of the fourth ministerial meeting of the Standing Advisory Committee in favour of establishing, under the auspices of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, a subregional centre for human rights and democracy in Central Africa at Yaoundé,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on regional confidence-building measures, which deals with the activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa in the period since the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 57/88;

2. Reaffirms its support for efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels in order to ease tensions and conflicts in Central Africa and to further peace, stability and sustainable development in the subregion;

3. Also reaffirms its support for the programme of work of the Standing Advisory Committee adopted at the organizational meeting of the Committee, held at Yaoundé from 27 to 31 July 1992;

4. Notes with satisfaction the progress made by the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee in implementing the programme of activities for the period 2002-2003, in particular by:

(a) Holding a seminar on the implementation in the Central African region of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects at Brazzaville from 12 to 14 May 2003;

(b) Holding the nineteenth ministerial meeting of the Standing Advisory Committee at Brazzaville from 14 to 17 May 2003;

(c) Holding the "Biyongho 2003" military peace-keeping exercise at Franceville, Gabon, from 21 to 28 July 2003;

(d) Holding the twentieth ministerial meeting of the Standing Advisory Committee at Malabo from 27 to 31 October 2003;

5. Emphasizes the importance of providing the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with the essential support they need to carry out the full programme of activities which they adopted at their ministerial meetings;

6. Welcomes the creation of a mechanism for the promotion, maintenance and consolidation of peace and security in Central Africa, to be known as the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa, by the Conference of Heads of State and Government of the member countries of the Economic Community of Central African States, held at Yaoundé on 25 February 1999, and requests the Secretary-General to give his full support to the effective realization of that important mechanism;

7. Emphasizes the need to make the early warning mechanism in Central Africa operational so that it will serve, on the one hand, as an instrument for analysing and monitoring political situations in the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with a view to preventing the outbreak of future armed conflicts and, on the other hand, as a technical body through which the member States will carry out the programme of work of the Committee, adopted at its organizational meeting held at Yaoundé in 1992, and requests the Secretary-General to provide it with the assistance necessary for it to function properly;

8. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to continue to provide their full assistance for the proper functioning of the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa;

9. Requests the Secretary-General, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1197(1998), to provide the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with the necessary support for the implementation and smooth functioning of the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa and the early warning mechanism;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to support the establishment of a network of parliamentarians with a view to the creation of a subregional parliament in Central Africa;

11. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue to provide increased assistance to the countries of Central Africa for coping with the problems of refugees and displaced persons in their territories;

12. Thanks the Secretary-General for having established the Trust Fund for the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa;

13. Appeals to Member States and to governmental and non-governmental organizations to make additional voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund for the implementation of the programme of work of the Standing Advisory Committee;

14. Thanks the Secretary-General for sending a multidisciplinary assessment mission to the Central African region from 8 to 22 June 2003 for the purposes of identifying priority needs and challenges confronting the subregion, in particular focusing on issues of peace, security, economic development, humanitarian questions, human rights and HIV/AIDS;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with assistance to ensure that they are able to carry on their efforts;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

17. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa".

Asia and the Pacific

In 2003, regional security and stability issues in Asia and the Pacific continued to be addressed by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, its Regional Forum (ARF) and the six-member Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) (China, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan), founded in 2001 as a multilateral platform for strengthening regional peace, security and stability. At a seminar (Bali, Indonesia, February), organized by DDA in collaboration with Japan and Indonesia, regional States exchanged views on key issues relating to the implementation of the 2001 Programme of Action on small arms. Also in February in Bali, a meeting focused on transparency of armaments, aimed at encouraging the further participation of the regional States in the UN Register of Conventional Arms (see p. 568) and in the standardized instrument for reporting military expenditures (see p. 570). In March, ARF organized, in collaboration with other regional bodies, a workshop on counter-terrorism measures. In May, the heads of State of SCO countries adopted a declaration (Moscow, 29 May) [A/58/94-S/2003/642], highlighting the organization's potential in maintaining regional and global peace and stability. The Pacific Island Forum (Auckland, New Zealand, 12-19 August) considered issues relating to the collective security of its members, such as weapons control legislation, the shipment of radioactive materials and the status of the South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Treaty (see p. 557). Asian Senior-level Talks on Non-Proliferation (Tokyo, Japan, 13 November) considered ways to prevent the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs), their delivery systems and related materials and technology.

Europe

During the year, regional security and disarmament issues of concern to European countries related mainly to small arms and to the proliferation of WMDs. In addressing those issues, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) urged its member States to focus on the illicit trafficking and uncontrolled spread of conventional weaponry, including small arms and light weapons, the proliferation of WMDs and the danger of criminals and terrorist organizations gaining access to them. Following a March decision of the OSCE Permanent Council, which encouraged assistance and expert advice to its participating States in dealing with small arms-related problems in post-conflict situations, the organization's Forum for Security Cooperation helped Belarus destroy its surplus inventory of those weapons. Also in March, OSCE collaborated with the International Organization for Migration to initiate a disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programme in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Further collaboration between DDA, OSCE and Slovenia facilitated the convening of a conference on the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects in South-Eastern Europe (Brdo pri Kranju, Slovenia, 11-12 March). On 27 May, a NATO partnership for peace project in Ukraine culminated in the destruction of some 400,000 of an estimated 7 million anti-personnel landmines in the country. NATO's Verification Coordinating Committee, the organization's main decision-making body on matters relating to conventional arms control implementation and verification coordination, at its annual seminar (Brussels, Belgium, 26-28 May), addressed the practical aspects of the ongoing implementation of the 1990 Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE Treaty) [YUN 1990, p. 79]. On 23 July, the OSCE Forum for Security Cooperation, taking into account the concern expressed by its participating States regarding the potential access of terrorist groups to man-portable air-defence systems, urged participating States to propose projects for tackling the issue; the OSCE Forum continued to monitor and enhance the implementation of the related OSCE Code of Conduct on Politico-Military Aspects for Security. Also on 23 July, the EU adopted a common position on the control of arms brokering, aimed at preventing the circumvention of UN, EU or OSCE embargoes on arms exports. On 29 July, the EU and NATO announced a common vision for the future of the Western Balkans in an agreement: "Framework for an Enhanced NATO-EU Dialogue and a Concerted Approach on Security and Stability in the Western Balkans", which covered areas relating to the enhancement of security and stability. A weapons for development project initiated by DDA and UNDP in Albania's Gramsh district continued to encourage the local community to collect and voluntarily dispose of surrendered weapons in exchange for UN-sponsored development projects. The EU continued to implement its 1998 Code of Conduct for Arms Exports [YUN 1998, p. 540] and, in November, agreed on a "User's Guide" clarifying members' responsibilities in sharing information on denials, and, on 17 November, it updated the Common Military List of Equipment covered by the Code. In follow-up action to a commitment to develop a coherent EU strategy to address the threat of proliferation, EU member States (Brussels, 12 December) adopted a security strategy to enable them to deal better with global threats and challenges and to address the proliferation of WMDs. The 1999 Stability Pact for South-Eastern Europe [YUN 1999, p. 397] continued efforts to promote stability in the subregion; its Working Table III, dedicated to addressing security issues, advocated enhanced regional co-operation in tackling multiple challenges in the area of security sector reform and encouraged the regional States to improve their technical standards on issues relating to small arms and light weapons. During the year, the Regional Arms Control Verification and Implementation Assistance Centre (a Stability Pact project) organized regional seminars on disarmament and security issues, and, in cooperation with NATO, conducted training courses to enable designated individuals to serve as inspectors and/or escorts, in accordance with the verification regime of the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina [YUN 1995, p. 544]. The South-Eastern Europe Clearing House for the Control of Small Arms and Light Weapons, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 534], became operational and focused on the provision of immediate assistance to initiatives relating to small arms and light weapons. The Clearing House conducted five projects on the physical destruction of weapons and ammunitions in Bulgaria and in Serbia and Montenegro. Overall, about 41,000 weapons and over 813,777 rounds of small arms ammunition were destroyed.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/55 without vote [agenda item 73].

Promotion at the regional level in the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe of the United Nations programme of action on the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/70 B of 12 December 1995, 52/38 J of 9 December 1997, 53/77 T of 4 De- ember 1998, 54/54 R of 1 December 1999, 54/54 V of 15 December 1999 and 55/33 Q of 20 November 2000,

Also recalling the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects adopted on 20 July 2001, which encourages in particular regional organizations to take initiatives to promote its implementation,

Welcoming the results of the First Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, held in New York from 7 to 11 July 2003,

Convinced of the importance of national, regional and international measures to combat trafficking and illicit trade in small arms, including those measures that could be adapted to regional approaches,

Acknowledging the capacity of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, as a regional arrangement under Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations, to provide a substantial contribution at the regional level to the process in the United Nations on combating the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects, taking into account regional particularities,

Taking note of the adoption on 21 November 2000 of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe document on small arms and light weapons,

Also taking note of the work done so far within the framework of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe to develop best practice guides related to the control of small arms and light weapons, and acknowledging that a handbook compiling these best practice guides could also be useful to other Member States in their efforts to implement the United Nations programme of action with a view to combating the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons,

1. Reaffirms the importance of measures to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects, including ongoing efforts at the regional and subregional levels;

2. Commends the progress that has already been made in this regard by organizations in various regions and subregions and, in this context, the progress made so far in drawing up best practice guides to prevent, combat and eliminate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons among Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe participating States, and the hope expressed in it to see this process rapidly come to a positive conclusion;

3. Invites all Member States that have not yet done so to examine the possibility of developing and adopting regional and subregional measures, as appropriate, to combat the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects and contributing to international peace and security.

Latin America

The General Assembly of the Organization of American States (OAS) (Santiago, Chile, 8-10 June) adopted resolutions relating to peace, arms control and disarmament, which focused in particular on the vision of the hemisphere as an anti-personnel landmine-free zone, consolidation of the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) (see p. 555), inter-American support for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty and the development of an inter-American strategy to combat threats to cybersecurity. In October, the OAS Special Conference on Security (Mexico City, 27-28 October) adopted a declaration on security in the Americas, which highlighted new security threats and challenges. It also reaffirmed regional States' commitment to strengthen hemispheric peace through conflict prevention and peaceful settlement of disputes, to arms control, disarmament and the non-proliferation of all categories of WMDs, and to the full implementation by all States parties of the Biological and Chemical Weapons Conventions (see p. 558).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/38 without vote [agenda item 73 (r)].

Regional disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/58 P of 4 December 1990, 46/36 I of 6 December 1991, 47/52 J of 9 December 1992, 48/75 I of 16 December 1993, 49/75 N of 15 December 1994, 50/70 K of 12 December 1995, 51/45 K of 10 December 1996, 52/38 P of 9 December 1997, 53/77 O of 4 December 1998, 54/54 N of 1 December 1999, 55/33 O of 20 November 2000, 56/24 H of 29 November 2001 and 57/76 of 22 November 2002 on regional disarmament,

Believing that the efforts of the international community to move towards the ideal of general and complete disarmament are guided by the inherent human desire for genuine peace and security, the elimination of the danger of war and the release of economic, intellectual and other resources for peaceful pursuits,

Affirming the abiding commitment of all States to the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations in the conduct of their international relations,

Noting that essential guidelines for progress towards general and complete disarmament were adopted at the tenth special session of the General Assembly,

Taking note of the guidelines and recommendations for regional approaches to disarmament within the context of global security adopted by the Disarmament Commission at its 1993 substantive session,

Welcoming the prospects of genuine progress in the field of disarmament engendered in recent years as a result of negotiations between the two super-Powers,

Taking note of the recent proposals for disarmament at the regional and subregional levels,

Recognizing the importance of confidence-building measures for regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that endeavours by countries to promote regional disarmament, taking into account the specific characteristics of each region and in accordance with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments, would enhance the security of all States and would thus contribute to international peace and security by reducing the risk of regional conflicts,

1. Stresses that sustained efforts are needed, within the framework of the Conference on Disarmament and under the umbrella of the United Nations, to make progress on the entire range of disarmament issues;

2. Affirms that global and regional approaches to disarmament complement each other and should therefore be pursued simultaneously to promote regional and international peace and security;

3. Calls upon States to conclude agreements, wherever possible, for nuclear non-proliferation, disarmament and confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels;

4. Welcomes the initiatives towards disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation and security undertaken by some countries at the regional and subregional levels;

5. Supports and encourages efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels to ease regional tensions and to further disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation measures at the regional and subregional levels;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Regional disarmament".

On 8 December [meeting 71], the Assembly, also on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/39 by recorded vote (172-1-1) [agenda item 73 (d)].

Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/75 J of 16 December 1993, 49/75 O of 15 December 1994, 50/70 L of 12 December 1995, 51/45 Q of 10 December 1996, 52/38 Q of 9 December 1997, 53/77 P of 4 December 1998, 54/54 M of 1 December 1999, 55/33 P of 20 November 2000, 56/24 I of 29 November 2001 and 57/77 of 22 November 2002,

Recognizing the crucial role of conventional arms control in promoting regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that conventional arms control needs to be pursued primarily in the regional and subregional contexts since most threats to peace and security in the post-cold-war era arise mainly among States located in the same region or subregion,

Aware that the preservation of a balance in the defence capabilities of States at the lowest level of armaments would contribute to peace and stability and should be a prime objective of conventional arms control,

Desirous of promoting agreements to strengthen regional peace and security at the lowest possible level of armaments and military forces,

Noting with particular interest the initiatives taken in this regard in different regions of the world, in particular the commencement of consultations among a number of Latin American countries and the proposals for conventional arms control made in the context of South Asia, and recognizing, in the context of this subject, the relevance and value of the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe, which is a cornerstone of European security,

Believing that militarily significant States and States with larger military capabilities have a special responsibility in promoting such agreements for regional security,

Believing also that an important objective of conventional arms control in regions of tension should be to prevent the possibility of military attack launched by surprise and to avoid aggression,

1. Decides to give urgent consideration to the issues involved in conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to consider the formulation of principles that can serve as a framework for regional agreements on conventional arms control, and looks forward to a report of the Conference on this subject;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in the meantime, to seek the views of Member States on the subject and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/39:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: India.

Abstaining: Bhutan.

Also on 8 December [meeting 71], on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], the Assembly adopted resolution 58/43 by recorded vote (73-48-46) [agenda item 73].

Confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 entitled "Prevention of armed conflict", in which it calls upon Member States to settle their disputes by peaceful means, as set out in Chapter VI of the Charter, inter alia, by any procedures adopted by the parties, including the most effective use of the International Court of Justice,

Recalling also the Security Council resolutions relating to the prevention of armed conflict, and noting all Security Council presidential statements relating to this matter,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken at the initiative and with the participation of all States concerned and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability,

Convinced that resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of the developing countries,

Recognizing the need for meaningful dialogue among States concerned in the regions of tension to avert conflict,

Welcoming the peace processes already initiated by States concerned to resolve their disputes through peaceful means bilaterally or through mediation, inter alia, by third parties, regional organizations or the United Nations,

Recognizing that States in some regions have already taken steps towards confidence-building measures at the bilateral, subregional and regional levels in the political and military fields, including arms control and disarmament, and noting that such confidence-building measures have improved peace and security in those regions and contributed to progress in the socio-economic conditions of their people,

Concerned that the continuation of disputes among States, particularly in the absence of an effective mechanism to resolve them through peaceful means, may contribute to the arms race and endanger the maintenance of international peace and security and the efforts of the international community to promote arms control and disarmament,

1. Calls upon Member States to refrain from the use or threat of use of force in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms its commitment to the peaceful settlement of disputes under Chapter VI of the Charter, in particular Article 33, which provides for a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements or other peaceful means chosen by the parties;

3. Calls upon Member States that have not already done so to open consultations and dialogue in the regions of tension without preconditions;

4. Urges States to comply strictly with all bilateral, regional and international agreements, including arms control and disarmament agreements, to which they are party;

5. Also urges, in the context of confidence-building measures, the maintenance of military balance between States in the regions of tension consistent with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments;

6. Encourages the promotion of unilateral, bilateral and regional confidence-building measures to avoid conflict and prevent the unintended and accidental outbreak of hostilities;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States with a view to exploring possibilities of furthering efforts towards confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context, particularly in the regions of tension;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to report on the subject to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/43:

In favour: Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, China, Comoros, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Gabon, Gambia, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Malaysia, Mali, Mauritania, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Niger, Oman, Pakistan, Paraguay, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Somalia, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, Venezuela, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Austria, Belgium, Bhutan, Bulgaria, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, India, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Angola, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Bahamas, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Ethiopia, Fiji, Ghana, Guatemala, Honduras, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Madagascar, Mongolia, Nepal, New Zealand, Nigeria, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, South Africa, Swaziland, Tajikistan, Ukraine, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan.

Other disarmament issues

Terrorism

In 2003, terrorist attacks worldwide enhanced the sense of urgency to international efforts under way to accord high priority to concerted multilateral action in tackling the terrorism threat. In January, the Security Council adopted a declaration on combating terrorism (see p. 63), in which it called on States to take urgent action to prevent and suppress all forms of support for terrorism, bring to justice those who supported it and cooperate in resolving outstanding issues. Work continued by the Ad Hoc Committee established in General Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208] to elaborate international conventions for the suppression of terrorist bombings and of nuclear terrorism. The Counter-Terrorism Committee, established pursuant to Council resolution 1373(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 61], convened special meetings with international, regional and subregional organizations, and with technical agencies, with a view to building a common structure to deal effectively with terrorism and to help enhance Member States' capacity to combat terrorist acts (see p. 66). The Assembly urged Member States to adopt or strengthen national measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring WMDs (see below).

IAEA continued work on its action plan for nuclear security to further enhance the capacity of Member States and of the Agency to respond effectively to acts of terrorism involving nuclear and other radioactive materials. In September [GC(47)/RES/8], the IAEA General Conference, in a resolution on protection measures against nuclear and radiological terrorism, appealed to States that had not done so to accede to the 1979 Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material [YUN 1979, p. 1239]. The Conference had before it a report of the Director General [GC(47)/17] on nuclear security: measures to protect against nuclear terrorism, which discussed activities taken by IAEA against the illicit trafficking of nuclear and other radioactive materials.

During the year, the United Nations considered ways to implement the recommendations of the Policy Working Group on the United Nations and Terrorism [YUN 2002, p. 538] established by the Secretary-General to propose steps that should be taken in combating terrorism, of which four related to disarmament.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/83 [YUN 2002, p. 539], the Secretary-General, in an August report with a later addendum [A/58/208 & Add.1], presented the views of Member States, international organizations, specialized agencies and UN bodies and organs on measures they had taken to prevent terrorists from acquiring WMDs.

Communication. The heads of State or Government of the Non-Aligned Movement (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 20-25 February) [A/57/759-S/2003/332] stressed that the most effective way of preventing terrorists from acquiring WMDs was through their total elimination. They urged member States to take or strengthen national measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring WMDs, their means of delivery and materials and technologies related to their manufacture.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/48 without vote [agenda item 73 (w)].

Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/83 of 22 November 2002, Recognizing the determination of the international community to combat terrorism, as evident in relevant General Assembly and Security Council resolutions,

Deeply concerned by the growing risk of linkages between terrorism and weapons of mass destruction, and in particular by the fact that terrorists may seek to acquire weapons of mass destruction,

Noting the support expressed in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, which was held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, for measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction,

Noting also that the Group of Eight, the European Union, the Regional Forum of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and others have taken into account in their deliberations the dangers posed by the acquisition by terrorists of weapons of mass destruction, and the need for international cooperation in combating it,

Acknowledging the consideration of issues relating to terrorism and weapons of mass destruction by the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters,

Taking note of resolution GC(47)/RES/8, adopted on 19 September 2003 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-seventh regular session, and the setting up of an Advisory Group on Security in the Agency to advise the Director General on the Agency's activities relating to nuclear security,

Taking note also of the report of the Policy Working Group on the United Nations and Terrorism,

Taking note further of the report of the Secretary-General, submitted pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 4 of resolution 57/83,

Mindful of the urgent need for addressing, within the United Nations framework and through international cooperation, this threat to humanity,

Emphasizing that progress is urgently needed in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation in order to help to maintain international peace and security and to contribute to global efforts against terrorism,

1. Calls upon all Member States to support international efforts to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery;

2. Urges all Member States to take and strengthen national measures, as appropriate, to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction, their means of delivery and materials and technologies related to their manufacture, and invites them to inform the Secretary-General, on a voluntary basis, of the measures taken in this regard;

3. Encourages cooperation among and between Member States and relevant regional and international organizations for strengthening national capacities in this regard;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to compile a report on measures already taken by international organizations on issues relating to the linkage between the fight against terrorism and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, to seek the views of

Member States on additional relevant measures for tackling the global threat posed by the acquisition by terrorists of weapons of mass destruction, and to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction".

New types of weapons of mass destruction

In 2003, the Conference on Disarmament [A/58/27] was unable to establish an ad hoc committee to address the item on "New types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons" owing to the continuing lack of consensus over an overall programme of work. Consequently, delegations considered the issue in plenary meetings, during which they reaffirmed or further elaborated their respective positions.

Multilateralism in disarmament and non-proliferation

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 37/63 [YUN 2002, p. 536], the Secretary-General, in a July report with a later addendum [A/58/176 & Add.1], presented replies received from six Governments regarding the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/44 by recorded vote (118-12-46) [agenda item 73 (f)].

Promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation

The General Assembly,

Determined to foster strict respect for the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 56/24 T of 29 November 2001 on multilateral cooperation in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation and global efforts against terrorism and other relevant resolutions, as well as its resolution 37/63 of 22 November 2002 on promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation,

Recalling also the purpose of the United Nations to maintain international peace and security and, to that end, to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace, as enshrined in the Charter,

Recalling further the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which states, inter alia, that the responsibility for managing worldwide economic and social development, as well as threats to international peace and security, must be shared among the nations of the world and should be exercised multilaterally and that, as the most universal and most representative organization in the world, the United Nations must play the central role,

Convinced that in the globalization era and with the information revolution, arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament problems are more than ever the concern of all countries in the world, which are affected in one way or another by these problems and, therefore, should have the possibility to participate in the negotiations that arise to tackle them,

Bearing in mind the existence of a broad structure of disarmament and arms regulation agreements resulting from non-discriminatory and transparent multilateral negotiations with the participation of a large number of countries, regardless of their size and power,

Aware of the need to advance further in the field of arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament on the basis of universal, multilateral, non-discriminatory and transparent negotiations with the goal of reaching general and complete disarmament under strict international control,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral negotiations on disarmament,

Recognizing also that the proliferation and development of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons, are among the most immediate threats to international peace and security which need to be dealt with, with the highest priority,

Considering that the multilateral disarmament agreements provide the mechanism for States parties to consult one another and to cooperate in solving any problems which may arise in relation to the objective of, or in the application of, the provisions of the agreements and that such consultations and cooperation may also be undertaken through appropriate international procedures within the framework of the United Nations and in accordance with the Charter,

Stressing that international cooperation, the peaceful settlement of disputes, dialogue and confidence-building measures would contribute essentially to the creation of multilateral and bilateral friendly relations among peoples and nations,

Being concerned at the continuous erosion of multilateralism in the field of arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament, and recognizing that a resort to unilateral actions by Member States in resolving their security concerns would jeopardize international peace and security and undermine confidence in the international security system as well as the foundations of the United Nations itself,

Reaffirming the absolute validity of multilateral diplomacy in the field of disarmament, and determined to promote multilateralism as an essential way to develop arms regulation and disarmament negotiations,

1. Reaffirms multilateralism as the core principle in negotiations in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation with a view to maintaining and strengthening universal norms and enlarging their scope;

2. Also reaffirms multilateralism as the core principle in resolving disarmament and non-proliferation concerns;

3. Urges the participation of all interested States in multilateral negotiations on arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament in a non-discriminatory and transparent manner;

4. Underlines the importance of preserving the existing agreements on arms regulation and disarmament, which constitute an expression of the results of international cooperation and multilateral negotiations in response to the challenges facing mankind;

5. Calls once again upon all Member States to renew and fulfil their individual and collective commitments to multilateral cooperation as an important means of pursuing and achieving their common objectives in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation;

6. Requests the States parties to the relevant instruments on weapons of mass destruction to consult and cooperate among themselves in resolving their concerns with regard to cases of non-compliance as well as on implementation, in accordance with the procedures defined in those instruments, and to refrain from resorting or threatening to resort to unilateral actions or directing unverified non-compliance accusations against one another to resolve their concerns;

7. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General containing the replies of Member States on the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation, submitted pursuant to resolution 57/63;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the issue of the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/44:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

In 2003, despite the efforts made to harmonize views on a mandate for an ad hoc committee on the prevention of an arms race in outer space, the Conference on Disarmament was unable to reach consensus on the mandate and, consequently, did not establish any subsidiary body to deal with the item. China and the Russian Federation, building on their 2002 joint working paper [YUN 2002, p. 540], held consultations and meetings among delegations on the issue. Delegations also discussed the item during plenary meetings and submitted amendments to the draft mandate contained in the joint proposal on a work programme put forth by five former Presidents (see p. 531). In the end, the continuing lack of consensus prevented the Conference from undertaking any substantive work on the item. Russia circulated an 11 June communication [CD/1710] regarding the development of an initiative to promote openness and to build confidence in the domain of outer space activities. Annexed to it was a schedule of spacecraft launches for June 2003 under Russian, international cooperation and commercial programmes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/461], adopted resolution 58/36 by recorded vote (174-0-4) [agenda item 72].

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the common interest of all mankind in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Reaffirming the will of all States that the exploration and use of outer space, including the Moon and other celestial bodies, shall be for peaceful purposes and shall be carried out for the benefit and in the interest of all countries, irrespective of their degree of economic or scientific development,

Reaffirming also the provisions of articles III and IV of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,

Recalling the obligation of all States to observe the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations regarding the use or threat of use of force in their international relations, including in their space activities,

Reaffirming paragraph 80 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it is stated that in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, further measures should be taken and appropriate international negotiations held in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty,

Recalling its previous resolutions on this issue, and taking note of the proposals submitted to the General Assembly at its tenth special session and at its regular sessions, and of the recommendations made to the competent organs of the United Nations and to the Conference on Disarmament,

Recognizing that prevention of an arms race in outer space would avert a grave danger for international peace and security,

Emphasizing the paramount importance of strict compliance with existing arms limitation and disarmament agreements relevant to outer space, including bilateral agreements, and with the existing legal regime concerning the use of outer space,

Considering that wide participation in the legal regime applicable to outer space could contribute to enhancing its effectiveness,

Noting that the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, taking into account its previous efforts since its establishment in 1985 and seeking to enhance its functioning in qualitative terms, continued the examination and identification of various issues, existing agreements and existing proposals, as well as future initiatives relevant to the prevention of an arms race in outer space, and that this contributed to a better understanding of a number of problems and to a clearer perception of the various positions,

Noting also that there were no objections in principle in the Conference on Disarmament to the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee, subject to re-examination of the mandate contained in the decision of the Conference on Disarmament of 13 February 1992,

Emphasizing the mutually complementary nature of bilateral and multilateral efforts in the field of preventing an arms race in outer space, and hoping that concrete results will emerge from those efforts as soon as possible,

Convinced that further measures should be examined in the search for effective and verifiable bilateral and multilateral agreements in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, including the weaponization of outer space,

Stressing that the growing use of outer space increases the need for greater transparency and better information on the part of the international community,

Recalling, in this context, its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 45/55 B of 4 December 1990, 47/51 of 9 December 1992 and 48/74 A of 16 December 1993, in which, inter alia, it reaffirmed the importance of confidence-building measures as a means conducive to ensuring the attainment of the objective of the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Conscious of the benefits of confidence- and security-building measures in the military field,

Recognizing that negotiations for the conclusion of an international agreement or agreements to prevent an arms race in outer space remain a priority task of the Ad Hoc Committee and that the concrete proposals on confidence-building measures could form an integral part of such agreements,

1. Reaffirms the importance and urgency of preventing an arms race in outer space and the readiness of all States to contribute to that common objective, in conformity with the provisions of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies;

2. Reaffirms its recognition, as stated in the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, that the legal regime applicable to outer space does not in and of itself guarantee the prevention of an arms race in outer space, that the regime plays a significant role in the prevention of an arms race in that environment, that there is a need to consolidate and reinforce that regime and enhance its effectiveness and that it is important to comply strictly with existing agreements, both bilateral and multilateral;

3. Emphasizes the necessity of further measures with appropriate and effective provisions for verification to prevent an arms race in outer space;

4. Calls upon all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the objective of the peaceful use of outer space and of the prevention of an arms race in outer space and to refrain from actions contrary to that objective and to the relevant existing treaties in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and promoting international cooperation;

5. Reiterates that the Conference on Disarmament, as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, has the primary role in the negotiation of a multilateral agreement or agreements, as appropriate, on the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects;

6. Invites the Conference on Disarmament to complete the examination and updating of the mandate contained in its decision of 13 February 1992 and to establish an ad hoc committee as early as possible during its 2004 session;

7. Recognizes, in this respect, the growing convergence of views on the elaboration of measures designed to strengthen transparency, confidence and security in the peaceful uses of outer space;

8. Urges States conducting activities in outer space, as well as States interested in conducting such activities, to keep the Conference on Disarmament informed of the progress of bilateral and multilateral negotiations on the matter, if any, so as to facilitate its work;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Prevention of an arms race in outer space".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/36:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, United States.

Disarmament and development

The controversy regarding the question of the relationship between disarmament and development continued during the year. While the vast majority of Member States, mostly non-aligned countries, maintained support for the implementation of the action programme adopted by the 1987 International Conference that examined the relationship in all its aspects [YUN 1987, p. 82], a number of other States, including the EU member States and the United States, continued to argue that there was no automatic link between the two concepts.

Expert group. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/65 [YUN 2002, p. 542], the Secretary-General established a Group of Governmental Experts, drawn from 16 countries, to review the relationship between disarmament and development. At its first session (Geneva, 17-21 November), the Group assessed the implementation of the 1987 action programme and a number of issues relating to the current international context, and agreed on a draft outline for its future work. Its second and third sessions were scheduled to take place in New York in March and May 2004. A previous review by governmental experts was undertaken between 1978 [YUN 1978, p. 30] and 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 96].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted decision 58/520 by recorded vote [agenda item 73 (h)].

Relationship between disarmament and development

At its 71st plenary meeting, on 8 December 2003, the General Assembly, by a recorded vote of 177 to 1, with 2 abstentions, and on the recommendation of the First Committee, decided, pursuant to its resolution 57/65 of 22 November 2002, to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Relationship between disarmament and development".

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 58/520:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Israel, Rwanda.

Arms limitation and disarmament agreements

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/64 [YUN 2002, p. 543], the Secretary-General submitted a July report with later addendum [A/58/129 & Add.1], containing information from six Member States on measures they had taken to ensure the application of scientific and technological progress in the context of international security, disarmament and related areas, without detriment to the environment or to its effective contribution to attaining sustainable development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/462], adopted resolution 58/45 by recorded vote (173-1-4) [agenda item 73 (g)].

Observance of environmental norms in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms control

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/70 M of 12 December 1995, 51/45 E of 10 December 1996, 52/38 E of 9 December 1997, 53/77 J of 4 December 1998, 54/54 S of 1 December 1999, 55/33 K of 20 November 2000, 56/24 F of 29 November 2001 and 57/64 of 22 November 2002,

Emphasizing the importance of the observance of environmental norms in the preparation and implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements,

Recognizing that it is necessary to take duly into account the agreements adopted at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, as well as prior relevant agreements, in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms limitation,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Mindful of the detrimental environmental effects of the use of nuclear weapons,

1. Reaffirms that international disarmament forums should take fully into account the relevant environmental norms in negotiating treaties and agreements on disarmament and arms limitation and that all States, through their actions, should contribute fully to ensuring compliance with the aforementioned norms in the implementation of treaties and conventions to which they are parties;

2. Calls upon States to adopt unilateral, bilateral, regional and multilateral measures so as to contribute to ensuring the application of scientific and technological progress in the framework of international security, disarmament and other related spheres, without detriment to the environment or to its effective contribution to attaining sustainable development;

3. Welcomes the information provided by Member States on the implementation of the measures they have adopted to promote the objectives envisaged in the present resolution;

4. Invites all Member States to communicate to the Secretary-General information on the measures they have adopted to promote the objectives envisaged in the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report containing this information to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Observance of environmental norms in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms control".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/45:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

report [A/58/138] (see p. 562), as did the Group of Governmental Experts on the continuing operation of the UN Register of Conventional Arms [A/58/274] (see p. 568). During the year, the recommendations contained in the study on disarmament and non-proliferation education, completed in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 544], began to be implemented by Member States, UN system organizations, civil society, NGOs and the media. In that context, the Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA) and the Hague Appeal for Peace, an NGO, inaugurated a two-year project on small arms, peace and disarmament education in four countries, across four continents. The Group of Governmental Experts established by the Secretary-General to reappraise the relationship between disarmament and development in the current international context met during the year (see p. 584).

In 2003, the General Assembly, in resolution 58/37 (see p. 546), requested the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a panel of governmental experts, to explore further the issue of missiles in all its aspects, for consideration in 2004.

Disarmament Information Programme

During the year, priority issues for the Disarmament Information Programme of DDA included WMDs; conventional weapons, particularly small arms and light weapons, and the transparency mechanism of the Register of Conventional Arms; the relationship between disarmament and development; and disarmament and non-proliferation education. The Programme was implemented through public speaking engagements, media campaigns, print and electronic publications, web-site access, symposiums, panel discussions and exhibits. DDA collaborated closely with the UN Department of Public Information to address the information needs of the first biennial meeting of States to consider the implementation of the Programme of Action adopted by the UN Conference on small arms [YUN 2001, p. 499] (see p. 562). The Programme continued to broaden its cooperation with civil society by integrating NGOs and research institutes into DDA's work and improving existing relationships.

Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters

The Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters, which advised the Secretary-General on the disarmament studies programme and implementation of the Disarmament Information Programme and served as the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR) (see p. 586), held its fortieth

Studies, information and training

Disarmament studies programme

The Group of Governmental Experts on the identification and tracing of illicit small arms and light weapons completed and submitted its and forty-first sessions (New York, 5-7 February; Geneva, 16-18 July) [A/58/316]. The Board deliberated on compliance, verification and enforcement of multilateral disarmament treaties; disarmament and human security; disarmament and development; rising military expenditure; a review of the functioning and effectiveness of the Board; and open-source data for promoting disarmament and non-proliferation. It recommended that the United Nations identify the best way to preserve the expertise and knowledge of the United Nations Monitoring, Verification and Inspection Commission (see p. 316), with a view to maintaining the Organization's readiness to address future non-compliance cases. The Board also recommended, among other things, the convening of a group of experts to examine and establish due procedures for the Security Council in dealing more effectively with non-compliance cases, and a more comprehensive examination of the relationship between disarmament and development. It agreed on the need for a new disarmament paradigm promoting new perceptions of security, particularly human security, measures aimed at improving its functioning and effectiveness, and practical steps for maximizing the use of potential open-source data, such as satellite technology for disarmament purposes.

UN Institute for Disarmament Research

The Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the UNIDIR Director covering the period from August 2002 to July 2003, as well as the report of the UNIDIR Board of Trustees on the proposed 2003-2004 programme of work and budget [A/58/259]. The Institute's research activities continued to focus on global security, regional security and human security. The report highlighted UNIDIR's range of research activities worldwide, including conferences, seminars and discussion meetings, as well as its networking initiatives with specialized agencies and UN system organizations and institutions. During the reporting period, UNIDIR produced a number of publications, which were listed on its web site.

The Board of Trustees recommended a subvention of $227,600 from the UN regular budget for 2004, which the Assembly approved on 23 December (resolution 58/272, section III) (see p. 1417).

Disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services

In 2003, 30 fellows participated in the UN disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services programme, which began in Geneva on 1 September and terminated in New York on 5 November. The programme comprised study sessions in Geneva and New York and study visits to intergovernmental organizations working in the area of disarmament, and to Germany, Japan, The Hague and Vienna.

Regional centres for peace and disarmament

On 8 December (meeting 71), the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/463], adopted resolution 58/63 without vote [agenda item 74 (a)].

United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/87 of 22 November 2002 regarding the maintenance and revitalization of the three United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament,

Recalling also the reports of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific and the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean,

Reaffirming its decision, taken in 1982 at its twelfth special session, to establish the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme, the purpose of which is to inform, educate and generate public understanding and support for the objectives of the United Nations in the field of arms control and disarmament,

Bearing in mind its resolutions 40/151 G of 16 December 1985, 41/60 J of 3 December 1986, 42/39 D of 30 November 1987 and 44/117 F of 15 December 1989 on the regional centres for peace and disarmament in Nepal, Peru and Togo,

Recognizing that the changes that have taken place in the world have created new opportunities as well as posed new challenges for the pursuit of disarmament, and, in this regard, bearing in mind that the regional centres for peace and disarmament can contribute substantially to understanding and cooperation among States in each particular region in the areas of peace, disarmament and development,

Noting that in paragraph 146 of the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of the Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, the heads of State or Government welcomed the decision adopted by the General Assembly on maintaining and revitalizing the three regional centres for peace and disarmament in Nepal, Peru and Togo,

1. Reiterates the importance of the United Nations activities at the regional level to increase the stability and security of its Member States, which could be promoted in a substantive manner by the maintenance and revitalization of the three regional centres for peace and disarmament;

2. Reaffirms that, in order to achieve positive results, it is useful for the three regional centres to carry out dissemination and educational programmes that promote regional peace and security and that are aimed at changing basic attitudes with respect to peace and security and disarmament so as to support the achievement of the principles and purposes of the United Nations;

3. Appeals to Member States in each region and those that are able to do so, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions to the regional centres in their respective regions to strengthen their activities and initiatives;

4. Emphasizes the importance of the activities of the regional branch of the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all necessary support, within existing resources, to the regional centres in carrying out their programmes of activities;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament".

Africa

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/91 [YUN 2002, p. 548], the Secretary-General described the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa [A/58/139], covering the period from July 2002 to June 2003. The Centre was established in Lomé, Togo, in 1986 [YUN 1986, p. 85].

During the reporting period, the Centre focused on support for peace processes and related initiatives in Africa; disarmament and arms control; information, research and publication; and advocacy and resource mobilization. The Centre also initiated activities in cooperation with regional and subregional organizations and Member States to promote effective implementation of the Programme of Action adopted by the UN Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects [YUN 2001, p. 499], the 1997 Bamako Declaration on small arms and light weapons [YUN 1997, p. 515], the 1998 Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa of the Economic Community of West African States [YUN 1998, p. 537] and the 2001 Declaration concerning Firearms, Ammunition and Other Related Materials, adopted by the Southern African Development Community member States [YUN 2001, p. 511]. The Centre collaborated with the Lions Clubs International, an NGO, to organize a conference (Lomé, 24 January) entitled "Rethinking African culture for the promotion of sustainable peace and security on the continent", which considered the relationship between culture and peaceful conflict resolution in the region. The Centre, on 14 February, assisted the Government of Togo in the destruction of over 600,000 rounds of ammunition seized from gunrunners along the Togo-

Ghana border. Within the collaborative framework it had established with the African Strategic and Peace Research Group, the Centre provided support for a round table (Minna, Nigeria, 27 February–2 March) on multi-track approaches to early response to crises in Africa. In April, it helped the Niger State College of Education (Nigeria) to finalize the curriculum for the professional diploma in peace and sustainable development. Within the framework of the activities of the UN Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa (sec p. 573), the Centre helped to elaborate a working document on priority areas for implementing the 2001 Programme of Action on small arms, which was adopted by the Committee in May, and, in September, it organized a workshop on the control of small arms in Central Africa. On 1 October, it launched the Small Arms Transparency and Control Regime in Africa, a three-year programme funded by Sweden and Finland to encourage African States to promote transparency by providing data on their manufacture and stockpiling of small arms and light weapons. Other activities included the training of messengers of peace from Zambia and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, a regional consultation on training for peace in West Africa, and participation in an exploratory mission to Côte d'Ivoire. In the Mano River Union countries (Guinea, Liberia, Sierra Leone), the Centre joined the Economic Commission for Africa for a data collection mission aimed at improving understanding of the magnitude and scope of the illicit trafficking in weapons at the common borders of the three countries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/463], adopted resolution 58/61 without vote [agenda item 74 (d)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa

The General Assembly,

Mindful of the provisions of Article 11, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations stipulating that a function of the General Assembly is to consider the general principles of cooperation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and arms limitation,

Recalling its resolutions 40/151 G of 16 December 1985, 41/60 D of 3 December 1986, 42/39 J of 30 November 1987 and 43/76 D of 7 December 1988 on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, and its resolutions 46/36 F of 6 December 1991 and 47/52 G of 9 December 1992 on regional disarmament, including confidence-building measures,

Recalling also its resolutions 48/76 E of 16 December 1993, 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, 50/71 C of 12 December 1995, 51/46 E of 10 December 1996, 52/220 of 22 December 1997, 53/78 C of 4 December 1998, 54/55 B of 1 December 1999, 55/34 D of 20 November 2000, 56/25 D of 29 November 2001 and 57/91 of 22 November 2002,

Aware of the widespread support for the revitalization of the Regional Centre and the important role that the Centre can play in the present context in promoting confidence-building and arms-limitation measures at the regional level, thereby promoting progress in the area of sustainable development,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General that the Centre has received an increasing number of requests from Member States in the African region for substantive support for several peace initiatives and conflict resolution activities in the region,

Taking note also of the report by the Secretary-General that very limited financial contributions were made to the Centre despite continued fund-raising efforts,

Concerned that the continued financial difficulties faced by the Centre have impaired its ability to realize its full potential and to fulfil its mandate adequately,

Bearing in mind the efforts undertaken in the framework of the revitalization of the activities of the Regional Centre for the mobilization of the resources necessary for its operational costs,

Taking into account the need to establish close cooperation between the Regional Centre and the Mechanism for Conflict Prevention, Management and Resolution of the African Union, in conformity with the decision adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-fifth ordinary session, held at Algiers from 12 to 14 July 1999,

Welcoming the adoption by consensus of the report of the United Nations First Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, held in New York from 7 to 11 July 2003,

1. Commends the activities which the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa is continuing to carry out, in particular in support of the efforts made by the African States in the areas of peace and security;

2. Reaffirms its strong support for the revitalization of the Regional Centre, and emphasizes the need to provide it with the necessary resources to enable it to strengthen its activities and carry out its programmes;

3. Appeals once again to all States, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions in order to strengthen the programmes and activities of the Regional Centre and facilitate their implementation;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the necessary support to the Regional Centre for better achievements and results;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to facilitate close cooperation between the Regional Centre and the African Union, in particular in the area of peace, security and development, and to continue to assist the Director of the Regional Centre in his efforts to stabilize the financial situation of the Centre and revitalize its activities;

6. Appeals in particular to the Regional Centre, in cooperation with the African Union, regional and sub-regional organizations and the African States, to take steps to promote the consistent implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa".

Asia and the Pacific

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/92 [YUN 2002, p. 550], the Secretary-General reported in July on the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific from August 2002 to July 2003 [A/58/190]. The Centre was inaugurated in Kathmandu, Nepal, in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 88].

During the period under review, the Centre focused on issues relating to nuclear-weapon-free zones and on organizing disarmament-related regional meetings. The Centre continued to assist the five Central Asian States in drafting a treaty on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia by organizing an expert group meeting and consultations among the regional States and between them and the five nuclear-weapon States. Similarly, in continuing efforts to assist Mongolia in taking measures to consolidate and strengthen its international security and nuclear-weapon-free status, the Centre organized, in January, an informal consultation among relevant UN bodies. In February, the Centre, in cooperation with Indonesia and Japan, organized a regional seminar (Bali, Indonesia, 10-11 February), which addressed the issue of small arms and light weapons from a regional perspective, explored how to implement the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on those weapons (YUN 2001, p. 499) and helped the regional States prepare for the first biennial meeting of States (see p. 562) on the implementation of the outcome of the Conference. The Centre also hosted, in cooperation with Indonesia and DDA, a UN workshop on transparency in armaments (Bali, 14-15 February), intended to promote greater participation in the UN Register of Conventional Arms (see p. 568) and in the standardized instrument for military expenditure reporting. The Centre provided support to the United Nations Association of Japan in organizing the ninth Kanazawa symposium (Kanazawa, 10-12 June) on security and stability in North-East Asia and restoring confidence. It convened a UN conference (Osaka, Japan, 19-22 August) on arms control, disarmament and their future, which considered, among other matters, the current international security situation, WMDs and ways of fostering a culture of peace. In a further effort to address non-proliferation issues, the Centre, in cooperation with the Republic of Korea, organized a conference on disarmament and non-proliferation (Jeju Island, 3-5 December). The Centre, in a bid to promote further cooperation and interaction in the region, improved its contacts with academic institutions, foundations and regional and sub-regional organizations, such as the Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia Pacific and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, and with disarmament-related international organizations, including IAEA, the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (see p. 561) and the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (see p. 547).

Owing to the lack of extrabudgetary resources, the Centre continued to operate from UN Headquarters, as consultations on its relocation continued with the host country. In that regard, a reminder was sent to the Government of Nepal regarding a draft host country agreement and a draft memorandum of understanding previously forwarded to it.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/463], adopted resolution 58/62 without vote [agenda item 74 (e)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 42/39 D of 30 November 1987 and 44/117 F of 15 December 1989, by which it established the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and renamed it the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific, with headquarters in Kathmandu and with the mandate of providing, on request, substantive support for the initiatives and other activities mutually agreed upon by the Member States of the Asia-Pacific region for the implementation of measures for peace and disarmament, through appropriate utilization of available resources,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General, in which he expresses his belief that the mandate of the Regional Centre remains valid and that the Centre has been a useful instrument for fostering a climate of cooperation for peace and disarmament in the region,

Noting that trends in the post-cold-war era have emphasized the function of the Regional Centre in assisting Member States as they deal with new security concerns and disarmament issues emerging in the region,

Commending the useful activities carried out by the Regional Centre in encouraging regional and sub-regional dialogue for the enhancement of openness, transparency and confidence-building, as well as the promotion of disarmament and security through the organization of regional meetings, which has come to be widely known within the Asia-Pacific region as the "Kathmandu process",

Expressing its appreciation to the Regional Centre for its organization of meetings and conferences in the region, held in Samarkand, Uzbekistan, from 25 to 27 September 2002, on Jeju Island, Republic of Korea, from 3 to 5 December 2002, in Bali, Indonesia, on 10 and 11 February 2003 and on 14 and 15 February 2003, in Kanazawa, Japan, from 10 to 12 June 2003 and in Osaka, Japan, from 19 to 22 August 2003,

Welcoming the idea of the possible creation of an educational and training programme for peace and disarmament in Asia and the Pacific for young people with different backgrounds, to be financed from voluntary contributions,

Noting the important role of the Regional Centre in assisting region-specific initiatives of Member States, including its continued assistance in finalizing a treaty related to the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia, as well as to Mongolia's international security and nuclear-weapon-free status, including the organization of an informal consultation among relevant United Nations bodies in January 2003 to discuss the status of implementation of the non-nuclear aspects of Mongolia's status,

Appreciating highly the overall support that Nepal has extended as the host nation of the headquarters of the Regional Centre,

1. Reaffirms its strong support for the forthcoming operation and further strengthening of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific;

2. Underlines the importance of the Kathmandu process as a powerful vehicle for the development of the practice of region-wide security and disarmament dialogue;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the continuing political support and voluntary financial contributions to the Regional Centre, which are essential for its continued operation;

4. Appeals to Member States, in particular those within the Asia-Pacific region, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions, the only resources of the Regional Centre, to strengthen the programme of activities of the Centre and the implementation thereof;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, taking note of paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, to provide the Regional Centre with the necessary support, within existing resources, in carrying out its programme of activities;

6. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure the physical operation of the Regional Centre from Kathmandu within six months of the date of signature of the host country agreement and to enable the Centre to function effectively;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific".

Latin America and the Caribbean

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/89 [YUN 2002, p. 551], the Secretary-General reported in July on the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean from July 2002 to June 2003 [A/58/122]. The Centre was inaugurated in Lima, Peru, in 1987 [YUN 1987, p. 88].

The Centre's activities were related to firearms, ammunition and explosives; anti-personnel mines; disarmament and development; conventional, nuclear and chemical weapons; and information dissemination. It also promoted existing firearms agreements and undertook cooperative activities with regional States, UN agencies, international organizations and NGOs on practical disarmament activities, including the destruction of firearms, ammunition and explosives and the improvement of stockpile management practices; support to disarmament-related processes, such as the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) (see p. 555); new disarmament, demobilization and reintegration initiatives; and confidence- and security-building measures.

During the reporting period, the Centre continued to consolidate its Regional Clearing-House Programme on Firearms, Ammunition and Explosives, which served as a platform for assisting States to implement the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials [YUN 1997, p. 519] and relevant regional arrangements, as well as the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on small arms [YUN 2001, p. 499]. The Centre continued to develop its Small Arms and Light Weapons Administration System, which would provide information on all its activities and those of its partners regarding projects related to the Clearing-House Programme, relevant documentation, points of contact and other activities concerning firearms, ammunition and explosives; the system was scheduled to be launched later in the year. The Centre's potential to help strengthen the nuclear-weapon-free zone regime in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) increased markedly following an April memorandum of understanding between DDA and the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean, designed to facilitate formal cooperation between the Agency and the Centre. In May, the Centre provided technical assistance to UNDP to develop a proposal for a project on strengthening mechanisms for the control of firearms in El Salvador. The Centre organized, in May and June, a series of meetings, which considered and approved a manual for training NGOs in Latin America and the Caribbean on the use of firearms, with the first training course scheduled for later in the year in El Salvador. As part of its efforts to assist Latin American and Caribbean States to implement the 2001 UN Programme of Action on small arms, the Centre held a series of technical meetings, which ended in June, aimed at training 800 police, customs, intelligence and armed forces officials to serve as instructors on the legal trade and illegal trafficking in firearms, ammunition and related issues. The Centre continued to promote the implementation of the Mine-Ban Convention in Latin America and the Caribbean and, in that context, provided support to an OAS conference (Lima, 14-15 August) aimed at making the hemisphere free of anti-personnel landmines.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/463], adopted resolution 58/60 (as orally amended) without vote [agenda item 74 (c)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 41/60 J of 3 December 1986, 42/39 K of 30 November 1987 and 43/76 H of 7 December 1988 on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean, with headquarters in Lima,

Recalling also its resolutions 46/37 F of 9 December 1991, 48/76 E of 16 December 1993, 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, 50/71 C of 12 December 1995, 52/220 of 22 December 1997, 53/78 F of 4 December 1998, 54/55 F of 1 December 1999, 55/34 E of 20 November 2000, 56/25 E of 29 November 2001 and 57/89 of 22 November 2002,

Underlining the revitalization of the Regional Centre, the efforts made by the Government of Peru and other countries to that end, as well as the important work done by the Director of the Centre,

Recognizing that the Regional Centre has continued to act as an instrument for the implementation of regional initiatives and has intensified its contribution to the coordination of United Nations efforts towards peace and security,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General, which concludes that the Regional Centre also acts as a facilitator for the implementation of regional initiatives by identifying regional security needs and new areas of cooperation with States and organizations in the region, by providing more in-depth information on firearms matters, including training for the law enforcement community and non-governmental organizations on such matters, and by promoting the dissemination of information on security issues among diplomats, the military, non-governmental organizations and civil society,

Welcoming also that the report stresses that the Regional Centre has initiated a new level of activity in the important area of disarmament and development, and encouraging the Centre to further develop this activity,

Noting that security and disarmament issues have always been recognized as significant topics in Latin America and the Caribbean, the first inhabited region in the world to be declared a nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Welcoming the fact that the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) is now in force for the sovereign States of the region, and that this fact was officially acknowledged by the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean, at its eighteenth session, held at Havana on 5 and 6 November 2003,

Bearing in mind the important role that the Regional Centre can play in promoting confidence-building measures, arms control and limitation, disarmament and development at the regional level,

Also bearing in mind the importance of information, research, education and training for peace, disarmament and development in order to achieve understanding and cooperation among States,

Recognizing the need to provide the three United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament with sufficient financial resources and cooperation for the planning and implementation of their programmes of activities,

1. Reiterates its strong support for the role of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean in the promotion of United Nations activities at the regional level to strengthen peace, stability, security and development among its member States;

2. Expresses its satisfaction and congratulates the Regional Centre for the expansion of the vast range of activities carried out last year in the field of peace, disarmament and development, and requests the Regional Centre to take into account the proposals to be submitted by the countries of the region in promoting confidence-building measures, arms control and limitation, transparency, disarmament and development at the regional level;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the political support and financial contributions to the Regional Centre, which are essential for its continued operation;

4. Invites all States of the region to continue to take part in the activities of the Regional Centre, proposing items for inclusion in its programme, making greater and better use of the Centre's potential to meet the current challenges facing the international community and with a view to fulfilling the aims of the Charter of the United Nations in the field of peace, disarmament and development;

5. Recognizes that the Regional Centre has an important role in the promotion and development of regional initiatives agreed upon by the countries of Latin America and the Caribbean in the field of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, conventional arms, including small arms and light weapons, as well as the relationship between disarmament and development;

6. Welcomes the establishment of the Group of Governmental Experts on the relationship between disarmament and development pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/65 of 22 November 2002, whose report, to be submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, will be of utmost interest for the role the Regional Centre plays in promoting those issues in the region in pursuit of its mandate to promote economic and social development related to peace and disarmament;

7. Highlights the conclusion of the Secretary-General that the Regional Centre has demonstrated, in a concrete manner, the role of the Organization as a regional catalyst for peace and disarmament in assisting countries in the region to advance the cause of peace, disarmament and development in Latin America and the Caribbean;

8. Appeals to Member States, in particular those within the Latin American and Caribbean region, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make and increase voluntary contributions to strengthen the Regional Centre, its programme of activities and the implementation thereof;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Regional Centre with all necessary support, within existing resources, so that it may carry out its programme of activities in accordance with its mandate;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean".

Chapter VIII

Other political and security questions

The United Nations continued in 2003 to consider political and security questions relating to the Organization's efforts to support democratization worldwide, the promotion of decolonization, public information activities and the peaceful uses of outer space.

The Fifth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies, held in Ulaanbaatar, Mongolia, in September, adopted the Ulaanbaatar Declaration and Plan of Action, which outlined benchmark principles for democratic Government, committed participating Member States to strengthening democracy at the national, regional and international levels, and made recommendations for strengthening the Conference's Follow-up Mechanism.

The Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples continued to review progress in implementing the 1960 Declaration, particularly the exercise of self-determination by the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories. The General Assembly requested the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of the Declaration and to carry out actions approved by the Assembly regarding the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (1990-2000) and the Second International Decade (2001-2010).

The Committee on Information continued its comprehensive review of the management and operation of the Department of Public Information (DPI), based on a number of reports submitted by the Secretary-General. In that regard, as part of a continuing process of departmental reform, a new operating model for DPI and a new organizational structure were instituted, comprising a Strategic Communications Division, a News and Media Division and an Outreach Division. The rationalization of the network of United Nations information centres around regional hubs was initiated with the creation of a Western European hub. The Department continued to develop and enhance the UN web site in all official languages. To improve the management of UN libraries, the Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries was established in January, with the objective of developing policies and coordinating operations among all UN libraries.

In a December resolution on developments in information and telecommunications, the Assembly called on Member States to promote the consideration of existing and potential threats in the field of information security. Regarding the role of science and technology in the context of international security, the Assembly, in another December resolution, encouraged UN bodies to contribute, within existing mandates, to promoting the application of science and technology for peaceful purposes.

Action teams established in 2001 to implement the recommendations of the Third (1999) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III) reported on progress in their work; five of the teams completed their mandates. In December, the Assembly decided to review in 2004 progress in the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations.

In January, the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation held its fifty-first session, which had been postponed from 2002 due to a budget shortfall.

General aspects of international security

Support for democracies

UN system activities

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 56/96 [YUN 2001, p. 526] and 56/269 [YUN 2002, p. 553], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/58/392] outlining UN system support of Governments' efforts to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies, particularly its activities in democratization and governance, and describing the outcome of the Fifth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies (see p. 593).

The Secretary-General stated that strengthening democracy worldwide was a recent priority of the United Nations, and he had emphasized the need to focus increasingly on ways to promote better governance. Over the preceding decade, the Organization had increased its support for new and restored democracies in Africa, Asia, Eastern Europe and Latin America, many of which were countries emerging from civil war and conflict. The promotion of democracy was also one of the Organization's main goals for the twenty-first century. Its democracy assistance was multifaceted and included State and institutional reform, with specific emphasis on free and fair elections (see p. 58) and respect for international law and human rights principles, the development of a vibrant civil society based on free speech and organization, and a political culture that encouraged public debate and participation, especially at the local level. Many of its activities and programmes focused on providing legal, technical and financial assistance and advice, monitoring and observation services, and civic education and training. The Organization had also published a number of studies and held several conferences and workshops on democratization and good governance.

The Secretary-General observed that the Ulaanbaatar Conference (see below) provided new momentum to pursue the emerging democratization agenda of the United Nations, and the Conference's Follow-up Mechanism would assume a key role in the Organization's future work.

The Secretary-General stated that, despite the assistance the UN system had provided to new or restored democracies, much more needed to be done to make its work more integrated and effective and to improve the focus and coherence of its democratization activities. At the international level, a more coherent approach to democratization was needed, requiring a global dialogue on common challenges and practices of governance in the twenty-first century. International co-operation should also be strengthened, along with the tools to carry out work in that field. The Secretary-General was pleased that, irrespective of recent conflicting views on promoting democracy, the concept of advocating and consolidating democracy had remained strong and viable. He was more convinced than ever that the United Nations had to remain on course on promoting democracy globally, regionally and nationally, and a full debate on the UN role in that undertaking in the twenty-first century would be desirable.

Communication. Ukraine transmitted a 29 January statement [A/58/62-S/2003/156] on the signing of the Treaty on the Ukraine-Russian State Border, to be a road map for further cooperation between the two States, and requested that it be considered under the item on the promotion and consolidation of new and restored democracies.

Fifth International Conference

The Fifth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies (Ulaanbaatar, Mongolia, 10-12 September), organized and hosted by Mongolia in collaboration with the United Nations, had as its theme "Democracy, good governance and civil society". A record number of States (119) participated in the Conference, which was preceded by a Parliamentary Forum, organized jointly by the Parliament of Mongolia and the Inter-Parliamentary Union, and an interactive civil society forum.

The Conference discussed globalization and its impact on democracy, international terrorism and crime; poverty, unemployment and social exclusions as threats to democracy and increased support from donors and international financial institutions to developing countries to support democracy and the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 51]; the importance of a vibrant, active civil society and the necessity of government support to its varied elements, and the interdependence of democracy, human rights and peace; the decline of trust in authorities, particularly in older democracies; electoral systems and "the winner takes all" policy as a source for tension and risks for long-term political stability; the media as an important watchdog for democratic practices; and unilateralism as a threat to democracy. The Conference concluded with the adoption of the Ulaanbaatar Declaration and Plan of Action [A/58/387]. Qatar offered to host the sixth international conference in Doha in 2006.

In the Declaration, participants undertook to dedicate their efforts to helping new and restored democracies to consolidate and deepen democracy. They endorsed a series of principles regarding democratic societies, namely, that such societies were just and responsible; were inclusive and participatory; promoted and protected the rights and freedoms of all their members; were open and transparent; functioned under agreed rules of law and accountability, regardless of possible challenges; and showed solidarity towards others. Participants also agreed to work towards implementing those principles, in accordance with international, regional and national plans of action.

The Ulaanbaatar Plan of Action would guide the work of the Conference President and Bureau in the years leading to the sixth conference, and committed participating States to strengthening democracy at the national, regional and international levels.

At the national level, the Plan called on countries to draw up, in collaboration with citizens and civil society, a national plan for strengthening democracy that was consistent with the Ulaanbaatar Declaration; prepare, prior to the sixth conference, "country information notes" outlining the prospects of advancing and deepening democracy; and develop national democratic indicator databases to monitor progress. Countries were also to give special attention to the issues of participation and representation, sustainable development and eradication of poverty, the protection of human rights, open and transparent government, and the rule of law and accountability.

To strengthen regional collaboration in democratic development, countries were to draw up a plan of action for regions through regional inter-governmental organizations, in collaboration with Governments and civil society, and adopt regional declarations or charters focusing on collaboration for the promotion and support of democracy, among other actions.

At the international level, the Plan recommended that the General Assembly strengthen the Follow-up Mechanism by ensuring that: it was responsible for implementing the Plan of Action; the Conference President or Bureau represented the Conference at international forums; and the Follow-up Mechanism coordinated with the international civil society forum follow-up mechanism. The Conference President should establish, with UN assistance, a working group to examine the Conference's conclusions and the proposals submitted to and interventions made at the Conference, with the aim of improving the Conference's effectiveness and efficiency and establishing a programme of work for future conferences. The President or the Bureau were to initiate discussions with the Chair of the Community of Democracies to exchange views on ways of bringing the two movements closer together.

Follow-up Mechanism

The Secretary-General, in his report on UN support to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies [A/38/392], said that the follow-up action had not been as effective as anticipated and needed substantive and logistic strengthening. He noted that, 15 years since the first conference, there was serious talk of institutionalizing the follow-up and monitoring progress achieved between conferences. The follow-up could take place through country information notes and/or democracy indicators, as mentioned in the Plan of Action. The Fifth Conference had set up an ambitious follow-up plan to implement its recommendations, and the Follow-up Mechanism, originally established at the Third Conference in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 530] and which was to convene in New York, would assume a key role in the conferences's future work.

The current arrangement through the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), which gave substantive and logistical support for each conference through its resident coordinator, the relevant host country team and the regional bureau at headquarters, and the UN Department of Political Affairs, provided continuity and support for the Follow-up Mechanism and the General Assembly's deliberations, and could be maintained on an interim basis. However, if the conference were to be institutionalized, a new support structure would be needed.

The Secretary-General, noting the measures recommended by the Fifth Conference for strengthening the Follow-up Mechanism (see above), suggested that the Assembly, at its fifty-eighth (2003) session, support those measures.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 November [meeting 62], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/13 [draft: A/58/L.15 & Add.1, orally revised] without vote [agenda item 20].

Support by the United Nations system of the efforts of Governments to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the indissoluble links between the principles embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the foundations of any democratic society,

Recalling its resolutions 49/30 of 7 December 1994, 50/133 of 20 December 1995, 51/31 of 6 December 1996, 52/18 of 21 November 1997, 53/31 of 23 November 1998, 54/36 of 29 November 1999, 55/43 of 27 November 2000, 56/96 of 14 December 2001 and 56/269 of 27 March 2002,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted by heads of State and Government on 8 September 2000, in particular paragraphs 6 and 24 thereof,

Recalling further the declarations and plans of action of the five international conferences of new or restored democracies adopted in Manila in 1988, Managua in 1994, Bucharest in 1997, Cotonou in 2000 and Ulaanbaatar in 2003,

Recalling that the Fifth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies, which was held in Ulaanbaatar from 10 to 12 September 2003, focused on democracy, good governance and civil society,

Considering the major changes taking place on the international scene and the aspirations of all peoples for an international order based on the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, including the promotion and encouragement of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all and other important principles, such as respect for the equal rights and self-determination of peoples, peace, democracy, justice, equality, the rule of law, pluralism, development, better standards of living and solidarity,

Expressing its deep appreciation to the Government of Mongolia for the successful organization of the Fifth International Conference,

Bearing in mind that the activities of the United Nations carried out in support of the efforts of Governments to promote and consolidate democracy are undertaken in accordance with the Charter and only at the specific request of the Member States concerned,

Taking note with satisfaction of the seminars, workshops and conferences on democratization and good governance convened in 2002 and 2003, as well as those held under the auspices of the Fifth International Conference,

Taking note of the views expressed by Member States in the debate on this question at its fifty-sixth to fifty-eighth sessions,

Bearing in mind that democracy, development and respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms are interdependent and mutually reinforcing and that democracy is based on the freely expressed will of the people to determine their own political, economic, social and cultural systems and on their full participation in all aspects of their lives,

Noting that a considerable number of societies have recently undertaken significant efforts to achieve their social, political and economic goals through democratization, good governance practices and the reform of their economies, pursuits that are deserving of the support and recognition of the international community,

Expressing its deep appreciation for the support provided by Member States, the United Nations system and other intergovernmental organizations to the Government of Mongolia for the holding of the Fifth International Conference,

Taking note of the conclusions of the parliamentarians' forum held in Ulaanbaatar on 11 September 2003 and the contribution of the ensuing parliamentary declaration to the proceedings of the Fifth International Conference,

Welcoming the holding of an international civil society forum within the framework of the Fifth International Conference,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and its focus on the Ulaanbaatar Declaration and Plan of Action: Democracy, Good Governance and Civil Society, adopted on 12 September 2003 at the Fifth International Conference,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes the Ulaanbaatar Declaration and Plan of Action: Democracy, Good Governance and Civil Society, adopted at the Fifth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies;

3. Encourages Member States, the relevant organizations of the United Nations system, other intergovernmental organizations, national parliaments, including in collaboration with the Inter-Parliamentary Union and other parliamentary organizations, and non-governmental organizations to contribute actively to the follow-up to the Fifth International Conference and to make additional efforts to identify possible steps in support of the efforts of Governments to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies, including those set out in the Ulaanbaatar Declaration and Plan of Action;

4. Recognizes that the United Nations has an important role to play in providing timely, appropriate and coherent support to the efforts of Governments to achieve democratization and good governance within the context of their development efforts;

5. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to improve the capacity of the Organization to respond effectively to the requests of Member States by providing coherent and adequate support for their efforts to achieve the goals of good governance and democratization;

6. Stresses that the activities of the Organization must be undertaken in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

7. Commends the Secretary-General, and through him the United Nations system, for the activities undertaken at the request of Governments to support efforts to consolidate democracy and good governance, and requests him to continue those activities;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to examine options for strengthening the support provided by the United Nations system for the efforts of Member States to consolidate democracy and good governance, including the provision of support to the President of the Fifth International Conference in his efforts to make the Conference and its follow-up more effective and efficient;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Support by the United Nations system of the efforts of Governments to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies".

Regional aspects of international peace and security

South Atlantic

As requested in General Assembly resolution 56/7 [YUN 2001, p. 327], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic [A/58/265], declared in 1986 to promote cooperation among States of the region in the political, economic, scientific, technical, cultural and other fields [YUN 1986, p. 369]. The Secretary-General stated that, as at 8 August, three Governments (Argentina, Mexico, Sudan) had responded to his request for views on the implementation of the declaration's objectives. Five UN bodies had also responded.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 November [meeting 56], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/10 [draft: A/58/L.12 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 27].

Zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 41/11 of 27 October 1986, in which it solemnly declared the Atlantic Ocean, in the region between Africa and South America, a zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic,

Recalling also its subsequent resolutions on the matter, including resolution 45/36 of 27 November 1990, in which it reaffirmed the determination of the States of the zone to enhance and accelerate their cooperation in the political, economic, scientific, cultural and other spheres,

Reaffirming the importance of the purposes and objectives of the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic as a basis for the promotion of cooperation among the countries of the region,

Reaffirming also that the questions of peace and security and those of development are interrelated and inseparable and that cooperation for peace and development among States of the region will promote the objectives of the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic,

Recalling the agreement reached at the third meeting of the States members of the zone, held in Brasilia on 21 and 22 September 1994, to encourage democracy and political pluralism and, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, to promote and defend all human rights and fundamental freedoms and to cooperate towards the achievement of these goals,

Aware of the importance that the States of the zone attach to the protection of the environment of the region, and recognizing the threat that pollution from any source poses to the marine and coastal environment, its ecological balance and its resources,

Welcoming the adoption of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects at the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, held in New York from 9 to 20 July 2001,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General, submitted in accordance with resolution 56/7 of 21 November 2001,

1. Calls upon all States to cooperate in the promotion of the objectives established in the declaration of the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic and to refrain from any action inconsistent with those objectives and with the Charter of the United Nations and relevant resolutions of the Organization, in particular actions that may create or aggravate situations of tension and potential conflict in the region;

2. Notes with satisfaction the full entry into force of the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco), and also notes with satisfaction the progress towards the full entry into force of the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba);

3. Encourages all States, in particular the members of the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic, to cooperate in promoting and strengthening global, regional, subregional and national initiatives to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons;

4. Commends regional efforts being undertaken by States members of the zone in support of the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, and calls upon them to keep up their efforts in this regard;

5. Affirms the importance of the South Atlantic to global maritime and commercial transactions, and its determination to preserve the region for all peaceful purposes and activities protected by international law, in particular the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea;

6. Views with concern the increase in drug trafficking and related crimes, including drug abuse, and calls upon the international community and the States members of the zone to promote regional and international cooperation to combat all aspects of the problem of drugs and related offences;

7. Recognizes, in the light of the number, magnitude and complexity of natural disasters and other emergencies, the need to continue to strengthen the coordination of humanitarian assistance by States members of the zone, so as to ensure a timely and effective response;

8. Welcomes the offer by Benin to host the sixth meeting of the States members of the zone;

9. Requests the relevant organizations, organs and bodies of the United Nations system to render all appropriate assistance that States members of the zone may seek in their joint efforts to implement the declaration of the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the implementation of resolution 41/11 and subsequent resolutions on the matter under review and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, taking into account, inter alia, the views expressed by Member States;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic".

Indian Ocean

In 2003, the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean (New York, 8 July) [A/58/29] continued to consider approaches for achieving the goals of the 1971 Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2832(XXVI) [YUN 1971, p. 34].

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 56/16 [YUN 2001, p. 529], the Chairman of the Committee, following informal consultations with Committee members, concluded that the objectives of the 1971 Declaration remained valid. However, in view of the complexities and difficulties involved in the implementation of the Declaration, further time would be needed before any discussion could begin on practical measures to ensure peace and stability in the Indian Ocean, and the Assembly should give more time and allow the Chairman to continue his consultations. Three permanent members of the Security Council (France, United Kingdom, United States) continued their non-participation in the Committee's work. The Committee remained convinced that the participation of all permanent Council members and the major maritime users of the Indian Ocean in its work would assist the progress of a mutually beneficial dialogue aimed at developing conditions of peace, security and stability in the region.

The Committee reaffirmed the conclusions of its 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 155], 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 182] and 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 512] sessions and re-emphasized the need to foster consensual, step-by-step approaches. The Chairman was requested to continue informal consultations and report to the Assembly at its sixtieth (2005) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/58/433], adopted resolution 58/29 by recorded vote (130-3-42) [agenda item 64].

Implementation of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace, contained in its resolution 2832 (XXVI) of 16 December 1971, and recalling also its resolutions 54/47 of 1 December 1999 and 56/16 of 29 November 2001 and other relevant resolutions,

Recalling also the report of the Meeting of the Littoral and Hinterland States of the Indian Ocean held in July 1979,

Recalling further paragraph 102 of the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Kuala Lumpur, from 20 to 25 February 2003, in which it was noted, inter alia, that the Chairperson of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean would continue his informal consultations on the future work of the Committee,

Emphasizing the need to foster consensual approaches that are conducive to the pursuit of such endeavours,

Noting the initiatives taken by countries of the region to promote cooperation, in particular economic cooperation, in the Indian Ocean area and the possible contribution of such initiatives to overall objectives of a zone of peace,

Convinced that the participation of all permanent members of the Security Council and the major maritime users of the Indian Ocean in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee is important and would assist the progress of a mutually beneficial dialogue to develop conditions of peace, security and stability in the Indian Ocean region,

Considering that greater efforts and more time are required to develop a focused discussion on practical measures to ensure conditions of peace, security and stability in the Indian Ocean region,

Having considered the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean,

1. Takes note of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean;

2. Reiterates its conviction that the participation of all permanent members of the Security Council and the major maritime users of the Indian Ocean in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee is important and would greatly facilitate the development of a mutually beneficial dialogue to advance peace, security and stability in the Indian Ocean region;

3. Requests the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee to continue his informal consultations with the members of the Committee and to report through the Committee to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to render, within existing resources, all necessary assistance to the Ad Hoc Committee, including the provision of summary records;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/29:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia.

Against: France, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Republic of Moldova, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey.

Decolonization

The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Special Committee on decolonization) held its annual session in New York in two parts—12 February and 11 April (first part); and 2, 4, 9, 12, 16, 18 and 23 June (second part). It considered various aspects of the implementation of the 1960 Declaration, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 1514(XV) [YUN 1960, p. 49], including general decolonization issues and the situation of individual Non-Self-Governing Territories (NSGTs). In accordance with Assembly resolution 57/140 [YUN 2002, p. 557], the Special Committee transmitted to the Assembly the report on its 2003 activities [A/58/23].

Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

Caribbean regional seminar

As part of its efforts to implement the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (2001-2010) [YUN 2001, p. 530], declared by the General Assembly in resolution 55/146 [YUN 2000, p. 548], the Special Committee on decolonization [A/58/23] organized a Caribbean regional seminar (The Valley, Anguilla, 20-22 May) to assess the situation in NSGTs. It was the first such seminar to be held in an NSGT.

Participants reaffirmed the Special Committee's role as the primary vehicle for fostering the decolonization process and expediting the goals of the Second Decade. The Seminar recommended that the Special Committee continue to participate actively in monitoring the evolution of NSGTs towards self-determination and play a catalytic role in the search for a specific solution for each of the remaining NSGTs, in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned and in conformity with the UN Charter, Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) and 1541(XV) [YUN 1960, p. 509] on the transmission of information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter, and other relevant UN resolutions and decisions. It noted the proposal by the Special Committee Chairman to expedite a work programme with specified time frames, based on a case-by-case approach, in order to complete the decolonization process by the end of the Second Decade, and recommended that the Special Committee implement the programme, in consultation and coordination with the peoples of the NSGTs in which there were no pending sovereignty disputes and with the administering Powers concerned.

Noting the call by all elected representatives of the United Kingdom's NSGTs for greater devolution of powers from the governors to locally elected representatives, seminar participants recommended that the United Kingdom and representatives of the Territories further discuss the issue. It recommended that the Special Committee consult, in the immediate future, with the United Kingdom on the application of its policy of constitutional modernization in NSGTs under its administration in the context of resolution 1541(XV), and discuss with it, in consultation with the representatives of the NSGTs concerned, which Territories in the region would achieve full self-government in the near future and, accordingly, be subject to "de-listing".

The seminar reaffirmed the right of the peoples of NSGTs to be informed about the full range of available self-determination options and their implications, and urged the United Kingdom to include the examination of those options in its discussions with the Territories. It recommended that the Special Committee conduct studies on the implications of those options for Bermuda and Caribbean NSGTs and welcomed the possibility of assistance in that regard from UNDP. The seminar also recommended that UNDP provide capacity-building and institutional development assistance for all Caribbean NSGTs that were reviewing their self-determination options.

Participants welcomed the presence at the seminar of a senior-level representative of the United Kingdom and looked forward to further engagement and cooperation between the Special Committee and that country. They regretted the absence of the other administering Power in the region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/111 [draft: A/58/L.21] by recorded vote (154-2-8) [agenda item 19].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all its subsequent resolutions concerning the implementation of the Declaration, most recently resolution 57/140 of 11 December 2002, as well as the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Bearing in mind the declaration of the period 2001-2010 as the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and the need to examine ways to ascertain the wishes of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories on the basis of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization,

Recognizing that the eradication of colonialism has been one of the priorities of the Organization and continues to be one of its priorities for the decade that began in 2001,

Reconfirming the need to take measures to eliminate colonialism before 2010, as called for in its resolution 55/146 of 8 December 2000,

Reiterating its conviction of the need for the eradication of colonialism, as well as of racial discrimination and violations of basic human rights,

Noting with satisfaction the achievements of the Special Committee in contributing to the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization,

Stressing the importance of the participation of the administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee,

Noting with concern that the non-participation of certain administering Powers has adversely affected the implementation of the mandate and work of the Special Committee,

Noting with satisfaction the cooperation and active participation of some administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee,

Noting that the other administering Powers have now agreed to work informally with the Special Committee,

Taking note of the consultations and agreements between the parties concerned in some Non-Self-Governing Territories and the action taken by the Secretary-General in relation to certain Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Aware of the pressing need of newly independent and emerging States for assistance from the United Nations and its system of organizations in the economic, social and other fields,

Aware also of the pressing need of many of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, many of which are small island Territories, for economic, social and other assistance from the United Nations and the organizations of its system,

Taking special note of the fact that, for the first time in a Non-Self-Governing Territory, the Special Committee held a Caribbean regional seminar on advancing the decolonization process in the Caribbean and Bermuda in Anguilla from 20 to 22 May 2003,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 1514(XV) and all other resolutions and decisions on decolonization, including its resolution 55/146, in which it declares the period 2001-2010 the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon the administering Powers, in accordance with those resolutions, to take all necessary steps to enable the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories concerned to exercise fully as soon as possible their right to self-determination, including independence;

2. Reaffirms once again that the existence of colonialism in any form or manifestation, including economic exploitation, is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

3. Reaffirms its determination to continue to take all steps necessary to bring about the complete and speedy eradication of colonialism and the faithful observance by all States of the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

4. Affirms once again its support for the aspirations of the peoples under colonial rule to exercise their right to self-determination, including independence, in accordance with relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

5. Approves the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples covering its work during 2003, including the programme of work envisaged for 2004;

6. Calls upon the administering Powers to cooperate fully with the Special Committee to finalize before the end of 2004 a constructive programme of work on a case-by-case basis for the Non-Self-Governing Territories to facilitate the implementation of the mandate of the Special Committee and the relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

7. Welcomes the ongoing consultations between the Special Committee and New Zealand, as administering Power for Tokelau, with the participation of representatives of the people of Tokelau, with a view to advancing the programme of work on the question of Tokelau;

8. Requests the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of the Declaration and to carry out the actions approved by the General Assembly regarding the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism and the Second International Decade in all Territories that have not yet exercised their right to self-determination, including independence, and in particular:

(a) To formulate specific proposals to bring about an end to colonialism and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

(b) To continue to examine the implementation by Member States of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization;

(c) To continue to examine the political, economic and social situation in the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and to recommend, as appropriate, to the General Assembly the most suitable steps to be taken to enable the populations of those Territories to exercise their right to self-determination, including independence, in accordance with relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(d) To finalize before the end of 2004 a constructive programme of work on a case-by-case basis for the Non-Self-Governing Territories to facilitate the implementation of the mandate of the Special Committee and the relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(e) To continue to dispatch visiting missions to the Non-Self-Governing Territories in accordance with relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(f) To conduct seminars, as appropriate, for the purpose of receiving and disseminating information on the work of the Special Committee, and to facilitate participation by the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in those seminars;

(g) To take all necessary steps to enlist worldwide support among Governments, as well as national and international organizations, for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration and the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

(h) To observe annually the Week of Solidarity with the Peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

9. Calls upon all States, in particular the administering Powers, as well as the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to give effect within their respective spheres of competence to the recommendations of the Special Committee for the implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

10. Calls upon the administering Powers to ensure that the economic activities in the Non-Self-Governing Territories under their administration do not adversely affect the interests of the peoples but instead promote development, and to assist them in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

11. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable rights of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to their natural resources, including land, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories;

12. Urges all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to provide moral and material assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and requests that the administering Powers take steps to enlist and make effective use of all possible assistance, on both a bilateral and a multilateral basis, in the strengthening of the economies of those Territories;

13. Reaffirms that the United Nations visiting missions to the Territories are an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, as well as the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants, and calls upon the administering Powers to continue to cooperate with the Special Committee in the discharge of its mandate and to facilitate visiting missions to the Territories;

14. Calls upon the administering Powers that have not participated formally in the work of the Special Committee to do so at its session in 2004;

15. Requests the Secretary-General, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to provide economic, social and other assistance to the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to continue to do so, as appropriate, after they exercise their right to self-determination, including independence;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the facilities and services required for the implementation of the present resolution, as well as of the other resolutions and decisions on decolonization adopted by the General Assembly and the Special Committee.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/111:

In favour: Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, France, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Belgium, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Germany, Israel, Micronesia.

Speaking after the vote, the United Kingdom said that it continued to find some elements of the text unacceptable. However, it remained committed to modernizing its relationship with its overseas Territories, taking into account the views of the peoples of those Territories, and to furthering the process of informal dialogue with the Special Committee on decolonization.

Implementation by international organizations

In a March report [A/58/66], the Secretary-General stated that he had brought General Assembly resolution 57/133 [YUN 2002, p. 561] to the attention of the specialized agencies and other international institutions associated with the United Nations and invited them to submit information regarding their implementation of activities in support of NSGTs. Replies received from six agencies or institutions were summarized in an April report of the Economic and Social Council President on consultations held with the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization [E/2003/47]. According to the information provided, a number of specialized agencies and organizations continued to extend programmes of assistance to NSGTs from within their own budgetary resources, in addition to their respective contributions as executing agencies of projects funded by UNDP.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/51 [draft: E/2003/L.33] by recorded vote (32-0-20) [agenda item 9].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,
Having examined the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council containing the information submitted by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations on their activities with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having heard the statement by the representative of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, the resolutions of the Special Committee and other relevant resolutions and decisions, including in particular Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/30 of 25 July 2002,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, now the African Union, the South Pacific Forum, now the Pacific Islands Forum, and the Caribbean Community,

Conscious of the need to facilitate the implementation of the Declaration,

Welcoming the participation, in the capacity of observer, of those Non-Self-Governing Territories that are associate members of the regional commissions in United Nations world conferences in the economic and social sphere, subject to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the Assembly and the Special Committee on specific Territories, as well as in the World Summit on Sustainable Development, held in Johannesburg, South Africa, from 26 August to 4 September 2002,

Noting that the large majority of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories are small island Territories,

Welcoming the assistance extended to Non-Self-Governing Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Stressing that, because the development options of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories are limited, there are special challenges to planning for and implementing sustainable development and that those Territories will be constrained in meeting the challenges without the continued cooperation and assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system,

Stressing also the importance of securing the necessary resources for funding expanded assistance programmes for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of all major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Reaffirming the mandates of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all the appropriate measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum, the Caribbean Community and other regional organizations for the continued cooperation and assistance they have extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in this regard,

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of programmes of assistance to the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes, cyclones and sea-level rise, and recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 57/140 of 11 December 2002, entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples",

1. Takes note of the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council containing the information submitted by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations on their activities with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and endorses the observations and suggestions arising therefrom;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

3. Recommends that all States intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration, contained in resolution 1514(XV), and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

4. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute to the implementation of the Declaration and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions;

5. Also reaffirms that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the aspirations of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to exercise their right to self-determination entails, as a corollary, the extension of all appropriate assistance to those peoples;

6. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to cooperate with the United Nations and the regional and subregional organizations in the implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and requests all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to implement the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

7. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and international and regional organizations to examine and review conditions in each Territory so as to take appropriate measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of the Territories;

8. Requests the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations and regional organizations to strengthen existing measures of support and to formulate appropriate programmes of assistance to the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, within the framework of their respective mandates, in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

9. Recommends that the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system formulate, with the active co-operation of the regional organizations concerned, concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and submit the proposals to their governing and legislative organs;

10. Also recommends that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system continue to review, at the regular meetings of their governing bodies, the implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

11. Welcomes the continuing initiative exercised by the United Nations Development Programme in maintaining close liaison among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and in providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

12. Encourages Non-Self-Governing Territories to take steps to establish and/or strengthen disaster preparedness and management institutions and policies;

13. Requests the administering Powers concerned to facilitate, when appropriate, the participation of appointed and elected representatives of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the meetings and conferences on specific Territories held by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, so that the Territories may benefit from the related activities of those agencies and organizations;

14. Recommends that all Governments intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to accord priority to the question of providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

15. Draws the attention of the Special Committee to the present resolution and to the discussion held on the subject at the substantive session of 2003 of the Council;

16. Welcomes the adoption by the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean of resolution 574(XXVII) of 16 May 1998 calling for the necessary mechanisms for its associate members, including small island Non-Self-Governing Territories, to participate in the special sessions of the General Assembly, subject to the rules of procedure of the Assembly, to review and assess the implementation of the plans of action of those United Nations world conferences in which the Territories originally participated in the capacity of observer, and in the work of the Council and its subsidiary bodies;

17. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to continue to maintain close contact on these matters with the Chairman of the Special Committee and to report thereon to the Council;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to follow the implementation of the present resolution, paying particular attention to cooperation and integration arrangements for maximizing the efficiency of the assistance activities undertaken by various organizations of the United Nations system, and to report thereon to the Council at its substantive session of 2004;

19. Decides to keep these questions under continuous review.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/58/478], adopted resolution 58/104 by recorded vote (116-0-55) [agenda items 89 & 12].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

Having also considered the report of the Secretary-General on the item,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960 and the resolutions of the Special Committee, as well as other relevant resolutions and decisions, including in particular Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/30 of 25 July 2002,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

Conscious of the need to facilitate the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in resolution 1514(XV),

Noting that the large majority of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories are small island Territories,

Welcoming the assistance extended to Non-Self-Governing Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Also welcoming the current participation in the capacity of observers of those Non-Self-Governing Territories that are associate members of regional commissions in the world conferences in the economic and social sphere, subject to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the Assembly and the Special Committee on specific Territories,

Noting that only some specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system have been involved in providing assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Stressing that, because the development options of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories are limited, there are special challenges to planning for and implementing sustainable development and that those Territories will be constrained in meeting the challenges without the continuing cooperation and assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system,

Stressing also the importance of securing the necessary resources for funding expanded programmes of assistance for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of all major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Reaffirming the mandates of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all appropriate measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum, the Caribbean Community and other regional organizations for the continued cooperation and assistance they have extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in this regard,

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of programmes of assistance to the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurri-

cans, cyclones and sea-level rise, and recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 57/133 of 11 December 2002 on the implementation of the Declaration by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Recommends that all States intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

3. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute to the implementation of the Declaration and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions;

4. Reaffirms also that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the aspirations of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to exercise their right to self-determination entails, as a corollary, the extension of all appropriate assistance to those peoples;

5. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to cooperate with the United Nations and the regional and subregional organizations in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and requests all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to implement the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

6. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and international and regional organizations to examine and review conditions in each Territory so as to take appropriate measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of the Territories;

7. Urges those specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system that have not yet provided assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories to do so as soon as possible;

8. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system and regional organizations to strengthen existing measures of support and formulate appropriate programmes of assistance to the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, within the framework of their respective mandates, in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

9. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system concerned to provide information on:

- (a) Environmental problems facing the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

- (b) The impact of natural disasters, such as hurricanes and volcanic eruptions, and other environmental problems, such as beach and coastal erosion and droughts, on those Territories;

(c) Ways and means to assist the Territories to fight drug trafficking, money-laundering and other illegal and criminal activities;

(d) The illegal exploitation of the marine resources of the Territories and the need to utilize those resources for the benefit of the peoples of the Territories;

10. Recommends that the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system formulate, with the active co-operation of the regional organizations concerned, concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and submit the proposals to their governing and legislative organs;

11. Also recommends that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system continue to review at the regular meetings of their governing bodies the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

12. Welcomes the continuing initiative exercised by the United Nations Development Programme in maintaining close liaison among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and in providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

13. Encourages the Non-Self-Governing Territories to take steps to establish and/or strengthen disaster preparedness and management institutions and policies;

14. Requests the administering Powers concerned to facilitate, when appropriate, the participation of appointed and elected representatives of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the relevant meetings and conferences of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples on specific Territories, so that the Territories may benefit from the related activities of those agencies and organizations;

15. Recommends that all Governments intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to accord priority to the question of providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assist the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in working out appropriate measures for implementing the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and to prepare for submission to the relevant bodies, with the assistance of those agencies and organizations, a report on the action taken in implementation of the relevant resolutions, including the present resolution, since the circulation of his previous report;

17. Commends the Economic and Social Council for its debate and resolution on this question, and requests it to continue to consider, in consultation with the Special Committee, appropriate measures for the coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in implementing the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

18. Requests the specialized agencies to report periodically to the Secretary-General on the implementation of the present resolution;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to the governing bodies of the appropriate specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations so that those bodies may take the necessary measures to implement the resolution, and also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

20. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/477], adopted resolution 58/103 by recorded vote (164-2-3) [agenda item 88].

Economic and other activities which affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Economic and other activities which affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories",

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, as well as all other relevant Assembly resolutions including, in particular, resolutions 46/181 of 19 December 1991 and 55/146 of 8 December 2000,

Reaffirming the solemn obligation of the administering Powers under the Charter of the United Nations to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Territories under their administration and to protect the human and natural resources of those Territories against abuses,

Reaffirming also that any economic or other activity that has a negative impact on the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and on the exercise of their right to self-determination in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) is contrary to the purposes and principles of the Charter,

Reaffirming further that the natural resources are the heritage of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, including the indigenous populations,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location, size and economic conditions of each Territory, and bearing in mind the need to promote the economic stability, diversification and strengthening of the economy of each Territory,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the small Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation,

Conscious also that foreign economic investment, when undertaken in collaboration with the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and in accordance with their wishes, could make a valid contribution to the socio-economic development of the Territories and also to the exercise of their right to self-determination,

Concerned about any activities aimed at exploiting the natural and human resources of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to the detriment of the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

1. Reaffirms the right of peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, as well as their right to the enjoyment of their natural resources and their right to dispose of those resources in their best interest;

2. Affirms the value of foreign economic investment undertaken in collaboration with the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and in accordance with their wishes in order to make a valid contribution to the socio-economic development of the Territories;

3. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Powers under the Charter of the United Nations to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and reaffirms the legitimate rights of their peoples over their natural resources;

4. Reaffirms its concern about any activities aimed at the exploitation of the natural resources that are the heritage of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, including the indigenous populations, in the Caribbean, the Pacific and other regions, and of their human resources, to the detriment of their interests, and in such a way as to deprive them of their right to dispose of those resources;

5. Affirms the need to avoid any economic and other activities that adversely affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

6. Calls once again upon all Governments that have not yet done so to take, in accordance with the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolution 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that own and operate enterprises in the Non-Self-Governing Territories that are detrimental to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories, in order to put an end to such enterprises;

7. Reiterates that the damaging exploitation and plundering of the marine and other natural resources of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, in violation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, are a threat to the integrity and prosperity of those Territories;

8. Invites all Governments and organizations of the United Nations system to take all possible measures to ensure that the permanent sovereignty of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

9. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

10. Calls upon the administering Powers concerned to ensure that no discriminatory working conditions prevail in the Territories under their administration and to promote in each Territory a fair system of wages applicable to all the inhabitants without any discrimination;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue, through all means at his disposal, to inform world public opinion of any activity that affects the exercise of the right of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

12. Appeals to the mass media, trade unions and non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals, to continue their efforts to promote the economic well-being of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

13. Decides to follow the situation in the Non-Self-Governing Territories so as to ensure that all economic activities in those Territories are aimed at strengthening and diversifying their economies in the interest of their peoples, including the indigenous populations, and at promoting the economic and financial viability of those Territories;

14. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/103:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Dissemination of information

The Special Committee on decolonization held consultations in June with representatives of the UN Departments of Political Affairs and of Public Information (DPI) on the dissemination of information on decolonization. It also considered a report of the Secretary-General on DPI activities on the topic from June 2002 to May 2003 [A/AC.109/2003/18].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Special Committee on decolonization [A/58/23], adopted resolution 58/110 by recorded vote (162-3) [agenda item 19].

Dissemination of information on decolonization

The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations concerning the dissemination of information on decolonization, in particular resolution 57/139 of 11 December 2002,

Recognizing the need for flexible, practical and innovative approaches towards reviewing the options of self-determination for the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories with a view to achieving the goals of the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Reiterating the importance of dissemination of information as an instrument for furthering the aims of the Declaration, and mindful of the role of world public opinion in effectively assisting the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories to achieve self-determination,

Recognizing the role played by the administering Powers in transmitting information to the Secretary-General in accordance with the terms of Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Aware of the role of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization,

1. Approves the activities in the field of dissemination of information on decolonization undertaken by the Department of Public Information and the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

2. Considers it important to continue its efforts to ensure the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with particular emphasis on the options of self-determination available for the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Requests the Department of Political Affairs and the Department of Public Information to take into account the suggestions of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue their efforts to take measures through all the media available, including publications, radio and television, as well as the Internet, to give publicity to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization and, inter alia:

(a) To continue to collect, prepare and disseminate, particularly to the Territories, basic material on the issue of self-determination of the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

(b) To seek the full cooperation of the administering Powers in the discharge of the tasks referred to above;

(c) To maintain a working relationship with the appropriate regional and intergovernmental organizations, particularly in the Pacific and Caribbean regions, by holding periodic consultations and exchanging information;

(d) To encourage the involvement of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization;

(e) To report to the Special Committee on measures taken in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Requests all States, including the administering Powers, to continue to extend their cooperation in the dissemination of information referred to in paragraph 2 above;

5. Requests the Special Committee to follow the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

Speaking after the vote, the United Kingdom stated that it continued to view the obligation the text placed on the Secretariat to publicize decolonization issues as an unwarranted drain on scarce UN resources.

Information on Territories

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/131 [YUN 2002, p. 567], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [A/58/69] indicating the dates of transmittal of information on economic, social and educational conditions in NSGTs for the years 2001-2004, under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/476], adopted resolution 58/102 by recorded vote (163-0-6) [agenda item 87].

Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1970(XVIII) of 16 December 1963, in which it requested the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to study the information transmitted to the Secretary-General in accordance with Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations and to take such information fully into account in examining the situation with regard to the implementation of the Declaration, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Recalling also its resolution 57/131 of 11 December 2002, in which it requested the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under resolution 1970(XVIII),

Stressing the importance of timely transmission by the administering Powers of adequate information under Article 73 e of the Charter, in particular in relation to the preparation by the Secretariat of the working papers on the Territories concerned,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that, in the absence of a decision by the General Assembly itself that a Non-Self-Governing Territory has attained a full measure of self-government in terms of Chapter XI of the Charter of the United Nations, the administering Power concerned should continue to transmit information under Article 73 e of the Charter with respect to that Territory;

2. Requests the administering Powers concerned to transmit or continue to transmit to the Secretary-General the information prescribed in Article 73 e of the Charter, as well as the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned, within a maximum period of six months following the expiration of the administrative year in those Territories;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that adequate information is drawn from all available published sources in connection with the preparation of the working papers relating to the Territories concerned;

4. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under General Assembly resolution 1970(XVIII), in accordance with established procedures.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/102:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Study and training

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/134 [YUN 2002, p. 568], the Secretary-General reported on offers of study and training scholarships for inhabitants of NSGTs during the period 11 June 2002 to 1 April 2003 by the following Member States: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Mexico, Sweden and the United Kingdom [A/58/71]. Fifty-six Member States and one non-member State had made such offers over the years.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/479], adopted resolution 58/105 without vote [agenda item 90].

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/134 of 11 December 2002,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to its resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Conscious of the importance of promoting the educational advancement of the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Strongly convinced that the continuation and expansion of offers of scholarships is essential in order to meet the increasing need of students from Non-Self-Governing Territories for educational and training assistance, and considering that students in those Territories should be encouraged to avail themselves of such offers,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Invites all States to make or continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;

4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

Visiting missions

In June, the Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of sending visiting missions to NSGTs [A/58/23]. It adopted a resolution in which it stressed the need to dispatch periodic visiting missions to facilitate the full implementation of the 1960 Declaration on decolonization, called on administering Powers to receive those missions in the Territories under their administration, and asked its Chairman to enter into consultations with the administering Power of Guam to facilitate a mission to that Territory.

The Committee recommended to the General Assembly for adoption draft resolutions on 11 small NSGTs (see p. 616) and on Tokelau (see p. 613). In its draft resolutions, the Committee endorsed a number of conclusions and recommendations concerning the sending of visiting missions to the Territories.

Puerto Rico

In accordance with the Special Committee's 2002 resolution concerning the self-determination and independence of Puerto Rico [YUN 2002, p. 568], the Committee's Rapporteur, in a May report [A/AC.109/2003/L.3], provided information on Puerto Rico, including recent political, military and economic developments and UN action.

Following its usual practice, the Committee acceded to requests for hearings from representatives of a number of organizations, who presented their views on 9 June [A/58/23]. The Committee adopted a resolution without vote, by which it reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of Puerto Rico to self-determination and independence; called on the United States to assume its responsibility of expediting a process to allow the Puerto Rican people to exercise that right; urged the United States to return the island of Vieques to the people of Puerto Rico; and requested the Rapporteur to report in 2004 on the resolution's implementation.

Territories under review

Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) on 16 June [A/58/23], when it examined a Secretariat working paper on constitutional and political developments, mine clearance, and economic and social conditions in that Territory [A/AC.109/2003/17]. The Special Committee adopted a resolution [A/AC.109/2003/24] requesting Argentina and the United Kingdom to consolidate the current process of dialogue and cooperation through the resumption of negotiations in order to find, as soon as possible, a peaceful solution to the sovereignty dispute.

Argentina, in a 3 January letter [A/57/704], transmitted to the Secretary-General a press release recalling its objective to recover full sovereignty over the Malvinas Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands and surrounding maritime areas through peaceful means; reaffirmed its conviction that the resumption of negotiations on the sovereignty issue would contribute to the establishment of a framework conducive to achieving a fair and lasting solution to the dispute; and stated that it was acting in the belief that interim understandings reached with the United Kingdom under the formula for safeguarding sovereignty rights in the South Atlantic were also contributing to the search for a solution. The United Kingdom responded on the same date [A/57/708], stating that it had no doubt about its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands and rejecting as unfounded Argentina's claim to sovereignty.

Addressing the General Assembly during the general debate on 25 September [A/58/PV.II], Argentina's President, Néstor Carlos Kirchner, stated that his country was fully willing to negotiate in order to settle conclusively the sovereignty dispute, and urged the United Kingdom to resume bilateral negotiations. In exercise of its right of reply, the United Kingdom, in a 25 September statement [A/58/408], welcomed Argentina's resolve, which it shared, to engage in positive bilateral exchanges of practical cooperation in the South Atlantic. However, while such exchanges contributed further to the mutual understanding embodied in the 1999 Anglo-Argentine joint statement [YUN 1999, p. 536], nothing in that statement compromised the United Kingdom's position on sovereignty. On 16 June, elected representatives of the Islands again asked the Special Committee to recognize that they, like any other people, were entitled to exercise the right of self-determination and reiterated that the people of the Falkland Islands did not wish to change the status of the islands. The United Kingdom remained committed to the right of the people of the Falkland Islands to determine their own future, and there would be no change in the island's sovereignty unless the islanders wished it. It was confident that its relationship with Argentina would develop and believed that cooperation between the two countries on matters of mutual interest would enable them to manage their differences, while assisting in the development of confidence and trust in the South Atlantic.

Argentina, in an 11 November letter to the Assembly President [A/58/602], pointed out that the persons from the Malvinas Islands who participated in the 16 June meeting of the Special Committee on decolonization did so as petitioners, without the representative status claimed by the United Kingdom in its statement and rejected by Argentina. With respect to the United Kingdom's reference to self-determination, Argentina reaffirmed the need to apply the principle of territorial integrity to the special and particular colonial situation under the item on the question of the Malvinas Islands; it cited Assembly resolution 2065(XX) [YUN 1965, p. 578], which called on both countries to resume bilateral negotiations with a view to finding a just, peaceful and definitive solution to the sovereignty dispute, bearing in mind the interests of the islands' population. Argentina clarified that, in addition to the 1999 joint statement, other provisional understandings with the United Kingdom relating to sovereignty safeguarded Argentina's position in the dispute over the Territories, and that those understandings, in addition to resolving some practical problems in the South Atlantic, were conducive to the renewal of bilateral negotiations on sovereignty.

In a 20 October letter to the Secretary-General [A/58/527], Argentina reiterated its rejection of the 1999 "White Paper on Partnership for Peace and Prosperity: Britain and the Overseas Territories" [YUN 2001, p. 542] and the designation of the Malvinas, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands as British Overseas Territories, as well as any unilateral changes in the situation while the sovereignty dispute was unresolved. The letter recalled several Assembly resolutions recognizing the existence of a sovereignty dispute regarding those Territories and recommending that it be resolved through bilateral negotiations. Argentina reaffirmed its sovereignty over the islands and surrounding maritime spaces, which were an integral part of its national territory.

By decision 58/511 of 5 November, the Assembly deferred consideration of the item on the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) and included it in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

Gibraltar

The Special Committee on decolonization took up consideration of the question of Gibraltar on 4 June [A/58/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper describing political developments and economic and social conditions in the Territory, and setting forth the positions of the United Kingdom (the administering Power), Gibraltar and Spain concerning Gibraltar's future status [A/AC.109/2003/3].

On 12 July 2002, British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw had announced before the House of Commons that, within the context of the Anglo-Spanish negotiations on Gibraltar, the United Kingdom and Spain were in broad agreement on principles that should underpin a lasting settlement, including that Britain and Spain should share sovereignty over the Territory, which should retain its British traditions and its institutions, including its Government, House of Assembly, courts and police service, as well as the right to British nationality. It would gain the right to Spanish nationality. Gibraltar could choose to participate fully in the European Union (EU) single market and other EU arrangements. If a comprehensive settlement was reached by all parties based on those principles, the whole package would be put to the people of Gibraltar to decide in a referendum.

Gibraltar's Chief Minister Peter Caruana, speaking before the Fourth Committee on 3 October 2002, condemned the Foreign Secretary's formal statement regarding shared sovereignty with Spain. He explained that he had declined an invitation to participate in the Anglo-Spanish negotiations because he would not have had an equal say or been given assurances of not being excluded from agreements reached between Spain and the United Kingdom, and his presence would have been used to flesh out details of a predetermined agreement on joint sovereignty. He urged the Committee to refer the case to the International Court of Justice for an advisory opinion, amend its annual draft decision on Gibraltar, which continued to favour Spain and the United Kingdom, in order to give the people of Gibraltar an equal and separate voice in the dialogue, and affirm the primacy of the wishes of the people of Gibraltar and the principle of self-determination.

On 4 October 2002, the United Kingdom representative said that the agreement on co-sovereignty was a historic one and questioned the purpose of the referendum being organized by Gibraltar since no proposal for such a vote had been put forward. He made it clear that it was the British Government's responsibility, in consultation with Gibraltar, to oversee the organization and timing of any referendum once a comprehensive settlement with Spain had been reached.

In a 7 November 2002 referendum held by the Government of Gibraltar on the issue of Anglo-Spanish joint sovereignty, 98.97 per cent of voters rejected the concept. On 8 November 2002, the British Minister for Europe stated that the United Kingdom had always made clear that there would be no change in Gibraltar's sovereignty without the consent of the people in a referendum, and there were no such proposals on the table. Spain's Vice-President, its Minister for Foreign Affairs and its Permanent Representative to the United Nations, among other officials, stated that the 7 November referendum had no legal validity and stressed the importance of continuing the Anglo-Spanish negotiations.

In his 2003 New Year message, Gibraltar's Chief Minister said that Gibraltar remained willing to negotiate in a structured, reasonable, open-agenda dialogue with no predetermined outcome, but dialogue should not be confused with sovereignty transfer negotiations. He proposed that formal negotiations with the United Kingdom should begin in 2003 on the constitutional reform proposals made in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 570].

A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2004/7] reported that, on 15 July 2003, the Foreign Affairs Committee of the British House of Commons recommended that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office withdraw its joint sovereignty proposal and proceed with establishing normal and cooperative relations between Gibraltar and Spain. In September, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs responded that the British Government fully agreed that normal and cooperative relations between Spain and Gibraltar were highly desirable, and it would continue to press the Spanish Government to that end, but its position regarding the issue of joint sovereignty remained the same (see p. 610).

The Chief Minister of Gibraltar said that the Gibraltar Parliament had unanimously adopted a resolution asking the Special Committee to visit Gibraltar, and he urged the Fourth Committee to ask the Special Committee to do so. With respect to the principle of sharing sovereignty between Spain and the United Kingdom, the Chief Minister reaffirmed that it was unacceptable to the people of Gibraltar, who saw it as a way to perpetuate the colonization of their Territory by two Powers instead of one.

Spain's representative replied that Gibraltar, by inviting the Special Committee to send a visiting mission to the Territory and launching a petition of support for the mission, was attempting to garner support for its opposition to the principle of territorial integrity traditionally recognized by the United Nations and international law. Stressing its opposition to such a mission, Spain declared that in cases related to sovereignty, the sending of a visiting mission of the Special Committee had to be approved by both the administering Power and the other party to the dispute.

Joint talks between Spain and the United Kingdom on Gibraltar were not held in 2003, but Gibraltar's Chief Minister, in a speech during Gibraltar's National Day (10 September), warned Spain and the United Kingdom that if they restarted the joint sovereignty negotiations, Gibraltar would restart its political campaign to oppose them, adding that no Government of Gibraltar had ever been, or would ever be, willing to negotiate the transfer of any part of Gibraltar's sovereignty to Spain.

On 22 December, Gibraltar's Chief Minister submitted the 2002 constitutional reform proposals formally to the British Secretary for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and suggested that the two sides meet informally to discuss the proposals and the way forward. The Secretary of State acknowledged the importance of the proposals and said they would receive careful consideration; he would meet the Chief Minister soon for an initial discussion and was looking forward to discussing them in due course, with a view to the further development of a modern and appropriate relationship with Gibraltar.

After hearing statements by the Deputy Chief Minister of Gibraltar, the Leader of the Opposition in Gibraltar and the representative of Spain, the Special Committee decided to continue consideration of the question in 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/480], adopted decision 58/526 without vote [agenda item 19].

Question of Gibraltar

At its 72nd plenary meeting, on 9 December 2003, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee), adopted the following text:

"The General Assembly, recalling its decision 57/526 of 11 December 2002, and recalling at the same time that the statement agreed to by the Governments of Spain and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland at Brussels on 27 November 1984 stipulates, inter alia, the following:

"The establishment of a negotiating process aimed at overcoming all the differences between them over Gibraltar and at promoting cooperation on a mutually beneficial basis on economic, cultural, touristic, aviation, military and environmental matters. Both sides accept that the issues of sovereignty will be discussed in that process. The British Government will fully maintain its commitment to honour the wishes of the people of Gibraltar as set out in the preamble of the 1969 Constitution", takes note of the fact that, as part of this process, the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Spain and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland hold annual meetings alternately in each country, the most recent of which were held in Barcelona on 20 November 2001 and in London on 4 February 2002, and urges both Governments to continue their negotiations with the object of reaching a definitive solution to the problem of Gibraltar in the light of relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and in the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations."

New Caledonia

In accordance with the 1998 Nouméa Accord on New Caledonia's future status [YUN 1998, p. 574], the transfer of power from France (the administering Power) continued in 2003. The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of the Territory on 12 June [A/58/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper describing the political situation and economic data and developments in the Territory [A/AC.109/2003/7].

A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2004/11] reported that, according to France, the institutions created under the Nouméa Accord continued to function properly throughout 2003, and the Territory's pro-independence (Front de libération nationale kanak socialiste (FLNKS)) and pro-integration (formerly Rassemblement pour la Calédonie dans la République and still usually referred to as RPCR) political parties continued to be committed to the Accord's implementation. During the year, the Institut de formation des personnels administratifs and the Office des postes et télécommunications were transferred and steps were taken to finalize the transfer of services for labour inspection, foreign trade, primary education, mining and energy.

In spite of considerable institutional and administrative advances, progress continued to be hindered by friction between the pro-integration and pro-independence parties, owing to differing interpretations of the concept of collegiality in Government, and other sensitive issues, including voter eligibility and mining initiatives. According to France, the New Caledonian political scenario was more calm and less bipolar in 2003. However, according to the Economist Intelligence Unit, a provider of country, industry and management analysis, discontent among the indigenous Kanak population over the pace of the implementation of the Nouméa Accord was expected to fuel political tensions, and there was growing concern among FLNKS members about its lack of representation in the Government. The July visit of French President Jacques Chirac further increased tensions between the pro- and anti-independence parties. President Chirac stressed France's role as a partner in the transfer of further jurisdictions to New Caledonia and pledged that France would fully implement and respect the Nouméa Accord and help to develop further education, environment, regional co-operation and metallurgical projects.

Prior to President Chirac's visit, the committee of Nouméa Accord signatories, including the French Minister for Overseas Territories and representatives of RPCR and FLNKS, met in June in Kone, New Caledonia. According to France, the parties affirmed in a joint declaration that the institutions created by the Accord were working well and that the transfer of powers was continuing. The committee members reaffirmed their intentions to meet frequently and to follow closely the implementation of the Accord and ongoing reforms.

In September, a visiting French parliamentary delegation also concluded that implementation of the Nouméa Accord was proceeding well. However, the Kanak community argued that the reforms outlined in the Accord were being implemented too slowly, especially those relating to voters' residency requirements [YUN 1999, p. 538], which remained unsettled pending the scheduling of a joint session of the French National Assembly and the Senate to ratify a constitutional amendment on the issue; President Chirac promised a resolution of the question by 2007. A long-delayed FLNKS congress was to be held in December, during which its two main constituent parties, the Union calédonienne and Palika, hoped to resolve their disputes and draw up a common platform for the May 2004 provincial elections. FLNKS had been leaderless since 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 544], a situation that was expected to continue until after the elections. The ongoing instability could jeopardize the Nouméa Accord process, and the dissolution of FLNKS could not be ruled out.

The inter-ethnic strain between Kanaks and settlers from the French territory of Wallis and Futuna continued to cause tension. After a long-standing dispute over the housing of people from Wallis and Futuna on disputed land near Nouméa, the last 30 Wallisian families were moved from the area under police guard in September, prompting claims of ethnic cleansing by Didier Leroux, leader of the Opposition Alliance Party. The Wallisians were expected to seek compensation from France. Nevertheless, the Kanak and Wallisian communities signed an accord in December stipulating that the principle of dialogue on all decisions taken by New Caledonia could affect its inhabitants from Wallis and Futuna.

In September, the Customary Senate, considered the institutional guarantor of Kanak identity, with a rotating presidency, selected a new chief, Gabriel Poadae. Mr. Poadae promised to focus on indigenous rights to New Caledonia's nickel resources, the teaching of indigenous languages in schools and the mapping of traditional lands.

On 12 June, the Special Committee adopted a resolution on the question of New Caledonia [A/AC.109/2003/23], deciding to keep under continuous review the Nouméa Accord process and to report to the General Assembly in 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/480], adopted resolution 58/106 without vote [agenda item 19].

Question of New Caledonia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of New Caledonia,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to New Caledonia,

Reaffirming the right of peoples to self-determination as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960,

Noting the importance of the positive measures being pursued in New Caledonia by the French authorities, in cooperation with all sectors of the population, to promote political, economic and social development in the Territory, including measures in the area of environmental protection and action with respect to drug abuse and trafficking, in order to provide a framework for its peaceful progress to self-determination,

Noting also, in this context, the importance of equitable economic and social development, as well as continued dialogue among the parties involved in New Caledonia in the preparation of the act of self-determination of New Caledonia,

Noting with satisfaction the intensification of contacts between New Caledonia and neighbouring countries of the South Pacific region,

1. Welcomes the significant developments that have taken place in New Caledonia as exemplified by the signing of the Nouméa Accord of 5 May 1998 by the representatives of New Caledonia and the Government of France;

2. Urges all the parties involved, in the interest of all the people of New Caledonia, to maintain, in the framework of the Nouméa Accord, their dialogue in a spirit of harmony;

3. Notes the relevant provisions of the Nouméa Accord aimed at taking more broadly into account the Kanak identity in the political and social organization of New Caledonia, and also those provisions of the Accord relating to control of immigration and protection of local employment;

4. Also notes the relevant provisions of the Nouméa Accord to the effect that New Caledonia may become a member or associate member of certain international organizations, such as international organizations in the Pacific region, the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Labour Organization, according to their regulations;

5. Further notes the agreement between the signatories of the Nouméa Accord that the progress made in the emancipation process shall be brought to the attention of the United Nations;

6. Welcomes the fact that the administering Power invited to New Caledonia, at the time the new institutions were established, a mission of information which comprised representatives of countries of the Pacific region;

7. Calls upon the administering Power to transmit information regarding the political, economic and social situation of New Caledonia to the Secretary-General;

8. Invites all the parties involved to continue promoting a framework for the peaceful progress of the Territory towards an act of self-determination in which all options are open and which would safeguard the rights of all New Caledonians according to the letter and the spirit of the Nouméa Accord, which is based on the principle that it is for the populations of New Caledonia to choose how to control their destiny;

9. Welcomes measures that have been taken to strengthen and diversify the New Caledonian economy in all fields, and encourages further such measures in accordance with the spirit of the Matignon and Nouméa Accords;

10. Also welcomes the importance attached by the parties to the Matignon and Nouméa Accords to greater progress in housing, employment, training, education and health care in New Caledonia;

11. Acknowledges the contribution of the Melanesian Cultural Centre to the protection of the indigenous culture of New Caledonia;

12. Notes the positive initiatives aimed at protecting the natural environment of New Caledonia, notably the "Zonéco" operation designed to map and evaluate marine resources within the economic zone of New Caledonia;

13. Acknowledges the close links between New Caledonia and the peoples of the South Pacific and the positive actions being taken by the French and territorial authorities to facilitate the further development of those links, including the development of closer relations with the countries members of the Pacific Islands Forum;

14. Welcomes, in this regard, the accession by New Caledonia to the status of observer in the Pacific Islands Forum, continuing high-level visits to New Caledonia by delegations from countries of the Pacific region and high-level visits by delegations from New Caledonia to countries members of the Pacific Islands Forum;

15. Decides to keep under continuous review the process unfolding in New Caledonia as a result of the signing of the Nouméa Accord;

16. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territory of New Caledonia and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

Tokelau

On 23 June, the Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Tokelau (the three small atolls of Nukunonu, Fakaofu and Atafu in the South Pacific), administered by New Zealand [A/58/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper covering constitutional and political developments and economic and social conditions in the Territory, and setting out the positions of New Zealand and Tokelau on the Territory's future status [A/AC.109/2003/10].

A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2004/8] reported that, in January, Fakaofu's Faipule (the representative of each village/atoll), Kolouei O'Brien, was installed as Ulu-o-Tokelau (titular head of the Territory), a position that was rotated annually among the three Faipule.

Following a review of representation within the General Fono (Tokelau's national representative body) at the October meeting of its Special Committee on the Constitution and by a November meeting of the General Fono, it was decided that existing arrangements would be maintained for the time being. The October meeting endorsed the General Fono's current powers and decided to appoint an independent Chairperson of the General Fono on an annual rotation. The General Fono took a number of decisions relating to Tokelau's legislative framework, passed new laws on issues such as dangerous goods, criminal proceedings, business incorporation rules, biosecurity and health regulations, land ownership, and the role of Law Commissioners, and enacted rules concerning Tokelau's observance of international human rights norms and standards. It also renamed the Council of Faipule the Council for Ongoing Government and expanded its membership to include the Pulemuku (mayor) from each of the villages.

In June, the General Fono agreed that the three Village Councils should assume full responsibility for all public services on their atolls by 30 June 2004. The decision stemmed from an earlier agreement on the Modern House of Tokelau approach [YUN 1998, p. 375], whereby the traditional Council of Elders on each atoll should serve as the foundation for a future governance structure. The Territory's New Zealand-appointed Administrator was asked to review Tokelau's public services to ensure that they were suitably equipped to handle their new responsibilities, and a Commission of Inquiry, conducted in September/October towards that end, issued a report containing recommendations relating to the future shape and functioning of Tokelau's public.

The General Fono also agreed that the activities previously undertaken under the Modern House project aimed at strengthening governance systems, boosting capability and enhancing development would henceforth be mainstreamed and run under the overall annual budget and planning process. From 1 July and beginning with the 2003/04 budget, Tokelau would be responsible for its full budget, including the budgetary support grant and development assistance provided by New Zealand.

Also in June, following a series of consultations, the General Fono agreed on the Principles of Partnership statement, drafted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 574] and subsequently approved by New Zealand; a formal signing ceremony was held in Tokelau in November, in the presence of New Zealand's Governor-General. The Partnership agreement provided the medium- to long-term context for carrying forward work on Tokelau's constitutional and other developments and addressed the management of the partnership, self-determination for Tokelau, its language and culture, New Zealand citizenship, shared values, economic and administrative assistance, coordination of services to the Territory, defence and security, foreign affairs, and the Tokelauan community in New Zealand. New Zealand also approved an administrative assistance scheme for Tokelau, whereby all New Zealand government agencies would provide assistance to Tokelau within their spheres of responsibility. The Tokelau Unit in Wellington would act as liaison and coordination point for the scheme; activities were already under way in health, education and fisheries.

In November, following consultations conducted by the Tokelau public service on all three atolls, the General Fono adopted a draft paper which brought together the main elements expected in the eventual Tokelauan Constitution. The paper, recommended by the Special Committee on the Constitution, drew upon customary practice, the written rules of the General Fono and parts of New Zealand law. The draft paper would be further developed as new governance structures were determined, and would form part of the dialogue between Tokelau and New Zealand on the Territory's future political status.

Also in November, based on a recommendation of the Special Committee on the Constitution, after extensive consultations held in each atoll, the General Fono formally endorsed, by consensus and with the support of the Village Councils, self-government in free association with New Zealand. The meeting of the Special Committee on the Constitution was greatly assisted by funding from UNDP.

Speaking before the Special Committee on decolonization, the Administrator of Tokelau said that, during the previous year, Tokelau had made significant advances in its political evolution and in the management of its national and regional interests. The Principles of Partnership agreement, which would be put before the New Zealand Cabinet, committed New Zealand to the ongoing provision of economic and technical support and outlined the way in which the two partners would work together for Tokelau's benefit. A constitutional conference would be held later in the year to discuss Tokelau's future political development.

At a 7 October meeting of the Fourth Committee, New Zealand noted that the Joint Statement on the Principles of Partnership, a political rather than legal document, was intended to give Tokelau some certainty and confidence as it worked towards self-determination. An early requirement was to develop information material on the three options available to NSGTs. New Zealand, with the cooperation of UNDP, would be working towards that goal, and Tokelau had organized a series of constitutional workshops.

At a 23 June meeting of the Special Committee on decolonization, the Ulu-o-Tokelau stated that, at the current stage, Tokelau needed practical details of the implications of an act of self-determination, and he hoped that New Zealand and the Special Committee would listen to Tokelau's views with regard to the pace of the process of exercising that right. The Ulu said that Tokelau was grateful to New Zealand for its efforts to express formally the principles underpinning the unique relationship between the two countries, and that the Principles of Partnership provided a firm foundation for Tokelau's ongoing development. The aim of current village consultations on constitutional developments was to assist the Council of Faipule to set an agenda for the upcoming September constitutional conference, and options for self-determination and governance arrangements would be part of the agenda. Devolution of authority to villages and traditional institutions was key to Tokelau's future.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/480], adopted resolution 58/107 without vote [agenda item 19].

Question of Tokelau

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Tokelau,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Tokelau,

Recalling the solemn declaration on the future status of Tokelau, contained in the 1994 "Voice of Tokelau", which stated that an act of self-determination in Tokelau was under active consideration, together with the constitution of a self-governing Tokelau, and that the then preference of Tokelau was for a status of free association with New Zealand,

Recalling also its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Non-Self-Governing Territories, in particular General Assembly resolution 57/137 of 11 December 2002,

Recalling further the emphasis placed in the solemn declaration on the terms of Tokelau's special relationship with New Zealand, including the expectation that the form of help that Tokelau could continue to expect from New Zealand in promoting the well-being of its people, besides its external interests, would be clearly established within the framework of that relationship,

Noting with appreciation the continuing exemplary cooperation of New Zealand as the administering Power with regard to the work of the Special Committee relating to Tokelau and its readiness to permit access by United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Noting also with appreciation the collaborative contribution to the development of Tokelau by New Zealand and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme and the World Health Organization,

Recalling the dispatch in August 2002 of a United Nations Mission to Tokelau, at the invitation of the Government of New Zealand and the representatives of Tokelau,

Recalling also the report of the United Nations Mission to Tokelau, 2002,

Noting that, as a small island Territory, Tokelau exemplifies the situation of most remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Noting also that, as a case study pointing to successful cooperation for decolonization, Tokelau has wider significance for the United Nations as it seeks to complete its work in decolonization,

1. Notes that Tokelau remains firmly committed to the development of self-government and to an act of self-determination that would result in Tokelau assuming a status in accordance with the options on future status for Non-Self-Governing Territories contained in principle VI of the annex to General Assembly resolution 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960;

2. Also notes the desire of Tokelau to move at its own pace towards an act of self-determination;

3. Further notes the inauguration in 1999 of a national Government based on village elections by universal adult suffrage;

4. Acknowledges Tokelau's goal to return authority to its traditional leadership, and its wish to provide that leadership with the necessary support to carry out its functions in the contemporary world;

5. Acknowledges also the progress made towards that goal under the Modern House of Tokelau project, and welcomes the decision taken by the General Fono in June 2003 to set a target date of 30 June 2004 for the transfer to each Taupulega (Village Council) of full responsibility for the management of all its public services;

6. Acknowledges further Tokelau's initiative in devising a strategic economic development plan for the period 2002-2004 to advance its capacity for self-government;

7. Notes that, consistent with the expressed desires of past traditional leaders and the principles of the Modern House of Tokelau, Tokelau has established a local public service employer;

8. Welcomes the continuing dialogue with the administering Power and the Territory with a view to the development of a programme of work for Tokelau in accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/147 of 8 December 2000;

9. Acknowledges the continuing support that New Zealand has committed to the Modern House of Tokelau project in 2002-2003, and the cooperation of the United Nations Development Programme in aligning its programmes under the project;

10. Notes that the Constitution of a self-governing Tokelau will continue to develop as a part and as a consequence of the building of the Modern House of Tokelau, and that both have national and international importance for Tokelau;

11. Acknowledges Tokelau's need for continued reassurance, given the cultural adjustments that are taking place with the strengthening of its capacity for self-government and, since local resources cannot adequately cover the material side of self-determination, the ongoing responsibility of Tokelau's external partners to assist Tokelau in balancing its desire to be self-reliant to the greatest extent possible with its need for external assistance;

12. Notes the special challenge inherent in the situation of Tokelau, among the smallest of the small Territories, and that a Territory's exercise of its inalienable right to self-determination may be brought closer, as in the case of Tokelau, by the meeting of that challenge in innovative ways;

13. Acknowledges the desire of the partners to reaffirm their commitment to each other, and welcomes the agreement reached in Wellington on 19 June 2003 on the text of an agreement on the principles underpinning the relationship for which the formal approval of the Government of New Zealand is being sought;

14. Welcomes the assurance of the Government of New Zealand that it will meet its obligations to the United Nations with respect to Tokelau and abide by the freely expressed wishes of the people of Tokelau with regard to their future status;

15. Also welcomes the cooperative attitude of the other States and Territories in the region towards Tokelau, its economic and political aspirations and its increasing participation in regional and international affairs;

16. Further welcomes Tokelau's associate membership in the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and its recent accession to associate membership in the Forum Fisheries Agency;

17. Reaffirms its approval of the report of the United Nations Mission to Tokelau, 2002;

18. Notes that a study to review the options for Tokelau's future self-determination is recommended in the report, and further notes the willingness expressed by the United Nations Development Programme to assist in this regard upon request from Tokelau;

19. Calls upon New Zealand and Tokelau to consider developing an information programme to apprise the population of Tokelau of the nature of self-determination, including the three options of integration, free association and independence, so that it may be better prepared to face a future decision on this matter, and welcomes the invitation extended to the Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to attend the constitutional convention to be held in Tokelau;

20. Calls upon the administering Power and United Nations agencies to continue to provide assistance to Tokelau as it further develops its economy and governance structures in the context of its ongoing constitutional evolution;

21. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territory of Tokelau and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

Western Sahara

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Western Sahara on 9 June [A/58/23]. A Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2003/14] detailed the Secretary-General's good offices with the parties concerned and action taken by the General Assembly and Security Council (see p. 257). The Special Committee transmitted the relevant documentation to the Assembly's fifty-eighth (2003) session to facilitate the Fourth Committee's consideration of the question. The Secretary-General's report was submitted to the Assembly in July [A/58/171].

Island Territories

In June, the Special Committee on decolonization [A/58/23] considered working papers on American Samoa [A/AC.109/2003/12], Anguilla [A/AC.109/2003/11], Bermuda [A/AC.109/2003/13], the British Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2003/5], the Cayman Islands [A/AC.109/2003/9], Guam [A/AC.109/2003/15], Montserrat [A/AC.109/2003/2], Pitcairn [A/AC.109/2003/16], Saint Helena [A/AC.109/2003/4], the Turks and Caicos Islands [A/AC.109/2003/8] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2003/1], describing political developments and economic and social conditions in each of those 11 island Territories. On 23 June, the Committee approved a two-part consolidated draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/480], adopted resolutions 58/108 A and B without vote [agenda item 19].

Questions of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands

A

General

The General Assembly,

Having considered the questions of the Non-Self-Governing Territories of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands, hereinafter referred to as "the Territories",

Having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to those Territories, including, in particular, the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session on the individual Territories covered by the present resolution,

Recognizing that in the decolonization process there is no alternative to the principle of self-determination as enunciated by the General Assembly in its resolutions 1514(XV), 1541(XV) and other resolutions,

Recognizing also that all available options for self-determination of the Territories are valid as long as they are in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned and in conformity with the clearly defined principles contained in resolutions 1514(XV), 1541(XV) and other resolutions of the General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, containing the principles that should guide Member States in determining whether or not an obligation exists to transmit the information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Expressing its concern that more than forty years after the adoption of the Declaration there still remains a number of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Conscious of the importance of continuing effective implementation of the Declaration, taking into account the target set by the United Nations to eradicate colonialism by 2010 and the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Recognizing that the specific characteristics and the sentiments of the peoples of the Territories require flexible, practical and innovative approaches to the options of self-determination, without any prejudice to territorial size, geographical location, size of population or natural resources,

Welcoming the stated position of the Government of the United Kingdom that it continues to take seriously its obligations under the Charter to develop self-government in the dependent Territories and, in cooperation with the locally elected Governments, to ensure that their constitutional frameworks continue to meet the wishes of the people, and the emphasis that it is ultimately for the peoples of the Territories to decide their future status,

Welcoming also the stated position of the Government of the United States of America that it supports fully the principles of decolonization and takes seriously its obligations under the Charter to promote to the utmost the well-being of the inhabitants of the Territories under United States administration,

Noting the constitutional developments in some Non-Self-Governing Territories about which the Special Committee has received information,

Aware of the usefulness both to the Territories and to the Special Committee of the participation of elected and appointed representatives of the Territories in the work of the Special Committee,

Convinced that the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories should continue to guide the development of their future political status and that referendums, free and fair elections and other forms of popular consultation play an important role in ascertaining the wishes and aspirations of the people,

Convinced also that any negotiations to determine the status of a Territory must take place with the active involvement and participation of the people of that Territory, and that the views of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in respect of their right to self-determination should be ascertained under the supervision of the United Nations, on a case-by-case basis,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, that some Territories have not received a United Nations visiting mission for a long time and that no visiting missions have been sent to some of the Territories, and considering the possibility of sending further visiting missions to the Territories at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Powers,

Mindful also that, in order for the Special Committee to enhance its understanding of the political status of the peoples of the Territories and to fulfil its mandate effectively, it is important for it to be apprised by the administering Powers and to receive information from other appropriate sources, including the representatives of the Territories, concerning the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories,

Recognizing the need for the Special Committee to embark actively on a public awareness campaign aimed at assisting the peoples of the Territories in gaining an understanding of the options of self-determination,

Mindful, in this connection, that the holding of regional seminars in the Caribbean and Pacific regions and at Headquarters and other venues, with the active participation of representatives of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, provides a helpful means for the Special Committee to fulfil its mandate, and that the regional nature of the seminars, which alternate between the Caribbean and the Pacific, is a crucial element in their success, while recognizing the need for reviewing the role of those seminars in the context of a United Nations programme for ascertaining the political status of the Territories,

Mindful also that, by holding a Caribbean regional seminar at The Valley, Anguilla, from 20 to 22 May 2003, the Special Committee was able to hear the views of the representatives of the Territories and Member States as well as organizations and experts in the region, in order to review the political, economic and social conditions in the Territories,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of each Territory, and bearing in mind the necessity of promoting economic stability and diversifying and strengthening further the economies of the respective Territories as a matter of priority,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation and, in this connection, bearing in mind the programmes of action of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, the World Conference on Natural Disaster Reduction, the Global Conference on the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, the International Conference on Population and Development, the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), the World Summit on Sustainable Development and other relevant world conferences.

Noting with appreciation the contribution to the development of some Territories by specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme, and regional institutions such as the Caribbean Development Bank, the Caribbean Community, the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, the Pacific Islands Forum and the agencies of the Council of Regional Organizations in the Pacific,

Noting that some territorial Governments have made efforts towards achieving the highest standards of financial supervision,

Concerned that in 2002 economic growth slowed in many Non-Self-Governing Territories, in particular in the tourism and construction sectors,

Recalling the ongoing efforts of the Special Committee in carrying out a critical review of its work with the aim of making appropriate and constructive recommendations and decisions to attain its objectives in accordance with its mandate,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of the Territories to self-determination, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

2. Reaffirms also that, in the process of decolonization, there is no alternative to the principle of self-determination, which is also a fundamental human right;

3. Reaffirms further that it is ultimately for the peoples of the Territories themselves to determine freely their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and in that connection calls upon the administering Powers, in cooperation with the territorial Governments, to facilitate programmes of political education in the Territories in order to foster an awareness among the people of their right to self-determination in conformity with the legitimate political status options, based on the principles clearly defined in General Assembly resolution 1541(XV);

4. Requests the administering Powers to transmit to the Secretary-General information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter and other updated information and reports, including reports on the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories regarding their future political status as expressed in fair and free referendums and other forms of popular consultation, as well as the results of any informed and democratic processes consistent with practice under the Charter that indicate the clear and freely expressed wish of the people to change the existing status of the Territories;

5. Stresses the importance for it to be apprised of the views and wishes of the peoples of the Territories and to enhance its understanding of their conditions;

6. Reaffirms that United Nations visiting missions to the Territories at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Powers are an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, and requests the administering Powers and the elected representatives of the peoples of the Territories to facilitate the work of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in this regard;

7. Reaffirms also the responsibility of the administering Powers under the Charter to promote the economic and social development and to preserve the cultural identity of the Territories, and recommends that priority continue to be given, in consultation with the territorial Governments concerned, to the strengthening and diversification of their respective economies;

8. Requests the Territories and the administering Powers to take all necessary measures to protect and conserve the environment of the Territories against any environmental degradation, and once again requests the specialized agencies concerned to continue to monitor environmental conditions in those Territories;

9. Calls upon the administering Powers, in cooperation with the respective territorial Governments, to continue to take all necessary measures to counter problems related to drug trafficking, money-laundering and other offences;

10. Notes the cooperative efforts of some Non-Self-Governing Territories to address the problem of illegal drugs, with a focus on demand reduction, education, treatment and legal issues;

11. Notes with concern that the plan of action for the first International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism was not fully implemented by 2000, and stresses the importance of implementing the plan of action for the Second International Decade, in particular by expediting the application of the work programme for the decolonization of each Non-Self-Governing Territory, on a case-by-case basis;

12. Invites the administering Powers to participate fully in the work of the Special Committee and to enter into constructive dialogue with the Special Committee before the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly in order to implement the provisions of Article 73 e of the Charter and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples for the period 2001-2010;

13. Urges Member States to contribute to the efforts of the United Nations to usher in a world free of colonialism within the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon them to continue to give their full support to the Special Committee in its endeavours towards that noble goal;

14. Urges also the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to initiate or to continue to take all necessary measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social life of the Territories, and calls for closer cooperation between the Special Committee and the Economic and Social Council in furtherance of the provision of assistance to the Territories;

15. Notes that some Non-Self-Governing Territories have expressed concern at the procedure followed by one administering Power, contrary to the wishes of the Territories themselves, namely, of amending or enacting legislation for the Territories through Orders in Council, in order to apply to the Territories the international treaty obligations of the administering Power;

16. Takes note of statements made by the elected representatives of the Territories concerned and other appropriate authorities emphasizing their willingness to cooperate in all international efforts aimed at preventing abuse of the international financial system and to promote regulatory environments with highly selective licensing procedures, robust supervisory practices and well-established anti-money-laundering regimes;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on the implementation of decolonization resolutions since the declaration of the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism;

18. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of the small Territories and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session with recommendations on appropriate ways to assist the peoples of the Territories in exercising their right to self-determination.

B

Individual Territories

The General Assembly,

Referring to resolution A above,

I

American Samoa

Taking note of the report by the administering Power that most American Samoan leaders express satisfaction with the Territory's present relationship with the United States of America, as reflected in statements made by those leaders in the regional seminars held in Havana, Cuba, and Nadi, Fiji, in 2001 and 2002, respectively,

Noting that the Government of the Territory continues to have financial, budgetary and internal control problems, but that it has recently taken steps to increase revenues and decrease government expenditures,

Noting also that the Territory, similar to isolated communities with limited funds, continues to experience a lack of adequate medical and other infrastructural facilities,

Aware of the efforts of the Government of the Territory to control and reduce expenditures, while continuing its programme of expanding and diversifying the local economy,

Concerned that massive flooding and mudslides in May 2003 resulted in loss of life and damage initially estimated by the territorial Government at more than 50 million United States dollars, and taking note of the official request by the Territory for recovery assistance from the administering Power,

1. Notes that the Department of the Interior of the United States of America provides that the Secretary of the Interior has administrative jurisdiction over American Samoa;

2. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to assist the territorial Government in the economic and social development of the Territory, including measures to rebuild financial management capabilities and strengthen other governmental functions of the Government of the Territory, and welcomes the assistance from the administering Power to the Territory in its recovery efforts following the recent floods;

3. Welcomes the invitation extended to the Special Committee by the Governor of American Samoa to send a visiting mission to the Territory, and calls upon the administering Power to facilitate such a mission;

II

Anguilla

Noting the continuation of the conduct of the constitutional and electoral reform review process in the Territory,

Welcoming the holding of the 2003 Caribbean regional seminar in Anguilla, the first time that the seminar has been held in a Non-Self-Governing Territory,

Noting the desire of the territorial Government and the people of Anguilla for a visiting mission by the Special Committee,

Aware of the efforts of the Government of Anguilla to continue to develop the Territory as a viable off-shore centre and well-regulated financial centre for investors, by enacting modern company and trust laws, as well as partnership and insurance legislation, and computerizing the company registry system,

Noting the need for continued cooperation between the administering Power and the territorial Government in tackling the problems of drug trafficking and money-laundering,

1. Welcomes the emphasis placed in the initial stages of the constitutional and electoral reform review process on participation, information and education and the support provided by the United Nations Development Programme and the United Kingdom Government fund for good government;

2. Welcomes also the cooperation of the territorial Government of Anguilla and the United Kingdom in holding the 2003 Caribbean regional seminar in Anguilla, and notes that the staging of the seminar in a Non-Self-Governing Territory for the first time as well as a town hall meeting between the people of Anguilla and the Special Committee during the seminar contributed to its success;

3. Calls upon the administering Power and all States, organizations and United Nations agencies to continue to assist the Territory in social and economic development;

III

Bermuda

Noting the results of the independence referendum held on 16 August 1995, and conscious of the different viewpoints of the political parties of the Territory on the future status of the Territory,

1. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to work with the Territory for its socio-economic development;

2. Welcomes the agreement reached in June 2002 between the United States of America, the United Kingdom and the Territory formally transferring the former military base lands to the territorial Government, and the provision of financial resources to address some of the environmental problems;

3. Welcomes also the convening in the Territory in March 2003 of an international conference on conservation in overseas territories and other small island States, which included governmental and non-governmental organizations to address issues of common concern;

IV

British Virgin Islands

Taking note of the steps currently being taken to review the Constitution with the aim of modernizing it,

Noting that the Territory continues to emerge as one of the world's leading offshore financial centres, and that the financial services sector is becoming the cornerstone of the Government's recurrent budget,

Noting also the need for continued cooperation between the administering Power and the territorial Government in countering drug trafficking and money-laundering,

Noting further that the Territory commemorated its annual British Virgin Islands-United States Virgin Islands Friendship Day on 31 May 2003 in Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas,

Requests the administering Power, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and all financial institutions to continue to provide the Territory with assistance for socio-economic development and the development of human resources, bearing in mind the vulnerability of the Territory to external factors;

V

Cayman Islands

Noting the formation for the first time of a political party in the Territory and the subsequent emergence of a party system in the Territory,

Taking note of the constitutional review process being undertaken by the territorial Government in consultation with the administering Power,

Noting the actions taken by the territorial Government to promote increased participation by the local population in the decision-making process in the economic and social sectors in the Cayman Islands,

Aware that the Territory has one of the highest per capita incomes in the region, a stable political climate and has emerged as one of the world's leading offshore financial centres with virtually no unemployment,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking, money-laundering and related activities, and noting the measures taken by the authorities to deal with those problems,

Noting the approval by the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly of the Territory's Vision 2008 Development Plan, which aims to promote development that is consistent with the aims and values of Caymanian society,

1. Welcomes the completion of the report of the Constitutional Review Commission, which conducted an extensive review of the current Constitution, and the recommended changes, following public discussions with community groups and individuals, pursuant to the recommendations of the administering Power as stated in its White Paper entitled "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity: Britain and the Overseas Territories";

2. Requests the administering Power, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to provide the territorial Government with all required expertise to enable it to achieve its socio-economic aims;

3. Requests the administering Power, in consultation with the territorial Government, to continue to facilitate the expansion of the current programme of securing employment for the local population, in particular at the decision-making level;

VI

Guam

Recalling that, in a referendum held in 1987, the registered and eligible voters of Guam endorsed a draft Guam Commonwealth Act that would establish a new framework for relations between the Territory and the administering Power, providing for a greater measure of internal self-government for Guam and recognition of the right of the Chamorro people of Guam to self-determination for the Territory,

Recalling also the requests by the elected representative and non-governmental organizations of the Territory that Guam not be removed from the list of the Non-Self-Governing Territories with which the Special Committee is concerned, pending the self-determination of the Chamorro people and taking into account their legitimate rights and interests,

Aware that negotiations between the administering Power and the territorial Government on the draft Guam Commonwealth Act are no longer continuing and that Guam has established the process for a self-determination vote by the eligible Chamorro voters,

Cognizant that the administering Power continues to implement its programme of transferring surplus federal land to the Government of Guam,

Noting that the people of the Territory have called for reform in the programme of the administering Power with respect to the thorough, unconditional and expeditious transfer of land property to the people of Guam,

Conscious that immigration into Guam has resulted in the indigenous Chamorros becoming a minority in their homeland,

Aware of the potential for diversifying and developing the economy of Guam through commercial fishing and agriculture and other viable activities,

Recalling the dispatch in 1979 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory, and noting the recommendation of the 1996 Pacific regional seminar for sending a visiting mission to Guam,

Taking note with interest of the statements made and the information on the political and economic situation in Guam provided by the representatives of the Territory at the 5th meeting of the Fourth Committee on 3 October 2002,

Concerned that the 2001 census figures in the Territory show that 23 per cent of the population lives in poverty,

1. Calls upon the administering Power to take into consideration the expressed will of the Chamorro people as supported by Guam voters in the plebiscite of 1987 and as provided for in Guam law, encourages the administering Power and the territorial Government of Guam to enter into negotiations on the matter, and requests the administering Power to inform the Secretary-General of progress to that end;

2. Requests the administering Power to continue to assist the elected territorial Government in achieving its political, economic and social goals;

3. Also requests the administering Power, in cooperation with the territorial Government, to continue to transfer land to the original landowners of the Territory;

4. Further requests the administering Power to continue to recognize and respect the political rights and the cultural and ethnic identity of the Chamorro people of Guam, and to take all necessary measures to respond to the concerns of the territorial Government with regard to the question of immigration;

5. Requests the administering Power to cooperate in establishing programmes specifically intended to promote the sustainable development of economic activities and enterprises, noting the special role of the Chamorro people in the development of Guam;

6. Also requests the administering Power to continue to support appropriate measures by the territorial Government aimed at promoting growth in commercial fishing and agricultural and other viable activities;

7. Calls upon the administering Power to facilitate a visiting mission to Guam as requested by the territorial Government;

VII

Montserrat

Taking note with interest of the statements made and the information on the political and economic situation in Montserrat provided by the Chief Minister of the Territory to the Caribbean regional seminar, held at The Valley, Anguilla, from 20 to 22 May 2003,

Noting with concern the dire consequences of the volcanic eruption, which led to the evacuation of three quarters of the Territory's population to safe areas of the island and to areas outside the Territory, in particular Antigua and Barbuda and the United Kingdom, and which continues to have enduring consequences upon the economy of the island,

Welcoming the continued assistance provided to the Territory by States members of the Caribbean Community, in particular Antigua and Barbuda, which has offered safe refuge and access to educational and health facilities, as well as employment for thousands who have left the Territory,

Noting the continuing efforts of the administering Power to deal with the consequences of the volcanic eruption,

Noting with concern that a number of the inhabitants of the Territory continue to live in shelters because of volcanic activity,

Noting that the Chief Minister of Montserrat assumed the chairmanship of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States in May 2003,

1. Calls upon the administering Power, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as regional and other organizations, to continue to provide assistance to the Territory in alleviating the consequences of the volcanic eruption;

2. Takes note of the completion of the report of the Constitutional Review Commission prepared after extensive consultations with Montserratians both in the Territory and abroad and the consensus that, while Montserratians reserve the right to future self-determination, independence is not a priority given the present socio-economic status of the Territory;

VIII

Pitcairn

Taking into account the unique nature of Pitcairn in terms of population and area,

Welcoming the participation of a representative of the Mayor of Pitcairn in the Caribbean regional seminar at The Valley, Anguilla, from 20 to 22 May 2003, and taking note of the concerns expressed by him with regard to the ongoing court case in the Territory,

Requests the administering Power to continue its assistance for the improvement of the economic, social, educational and other conditions of the population of the Territory and to continue its discussions with the representatives of Pitcairn on how best to support its economic security;

IX

Saint Helena

Taking into account the unique character of Saint Helena, its population and its natural resources,

Aware of the efforts of the administering Power and the territorial authorities to improve the socio-economic conditions of the population of Saint Helena, in particular as regards food production, continuing high unemployment and limited transport and communications,

Noting with concern the problem of unemployment on the island and the joint action of the administering Power and the territorial Government to deal with it,

1. Welcomes the acceptance by the administering Power of the majority of the proposals for constitutional change made by the territorial Government;

2. Requests the administering Power and relevant international organizations to continue to support the efforts of the territorial Government to address the socio-economic development challenges, including the high unemployment and the limited transport and communications problems;

X

Turks and Caicos Islands

Noting that the People's Democratic Movement was elected to a third consecutive term in the Legislative Council elections held in March 2003,

Also noting the efforts by the Government of the Territory to strengthen financial management in the public sector, including efforts to increase revenue,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities, as well as its problems caused by illegal immigration, and noting the need for continued cooperation between the administering Power and the territorial Government in countering drug trafficking and money-laundering,

Noting that the Chief Minister was elected as the chairman of the newly established Overseas Countries and Territories Association of Europe,

1. Welcomes the establishment of the Constitutional Review Commission, which embarked on a public education programme on the Constitution, ascertained the views of the population and made recommendations to the administering Power on changes which may be envisaged, pursuant to the recommendations as stated in its White Paper entitled "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity: Britain and the Overseas Territories";

2. Calls upon the administering Power and the relevant regional and international organizations to continue to provide assistance for the improvement of the economic, social, educational and other conditions of the population of the Territory;

3. Calls upon the administering Power and the territorial Government to continue to cooperate to counter problems related to money-laundering, smuggling of funds and other related crimes, as well as drug trafficking;

XI

United States Virgin Islands

Taking note with interest of the statements made and the information provided by the representative of the Governor of the Territory to the Caribbean regional seminar, held at The Valley, Anguilla, from 20 to 22 May 2003,

Noting the continuing interest of the territorial Government in seeking associate membership in the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States and observer status in the Caribbean Community and the current request by the Territory to the administering Power for the delegation of authority to proceed,

Noting also the expressed interest of the territorial Government to be included in regional programmes of the United Nations Development Programme,

Noting further the necessity of further diversifying the economy of the Territory,

Noting the efforts of the Government of the Territory to promote the Territory as an offshore financial services centre,

Recalling that the Territory has not received a United Nations visiting mission since 1977, and bearing in mind the formal request of the Territory for such a mission in 1993 to assist the Territory in its political education process and to observe the Territory's only referendum on political status options in its history,

Noting that the Territory commemorated its annual British Virgin Islands-United States Virgin Islands Friendship Day on 31 May 2003 in Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas,

1. Requests the administering Power to continue to assist the territorial Government in achieving its political, economic and social goals;

2. Once again requests the administering Power to facilitate the participation of the Territory, as appropriate, in various organizations, in particular the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, the Caribbean Community and the Association of Caribbean States;

3. Calls for the inclusion of the Territory in regional programmes of the United Nations Development Programme, consistent with the participation of other Non-Self-Governing Territories;

4. Notes the economic difficulties being experienced by the territorial Government and the fiscal austerity measures being implemented, and others proposed, to relieve the Territory's cash flow shortage, and calls upon the administering Power to continue to provide every assistance required by the Territory to further alleviate the difficult economic situation, including, inter alia, the provision of debt relief and loans;

5. Notes with interest the entering into force in 2001 of the joint memorandum of cooperation on the exchange of artefacts between the Territory and Denmark, the Territory's former administering Power, as a companion agreement to the 1999 memorandum for the repatriation of archival material from the Danish colonial period, consistent with the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance on 8 September 2001, and once again requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, under its records and archives management programme, to assist the Territory in carrying out its archival and artefacts initiative;

6. Notes the position of the territorial Government, including its articulation in resolution 1609 of 9 April 2001 of the 24th Legislature of the United States Virgin Islands, opposing the assumption by the administering Power of submerged land in territorial waters, having regard to relevant resolutions of the General Assembly on the ownership and control of natural resources, including marine resources, by the people of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and its calls for the return of those marine resources to the people of the Territory;

7. Notes with concern that the 2000 census figures for the Territory indicate that 32.5 per cent of the population is living in poverty.

UN public information

The General Assembly's Committee on Information, at its twenty-fifth session (New York, 28 April-9 May) [A/58/21], continued to consider UN public information policies and activities and to evaluate and follow up efforts made and progress achieved in information and communications. The major report before the Committee dealt with the reorientation of UN activities in the field of public information and communications. Other reports covered programmatic aspects of the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget for the Department of Public Information (DPI), implementation of the pilot project on the development of an international radio broadcasting capacity for the United Nations, modernization and integrated management of UN libraries, the 2002 activities of the United Nations Communications Group (UNCG) [YUN 2002, p. 589], and the structure and operations of the UN information centres (UNICs).

Those reports and the Secretary-General's report on questions relating to information [A/58/175] are discussed in the relevant sections below.

By decision 58/525 of 9 December, the Assembly increased the Committee's membership from 99 to 102.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/475], adopted resolution 58/101 A without vote [agenda item 86].

Information in the service of humanity

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the comprehensive and important report of the Committee on Information,

Also taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on questions relating to information,

Urges all countries, organizations of the United Nations system as a whole and all others concerned, reaffirming their commitment to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and to the principles of freedom of the press and freedom of information, as well as to those of the independence, pluralism and diversity of the media, deeply concerned by the disparities existing between developed and developing countries and the consequences of every kind arising from those disparities that affect the capability of the public, private or other media and individuals in developing countries to disseminate information and communicate their views and their cultural and ethical values through endogenous cultural production, as well as to ensure the diversity of sources and their free access to information, and recognizing the call in this context for what in the United Nations and at various international forums has been termed "a new world information and communication order, seen as an evolving and continuous process":

(a) To cooperate and interact with a view to reducing existing disparities in information flows at all levels by increasing assistance for the development of communication infrastructures and capabilities in developing countries, with due regard for their needs and the priorities attached to such areas by those countries, and in order to enable them and the public, private or other media in developing countries to develop their own information and communication policies freely and independently and increase the participation of media and individuals in the communication process, and to ensure a free flow of information at all levels;

(b) To ensure for journalists the free and effective performance of their professional tasks and condemn resolutely all attacks against them;

(c) To provide support for the continuation and strengthening of practical training programmes for broadcasters and journalists from public, private and other media in developing countries;

(d) To enhance regional efforts and cooperation among developing countries, as well as cooperation between developed and developing countries, to strengthen communication capacities and to improve the media infrastructure and communication technology in the developing countries, especially in the areas of training and dissemination of information;

(e) To aim at, in addition to bilateral cooperation, providing all possible support and assistance to the developing countries and their media, public, private or other, with due regard to their interests and needs in the field of information and to action already adopted within the United Nations system, including:

- (i) The development of the human and technical resources that are indispensable for the improvement of information and communication systems in developing countries and support for the continuation and strengthening of practical training programmes, such as those already operating under both public and private auspices throughout the developing world;*
- (ii) The creation of conditions that will enable developing countries and their media, public, private or other, to have, by using their national and regional resources, the communication technology suited to their national needs, as well as the necessary programme material, especially for radio and television broadcasting;*
- (iii) Assistance in establishing and promoting telecommunication links at the subregional, regional and interregional levels, especially among developing countries;*
- (iv) The facilitation, as appropriate, of access by the developing countries to advanced communication technology available on the open market;*
- (f) To provide full support for the International Programme for the Development of Communication of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which should support both public and private media.*

Also on 9 December [meeting 72] and on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/475, orally revised], the Assembly adopted resolution 58/101 B without vote [agenda item 86].

United Nations public information policies and activities

The General Assembly,

Reiterating its decision to consolidate the role of the Committee on Information as its main subsidiary body mandated to make recommendations to it relating to the work of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat,

Concurring with the view of the Secretary-General that the fundamental premise underlying the reorientation efforts of the Department of Public Information remains General Assembly resolution 13(I) of 13 February 1946, establishing the Department, which states in paragraph 2 of annex I that "the activities of the Department should be so organized and directed as to promote to the greatest possible extent an informed understanding of the work and purposes of the United Nations among the peoples of the world",

Concurring also with the view of the Secretary-General that the contents of public information and communications should be placed at the heart of the strategic management of the United Nations and that a culture of communications should permeate all levels of the Organization, as a means of fully informing the peoples of the world of the aims and activities of the United Nations, in accordance with the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, in order to create broad-based global support for the United Nations,

Stressing that the primary mission of the Department of Public Information is to provide, through its outreach activities, accurate, impartial, comprehensive and timely information to the public on the tasks and responsibilities of the United Nations in order to strengthen international support for the activities of the Organization with the greatest transparency.

Noting that the comprehensive review of the work of the Department of Public Information, requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 56/253 of 24 December 2001, and the implementation of its first phase, described in the report of the Secretary-General on reorientation of United Nations activities in the field of public information and communications to the Committee on Information at its twenty-fourth session, as well as the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change", and its resolution 57/300 of 20 December 2002, as they apply to the Department of Public Information, provide an opportunity to take further steps to rationalize the work of the Department in order to enhance its efficiency and effectiveness, and to maximize the use of its resources.

Expressing its concern that the gap in the information and communication technologies between the developed and the developing countries has continued to widen and that vast segments of the population in developing countries are not benefiting from the present information and technology revolution, and, in this regard, underlining the necessity of rectifying the imbalances of the global information and technology revolution in order to make it more just, equitable and effective,

Recognizing that developments in the information and communication technology revolution open vast new opportunities for economic growth and social development and can play an important role in the eradication of poverty in developing countries, and, at the same time, emphasizing that it also poses challenges and risks and could lead to the further widening of disparities between and within countries,

Recalling its resolution 56/262 of 15 February 2002 on multilingualism, and emphasizing the importance of making appropriate use of the official languages of the United Nations in the activities of the Department of Public Information, aiming to eliminate the disparity between the use of English and the other five official languages,

Welcoming Saudi Arabia to membership in the Committee on Information,

I

Introduction

1. Reaffirms its resolution 13(I), in which it established the Department of Public Information, and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions related to the activities of the Department;

2. Calls upon the Secretary-General, in respect of the public information policies and activities of the United Nations, to continue to implement fully the recommendations contained in paragraph 2 of its resolution 48/44 B of 10 December 1993 and other mandates as established by the General Assembly;

3. Emphasizes the importance of the medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005 as a guideline that sets out the overall orientation of the public information programme for the Organization's goals through effective communication;

4. Reaffirms that the United Nations remains the indispensable foundation of a peaceful and just world and that its voice must be heard in a clear and effective manner, and emphasizes the essential role of the Department of Public Information in this context;

5. Welcomes the proposals of the Secretary-General to improve the effective and targeted delivery of public information activities, including the restructuring of the Department of Public Information, in accordance with the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly;

6. Reaffirms the central role of the Committee on Information in United Nations public information policies and activities, including the restructuring process of the Department of Public Information, and the prioritization of its activities, and welcomes the continued constructive interaction between the Department and the members of the Committee;

7. Calls upon Member States to ensure, to the extent possible, that recommendations relating to the programme of the Department of Public Information originate and are considered in the Committee on Information;

8. Requests the Department of Public Information, following the priorities laid down by the General Assembly in the medium-term plan and using the United Nations Millennium Declaration as its guide, to pay particular attention to such major issues as the eradication of poverty, conflict prevention, sustainable development, human rights, the human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS) epidemic, combating terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and the needs of the African continent;

9. Also requests the Department of Public Information to pay attention to all major issues addressed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the Millennium Development Goals in carrying out its activities;

10. Concurs with the Secretary-General on the need to enhance the technological infrastructure of the Department of Public Information in order to widen its outreach and improve the United Nations web site;

11. Recognizes the important work carried out by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and its collaboration with news agencies and broadcasting organizations in developing countries in disseminating information on priority issues, and encourages a continued collaboration between the Department of Public Information and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the promotion of culture and in the fields of education and communication;

II

General activities of the Department of Public Information

12. Welcomes the steps taken towards the restructuring of the Department of Public Information, as described in the report of the Secretary-General on the reorientation of United Nations activities in the field of public information and communications, and encourages the Secretary-General to continue the reorientation exercise and efforts to improve the efficiency and productivity of the Department, including wide-ranging and possibly new innovative proposals, taking into account broad principles and directions contained in the present resolution, and to report thereon to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session;

13. Reaffirms that the Department of Public Information is the focal point for information policies of the United Nations and the primary news centre for information about the United Nations, its activities and those of the Secretary-General, and encourages a closer integration of functions between the Department and those offices providing spokesman services for the Secretary-General;

14. Welcomes the progress achieved since the commencement of the reorientation exercise in enhancing the performance and effectiveness of the Department of Public Information in accordance with the mandates established by the General Assembly and the recommendations of the Committee on Information, also welcomes, in this regard, its decision to implement an annual programme impact review, making self-evaluation a part of the daily work of all programme managers with a view to institutionalizing performance management, and requests the Secretary-General to transmit the report on the Department's annual programme impact review to the Committee on Information at its successive sessions;

15. Requests the Secretary-General, in the context of the reorientation process, to continue to exert all efforts to ensure that publications and other information services of the Secretariat, including the United Nations web site and the United Nations News Service, contain comprehensive, objective and equitable information about the issues before the Organization and that they maintain editorial independence, impartiality, accuracy and full consistency with resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly;

16. Reiterates that all printed materials of the Department of Public Information, in accordance with existing mandates, should not duplicate other publications of the United Nations system and should be produced in a cost-effective manner;

17. Welcomes the efforts of the Department of Public Information to reconstitute the Publications Board, in accordance with existing legislative mandates;

18. Urges the Department of Public Information to continue to exhibit transparency to the greatest extent possible, so as to increase awareness of the impact of its programmes and activities;

19. Emphasizes that, through its reorientation, the Department of Public Information should maintain and improve its activities in the areas of special interest to developing countries and, where appropriate, other countries with special needs, including countries in transition, and that such reorientation contributes to bridging the existing gap between the developing and the developed countries in the crucial field of public information and communications;

20. Encourages the Secretary-General to strengthen the coordination between the Department of Public Information and other departments of the Secretariat, including the designation of focal points to work with substantive departments to identify target audiences and develop information programmes and media strategies for priority issues, and emphasizes that public information capacities and activities in other departments should function under the guidance of the Department;

21. Welcomes the initiatives that have been taken by the Department of Public Information to strengthen the public information system of the United Nations, and, in this regard, stresses the importance of a coherent and results-oriented approach being taken by the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the programmes and funds of the United Nations system involved in public information activities as well as the provision of resources for their implementation, and that feedback from Member States on the relevance and effectiveness of its programme delivery should be taken into account;

22. Also welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the United Nations Communications Group in 2002, commends the Department of Public Information on its active and constructive participation in the Group, in particular its efforts to promote inter-agency coordination in the field of public information, encourages the Department to continue to play a key role in the newly established Group, takes note of the efforts being undertaken by the Group to develop further several key initiatives, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at successive sessions on the activities of the Group;

23. Appreciates the continued efforts of the Department of Public Information in issuing daily press releases, and requests the Department to continue providing this invaluable service to both Member States and representatives of the media, while considering possible means of improving their production process and streamlining their format, structure and length, keeping in mind the views of Member States and the fact that other departments may be providing similar or overlapping services in this regard;

24. Acknowledges the mission statement proposed in the report of the Secretary-General, which is intended to include all activities of the Department, and which reads as follows: "The Department of Public Information's mission is to help fulfil the substantive purposes of the United Nations by strategically communicating the activities and concerns of the Organization to achieve the greatest public impact";

25. Welcomes the new operating model of the Department of Public Information as described in the report of the Secretary-General which, inter alia, recognizes that content generation emanates from the other departments and offices of the Secretariat and organizations of the United Nations system, while content coordination and refinement as well as content presentation and distribution are the responsibility of the Department, working in close cooperation with the media, Member States and civil society partners;

26. Requests that during the deliberations on the item entitled "Questions relating to information" in the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee) during the successive regular sessions of the General Assembly, an informal interaction between the Secretariat and members of the Committee should take place after the presentation by the Under-Secretary-General for Communications and Public Information on the substance of that oral briefing, within existing resources;

Multilingualism and public information

27. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Department of Public Information to enhance multilingualism in its activities and encourages the Department to continue its endeavours in this regard;

28. Emphasizes the importance of ensuring the full, equitable treatment of all the official languages of the United Nations in all activities of the Department of Public Information, and stresses the importance of fully implementing its resolution 52/214 of 22 December 1997, in section C of which it requested the Secretary-General to ensure that the texts of all new public documents in all six official languages, and information materials of the United Nations, are made available daily through the United Nations web site and are accessible to Member States without delay;

29. Reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that the Department of Public Information has appropriate staffing capacity in all official languages of the United Nations to undertake all its activities;

30. Reminds the Secretary-General of the need to include in future programme budget proposals for the Department of Public Information the importance of using all six official languages in its activities;

Bridging the digital divide

31. Recalls the decision, endorsed in its resolution 56/183 of 21 December 2001, to convene the World Summit on the Information Society in Geneva in December 2003 and in Tunis in 2005, welcomes the initiatives undertaken by the Department of Public Information for this Summit, encourages States, relevant United Nations bodies and entities, other intergovernmental institutions and civil society to continue to actively participate in this process, and reaffirms the importance of the active involvement and support of the Department in raising global awareness of the Summit and its main objectives;

32. Commends the Secretary-General for the establishment of the United Nations Information Technology Service, the Health InterNetwork and the Information and Communications Technology Task Force with a view to bridging the digital divide and as a response to the continuing gulf between developed and developing countries, welcomes the contribution of the Department of Public Information in publicizing the efforts of the Secretary-General to close the digital divide as a means of spurring economic growth and as a response to the continuing gulf between developed and developing countries, and, in this context, requests the Department to further enhance its role;

III

New programmatic priorities for the Department of Public Information

33. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on programmatic aspects of the proposed programme budget for 2004-2005 for the Department of Public Information, and welcomes the new subprogramme structure that includes: strategic communications services, news services, library services and outreach services;

34. Acknowledges that the Department of Public Information, with the assistance of the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat, is currently in the process of formulating methodologies and conducting a systematic evaluation of the impact, efficiency and cost-effectiveness of the activities of the Department over a three-year period, as requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 57/300, and requests the Secretary-General to report on the progress made to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session;

35. Reaffirms that the Department of Public Information must prioritize its work programme while respecting existing mandates and in line with rule 5.6 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, to focus its message and concentrate its efforts better and, as a function of performance management, to match its programmes with the needs of its target audiences, on the basis of improved feedback and evaluation mechanisms;

36. Undertlines the need for the proposed indicators of achievement and expected accomplishments, which for the first time form part of the programme budget, to be clearly defined, measurable and able to contribute to a meaningful evaluation of activities;

United Nations information centres

37. Stresses that the United Nations information centres and information components or regional hubs, as applicable, should play a significant role in disseminating information about the work of the Organization to the peoples of the world, including in the areas outlined in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and emphasizes that the information centres, or regional hubs, as applicable, as the "field voice" of the Department of Public Information, should promote public awareness of and mobilize support for the work of the United Nations at the local level, bearing in mind that information in the local languages has the strongest impact on the local populations;

38. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the structure and operations of United Nations information centres, and requests the Secretary-General to submit further detailed information to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session;

39. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Department of Public Information to review the allocation of both staff and financial resources to United Nations information centres with a view to possibly transferring resources from information centres in developed countries to United Nations information activities in developing countries, emphasizing the needs of the least developed countries, and to any other activities of high priority, such as multilingualism on the United Nations web site and evaluation of services, in consultation with concerned Member States;

40. Reaffirms paragraph 15 of its resolution 57/300, in which it took note of the proposal of the Secretary-General contained in action 8 of his report, to rationalize the network of United Nations information centres around regional hubs, where appropriate, in consultation with concerned Member States, starting with the creation of a Western European hub, followed by a similar approach in other high-cost developed countries, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a progress report on the implementation of the proposal with the objective of applying this initiative in other regions, in consultation with Member States, where this initiative will strengthen the flow and exchange of information in developing countries;

41. Encourages the efforts by some United Nations information centres to develop their own web pages in local languages, also encourages the Department of Public Information to provide resources and technical facilities, in particular to those information centres whose web pages are not yet operational and to develop web pages in the respective local languages of their host countries, and further encourages host countries to respond to the needs of the information centres;

42. Recalls the appeal made by the Secretary-General to the host countries of United Nations information centres to facilitate the work of the centres in their countries by providing rent-free or rent-subsidized premises, while taking into account the economic condition of the host countries and bearing in mind that such support should not be a substitute for the full allocation of financial resources for the information centres in the context of the programme budget of the United Nations;

43. Notes the continuing support of the Department of Public Information in the consolidation of the United Nations field presence in a single United Nations house, and requests the Secretary-General to report in detail on the progress made to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session;

IV

Strategic communications services

44. Acknowledges that the strategic communications services, to be implemented by the newly created Strategic Communications Division, will be responsible for devising and disseminating United Nations messages by developing communications strategies, in close collaboration with the substantive departments, United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies of the United Nations, in full compliance with the legislative mandates;

Promotional campaigns

45. Recognizes that promotional campaigns aimed at supporting special sessions and international conferences of the United Nations are part of the core responsibility of the Department of Public Information, and welcomes the efforts of the Department to examine creative ways in which it can organize and implement these campaigns in partnership with the substantive departments concerned, using the United Nations Millennium Declaration as its guide;

46. Supports the efforts of the Department of Public Information, while ensuring respect for the priorities established by the General Assembly, to also focus its promotional campaigns on the major issues identified by the Secretary-General;

47. Appreciates the work of the Department of Public Information in promoting, through its campaigns, issues of importance to the international community, such as sustainable development, children, HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases and decolonization, as well as the dialogue among civilizations, culture of peace and tolerance and the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, and encourages the Department, in cooperation with the countries concerned and with the relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, to continue to take appropriate measures to enhance world public awareness of these and other important global issues;

48. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue to work within the United Nations Communications Group to coordinate the implementation of communication strategies with the heads of information of the agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system;

49. Stresses the need for the renewed emphasis in support of Africa's development, in particular by the Department of Public Information, in order to promote awareness in the international community of the nature of the critical economic and social situation in Africa and of the priorities of the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

Role of the Department of Public Information in United Nations peacekeeping

50. Commends the efforts of the Secretary-General to strengthen the public information capacity of the Department of Public Information for the establishment and functioning of the information components of peacekeeping operations and of political and peace-building missions of the United Nations, including its promotional efforts and other information support activities, and requests the Secretariat to continue to ensure the involvement of the Department from the planning stage of future operations through interdepartmental consultations and coordination with other departments of the Secretariat, in particular with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations;

51. Stresses the importance of enhancing the public information capacity of the Department of Public Information in the field of peacekeeping operations and its role in the selection process of spokespersons for United Nations peacekeeping operations or missions, and, in this regard, encourages the Department to second spokespersons who have the necessary skills to fulfil the tasks of the operations or missions, taking into account the equitable geographical distribution in accordance with Chapter XV, Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, and to consider views expressed, especially by host countries, when appropriate, in this regard;

52. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report to the Committee on Information on the role of the Department of Public Information in United Nations peacekeeping at its successive sessions;

53. Welcomes the transfer of the functions of the Cartographic Section from the Department of Public Information to the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, since the outputs of the Section are more closely aligned to the needs and activities of that Department;

V

News services

54. Stresses that the central objective of the news services, implemented by the News and Media Division, is the timely delivery of accurate, objective and balanced news and information emanating from the United Nations system in all four mass media—print, radio, television and Internet—to the media and other audiences worldwide with the overall emphasis on multilingualism;

Traditional means of communication

55. Also stresses that radio remains one of the most cost-effective and far-reaching traditional media available to the Department of Public Information and an important instrument in United Nations activities, including development and peacekeeping, with a view to achieving a broad client base around the world;

56. Notes with satisfaction the success of the pilot project on the development of an international radio broadcasting capacity for the United Nations, and endorses the proposal of the Secretary-General that the pilot project be made an integral part of the activities of the Department;

57. Requests the Secretary-General to pay full attention to the parity of the six official languages in expanding the international radio broadcasting capacity;

58. Notes the efforts being made by the Department of Public Information to disseminate programmes directly to broadcasting stations all over the world in the six official languages, with the addition of Portuguese, as well as in other languages, where possible, and, in this regard, stresses the need for impartiality and objectivity concerning information activities of the United Nations;

59. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue building partnerships with local, national and regional broadcasters to extend the United Nations message to all the corners of the world;

60. Emphasizes that United Nations Radio and Television should take full advantage of the technological infrastructure made available in recent years, including satellite platforms, information and communication technologies and the Internet, and requests the Secretary-General, as a part of the reorientation of the Department of Public Information, to consider a global strategy for broadcasting, taking into account existing technologies;

United Nations web site

61. Reiterates its appreciation for the efforts of the Department of Public Information in creating a high-quality, user-friendly and cost-effective web site, noting that this is especially noteworthy considering the scope of the undertaking, the budget constraints within the United Nations and the remarkably rapid expansion of the World Wide Web, reaffirms that the web site remains a very useful tool for media, non-governmental organizations, educational institutions, Member States and the general public, and welcomes the creation of the United Nations web site on terrorism;

62. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue to take the necessary measures in order to ensure accessibility to the United Nations web site by persons with disabilities, including visual and hearing disabilities, and asks the Department to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session on its efforts in this regard;

63. Notes with concern that the multilingual development and enrichment of the United Nations web site has been slower than expected, because of a lack of resources, among other factors, and that content-providing offices have not, in general, been making their materials available on the United Nations web site in all six official languages;

64. Stresses the need to adopt a decision on the multilingual development, maintenance and enrichment of the United Nations web site, considering, inter alia, the possibility of organizational restructuring towards separate language units for each of the six official languages within the Department of Public Information, in order to achieve full parity among the official languages of the United Nations;

65. Reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to ensure, until such a decision has been taken and implemented, to the extent possible and while maintaining an up-to-date and accurate web site, the equitable distribution of financial and human resources within the Department of Public Information allocated to the United Nations web site among all official languages on a continuous basis, and to make every possible effort to ensure also that all materials contained on the web site that do not change and do not need regular maintenance are made available in all six official languages;

66. Also reaffirms the need to achieve full parity among the six official languages on the United Nations web site, and, in this regard, takes note of the proposal of the Secretary-General, as contained in paragraph 33 of his report on the continued development, maintenance and enrichment of the United Nations web site in the six official languages, to translate all English materials and databases posted on the United Nations web site by the respective content-providing offices of the Secretariat into all official languages, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session on the most practical, efficient and cost-effective means of implementing this proposal;

67. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session proposals relating to the designation of a date by which all supporting arrangements would be in place for the implementation of this concept, after which date parity would continue, as well as proposals relating to the exemption from translation of specific items on the United Nations web site;

68. Stresses the importance of access for the public to the United Nations Treaty Collection and United Nations parliamentary documentation;

69. Encourages the Secretary-General, through the Department of Public Information, to continue to take full advantage of recent developments in information technology, including the Internet, in order to improve, in a cost-effective manner, the expeditious dissemination of information on the United Nations, in accordance with the priorities established by the General Assembly and taking into account the linguistic diversity of the Organization;

70. Welcomes the establishment of the United Nations News Centre in Arabic, and looks forward to the implementation of the United Nations News Centre in the remaining official languages by the end of 2003, with a view to achieving language parity on the United Nations web site;

71. Also welcomes the proposal of the Secretary-General to provide free, public access to the Official Document System of the United Nations through a linkage with the Organization's web site for consideration in the context of the proposed programme budget for 2004-2005, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session in this regard;

72. Commends the Information Technology Services Division of the Office of Central Support Services of the Secretariat on its efforts to ensure that the required technological infrastructure is in place to accommodate the imminent linkage of the Official Document System to the United Nations web site, and also commends the Department of Public Information for addressing issues of content management relating to that System;

73. Notes that the integration of the Official Document System with the United Nations web site will significantly enhance the multilingual nature of the site and will lead to efficiencies throughout all Secretariat departments through the elimination of duplicate formatting and duplicate posting of documents on the site;

74. Welcomes the electronic mail-based United Nations News Service, distributed worldwide through e-mail by the Department of Public Information, and requests the Department to provide this service in all official languages, ensuring that news-breaking stories and news alerts are accurate, impartial and free of bias;

75. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the efforts of the High-Level Committee on Management to establish a United Nations portal, an inter-agency search facility encompassing the public web sites of all United Nations system organizations, a description of which is contained in annex II to the report of the Secretary-General;

76. Calls upon the Department of Public Information to encourage all United Nations system entities to participate in the United Nations system search pilot project, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session on the activities of the High-Level Committee on Management in this regard;

VI

Library services

77. Notes that the Dag Hammarskjöld Library is part of the Outreach Division of the Department of Public Information, also notes the continuing efforts of the Secretary-General to make the Library a virtual library with world outreach, reiterates the need to maintain the provision of hard copies to Member States, subject to the relevant provisions of its resolution 57/283 B of 15 April 2003, and further notes the efforts of the Secretary-General to enrich, on a multilingual basis, the stock of books and journals in the Library, including publications on peace and security and development-related issues, in order to ensure that the Library continues to be a broadly accessible resource for information about the United Nations and its activities;

78. Welcomes the creation of the Steering Committee on the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries, which is to develop and implement a strategy to achieve a more modern, efficient and accessible system within the United Nations, requests the Secretary-General, in guiding the work of the Steering Committee, to take into account the specificity and comparative advantage of each member library while ensuring an integrated, coherent and coordinated approach on United Nations libraries management and policy, and also requests the Secretary-General to report on the work of the Steering Committee to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session;

79. Recognizes the importance of the depository libraries in disseminating information and knowledge about United Nations activities, and, in this connection, urges the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, in its capacity as the focal point, to take the initiatives necessary to strengthen such libraries by providing regional training and other assistance;

80. Notes the holding of training courses, conducted by the Dag Hammarskjöld Library for the representatives of Member States and Secretariat staff on the use of Cyberseek, web search, the Intranet, United Nations documentation, United Nations Info Quest and the Official Document System of the United Nations;

81. Recalls paragraph 44 of its resolution 56/64 B of 24 December 2001, in which it welcomed the role of the Department of Public Information in fostering increased collaboration among libraries of the United Nations system, particularly in establishing one central system-wide online catalogue that would allow for the searching of the bibliographic records of all print holdings of all United Nations system libraries; commends the International Computing Centre for developing the United Nations System Shared Cataloguing and Public Access System, which provides a single point of access to library catalogues, indexes and abstract databases, library holdings, links to full-text resources, and archives; also commends the Department for its role in the development of the United Nations System Shared Cataloguing and Public Access System; requests the Department to encourage all United Nations system organizations to participate in the System; and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session in this regard;

82. Looks forward to the in-depth review of the library activities requested in paragraph 34 of its resolution 56/253, and requests that such a review be presented as soon as possible, and no later than at the twenty-sixth session of the Committee on Information;

83. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on modernization and integrated management of United Nations libraries, and looks forward to further information and proposals as requested in paragraph 14 of its resolution 57/300, to be submitted to the relevant United Nations bodies, including the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session;

VII

Outreach services

84. Acknowledges that the outreach services, which are to be implemented by the Outreach Division of the Department of Public Information, will work towards promoting awareness of the role and work of the United Nations on priority issues;

85. Notes the importance of the continued implementation by the Department of Public Information of the ongoing programme for broadcasters and journalists from developing countries and countries in transition, as mandated by the General Assembly, and encourages the Department to consider how best to maximize the benefits derived from the programme by reviewing, inter alia, its duration and the number of its participants;

86. Recognizes the need for the Department of Public Information to increase its outreach services in all regions, and reiterates the need to include, in the re-orientation of United Nations activities in the field of public information and communications, an analysis of the present reach and scope of the activities of the Department, identifying the widest possible spectrum of audiences and geographical areas that are not covered adequately and that may require special attention, including the appropriate means of communication and bearing in mind local language requirements;

87. Congratulates the United Nations Correspondents Association for its Dag Hammarskjöld Memorial Scholarship Fund, which sponsors journalists from developing countries to come to the United Nations Headquarters and report on the activities during the General Assembly, and urges donors to extend financial support to the Fund so that it may increase the number of such scholarships to journalists in this context;

VIII

Final remarks

88. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-sixth session and to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the activities of the Department of Public Information and on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the present resolution;

89. Requests the Committee on Information to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

90. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Questions relating to information".

Reorientation of information and communications activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/130 B [YUN 2002, p. 590], the Secretary-General submitted a March report to the Committee on Information [A/AC.198/2003/2] on progress in repositioning DPI to meet the UN communications challenges with renewed focus and greater clarity of purpose. It built on a previous reorientation report [YUN 2002, p. 584], which outlined the findings of a comprehensive review of DPI's management and operations and possible strategic actions to be taken as a result. The March report also detailed, in response to resolution 57/300 [ibid., p. 1353], the next phase of departmental reform and set out steps to be taken to implement the actions contained in the Secretary-General's 2002 report on strengthening the United Nations: an agenda for further change, as they applied to DPI [ibid., p. 585].

To clarify its goals and purposes and enhance its effectiveness and efficiency, DPI formulated a new mission statement which affirmed that its mission was "to help fulfil the substantive purposes of the United Nations by strategically communicating the activities and concerns of the Organization to achieve the greatest public impact". Its core message, in line with the Millennium Declaration adopted by Assembly resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49], would focus on poverty eradication, conflict prevention, sustainable development, human rights, HIV/AIDS, the battle against international terrorism and the needs of Africa. To fulfil its mission, DPI would continue to disseminate the UN message, taking into account the needs of its target audiences, through traditional means, including print materials, radio and television, and the Internet on the UN web site and associated sites. Resource levels allocated to each function would be readjusted as part of a continuing review process.

The Secretary-General approved a new operating model for DPI, based on a clear conception of the Department's role and an elaboration of its functions, emphasizing the communications needs of the United Nations, while also providing expected services to Member States. The model recognized that, while content emanated from other Secretariat departments and offices and UN system organizations, content coordination, refinement, presentation and distribution were DPI's responsibility, in cooperation with the media, Member States and civil society. A new organizational structure for DPI based on that model, which included a Strategic Communications Division, a News and Media Division and an Outreach Division, was put into effect on 1 November 2002. The Office of the Spokesman for the Secretary-General remained administratively within and worked closely with DPI, but continued to report directly to the Executive Office of the Secretary-General. The former Public Affairs Division was abolished and its functions divided between the new Strategic Communications and Outreach Divisions.

The Strategic Communications Division would devise and disseminate UN messages centred around priority themes, and ensure that communication was placed at the heart of strategic management of the United Nations. The Division included the Information Centres Service, which managed the administrative, programme and dissemination functions of the global UNIC network, a Committee Liaison Unit, which included the secretariats of the Committee on Information and UNCG, and a Communications Campaign Service, which served client offices through focal points in its four sections: development; Palestine, decolonization and human rights; peace and security; and Africa. The new Africa Section was devoted to promoting Africa's development and would include the quarterly magazine Africa Recovery, published in English and French, as one of its outputs. Information and operational support for the information component of field missions would continue as a core function of the Peace and Security Section.

Thematic promotional campaigns would be implemented using all the Department's assets, including its multimedia outlets, outreach to civil society, private sector partnerships and, at the local level, UNICs. A new issue-driven communications strategy for each department, rather than one that was event-driven, was being developed to promote UN work, building on the success of the global conferences campaigns.

The central objective of the News and Media Division was the real-time delivery of accurate, objective and balanced news and information to the media and other audiences worldwide in the context of the Internet-driven 24-hour news cycle, through the immediate dissemination in print, radio, television and the Internet, of news emanating from the UN system. The creation of an Internet Service, comprising the News Services and the Website Sections, had greatly facilitated the new approach. The new United Nations News Service, part of the United Nations News Centre on the web site, delivered news throughout the day to 10,000 subscribers in 130 countries; an Arabic version of the News Centre was launched in January and work was under way on similar sites in other official languages. Developments in the production and dissemination of the Division's products were complemented by partnerships with broadcasters and other promotional activities.

DPI was placing new emphasis on its relations with clients and partners external to the United Nations through the Outreach Division, which combined much of the former Library and Information Resources Division with the functions previously carried out by the Public Liaison Service of the Public Affairs Division. Its Civil Society Service brought together under one umbrella the new Educational Outreach Section, "The UN Works" programme, partnerships with the private sector, ongoing programmes such as those for non-governmental organization (NGOs), and special programmes and observances, exhibits, guided tours and other services to the public. The Educational Outreach Section was strengthening relationships with the academic community by working closely with the Group Programmes Unit and the NGO Section, among other measures. DPI would widen the reach of its publications through an energized and constantly updated web site, and by placing their contents as syndicated features in publications around the world, with the assistance of UNICs.

As a first step in the implementation of the Secretary-General's 2002 reform proposals [YUN

2002, p. 585], a Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries was established to improve the provision of UN library services (see p. 634). As to his proposals regarding UN publications, the Executive Committees would be called on to plan and coordinate all publications within their respective thematic areas [YUN 1997, p. 1389] in order to reduce their number and improve the coherence, focus and scheduling among the Organization's many publications. DPI also planned to reconstitute the Publications Board within the Outreach Division as a standard-setting body with appropriate membership and terms of reference. The functions formerly performed by the Production and Coordination Unit had been eliminated or were being handled elsewhere. The Secretary-General's proposal to transfer the Cartographic Section from DPI to the Department of Peacekeeping Operations would be reflected in the context of the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget.

DPI was preparing to implement his proposal to rationalize the network of UNICs around regional hubs, starting with the creation of a Western European hub. The new operating concept aimed to achieve a more equitable distribution of resources to information centres in all regions and to redeploy resources to other high-priority activities, including advancing multilingualism on the UN web site and the systematic evaluation of the impact of major product and service lines, in accordance with results-based management. (For more information on the regionalization of UNICs, see p. 637.)

Regarding performance management, DPI was formulating methodologies and planned to conduct a systematic evaluation of the impact, efficiency and cost-effectiveness of its activities over a three-year period, with assistance from the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS), as requested by the Assembly in resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353]. It had also introduced an annual programme impact review, with a view to institutionalizing performance management, and, in that context, agreed to be an OIOS pilot as it looked to update and promote monitoring and self-evaluation.

The report also provided information on the UN web site, which was dealt with in a separate report of the Secretary-General [A/58/217] (see p. 637).

Annexed to the report were guidelines and criteria for the regionalization of UNICs and information concerning the Official Document System and the UN web site portal, as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/130 B [YUN 2002, p. 590].

Agenda for further change

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/58/351] on the status of implementation of reform measures described in his 2002 report on strengthening the United Nations: an agenda for further change [YUN 2002, p. 585], provided information on, among other subjects, enhancing public information and streamlining publications. The Secretary-General discussed the restructuring of DPI, the new evaluation process, the regionalization of UNICs and libraries management.

Updating the information provided in his March report to the Committee on Information (see p. 630), the Secretary-General said that results from the first annual programme impact review (see p. 631), which DPI was developing with OIOS, would be reported to the Committee on Information in 2004. By the end of 2003, the Department would have a set of preliminary performance measures in place, along with baseline data relating to departmental goals, following which a two-step process for assessing impact would be undertaken. Since the exercise would require resources and expertise not currently available to DPI, the involvement of external partners was anticipated. Training to support DPI's new operating model was under way. Most programme managers had been trained in evaluation techniques, and staff at all levels were undergoing training in measuring the impact and effectiveness of products and activities.

DPI was working on an action plan, in consultation with Member States, to ensure a seamless transition from the model of UNICs at the national level to a regional model. The regional hub in Western Europe, to be created by 31 December, would be located in Brussels, Belgium (see p. 637). The Committee on Information would consider, in 2004, a progress report on the regional hub proposal, with the objective of applying the initiative in other regions.

The Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries, established in January, was tasked with developing policies and coordinating operations among all UN libraries (see p. 634). It planned to complete by late 2003 the establishment of a multilingual UN libraries research gateway on the Internet, the creation of a master list of core areas of specialization at UN Libraries worldwide and the full incorporation of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific in the Shared Indexing Programme.

The Publications Board was reconstituted as a standard-setting body in February, and its main mandate was to review and determine the policies governing the preparation, distribution and sale of printed and electronic publications, and to draft new and revised administrative instructions to implement publications policy. As a follow-up to resolution 57/300, a separate working group was established to examine the feasibility and cost of online publications delivery, supplemented by a print-on-demand capability. As an integral part of the preparation of the biennial budget, all publications programmes proposed by Secretariat entities were channelled through the relevant Executive Committees, each of which was responsible for reviewing plans for publication, ensuring coherence, avoiding duplication and establishing clear priorities regarding what was to be published. During the previous year, the Executive Committee on Economic and Social Affairs pioneered an exercise, which would continue annually, to coordinate its members' publication programmes. Overall, there had been an 18 per cent decrease in recurrent publications and a 23 per cent decrease in non-recurrent publications during the period 2002/03 to 2004/05. Budget data indicated that 192 publications and reports had been discontinued.

UN international radio broadcasting capacity

The Committee on Information considered a March report of the Secretary-General [A/AC.198/2003/4], submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 56/64 B [YUN 2001, p. 559] and 57/130 B [YUN 2002, p. 590], on the implementation of the pilot project to develop an international radio broadcasting capacity for the United Nations, which was launched in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 574]. The Secretary-General stated that DPI commissioned an independent, in-depth survey on the estimated worldwide audience for UN Radio programmes in the six official UN languages, plus Portuguese. Representing a snapshot of listenership as at November 2002, and carried out with the active participation of 180 partner stations, the survey estimated conservatively that more than 133 million people listened to UN Radio at least once a week. That figure did not include affiliate radio stations of partner broadcasters, nor stations transmitting by short wave or satellite. Such extensive outreach was achieved with the relatively small investment of the additional $2.4 million provided to DPI by Member States per biennium. Many of the participating partner stations were major national broadcasters, a clear indication of worldwide interest in UN Radio broadcasts. The daily UN Radio feeds provided a valuable service, supplying material not available from other news sources. UN Radio also provided a range and depth of coverage, including regional focus and regional voices, and, as the public voice of the United Nations, it spoke with unique authority. However, technological factors, particularly the continuing heavy dependence on transmitting programmes through the telephone, were a constraint on the further fulfilment of the potential of UN Radio. Efforts by the international community to help bridge the digital divide, specifically by increasing broadcasters' access to satellite and Internet technology, would help to overcome such limitations. The report described the methodology of the survey and included a breakdown of results by language and region.

To ensure the further expansion of UN Radio outreach, building partnerships with local, regional and national broadcasters worldwide continued to be a priority for DPI. UN Radio was also building a higher profile on the Internet through active cooperation with the United Nations News Centre, and the expansion of the News Centre into more of the official languages would increase the synergy between the two. The expansion of the UN Radio's client base would continue to be central to DPI's efforts to increase the interest of news organizations and the media. In that regard, renewed efforts would be directed towards Asia, where there was great potential. As part of its promotional efforts, DPI was exploring a number of possible initiatives, including coordinated telemarketing to cultivate new clients; an electronic newsletter with updated information on the Department's radio programming and its radio station partners; and more regular participation of broadcasters in relevant major international meetings and conferences. An important element of the strategy was expanding the number of partners in developed countries. Work was under way on the new integrated and automated news-gathering and production capacity, which would considerably strengthen the capacity to provide broadcasters with material more rapidly and flexibly. The planned modernization and upgrading of the UN International Broadcasting Centre with digital technology would also greatly facilitate the dissemination of the radio programmes to client stations. Continued efforts by Member States to close the digital divide were directly relevant to DPI's efforts to improve and expand its radio services.

The report concluded that radio remained the most potent means of communication for the United Nations, particularly in developing countries. A firm mandate from Member States to continue the international broadcasting capacity would ensure that radio continued to contribute, cost-effectively, to DPI's overall goal of generating understanding about the United Nations.

DPI activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/130 B [YUN 2002, p. 590], the Secretary-General submitted a July report on questions relating to information [A/58/175], covering DPI's activities from July 2002 to July 2003 and the implementation of the resolution's recommendations. It also described progress in the implementation of the proposal for the regionalization of UNICs, as requested in resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353].

The report provided further details on the restructuring of DPI, which was aligned to a new proposed four-part subprogramme under the 2004-2005 programme budget: subprogramme 1, communications services (Strategic Communications Division); subprogramme 2, news services (News and Media Division and the Office of the Spokesman for the Secretary-General); subprogramme 3, library services (the Dag Hammarskjöld Library of the Outreach Division); and subprogramme 4, outreach services (the Outreach Division). The programmatic aspects of the 2004-2005 programme budget for DPI under Section 28, public information, were submitted in a March report of the Secretary-General [A/AC.198/2003/3] to the Committee on Information. (See p. 1399 for more information on the proposed 2004-2005 budget.)

As a result of the reform of DPI's structure and operating methods, its message was more focused, its target audience better identified, its resources prioritized and certain outputs that were no longer useful or needed improvement identified. To maximize its capacity to deliver messages globally, the Department was developing synergies between the new technology and traditional means of communication.

To address the challenges it faced in connection with the Iraq crisis in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 285], DPI established a system-wide, inter-agency communications task force to ensure coordination of UN information gathering and to develop a joint communications strategy that would provide the UN system with a rapid public information response to the rapidly changing situation. Once conflict began in 2003 (see p. 333), DPI changed its focus, producing messages on the protection of Iraqi civilians, meeting their humanitarian needs, and preserving Iraqi sovereignty and territorial integrity. The current focus was on post-war rebuilding.

DPI remained fully engaged in thematic communications campaigns, using all assets at its disposal, including its multimedia outlets, civil society outreach, private sector partnerships and UNICs. It devised issue-driven communications strategies in connection with several major international conferences and global observances, and it coordinated promotional campaigns through the United Nations Communications Group (see p. 638). A long-standing but growing area of activity was DPI's support for the information components of peacekeeping and peace-building and other political missions (see PART I, Chapter I). In February, it participated in a multidisciplinary assessment mission to Côte d'Ivoire, resulting in recommendations on the public information component of the new UN mission as the crisis unfolded there (see p. 183).

DPI continued to strengthen the coordination and management of the UN web site and to offer guidance to other content providers, both inside and outside the Secretariat, in support of their Internet activities. Since September 2002, over 28,000 documents in the six official UN languages had been directly linked to the Official Document System (ODS), and it was expected that all ODS documents would be made freely accessible to the public by 2004. The Department continued to develop its in-house capability for live and on-demand webcasting, which was emerging as a cost-effective communication and information tool with global outreach. The UN News Centre portal was significantly enhanced as the major gateway on the UN web site to daily UN system news and information. An Arabic-language version was launched in January, and similar sites in the remaining three official languages (Chinese, Russian, Spanish) were to be operational by the third quarter of 2003, substantially advancing DPI's goal of language parity on the UN web site. The e-mail service launched in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 586] to bring news directly to the desks of redisseminators in the media, civil society and academia was expanded to include service in Arabic and French.

The live radio project was firmly established as one of the important multimedia channels for strategically communicating UN activities and concerns to large audiences worldwide. In view of its proven successful and cost-effective global outreach, DPI requested that the project be made permanent and was seeking regular budget funding at the current level for the 2004-2005 biennium. United Nations Television continued to produce and distribute high-quality, in-house video coverage of meetings, press conferences and special events at Headquarters. DPI expanded considerably its formal partnerships with major television broadcasters around the world.

The UN Chronicle continued to enhance its online editions in English and French. The English online edition established its home page as an educational outreach portal, featuring web-exclusive articles and providing Internet links and other educational resources on the work of the United Nations. The Department's educational outreach efforts were further enhanced through the UN Chronicle Feature Service, which, with the help of UNICs, redisseminated print articles from eminent contributors to select newspapers and magazines worldwide. The Cyberschoolbus, the web site for children and teachers, continued to develop new educational materials on a wide range of issues, and significant progress was made in translating its materials from English to Chinese, Russian and Spanish.

DPI continued to provide an intensive information programme for NGOs, particularly those associated with the Department and those having consultative status with the United Nations through the Economic and Social Council. Reflecting its rigorous evaluation and review programme, DPI associated 30 new NGOs and disassociated 80 organizations that no longer met the criteria for association, bringing the total number of associated NGOs to 1,375.

The General Assembly, in resolution 58/270 of 23 December (see p. 1399), asked the Secretary-General, with the assistance of OIOS, to conduct a systematic evaluation of the impact, efficiency and cost-effectiveness of all DPI activities and report to the Assembly, through the Committee on Information and the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, in 2004.

Library services

The Dag Hammarskjöld Library continued to improve its web site in the six official languages to provide access to electronic information, as well as materials in hard copy, and to offer training programmes to mission personnel, Secretariat staff and depository libraries. As at May 2003, there were 405 UN depository libraries, 45 of which were visited and inspected by UN staff. In addition to oversight and training, the Library was increasingly emphasizing outreach to and by the depository libraries. It encouraged them to publicize their document collections and UN themes, and provided promotional materials to assist them; as from 1 June 2002, 10 depository libraries had held events in various countries.

The Library's web page was also expanded, increasing the availability of materials in the six official languages. It reorganized its two major Internet-based services, UNBISNET and the UNBIS Thesaurus. The new UNBISNET provided for easier searching of the Library's bibliographic databases and, with UNBISNET's new features, the Library was able to establish direct links from the indexed record to the full text of more than 13,500 documents in ODS in all languages of issuance. The UNBIS Thesaurus was officially launched in March in the six official languages. The Library provided official users with access to a variety of external electronic services, including the Economist Intelligence Unit, Factiva, Oxford Analytica and SourceOECD, most acquired at concessional prices through the United Nations System Electronic Information Acquisitions Consortium. It continued to make progress in the retrospective digitization of parliamentary documentation, and efforts were made to complete the language parity of documentation already digitized in English and uploaded to ODS. The Library also assisted various Secretariat departments in converting their materials to electronic format.

The General Assembly, in resolution 58/270 of 23 December (see p. 1399), requested the Secretary-General to review, through OIOS, the operation and management of UN libraries, so as to assess their staffing requirements in the light of technological advances in the delivery of information, and to report to the Assembly in 2004.

Steering Committee

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], the Secretary-General reported in March [A/AC.198/2003/5] on the implementation of the measures he had proposed for improving the management of UN libraries in his 2002 report on strengthening the United Nations: an agenda for further change [YUN 2002, p. 585]. Arising out of a meeting between the Deputy Secretary-General, the Under-Secretaries-General for Communications and Public Information and for Management, representatives of the UN Offices at Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna, the regional commissions and the United Nations University, the Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries was established in January. Its mandate was to facilitate interdependency, foster initiatives to create a dynamic, synergistic and fully functional network of library services throughout the United Nations and encourage a shift from a culture of "ownership" to one of access in order to expand cooperative strategies for collection development and resource-sharing, and develop new ones.

Chaired by the Director of DPI's Outreach Division and comprising representatives of each UN Office, the Steering Committee would meet quarterly to set priorities and policies. It would report to the Deputy Secretary-General through the Under-Secretary-General for Communications and Public Information. The work of the Committee would concentrate on: inter-library management initiatives promoting collaborative and coordinated activities, products and services; optimization of financial resources; sharing best practices and lessons learned; expanded technical assistance programmes for the small, field and depository libraries; archival storage; digitization; bibliographic control of UN documentation; production of multilingual web pages and portals; collaborative reference services; database management and maintenance; strategies for marketing library outputs and services; staff training and development; and staff mobility. The Committee would also play a leading role in ensuring that all libraries of the Organization brought their specialized expertise in information management to bear in the development of all UN knowledge-sharing initiatives.

The report concluded that the Steering Committee's primary aim would be to provide instantaneous, electronic access to a seamlessly integrated, coordinated and interdependent global repository of intellectual resources for users worldwide. It would work to leverage existing investments in human, financial, technological and information resources in the UN system of library services and to blend traditional library functions with advanced technologies. Through coordinated management, it was expected that economies and efficiencies would be achieved and services optimized to strengthen UN outreach.

The Committee met on 20 March, 16-18 June and 25 September. It adopted a work plan focused on bibliographic control of UN documents; collaborative reference services; collections/resource-sharing; hardware, software and web content; public relations; and small and field libraries.

UN information centres

The United Nations information centres (UNICs), services and offices continued to provide a local voice to the global messages of the United Nations on priority themes. With the adoption of the new operating model for DPI and the resulting integration of the Information Centres Service into the new Strategic Communications Division (see p. 630), the network of DPI's field communications outposts became an integral part of the planning and implementation of strategic outreach on priority issues. As a follow-up to an OIOS review of the structure and operations of UNICs (see p. 636), all centres, services and offices were asked to develop, with guidance and coordination from Headquarters, annual work plans for 2003 and to implement them in cooperation with local partners, including Governments, local authorities, the media, educational institutions, NGOs and the private sector. UNICs often took the lead in coordinating the strategic communications initiatives of the UN country team, thereby promoting a unified image of the United Nations at the local level. Such initiatives included activities aimed at promoting the Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 51], issues before the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] and the International Year of Freshwater (2003) (see p. 1033). In developing countries, UNICs assisted individual members of the country team in promoting their special observances, providing public information support for visits by their senior officials and organizing the local launches of their flagship reports, in addition to their regular tasks. The centres relied increasingly on modern communications technology to strengthen their outreach. DPI continued to provide training and technical assistance to UNICs to enable them to establish their own presence on the Internet. The centres continued to train local media professionals in the use of UN information resources on the Internet and extended the programme to include NGOs, educators and students, among others.

OIOS report. In March, the Secretary-General transmitted a report to the General Assembly on the OIOS review of the structure and operations of UNICs [A/37/747 & Corr.1]. The audit, conducted at the DPI offices in New York and at UNICs in Bogotá, Colombia; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Mexico City; Port of Spain, Trinidad and Tobago; and Rome, Italy, assessed the adequacy and cost-effectiveness of the services provided by UNICs in implementation of DPI's legislative mandates, taking into consideration evolving global and regional information needs, and examined whether the resources were rationally and equitably allocated, efficiently used and accounted for properly. Although the tools and data needed to measure performance were inadequate in some instances, OIOS was able to develop sufficient evidence to conclude that an overall public information strategy needed to be formulated and coordinated. The audit showed that DPI needed to re-examine the broad mandates, goals and strategies of the operation to take account of regional information needs and changing regional and global circumstances, and to reassess urgently the UNIC concept in terms of impact, usefulness and continued relevance with regard to operational effectiveness and resource allocations. The review found that logistical and financial constraints prevented some centres from achieving adequate coverage throughout a country or region. Moreover, overlap and duplication hindered closer cooperation with other UN entities in a country or region, and there was no policy for UNICs to charge for services provided to those entities.

The absence of a requirement for UNICs to submit annual plans to DPI for review and approval was a serious shortcoming, which, in some cases, resulted in the ad hoc coverage of mandates and an imbalance in programme activities. The monthly report providing statistics on UNIC activities, the major tool for evaluating performance and impact, was submitted by only one third of the centres on a regular basis at the time of the audit. The criteria used for assessing UNIC performance were also insufficient.

Other findings of the audit related to filling posts allocated to the Information Centres Service; rent and rent-related expenses of UNIC premises; equitable resource allocation to individual UNICs; the relevance of UNIC reference libraries; and the role of National Information Officers. Additional findings and recommendations were detailed in an internal audit report submitted to DPI.

OIOS recommended that DPI undertake an in-depth evaluation of the implementation of the UNIC operation mandate, update relevant goals, objectives and strategies, and apply appropriate measures to achieve them, taking into account regional information needs and changing regional and global circumstances. In implementing the updated goals, objectives and strategies, DPI should identify and secure adequate resources, including travel funds, and assess opportunities for reducing duplication of activities between UNICs and other UN entities in a country or region. OIOS also recommended that DPI: assess the nature and extent of services provided by UNICs to other UN entities and develop a policy and issue guidelines for charging for services rendered to and for sharing costs with such entities; require all UNICs to prepare and submit for review and approval an annual plan of activities for the forthcoming year and review each plan to ensure adequate mandate coverage and cost-effectiveness; and submit to the General Assembly, through the Secretary-General, a proposal requesting that the continued operation of UNICs and the establishment of new centres be conditional on the concerned Member States providing rent-free premises or a subsidy for rent and maintenance costs. Other recommendations dealt with monitoring UNIC activities; reviewing UNIC reporting requirements; establishing performance criteria for assessing UNIC activities; formulating a programme of Information Officer visits to UNICs; establishing criteria for allocating funds and posts to UNICs and for determining the staffing level of the head of centre; determining the optimum staffing levels of each

UNIC; monitoring UNIC library visitor numbers; and establishing an additional grade level for the National Information Officer position.

The Secretary-General, in his transmittal note, said that he concurred with the thrust of the recommendations, which would streamline and revitalize the operation of UNICs and optimize the benefit of UN financial and human resource investment in that activity. He was pleased to note that DPI was already taking steps to address the issues highlighted in the report through the implementation of the recommendations contained therein.

Regionalization of UN information centres

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1853], the Secretary-General, in his report on questions related to information [A/58/175], described the implementation of his 2002 proposal for the rationalization of the network of UNICs around regional hubs, beginning with the creation of a Western European hub [YUN 2002, p. 585].

On 14 January, the Deputy Secretary-General and the Under-Secretary-General for Communications and Public Information met with the EU Presidency to discuss the implementation of that proposal. The Under-Secretary-General also held consultations with EU member States as a group on 8 April in New York and on 9 July with the group of the Council on the United Nations in Brussels; bilateral discussions were also held with concerned UN Member States. On 10 June, the Secretary-General decided to proceed with the implementation phase of the plan for Western Europe, which would entail the closure by 31 December of the nine centres located in Athens, Greece; Bonn, Germany; Brussels; Copenhagen, Denmark; Lisbon, Portugal; London; Madrid, Spain; Paris and Rome, and the establishment of a regional UNIC on 1 January 2004. He, in principle, accepted Belgium's offer to locate the regional hub in rent-free premises in Brussels, subject to the conclusion of a satisfactory agreement between Belgium and the Secretariat.

The Western European hub would articulate its information programmes in the 15 EU member States around a common list of UN priorities, which would be conveyed strategically through key intermediaries for maximum impact. That approach would lend coherence to UN messages in the region and contribute to influencing European public opinion in support of the United Nations. Resources released would be redistributed to UN information activities in developing countries and to other high-priority activities, including advancing multilingualism on the UN web site and evaluating the impact of DPI's major products and services. DPI was developing an action plan to ensure a seamless transition from country-based UNICs to the new regional model and the smooth transfer of the accrued experience, country-specific knowledge, institutional memory, and existing partnerships and contacts to the hub. The Department would develop a strong triangular relationship between the hub and the UN Information Services in Geneva and Vienna, which would continue to serve Switzerland and Austria, respectively, to strengthen DPI's overall information capacity in Western Europe. In particular, advantage would be taken of the large accredited press corps at the UN Office at Geneva and the proximity of the UN Office in Vienna to some acceding EU States.

The Secretary-General proposed consulting with concerned Member States on further regionalization, using criteria provided in his report on the reorientation of UN activities in the field of public information and communications [A/AC.198/2003/2] and the views of the members of the Committee on Information to guide the application of the "hub" approach in other regions, taking into account the special circumstances prevailing in developing countries. The Secretary-General would submit to the Committee in 2004 a further progress report on the implementation of the regionalization proposal and the possible establishment of other regional UNICs.

Development of UN web site

In response to General Assembly decision 57/579 [YUN 2002, p. 589], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on progress in the implementation of his 2002 proposal [ibid., p. 588] for strengthening DPI within the existing capacity to support and enhance the UN web site in all official languages [A/58/217]. He said that, as the UN web site continued to grow in popularity, it had become a very cost-effective medium for the worldwide dissemination of information on UN activities at a continually decreasing cost per unit, and the number of developing country users had increased due to improved connectivity to the site. The recent linkage of ODS for parliamentary documentation to the web site was an important step towards the goal of parity among the official languages on the site and had significantly boosted the number of documents available in each language. DPI was implementing other innovative approaches towards achieving multilingualism within existing resources. The Committee on Information, at its twenty-fifth (2003) session [A/58/21], endorsed the Secretary-General's proposal to redeploy some of the resources freed up by consolidating UNICs in Europe into a regional hub (see above), to enhance, among other areas, the language capacity of the Website Section. The possibility of redeploying some resources to other UNICs working in the respective languages to carry out portions of the work on the multilingual web site, such as translations, routine updating and maintenance, had been examined. DPI intended to test the viability of the concept in a pilot exercise at one duty station, depending on the availability of resources, and, if successful, would consider expanding it to others.

Another key component for strengthening language parity on the web site was the expansion of the United Nations News Centre, currently available in Arabic, English, French and Russian, into all official languages by mid-September. DPI was using the worldwide academic community to expand its language capacity through agreements with universities to provide translation of material in a particular language at no cost to the United Nations. It was also encouraging and assisting other Secretariat departments to increase the availability of their materials in all official languages. A number of departments had requested increased provisions in their 2004-2005 budget to help meet that goal. A thorough analysis of the web site would be conducted with the assistance of pro bono services, with the aim of formulating realistic proposals for redesigning, restructuring and refocusing the web site, including the multilingual aspects, together with the necessary hardware and connectivity requirements and the time frame for implementation.

The re-engineered ODS, using the Lotus Notes multilingual capability, could be accessed from the UN web site and was incorporated into other specialized UN system web sites. Those improvements were mandatory prerequisites for making ODS freely available. However, changing from the current subscription-based service to free access would result in a significant increase in the number of users, a load that the current ODS infrastructure would not be able to handle; it would have to be upgraded. Resources for the required upgrading had been requested in the 2004-2005 biennial budget and, if approved by the General Assembly, would allow implementation of free ODS access in late 2004.

Enhancing the UN web site in the official UN languages would be carried out in phases. In the first phase, three posts were to be made available to institutionalize the language capacity in the Website Section, so that all official languages had one regular language assistant. In the second phase, in the context of the 2004-2005 budget, seven posts would be redeployed to the Section, thus strengthening the language capacity dedicated to the web site. Identification of resources for implementing the remaining elements of the proposals was ongoing.

The report concluded that the realignment of priorities with regard to the web site, as envisaged in the report of the Secretary-General on the reorientation of UN public information and communications activities [A/AC.198/2003/2] (see p. 637), would increase synergies and boost the team approach, thereby reducing compartmentalization to the extent possible, and position UN Internet capacity to take advantage of evolving technology. The ultimate objective was a technologically sound, continually updated, intuitive and user-friendly web site that was available to users in their choice of language.

ACABQ report. In a September report [A/58/7/Add.1 & Corr.1], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) took note of the Secretary-General's August report (above). The Committee referred to its comments in its first report on the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget [A/58/7], emphasizing the importance of continued efforts to achieve parity among languages on the web site and supporting the redeployment of resources to that end.

By decision 58/562 of 23 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's August report and ACABQ's related report (above).

In resolution 58/270 of the same date (see p. 1399), the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to continue to strengthen the UN web site through further redeployment to the required language posts and report in 2004.

UN Communications Group

The United Nations Communications Group (UNCG), which replaced the Joint United Nations Information Committee in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 589], at its second annual session (New York, 23-24 June), discussed the role and effectiveness of the United Nations in the light of the crisis in Iraq (see p. 333), and considered options for meaningful and effective public information campaigns at a time of declining credibility for the Organization and growing uncertainty about its future role in that region. The Group identified several elements it considered vital in formulating future public information campaigns and concluded that the United Nations remained the principle multilateral voice. Its communicators should remind the world of the role and responsibility of Member States within the multilateral framework; while UN communicators could not replace Governments making decisions, they could influence the climate in which those decisions were made. They also had to speak in a common language and tell the UN story in the most effective manner; UNCG was a key platform for developing that voice. UNCG agreed that the use of UN field experts, including local and national staff members, in public information campaigns should be encouraged, and local staff should be trained and prepared for media outreach. Launches of major UN reports should be used as opportunities for engaging the media in the issues involved. Statistical information, such as that offered in periodic reports on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51], should be used to tell the UN story, and use of the Internet as a communications tool within and outside the UN system should be maximized.

In order to involve the UN information services in the overall MDG campaign, UNCG decided to set up a task force, led by DPI, focusing on communications strategies and their implementation. The Group endorsed guidelines for designating UN Goodwill Ambassadors and agreed to recognize and make better use of local celebrities in promoting UN issues. It created a task force, headed by UNDP, to explore ways of involving international pollsters and mobilizing resources for using global opinion surveys as communication tools. The Group recommended that members enhance their financial support for the Non-Governmental Liaison Service and requested the High-level Committee on Programmes of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination to strengthen the Service's financial standing.

Information and communications in the context of international security

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/53 [YUN 2002, p. 597], the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/58/373], transmitted the views of seven Member States on the general appreciation of the issues of information security; the definition of basic notions related to information security, including unauthorized interference with or misuse of information and telecommunication systems and information resources; and the context of relevant international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunication systems.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/437], adopted resolution 58/32 without vote [agenda item 68].

Developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/70 of 4 December 1998, 54/49 of 1 December 1999, 55/28 of 20 November 2000, 56/19 of 29 November 2001 and 57/53 of 22 November 2002,

Recalling also its resolutions on the role of science and technology in the context of international security, in which, inter alia, it recognized that scientific and technological developments could have both civilian and military applications and that progress in science and technology for civilian applications needed to be maintained and encouraged,

Noting that considerable progress has been achieved in developing and applying the latest information technologies and means of telecommunication,

Affirming that it sees in this process the broadest positive opportunities for the further development of civilization, the expansion of opportunities for co-operation for the common good of all States, the enhancement of the creative potential of humankind and additional improvements in the circulation of information in the global community,

Recalling, in this connection, the approaches and principles outlined at the Information Society and Development Conference, held in Midrand, South Africa, from 13 to 15 May 1996,

Bearing in mind the results of the Ministerial Conference on Terrorism, held in Paris on 30 July 1996, and the recommendations that it made,

Noting that the dissemination and use of information technologies and means affect the interests of the entire international community and that optimum effectiveness is enhanced by broad international co-operation,

Expressing its concern that these technologies and means can potentially be used for purposes that are inconsistent with the objectives of maintaining international stability and security and may adversely affect the integrity of the infrastructure of States to the detriment of their security in both civil and military fields,

Considering that it is necessary to prevent the use of information resources or technologies for criminal or terrorist purposes,

Noting the contribution of those Member States that have submitted their assessments on issues of information security to the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraphs 1 to 3 of resolutions 53/70, 54/49, 55/28, 56/19 and 57/53,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General containing those assessments,

Welcoming the initiative taken by the Secretariat and the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research in convening an international meeting of experts in Geneva in August 1999 on developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security, as well as its results,

Considering that the assessments of the Member States contained in the reports of the Secretary-General and the international meeting of experts have contributed to a better understanding of the substance of issues of international information security and related notions,

Confirming the request to the Secretary-General contained in paragraph 4 of its resolutions 56/19 and 57/53,

1. Calls upon Member States to promote further at multilateral levels the consideration of existing and potential threats in the field of information security, as well as possible measures to limit the threats emerging in this field, consistent with the need to preserve the free flow of information;

2. Considers that the purpose of such measures could be served through the examination of relevant international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunications systems;

3. Invites all Member States to continue to inform the Secretary-General of their views and assessments on the following questions:

(a) General appreciation of the issues of information security;

(b) Definition of basic notions related to information security, including unauthorized interference with or misuse of information and telecommunications systems and information resources;

(c) The content of the concepts mentioned in paragraph 2 of the present resolution;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to consider existing and potential threats in the sphere of information security and possible cooperative measures to address them, and to conduct a study on the concepts referred to in paragraph 2 of the present resolution, with the assistance of a group of governmental experts, to be established in 2004, appointed by him on the basis of equitable geographical distribution and with the help of Member States in a position to render such assistance, and to submit a report on the outcome of the study to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security".

Cybersecurity and protection of information infrastructures

In resolution 58/199 of 23 December (see p. 861), the General Assembly took note of elements for protecting critical information infrastructures, which were set out in an annex to the resolution.

Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament

On 8 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/58/458], adopted resolution 58/33 by recorded vote (106-49-19) [agenda item 69].

Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that scientific and technological developments can have both civilian and military applications and that progress in science and technology for civilian applications needs to be maintained and encouraged,

Concerned that military applications of scientific and technological developments can contribute significantly to the improvement and upgrading of advanced weapons systems and, in particular, weapons of mass destruction,

Aware of the need to follow closely the scientific and technological developments that may have a negative impact on international security and disarmament, and to channel scientific and technological developments for beneficial purposes,

Cognizant that international transfers of dual-use as well as high-technology products, services and know-how for peaceful purposes are important for the economic and social development of States,

Also cognizant of the need to regulate such transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technology with military applications through multilaterally negotiated, universally applicable, non-discriminatory guidelines,

Expressing its concern about the growing proliferation of ad hoc and exclusive export control regimes and arrangements for dual-use goods and technologies, which tend to impede the economic and social development of developing countries,

Recalling that in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, it was again noted with concern that undue restrictions on exports to developing countries of material, equipment and technology for peaceful purposes persisted,

Emphasizing that internationally negotiated guidelines for the transfer of high technology with military applications should take into account the legitimate defence requirements of all States and the requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, while ensuring that access to high-technology products and services and know-how for peaceful purposes is not denied,

1. Affirms that scientific and technological progress should be used for the benefit of all mankind to promote the sustainable economic and social development of all States and to safeguard international security, and that international cooperation in the use of science and technology through the transfer and exchange of technological know-how for peaceful purposes should be promoted;

2. Invites Member States to undertake additional efforts to apply science and technology for disarmament-related purposes and to make disarmament-related technologies available to interested States;

3. Urges Member States to undertake multilateral negotiations with the participation of all interested States in order to establish universally acceptable, non-discriminatory guidelines for international transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technology with military applications;

4. Encourages United Nations bodies to contribute, within existing mandates, to promoting the application of science and technology for peaceful purposes;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/33:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Peaceful uses of outer space

The Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (Committee on Outer Space), at its forty-sixth session (Vienna, 11-20 June) [A/58/20], discussed ways and means to maintain outer space for peaceful purposes, the spin-off benefits of space technology, and space and society. It examined the implementation of the recommendations of the Third (1999) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III) [YUN 1999, p. 556], and reviewed the work of its two subcommittees, one dealing with scientific and technical issues and the other with legal questions.

Implementation of UNISPACE III recommendations

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/116 [YUN 2002, p. 602], the Committee on Outer Space reconvened the working group established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 598] to prepare a report to enable the Assembly, in accordance with its resolution 54/68 [YUN 1999, p. 557], to review and appraise, in 2004, the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III and to consider further action and initiatives.

The working group had before it a compilation of input [A/AC.105/L.247] from the action teams established by the Committee in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 568] (see below). It noted the progress made by the teams and agreed that they should submit updates or revised input on further progress made. It agreed on criteria for selecting recommendations for inclusion in the report to the Assembly.

The working group also considered a compilation of contributions from UN system entities, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs having permanent observer status with the Committee on Outer Space and space-related regional entities that had been invited to provide input for the report to the Assembly. It noted that some action teams had taken into account relevant input from those organizations in developing recommendations, and encouraged interaction between the action teams and those organizations with initiatives, programmes or projects that could benefit their work. A December Secretariat note [A/AC.105/819] contained information on the activities of four international organizations that had contributed to the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations.

The working group finalized an indicative, preliminary draft outline of the report to the Assembly and agreed to hold informal consultations during the 2004 sessions of the Scientific and Technical and Legal Subcommittees to advance the preparation of the draft report. It recommended that the Committee on Outer Space, at its forty-seventh (2004) session, reconvene the working group and allocate sufficient time for it to finalize the report for endorsement by the Committee.

In accordance with resolution 57/116, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its fortieth session (see p. 642), reconvened its Working Group of the Whole to consider, among other issues, the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations, including the progress of the action teams. Before the Working Group was an updated report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations in tabular form [A/AC.105/C.1/L.262], as recommended by the Subcommittee in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 599]. The Working Group established an action team on improving knowledge-sharing through the promotion of universal access to space-based communication services. Based on a template circulated to the action teams by the Working Group for the submission of reports and recommendations, input from the 11 action teams was annexed to a May Secretariat note [A/AC.105/L.247]. The Working Group agreed that the results of the 2000 Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 47], the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] and the first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society in 2003 (see p. 857) should be taken into account in the preparation of the report to the Assembly and that the recommendations or actions resulting from those conferences should be correlated with specific UNISPACE III recommendations. Appended to the Subcommittee's report were guidelines circulated to UN entities, organizations with observer status with the Committee on Outer Space and regional entities on inputs from them that would best assist the Committee's working group in preparing its report. The Working Group of the Whole agreed that inputs to be provided in accordance with the guidelines should be submitted by the beginning of May.

The Committee on Outer Space, at its June session, endorsed the recommendations of its Working Group. It noted that all action teams had reported on their work, including the submission of the final reports of the Action Team on Sustainable Development [A/AC.105/C.1/L.264] to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and of the Action Team on New and Innovative Sources of Funding [A/AC.105/L.246] to the Committee. During the year, final reports were also submitted by the Action Teams on Weather and Climate Forecasting [A/AC.105/C.1/L.269], on Disaster Management [A/AC.105/C.1/L.273] and on Global Navigation Satellite Systems [A/AC.105/C.1/L.274]. The Committee noted that the low level of feedback and participation by some action team members could be related to the lack of capacity and institutionalized mechanisms and a shortage of resources and expertise in gathering information and data exchange among national institutions. Some action teams had divided tasks and responsibilities among members based on their capacities and capabilities; that method of work had proved to be beneficial and could be followed by some action teams.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/116 [YUN 2002, p. 602], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/58/174] on action taken by the Committee on Outer Space and its subsidiary bodies to implement the UNISPACE III recommendations, implementation of the plan of action of the Office for Outer Space Affairs, and action taken to further enhance inter-agency coordination and cooperation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/471], adopted resolution 58/90 without vote [agenda item 82].

Review of the implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/68 of 6 December 1999, 55/122 of 8 December 2000, 56/51 of 10 December

2001 and 57/116 of 11 December 2002, concerning the review and appraisal by the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session of the implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III), held at Vienna from 19 to 30 July 1999,

Taking note with satisfaction of the work of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space and its subsidiary bodies, in particular the action teams established by the Committee at its forty-fourth and forty-fifth sessions under the voluntary leadership of Member States, to implement the recommendations of UNISPACE III,

Noting the progress made by the Committee through its Working Group in preparing a report for submission to the General Assembly for the review, in accordance with paragraph 31 of Assembly resolution 55/122,

1. Decides to conduct the review of the progress made in the implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III) in plenary meeting(s) at its fifty-ninth session, under a separate agenda item entitled "Review of the implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space";

2. Requests the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space to submit its report on the review of the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session in plenary meeting(s);

3. Decides that the plenary meeting(s) for the review shall be held in October 2004;

4. Invites Member States to participate in the plenary meeting(s) at the ministerial level or at the highest level possible.

Scientific and Technical Subcommittee

The Scientific and Technical Subcommittee of the Committee on Outer Space, at its fortieth session (Vienna, 17-28 February) [A/AC.105/804], considered the United Nations Programme on Space Applications and the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations. It also dealt with matters relating to remote sensing of the Earth by satellite, including applications for developing countries and monitoring of the Earth's environment; the use of nuclear power sources in outer space; mechanisms for strengthening inter-agency cooperation and increasing the use of space applications and services within and among UN system entities; implementation of an integrated, space-based global natural disaster management system; space debris; the examination of the physical nature and technical attributes of the geostationary orbit and its utilization and applications; the mobilization of financial resources to develop capacity in space science and technology applications; and the use of space technology for the medical sciences and public health.

UN Programme on Space Applications

The United Nations Programme on Space Applications, as mandated by General Assembly resolution 37/90 [YUN 1982, p. 163], continued to assist developing countries and countries with economies in transition to establish or strengthen their capacity in space science and technology through long-term training fellowships, technical advisory services, regional and international training courses and conferences, and to promote cooperation between developed and developing countries.

The United Nations Expert on Space Applications [A/AC.105/815] stated that Programme efforts to develop indigenous capability continued to focus on the establishment and operation of regional centres for space science and technology education in developing countries. Under the Programme's priority area of space technology and disaster management, which aimed at supporting developing countries to use space technology to deal with disasters successfully, a European regional workshop was held in Romania. The Programme was implementing the natural resource management and environmental monitoring priority theme to support developing countries in incorporating space-based solutions for solving environmental monitoring and natural resource management issues, focusing on workshops and expert meetings to define regional plans of action and pilot projects. The Programme also promoted the use of enabling technologies, including global navigation satellite systems for social and economic benefits, and the use of space science and technology and their applications to support sustainable development. The Office for Outer Space Affairs was accepted as a cooperating body to the International Charter on Space and Major Disasters, enabling the UN system to have access to the Charter as an authorized user. Beginning on 1 July, the Office set up a permanent hotline through which UN agencies could request data through the International Charter to respond to emergency situations.

The Programme held 13 workshops, training courses and conferences in 2003; the European Space Agency continued to support the long-term fellowship programme for in-depth training. Various technical advisory services for activities promoting regional cooperation continued to be provided.

Following its consideration of the January 2003 report of the Expert on Space Applications [A/AC.105/790 & Corr.1], which described activities in 2002, those scheduled for 2003 and those planned for 2004, the Subcommittee continued to express concern over the Programme's limited financial resources and appealed to Member States for voluntary contributions. It noted that, while some progress had been made in bringing the benefits of the use of space applications for sustainable economic and social development and for the protection of the environment to the awareness of high-level decision makers, more needed to be done.

The General Assembly, in resolution 58/89 (see p. 646), endorsed the Programme on Space Applications for 2004, as proposed by the Expert.

Cooperation

The Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, at its twenty-third session (Vienna, 22-24 January) [A/AC.105/791 & Corr.1], discussed the coordination of plans and programmes in the practical application of space technology and related areas and the space-related outcomes of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]. It also reviewed electronic information networking in the UN system and the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations.

The Meeting noted that the UN-affiliated regional centres for space science and technology education complemented training programmes offered by other UN entities and should be supported, and that participating entities were making efforts to ensure that contributions of space technology would be considered at the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857). It considered a proposal for sharing space-related educational activities or events among UN entities, through participation in or co-sponsoring events organized by other agencies. It agreed that the Office for Outer Space Affairs should request focal points of UN entities for the Inter-Agency Meeting to provide information on their education activities or events for posting on its web site.

The Meeting agreed to hold, in conjunction with its annual session, an open informal session, and that its agenda should focus on a particular topic or topics to be chosen in advance. Noting the desire of participating UN entities to keep the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee informed about their ongoing space activities, the Meeting agreed to invite the Subcommittee to consider requesting annual reports from UN entities on specific themes. It approved a revised version of the Secretary-General's report on the coordination of outer space activities within the UN system: programme of work for 2003 and 2004 and future years [A/AC.105/792], and adopted a revised structure for the preparation of the 2004-2005 report, which was annexed to its report.

The Meeting noted that recommendations in the Plan of Implementation of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development made specific reference to space technologies, and it invited participants to report on the status of their organizations' plans for Summit follow-up. The Meeting considered a preliminary list of actions recommended in the Plan of Implementation with direct or potential relevance to space science and technology and their applications and actions to address cross-cutting issues, and agreed that UN entities should complete the list with their planned space-related initiatives and programmes in response to the recommendations. Members of the Committee on Outer Space should also consider completing the list, which could serve as a comprehensive survey of the space community's response to the Summit's outcomes. The Office for Outer Space Affairs should circulate the list electronically to the focal points of UN system entities, which would be reviewed in 2004 to ensure the harmonized and balanced presentation of all relevant initiatives and programmes within the UN system.

Regarding the implementation of UNISPACE III recommendations, the Meeting noted the significant progress achieved by the Integrated Global Observing Strategy (IGOS)-Partnership in implementing IGOS by, among other actions, preparing reports on selected IGOS themes and implementing recommendations contained in those reports. It agreed that UN entities should be provided with further guidelines on inputs from them that would best assist the working group of the Committee on Outer Space in preparing its 2004 report to the General Assembly on UNISPACE III implementation and noted that the Office for Outer Space Affairs would work with the chairman to develop such guidelines (see p. 641).

Scientific and technical issues

In 2003, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee [A/AC.105/804] continued to emphasize the importance of the provision of non-discriminatory access to state-of-the-art remote sensing data and to derived information at reasonable cost and in a timely manner; capacity-building, in particular to meet the needs of developing countries; and remote sensing systems to support key development activities. It also emphasized that international cooperation in the use of remote sensing satellites should be encouraged and actively promoted. It noted that all new achievements in Earth observation contributing to sustainable development, including agriculture, health and human security, should be applied in the interests of all States, taking into account the needs of developing countries.

The Subcommittee adopted the 2003-2006 multi-year work plan on the use of nuclear power sources in outer space, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report. In accordance with resolution 57/116 [YUN 2002, p. 602], it reconvened its Working Group on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space, endorsed the Working Group's report, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report, and agreed that the Working Group should be requested to continue its work until 2004. It endorsed the recommendation of the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to hold an open informal session in conjunction with the annual Meeting, and invited UN entities to submit annual reports to the Subcommittee on specific themes. The Subcommittee also invited member States of the Committee on Outer Space to complete the preliminary draft list of actions recommended in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] with direct or potential relevance to space science and technology.

The Subcommittee reviewed possible global operational structures to handle natural disaster management, making maximum use of existing and planned space systems. It noted that achieving a global management infrastructure for natural disasters would require the use of a "system engineering" approach, which could tie existing satellite missions to various scientific models of natural phenomena and to support systems to enhance decision-making during natural disasters. It also noted that several objectives foreseen in its work plan on the implementation of an integrated, space-based global natural disaster management system for 2001 and 2002, including the examination of existing satellite and data distribution systems, had been addressed by a number of States.

In accordance with its multi-year work plan on space debris [YUN 2001, p. 570], the Subcommittee began its review of the proposals on space debris mitigation presented by the Inter-Agency Space Debris Coordination Committee (IADC), including means of endorsing their utilization. It requested member States of the Committee on Outer Space to study the proposals and provide their comments to the Office for Outer Space Affairs before the Subcommittee's 2004 session. The Subcommittee agreed that member States should pay more attention to the problem of collisions of space objects, including those with nuclear power sources on board, with space debris and to other aspects of space debris; member States and international organizations should make available the results of national research on space debris, including information on minimizing its creation.

The Committee on Outer Space [A/58/20] agreed that it was important that States making use of nuclear power sources conducted their activities in full accordance with the 1992 Principles Relevant to the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space [YUN 1992, p. 116].

The Committee endorsed the proposals of the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to strengthen inter-agency cooperation in the use of outer space within the UN system (see p. 643).

The Committee stressed the importance of operational access to global satellite databases for dealing with natural disasters, especially in developing countries, and the need to identify and close gaps in the coverage of remote sensing satellites so that reliable information could be provided to all disaster-affected areas. It requested the Office for Outer Space Affairs to convene a one-day workshop for industry during its forty-seventh (2004) session, inviting all major communications satellite operators to present their systems' capabilities and views on how they could be used during natural disasters.

The Committee requested its members to study the IADC proposals on space debris mitigation (see above) and to provide their comments to the Office for Outer Space Affairs before the Subcommittee's 2004 session. A Secretariat note [A/AC.105/820] contained replies received from three member States.

In response to the Subcommittee's request that Member States and regional space agencies report on national research concerning the safety of space objects with nuclear power sources, the Secretariat submitted replies received from 11 States and one agency on the subject [A/AC.105/789/Add.1 & A/AC.105/817].

Other related documents submitted to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee were two Secretariat notes [A/AC.105/788 & A/AC.105/816] containing information received from 24 Member States on their space activities.

Legal Subcommittee

The Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-second session (Vienna, 24 March-4 April) [A/AC.105/805], established, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/116 [YUN 2002, p. 602], a working group to examine the preliminary draft protocol on matters specific to space assets to the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment, which was opened for signature in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 570]. The working group also considered the possibility of the United Nations serving as supervisory authority under the preliminary draft protocol and the relationship between the terms of the draft protocol and the rights and obligations under the legal regime applicable to outer space. Before it was a Secretariat report on the subject [A/AC.105/C.2/L.238]. The working group noted that, under article 17 of the preliminary draft protocol, supervisory authority would be designated at a diplomatic conference to adopt a space assets protocol to the Convention, and that the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law had approached the United Nations as a possible supervisory authority. It also noted that the General Assembly would decide on whether the United Nations would assume those functions. In that event, the working group recommended that no funds should be used from the UN regular budget for that purpose and all costs incurred would be recovered by start-up funding and user fees.

In accordance with Assembly resolution 57/116, the Subcommittee reconvened its working group established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 601] on the status and application of the five UN treaties on outer space. The treaties in question were: the 1966 Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 2222(XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 41]; the 1967 Agreement on the Rescue of Astronauts, the Return of Astronauts and the Return of Objects Launched into Outer Space, adopted in resolution 2345(XXII) [YUN 1967, p. 33]; the 1971 Convention on International Liability for Damage Caused by Space Objects, contained in resolution 2777(XXVI) [YUN 1971, p. 52]; the 1974 Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space, contained in resolution 3235(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 63]; and the 1979 Agreement Governing the Activities of States on the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies, contained in resolution 34/68 [YUN 1979, p. 111]. The working group suggested that the Secretary-General write letters to ministers for foreign affairs of States that had not become parties to the UN treaties on outer space and international organizations that had not declared their acceptance of those treaties, which should include a list of those treaties, a table on the status of their implementation, and information summarizing the benefits and responsibilities of participation, in particular for non-space-faring and developing countries. A model for such a letter and accompanying information material would be developed by the working group in 2004. Efforts by the Subcommittee to increase the level of participation in those treaties could include initiatives such as regional and global meetings to raise public awareness about them.

The working group had before it three proposals on matters relating to its mandate that had been informally announced: a proposal by the United States for a new agenda item on registration practice; a proposal by France for a new agenda item on space debris; and a draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly on the legal concept of the "launching State", contained in a working paper [A/AC.105/C.2/L.242 & Add.1] submitted by Germany. The working group recommended that the merits and substance of that draft resolution be further considered by the Committee on Outer Space at its 2003 session.

The working group agreed that the Office for Outer Space Affairs should compile a directory of institutions teaching space law. It recommended that those institutions participate in an electronic network of institutions teaching international and national space law, and the UN-affiliated regional centres for space science and technology education should include a basic course in space law in their curricula.

The Subcommittee re-established its working group on the definition and delimitation of outer space, which agreed to request the Secretariat to prepare for consideration at its 2004 session an analytical summary of the replies received from Member States to the questionnaire on possible legal issues with regard to aerospace objects, with a view to taking a decision on the need to continue consideration of the questionnaire. Delegations were urged to respond by 31 August to ensure that their replies were included in the summary.

The Committee on Outer Space, at its forty-sixth session [A/58/20], agreed that the treaties on outer space had established a framework that had encouraged the exploration of outer space benefiting both space-faring and non-space-faring States and the Legal Subcommittee should undertake activities that supported the continued vitality of that legal framework. The Committee also agreed that the Subcommittee should consider at its 2004 session the revised text [A/AC.105/L.249] of the draft resolution on the application of the legal concept of the "launching State", and that the UN-affiliated regional centres for space science and technology education should include a basic course on space law in their curricula. It agreed to transmit the report of the Group of Experts on the Ethics of Outer Space [A/AC.105/C.2/L.240/Rev.1] to the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), with the request that UNESCO keep the Committee and its subcommittees informed about UNESCO's outer space activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/471], adopted resolution 58/89 without vote [agenda item 82].

International cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/122 of 13 December 1996, 54/68 of 6 December 1999 and 57/116 of 11 December 2002,

Deeply convinced of the common interest of mankind in promoting and expanding the exploration and use of outer space, as the province of all mankind, for peaceful purposes and in continuing efforts to extend to all States the benefits derived therefrom, and also of the importance of international cooperation in this field, for which the United Nations should continue to provide a focal point,

Reaffirming the importance of international cooperation in developing the rule of law, including the relevant norms of space law and their important role in international cooperation for the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes, and of the widest possible adherence to international treaties that promote the peaceful uses of outer space in order to meet emerging new challenges, especially for developing countries,

Seriously concerned about the possibility of an arms race in outer space, and bearing in mind the importance of article IV of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,

Recognizing that all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, should contribute actively to the goal of preventing an arms race in outer space as an essential condition for the promotion and strengthening of international cooperation in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Considering that space debris is an issue of concern to all nations,

Noting the progress achieved in the further development of peaceful space exploration and applications as well as in various national and cooperative space projects, which contributes to international cooperation, and the importance of further developing the legal framework to strengthen international cooperation in this field,

Convinced of the importance of the recommendations in the resolution entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development", adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III), held at Vienna from 19 to 30 July 1999, and the need to promote the use of space technology towards implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III,

Convinced that the use of space science and technology and their applications, in such areas as telemedicine, tele-education and Earth observation, contribute to achieving the objectives of the global conferences of the United Nations that address various aspects of economic, social and cultural development, inter alia, poverty eradication,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the work of its forty-sixth session,

1. Endorses the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the work of its forty-sixth session;

2. Urges States that have not yet become parties to the international treaties governing the uses of outer space to give consideration to ratifying or acceding to those treaties as well as incorporating them in their national legislation;

3. Notes that, at its forty-second session, the Legal Subcommittee of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space continued its work, as mandated by the General Assembly in its resolution 57/116;

4. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-third session, taking into account the concerns of all countries, in particular those of developing countries:

(a) Consider the following as regular agenda items:

- (i) General exchange of views;
- (ii) Status and application of the five United Nations treaties on outer space;
- (iii) Information on the activities of international organizations relating to space law;
- (iv) Matters relating to:
  - a. The definition and delimitation of outer space;
  - b. The character and utilization of the geostationary orbit, including consideration of ways and means to ensure the rational and equitable use of the geostationary orbit without prejudice to the role of the International Telecommunication Union;

(b) Consider the following single issues/items for discussion:

- (i) Review and possible revision of the Principles Relevant to the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space;
- (ii) Examination of the preliminary draft protocol on matters specific to space assets to the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment, opened for signature at Cape Town, South Africa, on 16 November 2001:
  - a. Considerations relating to the possibility of the United Nations serving as supervisory authority under the preliminary draft protocol;
  - b. Considerations relating to the relationship between the terms of the preliminary draft protocol and the rights and obligations of States under the legal regime applicable to outer space;
- (iii) Contributions by the Legal Subcommittee to the Committee for the preparation of its report to the General Assembly for its review of the progress made in the implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III);

(c) Consider the practice of States and international organizations in registering space objects in accordance with the work plan adopted by the Committee;

5. Notes that the Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-third session, will submit its proposals to the Committee for new items to be considered by the Subcommittee at its forty-fourth session, in 2005;

6. Notes also that, in the context of paragraph 4 (a) (ii) above, the Legal Subcommittee will reconvene its Working Group with the terms of reference as agreed upon by the Legal Subcommittee, to meet for three years, from 2002 to 2004;

7. Notes further that, in the context of paragraph 4 (a) (iii) above, the Group of Experts on the Ethics of Outer Space, invited by the Committee at its forty-fourth session to identify which aspects of the report of the World Commission on the Ethics of Scientific Knowledge and Technology of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization might need to be studied by the Committee and to draft a report, in consultation with other international organizations and in close liaison with the World Commission, presented its report to the Legal Subcommittee, and agrees that the report should be transmitted to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization with the request that it keep the Committee and its subcommittees informed about its activities relating to outer space;

8. Notes that, in the context of paragraph 4 (a) (iv) above, the Legal Subcommittee will reconvene its Working Group on the item only to consider matters relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space;

9. Agrees that the Legal Subcommittee should reconvene its Working Group to consider the questions reflected in paragraphs 4 (b) (ii) a. and b. above separately;

10. Notes with satisfaction that, in accordance with paragraph 13 of General Assembly resolution 57/116, the Government of Austria continued to convene and facilitate intersessional informal consultations on the composition of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies for the third term, and that consensus agreement was reached, before the forty-sixth session of the Committee, on the extension of the term of office of the current bureau of the Committee and the future composition of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies;

11. Endorses the agreement reached by the Committee on the extension of the term of office of the current bureau of the Committee and future composition of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies, on the basis of the measures relating to the working methods of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies, which were endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 52/56 of 10 December 1997, and notes that, in accordance with paragraph 14 of General Assembly resolution 57/116, the Committee conducted the election of its officers at its forty-sixth session;

12. Agrees that the Committee and its subcommittees, at the beginning of their sessions in 2004, should conduct the election of the officers agreed upon by the Committee at its forty-sixth session;

13. Also agrees that, in accordance with the measures relating to the future composition of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies indicated in paragraph 11 above, the Committee at its forty-seventh session, in 2004, should reach agreement on all the officers of the bureaux of the Committee and its subary bodies for the next term and that, for this purpose, the Committee should include in the agenda of its forty-seventh session an item on the composition of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies for the period 2006-2007;

14. Urges each of the five regional groups to ensure that agreement within the group on the officer to be determined for the period 2006-2007 is reached before the forty-seventh session of the Committee;

15. Notes that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its fortieth session, continued its work as mandated by the General Assembly in its resolution 57/116;

16. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-first session, taking into account the concerns of all countries, in particular those of developing countries:

- (a) Consider the following items:
  - (i) General exchange of views and introduction to reports submitted on national activities;
  - (ii) United Nations Programme on Space Applications;
  - (iii) Implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III;
  - (iv) Matters relating to remote-sensing of the Earth by satellite, including applications for developing countries and monitoring of the Earth's environment;
- (b) Consider the following items in accordance with the work plans adopted by the Committee:
  - (i) Space debris;
  - (ii) Use of nuclear power sources in outer space;
  - (iii) Space-system-based telemedicine;
- (c) Consider the following single issues/items for discussion:
  - (i) Examination of the physical nature and technical attributes of the geostationary orbit and its utilization and applications, including, inter alia, in the field of space communications, as well as other questions relating to developments in space communications, taking particular account of the needs and interests of developing countries;
  - (ii) Implementation of an integrated, space-based global natural disaster management system;
  - (iii) Solar-terrestrial physics;

17. Notes that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its forty-first session will submit its proposal to the Committee for a draft provisional agenda for the forty-second session of the Subcommittee, in 2005;

18. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the symposium to strengthen the partnership with industry should be organized during the first week of the forty-first session of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and should address small satellite applications in agriculture, health and human security;

19. Agrees that, in the context of paragraphs 16 (a) (ii) and (iii) and 17 above, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its forty-first session should reconvene the Working Group of the Whole;

20. Also agrees that, in the context of paragraph 16 (b) (i) above, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-first session, could establish a working group to consider comments from member States of the Committee on the proposals on debris mitigation presented by the Inter-Agency Space Debris Coordination Committee to the Subcommittee at its fortieth session;

21. Further agrees that, in the context of paragraph 16 (b) (ii) above, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its forty-first session should reconvene its Working Group on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space;

22. Endorses the United Nations Programme on Space Applications for 2004, as proposed to the Committee by the Expert on Space Applications;

23. Notes with satisfaction that, in accordance with paragraph 30 of General Assembly resolution 50/27 of 6 December 1995, the African regional centres for space science and technology education, in the French language and in the English language, located in Morocco and Nigeria, respectively, and the Centre for Space Science and Technology Education in Asia and the Pacific continued their education programmes in 2003, that the Regional Centre for Space Science and Technology Education for Latin America and the Caribbean became affiliated to the United Nations and began its education programme, and that the United Nations Programme on Space Applications is providing technical support to the Government of Jordan for the establishment of the regional centre for space science and technology education for Western Asia;

24. Also notes with satisfaction the success of the Fourth Space Conference of the Americas, held at Cartagena de Indias, Colombia, from 14 to 17 May 2002, which adopted the Declaration of Cartagena de Indias and the Plan of Action, and notes the desire of Member States in the Latin American and Caribbean region to institutionalize the Space Conference of the Americas;

25. Welcomes the memorandum of understanding between the Office for Outer Space Affairs of the Secretariat and the Pro Tempore Secretariat of the Fourth Space Conference of the Americas, under which the parties demonstrated their intention to collaborate in promoting and implementing joint activities, and invites the Pro Tempore Secretariat to inform the Committee of the work accomplished;

26. Urges all Governments, entities of the United Nations system as well as intergovernmental and non-governmental entities conducting space-related activities to take the necessary action for the effective implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III, in particular its resolution entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development", bearing in mind the need to promote the use of space technology towards implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

27. Agrees that, in accordance with paragraph 30 of General Assembly resolution 55/122 of 8 December 2000, the Committee should include in the agenda of its forty-seventh session an item on the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III;

28. Notes with satisfaction the work conducted by the twelve action teams that the Committee had established at its forty-fourth and forty-sixth sessions under the voluntary leadership of Member States to implement the recommendations of UNISPACE III, and urges Member States to provide full support to the action teams in conducting their work;

29. Also notes with satisfaction that the Committee made further progress in the preparation of its report under the agenda item on the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III for submission to the General Assembly, in order for the Assembly to review and appraise, at its fifty-ninth session, in 2004, in accordance with paragraph 16 of its resolution 54/68, the implementation of the outcome of UNISPACE III and to consider further actions and initiatives, and agrees that, in this context, the Working Group established by the Committee to prepare the above-mentioned report should be reconvened at the forty-seventh session of the Committee to complete its work;

30. Notes that in order to advance the preparation of the report of the Committee, mentioned in paragraph 29 above, the Working Group of the Committee could hold informal consultations during the forty-first session of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee as well as the forty-third session of the Legal Subcommittee;

31. Urges all Member States to contribute to the Trust Fund for the United Nations Programme on Space Applications to support activities to implement the recommendations of UNISPACE III, in particular the priority project proposals as recommended by the Committee at its forty-third session;

32. Recommends that more attention be paid and political support be provided to all matters relating to the protection and the preservation of the outer space environment, especially those potentially affecting the Earth's environment;

33. Considers that it is essential that Member States pay more attention to the problem of collisions of space objects, including those with nuclear power sources, with space debris, and other aspects of space debris, calls for the continuation of national research on this question, for the development of improved technology for the monitoring of space debris and for the compilation and dissemination of data on space debris, also considers that, to the extent possible, information thereon should be provided to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, and agrees that international cooperation is needed to expand appropriate and affordable strategies to minimize the impact of space debris on future space missions;

34. Urges all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the goal of preventing an arms race in outer space as an essential condition for the promotion of international cooperation in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes;

35. Emphasizes the need to increase the benefits of space technology and its applications and to contribute to an orderly growth of space activities favourable to sustained economic growth and sustainable development in all countries, including mitigation of the consequences of disasters, in particular in the developing countries;

36. Notes that space science and technology and their applications could make important contributions to economic, social and cultural development and welfare as indicated in the resolution entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development", and notes also that the International Fair on Air and Space to be held at Santiago de Chile early in 2004 will address in an international conference the question "Space and water: towards sustainable development and human security";

37. Agrees that the benefits of space technology and its applications should be prominently brought to the attention of conferences organized within the United Nations system to address global issues relating to social, economic and cultural development and that the use of space technology should be promoted towards achieving the objectives of those conferences and implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

38. Notes with satisfaction the increased efforts of the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee as well as the Office for Outer Space Affairs and the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to promote the use of space science and technology and their applications in carrying out actions recommended in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation");

39. Urges entities of the United Nations system, particularly those participating in the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, to examine, in cooperation with the Committee, how space science and technology and their applications could contribute to implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration, particularly in the areas relating to, inter alia, food security and increasing opportunities for education;

40. Invites the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to continue to contribute to the work of the Committee and to report to the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee on the work conducted at its annual session;

41. Requests the Committee to continue to consider, as a matter of priority, ways and means of maintaining outer space for peaceful purposes and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, and agrees that during its consideration of the matter, the Committee could consider ways to promote regional and interregional cooperation based on experiences stemming from the Space Conference of the Americas and the role space technology could play in the implementation of recommendations emerging from the World Summit on Sustainable Development;

42. Agrees that the Committee should continue to consider a report on the activities of the International Satellite System for Search and Rescue as a part of its consideration of the United Nations Programme on Space Applications under the agenda item entitled "Report of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee", and invites Member States to report on their activities regarding the System;

43. Notes that in connection with the consideration of the implementation of an integrated, space-based global natural disaster management system, under the agenda item entitled "Report of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee", during the forty-seventh session of the Committee, a one-day workshop for industry would be organized with the participation of Member States and communications satellite operators to discuss how satellite-based communications could be used during natural disasters;

44. Requests the Committee to continue to consider, at its forty-seventh session, its agenda item entitled

"Spin-off benefits of space technology: review of current status";

45. Also requests the Committee to continue to consider, at its forty-seventh session, its agenda item entitled "Space and society", and agrees that a special theme for the focus of discussions for the period 2004-2006 should be "Space and education", in accordance with the work plan adopted by the Committee;

46. Agrees that a new item entitled "Space and water" should be included in the agenda of the Committee at its forty-seventh session, and urges entities of the United Nations system and invites other intergovernmental entities dealing with issues relating to the use and management of water resources as well as space agencies to contribute to the work of the Committee in this field;

47. Welcomes the continued interest of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya in becoming a member of the Committee, and, to this end, requests that constructive consultations be conducted as soon as possible within the Committee as well as among regional groups, taking into account the principle of equitable geographical distribution, with a view to reaching a positive and final decision on the membership of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya at the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly;

48. Requests the Committee to consider ways to improve participation by member States and entities with observer status in its work, with a view to agreeing on specific recommendations in that regard at its forty-eighth session;

49. Endorses the decision of the Committee to grant permanent observer status to the Regional Centre for Remote Sensing of the North African States and the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis;

50. Invites the Committee to expand the scope of international cooperation relating to the social, economic, ethical and human dimension in space science and technology applications;

51. Requests entities of the United Nations system and other international organizations to continue and, where appropriate, to enhance their cooperation with the Committee and to provide it with reports on the issues dealt with in the work of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies;

52. Requests the Committee to consider and identify new mechanisms of international cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space to strengthen multilateralism, in accordance with the preamble to the present resolution, and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, including its views on which subjects should be studied in the future.

Effects of atomic radiation

At its fifty-first session (Vienna, 27-31 January) [A/58/46], the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation advanced the programme of work established in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 574]. It considered new information relevant to assessing sources of radiation, exposures from those sources and the resulting effects. The Committee reviewed Secretariat documents on exposures of workers and the public to various sources of radiation; sources-to-effects assessment for radon in homes and workplaces; radioecology; epigenetic effects of exposure to ionizing radiation; health effects due to radiation from the 1986 Chernobyl accident [YUN 1986, p. 584], for which the Committee had established official collaboration with scientists in Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine; evaluation of new epidemiological studies of radiation and cancer; epidemiological evaluation and dose response of diseases other than cancer that might be related to radiation exposure; medical radiation exposures; the health effects of radiation; and the sources of ionizing radiation exposure.

The Committee's fifty-first session, which had been rescheduled from 2002 due to a budget shortfall [YUN 2002, p. 606], was made possible by combining non-post funds for both years of the 2002-2003 biennium. The report stated that the programme initiated at the session could not survive the loss of another annual meeting, and it was imperative that a solution to the Committee's budgetary crisis be found. In anticipation that adequate funds for the Committee to hold annual meetings would be restored for the 2004-2005 and subsequent bienniums, in accordance with resolution 57/115 [YUN 2002, p. 606], the Committee decided to hold its fifty-second session in Vienna from 26 to 30 April 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/58/470], adopted resolution 58/88 without vote [agenda item 81].

Effects of atomic radiation

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 913(X) of 3 December 1955, by which it established the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation, and its subsequent resolutions on the subject, including resolution 57/115 of 11 December 2002, in which, inter alia, it requested the Scientific Committee to continue its work,

Taking note with appreciation of the work of the Scientific Committee,

Reaffirming the desirability of the Scientific Committee continuing its work,

Concerned about the potentially harmful effects on present and future generations resulting from the levels of radiation to which mankind and the environment are exposed,

Noting the views expressed by Member States at its fifty-eighth session with regard to the work of the Scientific Committee,

Noting with satisfaction that some Member States have expressed particular interest in becoming members of the Scientific Committee, and expressing its intention to consider the issue further at its next session,

Conscious of the continuing need to examine and compile information about atomic and ionizing radiation and to analyse its effects on mankind and the environment,

1. Commends the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation for the valuable contribution it has been making in the course of the past forty-eight years, since its inception, to wider knowledge and understanding of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation, and for fulfilling its original mandate with scientific authority and independence of judgement;

2. Reaffirms the decision to maintain the present functions and independent role of the Scientific Committee;

3. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue its work, including its important activities to increase knowledge of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation from all sources, and invites the Scientific Committee to submit its programme of work to the General Assembly;

4. Endorses the intentions and plans of the Scientific Committee for its future activities of scientific review and assessment on behalf of the General Assembly;

5. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue at its next session the review of the important problems in the field of ionizing radiation and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

6. Requests the United Nations Environment Programme to continue providing support for the effective conduct of the work of the Scientific Committee and for the dissemination of its findings to the General Assembly, the scientific community and the public;

7. Expresses its appreciation for the assistance rendered to the Scientific Committee by Member States, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency and non-governmental organizations, and invites them to increase their cooperation in this field;

8. Invites the Scientific Committee to continue its consultations with scientists and experts from interested Member States in the process of preparing its future scientific reports;

9. Welcomes, in this context, the readiness of Member States to provide the Scientific Committee with relevant information on the effects of ionizing radiation in affected areas, and invites the Scientific Committee to analyse and give due consideration to such information, particularly in the light of its own findings;

10. Invites Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations concerned to provide further relevant data about doses, effects and risks from various sources of radiation, which would greatly help in the preparation of future reports of the Scientific Committee to the General Assembly;

11. Urges the United Nations Environment Programme to review and strengthen the present funding of the Scientific Committee, pursuant to paragraph II of resolution 57/115, so that the Committee can discharge the responsibilities and mandate entrusted to it by the General Assembly;

12. Emphasizes the need for the Scientific Committee to hold regular sessions on an annual basis so that its report can reflect the latest developments and findings in the field of ionizing radiation and thereby provide updated information for dissemination among all States.

Chapter I

Promotion of human rights

In 2003, human rights were promoted through legally binding instruments and the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary body, the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights continued its human rights coordination and implementation activities, and provided advisory services and technical cooperation.

The International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, adopted by the General Assembly in 1990, entered into force on 1 July, following the deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession. The First Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention (New York, 11 December) met to elect the members of the Convention's monitoring body, the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. Other monitoring bodies of human rights instruments promoted civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, and aimed to eliminate racial discrimination and discrimination against women, to protect children and to end the practice of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

On Human Rights Day, 10 December, the Assembly marked the tenth anniversary of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted at the 1993 World Conference on Human Rights, and the fifty-fifth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

In view of the fact that human rights education was a long-term process, the High Commissioner presented guidelines for the development of a second decade to follow on from the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004).

Sergio Vicira de Mello, whose four-year term of office as High Commissioner for Human Rights began on 12 September 2002, died in Baghdad in a terrorist attack on UN headquarters on 19 August, while serving as the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Iraq for a four-month assignment, which began on 1 June (see p. 346).

Commission on Human Rights

The Commission on Human Rights held its fifty-ninth session in Geneva from 17 March to 24 April [E/2003/23], during which it adopted 86 resolutions and 18 decisions. It recommended one draft resolution and 34 draft decisions for adoption by the Economic and Social Council. The Council took note of the Commission's report on 24 July (decision 2003/310).

In response to a 2000 Commission decision on enhancing the Commission's effectiveness [YUN 2000, p. 595], the Commission Chairperson convened a one-day informal meeting on 30 September to facilitate exchange of information in preparation for the General Assembly's fifty-eighth (2003) session [E/CN.4/IM/2003/1]. In a September note [E/CN.4/IM/2003/2], the Secretariat summarized the post-session meetings and activities of the Commission's Expanded Bureau.

Organization of work

Notes by Secretariat. The Commission considered a note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2003/12 & Corr.1] containing statistical data on its 2002 session to assist with the organization of the Commission's work in 2003.

A March note by the Secretariat transmitted a report by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) [E/CN.4/2003/128], the first of a series that UNDP intended to submit to every Commission session to inform the international community about its human rights activities.

A further Secretariat note [E/CN.4/2004/115] stated that, on 31 October, the President of the Economic and Social Council, in a letter to the 2003 Commission Chairperson, which was annexed to the note, drew attention to the policy recommendations adopted by the Council at its 2003 substantive session for consideration by its subsidiary bodies.

Commission action. On 17 March [dec. 2003/101], the Commission endorsed the recommendations of its Expanded Bureau regarding the reform of its working methods [E/CN.4/2003/118 & Corr.1]. The recommendations dealt with the duration of the Commission's annual session; the periodicity of the consideration of agenda items and sub-items; documentation for annual consideration; organization of work during the annual session; the role of the Expanded Bureau; the holding of special debates; participation of dignitaries in the annual session; establishment and programming of intersessional working groups; and organization and programming of parallel events, activities and meetings during annual sessions. Related issues were the need to narrow the gap between the end of the session of the Subcommittee on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights and the Commission's session (see below), and better utilization of the special procedures activity, including dialogue with Governments. A March note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2003/132], referring to one of the recommendations, stated that a compilation of executive summaries of all available reports was available on the web site of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR).

On 25 April [dec. 2003/116], the Commission authorized its Bureau to consider steps that could be recommended to the Expanded Bureau of its 2004 session to improve the organization of the Commission's work based on decision 2003/101.

On 17 March [dec. 2003/102], the Commission invited special representatives, special rapporteurs, chairpersons and chairpersons/rapporteurs of various working groups, and experts to participate in its meetings.

On 25 April [dec. 2003/114], the Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council that it authorize eight additional meetings for the Commission's sixtieth (2004) session and requested the Chairperson of the session to organize the session's work within the time normally allotted so that the additional meetings would be utilized only if necessary. The Council approved the Commission's decision on 23 July (decision 2003/269).

Also on 25 April [dec. 2003/115], the Commission decided that its first meeting would be held on the third Monday in January to elect its officers and that its 2004 session would take place from 15 March to 23 April. The Council endorsed the Commission's decision on 23 July (decision 2003/270).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/269 by recorded vote (43-3-8) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Organization of work of the sixtieth session of the Commission on Human Rights

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights decision 2003/114 of 25 April 2003, and authorized eight fully serviced additional meetings, including summary records, in accordance with rules 29 and 31 of the rules of procedure of the functional commissions of the Council, for the Commission's sixtieth session.

The Council approved the Commission's decision to request the Chairperson of the sixtieth session of the Commission to make every effort to organize the work of the session within the time normally allotted so that the additional meetings authorized by the Council might be utilized only if they proved to be absolutely necessary.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/269:

In favour: Andorra, Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Peru, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Sweden, Ukraine, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: China, Iran, Kenya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Pakistan, Uganda.

Thematic procedures

Pursuant to a 2002 Commission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 613], the Secretary-General prepared a list of thematic and country-specific procedures and other Commission mechanisms [E/CN.4/2003/1/Add.1] and submitted a March report [E/CN.4/2003/108] containing references to the conclusions and recommendations of thematic special rapporteurs and working groups.

The tenth meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the special procedures of the Commission and of the advisory services programme was held in June [E/CN.4/2004/4] (see p. 678).

Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights

The Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, at its fifty-fifth session (Geneva, 28 July-15 August) [E/CN.4/2004/2], adopted 30 resolutions and 17 decisions, and recommended one draft resolution and 14 draft decisions for adoption by the Commission.

On 13 August [dec. 2003/112], the Subcommission approved the composition of its working groups for 2004. On the same date [dec. 2003/103], it postponed action on a draft text on preparing a working paper on its work methods for report preparation and on the organization of its work so as to ensure full consideration of reports by Subcommission and national delegation members [dec. 2003/103].

Report of OHCHR. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 613], OHCHR submitted a report [E/CN.4/2003/95] on ways to address issues raised by the Subcommission regarding possible early action by the Commission on Subcommission draft proposals requiring the Commission's approval and which presented possible options for narrowing the gap between the end of the Subcommission's session and the Commission's actions on Subcommission proposals: changing the dates of the Subcommission's session; early action by the Commission at its informal meeting in September; or action by the Commission at its January (election) meeting.

Report of Subcommission Chairperson. The Commission had before it a report [E/CN.4/2003/94] of the Subcommission's 2002 Chairperson, Paulo Sérgio Pinheiro (Brazil), which reviewed various aspects of the Subcommission's work, such as its methods and innovative approaches, in view of the 2001 ban [YUN 2001, p. 580] on the Subcommission's adoption of country-specific resolutions.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/59], the Commission decided that the Subcommission could best assist it by providing it with independent expert studies and working papers by its members or their alternates; recommendations based on the studies; and studies, research and expert advice at the Commission's request. It recommended that the Subcommission continue the innovations carried out in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 580], which were confirmed at its 2002 session [YUN 2002, p. 613], by having annual closed meetings with the Commission's Expanded Bureau; streamlining its agenda; holding closed meetings on its working rules, procedures and timetables; drafting as many of its resolutions as possible in closed session; and using a "question and answer" format and expert panel discussions. The Commission also recommended that the Subcommission improve its work methods by focusing on its primary role as advisory body to the Commission; giving attention to studies recommended by the Commission or proposals suggested by treaty bodies or other UN human rights bodies; respecting the highest standards of impartiality and expertise, and avoiding acts that would affect confidence in its members' independence; facilitating participation of non-governmental organizations (NGOs); considering studies and working papers by special rapporteurs and its members before sending them to the Commission; taking steps to accomplish its work within a three-week session; making proposals to the Commission on how it might assist the Subcommission in improving its work and vice versa; focusing on human rights questions relating to its mandate; avoiding duplication of its work with that of other bodies and mechanisms; and giving appropriate regard to legal opinions addressed to it. The Commission requested States to consider certain criteria when nominating and electing Subcommission members and alternates.

The Secretary-General was asked to support the Subcommission by making documentation available in good time before each session in the UN official languages and assisting it in requests for information from Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs. The Commission recommended that the Subcommission Chairperson or representative attend the meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, experts and chairpersons of working groups of the special procedures of the Commission (see p. 678) and the meeting of chairpersons of treaty bodies (see p. 669) to facilitate coordination between the Subcommission and other relevant UN bodies and procedures. The Chairperson of the Subcommission's 2003 session was asked to report in 2004 on how recent enhancements of the Subcommission had worked in practice.

Note by Secretary-General. A June note by the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/25] reviewed developments between 1 June 2002 and 1 June 2003 in areas with which the Subcommission had been concerned.

Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

Reports of High Commissioner. The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Sergio Vieira de Mello (Brazil), in his first annual report to the Commission [E/CN.4/2003/14], said that although the international community had developed a solid body of international human rights norms and humanitarian law, there was widespread failure in the concrete protection of human rights. He summarized some of the contemporary challenges to human rights protection and called for domestic action and international cooperation to prevent gross human rights violations, the integration of human rights in peacemaking, peacekeeping, peace-building, development and humanitarian operations, and the application of a rights-based approach in all spheres of operation—trade, finance, development and security. The High Commissioner supported the Secretary-General's plan to strengthen the special procedures system and improve OHCHR management [YUN 2002, p. 614].

The Acting High Commissioner, on behalf of the High Commissioner who was serving as the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Iraq for four months beginning 1 June, submitted a June report to the Economic and Social Council [E/2003/73]. The report focused on the human rights dimension of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51]; poverty reduction; health; HIV/AIDS; education; food; housing; disability; trafficking in persons; and globalization and trade. He concluded that applying an approach that integrated human rights in development, humanitarian and conflict-resolution schemes, and political, economic and cultural life, led to empowering people, ensuring their participation in decision-making and implementation. OHCHR had opened its programme to the areas of development and humanitarian work; conflict prevention and resolution and peace-building; the rule of law, democracy and good governance; and economic and social life.

The Acting High Commissioner submitted the High Commissioner's report to the General Assembly [A/58/36], following the High Commissioner's death in Baghdad in a terrorist attack on UN headquarters on 19 August (see p. 346). The report described OHCHR activities on the application of the human rights treaties; human rights and peace; human rights and development; human rights and justice; human rights and conflicts; gross violations of human rights; and new challenges, such as terrorism, bioethics and the role of the private sector in upholding human rights. The Assembly took note of the report on 22 December (decision 58/541).

Enhancing the functioning of OHCHR

Note of OHCHR. In a February note [E/CN.4/2003/124], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], OHCHR presented recommendations on enhancing the effectiveness of the human rights special procedures in order to rationalize their work.

Commission action. On 25 April [dec. 2003/113], by a recorded vote of 28 to 24, with 1 abstention, the Commission requested the High Commissioner to ensure more effective coordination among OHCHR branches to preclude overlapping and/or duplication; to ensure that communications received or urgent appeals issued under the special procedures system were forwarded to the country concerned with written authorization from the special rapporteurs, independent experts or working groups; to discontinue the practice of transmitting ex officio monthly lists of communications and their contents to other UN organs/bodies, unless express authorization to that effect had been granted by the Commission or the Economic and Social Council; and to report to the Commission in 2004. The Commission's decision was overridden by Council resolution 2003/58 (below).

In 2003, the Special Procedures Branch was established within OHCHR to provide strengthened support to the special procedures.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 48], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/58 [draft: E/2003/L.37, as orally amended] by recorded vote (27-26-1) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Enhancement of the functioning of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in regard to the operation of the mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming that the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights should continue to ensure effective coordination between its various branches in order to avoid any overlapping among all the mechanisms mandated by and/or reporting to the Commission on Human Rights, as referred to in the report of the intersessional open-ended Working Group on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights,

Taking note of decision 47/102 of the Commission on the Status of Women, in which the Commission requested the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the future work of the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women for its consideration,

1. Decides to postpone any decision on the transmission of communications and their contents between the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council until the Commission on the Status of Women concludes its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General regarding the future work of the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women and, in the meantime, to continue with present practice, as set out, notably, in its resolution 1983/27 of 26 May 1983;

2. Confirms that communications and urgent appeals are to be forwarded to the concerned States under the authorization of the special mechanism mandate-holders;

3. Decides that the present decision overrides Commission on Human Rights decision 2003/113 of 25 April 2003.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2003/58:

Management review

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, having considered the 2002 management review of OHCHR [A/57/488], undertaken by the UN Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) [YUN 2002, p. 615] and on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/57/604/Add.2], adopted resolution 57/313 without vote [agenda item 122].

Management review of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 and 54/244 of 23 December 1999, and all its other relevant resolutions,

Recalling also its resolutions 56/253 of 24 December 2001 and 57/300 of 20 December 2002,

Recalling further its decision 55/488 of 7 September 2001,

Having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the management review of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,

1. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session on measures pertaining to the administration and management of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, taking into account the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, as appropriate, and the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights requested by the Secretary-General in action 5 of his report entitled "Strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change";

3. Decides to revert at its fifty-eighth session to the issue of the administration and management of the Office of the High Commissioner, in the context of its consideration of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005, as well as to the issues relevant to the functioning of the Office addressed in resolution 57/300, in particular paragraphs 6, 8, 9 and 10, in the context of the procedures it establishes for consideration of the progress report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the reform measures considered in that resolution.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/313 (above), the Secretary-General, in a November report [A/58/569], described progress in implementing the 2002 OIOS recommendations [YUN 2002, p. 615] on the administration and management of OHCHR and indicated resources required for the Office in the 2004-2005 programme budget. At mid-year, OIOS considered 3 of the 17 recommendations implemented and closed, and others were in the process of implementation. The report summarized resources proposed for 2004-2005 relating to costs for developing and implementing a plan to strengthen human rights-related UN actions at the country level, for consultations with treaty bodies on new streamlined reporting procedures, for reviewing the special procedures and for developing a plan to strengthen management. A proposed OHCHR organizational structure and post distribution for 2004-2005 were included.

In response to Assembly resolution 57/300 on reform measures [YUN 2002, p. 1353], the Secretary-General said that OHCHR was taking action to increase support for national human rights capacity-building, enhance implementation of human rights treaties and improve the system of special procedures.

ACABQ report. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in a November report [A/58/7/Add.12], reviewed the Secretary-General's report and made recommendations on the new posts proposed for OHCHR for 2004-2005.

The Assembly, by resolution 58/272 of 23 December, took note of the reports of the Secretary-General and ACABQ (see p. 1417).

Composition of staff

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2002 Commission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 615], the High Commissioner submitted a report on the composition of OHCHR staff by nationality, grade and gender as at 1 December 2002 [E/CN.4/2003/111]. Also pursuant to that resolution, OHCHR had established the Advisory Panel on Personnel Issues, developed job descriptions, advertised temporary vacancies and circulated openings on its web site. The High Commissioner had recommended that the UN Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) establish a human rights occupational group. In May 2001, OHRM had organized a specialized competitive human rights examination.

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/74], by a recorded vote of 32 to 14, with 7 abstentions, the Commission expressed regret that one region (Western European and other States) accounted for more than half of the OHCHR posts and for more posts than the other four regional groups combined, and that there had been a decrease in the posts subject to geographical distribution and an increase in the staff not subject to geographical distribution. It considered it necessary to take immediate action to change that situation in favour of a more equitable distribution of staff; particular attention should be paid to recruiting personnel from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States, particularly from developing countries. The High Commissioner was requested to ensure that new personnel had a command of at least one of the working languages of the Secretariat and that the use of another of the six official languages was duly encouraged; to ensure that Junior Professional Officers were not given sensitive political assignments where their impartiality might be questioned; and to report in 2004. Annexed to the Commission's resolution was tabular information on the geographical distribution of OHCHR staff from 2000 to 2003.

Annual Appeal 2003

During the year, paid contributions to the 2003 Annual Appeal amounted to $47.4 million, up from $40.2 million in 2002. The voluntary contributions were received from 59 Governments, one foundation and various associations and individuals.

Strengthening action to promote human rights

In response to General Assembly resolutions 56/153 [YUN 2001, p. 582] and 57/203 [YUN 2002, p. 616], the Secretary-General, in a July report with later addenda [A/58/185 & Add.1.2], submitted the proposals of three Member States to strengthen UN action in human rights through the promotion of international cooperation based on the principles of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/168 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Strengthening United Nations action in the field of human rights through the promotion of international cooperation and the importance of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that among the purposes of the United Nations are those of developing friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples and taking other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace, as well as achieving international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Desirous of achieving further progress in international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Considering that such international cooperation should be based on the principles embodied in international law, especially the Charter of the United Nations, as well as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and other relevant instruments,

Deeply convinced that United Nations action in this field should be based not only on a profound understanding of the broad range of problems existing in all societies but also on full respect for the political, economical and social realities of each of them, in strict compliance with the purposes and principles of the Charter and for the basic purpose of promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through international cooperation,

Recalling its previous resolutions in this regard,

Reaffirming the importance of ensuring the universality, objectivity and non-selectivity of the consideration of human rights issues, as affirmed in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Affirming the importance of the objectivity, independence and discretion of the special rapporteurs and representatives on thematic issues and on countries, as well as of the members of the working groups, in carrying out their mandates,

Underlining the obligation that Governments have to promote and protect human rights and to carry out the responsibilities that they have undertaken under international law, especially the Charter, as well as various international instruments in the field of human rights,

1. Reiterates that, by virtue of the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, all peoples have the right freely to determine, without external interference, their political status and to pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that every State has the duty to respect that right within the provisions of the Charter, including respect for territorial integrity;

2. Reaffirms that it is a purpose of the United Nations and the task of all Member States, in cooperation with the Organization, to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and to remain vigilant with regard to violations of human rights wherever they occur;

3. Calls upon all Member States to base their activities for the promotion and protection of human rights, including the development of further international cooperation in this field, on the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and other relevant international instruments, and to refrain from activities that are inconsistent with that international framework;

4. Considers that international cooperation in this field should make an effective and practical contribution to the urgent task of preventing mass and flagrant violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all and to the strengthening of international peace and security;

5. Reaffirms that the promotion, protection and full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, as a legitimate concern of the world community, should be guided by the principles of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity and should not be used for political ends;

6. Requests all human rights bodies within the United Nations system, as well as the special rapporteurs and representatives, independent experts and working groups, to take duly into account the contents of the present resolution in carrying out their mandates;

7. Expresses its conviction that an unbiased and fair approach to human rights issues contributes to the promotion of international cooperation as well as to the effective promotion, protection and realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

8. Stresses, in this context, the continuing need for impartial and objective information on the political, economic and social situations and events of all countries;

9. Invites Member States to consider adopting, as appropriate, within the framework of their respective legal systems and in accordance with their obligations under international law, especially the Charter, and international human rights instruments, the measures that they may deem appropriate to achieve further progress in international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;

10. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to take duly into account the present resolution and to consider further proposals for the strengthening of United Nations action in the field of human rights through the promotion of international cooperation and the importance of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity;

11. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to invite Member States to present practical proposals and ideas that would contribute to the strengthening of United Nations action in the field of human rights, through the promotion of international cooperation based on the principles of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity, and to submit a comprehensive report on this question to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

12. Decides to consider this matter at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Also on 22 December, the Assembly took note of a series of documents submitted under the item on human rights questions (decision 58/536). On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

International cooperation in the field of human rights

On 24 April [res. 2003/60], the Commission called on Member States, specialized agencies and inter-governmental organizations to continue to carry out a constructive dialogue and consultations to enhance the understanding and the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and encouraged NGOs to contribute to that endeavour. It invited States and relevant UN human rights mechanisms and procedures to pay attention to the importance of mutual cooperation, understanding and dialogue in ensuring human rights promotion and protection.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/170 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its commitment to promoting international cooperation, as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, in particular Article 1, paragraph 3, as well as relevant provisions of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, for enhancing genuine cooperation among Member States in the field of human rights,

Recalling its adoption of the United Nations Millennium Declaration on 8 September 2000 and its resolution 57/224 of 18 December 2002, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/60 of 24 April 2003 on the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights,

Recalling also the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held at Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, and its role in the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights,

Recognizing that the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights is essential for the full achievement of the purposes of the United Nations, including the effective promotion and protection of all human rights,

Reaffirming that dialogue among religions, cultures and civilizations in the field of human rights could contribute greatly to the enhancement of international cooperation in this field, and recalling its decision to proclaim 2001 the United Nations Year of Dialogue among Civilizations, as well as its resolution 56/6 of 9 November 2001, entitled "Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations",

Emphasizing the need for further progress in the promotion and encouragement of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through, inter alia, international cooperation,

Underlining the fact that mutual understanding, dialogue, cooperation, transparency and confidence-building are important elements in all the activities for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Recalling the adoption of resolution 2000/22 of 18 August 2000, on the promotion of dialogue on human rights issues, by the Subcommittee on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights at its fifty-second session,

1. Reaffirms that it is one of the purposes of the United Nations and the responsibility of all Member States to promote, protect and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through, inter alia, international cooperation;

2. Recognizes that, in addition to their separate responsibilities to their individual societies, States have a collective responsibility to uphold the principles of human dignity, equality and equity at the global level;

3. Reaffirms that dialogue among cultures and civilizations facilitates the promotion of a culture of tolerance and respect for diversity, and welcomes in this regard the holding of conferences and meetings at the national, regional and international levels on dialogue among civilizations;

4. Urges all actors on the international scene to build an international order based on inclusion, justice, equality and equity, human dignity, mutual understanding and promotion of and respect for cultural diversity and universal human rights, and to reject all doctrines of exclusion based on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

5. Reaffirms the importance of the enhancement of international cooperation for the promotion and protection of human rights and for the achievement of the objectives of the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

6. Considers that international cooperation in this field, in conformity with the purposes and principles set out in the Charter of the United Nations and international law, should make an effective and practical contribution to the urgent task of preventing violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

7. Reaffirms that the promotion, protection and full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms should be guided by the principles of universality, non-selectivity, objectivity and transparency, in a manner consistent with the purposes and principles set out in the Charter;

8. Calls upon Member States, specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations to continue to carry out a constructive dialogue and consultations for the enhancement of understanding and the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and encourages non-governmental organizations to contribute actively to this endeavour;

9. Invites States and relevant United Nations human rights mechanisms and procedures to continue to pay attention to the importance of mutual cooperation, understanding and dialogue in ensuring the promotion and protection of all human rights;

10. Decides to continue its consideration of this question at its fifty-ninth session.

On the same date [meeting 77], the Assembly, also on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/188 by recorded vote (106-55-19) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Respect for the purposes and principles contained in the Charter of the United Nations to achieve international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms and in solving international problems of a humanitarian character

The General Assembly,

Recalling that, in accordance with Article 56 of the Charter of the United Nations, all Member States have pledged themselves to take joint and separate action in cooperation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55, including universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Recalling also the Preamble to the Charter, in particular the determination to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small,

Reaffirming that the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms must be considered a priority objective of the United Nations in accordance with its purposes and principles, in particular the purpose of international cooperation, and that, within the framework of these purposes and principles, the promotion and protection of all human rights is a legitimate concern of the international community,

Considering the major changes taking place on the international scene and the aspirations of all peoples to an international order based on the principles enshrined in the Charter, including promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all and respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, peace, democracy, justice, equality, the rule of law, pluralism, development, better standards of living and solidarity,

Recognizing that the international community should devise ways and means to remove current obstacles and meet the challenges to the full realization of all human rights and to prevent the continuation of human rights violations resulting therefrom throughout the world, and should continue to pay attention to the importance of mutual cooperation, understanding and dialogue in ensuring the promotion and protection of all human rights,

Reaffirming that the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights is essential for the full achievement of the purposes of the United Nations and that human rights and fundamental freedoms are the birthright of all human beings, the promotion and protection of such rights and freedoms being the first responsibility of Governments,

Reaffirming also that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated and that the international community must treat human rights globally in a fair and equal manner, on the same footing and with the same emphasis,

Reaffirming further the various Articles of the Charter setting out the respective powers and functions of the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council, as the paramount framework for the achievement of the purposes of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the commitment of all States to fulfil their obligations under other important instruments of international law, in particular those of international human rights and humanitarian law,

Taking into account that, in accordance with Article 103 of the Charter, in the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the Charter shall prevail,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on the question, including its resolution 57/217 of 18 December 2002,

1. Reiterates the solemn commitment of all States to enhance international cooperation in the field of human rights and in the solution to international problems of a humanitarian character in full compliance with the Charter of the United Nations, inter alia, by the strict observance of all the purposes and principles set forth in Articles 1 and 2 thereof;

2. Stresses the vital role of the work of United Nations and regional arrangements, acting consistently with the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter, in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, as well as in solving international problems of a humanitarian character, and affirms that all States, in these activities, must fully comply with the principles set forth in Article 2 of the Charter, in particular respecting the sovereign equality of all States and refraining from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, or acting in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations;

3. Reaffirms that the United Nations shall promote universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion;

4. Calls upon all States to cooperate fully, through constructive dialogue, to ensure the promotion and protection of all human rights for all and in promoting peaceful solutions to international problems of a humanitarian character and, in their actions towards that purpose, to comply strictly with the principles and norms of international law, inter alia, by fully respecting international human rights and humanitarian law;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of Member States, organs, bodies and other components of the United Nations system, and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, and to disseminate it as widely as possible;

6. Decides to consider this question at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Right to promote and protect human rights

Human rights defenders

Reports of Special Representative. In a January report [E/CN.4/2003/104], the Secretary-General's Special Representative on human rights defenders, Hina Jilani (Pakistan), described her activities, analysed evolving trends in violations and difficulties faced by human rights defenders, considered ways to strengthen implementation of the 1998 Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 53/144 [YUN 1998, p. 608], and described the types of violations committed in specific countries. The Special Representative identified priorities for a strategic approach to the situation and role of human rights defenders, including the protection of human rights defenders, strengthening the role of the media, increasing the responsibilities of local government, implementation of the 1998 Declaration in the context of democratization and of the MDGs, the special role of the UN country team for mainstreaming human rights, regional actions, and support from the special procedures and treaty bodies. A February addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2003/104/Add.1] summarized communications sent to and received from Governments, including urgent appeals and allegation letters, and presented guidelines for submitting allegations to the Special Representative.

The Special Representative visited the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (27-30 January) to assess the role and situation of human rights defenders in the country [E/CN.4/2004/94/Add.2]. Defenders were active in addressing such issues as democratization; development; citizen participation; organization and monitoring of elections; human rights education and training; investigation of allegations of torture, illegal arrest and detention; monitoring and investigation of corruption; identifying discrimination; improving access to education; increasing literacy; support to minority languages and culture; trafficking in women and children; violence against women; promoting the rights of women, children and minorities; disarmament, demining and demobilization; labour rights and employment; and access to public services. While defenders reported considerable progress over the past decade, an analysis of the capacity of defenders in terms of their coordination, funding, integrity, training and overall sustainability suggested that the human rights community was still an emergent one. The Special Representative noted that very few defenders operated outside human rights organizations, and a majority needed greater knowledge of international human rights standards, and skills and expertise in developing human rights strategies. There had been a number of attacks on defenders because of their ethnicity and/or because they were perceived as advocating for human rights of a particular ethnic group.

The Special Representative concluded that the current capacity of human rights defenders was insufficient to meet the human rights challenges in the country, the opportunities available for them to influence human rights were limited and an enabling environment was not fully developed. She recommended that the Government adopt and implement legislation to enact the 1998 Declaration, report regularly to UN treaty bodies and involve civil society in the preparation and follow-up of reports, accord tax-exempt status to human rights organizations, grant defenders access to information required for their work, set up a mechanism through which the Government would respond to human rights concerns raised by human rights defenders, secure the independence of the judiciary, strengthen the police forces to ensure their respect for human rights and encourage action by the Ombudsman's Office to take up concerns raised by defenders. Human rights defenders were urged to take note of defenders' responsibilities under the 1998 Declaration; define strategies; ensure transparency; strengthen monitoring, reporting and protection activities; increase opportunities for training on human rights standards; develop domestic fund-raising strategies; inform the public of human rights issues and strengthen public participation; and strengthen cooperation with UN and regional human rights bodies. Recommendations to international donors were to verify the capacity and legitimacy of civil society organizations; define a collective strategy; provide core funding to organizations; and strengthen support for human rights NGOs. The UN country team was asked to contribute to the implementation of the 1998 Declaration and strengthen contacts with civil society organizations.

The Special Representative visited Thailand (19-27 May) [E/CN.4/2004/94/Add.1], where she noted a widely praised Constitution, which was constrained by weaknesses in implementation. She welcomed the work of the National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) but regretted the limited action by Government or Parliament in response to its concerns. The most common issues addressed by human rights defenders were economic and social rights, often in the context of national economic development plans and policies, including the right to land ownership of hill tribes communities; the right to livelihood of small farming and fishing communities threatened by industrial projects; environmental rights; labour rights for migrant workers; trafficking in people; the right to health; human rights in the context of HIV/AIDS; strengthening of the education system; respect for children's rights to participate in decisions affecting them; and discrimination against persons with disabilities. Although Thailand had a vibrant human rights community, there were limitations on that capacity, such as public statements by government officials denigrating NGOs, efforts to control NGO funding, restrictions on freedom of association, and alleged surveillance and harassment of some NGOs through State security mechanisms. The Special Representative considered that the law was applied selectively against defenders. Defenders feared that police powers had been abused at the local level to target defenders raising human rights concerns. The Special Representative expressed concern at the numerous cases of alleged or attempted murder of defenders and described cases involving hill tribes leaders and labour rights activists. Defenders within the NGO community, journalists, Thai and foreign defenders, academics, community activists and others expressed a widespread sense of insecurity.

The Special Representative recommended that the Government signal stronger political support for NHRC; consider ways in which the Ministry of Social Development and Human Security could consult with defenders in developing its definition of human security, use the 1998 Declaration as an integral component of its policies, and collaborate with the UN country team and OHCHR to build its programmes and capacity; ensure a more stable legal and political environment for human rights defenders; hold consultations with human rights defenders and organizations; give greater opportunities for defenders representing hill tribes, landless farmers and migrant workers to find solutions to their human rights concerns; review and consider withdrawing prosecutions against defenders; and ensure the prompt investigation of reported violations against defenders. The Parliament should facilitate constitutional human rights guarantees and fundamental freedoms; involve civil society in developing new legislation; act on the reports, concerns and recommendations of NHRC; and scrutinize more closely government actions that impacted human rights. Recommendations for human rights defenders were to maintain transparency in their activities and promote peaceful means for the assertion of rights, use peaceful advocacy to highlight laws that obstructed the work of human rights defenders, and enhance their security. The UN country team and the OHCHR Asia regional representative should support the Government in implementing the 1998 Declaration; strengthen collaboration with NGOs and other human rights defenders; and establish contacts with the Senate Committee for People's Participation to identify areas of cooperation for strengthening the legal framework for human rights.

A September note by the Secretary-General [A/58/380] transmitted the Special Representative's annual report, as requested in General Assembly resolution 57/209 [YUN 2002, p. 620], which addressed the related concerns of the use of security legislation against human rights defenders and the role and situation of human rights defenders in emergencies. General trends indicated a significant increase in the use of security legislation, including in counter-terrorism policies and actions, to limit the possibilities for defenders to conduct human rights work. The Special Representative drew attention to, among other issues, violations of defenders' rights to freedom of association, expression and access to information, and gave examples of the arbitrary arrest and detention, prosecution, conviction and sentencing of defenders, all under security legislation provisions. The restrictions on defenders were justified as measures to improve security and support counter-terrorism, while in many cases the actual objective was to conceal human rights abuses that defenders would have revealed, or to punish defenders for their work and to discourage others from continuing it. Regarding emergency situations, the Special Representative described situations when work to monitor and protect human rights was most urgent and defenders were prevented by some State and non-State actors from having access to victims of violations or places where violations occurred. She expressed deep concern that in those situations, the defenders were targeted and were increasingly victims of killings, torture, arrest, detention and other acts.

Recommendations to States included ensuring that security legislation was not applied against human rights defenders as a means to prevent their work, applying transparency when defenders were arrested, detained and/or prosecuted under security legislation, upholding the provisions of the 1998 Declaration and protecting human rights defenders under national laws. The United Nations was asked to provide support to human rights defenders and OHCHR to consider publishing guidelines indicating the human rights standards that should be referred to and protected by domestic security laws. Regional organizations should pay attention to deteriorating situations of defenders in emergencies within the region and those having a human rights mandate should establish a human rights defenders capacity. Defenders should ensure that their work met the standard of responsibility required by the 1998 Declaration, provide input during the drafting of security legislation, monitor the implementation of existing legislation and promote the Declaration.

The Assembly took note of the report on 22 December (decision 58/538).

Communication. In January [E/CN.4/2003/G/35], Guatemala presented its views on the Special Representative's report on her visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 620], stating that the report was balanced and well documented. Guatemala offered its comments to provide more insight into the facts presented in the report and to seek ways to overcome the problems that it raised.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/64], the Commission, condemning human rights violations against human rights defenders, called on States to promote and give full effect to the 1998 Declaration and to ensure the protection of defenders. It decided to extend the Special Representative's mandate for an additional three years and asked her to continue to report to the General Assembly and the Commission. The Economic and Social Council approved, on 23 July, the Commission's decision and request to the Special Representative (decision 2003/255).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/178 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/144 of 9 December 1998, by which it adopted by consensus the Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, annexed to that resolution,

Reiterating the importance of the Declaration, and stressing the importance of its wide dissemination,

Recalling all previous resolutions on this subject, in particular its resolution 57/209 of 18 December 2002 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/64 of 24 April 2003,

Noting with deep concern that, in many countries, persons and organizations engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms are facing threats, harassment and insecurity as a result of those activities,

Gravely concerned by the human rights violations committed against persons engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms around the world,

Recalling that human rights defenders are entitled to equal protection of the law, and deeply concerned about any abuse of civil or criminal proceedings against them because of their activities for the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Concerned by the considerable number of communications received by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on human rights defenders that, together with the reports submitted by some of the special procedure mechanisms, indicate the serious nature of the risks faced by human rights defenders, in particular those active at the local and community levels, and the severe consequences for women human rights defenders and defenders of rights of persons belonging to minorities,

Noting with deep concern that, in a number of countries in all regions of the world, impunity for threats, attacks and acts of intimidation against human rights defenders persists and that this has a negative impact on their work and safety,

Emphasizing the important role that individuals, non-governmental organizations and groups play in the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including in combating impunity and in promoting, strengthening and preserving democracy,

Recalling that, under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, certain rights are recognized as non-derogable, and emphasizing that derogation from other rights and freedoms can take place only under strict observance of the agreed conditions and procedures identified under article 4 of the Covenant,

Gravely concerned that, in some instances, national security and counter-terrorism legislation and other measures have been misused to target human rights defenders or have hindered their work and safety in a manner contrary to international law,

Acknowledging the significant work conducted by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General during the first three years of her mandate,

Welcoming the cooperation between the Special Representative and other special procedures of the Commission on Human Rights,

Welcoming also regional initiatives for the promotion and protection of human rights and the cooperation between international and regional mechanisms for the protection of human rights defenders, and encouraging further development in this regard,

Recalling that the primary responsibility for promoting and protecting human rights rests with the State, and noting with deep concern that the activities of some non-State actors pose a major threat to the security of human rights defenders,

Emphasizing the need for strong and effective measures for the protection of human rights defenders,

1. Calls upon all States to promote and give full effect to the Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, including by taking, as appropriate, practical steps to that end;

2. Welcomes the reports of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on human rights defenders and her contribution to the effective promotion of the Declaration and the improvement of the protection of human rights defenders worldwide;

3. Encourages all States to ensure and maintain an environment conducive to the work of human rights defenders;

4. Condemns all human rights violations committed against persons engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms around the world, and urges States to take all appropriate action, consistent with the Declaration and all other relevant human rights instruments, to eliminate such human rights violations;

5. Calls upon all States to take all necessary measures to ensure the protection of human rights defenders, at both the local and the national levels;

6. Urges States to ensure that any measures to combat terrorism and preserve national security comply with their obligations under international law, in particular under international human rights law, and do not hinder the work and safety of human rights defenders;

7. Emphasizes the importance of combating impunity, and in this regard urges States to take appropriate measures to address the question of impunity for threats, attacks and acts of intimidation against human rights defenders;

8. Urges all Governments to cooperate with and assist the Special Representative in the performance of her tasks and to furnish all information in the fulfilment of her mandate upon request;

9. Calls upon Governments to give serious consideration to responding favourably to the requests of the Special Representative to visit their countries, and urges them to enter into a constructive dialogue with the Special Representative with respect to the follow-up to her recommendations, so as to enable her to fulfil her mandate even more effectively;

10. Urges those Governments that have not yet responded to the communications transmitted to them by the Special Representative to answer without further delay;

11. Invites Governments to consider translating the Declaration into national languages, and encourages them to disseminate it widely;

12. Requests all concerned United Nations agencies and organizations, within their mandates, to provide all possible assistance and support to the Special Representative in the implementation of her programme of activities;

13. Invites relevant United Nations bodies, including at the country level, within their mandates and working in cooperation with States, to give due consideration to the Declaration and to the reports of the Special Representative, and requests the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to draw the attention of all relevant United Nations bodies, including at the country level, to the reports of the Special Representative;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Representative with all necessary human, material and financial resources in order to enable her to continue to carry out her mandate effectively, including through country visits;

15. Decides to consider this question at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Human rights and human responsibilities

In response to Economic and Social Council decision 2002/277 [YUN 2002, p. 622], Special Rapporteur Miguel Alfonso Martínez (Cuba)

submitted, in March, his final report on human rights and human responsibilities [E/CN.4/2003/105]. He pointed out that the responsibilities in question were not those dictated by law, but those that corresponded to social ethics and human solidarity. While the view of the essential linkage between those rights and responsibilities had not been generally accepted in human rights forums, the Special Rapporteur concluded that they were key to each other's realization. He asserted that every right was linked to some obligation or an ethical responsibility and that compliance with the latter prevented violations of the former. The Special Rapporteur discussed the duties that existed between States, such as the duty to contribute to compliance by every State with its obligation to promote, realize and protect the rights and liberties recognized for every person under its jurisdiction. The Special Rapporteur suggested that UN human rights bodies should be tasked to create a new standard on the matter, and that the Commission should consider the issue in future. Annexed to the report was a draft declaration on human social responsibilities for adoption by the Council.

Other aspects

Good governance

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 622], the High Commissioner, in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/103], summarized examples of activities, submitted by Member States, international governmental organizations and NGOs, that had been effective in strengthening good governance practices for the promotion of human rights at the national level. He concluded that the information submitted reflected a broad understanding of the concept of good governance as well as its relevance for the promotion of human rights at the national level. It also indicated a growing interest and awareness of the importance of good governance for the realization of the broad range of human rights and sustainable development. The High Commissioner said the convening of a seminar on practical approaches and activities that had been effective in strengthening good governance practices for the promotion of human rights at the national level, as called for by the Commission in 2002, had been postponed owing to financial constraints.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/65], the Commission welcomed the High Commissioner's commitment, using extrabudgetary funding and working jointly with UNDP, to convene a seminar, prior to the Commission's 2005 session, on practical approaches and activities that had been effective in strengthening good governance practices for the promotion of human rights at the national level. It requested him to invite States, national human rights institutions, relevant UN bodies, other international bodies and NGOs to attend the seminar and to report to the Commission. It also asked him to compile indicative ideas and practices arising from the seminar and the material provided by States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs that could be consulted by interested States.

Human rights instruments

General aspects

In 2003, seven UN human rights instruments were in force that required monitoring of their implementation by expert bodies. The instruments and their treaty bodies were: the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination [YUN 1965, p. 440, GA res. 2106 A (XX)] (Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination); the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol thereto [YUN 1966, p. 423, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] and the Second Optional Protocol, aiming at the abolition of the death penalty [YUN 1989, p. 484, GA res. 44/128] (Human Rights Committee); the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights [YUN 1966, p. 419, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] (Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights); the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women [YUN 1979, p. 895, GA res. 34/180] and Optional Protocol [YUN 1999, p. 1100, GA res. 54/4] (Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women); the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment [YUN 1984, p. 813, GA res. 39/46] and 2002 Optional Protocol [YUN 2002, p. 631, GA res. 57/199] (Committee against Torture); the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 560, GA res. 44/25] and Optional Protocols on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography [YUN 2000, pp. 616 & 618, GA res. 54/263] (Committee on the Rights of the Child); and the 1990 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [YUN 1990, p. 594, GA res. 45/158] (Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families).

Working paper. As requested by the Subcommission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 623], Emmanuel Decaux (France) submitted a June working paper on the effective universality of international human rights treaties [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/37]. The paper reviewed efforts to encourage the universal acceptance of human rights instruments carried out since the 1993 World Conference on Human Rights [YUN 1993, p. 908]. It presented data gathered by OHCHR on the number of ratifications to the seven main human rights treaty instruments from January 1993 to June 2003. The current total of 955 ratifications, 10 years after the 1993 World Conference, reflected a marked deceleration and a shortfall of over 200 ratifications compared with the target of universal ratification for the six selected instruments for which monitoring bodies existed. The report noted that almost two thirds (130) of the 209 non-ratifications were concentrated in some 30 States, which it listed. It suggested that the status of the instruments or the system of reservations to treaties were legal issues that should be regrouped under the agenda item on the administration of justice, the rule of law and democracy, which would be more logical in that the concept of the rule of law implied a reference both to the domestic order and to respect for international law. The future study should seek to: clarify the issues raised by the effective universality of human rights treaties, including to refine the concept of universal treaties or treaties of universal scope from the standpoint of public international law; draw up an inventory of the relevant treaties and assess the machinery for monitoring commitments and encouraging ratification; take into account relevant experience in other treaty monitoring systems; and consider the most effective modalities that would allow a constructive dialogue with States concerning legal, political, social or other difficulties encountered in the ratification, entry into force, interpretation and application of the treaties in question, with a view to seeking effective universality.

Subcommission action. On 14 August [res. 2003/25], the Subcommission decided to appoint Mr. Decaux Special Rapporteur to undertake a study on the universal implementation of international human rights treaties and asked him to submit a preliminary report in 2004, an interim report in 2005 and a final report in 2006. It decided that the reports would be considered under the agenda item on the administration of justice, the rule of law and democracy. The Secretary-General was asked to assist the Special Rapporteur.

Human rights treaty body system

Note by OHCHR. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353] and in the light of the Secretary-General's report on strengthening the United Nations [ibid., p. 614], OHCHR, in a February note [E/CN.4/2003/126], described action it had taken to facilitate a review by States parties and the respective treaty bodies on the reporting procedures of the treaty bodies with a view to developing a more coordinated approach and streamlining the reporting requirements.

In June [HRI/GEN/4/Rev.3], OHCHR published an outline of the recent reporting history of States parties to the treaties as at 2 June 2003.

Notes by Secretariat. An April note by the Secretariat [HRI/GEN/3/Rev.1] contained a compilation of the rules of procedure adopted by the main treaty bodies, as requested in General Assembly resolution 55/90 [YUN 2000, p. 607].

A May note [HRI/GEN/1/Rev.6] presented a compilation of general comments and general recommendations adopted by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Human Rights Committee, the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD), the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, the Committee against Torture and the Committee on the Rights of the Child.

Expert meeting. A meeting of experts (Malbun, Liechtenstein, 4-7 May) [A/58/123] on the theme of treaty body reform, organized by OHCHR and Liechtenstein, considered the harmonization of reporting guidelines to govern the technical and formal elements of reports, the submission of a single report satisfying States parties' reporting obligations under all treaties to which they were a party, an expanded core document to avoid repetition and overlap, focused periodic reports, thematic or modular (a common document for all treaty bodies to which specific reports under each treaty would be attached) reporting, periodicity of reporting on human rights treaties, and capacity-building aimed at implementation of treaty obligations and follow-up to recommendations of treaty bodies. The report of the meeting was submitted to the second inter-committee meeting of the human rights treaty bodies and the fifteenth meeting of chairpersons of human rights treaty bodies (see below).

Inter-committee meeting. The second inter-committee meeting of human rights treaty bodies (Geneva, 18-20 June) [A/58/350, annex I] reached agreement and made recommendations on the need to enhance consistency in the examination of reports by all treaty bodies; the State party report as the basis for consideration of implementation of treaties; the role of national human rights institutions in the human rights reporting process; capacity-building to improve national reporting; joint or parallel general comments/recommendations reached by treaty bodies; the dissemination of concluding observations/comments; strengthening the human rights treaty body system; procedures to follow up on treaty body recommendations; and procedures to examine the human rights situation in a State party whose reports were long overdue and that had not responded to reminders. The inter-committee meeting had before it a Secretariat background document on methods of work relating to the State reporting process [HRI/ICM/2003/3 & Add.1].

Meeting of chairpersons. The fifteenth meeting of chairpersons of human rights treaty bodies (Geneva, 23-27 June) [A/58/350] considered recommendations of the fourteenth meeting [YUN 2002, p. 622] and reviewed developments relating to the work of the treaty bodies. The fifth joint meeting was held with the participants of the tenth meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the special procedures of the Commission and of the advisory services programme (see p. 678). The chairpersons adopted recommendations relating to proposals to strengthen the human rights treaty body system; the provision by treaty bodies of lists of issues and questions prior to the examination of States parties' reports; the inter-committee meeting in 2004 to examine draft guidelines for the expanded core document and to focus on technical and organizational issues; cooperation with the Commission, the Sub-commission and special rapporteurs; the accuracy of UN press releases; and honorariums for the treaty body experts of all committees. The meeting considered a review of recent developments relating to the work of treaty bodies issued in June by the Secretariat [HRI/MC/2003/21. The General Assembly took note of the meeting's report on 22 December (decision 58/537).

Reservations to human rights treaties

As requested by the Subcommission in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 589], Françoise Hampson (United Kingdom) issued, in August, an expanded report on reservations to human rights treaties [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/WP.2], in which she concluded that States were free to formulate a reservation to a human rights treaty, where the reservation was not prohibited by the treaty, on condition that the reservation was not incompatible with the treaty's purposes; States could not formulate a reservation incompatible with the purposes of a treaty and other States could not accept such a reservation; a human rights treaty body had the jurisdiction to determine the validity of a reservation; and where a human rights treaty body reached the conclusion that a reservation was incompatible with a treaty's purpose, the reserving State had the option to withdraw or modify the reservation so as to make it compatible with the treaty or denounce the treaty. She proposed encouraging human rights treaty bodies to continue to enter into a dialogue with the reserving State, with a view to changing the incompatible reservation as to make it compatible with the treaty. She recommended forwarding the expanded working paper to CERD, other treaty bodies and the Special Rapporteur of the International Law Commission.

Universal Declaration of Human Rights

In accordance with General Assembly decision 57/534 [YUN 2002, p. 625], human rights prizes were awarded in 2003 to mark the fifty-fifth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by Assembly resolution 217 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 535]. The United Nations, on the occasion of Human Rights Day (10 December), awarded prizes to Enriqueta Estela Barnes de Carlotto (Argentina), President of the Association of Plaza de Mayo Grandmothers; Deng Pufang (China), founder and Director of the China Disabled Persons Federation; Shulamith Koenig (United States), Executive Director of the People's Movement for Human Rights; and two ground-breaking organizations—Family Protection Project Management Team (Jordan) and the Mano River Women's Peace Network (West Africa). A special posthumous award was given to Sergio Vieira de Mello, the late High Commissioner. The prizes were awarded every five years for outstanding promotion and protection of civil liberties and fundamental freedoms.

Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and Optional Protocols

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December 2003, parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol thereto, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 423], numbered 151 and 104, respectively. During the year, Timor-Leste and Turkey became parties to the Covenant.

The Second Optional Protocol, aiming at the abolition of the death penalty, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 44/128 [YUN 1989, p. 484], was acceded to by Paraguay and Timor-Leste, bringing the total number of States parties to 51 as at 31 December.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Covenant and its Optional Protocols as at 1 August [A/58/307] and 1 December [E/CN.4/2004/85].

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Human Rights Committee, established under article 28 of the Covenant, held three sessions in 2003: its seventy-seventh from 17 March to 4 April, its seventy-eighth from 14 July to 8 August, which included an additional week for the plenary and was devoted to the consideration of communications under the Optional Protocol, so as to reduce the backlog of pending cases [A/58/40, vol. I], and its seventy-ninth from 20 October to 7 November [A/59/40, vol. I], all in Geneva. The General Assembly took note of the Committee's report on its seventy-seventh and seventy-eighth sessions on 22 December (decision 58/537).

In 2003, the Committee considered reports from 11 States—El Salvador, Estonia, Israel, Latvia, Luxembourg, Mali, the Philippines, Portugal, the Russian Federation, Slovakia and Sri Lanka—under article 40. In the absence of a report, the Committee made public final concluding observations on country situations in Equatorial Guinea and the Gambia. It adopted views on communications from individuals claiming that their rights under the Covenant had been violated, and decided that other such communications were inadmissible. Those views and decisions were annexed to the Committee's reports [A/58/40, vol. II; A/59/40, vol. II].

Colombia notified other States parties, through the intermediary of the Secretary-General, on 12 February, of the second extension of a declaration of internal disturbance issued in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 626]. Serbia and Montenegro notified other States parties of the adoption, by the Acting President on 12 March, of a decision and order declaring a state of emergency for the territory of the State, following the assassination of Serbian Prime Minister Zoran Djindjic (see p. 415); the state of emergency was terminated on 23 April. Peru notified other States parties of the declaration of a state of emergency for a period of 30 days, with effect from 29 May; by notifications of 30 September and 1 December, Peru stated that it had extended the state of emergency in different provinces and parts of the country.

Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December 2003, there were 148 parties to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 419]. Timor-Leste and Turkey became parties during the year. The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Covenant as at 1 July [A/58/307] and 1 December [E/CN.4/2004/85].

Draft optional protocol

Report of independent expert. The independent expert on the question of a draft optional protocol to the Covenant, Hatem Kotrane (Tunisia), in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/53 & Corr.1, 2], focused on issues raised in a 2002 Commission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 627] relating to the nature and scope of States parties' obligations under the Covenant, the justiciability of economic, social and cultural rights, a complaint mechanism under the Covenant and complementarity between different mechanisms. He recommended that the Commission adopt a resolution confirming its decision [YUN 2002, p. 627] to establish an open-ended working group to consider options regarding the elaboration of an optional protocol.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 2003/18], the Commission, taking note of Economic and Social Council decision 2002/254 [YUN 2002, p. 627], which endorsed the Commission's decision [ibid.] to establish the working group, requested the group to meet for 10 working days prior to the Commission's 2004 session. It asked OHCHR to make available for the group's session the comments and views of States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs regarding the issues raised by the expert (above). Special Rapporteurs whose mandates related to the realization of economic, social and cultural rights were asked to share their views on an optional protocol and to make recommendations to the working group. The group was requested to report in 2004 and to make recommendations on its course of action regarding the draft optional protocol.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/242 by recorded vote (51-2-1) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Question of the realization in all countries of the economic, social and cultural rights contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and study of special problems which the developing countries face in their efforts to achieve these human rights

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council, recalling its decision 2002/254 of 25 July 2002, in which the Council endorsed the decision of the Commission on Human Rights to establish, at its fifty-ninth session, an open-ended working group of the Commission with a view to considering options regarding the elaboration of an optional protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and taking note of Commission resolution 2003/18 of 22 April 2003, endorsed the Commission's request that the working group should meet for a period of ten working days, prior to the sixtieth session of the Commission, with a view to considering options regarding the elaboration of an optional protocol to the Covenant, in the light, inter alia, of the report of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to the Commission on a draft optional protocol for the consideration of communications in relation to the Covenant, comments and views submitted by States, intergovernmental organizations, including United Nations specialized agencies, and non-governmental organizations, and the reports of the independent expert to examine the question of a draft optional protocol to the Covenant.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/19], the Subcommission urged the Commission in 2004 to mandate the open-ended working group to proceed with drafting the text of an optional protocol. It urged the group to draft an optional protocol that was comprehensive in scope and provided that communications might be initiated by individual and collective victims; further, the instrument should be conceptualized as both a complaint mechanism and an inquiry procedure and should preclude State party reservations.

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights held its thirtieth (5-23 May) and thirty-first (10-28 November) sessions, both in Geneva [E/2004/22]. Its pre-sessional working group held meetings in Geneva from 1 to 5 December to identify issues to be discussed with reporting States.

On 24 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Committee's report on its twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth sessions, held in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 627] (decision 2003/310).

In 2003, the Committee examined reports under articles 16 and 17 of the Covenant submitted by Brazil, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Guatemala, Iceland, Israel, Luxembourg, New Zealand, the Republic of Moldova, the Russian Federation and Yemen.

On 24 November, the Committee held a day of general discussion on the right to work, as provided for in article 6 of the Covenant. The discussion was intended to lay the groundwork for the elaboration of a general comment on the right to work.

The Committee asked OHCHR to consider organizing, in 2005, a workshop on follow-up action to its concluding observations for the States parties to the Covenant from the Asian region.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 2003/18], the Commission encouraged the Committee to continue efforts to promote, protect and fully realize the rights enshrined in the Covenant, at the national and international levels.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.1 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/165 without vote [agenda item 117 (a)].

International Covenants on Human Rights

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/144 of 19 December 2001 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 2002/78 of 25 April 2002,

Mindful that the International Covenants on Human Rights constitute the first all-embracing and legally binding international treaties in the field of human rights and, together with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, form the core of the International Bill of Human Rights,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the status of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Recalling the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and reaffirming that all human rights and fundamental freedoms are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated and that the promotion and protection of one category of rights should never exempt or excuse States from the promotion and protection of the other rights,

Recognizing the important role of the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in examining the progress made by States parties in fulfilling the obligations undertaken in the International Covenants on Human Rights and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and in providing recommendations to States parties on their implementation,

Considering that the effective functioning of the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights is indispensable for the full and effective implementation of the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recognizing the importance of regional human rights instruments and monitoring mechanisms in complementing the universal system of promotion and protection of human rights,

1. Reaffirms the importance of the International Covenants on Human Rights as major components of international efforts to promote universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

2. Welcomes once again the initiative of the Secretary-General at the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations to invite heads of State and Government to sign, ratify or accede to the International Covenants on Human Rights, and expresses its appreciation to those States that have done so;

3. Strongly appeals to all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as to consider as a matter of priority acceding to the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and making the declaration provided for in article 41 of the Covenant;

4. Invites the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to intensify systematic efforts to encourage States to become parties to the International Covenants on Human Rights and, through the programme of advisory services in the field of human rights, to assist such States, at their request, in ratifying or acceding to the Covenants and to the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights with a view to achieving universal adherence;

5. Emphasizes the importance of the strictest compliance by States parties with their obligations under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and, where applicable, the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;

6. Also emphasizes that States must ensure that any measure to combat terrorism complies with their obligations under relevant international law, including their obligations under the International Covenants on Human Rights;

7. Stresses the importance of avoiding the erosion of human rights by derogation, and underlines the necessity of strict observance of the agreed conditions and procedures for derogation under article 4 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, bearing in mind the need for States parties to provide the fullest possible information during states of emergency so that the justification for the appropriateness of measures taken in those circumstances can be assessed, and in this regard particularly takes note of General Comment No. 29 adopted by the Human Rights Committee;

8. Encourages States parties to consider limiting the extent of any reservations that they lodge to the International Covenants on Human Rights, to formulate any reservations as precisely and narrowly as possible and to ensure that no reservation is incompatible with the object and purpose of the relevant treaty;

9. Also encourages States parties to review regularly any reservations made in respect of the provisions of the International Covenants on Human Rights and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights with a view to withdrawing them;

10. Welcomes the annual reports of the Human Rights Committee submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh and fifty-eighth sessions, and takes note of the General Comments adopted by the Committee;

11. Also welcomes the reports of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights on its twenty-fifth, twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh sessions and on its twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth sessions, and takes note of the General Comments adopted by the Committee;

12. Urges States parties to fulfil their reporting obligations under article 40 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights on time and to attend and participate in the consideration of the reports by the Human Rights Committee when so requested, and in this regard takes note of General Comment No. 30 adopted by the Committee;

13. Also urges States parties to fulfil their reporting obligations under article 16 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights on time and to attend and participate in the consideration of the reports by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights when so requested;

14. Further urges States parties to make use in their reports of gender-disaggregated data, and stresses the importance of taking fully into account a gender perspective in the implementation of the International Covenants on Human Rights at the national level, including in the national reports of States parties and in the work of the Human Rights Committee and of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;

15. Strongly encourages States parties that have not yet submitted core documents to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to do so, and invites all States parties regularly to review and update their core documents;

16. Urges States parties to take duly into account, in implementing the provisions of the International Covenants on Human Rights, the recommendations and observations made during the consideration of their reports by the Human Rights Committee and by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, as well as the views adopted by the Human Rights Committee under the first Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;

17. Invites States parties to give particular attention to the dissemination at the national level of their reports submitted to the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the summary records relating to the examination of those reports by the Committees and the recommendations and observations made by the Committees after the examination of those reports;

18. Urges all States to publish the texts of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights in as many local languages as possible and to distribute them and make them known as widely as possible in their territories;

19. Urges each State party to translate, publish and make available as widely as possible in its territory by appropriate means the full text of the concluding observations on its reports to the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;

20. Reiterates that States parties should take into account, in their nomination of members to the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, that the Committees shall be composed of persons of high moral character and recognized competence in the field of human rights, consideration being given to the usefulness of the participation of some persons having legal experience, as well as to equal representation of women and men, and that members serve in their personal capacity, and also reiterates that, in the elections of the Committees, consideration shall be given to equitable geographical distribution of membership and to the representation of the different forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems;

21. Invites the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, when considering the reports of States parties, to continue to identify specific needs that might be addressed by United Nations departments, funds and programmes and the specialized agencies, including through the advisory services and technical assistance programme of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights;

22. Stresses the need for improved coordination among relevant United Nations mechanisms and bodies in supporting States parties, upon their request, in implementing the International Covenants on Human Rights and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and encourages continued efforts in this direction;

23. Welcomes the meeting held by the Human Rights Committee and States parties in October 2002 and the meeting held by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and States parties in May 2003 to exchange ideas on how to render the working methods of the Committees more efficient, and encourages all States parties to continue to contribute to the dialogue with practical and concrete proposals and ideas on ways to improve the effective functioning of the Committees;

24. Also welcomes the continuing efforts of the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to strive for uniform standards in the implementation of the provisions of the International Covenants on Human Rights, and appeals to other bodies dealing with similar human rights questions to respect those uniform standards, as expressed in the general comments of the Committees;

25. Notes the need for further consideration of the issue of justiciability of the rights set forth in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and for further efforts towards developing indicators and benchmarks to measure progress in the national implementation by States parties of the rights protected by the Covenant;

26. Takes note with interest of the establishment by the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-ninth session of an open-ended working group with a view to considering options regarding the elaboration of an optional protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and making specific recommendations on its course of action concerning the question of such an optional protocol, and encourages all parties to participate actively in the first session of the working group;

27. Encourages the specialized agencies that have not yet done so to submit their reports on the progress made in achieving the observance of the provisions of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, in accordance with article 18 of the Covenant, and expresses its appreciation to those that have done so;

28. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to assist States parties to the International Covenants on Human Rights in the preparation of their reports, including by convening seminars or workshops at the national level for the training of government officials engaged in the preparation of such reports and by exploring other possibilities available under the programme of advisory services in the field of human rights;

29. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights effectively assists the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in the implementation of their respective mandates by providing, inter alia, adequate Secretariat staff resources and conference and other relevant support services;

30. Welcomes the initiative of the Secretary-General, taking into account the suggestions of the Human Rights Committee, to take determined steps, in particular through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, to give more publicity to the work of that Committee and of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;

31. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, under the item entitled "Human rights questions", a report on the status of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, including all reservations and declarations.

Convention against racial discrimination

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2106 A (XX) [YUN 1965, p. 440], increased to 169, with ratification by Paraguay and accession by Oman, Thailand and Timor-Leste.

On 23 April [res. 2003/30], by a recorded vote of 38 to 1, with 13 abstentions, the Commission urged States that had not done so to accede to or ratify the Convention, make the declaration provided for in article 14 (see p. 674) and ratify the amendment to article 8 on CERD financing (see p. 674).

The Assembly, on 22 December, urged States that had not become parties to ratify or accede to the Convention with a view to achieving universal ratification by 2005 (resolution 58/160) (p. 699).

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD), established under article 8 of the Convention, held its sixty-second and sixty-third sessions, both in Geneva, from 3 to 31 March and from 4 to 22 August, respectively [A/58/18].

The Committee considered reports submitted by Albania, Bolivia, Cape Verde, Côte d'Ivoire, the Czech Republic, Ecuador, Fiji, Finland, Ghana, Iran, Latvia, Morocco, Norway, Poland, the Republic of Korea, the Russian Federation, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Slovenia, Tunisia, Uganda and the United Kingdom. The Committee reviewed the Convention's implementation by Malawi based on a variety of material at its disposal and by Papua New Guinea. It decided that, in the absence of any indication of compliance on the part of Papua New Guinea, it would consider the State party's implementation in 2004.

Under article 14 of the Convention, CERD considered communications from individuals or groups of individuals claiming violation by a State party of their rights enumerated in the Convention. Forty-three States parties had recognized CERD's competence to do so (Algeria, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Chile, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Malta, Mexico, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Ukraine, Uruguay).

Pursuant to article 15, the Committee was empowered to consider petitions, reports and other information relating to Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories. It noted additional information contained in the working papers on Bermuda and the United States Virgin Islands on two cases of racial discrimination in the two Territories; and information on the United Kingdom's plans to introduce a human rights chapter in the constitutions of the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands and St. Helena. The Committee noted, as it had in the past, the difficulty in fulfilling its functions because the documents did not include petitions and contained scant information directly related to the Convention's principles and objectives.

CERD considered follow-up to the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615] and the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1993-2003) (see p. 696), proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 48/91 [YUN 1993, p. 853].

A 10 March statement of the Committee, drawing the attention of the international community to the devastating effects of any resort to war, called on the Security Council and the international community to find a peaceful solution to the current crisis of compliance with the international legal order that was binding upon all. On 13 August [dec. 3(63)], the Committee, noting that, as at that date, only 37 States parties had ratified the amendment to article 8 regarding the financing of CERD [YUN 1992, p. 714], decided to address an urgent appeal to all States parties to ratify the amendment. The Secretary-General was requested to bring the Committee's decision to the attention of all States parties. In a 14 August decision [dec. 2(63)], CERD expressed concern about Israel's Temporary Suspension Order of May 2002, enacted into law as the Nationality and Entry into Israel Law (Temporary Order) on 31 July 2003, which suspended the possibility of family reunification, subject to limited and discretionary exceptions. The Nationality and Entry into Israel Law of 31 July raised serious issues under the Convention and should be revoked by Israel, which should reconsider its policy with a view to facilitating family unification on a non-discriminatory basis. CERD, on 21 August [dec. 1(63)], taking note of information it had received on the human rights situation in the Lao People's Democratic Republic, urged the State party to halt immediately acts of violence against members of the Hmong population, called on it to ensure they had freedom of movement and access to adequate food and medical care, requested it to release the Hmong assistants who contributed to a report of two foreign journalists on the Hmong situation, given that the journalists had been released, and called on the authorities to submit a special report on those matters and measures to prevent racial discrimination. The Secretary-General was asked to draw the attention of UN bodies to the human rights situation in the country and to request them to take appropriate measures, including the dispatch of a mission.

On 22 December, the General Assembly took note of the Committee's report (decision 58/535).

Convention against torture

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, 134 States were parties to the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813]. The Congo and Timor-Leste acceded to the Convention during the year. The Optional Protocol to the Convention, which was adopted in resolution 57/199 [YUN 2002, p. 631] and opened for signature on 4 February, had 21 signatories and three States parties (Albania, Malta, United Kingdom). The Protocol would enter into force 30 days following the deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession. As at 10 December, 50 parties had made the required declarations under articles 21 and 22 (under which a party recognized the competence of the Committee against Torture to receive and consider communications to the effect that a party claimed that another was not fulfilling its obligations under the Convention, and to receive communications from or on behalf of individuals who claimed to be victims of a violation of the Convention by a State party) and four had made the declaration only under article 21, bringing the total of declarations under that article to 54; five parties had made the declaration only under article 22, bringing the total of declarations under that article to 55. Amendments to articles 17 and 18, adopted in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 735], had been accepted by 25 parties at year's end.

On 23 April [res. 2003/32], the Commission urged States to become parties to the Convention and to limit the extent of their reservations. All ratifying or acceding States were invited to make the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 and to consider withdrawing their reservations to article 20.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention, its Optional Protocol and declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 as at 22 August [A/58/326] and 10 December [E/CN.4/2004/52]. On 22 December, the Assembly took note of the former report (decision 58/537).

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee against Torture, established as a monitoring body under the Convention, held its thirtieth and thirty-first sessions in Geneva from 28 April to 16 May [A/58/44] and from 10 to 21 November [A/59/44], respectively. Under article 19, it considered reports submitted by Azerbaijan, Belgium, Cambodia, Cameroon, Colombia, Iceland, Latvia, Lithuania, Morocco, the Republic of Moldova, Slovenia, Turkey and Yemen.

In accordance with article 20, the Committee studied reliable information it received that contained well-founded indications that torture was systematically practised in a State party. Under those provisions, the Committee, after consultations with the State party concerned, decided to include in its April/May report a summary account of the results of proceedings, begun in 1998, in connection with Mexico. Under article 22, the Committee considered communications submitted by individuals who claimed that their rights, as enumerated in the Convention, had been violated by a State party and who had exhausted all available domestic remedies.

A working group met (24-25 April) to discuss matters relating to the adoption of the Optional Protocol to the Convention, contained in General Assembly resolution 57/199 [YUN 2002, p. 631], and adopted a statement and guidelines regarding general issues, the composition and meetings of the Subcommittee on Prevention—the Protocol's future supervisory body—and areas of coordination between the Committee and the Subcommittee.

Convention on elimination of discrimination against women and Optional Protocol

(For details on the status of the Convention and on the Optional Protocol, see p. 1190.)

Convention on the Rights of the Child

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, the number of States parties to the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 560], rose to 192 with the accession of Timor-Leste. Sixty-seven States were parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the involvement of children in armed conflict, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 54/263 [YUN 2000, p. 615], with ratification during the year by Belize, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Chile, Costa Rica, France, Greece, Kazakhstan, Lesotho, Lithuania, Norway, the Philippines, Portugal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sweden, Tunisia, the United Kingdom, Uruguay and Venezuela, and accession by Afghanistan, Kyrgyzstan and the Syrian Arab Republic. The Optional Protocol to the Convention on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, also adopted by resolution 54/263, had 69 States parties, with ratification in 2003 by Argentina, Belize, Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Denmark, France, Lesotho, Mongolia, Paraguay, Portugal, Senegal, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Ukraine and Uruguay, and accession by Botswana, Equatorial Guinea, Kyrgyzstan, Mozambique, South Africa, the Syrian Arab Republic, Timor-Leste and the United Republic of Tanzania.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention and Optional Protocols as at 2 July [A/58/282], 20 November [E/CN.4/2003/76] and 12 December [E/CN.4/2004/67].

In accordance with an amendment to the Convention, approved by the Assembly in resolution 50/155 [YUN 1995, p. 706] and which entered into force in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 638], the membership of the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC) was expanded from 10 to 18. New Committee members were elected at the Ninth Meeting of States parties (New York, 10 February). As at 31 December 2003, the amendment had been accepted by 137 States parties.

On 25 April [res. 2003/86], the Commission urged States that had not done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention and the Optional Protocols, and to strengthen cooperation with CRC. The Secretary-General was requested to report on the Convention's status in 2004.

On 22 December, the Assembly urged States that had not done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention and the Optional Protocols, and called on them to ensure that the rights set forth in the Convention were respected without discrimination (resolution 58/157) (see p. 781).

Implementation

In 2003, CRC held its thirty-second (13-31 January) [CRC/C/124], thirty-third (19 May-6 June) [CRC/C/132] and thirty-fourth (15 September-3 October) [CRC/C/133] sessions, all in Geneva. Each session was preceded by a working group meeting to review State party reports and identify the main questions to be discussed with representatives of the reporting States. The sessions also considered technical assistance and international cooperation.

Under article 44 of the Convention, CRC considered initial or periodic reports submitted by Bangladesh, Brunei Darussalam, Canada, Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Estonia, Georgia, Haiti, Iceland, Italy, Jamaica, Kazakhstan, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Morocco, New Zealand, Pakistan, the Republic of Korea, Romania, San Marino, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Sri Lanka, the Syrian Arab Republic, Viet Nam and Zambia.

The Committee adopted general comments on HIV/AIDS and the rights of children (30 January); on adolescent health and development in the context of the Convention (5 June); and on general measures of implementation for the Convention (3 October).

On 19 September, the Committee held a day of general discussion on the rights of indigenous children.

OHCHR convened a workshop (Damascus, Syrian Arab Republic, 17-19 December) on the implementation of the concluding observations of CRC.

Convention on migrant workers

Accessions and ratifications

The International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 45/158 [YUN 1990, p. 594], entered into force on 1 July, following the deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession. As at 31 December, there were 24 States parties to the Convention, with ratification during the year by Burkina Faso, El Salvador and Guatemala, and accession by Kyrgyzstan and Mali.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 10 June [A/58/221] and 15 December [E/CN.4/2004/73].

On 23 April [res. 2003/48], the Commission called on States that had not done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention. It asked the Secretary-General to convene the initial meeting of States parties to the Convention and to make provisions for the establishment of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (see p. 677). He was also asked to assist the active promotion of the Convention, through the World Public Information Campaign (see p. 686) and the programme of advisory services and technical cooperation (see p. 678); and to report in 2004 on the Convention's status and on efforts made by the Secretariat to promote the Convention and protect migrant workers' rights.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.1 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/166 without vote [agenda item 117 (a)].

International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families

The General Assembly,

Guided by the basic instruments regarding the international protection of human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and reaffirming the obligation of States to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Bearing in mind the principles and norms established within the framework of the International Labour Organization and the importance of the work done in connection with migrant workers and members of their families in other specialized agencies and in various organs of the United Nations,

Recalling that, despite the existence of an already established body of principles and norms, there is an urgent need to make further efforts worldwide to improve the situation and to guarantee respect for the human rights and dignity of all migrant workers and members of their families,

Conscious of the marked increase in migratory movements that has occurred, especially in certain parts of the world,

Deeply concerned at the grave situation of vulnerability of migrant workers and members of their families,

Considering that, in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, all States are urged to guarantee the protection of the human rights of all migrant workers and members of their families,

Underlining the importance of the creation and promotion of conditions to foster greater harmony and tolerance between migrant workers and the rest of the society of the State in which they reside, with the aim of eliminating the growing manifestations of racism and xenophobia directed against migrant workers by individuals or groups in segments of many societies,

Recalling its resolution 45/158 of 18 December 1990, by which it adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families,

Bearing in mind that, in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, States are invited to consider the possibility of signing and ratifying the Convention at the earliest possible time,

1. Acknowledges with appreciation the entry into force of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families on 1 July 2003;

2. Expresses its deep concern at the growing manifestations of racism, xenophobia and other forms of discrimination and inhuman or degrading treatment directed against migrant workers in various parts of the world;

3. Welcomes the signature or ratification of or accession to the Convention by some States, and takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the status of the Convention;

4. Calls once again upon all Member States that have not yet ratified the Convention to consider urgently signing and ratifying or acceding to it;

5. Takes note of the arrangements for the initial meeting of States parties to the Convention, held on 11 December 2003;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to make all necessary provisions for the timely establishment of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, referred to in article 72 of the Convention;

7. Calls upon States parties to the Convention to submit in a timely manner their first periodic report, as requested in article 73 of the Convention;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all the facilities and assistance necessary for the promotion of the Convention through the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights and the programme of advisory services in the field of human rights;

9. Welcomes the increasing activities of the global campaign for the entry into force of the Convention, and invites the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to intensify further their efforts with a view to disseminating information on and promoting understanding of the importance of the Convention;

10. Also welcomes the work of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the human rights of migrants in relation to the Convention, and encourages her to persevere in that endeavour;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit an updated report on the status of the Convention to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

12. Decides to consider the report of the Secretary-General at its fifty-ninth session under the sub-item entitled "Implementation of human rights instruments".

Implementation

The first Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention (New York, 11 December) [CMW/SP/2] considered the curricula vitae of nominations for membership to the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and procedural issues regarding the Committee [CMW/SP/3].

Convention on genocide

As at 31 December, 135 States were parties to the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959]. During the year, the Sudan acceded to the Convention.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/66], the Commission invited States that had not ratified or acceded to the Convention to do so and, where necessary, to enact national legislation in conformity with the Convention's provisions. The Secretariat and relevant UN organs and agencies were asked to disseminate the Convention widely.

Other activities

Follow-up to 1993 World Conference

Report of High Commissioner. In a February report [E/CN.4/2003/14] on follow-up to the World Conference on Human Rights [YUN 1993, p. 908], the High Commissioner presented the pressing challenges of protection, advancing human dignity, equality and security, and encouraging human rights protection through the rule of law. He said human rights must be integrated in efforts towards conflict prevention, peace-making, peacekeeping, peace-building, development and humanitarian operations.

Annual meeting. In August, the High Commissioner transmitted the report of the tenth meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, experts and chairpersons of working groups of the Commission's special procedures and advisory services programme (Geneva, 23-27 June) [E/CN.4/2004/4]. Participants discussed measures to enhance effectiveness in accordance with the Secretary-General's reform agenda (see p. 1383), the challenges that the current international climate and the fight against terrorism posed for human rights promotion and protection, globalization and ways of improving cooperation with the Commission, human rights treaty bodies and NGOs. They recommended that efforts be made to improve links between their mandates and the Secretariat, particularly with the Secretary-General, and to improve cooperation with UN country teams. It was felt that more needed to be done by all partners to disseminate information about the work of special rapporteurs. The participants issued a joint statement voicing their concern at the multiplication of policies, legislation and practices adopted by many countries in the name of the fight against terrorism, which negatively affected the enjoyment of human rights.

Tenth anniversary

On the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action at the World Conference on Human Rights, the Foreign Minister of Austria and the High Commissioner, in cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, convened an international symposium on the role of judges in the promotion and protection of human rights (Vienna, 24 November) [E/CN.4/2004/G/26].

On 10 December, Human Rights Day, the General Assembly held a plenary meeting [A/58/PV.73] to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the Vienna Declaration and the fifty-fifth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by Assembly resolution 217 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 535]. During the meeting, the Assembly awarded the UN prizes in the field of human rights for 2003 to four individuals and two organizations that had made outstanding contributions to the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms. (See p. 669 for the recipients' names.)

The Assembly, on 22 December, took note of the Third Committee's report [A/58/508/Add.4] on the implementation of and follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (decision 58/540). The Assembly decided, on 23 December, that the item "Comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action" would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

Advisory services and technical cooperation

A report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2004/99] described the OHCHR technical cooperation programme, which supported countries in promoting and protecting human rights, at their request, by providing assistance for incorporating international human rights standards in national laws, policies and practices or by strengthening national capacities to implement the standards and ensure respect for human rights and the rule of law. The programme offered assistance for constitutional and legislative reform, the administration of justice, national parliaments, national human rights institutions, national plans of action, human rights education and awareness raising, and treaty reporting. As at November, there were 37 ongoing projects.

During the year, OHCHR had technical cooperation offices in Azerbaijan, Croatia, El Salvador, Guatemala, Mexico, Solomon Islands, Somalia, the Sudan and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, as well as Palestine; OHCHR field presences, combining a monitoring and a technical cooperation mandate, were operating in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Cambodia, Colombia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Serbia and Montenegro; support to UN peace missions was provided to Afghanistan, Angola, the Central African Republic, Côte d'Ivoire, Georgia (Abkhazia), Guinea-Bissau, Iraq, Liberia, Sierra Leone, Tajikistan and Timor-Leste; and human rights advisers were deployed in Mongolia, Nepal and Sri Lanka. The Assisting Communities Together (ACT) project, jointly carried out with UNDP, aimed to provide financial support to human rights initiatives taken by NGOs. OHCHR, in partnership with UNDP, launched in October the fourth phase of the ACT project, expected to be completed by the end of 2004, during which some 150 activities would be supported.

Technical cooperation activities were funded mainly by the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights and partly from the UN regular budget. The Fund's Board of Trustees, at its nineteenth (28-30 July) and twentieth (20-22 November) sessions, reviewed the programme's regional activities, discussed thematic issues, methodologies and procedures, and examined financial and administrative matters. In November, the Board held a one-day joint meeting with the heads of OHCHR field presences. Expenditures rose from $8.8 million in the 2000-2001 biennium to $19.3 million in 2002-2003. The dramatic rise was made possible by the balance carried over from previous years and not by a parallel increase in contributions, which amounted to only $15.7 million for the biennium. During 2003, a very limited carry-over and late arrival of contributions seriously affected the implementation of the programme in the first quarter of the year and obliged OHCHR to suspend all new projects. The Fund's income in 2002-2003 amounted to $27.3 million for 2003; as at 30 November, commitments totalled $21.8 million, leaving a balance of $5.5 million.

OHCHR undertook a global review of the programme to improve future interventions with a view to a more strategic approach to the programme. The authors of the review made several recommendations. A synthesis report of the review entitled "From development of human rights to managing human rights development" was available on the Internet.

Afghanistan

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/77], the Commission, welcoming positive human rights developments in Afghanistan, noted with concern reports of violence perpetrated by Afghan elements against certain ethnic groups, internally displaced persons and refugees, as well as cases of arbitrary detention and attacks against women and girls. It requested the Secretary-General to ensure that the post of senior gender adviser in the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan was filled immediately and on a permanent basis. He was also asked to appoint an independent expert for one year to develop advisory services to ensure human rights protection and the promotion of the rule of law, and to receive information about and report on the human rights situation in the country. That request was approved by the Economic and Social Council on 23 July (decision 2003/257). The independent expert was requested to report to the General Assembly and the Commission. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women was asked to review the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan (see p. 779) and to report to those bodies.

Note by Secretary-General. In an August note [A/58/334], the Secretary-General said the independent expert had not been appointed. The Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note on 22 December (decision 58/539).

(For details of the visit to Afghanistan by the Special Rapporteur on the right to adequate housing and of the report by the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, see pp. 768 and 779, respectively.)

Cambodia

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/79], the Commission, noting with concern the continued problems related to the rule of law and the functioning of the judiciary in Cambodia, urged the Government to expedite legal and judicial reform and to ensure the independence, impartiality and effectiveness of the judicial system. It also urged the Government to tackle the problems related to land, to work towards free and fair general elections in July 2003, to investigate past incidents of intimidation, violence and killings, and reports of vote-buying, and to prosecute those responsible. Expressing concern about the continued human rights violations, including torture, excessive pre-trial detention, violation of labour rights and forced evictions, as well as political violence, it urged the Government to prevent the violations and racial violence against ethnic groups, and to combat all forms of discrimination. The Commission welcomed efforts to improve the status of women, impede the spread of HIV/AIDS, remove landmines and reduce small arms, draft a penal code, a code on criminal procedures, a civil code and a code on civil procedures, and increase judges' and prosecutors' salaries. The Commission requested the Secretary-General to report in 2004.

Reports of Special Representative. An August note of the Secretary-General [A/58/317] transmitted the report of his Special Representative for human rights in Cambodia, Peter Leuprecht (Austria), based on his visits to the country (25 February-4 March; 30 June-8 July). He said that on 27 July, Cambodia held its third National Assembly elections, which marked an important step in efforts to establish a multiparty democracy. There was a significant improvement in the technical aspects of election administration, the month-long campaign period allowed for more freedom of political expression and polling was conducted peacefully. However, the establishment of a level playing field for all political parties and a transparent electoral process encountered obstacles. Prior to the official campaign period, arbitrary restrictions were placed on freedoms of assembly and expression, and there was considerable intimidation, which continued throughout the campaign. In confronting electoral fraud, vote-buying, intimidation and violence, the National Election Committee failed to impose fines and other sanctions. Law enforcement remained a continuing problem, as did land issues, which remained a source of conflict and of human rights violations. Many difficulties persisted in the delivery of the right to housing, such as forced evictions and the lack of adequate shelter for displaced Cambodians. An agreement was signed in Phnom Penh on 6 June between the United Nations and the Government regarding the prosecution under Cambodian law of crimes committed during the period of Democratic Kampuchea. The Special Representative recommended measures to the Government to improve the justice sector and accountability, the administration of criminal justice and land issues.

During a further visit to Cambodia (27 November–6 December) [E/CN.4/2004/105], the Special Representative focused on the general political climate in the wake of the elections and on the political deadlock that followed, and the impact of natural resources policies and practices on human rights. The problems of continuing restrictions on freedoms of expression, assembly and association; corruption; a weak judiciary; and impunity remained. Mob violence continued and possibly increased. Imprisonment remained the routine punishment for most crimes, even very minor ones. Poor prison facilities and inadequate food and clean water represented a significant threat to the health of inmates. Access to prisoners by lawyers, human rights groups and NGOs was difficult. Detainees were frequently subjected to excessive pre-trial detention, were convicted without legal representation and were denied the right to appeal. The Government's policy of granting large-scale agricultural and forestry concessions to private interests in a non-transparent manner continued to represent a serious threat to the rural poor. High spending on health care was one of the main reasons for impoverishment and debt accumulation. The Special Representative made recommendations regarding the conduct of future elections, legal and judicial reform, mob killings, prison sentencing and conditions, land and forestry issues, health care, policies towards economic development and poverty reduction, and access to information about human rights, land rights, contract procedures and the law in general.

OHCHR/Cambodia

Reports of the Secretary-General covered the role and achievements of OHCHR in assisting the Government and people of Cambodia in human rights promotion and protection from January to July [A/58/268] and from July to December [E/CN.4/2004/104].

In connection with the National Assembly elections of 27 July, OHCHR/Cambodia provided technical assistance to the Government in drafting electoral laws and regulations; protection activities associated with human rights violations in the context of the elections; and information to the Government and the international community on the political climate and electoral matters. It worked with local NGOs conducting election-related human rights monitoring and assisted in the preparation of public reports issued by the Special Representative. The Office embarked on a study to identify the effects of large-scale agricultural plantations on the human rights of populations living within or close to their boundaries, and the extent to which they had contributed to the development and well-being of the Cambodian people. It continued to contribute to the legislative process and efforts to advance judicial reform, was active in implementing education and advisory services programmes, cooperated with and supported NGOs, and participated in UN and donor coordinating mechanisms relevant to human rights and rule-of-law issues.

In October and November, an external evaluation of the Office was undertaken to assess the impact and relevance of its programmes, major human rights protection and promotion issues, possible developments as a result of the National Assembly election and the complementarity of the Office's programme with other UN activities. The evaluation concluded that the Office represented a positive commitment of the international community to Cambodia, and that its continued existence was essential for fostering respect for human rights.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/191 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Situation of human rights in Cambodia

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 57/225 and 57/228 A of 18 December 2002 and 57/228 B of 13 May 2003, Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/79 of 25 April 2003 and previous relevant resolutions,

Recalling also the decision of the Commission on Human Rights, in its resolution 2003/79, to request a report to the Commission at its sixtieth session on the role and achievements of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in assisting the Government and the people of Cambodia, and to continue its consideration of the situation of human rights in Cambodia at its sixtieth session.

Recognizing that the tragic history of Cambodia requires special measures to ensure the protection of the human rights of all people in Cambodia and the non-return to the policies and practices of the past, as stipulated in the Agreement on a Comprehensive Political Settlement of the Cambodia Conflict, signed in Paris on 23 October 1991,

I

Support of and cooperation with the United Nations

1. Requests the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative for human rights in Cambodia, in collaboration with the office in Cambodia of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, to assist the Government of Cambodia in ensuring the protection of the human rights of all people in Cambodia and to ensure adequate resources for the continued functioning of the operational presence of the office and to enable the Special Representative to continue to fulfil his tasks expeditiously;

2. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the role and achievements of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in assisting the Government and the people of Cambodia in the promotion and protection of human rights, the report of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for human rights in Cambodia and the use of the United Nations Trust Fund for a Human Rights Education Programme in Cambodia to finance the programme of activities of the office in Cambodia, and invites the international community to consider contributing to the Trust Fund;

3. Encourages the Government of Cambodia to continue to cooperate with the office and other agencies of the United Nations system in their joint efforts to promote human rights and to implement in full their obligations under international human rights treaties and instruments;

II

The role of non-governmental organizations

Commends the vital role played by non-governmental organizations in Cambodia, inter alia, in human rights education and training and in the development of civil society, and encourages the Government of Cambodia to continue to ensure the protection of those human rights organizations and their members and to continue to work closely and cooperatively with them;

III

Administrative, legislative and judicial reform

1. Welcomes the progress achieved by the Government of Cambodia in the administration of national elections in July 2003, inter alia, in a generally free and peaceful atmosphere and in improved access for political parties to the public service media, and urges the Government to investigate fully incidents of intimidation, violence, killings and vote-buying, to prosecute those responsible, to strengthen the enforcement capacity and independence of the National Election Committee and to build on the improvements achieved so as to further consolidate the process of democratization;

2. Notes with concern the continued problems relating to the rule of law and the functioning of the judiciary resulting from, inter alia, corruption and interference by the executive with the independence of the judiciary, urges the Government of Cambodia, as a matter of priority, to expedite the implementation of legal and judicial reform, including finalization without further delay of the adoption of the laws and codes that are essential components of the basic legal framework, in particular a law on the organization and functioning of adjudicate courts, and to ensure the independence, impartiality and effectiveness of the Supreme Council of the Magistracy and of the judicial system as a whole;

3. Welcomes the drafts of the civil code, code of civil procedure, penal code, code of criminal procedure, anti-corruption law, law on the status of judges and prosecutors (statute of magistracy), draft law to amend the Law on the Organization and Functioning of the Supreme Council of the Magistracy, strategy for legal and judicial reform and action plan for its implementation, urges the Government of Cambodia to continue to enhance the training of judges and lawyers through the Royal School for Training Judges and Prosecutors and the Centre for Lawyer Training and Legal Professional Improvement of the Bar Association of the Kingdom of Cambodia, and encourages the Government to provide access to justice for all and establish a legal aid scheme appropriate for Cambodia;

4. Also welcomes the adoption of the Sub-Decree on Land Concessions for Social Purposes, and urges the Government of Cambodia to strengthen its efforts to tackle the problems related to land rights by, inter alia, adopting the sub-decrees on land concessions for economic purposes and on procedures for the reduction of and specific exemptions from the land concessions that exceed 10,000 hectares, enhancing transparency and giving high priority to the land management and administration reform project, and to continue to undertake a review of land concession contracts and their implementation, and notes with concern the remaining problems of land-grabbing, forced evictions and further displacement;

5. Encourages further efforts by the Government of Cambodia to implement expeditiously and effectively its reform programme, including the Governance Action Plan and police and military reforms, inter alia, the demobilization programme;

6. Welcomes the progress made by the Government of Cambodia to eradicate anti-personnel landmines and to reduce the number of small arms in Cambodia, and encourages the continuing efforts of the Government and the international community to tackle these issues;

7. Expresses serious concern about the fact that the situation of impunity still exists in Cambodia, recognizes efforts and actions by the Government of Cambodia to prosecute perpetrators of violations, and calls upon the Government, as a matter of critical priority, to increase its efforts to investigate urgently and to prosecute, in accordance with due process of law and international human rights standards, all those who have perpetrated serious crimes, including violations of human rights;

8. Notes with serious concern the prison conditions in Cambodia, notes with interest some important efforts to improve the prison system, recommends the continuation of international assistance to improve the material conditions of detention, and calls upon the Government of Cambodia to take further measures to improve the conditions of detention, including reviewing sentencing policy and developing non-custodial options as an alternative to imprisonment, to prevent any form of torture, to provide proper food and health care to prisoners and detainees, to meet the special needs of women and children and to restore access to prisons and inmates for lawyers, family members and human rights organizations in accordance with relevant regulations in force;

IV

Human rights violations and violence

1. Expresses grave concern about the continued violations of human rights, including torture, excessive pre-trial detention, violation of labour rights, forced evictions and political violence, including the killings of political activists, involvement by police and military personnel in violence and the apparent lack of protection from mob killings, notes that some progress has been made by the Government of Cambodia in addressing these issues, and urges the Government to take all necessary measures to prevent such violations, including to consider establishing a board of inquiry on the issue of mob killings;

2. Urges the Government of Cambodia to take all steps to combat discrimination in all its manifestations and prevent violence against members of any racial or ethnic group and to protect the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all persons, as well as to meet its obligations as a party to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, inter alia, by seeking technical assistance;

V

Khmer Rouge Tribunal

1. Reaffirms that the most serious human rights violations in Cambodia in recent history have been committed by the Khmer Rouge, and acknowledges that the final collapse of the Khmer Rouge and the continued efforts of the Government of Cambodia have provided the basis for the restoration of peace and stability with the aim of achieving national reconciliation in Cambodia and the investigation and prosecution of senior leaders of Democratic Kampuchea and those who were most responsible for the crimes and serious violations of Cambodian penal law, international humanitarian law and custom and international conventions recognized by Cambodia that were committed during the period from 17 April 1975 to 6 January 1979;

2. Welcomes the Agreement reached on 6 June 2003 between the United Nations and the Government of Cambodia to set up Extraordinary Chambers exercising their jurisdiction in accordance with international standards of justice, fairness and due process as set out in article 12 of the Agreement, urges the Secretary-General and the Government of Cambodia to take all the measures necessary for the early establishment of the Extraordinary Chambers, and appeals to the international community to provide assistance, including financial and personnel support to the Extraordinary Chambers, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/228 B;

VI

Protection of women and children

1. Welcomes the efforts and progress made to improve the status of women, including on the draft law on prevention of domestic violence and protection of victims of domestic violence, and urges the Government of Cambodia to take further measures to combat violence against women in all its forms, inter alia, sexual violence, and to take all steps to meet its obligations as a party to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, inter alia, by seeking technical assistance;

2. Commends the Government of Cambodia for its efforts to impede the spread of HIV/AIDS, and encourages it to continue to focus on the problem;

3. Welcomes the series of efforts made by the Government of Cambodia to combat human trafficking, including on the draft anti-trafficking law, while noting with serious concern the growth of human trafficking and sexual exploitation of women and children internationally, and requests the Government and the international community to strengthen their concerted efforts to address these problems comprehensively;

4. Notes with serious concern the problem of child labour in its worst forms, calls upon the Government of Cambodia to take immediate and effective measures to protect children from economic exploitation and from performing any work that is likely to be hazardous, to interfere with their education or to be harmful to their health, safety or morals, by enforcing Cambodian laws on child labour, the existing labour law and anti-trafficking law provisions on behalf of children, and by prosecuting those who violate these laws, invites the International Labour Organization to continue to extend the necessary assistance in this regard, and encourages the Government to consider ratifying the International Labour Organization Convention concerning the Prohibition and Immediate Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour, 1999 (Convention No. 182);

5. Welcomes the increased budget allocation in the areas of education and health, and encourages their timely disbursement and the efforts of the Government of Cambodia to improve further the health conditions of children and their access to education, to promote free and accessible birth registration and to establish a juvenile justice system;

VII

Conclusion

Invites the international community to assist the Government of Cambodia in its efforts to implement the present resolution.

(For information on the Khmer Rouge trials, see p. 385.)

Chad

On 2 April [dec. 2003/104], the Commission decided to discontinue consideration of the human rights situation in Chad under the confidential procedure governed by Economic and Social Council resolution 1503(XLVIII) [YUN 1970, p. 530] and revised by Council resolution 2000/3 [YUN 2000, p. 596], and to consider the matter under the Commission's public procedure.

On 25 April [res. 2003/81], the Commission asked the High Commissioner, in consultation with the Government of Chad, to develop a programme of human rights technical assistance and advisory services.

Haiti

Commission action. On 25 April [E/2003/23], the Commission Chairperson expressed the Commission's deep concern about the deteriorating human rights situation in Haiti and invited the Haitian authorities and the international community to press forward with their initiatives to promote democracy. The Commission urged the Government to continue and to step up efforts to combat impunity, to strengthen the rule of law, to safeguard democratic pluralism, to ensure the independence of the judiciary and to protect political leaders, journalists, trade union activists and human rights defenders. It strongly urged the application of the measures identified by a high-level delegation of the group of friendly countries during its visit on 19 and 20 March. OHCHR was requested to expand its activities by setting up an office in the country.

Report of independent expert. Independent expert Louis Joinet (France) visited Haiti (9-15 April and 23 October-5 November) [E/CN.4/2004/108] where he focused on the effects of impunity on the human rights situation, the shortcomings of the police force and the malfunctioning of the justice system, the steady deterioration of the systems of popular organizations and the need for further cooperation in technical assistance and human rights, including the establishment of an OHCHR branch office. In addition to recommending such an office, the expert proposed reforms in the justice system and in the police force, finalization of the statute and regulations of the Institute of Forensic Medicine, and strengthening cooperation with NGOs.

Liberia

On 2 April [dec. 2003/105], the Commission decided to discontinue consideration of the human rights situation in Liberia under the confidential procedure governed by Economic and Social Council resolution 1503(XLVIII) [YUN 1970, p. 530] and revised by Council resolution 2000/3 [YUN 2000, p. 596], and to consider the matter under the Commission's public procedure. It recommended the appointment of an independent expert and that the Council make public the independent expert's report. The Government was invited to ensure the functioning of its human rights mechanisms and to improve respect for human rights. The Council, on 23 July, took note of the decision and endorsed the recommendation to make public the expert's report (decision 2003/263).

On 25 April [res. 2003/82], the Commission decided to appoint an independent expert for a three-year period, a decision endorsed by the Council on 23 July (decision 2003/260). The Commission asked the expert to visit Liberia and to report in 2004. In July, Charlotte Abaka (Ghana) was reappointed independent expert.

Report of High Commissioner. In an August report to the Commission [E/CN.4/2004/5], the High Commissioner said that since January the armed conflict in Liberia had intensified (see p. 184). Both government and rebel troops were committing human rights abuses and violating international humanitarian law. Violations included denial of the right to life, arbitrary and summary executions, torture, enforced and involuntary disappearances, violence against women, violations of children's rights, forced recruitment, displacement and the denial of humanitarian access. The poor security situation, restricted access and limited UN presence had made direct monitoring of the human rights situation impossible. Information had been obtained predominantly through interviews with refugees and internally displaced persons. The High Commissioner said a human rights assessment mission should be deployed and a UN presence re-established when the security situation permitted. National institutions should be established to address human rights violations and to respond to challenges in human rights promotion and protection. In the long term, direct monitoring of the situation of displaced persons in camps, through the UN presence and the UNDP protection strategy, should be expanded.

Reports of independent expert. In September [E/CN.4/2004/8], the Secretariat, as suggested by the Commission [dec. 2003/105] and endorsed by the Council (decision 2003/263), made public a confidential report of the expert covering the human rights situation in Liberia based on her visit to the country (16-21 December 2002). According to the information she received, the Government had done little to prevent human rights violations and had not brought the perpetrators to justice. Concerns about the independence and impartiality of the judiciary were also reported. Serious human rights violations, including restrictions on freedom of expression, arbitrary arrests and detention, torture and ill-treatment, occurred. An estimated 14,000 child soldiers had reportedly participated in the Liberian civil war from 1990 to 1997, and the practice had re-emerged since the outbreak of the current conflict in 1999. The instability in the country had resulted in a protracted humanitarian crisis in which nearly one quarter of the population was dependent on humanitarian aid. The expert concluded that a comprehensive solution should be sought addressing all aspects and root causes of the conflict, taking into consideration the overall situation in the Mano River region, and made a series of recommendations for human rights promotion and protection in Liberia.

In a later report [E/CN.4/2004/113], the expert stated that the conflict intensified as from January and was accompanied by increased human rights abuses, including the denial of the fundamental right to life, extrajudicial and arbitrary executions, torture, violence against women, rape, forced recruitment and denial of humanitarian access. The expert described peace initiatives, including the signing in August of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement by the Liberian parties and the institution of the National Transitional Government (see p. 192). She made recommendations regarding the protection of civilians; the establishment of an independent national commission on human rights, a truth and reconciliation commission and an independent electoral commission; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration; the mobilization of resources to assist the National Transitional Government to implement relief and recovery programmes; and the security situation.

Sierra Leone

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/80], the Commission, welcoming the work of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, the National Commission on Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration, and the National Commission for War-Affected Children, and steps taken by the Government and civil society to build the human rights infrastructure in the country, expressed deep concern about the number of girls and women held against their will by former combatants, continuing reports of trafficking and illegal supply of small arms and related material, reports of the use of children in diamond-mining activities and the humanitarian situation caused by ongoing violence in border regions. It requested: the High Commissioner and the international community to continue to assist the Government to maintain the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, and to cooperate with the Special Court; the international community to participate in strengthening the judicial system and in establishing a national human rights commission; the Secretary-General to facilitate the activities of the Special Court (see p. 213); the High Commissioner and the international community to make further assistance available to the Special Court and the Truth and Reconciliation Commission; and the High Commissioner to report to the General Assembly in 2003 and to the Commission in 2004. On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's request to the High Commissioner to submit reports (decision 2003/259).

Reports of High Commissioner. A September report of the High Commissioner [A/58/379], covering events through early August, stated that the human rights situation in Sierra Leone had improved significantly. Government authority had been re-established nationwide, the judicial system and courts were gradually being restored, and magistrate courts and police formations had almost reached the pre-war levels of deployment. Progress in the implementation of the peace process had been complemented by efforts to address war-related violations of human rights and international humanitarian law. The Truth and Reconciliation Commission was in the final phase of its operational period, and the Special Court had issued a series of indictments. Despite the progress, structural deficiencies linked to the recent history of abuses and violations stymied the emergence of a society based on the rule of law. Human rights challenges included addressing impunity for past abuses and preventing and addressing ongoing violations while building local capacities to protect and promote human rights.

The General Assembly took note of the report on 22 December (decision 58/539).

In a later report [E/CN.4/2004/106], the High Commissioner noted that the consolidation of the human rights situation in the area of civil and political rights continued to be a source of encouragement. However, some problems remained, such as the 14 death sentences passed in 2003 and the continuing illegal detention of some 90 members of the Revolutionary United Front and the West Side Boys (see p. 212), who were arrested in 2000. Remarkable progress in the implementation of the peace process had been accompanied by parallel accomplishments in the area of transitional justice. On 10 March, the Special Court issued its first set of indictments against seven persons accused of war crimes, crimes against humanity and other violations of international law. Attacks against civilians by any of the former parties to the conflict had ceased to be an issue. Child abuse remained widespread, female genital mutilation was still widely practised and sexual violence against girls and women was frequently unreported. Progress in terms of economic, social and cultural rights remained bleak, with high rates of child malnourishment, maternal mortality, illiteracy and poverty. The High Commissioner described the activities of the Human Rights Section of the United Nations Mission in Sierra Leone (UNAMSIL) in monitoring the courts, police stations and prisons; training activities; capacity-building, technical cooperation and advocacy; and technical support to the Government in preparation for the establishment of a national human rights commission. The High Commissioner called for a post-UNAMSIL residual UN presence with a substantial human rights component for monitoring human rights and providing technical cooperation and advisory services.

Somalia

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/78], the Commission welcomed the conclusion of the first phase of the Somali national reconciliation process which ended in the signing of the Eldoret Declaration (see p. 241), the efforts of the Intergovernmental Authority on Development Technical Committee and the consultations of the front-line States on the reconciliation process (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 2 February), and the establishment of a contact group for Somalia in Nairobi and in New York. It condemned widespread violations and abuses of human rights and humanitarian law, as well as violations by the parties of their commitments. The Commission asked the High Commissioner to provide for the translation of its resolution into the Somali language for distribution within the country. The Commission decided to extend the independent expert's mandate for a further year, and to request him, with UN assistance, to report in 2004. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision on 23 July (decision 2003/258).

Report of independent expert. Independent expert Ghanim Alnajjar (Kuwait) visited Somalia and Kenya (24 August–4 September) [E/CN.4/2004/103], including Puntland (Bosasso) and Somaliland (Hargeisa), as well as Kismayo, Somalia, and Nairobi, Kenya.

The expert said that the right to life continued to be violated on an extensive scale, particularly in the south, caused mainly by killings in faction-based or inter-clan fighting, as well as casualties from mine explosions, widespread banditry and other criminal activity. Factors that affected the legal framework of Somalia, one of the poorest countries in the world, were untrained staff, low salaries, lack of basic equipment, training and reference materials, gender inequity and lack of harmonization among secular, customary and Islamic laws. Gender-based violence was a problem, despite a widespread culture of denial, and the practice of female genital mutilation was estimated to affect 98 per cent of the female population. Children were exposed to traumatic events caused by conflict, and the average age of enlistment in militia activities was 12 years old. The practice of asiwalid, whereby parents sent their disobedient children to be kept in prison until they ordered their release, continued to prevail.

Progress was made in restoring freedom of the press and a wider participation by women in politics. An estimated 35,000 refugees from Kenya, Ethiopia and Djibouti began returning to Somalia in 2003 and needed humanitarian assistance. In Somaliland, a law had been drafted for the establishment of an independent national human rights commission and a new police station was under construction. In Puntland, officials reported that all political prisoners had been released and the crime level was low. The police force needed rehabilitation, the lack of women's participation in politics was problematic and food security was impaired by drought. The Kismayo police force lacked transport, communications equipment, uniforms and other basic supplies, and its members were not paid and had not received training for the last 13 years. The judiciary of Kismayo informed the expert that it practised Islamic law; while it also applied Somali law, it did not have copies of the laws and relied on memory. The area lacked clean water, schools and health services.

The expert made a number of recommendations. He called on the international community to consider development activity to support advances made in the rule of law and related fronts. The Secretary-General and the Security Council were called on to establish a committee of independent experts to examine allegations of past massive human rights violations and crimes against humanity committed in Somalia, and to report on options to address those issues. The international community was urged to follow up on the peace process to ensure that human rights were integrated in institutions and frameworks. The expert recommended the establishment of an OHCHR office in Somaliland.

Timor-Leste

A report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2004/107] said that in 2003 progress was slow in establishing an effective and accountable justice system in Timor-Leste. Serious functional problems with the judicial system continued to resonate in the police and prison services. The tendency of prosecutors, judges and investigating judges to divert cases from the formal justice system to local dispute resolution methods continued, and there had been instances of political interference in the judicial process. Prison infrastructure was poor, at times placing health and safety at risk. The police force needed institutional strengthening, particularly regarding the mainstreaming of respect for human rights standards. Reports were received weekly of police misconduct amounting to human rights violations. Psychological and physical violence against women and the girl child remained a serious problem. Child abuse by family members and teachers was reported and there was no specialized juvenile justice system. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees estimated that in 1999 between 1,200 and 2,000 children were separated from their families and placed in orphanages. As at November 2003, some 584 East Timorese children remained separated from their parents. OHCHR and the United Nations Children's Fund sent a joint letter to the Governments of Indonesia and Timor-Leste to highlight the plight of those children.

A new technical cooperation project between OHCHR and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor covering a two-year period started in June. Programme activities focused on the incorporation of international human rights standards in national laws and policies; on building or strengthening national institutions to promote and protect human rights and democracy under the rule of law; on the formulation of national plans of action for human rights promotion and protection; on human rights education and training; and on promoting a human rights culture. In 2003, activities included support to the Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation (CAVR), human rights training of the police, support to the Government in reporting to treaty bodies and support to civil society. During the March to November period, CAVR held three national public hearings—on women and conflict, forced displacement and famine, and massacres. The Serious Crimes Unit, which was responsible for the investigation and prosecution of all serious crimes between 1 January and 25 October 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 707], focused on the prosecution of 10 priority cases relating to specific incidents and five cases that showed a widespread pattern of serious crime. Some 79 indictments were filed, including indictments relating to the 10 priority cases. About 367 individuals were charged, of whom 308 were alleged to have committed crimes against humanity. The Unit estimated that 280 of those indicted were in Indonesia.

The High Commissioner outlined technical cooperation plans for 2004. Among his recommendations, he called for: the Government to address gaps in legislation to ensure its conformity with international human rights treaties to which the Government was a party; the enforcement of codes of conduct for lawyers and judicial officers; support by the international community to fight corruption; improvements in the police force; legislation, policy measures and programmes to prevent violence against women; and strengthening ways of reviewing the ad hoc human rights trials as well as the serious crimes process.

Public information and human rights education

Public information

Report of Secretary-General. In a January report [E/CN.4/2003/99], the Secretary-General described public information activities in the area of human rights, including the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights, launched by the General Assembly in resolution 43/128 [YUN 1988, p. 539] and carried out by the High Commissioner and the UN Department of Public Information (DPI).

The OHCHR publications programme issued fact sheets, training and educational material, special issue papers, and reference and promotional material. The Office continued to expand the content of its web site in order to reach a wider audience and to strengthen its capacity to communicate the human rights message through liaison with the media. OHCHR external relations programmes included briefings, exhibitions and human rights observances, an internship programme, and training courses and other technical cooperation activities.

DPI continued to initiate and coordinate activities within the context of the World Public Information Campaign and the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004) (see p. 687). Activities were also carried out to publicize the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1993-2003) (see p. 695), the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People (1995-2004) (see p. 800) and the United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006) (see p. 848). DPI carried out human rights information programmes, covered UN human rights activities, issued press releases, updated and maintained a human rights web site, published and disseminated human rights publications, aired radio and television broadcasts, and organized the observance of special days. The report presented an overview of the activities of the United Nations Information Service in Geneva, as well as those of the UN information centres and services and UN offices.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/62], the Commission requested the Secretary-

General to take advantage of the collaboration of international and regional intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to implement the World Campaign and the Decade for Human Rights Education; to make available resources to allow OHCHR and DPI to implement fully their respective programmes in regard to human rights; and to report in 2005.

Report of High Commissioner. By an August note [A/58/318], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the High Commissioner on human rights education, including the Decade for Human Rights Education and the human rights public information activities of OHCHR and DPI. The demand for OHCHR publications had increased considerably, with the Office distributing more than 74,000 copies of human rights publications and adding to the number of publications available on its web site. Plans were being made to make the web site available in the six official languages and several web pages had been designed to improve accessibility for persons with disabilities. DPI's activities were part of an overall communications strategy to promote the work of OHCHR through publications, the distribution of press kits, magazines, television, photo and radio activities, and briefings.

Human rights education

Reports of High Commissioner. A January report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2003/100] summarized activities undertaken by the UN system, NGOs and Member States to implement the Plan of Action of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004), which was proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 49/184 [YUN 1994, p. 1039]. The report, requested by the Commission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 647], covered the period from mid-July to mid-November 2002.

A February report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2003/101] contained an outline of possible action to follow up the Decade. Input received by OHCHR affirmed the importance of continuing the Decade framework, considering that human rights education was a long-term process, and the High Commissioner presented guidelines for a second decade. The High Commissioner proposed the establishment of a fund for human rights education, the creation of an intergovernmental or a joint governmental/non-governmental committee to monitor human rights education, expanded use of existing human rights mechanisms and enhancing the contribution of intergovernmental organizations. Recommendations were made for the sub-regional, regional, national and local levels, and all levels were urged to support the training of educators and trainers, set priorities for specific target groups, particularly those in need of human rights education, and develop indicators to measure the impact of human rights education activities and evaluation systems.

By an August note [A/58/318], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the High Commissioner on the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education and the human rights public information activities of OHCHR and DPI (see above). The High Commissioner summarized the activities of the UN system and Member States to implement the Plan of Action. The report highlighted the need for Governments to fulfil the commitments made at the international level to develop national strategies for human rights education that were comprehensive and participatory, with priority given to sustainable approaches. It recommended the development, implementation and evaluation of national strategies. Regional and international organizations and institutions should continue to support national initiatives by facilitating the sharing of information and materials, and by creating and strengthening networks, the training of trainers and related activities.

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/70], the Commission urged States to implement further the Plan of Action and to intensify efforts in the area of education, including human rights education. It requested OHCHR to implement and expand the Assisting Communities Together (ACT) project and to consider other ways to support human rights education activities. All relevant Commission mechanisms were requested to include human rights education in their reports and as an agenda item of their annual meetings. OHCHR was requested to report to the Commission in 2004 on the establishment by the Secretary-General of a voluntary fund for human rights education, to be administered by OHCHR, and on the achievements and shortcomings of the Decade.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/5], the Subcommission recommended that human rights treaty bodies (see p. 668), when examining States parties' reports, devote attention to human rights education and include the subject in the agenda of the annual meeting of the chairpersons of the treaty bodies. It recommended that the High Commissioner, jointly with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and in consultation with Member States, encourage Governments to organize meetings, workshops and other activities at the regional and international levels on the achievements and shortcomings of the Decade, to be coordinated by OHCHR.

OHCHR was requested to make available to the Subcommission the High Commissioner's February report (see p. 687).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/181 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004

The General Assembly,

Guided by the fundamental and universal principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Reaffirming article 26 of the Universal Declaration, which states that "education shall be directed to the full development of the human personality and to the strengthening of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms", and recalling the provisions of other relevant international human rights instruments that reflect the aims of the article,

Recalling the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights concerning the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004,

Believing that human rights education constitutes an important vehicle for the elimination of gender-based discrimination and for ensuring equal opportunities through the promotion and protection of the human rights of women,

Convinced that human rights education should constitute a comprehensive, lifelong process by which all people learn respect for the dignity of others and the means and methods of ensuring that respect in all societies,

Convinced also that every woman, man and child, in order to realize their full human potential, must be made aware of all their human rights and fundamental freedoms and the corresponding responsibility of States,

Recognizing that human rights education is essential to the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms and that carefully designed training, dissemination and information programmes can have a catalytic effect on national, regional and international initiatives to promote and protect human rights and prevent human rights violations,

Convinced that human rights education contributes to a holistic concept of development consistent with the dignity of people of all ages, which contributes to the promotion of the rights of those in the most vulnerable segments of society, such as children, young persons, older persons, indigenous people, minorities, the rural and urban poor, migrant workers, refugees, persons with HIV/AIDS and disabled persons,

Convinced also that the effectiveness of existing human rights education and public information activities would be enhanced by better coordination and co-operation at the national, regional and international levels,

Recognizing the invaluable, creative and active role that non-governmental and community-based organizations play in the promotion and protection of human rights by disseminating information and engaging in human rights education, especially at the grass-roots level,

Aware of the potential role of the private sector in human rights education through financial support for governmental and non-governmental activities as well as their own creative and effective initiatives,

Noting with appreciation the efforts undertaken thus far by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to implement the Plan of Action for the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and to increase information-sharing in the area of human rights education,

Welcoming other United Nations public information activities in the field of human rights,

Noting Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/70 of 25 April 2003, in which the Commission requested the Office of the High Commissioner, jointly with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, to report on the achievements and shortcomings of the current United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education,

1. Notes with appreciation the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on education and public information activities in the field of human rights;

2. Welcomes the steps taken by Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to implement the Plan of Action for the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and to develop public information activities in the field of human rights;

3. Urges all Governments to promote the development of comprehensive, participatory and sustainable national strategies for human rights education and to establish and strengthen in their education policies knowledge of human rights, in both its theoretical dimensions and its practical applications;

4. Also urges all Governments to intensify their efforts to contribute to the implementation of the Plan of Action and, in particular, to implement the suggestions in relevant resolutions adopted by the General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights regarding possible activities to be included in national strategies for human rights education;

5. Encourages Governments to support further, through voluntary contributions, the education and public information efforts undertaken by the Office of the High Commissioner within the framework of the Plan of Action;

6. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to support national capacities for human rights education and information through its technical cooperation programme in the field of human rights;

7. Urges the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to continue to utilize United Nations information centres for the timely dissemination of basic information, reference and audio-visual materials on human rights and fundamental freedoms;

8. Requests the High Commissioner to continue to coordinate and harmonize human rights education and information strategies and the implementation of the Plan of Action and the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights within the United Nations system, in cooperation with, inter alia, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the Department of Public Information, and to ensure maximum effectiveness and efficiency in the collection, use, processing, management and distribution of human rights information and educational materials, including through electronic means;

9. Encourages all relevant organs, bodies and agencies of the United Nations system to provide training in human rights for all United Nations personnel and officials;

10. Encourages the human rights treaty bodies, within their mandates, when examining reports of States parties, to consider the activities of States parties in the area of human rights education;

11. Encourages all relevant mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights to include systematically in their reports a specific section on human rights education, as relevant to their mandate, as well as to include human rights education as an item on the agenda of their annual meetings, with a view to strengthening their contribution to human rights education;

12. Calls upon international, regional and national non-governmental organizations and intergovernmental organizations to develop human rights education programmes in implementing the Plan of Action;

13. Welcomes initiatives to include civil society, non-governmental organizations, children and youth in national delegations to United Nations meetings as an important component of human rights education;

14. Encourages Governments, regional organizations and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to seek the cooperation of the private sector, development, trade and financial institutions and the media in developing human rights education strategies;

15. Encourages regional organizations to develop strategies for the wider distribution of materials on human rights education in all relevant languages and to maximize the participation of national entities in regional programmes on human rights education;

16. Requests the High Commissioner to bring the present resolution to the attention of all members of the international community and of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned with human rights education and public information;

17. Decides to dedicate a plenary meeting during the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly on the occasion of Human Rights Day, 10 December 2004, structured as an interactive dialogue to review the achievements of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and to discuss possible future activities for the enhancement of human rights education.

Children and a culture of peace

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/6 [YUN 2002, p. 651] on the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World (2001-2010), proclaimed in Assembly resolution 53/25 [YUN 1998, p. 639], the Secretary-General transmitted, in July [A/58/182], a report of the UNESCO Director-General covering implementation of the Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace, adopted in Assembly resolution 53/243 B [YUN 1999, p. 594]. The report was a preparatory contribution to the Secretary-General's report, to be submitted in 2005, on the observance of the Decade and on the implementation of the Declaration on a Culture of Peace, adopted in Assembly resolution 53/243 A [ibid., p. 593], and the Programme of Action.

The report presented examples of activities carried out by UNESCO, as the lead agency for the Decade, with the participation of other UN bodies, Governments and civil society, and included actions to foster a culture of peace through education, promote sustainable economic and social development, promote respect for all human rights, ensure equality between women and men, foster democratic participation, advance understanding, tolerance and solidarity, support participatory communication and the free flow of information, and promote international peace and security. The report reviewed the role of civil society, and communication and networking arrangements among actors for a culture of peace. The Director-General asked Member States to develop further their activities to promote a culture of peace and non-violence, and to inform UNESCO of those activities through their national focal points for the Decade. Civil society should be encouraged to complement Member States' initiatives. UNESCO was urged to strengthen its efforts to coordinate activities implemented by the actors of the culture of peace network.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 November [meeting 59], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/11 [draft: A/58/L.14 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 44].

International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the Charter of the United Nations, including the purposes and principles contained therein, and especially the dedication to saving succeeding generations from the scourge of war,

Recalling the Constitution of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which states that, "since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed",

Recalling also its previous resolutions on a culture of peace, in particular resolution 52/15 of 20 November 1997 proclaiming 2000 the International Year for the Culture of Peace, resolution 53/25 of 10 November 1998 proclaiming the period 2001-2010 the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, resolution 56/5 of 5 November 2001 and resolution 57/6 of 4 November 2002,

Reaffirming the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace, recognizing that they serve, inter alia, as the basis for the observance of the Decade, and convinced that the effective and successful observance of the Decade throughout the world will promote a culture of peace and non-violence that benefits humanity, in particular future generations,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which calls for the active promotion of a culture of peace,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2000/66 of 26 April 2000, entitled "Towards a culture of peace",

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General on the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, including paragraph 28 thereof, which indicates that each of the ten years of the Decade will be marked with a different priority theme related to the Programme of Action,

Noting the relevance of the World Summit on Sustainable Development, held in Johannesburg, South Africa, from 26 August to 4 September 2002, the International Conference on Financing for Development, held in Monterrey, Mexico, from 18 to 22 March 2002, the special session of the General Assembly on children, held in New York from 8 to 10 May 2002, the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 7 September 2001, and the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, for the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010, as well as the need to implement, as appropriate, the relevant decisions agreed upon therein,

Recognizing that all efforts made by the United Nations system in general and the international community at large for peacekeeping, peace-building, the prevention of conflicts, disarmament, sustainable development, the promotion of human dignity and human rights, democracy, the rule of law, good governance and gender equality at the national and international levels contribute greatly to the culture of peace,

Noting that its resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict could contribute to the further promotion of a culture of peace,

Taking into account the "Manifesto 2000" initiative of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization promoting a culture of peace, which has so far received over seventy-five million signatures of endorsement throughout the world,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 57/6,

1. Reiterates that the objective of the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010, is to strengthen further the global movement for a culture of peace following the observance of the International Year for the Culture of Peace in 2000;

2. Invites Member States to continue to place greater emphasis on and expand their activities promoting a culture of peace and non-violence, in particular during the Decade, at the national, regional and international levels and to ensure that peace and non-violence are fostered at all levels;

3. Commends the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for recognizing the promotion of a culture of peace as the expression of its fundamental mandate, and encourages it, as the lead agency for the Decade, to strengthen further the activities it has undertaken for promoting a culture of peace, including the dissemination of the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace and related materials in various languages across the world;

4. Also commends the relevant United Nations bodies, in particular the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the University for Peace, for their activities in further promoting a culture of peace and non-violence, including the promotion of peace education and activities related to specific areas identified in the Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace, and encourages them to continue and further strengthen and expand their efforts;

5. Encourages the appropriate authorities to provide education, in children's schools, that includes lessons in mutual understanding, tolerance, active citizenship, human rights and the promotion of a culture of peace;

6. Encourages civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to strengthen its efforts in furtherance of the objectives of the Decade, inter alia, by adopting its own programme of activities to complement the initiatives of Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system and other international and regional organizations;

7. Encourages the involvement of the mass media in education for a culture of peace and non-violence, with particular regard to children and young people, including through the planned expansion of the Culture of Peace News Network as a global network of Internet sites in many languages;

8. Welcomes the efforts made by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to continue the communication and networking arrangements established during the International Year for providing an instant update of developments related to the observance of the Decade;

9. Invites Member States to observe 21 September each year as the International Day of Peace, as a day of global ceasefire and non-violence, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/282 of 7 September 2001;

10. Invites Member States as well as civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to provide information to the Secretary-General on the observance of the Decade and the activities undertaken to promote a culture of peace and non-violence;

11. Emphasizes the significance of the plenary meetings on the item planned for its sixtieth session, and in that regard encourages participation at a high level, and decides to consider, at an appropriate time, the possibility of organizing those meetings as close as possible to the general debate;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Culture of peace".

National institutions and regional arrangements

National institutions for human rights promotion and protection

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/76], the Commission welcomed the decisions of a growing number of States to establish national institutions for human rights promotion and protection, and called on OHCHR to continue to strengthen its coordinating role in the establishment and strengthening of those institutions and to allocate resources for such work. It also welcomed the role of the International Coordinating Committee of National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, for which OHCHR acted as the secretariat, in assessing conformity with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (Paris Principles), adopted in General Assembly resolution 48/134 [YUN 1993, p. 899]. The Secretary-General was requested to provide assistance to the meetings of the Coordinating Committee and for international and regional meetings of national institutions, and to report in 2004.

Reports of Secretary-General. As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 56/158 [YUN 2001, p. 611], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/261] covering July 2001 to July 2003, described the activities of OHCHR in the area of national institutions for human rights promotion and protection.

During the reporting period, at the request of Governments, OHCHR provided advice or assistance regarding the establishment of national institutions to Afghanistan, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Côte d'Ivoire, Fiji, Germany, Ireland, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Mongolia, Nepal, Nigeria, Palestine, the Republic of Korea, Rwanda, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, Switzerland, Thailand, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste and the United Kingdom. The Office provided advice or support to several established national human rights institutions, including the 43 national institutions fully accredited by the International Coordinating Committee, newly established institutions (Jordan, Republic of Korea, Thailand) and other institutions. Support was given in 2003 to regional initiatives, including the second General Assembly of the Network of National Human Rights Institutions of the Americas (San José, Costa Rica, March); a training workshop on the implementation of human rights instruments in Southern Africa (Mbabane, Swaziland, 9-13 June); and the eleventh Workshop on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asian and Pacific Region (see p. 694). The report described cooperation between human rights treaty bodies and national institutions; cooperation between OHCHR, UN agencies and programmes, and international and regional organizations; and various thematic issues addressed by national human rights institutions, such as economic, social and cultural rights, racism and racial discrimination, the rights of the child, the rights of persons with disabilities, the prevention of torture, reproductive rights and HIV/AIDS.

A later report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2004/101], covering November 2002 to 19 December 2003, stated that advisory missions were undertaken to Afghanistan, Jordan, Norway, Slovenia and Sri Lanka and to the Occupied Palestinian Territories. Support was given to regional bodies such as the Network of National Human Rights Institutions of the Americas for a workshop on security and human rights (Cartagena, Colombia, 2-3 September), the Seventh Annual Congress of the Ibero-American Federation of Ombudsmen (Panama City, 18-21 November) and the Asia Pacific Forum of National Human Rights Institutions (Sri Lanka, 8-12 November). OHCHR established closer links with the Office of the Human Rights Commissioner of the Council of Europe, which was the focal point for the Council's work on national institutions, including consultations with the Council in September and a joint mission to Slovenia in October. The report described cooperation between human rights treaty bodies, special mechanisms of the Commission and national institutions; cooperation between OHCHR, UN agencies and programmes, and international and regional organizations; and thematic issues addressed by national human rights institutions, such as economic, social and cultural rights, racism and racial discrimination, the administration of justice, the rights of persons with disabilities, the prevention of torture, reproductive rights and HIV/AIDS.

Annexed to the report were the conclusions of discussions held on 13 and 14 November by chairs, members and representatives of 22 national human rights institutions from Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Europe and Latin America, hosted by the Danish Institute for Human Rights and OHCHR. Participants highlighted the centrality and importance of implementing the Paris Principles and their reference to the quasi-judicial powers of national institutions.

Topics discussed included the relationship between national human rights institutions and the judiciary, judicial enforcement mechanisms and national institutions, direct powers of intervention and national institutions, the complaints-handling powers of national institutions and case-handling systems. Also annexed to the report were the conclusions of discussions held by the Chair of the International Coordinating Committee, chairs, members and senior representatives of 13 of its members, NGO representatives and OHCHR during a round table on the Paris Principles (Geneva, 10-11 December). The round table was held to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Principles by the General Assembly in resolution 48/134.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/175 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

National institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions and those of the Commission on Human Rights concerning national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Welcoming the rapidly growing interest throughout the world in the creation and strengthening of independent, pluralistic national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Convinced of the important role that such national institutions play and will continue to play in promoting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms and in developing and enhancing public awareness of those rights and freedoms,

Recognizing that the United Nations has played an important role and should continue to play a more important role in assisting the development of national institutions,

Recalling the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, which reaffirmed the important and constructive role played by national human rights institutions, in particular in their advisory capacity to the competent authorities and their role in remedying human rights violations, in disseminating information on human rights and in education in human rights,

Recalling also the Beijing Platform for Action, in which Governments were urged to create or strengthen independent national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, including the human rights of women,

Noting the diverse approaches adopted throughout the world for the promotion and protection of human rights at the national level, emphasizing the universality, indivisibility and interdependence of all human rights, and emphasizing and recognizing the value of such approaches in promoting universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling the programme of action adopted by national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, meeting in Vienna from 14 to 16 June 1993 during the World Conference on Human Rights, in which it was recommended that United Nations activities and programmes should be reinforced to meet the requests for assistance from States wishing to establish or strengthen their national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Noting the valuable role played and contributions made by national institutions in United Nations meetings dealing with human rights and the importance of their continued appropriate participation,

Welcoming the strengthening in all regions of regional cooperation among national human rights institutions and between national human rights institutions and other regional human rights forums,

Noting with appreciation the existence of the regional human rights networks in Europe and Africa, the continuing work of the Network of National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Americas and the work of the Asia Pacific Forum of National Human Rights Institutions,

Welcoming the strengthening of international co-operation among national human rights institutions, including through the International Coordinating Committee of National Institutions,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Reaffirms the importance of the development of effective, independent and pluralistic national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, in keeping with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights ("the Paris Principles"), contained in the annex to resolution 48/134 of 20 December 1993;
3. Reiterates, on the tenth anniversary of their recognition by the General Assembly, the continued importance of the Paris Principles, recognizes the value of further strengthening their application, where appropriate, and encourages States, national institutions and other interested parties to consider ways to achieve this;
4. Recognizes that, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, it is the right of each State to choose the framework for national institutions that is best suited to its particular needs at the national level in order to promote human rights in accordance with international human rights standards;
5. Encourages Member States to establish or, where they already exist, to strengthen national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, as outlined in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action;
6. Welcomes the growing number of States establishing or considering the establishment of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights;
7. Encourages national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights established by Member States to continue to play an active role in preventing and combating all violations of human rights as enumerated in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action and relevant international instruments;
8. Notes with satisfaction the efforts of those States that have provided their national institutions with more autonomy and independence, including by giving them an investigative role or enhancing such a role, and encourages other Governments to consider taking similar steps;

9. Reaffirms the role of national institutions, where they exist, as appropriate agencies, inter alia, for the dissemination of human rights materials and other public information activities, including those of the United Nations, in particular in the context of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004;

10. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to give high priority to requests from Member States for assistance in the establishment and strengthening of national human rights institutions as part of the United Nations Programme of Advisory Services and Technical Assistance in the Field of Human Rights;

11. Commends the high priority given by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to work on national institutions, encourages the High Commissioner, in view of the expanded activities relating to national institutions, to ensure that appropriate arrangements are made and budgetary resources provided to continue and further extend activities in support of national human rights institutions, and invites Governments to contribute additional funds to the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights for that purpose;

12. Welcomes the establishment of a national institutions web site as an important vehicle for the delivery of information to national institutions and for sharing best practice, and further notes with satisfaction the intention of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to publish a compendium of national legislation relevant to national institutions;

13. Notes with appreciation the increasingly active and important role of the International Coordinating Committee of National Institutions, as recognized in Commission on Human Rights resolution 1994/54 of 4 March 1994, in close cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in assisting Governments and national institutions, when requested, to follow up on relevant resolutions and recommendations concerning the strengthening of national institutions;

14. Also notes with appreciation the holding of regular meetings of the International Coordinating Committee and the arrangements for the participation of national human rights institutions in the annual sessions of the Commission on Human Rights;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the necessary assistance for holding meetings of the International Coordinating Committee during the sessions of the Commission on Human Rights, in cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights;

16. Welcomes the continuation of the practice of national institutions convening regional meetings in some regions, and its initiation in others, and encourages national institutions, in cooperation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, to organize similar events with Governments and non-governmental organizations in their own regions;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide, including from the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation, the necessary assistance for holding international and regional meetings of national institutions;

18. Recognizes the important and constructive role that non-governmental organizations may play, in cooperation with national institutions, for better promotion and protection of human rights;

19. Expresses its appreciation to those Governments that have contributed additional resources for the purpose of the establishment and strengthening of national human rights institutions;

20. Encourages all Member States to take appropriate steps to promote the exchange of information and experience concerning the establishment and effective operation of national institutions;

21. Encourages all United Nations entities, funds and agencies to work in close cooperation with national institutions in the promotion and protection of human rights;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Regional arrangements

Report of Secretary-General. A February report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2003/107 & Corr.1] described assistance provided by OHCHR to regional activities of national human rights institutions. Among those activities, the Office facilitated a training workshop on human rights mainstreaming for Eastern and Central Africa UN country teams (Addis Ababa, 27-29 January) and, also in January, organized a workshop to bring together government representatives of the five Portuguese-speaking countries in Africa and human rights NGOs. The first activity under the regional project on human rights and human development in the Arab States, supported by UNDP and OHCHR and implemented by the Arab Organization for Human Rights, "Human rights and media", took place (Cairo, Egypt, January).

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/75], the Commission requested the Secretary-General to strengthen exchanges between the United Nations and regional human rights inter-governmental organizations and to make resources available to OHCHR to promote regional arrangements. It asked him to report to the General Assembly in 2004 and to the Commission in 2005. The Commission asked OHCHR to continue to pay special attention to the most appropriate ways of assisting countries, at their request.

Africa

In 2003, the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa, based in Yaoundé, Cameroon, organized a subregional training workshop on military law (Libreville, Gabon, January), training sessions for officials of the Congolese Ministry of Justice and members of the legal clinic (Brazzaville, January) and training courses for students, members of human rights organizations and UN staff, and provided technical support to national institutions [A/57/823-S/2003/610]. The Centre also organized seminars on the media, human rights and democracy (Malabo, Equatorial Guinea, 20-22 May) and on the role of civil society in Central Africa in the promotion and protection of the human rights of vulnerable groups (N'djamena, Chad, 22-24 July) [A/58/560-S/2003/1075].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/176 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/105 of 4 December 2000 concerning regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Recalling also its resolutions 55/34 B of 20 November 2000 and 55/233 of 23 December 2000 and section III of its resolution 55/234 of 23 December 2000,

Recalling further that the World Conference on Human Rights recommended that more resources be made available for the strengthening of regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights under the programme of technical cooperation in the field of human rights of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,

Recalling the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,

Taking note of the holding of the twentieth ministerial meeting of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, in Malabo, from 27 to 31 October 2003,

1. Welcomes the activities of the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa at Yaoundé;

2. Notes with satisfaction the support provided for the establishment of the Centre by the host country;

3. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to continue to provide their full assistance for the proper functioning of the Centre;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Asia and the Pacific

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/73], the Commission endorsed the conclusions of the eleventh Workshop on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asian and Pacific Region (see below) and requested the Secretary-General to submit a report to the Commission in 2004 on the conclusions of the twelfth workshop.

Report of Secretary-General. A March report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2003/109] contained the conclusions of the eleventh Workshop on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asian and Pacific Region (Islamabad, Pakistan, 25-27 February), which formulated the 2002-2004 Programme of Action for the Asia-Pacific Framework for Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. The Workshop reviewed progress made since the tenth Workshop [YUN 2002, p. 654] and noted new draft guidelines on poverty reduction strategies issued by OHCHR, the launch of the OHCHR Handbook on National Human Rights Action Plans and the activities conducted under the areas identified in the Tehran Framework for Technical Cooperation [YUN 1998, p. 641].

Cooperation with human rights bodies

Report of Secretary-General. A February report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2003/34] described situations in which private individuals or NGO members had allegedly been intimidated or suffered reprisals for having cooperated with UN human rights bodies regarding human rights violations.

Commission action. On 16 April [res. 2003/9], the Commission urged Governments to refrain from all acts of intimidation against: persons who sought to cooperate or had cooperated with representatives of UN human rights bodies, or who had provided testimony or information to them; persons who availed themselves of UN procedures and those who had provided legal assistance to them for that purpose; those who submitted communications under procedures established by human rights instruments; and relatives of victims of human rights violations. It requested representatives of UN human rights bodies and treaty bodies monitoring human rights to help prevent such intimidation and to include in their reports allegations of intimidation or reprisal and of hampering access to UN human rights procedures, as well as an account of the action taken. The Secretary-General was asked to draw the Commission's resolution to the attention of UN human rights treaty bodies and to report in 2004.

Chapter II

Protection of human rights

In 2003, the protection of human rights—civil and political, as well as economic, social and cultural—remained a major focus of UN activities. During the year, follow-up activities continued to be undertaken to implement the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (DDPA), adopted at the 2001 World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, including the first meeting of the Intergovernmental Working Group established by the Economic and Social Council to make recommendations for effective implementation of DDPA and the first meeting of the five independent eminent experts appointed by the Secretary-General to follow up the implementation process. The General Assembly closed the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1993-2003) and emphasized the implementation of DDPA as a solid foundation for a broad-based consensus for further action to eliminate racism.

On 30 January, the Security Council considered a list of parties to armed conflict that reportedly recruited child soldiers, which constituted a significant advance in efforts to apply international norms and standards for protecting children affected by armed conflict. In related action, in December, the Council considered a 10-point action plan to protect civilians in situations of armed conflict.

In 2003, the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary body, the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, established new mandates for an independent expert concerned with the question of violence against children, and for special rapporteurs on issues dealing with human rights and the human genome and with corruption and its impact on the full enjoyment of human rights.

Special rapporteurs, special representatives and independent experts of the Commission and the Subcommission examined, among other issues, contemporary forms of racism; the rights of migrants; freedom of religion or belief; mercenary activity; the independence of the judiciary; extralegal executions; allegations of torture; impunity; freedom of expression; human rights and terrorism; the prevention of human rights violations committed with small arms and light weapons; the right to development; globalization and its impact on human rights; the effects of structural adjustment programmes and foreign debt on human rights; the question of human rights and extreme poverty; the right to food; the right to adequate housing; the right to education; illicit practices related to toxic and dangerous products and wastes; violence against women; the right to physical and mental health; the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography; children affected by armed conflict; internally displaced persons; and the human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous people.

Working groups considered problems of racial discrimination affecting people of African descent, recommendations for the effective implementation of DDPA and complementary standards to strengthen related international instruments, discrimination against minorities, arbitrary detention, enforced or involuntary disappearances, the right to development, bioethics, contemporary forms of slavery and the rights of indigenous peoples.

Racism and racial discrimination

Third Decade against racism

The General Assembly, in resolution 48/91 [YUN 1993, p. 853], had proclaimed the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1993-2003) and adopted the Decade's Programme of Action, which was revised in Assembly resolution 49/146 [YUN 1994, p. 988]. Up until 1998, the Third Decade's goals and objectives were the same as those of the first Decade, which the Assembly had adopted in resolution 3057 (XXVIII) [YUN 1973, p. 523]. In 2001, however, related activities were reorganized to focus on the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615].

The Assembly, by resolution 58/160 of 22 December (see p. 699), decided to close the Decade.

Implementation of Programme of Action

Report of High Commissioner. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/195 [YUN 2002, p. 662] and to a 2002 Commission on Human Rights request [ibid., p. 661], the High Commissioner, in a February report [E/CN.4/2003/19], summarized all Third Decade activities, including international seminars, national and regional initiatives, UN system-wide consultations and other measures to strengthen the coordination of relevant programmes, and research, studies and publications. Although some activities requested by the Programme of Action were yet to be implemented, the final document of the 2001 World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance forged the path for future action.

In a March addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2003/19/Add.1], the High Commissioner summarized the last activity held under the Third Decade—a workshop convened jointly by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) (Paris, 19-20 February). The workshop aimed to develop for publication educational materials for teachers, students and other opinion leaders on combating racism and racial discrimination in its contemporary forms and fostering tolerance. Discussions were based on background papers presented by 10 experts, which analysed the problems of racism and racial discrimination in relation to education; health; HIV/AIDS; contemporary forms of slavery; employment; migration; the administration of justice; the media; gender dimension; and the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 2106 A (XX) (YUN 1965, p. 440). The papers would form the basis for chapters in the publication.

Commission action. On 23 April [E/2003/23 (res. 2003/30)], the Commission on Human Rights, by a recorded vote of 38 to 1, with 13 abstentions, noting with concern that the objectives of the Programme of Action for the Third Decade had largely not been achieved, recommended that the General Assembly, in future activities to combat racism, emphasize the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (DDPA) adopted by the 2001 World Conference. It further recommended that the Assembly, after considering the Secretary-General's analytical report on the extent of implementation of the Third Decade's Programme of Action (see below), consider the Decade's closure.

By decision 2003/246 of 23 July (see p. 698), the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's recommendations.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/195 [YUN 2002, p. 662], the Secretary-General, in a May analytical report on the extent of implementation of the Third Decade's Programme of Action [A/58/80-E/2003/71], drew attention to the High Commissioner's February and March reports (see above).

On 24 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 2003/310).

By resolution 58/160 (see p. 699), the Assembly, after considering the Secretary-General's report, decided to close the Third Decade and to emphasize the implementation of DDPA for further actions and initiatives to eliminate racism.

Follow-up to 2001 World Conference

Working Group on people of African descent.

The Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent, established by the Commission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 661] to consider problems of racial discrimination affecting people of African descent, in accordance with DDPA, held its first (25-29 November 2002) and second (3-7 February 2003) sessions [E/CN.4/2003/21] as well as its third session (29 September-10 October) [E/CN.4/2004/21], all in Geneva.

Discussions at the Group's first and second sessions formed the basis of a set of conclusions, including the Group's view that its work was linked to UNESCO's project "The Slave Route" and to related International Labour Organization (ILO) conventions. It believed that DDPA provided a good framework for understanding the issues of racial discrimination facing people of African descent. The Group asserted that, although people of African descent shared similarities, they represented a diverse community in different continents, with different issues, needs and expectations, and those variations should be acknowledged and studied further. The Group proposed recommendations to the Commission regarding the study, to be conducted with OHCHR assistance, of problems of racial discrimination faced by people of African descent in the diaspora; the drafting of measures to ensure their full access to the justice system; measures to eliminate racial profiling against them; the development of short-, medium- and long-term proposals to eliminate discrimination against people of African descent, including proposals for a mechanism to monitor and promote all their human rights; and the full and equal participation of relevant non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in the Group's work. The Group recommended the study of the political, economic and social status of people of African descent; the eradication of poverty, marginalization, social exclusion and development; health and HIV/AIDS; racial profiling; the administration of justice; the gender dimension of racial discrimination; discrimination against children; the protection and management of ancestral lands and traditional rights; and access to education and information technology.

At its third session, the Group made further recommendations to the Commission regarding the administration of justice, the media and access to education. It decided that its future work should include cooperation with UN bodies, consultations, regional round tables and thematic seminars.

Report of High Commissioner. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 56/266 [YUN 2002, p. 659], the High Commissioner, in a February report on the implementation of and follow-up to the 2001 World Conference [E/CN.4/2003/18], described the activities of States, human rights treaty bodies, special procedures and other Commission mechanisms, UN agencies, international and regional organizations, national human rights institutions and NGOs to implement DDPA.

Intergovernmental Working Group. The Intergovernmental Working Group established by Economic and Social Council decision 2002/270 [YUN 2002, p. 661] to make recommendations for effective implementation of DDPA and to prepare complementary standards to strengthen relevant international instruments held its first session (Geneva, 21-31 January and 21 March) [E/CN.4/2003/20]. The Group examined DDPA on a chapter-by-chapter basis and, on 21 March, adopted recommendations calling on States to formulate and implement policies and action plans to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including their gender-based manifestations. The Group invited OHCHR to appoint, in cooperation with intergovernmental organizations, the International Olympic Committee and sports federations, goodwill ambassadors to educate youth on sport practised without discrimination. Similar goodwill ambassadors should be appointed in all regions drawn from the field of culture to promote respect for human rights and a culture of tolerance, and to assist OHCHR to raise funds for programmes to combat racial discrimination. Regarding complementary standards, the Group agreed that a thorough assessment of existing international standards and instruments to combat racism was needed, and invited the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) and other human rights treaty bodies to contribute towards that end. OHCHR was requested to prepare an analytical report on existing standards, identifying possible areas where complementary standards might be needed. The Group decided to consider, at its next session, the implementation of DDPA, a thematic analysis of the implementation process from the perspective of victims and reports on existing complementary standards. It would also discuss poverty and education.

Commission action. On 24 March [dec. 2003/103], the Commission revised its agenda by making the item entitled "Comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action" a sub-item of the item entitled "Racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and all forms of discrimination".

On 23 April [res. 2003/30], the Commission called for the implementation of the recommendations of the Intergovernmental Working Group (see above) by all stakeholders. OHCHR was requested to submit to the Group an analytical report assessing the effectiveness of current regional and international instruments to combat racism and identifying possible areas where complementary standards might be needed, in order to assist the Group in fulfilling its mandate. It decided that the Group should convene its future sessions for an initial period of three years, and requested it to convene its second session of 10 working days and to focus on poverty, education and complementary standards, as decided in its recommendations, and to report in 2004.

The Commission decided to readjust the terms of reference of the independent eminent experts (see p. 698) as follows: to follow the implementation of DDPA provisions, in cooperation with OHCHR; assist the High Commissioner in preparing his annual progress report to the Commission and the General Assembly; and to assist the High Commissioner in assessing and evaluating existing international standards and instruments to combat racism, with a view to preparing complementary standards. The Commission, revising parts of its resolution 2002/68 [YUN 2002, p. 661], decided to entrust the Working Group on people of African descent (see p. 696) with additional mandates, including to make proposals on the elimination of racial discrimination against Africans and people of African descent worldwide, and to address all issues concerning their well-being contained in DDPA. It decided that the experts should convene future sessions for an initial period of three years and requested them to convene their second session of 10 working days and to report in 2004.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted, as orally amended, decision 2003/246 by recorded vote (37-1-16) [agenda item 14 (g)].

World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance and the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/30 of 23 April 2003, and endorsed the Commission's decision:

(a) To request the Intergovernmental Working Group to make recommendations with a view to the effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action and to prepare complementary international standards to strengthen and update international instruments against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in all their aspects, to convene its upcoming sessions for an initial period of three years, while encouraging it to work effectively to fulfil its mandate, to convene its second session of ten working days, focusing on areas decided upon in its recommendations, namely, poverty, education and complementary standards, and to report on progress in this regard at the sixtieth session of the Commission;

(b) That the working group of experts on people of African descent should convene its future sessions for an initial period of three years, while encouraging it to work effectively towards the fulfilment of its mandate, and also the Commission's decision to request the working group to convene its second session of ten working days and to report to the Commission at its sixtieth session on progress towards the fulfilment of the mandate of the working group.

The Council also endorsed the Commission's recommendations that the General Assembly, after considering the analytical report of the Secretary-General on the extent of implementation of the Programme of Action for the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, to be submitted pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/195 of 18 December 2002, consider the closure of the Third Decade.

The Council also endorsed the Commission's recommendation that the General Assembly, in the coming decade of activities to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, place emphasis on the concrete implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action on the basis of a broad-based consensus on the importance of the anti-discrimination struggle worldwide.

The Council also endorsed the Commission's request that the Secretary-General provide the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance with all the necessary human and financial assistance to carry out his mandate efficiently, effectively and expeditiously and to enable him to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/246:

In favour: Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Georgia, Ghana, Guatemala, India, Iran, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Uganda, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Australia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Netherlands, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Sweden, Ukraine, United Kingdom.

CERD action. In March and August [A/58/18], the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD), at its sixty-second and sixty-third sessions, considered follow-up to the World Conference, particularly with regard to the work of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the effective implementation of DDPA (see p. 697). The Committee decided to request that it be duly represented in the Group's meetings, considering that the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2106 A (XX) [YUN 1965, p. 440], for which the Committee served as a monitoring body, was the main international legal instrument in the struggle against racial discrimination. (For more on CERD, see p. 674.)

Further report of High Commissioner. An August note of the Secretary-General [A/58/324] transmitted a report of the High Commissioner summarizing activities taken by States, UN bodies, specialized agencies, international organizations and NGOs in follow-up to the World Conference, as requested in General Assembly resolution 56/266 [YUN 2002, p. 659].

By decision 58/535 of 22 December, the Assembly took note of the High Commissioner's report.

Report of independent experts. A Secretariat note [E/CN.4/2004/112] transmitted the views of the five independent eminent experts appointed by the Secretary-General to follow up the implementation of DDPA provisions, pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 56/266 and 57/195 [YUN 2002, p. 662]. In accordance with Commission resolution 2003/30 (see p. 696), the experts were also mandated to assist the High Commissioner in preparing annual progress reports to the Commission and the Assembly, and in assessing and evaluating existing international standards and instruments to combat racism, with a view to preparing complementary standards.

At their first meeting (Geneva, 16-18 September), the experts identified access to education, access to justice and awareness-raising as priority areas and underlined the importance of the principle of non-discrimination in combating terrorism. Poverty eradication was vital in the effort to eliminate all forms of discrimination. The experts recommended the development of a "racial equality index" to measure existing racial inequalities. The experts indicated that a study on updating international standards would facilitate their consideration of the issue.

Regional seminars. As part of follow-up activities to the World Conference, OHCHR, in collaboration with the Government of Uruguay, organized a workshop on the adoption and implementation of policies of affirmative action for people of African descent of the Latin American and Caribbean region (Montevideo, 7-9 May) [E/CN.4/2004/17/Add.3], which recommended positive actions and strategies as a means to overcome inequalities.

Other regional activities included expert seminars for Eastern European (Prague, 24-26 September) [E/CN.4/2004/17/Add.1] and Western European States (Brussels, 10-12 December) [E/CN.4/2004/17/Add.2], organized by OHCHR, in collaboration with the Governments of the Czech Republic and of Belgium, respectively. The seminars exchanged views on ways to move forward on DDPA implementation and adopted conclusions and recommendations.

Communication. On 22 January [E/CN.4/2003/G/36], Brazil described its efforts to implement proposals agreed upon at the World Conference.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/506], adopted resolution 58/160 by recorded vote (174-2-2) [agenda item 115].

Global efforts for the total elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/266 of 27 March 2002, in which it endorsed the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held at Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, as constituting a solid foundation for further action and initiatives towards the total elimination of the scourge of racism,

Recalling also its resolution 57/195 of 18 December 2002, in which it outlined the important roles and responsibilities of the various organs of the United Nations and other stakeholders at the international, regional and national levels, including, in particular, the Commission on Human Rights,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolutions 2002/68 of 25 April 2002 and 2003/30 of 23 April 2003,

Stressing that the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, attaches importance to the elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and other forms of intolerance,

Recognizing that racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance occur on the grounds of race, colour, descent or national or ethnic origin and that victims can suffer multiple or aggravated forms of discrimination based on other related grounds such as sex, language, religion, political and other opinion, social origin, property, birth and other status,

Reiterating that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and have the potential to contribute constructively to the development and well-being of their societies, and that any doctrine of racial superiority is scientifically false, morally condemnable, socially unjust and dangerous and must be rejected, together with theories that attempt to determine the existence of separate human races,

Reaffirming its commitment to a global drive for the total elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Reaffirming that universal adherence to and full implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination are of paramount importance for the promotion of equality and non-discrimination in the world,

Convinced that racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance reveal themselves in a differentiated manner for women and girls and may be among the factors leading to a deterioration in their living conditions, poverty, violence, multiple forms of discrimination and the limitation or denial of their human rights, and recognizing the need to integrate a gender perspective into relevant policies, strategies and programmes of action against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in order to address multiple forms of discrimination,

Reaffirming its firm determination and its commitment to eradicate totally and unconditionally racism and racial discrimination, and its conviction that racism and racial discrimination constitute a negation of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Recognizing that the successful implementation of the Durban Programme of Action requires political will, international cooperation and adequate funding at the national, regional and international levels,

Deeply concerned that, despite continuing efforts, racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and acts of violence persist and even grow in magnitude, incessantly adopting new forms, including tendencies to establish policies based on racial, religious, ethnic, cultural and national superiority or exclusivity,

Alarmed, in particular, at the increase in racist violence and xenophobic ideas in many parts of the world, in political circles, in the sphere of public opinion and in society at large, inter alia, as a result of the resurgent activities of associations established on the basis of racist and xenophobic platforms and charters, and the persistent use of those platforms and charters to promote or incite racist ideologies,

Underlining the importance of urgently eliminating continuing and violent trends involving racism and racial discrimination, and conscious that any form of impunity for crimes motivated by racist and xenophobic attitudes plays a role in weakening the rule of law and democracy, tends to encourage the recurrence of such crimes and requires resolute action and cooperation for its eradication,

Recognizing that States should implement and enforce appropriate and effective legislative, judicial, regulatory and administrative measures to prevent and protect against acts of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, thereby contributing to the prevention of human rights violations,

Emphasizing that poverty, underdevelopment, marginalization, social exclusion and economic disparities are closely associated with racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and contribute to the persistence of racist attitudes and practices, which in turn generate more poverty,

Deeply concerned about the misuse, by those advocating racism and racial discrimination, of new communication technologies, including the Internet, to disseminate their repugnant views,

Noting that the use of such technologies can also contribute to combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Noting also developments that have occurred within the framework of the Commission on Human Rights through its interessional working groups and other mechanisms created for the effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, in particular the work of the group of independent eminent experts, the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent and the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action,

Welcoming all the regional initiatives being undertaken to implement the Durban commitments, and in this context expressing its appreciation to the Governments of Mexico, Kenya and the Czech Republic for hosting the regional expert seminars with a view to the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action within their respective regions, and encouraging other regions to take the necessary action in this regard,

I

Basic general principles

1. Acknowledges that no derogation from the prohibition of racial discrimination, genocide, the crime of apartheid or slavery is permitted, as defined in the obligations under the relevant human rights instruments;

2. Expresses its profound concern about and its unequivocal condemnation of all forms of racism and racial discrimination, including related acts of racially motivated violence, xenophobia and intolerance, as well as propaganda activities and organizations that attempt to justify or promote racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in any form;

3. Affirms that racism and racial discrimination, and xenophobia and related intolerance, where they amount to racism and racial discrimination, constitute serious violations of and obstacles to the full enjoyment of all human rights;

4. Stresses that States and international organizations have a responsibility to ensure that measures taken in the struggle against terrorism do not discriminate in purpose or effect on grounds of race, colour, descent or national or ethnic origin, and urges all States to rescind or refrain from all forms of racial profiling;

5. Recognizes that States should implement and enforce appropriate and effective legislative, judicial, regulatory and administrative measures to prevent and protect against acts of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, thereby contributing to the prevention of human rights violations;

6. Emphasizes that it is the responsibility of States to adopt effective measures to combat criminal acts motivated by racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including measures to ensure that such motivations are considered an aggravating factor for the purposes of sentencing, to prevent those crimes from going unpunished and to ensure the rule of law;

7. Urges all States to review and, where necessary, revise their immigration laws, policies and practices so that they are free of racial discrimination and compatible with their obligations under international human rights instruments;

8. Condemns the misuse of print, audio-visual and electronic media and new communication technologies, including the Internet, to incite violence motivated by racial hatred, and calls upon States to take all necessary measures to combat this form of racism in accordance with the commitments that they have undertaken under the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, in particular paragraph 147 of the Programme of Action, in accordance with existing international and regional standards of freedom of expression and taking all necessary measures to guarantee the right to freedom of opinion and expression;

9. Condemns also political platforms and organizations based on racism, xenophobia or doctrines of racial superiority and related discrimination, as well as legislation and practices based on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance as incompatible with democracy and transparent and accountable governance;

10. Encourages all States to include in their educational curricula and social programmes at all levels, as appropriate, knowledge of and tolerance and respect for foreign cultures, peoples and countries;

11. Stresses the responsibility of States to mainstream a gender perspective in the design and development of prevention, education and protection measures aimed at the eradication of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance at all levels, to ensure that they effectively target the distinct situations of women and men;

12. Expresses its concern at the increasing incidents of racism in various sporting events;

13. Notes with appreciation the efforts being made by some sporting governing bodies to combat racism, and encourages other such bodies to take similar actions;

II

International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination

14. Urges States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the international human rights instruments that combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, in particular to accede to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination as a matter of urgency, with a view to achieving universal ratification by 2005, and to consider making the declaration envisaged under article 14 thereof, to comply with their reporting obligations, to publish and act upon the concluding observations of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, to withdraw reservations contrary to the object and purpose of the Convention and to consider withdrawing other reservations;

15. Invites States parties to the Convention to ratify the amendment to article 8 of the Convention, on the financing of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, and calls for adequate additional resources from the United Nations regular budget to enable the Committee to discharge its mandate fully;

16. Urges all States parties to the Convention to intensify their efforts to implement the obligations that they have accepted under article 4 of the Convention, with due regard to the principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and article 5 of the Convention;

17. Notes that the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination holds that the prohibition of the dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority or racial hatred is compatible with the right to freedom of opinion and expression as outlined in article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in article 5 of the Convention;

18. Welcomes the emphasis placed by the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on the importance of follow-up to the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance and the measures recommended to strengthen the implementation of the Convention as well as the functioning of the Committee;

III

Comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action

19. Emphasizes that the basic responsibility for effectively combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance lies with States, and to this end stresses that States have the primary responsibility to ensure full and effective implementation of all commitments and recommendations contained in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

20. Also emphasizes, in that context, the fundamental and complementary role of national human rights institutions, regional bodies and centres and civil society, working jointly with States towards the achievement of the objectives of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

21. Calls upon States to elaborate action plans, in consultation with national human rights institutions, other institutions created by law to combat racism, and civil society, and to provide the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights with such action plans and other relevant materials on measures taken to implement the provisions of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

22. Calls upon all States to formulate and implement without delay, at the national, regional and international levels, policies and plans of action to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including their gender-based manifestations;

23. Urges States to support the activities of existing regional bodies and centres that combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in their respective regions, and recommends the establishment of such bodies or centres in all regions where they do not exist;

24. Recognizes the fundamental role of civil society in the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, in particular in assisting States to develop regulations and strategies, in taking measures and action against such forms of discrimination and through follow-up implementation;

25. Emphasizes that, in accordance with the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, States have a shared responsibility, at the international level and within the framework of the United Nations system, to determine modalities for the overall review of the implementation of the Declaration and Programme of Action;

26. Stresses and reaffirms its role as the highest inter-governmental mechanism for the formulation and appraisal of policy on matters related to the economic, social and related fields, in accordance with Chapter IX of the Charter of the United Nations, including in the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the goals and targets set at all the major United Nations conferences, summits and special sessions;

27. Acknowledges that the outcome of the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance is on an equal footing with the outcomes of all the major United Nations conferences, summits and special sessions in the human rights and social fields;

28. Invites all relevant organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to become involved in the follow-up to the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, and invites specialized agencies and related organizations of the United Nations system to strengthen and adjust, within their respective mandates, their activities, programmes and medium-term strategies to take into account the follow-up to the Conference;

29. Invites all human rights treaty-monitoring bodies and all mechanisms and subsidiary bodies of the Commission on Human Rights to consider the relevant provisions of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action in the discharge of their respective mandates;

30. Reaffirms that the Economic and Social Council shall oversee the system-wide coordination of the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

31. Takes note of the recommendations adopted by consensus by the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action at its first session, on 21 March 2003;

32. Notes that the Working Group will continue its future sessions on the basis of the thematic approach adopted during its first session, and notes with appreciation that to this end the next session of the Working Group, which the representative of Chile has expressed interest in chairing, will analyse the themes relating to poverty eradication and education;

33. Also notes the convening of the sessions of the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent, the renewal of its mandate and the adjustments effected thereto;

34. Welcomes the inaugural session of the group of independent eminent experts, held at Geneva from 16 to 18 September 2003, with the participation of representatives of Member States, the United Nations system and civil society, takes note of its substantive outcome, and in this context requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to examine the possibility of the development of a racial equality index, as proposed by the group of independent eminent experts, and to report thereon to the Commission on Human Rights;

35. Acknowledges with appreciation the entry into force of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families on 1 July 2003, and invites all States that have not yet done so to consider acceding to that important instrument;

36. Notes with satisfaction the progress made during the first and second sessions of the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities, held in New York from 29 July to 9 August 2002 and from 16 to 27 June 2003;

37. Notes with appreciation the first and second sessions of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, held in New York from 13 to 24 May 2002 and from 12 to 23 May 2003;

38. Stresses the need to ensure adequate financial and human resources, including through the regular budget of the United Nations, for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to carry out its responsibilities efficiently in the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

39. Encourages improvements in the current efforts of the Anti-Discrimination Unit of the Office of the High Commissioner in providing strong leadership and greater support to the mechanisms created by the Commission on Human Rights to follow up the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

IV

Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination and coordination of activities

40. Notes with great concern that, despite the many efforts of the international community, the objectives of the Programme of Action for the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination have largely not been achieved, welcomes, therefore, the adoption of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, and calls for its full implementation at the national, regional and international levels;

41. Decides, after considering the report of the Secretary-General on the extent of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Third Decade, to close the Third Decade;

42. Decides also, as part of the activities to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, to place emphasis on the concrete implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action as a solid foundation for a broad-based consensus for further actions and initiatives towards the total elimination of the scourge of racism;

V

Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and follow-up to his visits

43. Expresses its full support and appreciation for the work of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and encourages its continuation;

44. Reiterates its call to all Member States, intergovernmental organizations, relevant organizations of the United Nations and non-governmental organizations to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur;

45. Requests the Special Rapporteur to continue his exchange of views with Member States and relevant mechanisms and treaty bodies within the United Nations system in order to enhance further their effectiveness and mutual cooperation;

46. Recognizes with deep concern the increase in anti-Semitism, Christianophobia and Islamophobia in various parts of the world, as well as the emergence of racial and violent movements based on racism and discriminatory ideas directed against Arab, Christian, Jewish and Muslim communities, communities of people of African descent, communities of people of Asian descent and other communities;

47. Requests the Special Rapporteur to collect information from all concerned, to respond effectively to reliable information that becomes available to him, to follow up on communications and country visits and to seek the views and comments of Governments and reflect them, as appropriate, in his reports;

48. Calls upon States to cooperate with the Special Rapporteur and to give serious consideration to his requests to visit their countries so as to enable him to fulfil his mandate fully and effectively;

49. Encourages closer collaboration between the Special Rapporteur and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in particular the Anti-Discrimination Unit;

50. Urges the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide States, at their request, with advisory services and technical assistance to enable them to implement fully the recommendations of the Special Rapporteur;

51. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Rapporteur with all the necessary human and financial assistance to carry out his mandate efficiently, effectively and expeditiously and to enable him to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

52. Takes note with appreciation of the recommendations contained in the interim report of the Special Rapporteur, and encourages the continuation of his work;

53. Urges Member States to consider implementing the recommendations contained in the reports of the Special Rapporteur, and invites other relevant stakeholders to implement those recommendations;

54. Calls upon the Special Rapporteur, in carrying out his mandate, to pay special attention to the increasing frequency of incidents of racism at various sporting events;

VI General

55. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

56. Decides to remain seized of this important matter at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Elimination of racism and racial discrimination".

Contemporary forms of racism

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/2003/24], the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, Doudou Diène (Senegal), highlighted activities he had undertaken since his appointment in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 670], with a view to starting a process of consensus-building in efforts to combat racism. He described serious allegations of racial discrimination and xenophobia that came to his attention in Côte d'Ivoire and Guyana, racial discrimination against the Roma/Gypsies/Sinti/Travellers, as well as measures taken by European States to deal with the problem, and ongoing manifestations of anti-Semitism. The Special Rapporteur examined allegations of discrimination in Germany, Greece, Guyana, the Russian Federation, Spain and the United Kingdom, of which summaries, communicated to the Governments concerned, and the replies thereto, were annexed to the report. To counter the resurgence of racial discrimination, in both its conventional and insidious new forms, the Special Rapporteur proposed, in the light of DDPA, a dual strategy emphasizing the legal and political issue of ratifying and implementing relevant international instruments, and the intellectual and ethical question of promoting better understanding of the culture of discrimination. He recommended a series of actions to the Commission.

In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 682], the Special Rapporteur submitted a January preliminary report [E/CN.4/2003/23], which examined the situation of Muslim and Arab peoples in various parts of the world, with special reference to physical assaults and attacks against their places of worship, cultural centres, businesses and properties in the aftermath of the 2001 terrorist attacks in the United States [YUN 2001, p. 60]. The Special Rapporteur noted that in the aftermath of the attacks, despite efforts by public institutions and political figures to forestall a drift towards xenophobia and racism, displays of intolerance towards people originating from the Near East, the Middle East and South-East Asia became more frequent. He warned that there was a serious risk that the situation of Muslims and Arabs since the attacks might lead to a long-term and far-reaching disruption of the international order if not dealt with urgently, in accordance with international law. He recommended that the Commission accord high priority to ways of dealing with terrorism; it should, in that context, pursue a legal strategy to implement relevant international instruments and an intellectual strategy to root out the culture and ideology of discrimination, xenophobia and intolerance. For that purpose, the Commission should promote the idea of combating racism through DDPA implementation, encourage States to take preventive measures to guarantee religious and cultural rights, keep the matter under review and request the Special Rapporteur to prepare in 2004 a more complete report on the topic.

The United States, in a 21 March response [E/CN.4/2003/G/48] to the Special Rapporteur's report, stated that, following the 2001 terrorist attacks [YUN 2001, p. 60], there was an increase in hate crimes against Arabs, Muslims and Sikhs (mistaken for Muslims) residing in the United States. The rate of those offences dropped within a few weeks until mid-January 2002, when it almost returned to the rate prevailing before the attacks. The United States highlighted its commitment to non-discrimination and efforts to combat biased attacks against Muslims and Arabs.

The Special Rapporteur visited Guyana and Trinidad and Tobago (14-25 July) [E/CN.4/2004/18/Add.1], where he undertook a comparative study of race relations, given the countries' similar historical heritage of slavery and colonialism and demographic composition. In Guyana, he noted that, although the country's Constitution outlawed discrimination, ethnic polarization had festered among Guyanese of African, Amerindian and Indian descent, who accounted for 35 per cent, 7 per cent and 49 per cent, respectively, of Guyana's estimated population of 765,000. The division was mostly reflected in the ethnic composition of the political parties and in the structure of State mechanisms, particularly the public sector, army and police, with severe economic, social and cultural consequences. The Special Rapporteur said the Guyanese authorities had informed him of their determination to break with the legacy of ethnic polarization through political reforms; the President and the leader of the opposition had signed a joint communiqué pledging to ensure democracy, peace and development in Guyana, and had signed a follow-up agreement. The Special Rapporteur urged the implementation of the reforms contained in the joint communiqué and follow-up initiatives. Dialogue and consensus in the democratic process should include the Amerindian community, which could help end the Afro- and Indo-Guyanese face-off that was a major cause of polarization, and initiation of a new order of democratic pluralism would end the relative neglect of the Amerindians.

In Trinidad and Tobago, the Special Rapporteur found a similar multi-ethnic population and society divided by conflict among communities and racial discrimination, but which faced less ethnic polarization compared to Guyana. Racial animosity, which broke out in the heat of political campaigns, did not take on alarming proportions as in Guyana because the tension was mostly tempered by the fact that the two dominant communities—the Indo-Trinidadians and Afro-Trinidadians—were not completely homogeneous. The periodic exploitation of race in political campaigns was offset by the people's strong desire to live together. Thus, Trinidad and Tobago enjoyed a distinct multicultural vitality in individual contacts and religious practices, and the political class, regardless of party, bore the responsibility to use that multicultural potential to achieve democratic, social and economic ends, said the Special Rapporteur. He proposed measures to facilitate progress towards a political commitment and democratic consensus, and made proposals to combat discrimination.

Commission action. On 14 April [res. 2003/4], by a recorded vote of 32 to 14, with 7 abstentions, the Commission requested the Special Rapporteur to examine the situation of Muslim and Arab peoples in various parts of the world in the aftermath of the events of 11 September 2001 and to submit a progress report in 2004. By a recorded vote of 38 to 1, with 13 abstentions, the Commission, on 23 April [res. 2003/30], welcoming the Special Rapporteur's reports, urged Member States to consider implementing his recommendations. The Special Rapporteur was requested to continue his exchange of views with Member States, relevant mechanisms and UN system treaty bodies. The Secretary-General was requested to assist him and to enable him to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth (2003) session.

Further reports of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/195 [YUN 2002, p. 662], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/313], transmitted an interim report of the Special Rapporteur on the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance. The report, which summarized the Special Rapporteur's activities during the year, drew the Assembly's attention to the persistence of racist propaganda on the Internet, the upsurge of racism in sports and anti-Semitism and Islamophobia. The Special Rapporteur described action taken or planned by Governments and other entities, and recommended that the Assembly alert Member States to the need for legislative and judicial action, as well as measures in the areas of information and education, to ensure that the legitimate struggle against terrorism did not breed new forms of discrimination.

At the invitation of the Government, the Special Rapporteur visited Canada (15-26 September) [E/CN.4/2004/18/Add.2], where an estimated population of 31 million comprised over 200 ethnic groups. The Special Rapporteur found that, although the country supported its diversity with a multifaceted, multicultural policy, democratic institutions, human rights protection and numerous federal and provincial programmes, racial discrimination persisted. The main victims were aboriginal peoples and those of African and Caribbean descent, who numbered 1.3 million and 662,200, respectively. Members of both communities reportedly suffered discrimination with regard to their rights to land and ancestral homes, and to education, housing and health facilities, as well as in the criminal justice system. There were also reports of discrimination against the Chinese, Jewish, Muslim and Arab communities. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Government enhance credibility and trust in its commitment to combat racism and discrimination by recognizing that such practices persisted despite its efforts to counter them. He proposed a national programme structured around a legal and intellectual strategy, based on DDPA, to fight racial discrimination.

In Colombia (27 September-11 October) [E/CN.4/2004/18/Add.3], the Special Rapporteur evaluated, against the background of the 1996 visit of his predecessor [YUN 1997, p. 631], progress achieved in improving the situation of Afro-Colombian and indigenous communities, who accounted for 27 per cent (12 million) and 2 per cent (875,516), respectively, of the country's estimated total population of 44 million. He also examined the situation of the Roma, who also suffered marked discrimination. Despite the adoption of laws and the establishment of promising institutions, the situation of indigenous, Afro-Colombian and Roma communities remained precarious. The Special Rapporteur, noting that the proposal of his predecessor that the Government adopt a general act on racism and racial discrimination had not been implemented, recommended adopting such an act prohibiting racial discrimination and establishing a national commission towards that end, with a view to promoting democratic and interactive multiculturalism. Other recommendations emphasized the importance of a lasting solution to the conflict in Colombia and respect for human rights (see p. 814); a national programme to combat racism, based on DDPA; ending the precarious economic and social situation of the vulnerable communities; addressing the situation of displaced persons; an intellectual and ethical strategy for eradicating discriminatory cultures and attitudes; and improving the status of parts of the indigenous population living on the island of San Andrés.

Racism and democracy

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 672], the High Commissioner, in a January report and later addendum [E/CN.4/2003/62 & Add.1], summarized replies received from Governments, UN agencies, regional organizations and national institutions to OHCHR's request for information on the incompatibility between democracy and racism, especially regarding the issue of political parties with racist platforms and actions to counter such trends.

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/41], the Commission invited its mechanisms and treaty bodies, particularly the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, to pay attention to human rights violations stemming from racism and xenophobia. The Special Rapporteur was invited to update the April 2001 study on political platforms which promoted or incited racial discrimination [YUN 2001, p. 617] and to report in 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/506], adopted resolution 58/159 without vote [agenda item 115].

The incompatibility between democracy and racism

The General Assembly,

Guided by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Charter of the United Nations, the International Covenants on Human Rights and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination,

Recalling the commitment reached in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, concerning the elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Recalling also the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance on 8 September 2001,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/41 of 23 April 2003,

Mindful of the responsibility of Governments to ensure such equality as is established in the relevant international and regional human rights instruments, inter alia, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination,

Reaffirming that acts of racial violence and discrimination do not constitute legitimate expressions of opinion, but rather are offences,

Alarmed by the rise of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in political circles, in the sphere of public opinion and in society at large,

Recognizing the fundamental role of education and other active policies in the promotion of tolerance and respect for others and in the construction of pluralistic and inclusive societies,

1. Condemns political platforms and organizations based on racism, xenophobia or doctrines of racial superiority and related discrimination, as well as legislation and practices based on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance as incompatible with democracy and transparent and accountable governance;

2. Affirms that racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance condoned by governmental policies violate human rights and may endanger friendly relations among peoples, cooperation among nations, international peace and security and the harmony of persons living side by side within one and the same State;

3. Affirms also that any form of impunity condoned by public authorities for crimes motivated by racist and xenophobic attitudes plays a role in weakening the rule of law and democracy and tends to encourage the recurrence of such acts;

4. Condemns the persistence and resurgence of neo-Nazism, neo-fascism and violent nationalist ideologies based on racial or national prejudice, and states that these phenomena can never be justified in any instance or in any circumstances;

5. Recognizes with deep concern the increase in anti-Semitism and Islamophobia in various parts of the world, as well as the emergence of racial and violent movements based on racism and discriminatory ideas against Arab, Jewish and Muslim communities, as well as communities of people of African descent, communities of people of Asian descent and other communities;

6. Emphasizes that the elimination of all forms of discrimination, especially gender, ethnic and racial discrimination, as well as diverse forms of intolerance, the promotion and protection of the human rights of persons of indigenous origin and members of indigenous communities and migrants, and respect for ethnic, cultural and religious diversity contribute to strengthening and promoting democracy and political participation;

7. Urges States to reinforce their commitment to promote tolerance and human rights and to fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance as a way to strengthen democracy, the rule of law and transparent and accountable governance, and in that regard recommends measures such as introducing or reinforcing human rights education in schools and in institutions of higher education;

8. Also urges States to ensure that their political and legal systems reflect the multicultural diversity within their societies and, where necessary, to improve democratic institutions so that they are more fully participatory and avoid marginalization and exclusion of, and discrimination against, specific sectors of society;

9. Underlines the key role that political leaders and political parties can and ought to play in strengthening and promoting democracy by combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and encourages political parties to take concrete steps to promote solidarity, tolerance and respect, inter alia, by developing voluntary codes of conduct, including internal disciplinary measures for violations thereof, so their members refrain from public statements and actions that encourage or incite racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

10. Invites the Inter-Parliamentary Union and other relevant inter-parliamentary organizations to encourage debate in, and action by, parliaments on various measures, including laws and policies, to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

11. Invites the mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights and the treaty bodies to continue to pay particular attention to violations of human rights stemming from the rise of racism and xenophobia in political circles and in society at large, with due consideration to a gender perspective, especially as regards their incompatibility with democracy;

12. Takes note of the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the incompatibility between democracy and racism;

13. Also takes note of the outcome of the expert seminar on the interdependence between democracy and human rights, held by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights at Geneva on 25 and 26 November 2002;

14. Invites the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance to submit to the General Assembly the study on the issue of political platforms that promote or incite racial discrimination, as requested by the Commission in its resolution 2003/41, and updated and expanded as appropriate;

15. Decides to continue consideration of the matter at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Elimination of racism and racial discrimination".

Protection of migrants

Report of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants, Gabriela Rodríguez Pizarro (Costa Rica), in a report covering her 2002 activities [E/CN.4/2003/85], analysed the situation of migrants deprived of their liberty, based on responses to a questionnaire she had circulated and on her personal observations. She reviewed fundamental international human rights obligations in the context of national legislation and practices, and discussed migration management and conditions of detention. The Special Rapporteur concluded that migrants were particularly vulnerable to the deprivation of liberty, noting a tendency among States to criminalize violations of immigration regulations and to punish migrants severely to discourage irregular migration. Victims of trafficking and smuggling were criminalized, detained and deported for offences committed as inevitable consequences of the violations they themselves had suffered. Often, there were no specific provisions for the detention of children and other vulnerable groups, resulting in their detention in conditions that violated their basic human rights. The Special Rapporteur recommended that infractions of immigration laws not be considered criminal offences under national legislation, and that Governments consider abolishing administrative detention and take other measures to ensure respect for the human rights of migrants deprived of their liberty.

An addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2003/85/Add.1 & Corr.1] summarized communications the Special Rapporteur had sent to 26 Governments and responses thereto, regarding individual cases of alleged violations of migrants' human rights and general situations concerning their rights in specific countries.

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/46], the Commission asked the Special Rapporteur to report to the General Assembly in 2003 and to the Commission in 2004. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/218 [YUN 2002, p. 674], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/58/121], summarized information received from 11 States on legal provisions, programmes, campaigns and policies they had established to protect migrants. The Secretary-General was encouraged by the increasing bilateral and regional dialogues, and cooperation between the United Nations and migration organizations. He welcomed the 1 July entry into force of the 1990 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, adopted in Assembly resolution 45/158 [YUN 1990, p. 594] (see p. 676). Member States that had not done so were urged to adhere to the Convention, to also consider ratifying the 2000 United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto on smuggling and trafficking in persons, adopted in Assembly resolution 55/25 [YUN 2000, p. 1048], and to include aspects relating to migrants in national plans of action towards DDPA implementation.

On 22 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 58/538).

Further reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/218 [YUN 2002, p. 674] and to Commission resolution 2003/46 (see p. 706), the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/275], transmitted a report of the Special Rapporteur, which described her activities and the situation of migrants' human rights. The Special Rapporteur observed that the strengthening of security policies and the tendency to consider migration a State security issue threatened migrants' rights. Rather than consider migration only as a national security matter, the Special Rapporteur recommended that the ministries of foreign affairs, health, education, social welfare and labour, as well as civil society, be involved in developing related national policies. Increased international cooperation and dialogue for the development of human rights-informed migration policies and comprehensive, coordinated and harmonized systems of migration management were necessary to combat irregular migration, smuggling, trafficking and violations of migrants' human rights. Efforts should be made to develop guidelines and tools to assess migration policies in the framework of existing international human rights norms.

On 22 December, the Assembly took note of the Special Rapporteur's report (decision 58/538).

At the invitation of the Government, the Special Rapporteur visited Spain (15-27 September) [E/CN.4/2004/76/Add.2], where she highlighted Spain's transformation, in a period of two decades, from a country of origin of migrants to one of transit and destination. The Special Rapporteur noted that, as at 30 June, migrants with a residence permit in the country numbered 1.4 million, of whom 35 per cent were of European origin, 30 per cent from Latin America and 27 per cent from Africa, of whom the great majority were Moroccans. She noted with concern a large number of illegal migrants totalling some 600,000, owing mainly to clandestine entry, facilitated by criminal networks and aggravated by difficulties in carrying out expulsions, as well as procedural delays. She observed that, although Spain was making efforts to adapt its legislation and policy aimed at curbing illegal migration and to comply with commitments made within the European Union (EU), irregular migration had not decreased, as migrants resorted to far more dangerous means of entering Spain through the criminal networks. The Special Rapporteur recommended measures to the Government to ensure the effective protection of immigrants' human rights.

In Morocco (19-31 October) [E/CN.4/2004/76/Add.3], the Special Rapporteur examined migration from the legislative, institutional/political and operational perspectives, and described migrants' vulnerabilities and the circumstances that exposed them to risks and abuse. Noting that over 2.5 million Moroccans lived overseas, of whom 85 per cent were in Europe, the Special Rapporteur observed that the phenomenon had been encouraged by the demand for labour abroad and the desire for family reunification or the forming of new families. An estimated 1 million Moroccans were living illegally abroad. The country had also become a country of transit for significant migration flows from sub-Saharan African countries to Europe. While expressing satisfaction with the Government's efforts to protect the rights of its nationals abroad, the Special Rapporteur was concerned about the situation regarding the rights of Moroccan irregular migrants and about conditions for sub-Saharanans in Morocco. In her recommendations, the Special Rapporteur emphasized the need to manage migration flows within the framework of socio-economic development and encouraged the EU to increase its contribution in that regard, to continue its dialogue with Morocco and to base their partnership on cooperation strategies aimed at combating illegal migration through technical assistance and joint development programmes.

Communications. In January [E/CN.4/2003/G/44] and March [E/CN.4/2003/G/55], Mexico presented its comments on issues raised in the Special Rapporteur's report on her visits to the common border between Mexico and the United States and to Mexico itself, respectively [YUN 2002, p. 673].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/190 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Protection of migrants

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/218 of 18 December 2002,

Reaffirming that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights proclaims that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set out therein, without distinction of any kind, in particular as to race, colour or national origin,

Reaffirming also the provisions concerning migrants adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, the International Conference on Population and Development, the World Summit for Social Development and the Fourth World Conference on Women,

Welcoming the provisions on the human rights of migrants contained in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance on 8 September 2001, and expressing its satisfaction at the important recommendations made for the development of international and national strategies for the protection of migrants and for the design of migration policies that fully respect the human rights of migrants,

Recalling its resolution 40/144 of 13 December 1985, by which it approved the Declaration on the Human Rights of Individuals Who are not Nationals of the Country in which They Live,

Recognizing the positive contributions that migrants frequently make, including through their eventual integration into their host society,

Bearing in mind the situation of vulnerability in which migrants and their families frequently find themselves, owing, inter alia, to their absence from their States of origin and to the difficulties they encounter because of differences of language, custom and culture, as well as the economic and social difficulties and obstacles to the return to their States of origin of migrants who are non-documented or in an irregular situation,

Bearing in mind also the need for a focused and consistent approach towards migrants as a specific vulnerable group, in particular migrant women and children,

Deeply concerned about the manifestations of violence, racism, xenophobia and other forms of discrimination and inhuman and degrading treatment against migrants, especially women and children, in different parts of the world,

Undertlining the importance of the creation of conditions that foster greater harmony between migrants and the rest of the society of the States in which they reside, with the aim of eliminating the growing manifestations of racism and xenophobia perpetrated in segments of many societies by individuals or groups against migrants,

Taking note of Advisory Opinion OC-16/99, issued by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights on 1 October 1999, on The Right to Information on Consular Assistance in the Framework of the Guarantees of the Due Process of Law, in the case of foreign nationals detained by the authorities of a receiving State,

Taking note also of Advisory Opinion OC-18/03, issued by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights on 17 September 2003, on the juridical situation and rights of undocumented migrants,

Encouraged by the increasing interest of the international community in the effective and full protection of the human rights of all migrants, and underlining the need to make further efforts to ensure respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all migrants,

Taking note of the decision of the International Labour Organization to have a general discussion on migrant workers, based on an integrated approach, at the International Labour Conference to be held in Geneva in June 2004,

1. Welcomes the renewed commitment made in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to take measures to ensure respect for and protection of the human rights of migrants, migrant workers and their families, to eliminate the increasing acts of racism and xenophobia in many societies and to promote greater harmony and tolerance in all societies;

2. Requests all Member States, in conformity with their respective constitutional systems, effectively to promote and protect the human rights of all migrants, in conformity with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the international instruments to which they are party, which may include the International Covenant on Human Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other applicable international human rights instruments;

3. Calls upon States to promote and protect fully the human rights of migrants, as contained in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

4. Acknowledges with satisfaction the entry into force of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, and the forthcoming entry into force of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and of the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

5. Strongly condemns the manifestations and acts of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance against migrants and the stereotypes often applied to them, and urges States to apply the existing laws when xenophobic or intolerant acts or manifestations or expressions against migrants occur, in order to eradicate impunity for those who commit xenophobic and racist acts;

6. Strongly condemns also all forms of racial discrimination and xenophobia with regard to access to employment, vocational training, housing, schooling, health services and social services, as well as services intended for use by the public, and welcomes the active role played by governmental and non-governmental organizations in combating racism and assisting individual victims of racist acts, including migrant victims;

7. Requests all States, in conformity with national legislation and applicable international legal instruments to which they are party, firmly to prosecute violations of labour law with regard to the conditions of work of migrant workers, including those related to, inter alia, their remuneration and the conditions of health and safety at work;

8. Calls upon all States to consider reviewing and, where necessary, revising immigration policies, with a view to eliminating all practices which victimize migrants and their families, and to provide specialized training for policy-making, law enforcement, immigration and other concerned government officials, including in cooperation with non-governmental organizations and civil society, thus underlining the importance of effective action to create conditions that foster greater harmony and tolerance within societies;

9. Reiterates the need for all States parties to protect fully the universally recognized human rights of migrants, especially women and children, regardless of their legal status, and to treat them humanely, in particular with regard to assistance and protection;

10. Reaffirms emphatically the duty of States parties to the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations of 1963 to ensure full respect for and observance of the Convention, in particular with regard to the right of foreign nationals, regardless of their immigration status, to communicate with a consular official of their own State in the case of detention, and the obligation of the State in whose territory the detention occurs to inform the foreign national of that right;

11. Reaffirms the responsibility of Governments to safeguard and protect the rights of migrants against illegal or violent acts, in particular acts of racial discrimination and crimes perpetrated with racist or xenophobic motivation by individuals or groups, and urges them to reinforce measures in this regard;

12. Urges all States to adopt effective measures to put an end to the arbitrary arrest and detention of migrants, including by individuals or groups;

13. Encourages Member States that have not yet done so to enact domestic criminal legislation to combat the international trafficking of migrants, which should take into account, in particular, trafficking that endangers the lives of migrants or includes different forms of servitude or exploitation, such as any form of debt bondage or sexual or labour exploitation, and to strengthen international cooperation to combat such trafficking;

14. Calls upon States, when enacting national security legislation measures, to observe national legislation and applicable international legal instruments to which they are party, in order to respect the human rights of migrants;

15. Encourages States to consider participating in international and regional dialogues on migration that include countries of origin and destination, as well as countries of transit, and invites them to consider negotiating bilateral and regional agreements on migrant workers within the framework of applicable human rights law and designing and implementing programmes with States of other regions to protect the rights of migrants;

16. Encourages all Governments to remove obstacles that may prevent the safe, unrestricted and expeditious transfer of earnings, assets and pensions of migrants to their country of origin or to any other countries, in conformity with applicable legislation, and to consider, as appropriate, measures to solve other problems that may impede such transfers;

17. Welcomes immigration programmes, adopted by some countries, that allow migrants to integrate fully into the host countries, facilitate family reunification and promote a harmonious and tolerant environment, and encourages States to consider the possibility of adopting these types of programmes;

18. Calls upon all States to protect the human rights of migrant children, in particular unaccompanied migrant children, ensuring that the best interests of the children and the importance of reuniting them with their parents, when possible and appropriate, are the paramount consideration, and encourages the relevant United Nations bodies, within the framework of their respective mandates, to pay special attention to the conditions of migrant children in all States and, where necessary, to put forward recommendations for strengthening their protection;

19. Requests States to adopt concrete measures to prevent the violation of the human rights of migrants while in transit, including in ports and airports and at borders and migration checkpoints, to train public officials who work in those facilities and in border areas to treat migrants and their families respectfully and in accordance with the law, and to prosecute, in conformity with applicable law, any act of violation of the human rights of migrants and their families, such as arbitrary detention, torture and violations of the right to life, including extrajudicial executions, during their transit from their country of origin to the country of destination and vice versa, including their transit through national borders;

20. Calls upon States to facilitate family reunification in an expeditious and effective manner, with due regard to applicable laws, as such reunification has a positive effect on the integration of migrants;

21. Encourages States of origin to promote and protect the human rights of those families of migrant workers which remain in the countries of origin, paying particular attention to children and adolescents whose parents have emigrated, and encourages international organizations to consider supporting States in this regard;

22. Encourages States, in cooperation with non-governmental organizations, to undertake information campaigns aimed at clarifying opportunities, limitations and rights in the event of migration, so as to enable everyone, in particular women, to make informed decisions, and to prevent them from becoming victims of trafficking and utilizing dangerous means of access that put their lives and physical integrity at risk;

23. Welcomes the proclamation of 18 December as International Migrants Day and the invitation to Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to observe it through, inter alia, the dissemination of information on the human rights and fundamental freedoms of migrants and on their economic, social and cultural contributions to their host and home countries, the sharing of experience and the design of actions to ensure their protection;

24. Urges States to consider ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, namely, the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children and the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, and to implement fully those instruments;

25. Takes note of the interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the human rights of migrants, and requests her to continue taking into account the recommendations contained in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action in the performance of her mandate, tasks and duties;

26. Requests all Governments to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur in the performance of the tasks and duties mandated, to furnish all information requested and to react promptly to her urgent appeals;

27. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution under the sub-item entitled "Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms", and requests the Special Rapporteur to submit to the Assembly at its fifty-ninth session an interim report on the fulfilment of her mandate.

Cultural prejudice

Report of High Commissioner (January). In response to a 2002 Commission request to the High Commissioner to consult States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs on the possibility of appointing a special rapporteur to implement the Commission's 2002 resolution on the promotion of cultural rights [YUN 2002, p. 677], the High Commissioner, in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/51], stated that no new information had been received since the Secretary-General's 2002 report summarizing the views of Governments and the UN system on human rights and cultural diversity [YUN 2002, p. 677].

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 2003/26], the Commission, reaffirming that cultural rights were an integral part of human rights, recognized that States had the responsibility to promote the full enjoyment of cultural rights and to enhance respect for different cultural identities. States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs were called on to implement the Commission's resolution, and the High Commissioner was asked to consult with them on the possibility of appointing a special rapporteur, whose mandate would be the comprehensive implementation of the resolution, and to report on the results in 2004.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/204 [YUN 2002, p. 677], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/309], summarized the views expressed by Member States, UN entities, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs on human rights and cultural diversity.

Report of High Commissioner (December). In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 677] and to Commission resolution 2003/26 (see above), the High Commissioner, in a December report with later addendum [E/CN.4/2004/41 & Corr.1 & Add.1], summarized replies received from 11 Governments and two UN system agencies on steps they had taken to promote the full enjoyment of cultural rights.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/167 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Human rights and cultural diversity

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as other pertinent human rights instruments,

Recalling also its resolutions 54/160 of 17 December 1999, 55/91 of 4 December 2000 and 57/204 of 18 December 2002, and recalling further its resolutions 54/113 of 10 December 1999 and 55/23 of 13 November 2000 on the United Nations Year of Dialogue among Civilizations,

Noting that numerous instruments within the United Nations system promote cultural diversity, as well as the conservation and development of culture, in particular the Declaration of the Principles of International Culture Cooperation proclaimed on 4 November 1966 by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization at its fourteenth session,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the adoption of the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations by its resolution 56/6 of 9 November 2001,

Welcoming also the contribution of the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held at Durban,

South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, to the promotion of respect for cultural diversity.

Welcoming further the Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, together with its Action Plan, adopted on 2 November 2001 by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization at its thirty-first session, in which member States invited the United Nations system and other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned to cooperate with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the promotion of the principles set forth in the Declaration and its Action Plan with a view to enhancing the synergy of actions in favour of cultural diversity,

Reaffirming that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated and that the international community must treat human rights globally in a fair and equal manner, on the same footing and with the same emphasis, and that, while the significance of national and regional particularities and various historical, cultural and religious backgrounds must be borne in mind, it is the duty of States, regardless of their political, economic and cultural systems, to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recognizing that cultural diversity and the pursuit of cultural development by all peoples and nations are a source of mutual enrichment for the cultural life of humankind,

Taking into account that a culture of peace actively fosters non-violence and respect for human rights and strengthens solidarity among peoples and nations and dialogue between cultures,

Recognizing that all cultures and civilizations share a common set of universal values,

Recognizing also that the promotion of the rights of indigenous people and their cultures and traditions will contribute to the respect for and observance of cultural diversity among all peoples and nations,

Considering that tolerance of cultural, ethnic, religious and linguistic diversities, as well as dialogue among and within civilizations, is essential for peace, understanding and friendship among individuals and people of different cultures and nations of the world, while manifestations of cultural prejudice, intolerance and xenophobia towards different cultures and religions generate hatred and violence among peoples and nations throughout the world,

Recognizing in each culture a dignity and value that deserve recognition, respect and preservation, and convinced that, in their rich variety and diversity, and in the reciprocal influences that they exert on one another, all cultures form part of the common heritage belonging to all humankind,

Convinced that the promotion of cultural pluralism and tolerance towards and dialogue among various cultures and civilizations would contribute to the efforts of all peoples and nations to enrich their cultures and traditions by engaging in a mutually beneficial exchange of knowledge and intellectual, moral and material achievements,

1. Affirms the importance for all peoples and nations to hold, develop and preserve their cultural heritage and traditions in a national and international atmosphere of peace, tolerance and mutual respect;

2. Welcomes the adoption of the United Nations Millennium Declaration of 8 September 2000, in which Member States consider, inter alia, that tolerance is one of the fundamental values essential to international relations in the twenty-first century and that it should include the active promotion of a culture of peace and dialogue among civilizations, with human beings respecting one another in all their diversity of belief, culture and language, neither fearing nor suppressing differences within and between societies but cherishing them as a precious asset of humanity;

3. Recognizes the right of everyone to take part in cultural life and to enjoy the benefits of scientific progress and its applications;

4. Affirms that the international community should strive to respond to the challenges and opportunities posed by globalization in a manner that ensures respect for the cultural diversity of all;

5. Expresses its determination to prevent and mitigate cultural homogenization in the context of globalization, through increased intercultural exchange guided by the promotion and protection of cultural diversity;

6. Affirms that intercultural dialogue essentially enriches the common understanding of human rights and that the benefits to be derived from the encouragement and development of international contacts and cooperation in the cultural fields are important;

7. Welcomes the recognition at the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance of the necessity of respecting and maximizing the benefits of diversity within and among all nations in working together to build a harmonious and productive future by putting into practice and promoting values and principles such as justice, equality and non-discrimination, democracy, fairness and friendship, tolerance and respect within and among communities and nations, in particular through public information and educational programmes to raise awareness and understanding of the benefits of cultural diversity, including programmes in which the public authorities work in partnership with international and non-governmental organizations and other sectors of civil society;

8. Recognizes that respect for cultural diversity and the cultural rights of all enhances cultural pluralism, contributing to a wider exchange of knowledge and understanding of cultural background, advancing the application and enjoyment of universally accepted human rights throughout the world and fostering stable, friendly relations among peoples and nations worldwide;

9. Emphasizes that the promotion of cultural pluralism and tolerance at the national, regional and international levels is important for enhancing respect for cultural rights and cultural diversity;

10. Also emphasizes that tolerance and respect for diversity facilitate the universal promotion and protection of human rights, including gender equality and the enjoyment of all human rights by all, and underlines the fact that tolerance and respect for cultural diversity and the universal promotion and protection of human rights are mutually supportive;

11. Urges all actors on the international scene to build an international order based on inclusion, justice, equality and equity, human dignity, mutual understanding and promotion of and respect for cultural diversity and universal human rights, and to reject all doctrines of exclusion based on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

12. Urges States to ensure that their political and legal systems reflect the multicultural diversity within their societies and, where necessary, to improve democratic institutions so that they are more fully participatory and avoid marginalization and exclusion of, and discrimination against, specific sectors of society;

13. Calls upon States, international organizations and United Nations agencies, and invites civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to recognize and promote respect for cultural diversity for the purpose of advancing the objectives of peace, development and universally accepted human rights;

14. Requests the Secretary-General, in the light of the present resolution, to prepare a report on human rights and cultural diversity, taking into account the views of Member States, relevant United Nations agencies and non-governmental organizations, as well as the considerations in the present resolution regarding the recognition and importance of cultural diversity among all peoples and nations in the world, and to submit the report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

15. Decides to continue consideration of this question at its sixtieth session under the sub-item entitled "Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms".

Discrimination against minorities

Report of Secretary-General (January). In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 679], the Secretary-General, in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/82], described activities carried out by the High Commissioner to promote the implementation of the 1992 Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 47/135 [YUN 1992, p. 722]. The report summarized international and regional approaches to minority protection and OHCHR expertise to assist Governments in situations involving minorities. The views of the Special Rapporteur on freedom of religion or belief regarding religious minorities were presented (see p. 717).

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 679], a February report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2003/87] analysed information on minority rights presented in the reports of special procedures, human rights treaty bodies and the Working Group on Minorities, particularly regarding conflict prevention. The analysis revealed many problems faced by minorities, which, if unresolved, might lead to tensions and conflicts. Those problems were mostly caused by the non-recognition of elements of minorities' identities, including their language, religion or history. One of the routes to minority-related conflict prevention was to address the legitimate claims of minorities and reduce inequalities between groups.

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/50], the Commission called on States to facilitate the participation of NGO and minority representatives in the Working Group on Minorities (see below) and asked the High Commissioner to seek voluntary contributions in that regard. The High Commissioner was also asked to promote the implementation of the 1992 Declaration in order to improve the cooperation of UN programmes and agencies regarding minority rights, to invite Governments and relevant intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to submit their views on how best to protect minorities' rights, to examine existing mechanisms and to report in 2004. The Secretary-General was asked to assist the Working Group to provide, at the request of Governments, qualified expertise for situations involving minorities, and to report in 2004.

Working Group activities. The five-member Working Group on Minorities, at its ninth session (Geneva, 12-16 May) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/19], reviewed the promotion of the 1992 Declaration, examined possible solutions to problems involving minorities, including the promotion of mutual understanding between and among minorities and Governments, and recommended measures to promote and protect minority rights. The Group also discussed its future role.

The Group had before it working papers, including "Towards a set of regional guidelines or codes of practice on the implementation of the Declaration" [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.5/2003/WP.1], a "Statement of principles on minority and group rights in South Asia" [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.5/2003/WP.2], the report of the seminar on minority rights: cultural diversity and development, held in Thailand [YUN 2002, p. 679], and "Possible new United Nations mechanisms for the protection and promotion of the rights of minorities" [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.5/2003/WP.3]. It considered, among other subjects, specific minority situations, national measures frequently called for by minorities and responses by Governments.

In its decisions and recommendations, the Group addressed ways to strengthen dialogue between minorities and Governments in order to better implement its mandate. It decided to consider in 2004 effective enforcement mechanisms and remedies, and to concentrate on the following themes: the relationship and differences between self-determination and autonomy, on which José Bengoa (Chile) was asked to prepare a paper; minorities and development and an examination of approaches by international development agencies to minority issues, regarding which the Minority Rights Group International (London) was asked to prepare a paper; identifying gaps in the international protection of minorities, with Asbjørn Eide (Norway) asked to prepare a synthesis of the discussion on the issue at the Group's current session, to be submitted to the High Commissioner for possible use in drafting a report to the Commission in 2004; strengthening international standards for protecting minority rights, with Vladimir Kartashkin (Russian Federation) asked to formulate, in cooperation with other Working Group members, suggestions on the possible contents of an additional protocol to the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (see p. 669) and remedies for violations thereof; and the role of national institutions in protecting minority rights, with OHCHR asked to provide information on relevant guidelines and practices of those institutions in relation to minority issues. The Working Group encouraged the holding of regional or subregional seminars and welcomed suggestions that such seminars be held in Central, South and East Asia, in the Americas and in Western and Central Africa, and recommended that they discuss regional codes of conduct or guidelines based on universal norms and international minority rights standards. The Group also recommended cooperation with the Council of Europe in organizing a seminar on the Roma, and that the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights prepare draft decisions on the establishment of a voluntary fund to support the participation of minority representatives and experts in the Group's meetings and on the proclamation of an international year for minorities, to be followed by a decade, for consideration by the Commission in 2004. The African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights was invited to provide information to the Group on the mandate and activities of the recently established African Commission Working Group on Indigenous Peoples/Communities. OHCHR was asked to organize training on universal and regional standards and mechanisms in order to strengthen minority representatives' cooperation with human rights procedures; prepare pamphlets for inclusion in the United Nations Guide for Minorities on regional conflict-prevention initiatives and development matters; provide for the Group's members to participate in regional human rights meetings, with a view to fostering cooperation with such mechanisms, and to report on progress made; consider ways of ensuring that papers submitted to the Group were made available, including on the UN Official Document System and web site; and to convene a two-day workshop in 2004 to mark the Group's tenth session and to discuss proposals for strengthening the promotion and protection of minority rights. Further measures were recommended to Governments, international, regional and national development agencies and UN entities.

Progress report. In response to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 680], Mr. Eide submitted a June progress report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/21], updating his 1993 study on peaceful and constructive approaches to situations involving minorities [YUN 1993, p. 869]. The report focused on setting the stage for a discussion of guidelines for the application of the 1992 Declaration and, in that context, reviewed the framework for minority protection under international law. It concluded that many minority concerns could be met through the responsible application and protection of universal human rights, and minorities should be protected from discrimination in their enjoyment of the rights set out in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 217 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 535] (see p. 669).

Report of Secretary-General (August). Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 56/162 [YUN 2001, p. 624], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/255], described expert assistance regarding minority issues made available to Governments, including on dispute prevention and resolution. The report also provided information on cooperation among UN bodies and regional organizations, the participation of NGOs and minorities, particularly from developing countries, in the Working Group on Minorities (see p. 712), and good practices in the areas of education and the effective participation of minorities in decision-making processes. The Secretary-General observed that the protection of minority rights had received increased international attention. OHCHR and the Working Group were pursuing regional approaches to minority issues, strengthening international cooperation to better protect minority rights and enhancing international, regional and national systems of minority protection so as to reduce tensions and prevent conflict. The focus in that regard was the effective participation of minorities in public life and in social and economic development.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [E/CN.4/2004/2 (res. 2003/23)], the Subcommission endorsed the Working Group's recommendations. Welcoming the Group's proposal for a two-day meeting prior to its 2004 session, the Subcommission recommended that minority experts, members of national human rights institutions, and representatives of regional mechanisms and of other intergovernmental organizations, such as the United Nations Development Programme and the World Bank, be invited to provide information on their policies concerning minority situations and on the incorporation of such concerns in their country programmes. Mr. Eide was asked to submit in 2004 the final report updating his 1993 study. OHCHR was asked to organize training workshops at the national level on the implementation of minority rights. It was also asked, when inviting Governments to submit their views on the protection of minority rights, to request them to provide the names of experts with a view to facilitating their participation in regional and international meetings, and to detail information about recent cases relating to minority rights. The Office was urged to reflect in its 2004 report to the Commission, the discussions within the Working Group on the possible establishment of a special procedure on minority issues. The Commission was requested to ask OHCHR to seek information from Governments on the national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities recognized within their countries, on whether the principle of self-identification was recognized in law or practice and on the measures in place for protecting the identity of minorities, and to transmit that information to the Working Group. The Subcommission recommended the proclamation of an international year for the world's minorities, to be followed by a decade, to advance the implementation of the 1992 Declaration, and the establishment of a voluntary fund to facilitate the participation of minority representatives in the Working Group; it decided to prepare draft decisions on both proposals for the Commission's consideration in 2004.

Also on 13 August [dec. 2003/111], the Subcommission adopted a draft decision requesting the Commission to endorse its recommendation to establish a voluntary fund.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/182 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Effective promotion of the Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 47/135 of 18 December 1992, as well as its subsequent resolutions on the Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities,

Considering that the promotion and protection of the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities contributes to political and social stability and peace and enriches the cultural diversity and heritage of society as a whole in the States in which such persons live,

Concerned by the frequency and severity of disputes and conflicts concerning minorities and their often tragic consequences, and concerned also that persons belonging to minorities are particularly vulnerable to displacement,

Recognizing that the effective promotion and protection of the rights of persons belonging to minorities is a fundamental part of the promotion and protection of human rights, and acknowledging that measures in this area can also contribute significantly to conflict prevention,

Emphasizing the role that national institutions can play in early warning for problems regarding minority situations,

Emphasizing also the importance of human rights education as an effective tool to promote an inclusive society and understanding of and tolerance towards and among persons belonging to minorities,

Acknowledging that the United Nations has an important role to play regarding the protection of minorities by, inter alia, taking due account of and giving effect to the Declaration,

Noting that the Working Group on Minorities of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights held its eighth and ninth sessions from 27 to 31 May 2002 and 12 to 16 May 2003, respectively,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Recognizes that respect for human rights and the promotion of understanding and tolerance by Governments as well as between and among minorities are central to the promotion and protection of the rights of persons belonging to minorities;
3. Reaffirms the obligation of States to ensure that persons belonging to minorities may exercise fully and effectively all human rights and fundamental freedoms without any discrimination and in full equality before the law, in accordance with the Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities, and as emphasized at the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held at Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001;
4. Encourages States, in their follow-up to the World Conference, to include aspects relating to minorities in their national plans of action and, in this context, to take forms of multiple discrimination fully into account;

5. Urges States and the international community to promote and protect the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities, as set out in the Declaration, including through the provision of adequate education and the facilitation of their participation in all aspects of the political, economic, social, religious and cultural life of society and in the economic progress and development of their country, and to apply a gender perspective while doing so;

6. Calls upon States to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of children belonging to minorities, taking into account that girls and boys may face different types of risks;

7. Urges States to take, as appropriate, all necessary constitutional, legislative, administrative and other measures to promote and give effect to the Declaration, and appeals to States to cooperate bilaterally and multilaterally, in accordance with the Declaration, in order to promote and protect the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities;

8. Calls upon States to take all appropriate measures to protect the cultural and religious sites of national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities;

9. Calls upon the Secretary-General to make available, at the request of Governments concerned, qualified expertise on minority issues, including the prevention and resolution of disputes, to assist in existing or potential situations involving minorities;

10. Calls upon the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to promote, within his mandate, the implementation of the Declaration, to continue to engage in a dialogue with Governments for that purpose and to disseminate widely the United Nations Guide for Minorities;

11. Requests the High Commissioner to continue his efforts to improve the coordination and cooperation among United Nations programmes and agencies on activities related to the promotion and protection of the rights of persons belonging to minorities and to take the work of relevant regional organizations active in the field of human rights into account in his endeavours;

12. Welcomes the inter-agency consultation of the High Commissioner with United Nations programmes and agencies on minority issues, and calls upon those programmes and agencies to contribute actively to this process;

13. Invites the human rights treaty bodies, when considering reports submitted by States parties, as well as the reports of special representatives, special rapporteurs and working groups of the Commission on Human Rights, to continue to give attention, within their respective mandates, to situations and rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities;

14. Encourages intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to continue to contribute to the promotion and protection of the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities;

15. Calls upon the Working Group on Minorities of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights to implement fully its mandate with the involvement of a wide range of participants, inter alia, by recommending, on the basis of its findings, further measures, as appropriate, for the promotion and protection of the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities;

16. Invites the High Commissioner to seek voluntary contributions to facilitate the effective participation, including through training seminars, in the work of the Working Group on Minorities of representatives of non-governmental organizations and persons belonging to minorities, in particular those from developing countries;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution and to continue to include examples of good practices in the field of education and of the effective participation of minorities in decision-making processes;

18. Decides to continue consideration of this question at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Discrimination based on work and descent

Working paper. In response to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 680], Mr. Eide and Yozo Yokota (Japan) submitted, in June, an expanded working paper on discrimination based on work and descent [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/24], which supplemented a 2001 working paper [YUN 2001, p. 625]. The current paper identified communities other than those traditionally referred to as "castes" in South Asia, which continued to suffer discrimination based on work and descent. Among the affected communities were endogenous groups in West and North-East Africa, such as the Dime people and the Watta; the Somali sab groups; the akhdam of Yemen; African and Japanese diaspora communities; and the Roma/Sinti/Travellers in Eastern Europe. The report analysed the main similarities regarding the causes of marginalization affecting the diverse communities, and concluded that discrimination based on work and descent was more widespread than might have been envisaged, and required much closer examination and attention by national Governments and the international human rights system. It recommended that the Subcommission mandate a further working paper on outstanding issues and/or a study for the possible drafting of principles and guidelines for eliminating discrimination based on work or descent; invite UNESCO, the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development and other UN agencies to undertake a more comprehensive review of the phenomenon; and propose the convening of a seminar to provide a basis for drafting the proposed principles and guidelines.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/22], the Subcommission called on States to formulate and implement promptly enhanced policies and action plans to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent. The Subcommission decided to entrust Messrs. Eide and Yokota with the task of preparing, without financial implications, a further working paper for submission in 2004.

Rights of non-citizens

Report of Special Rapporteur. In accordance with a 2000 Subcommission request [YUN 2000, p. 657], the Special Rapporteur on the rights of non-citizens, David Weissbrodt (United States), submitted, in May, his final report on a comprehensive study of the rights of non-citizens [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/23]. The report, which built on a 1999 working paper [YUN 1999, p. 611], a 2001 preliminary report [YUN 2001, p. 625] and a 2002 progress report [YUN 2002, p. 680], summarized relevant international law and jurisprudence pertaining to the rights of non-citizens and focused on the narrow exceptions to the rule that States might not discriminate against them. The report also identified some of the problems facing non-citizens. The Special Rapporteur concluded that the continued discriminatory treatment of non-citizens demonstrated the need for clear, comprehensive standards governing their rights, and for States' implementation of the standards and more effective monitoring of compliance. States should pursue universal ratification and implementation of the principal human rights treaties, particularly the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (see p. 676). The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Subcommittee continue his mandate. It should authorize the Special Rapporteur to cooperate with the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) in preparing a revised general recommendation on the issue. He added that his reports on the topic should be compiled into a single report, published in all UN official languages and distributed widely.

Addenda to the Special Rapporteur's report, also issued in May, updated international standards and jurisprudence of treaty-monitoring bodies relevant to the rights of non-citizens [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/23/Add.1]; updated information on the rights of non-citizens within regional human rights bodies, including the European Court of Human Rights and the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/23/Add.2]; presented examples of the human rights problems faced by non-citizens [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/23/Add.3]; and summarized comments received from 22 Member States [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/23/Add.4] in response to a questionnaire disseminated by the Special Rapporteur, pursuant to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 680].

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/21], the Subcommittee decided to transmit the Special Rapporteur's final report (see above) to the Commission, Governments, ILO, IOM, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, CERD, other human rights treaty bodies (see p. 667), the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and relevant UN entities, and asked him to cooperate with CERD on a revised general recommendation on the rights of non-citizens. Cooperation was encouraged among the Commission, Subcommittee, human rights treaty bodies, the Special Rapporteur on migrants and other relevant bodies within and outside the UN system in safeguarding the rights of non-citizens and in preparing the studies and working papers authorized by the Subcommittee.

Also on 13 August [dec. 2003/110], the Subcommittee decided to submit a draft decision to the Commission requesting the Special Rapporteur to compile and update all his reports, addenda and questionnaire replies into a single report and recommending to the Economic and Social Council a draft decision requesting publication of the consolidated report in all UN official languages and wide distribution.

Regulation of citizenship by successor States

Note by Secretariat. A July note of the Secretariat [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/33] informed the Subcommittee that Vladimir Kartashkin (Russian Federation) would make an oral presentation on the regulation of citizenship by successor States, in lieu of the working paper requested in a 2002 Subcommittee decision [YUN 2002, p. 681].

On 6 August [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/SR.11], Mr. Kartashkin, in a statement before the Subcommittee, noted that in the light of the adoption by the International Law Commission (ILC) of the final draft articles on the nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States [YUN 1999, p. 1230] and of General Assembly resolution 55/153 [YUN 2000, p. 1242], in which the Assembly took note of the draft articles and decided to include the item in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session, he believed it inappropriate to duplicate the work of ILC and the Assembly by preparing the working paper.

Rights of women married to foreigners

In response to a 2002 Subcommittee request [YUN 2002, p. 681], Mr. Kartashkin, in a June working paper [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/34], analysed international instruments that formulated principles and rules relating to the nationality of women married to foreigners. He noted that in many countries, women who married foreigners still faced discrimination, since marriage with foreigners involved the loss and change of their nationality and entailed an infringement of their civil, political, social and economic rights. Problems relating to the rights of women married to foreigners did not always receive due attention in international forums and, owing to globalization, marriage between nationals of different States was growing. Recommendations included the adoption of non-discriminatory regulations regarding the nationality of women married to forcigners and rules that guaranteed their equality with men. The Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) (see p. 1190) should request participating States to provide information on measures taken to guarantee the rights of women married to foreigners and, based on the information received, CEDAW should consider drafting a recommendation on the issue.

Non-discrimination

Note by Secretariat. A July note [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/15] by the Secretariat informed the Subcommission that Fried van Hoof (Netherlands), owing to health reasons, would be unable to submit the working paper on non-discrimination requested by the Subcommission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 681].

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/12], the Subcommission requested Emmanuel Decaux (France) to prepare, without financial implications, a working paper on non-discrimination as enshrined in article 2, paragraph 2, of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (see p. 670), regarding the exercise of the rights enunciated in the Covenant without discrimination as to race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status. It asked him to take into account other relevant studies of the Subcommission, to enable it to take a decision in 2004 on the feasibility of a study on the subject.

Religious intolerance

Report of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/2003/66], the Special Rapporteur on freedom of religion or belief, Abdelfattah Amor (Tunisia), summarized 37 communications, including two urgent appeals, he had sent to 24 States, and the replies received from seven States, regarding incidents and governmental action inconsistent with the provisions of the 1981 Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, adopted in General Assembly resolution 36/55 [YUN 1981, p. 881]. In the context of prevention activities, the Special Rapporteur pointed to the situation of freedom of religion or belief following the 2001 terrorist attacks in the United States [YUN 2001, p. 60]; follow-up action to the International Consultative Conference on School Education in relation to Freedom of Religion and Belief, Tolerance and Non-discrimination (Madrid Conference) (ibid., p. 627); and initiatives regarding interreligious dialogue. He concluded that an analysis of communications under the 1981 Declaration revealed violations of the principles of non-discrimination and tolerance regarding the freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief, and of freedom to dispose of religious property. Once again, there was a rise in intolerance and discrimination against religious minorities and women in situations of extreme risk, and an increase in religious extremism affecting all religions. The Special Rapporteur advocated education and interreligious dialogue as vital pillars to prevent violations resulting from religious extremism. Studies should be made of the issue of sects and religious extremism and an in-depth examination of the situation in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks should be undertaken.

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 682], the High Commissioner submitted a January report [E/CN.4/2003/17] on combating defamation of religions as a means to promote human rights, social harmony and religious and cultural diversity. The report reviewed initiatives and activities of UN intergovernmental bodies, human rights procedures and mechanisms, OHCHR and the specialized agencies. The High Commissioner noted that, as stated in the 2001 UNESCO Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity [YUN 2001, p. 1409], the defence of cultural diversity implied a commitment to human rights and fundamental freedoms. Thus, human rights were the cornerstone of a common humanity that built on the common values of tolerance, respect and dignity.

Commission action. On 14 April [res. 2003/4], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 32 to 14, with 7 abstentions, called on the High Commissioner to promote and include human rights aspects in the dialogue among civilizations, by integrating them into topical seminars and special debates on the positive contributions of cultures and religious and cultural diversity, to hold joint conferences with other international organizations to promote understanding of the universality of human rights and their implementation, and to report in 2004.

On 24 April [res. 2003/54], by a recorded vote of 51 to none, with 2 abstentions, the Commission asked the Special Rapporteur to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth (2003) session and to report to the Commission in 2004. The Secretary-General was asked to assist him.

The Economic and Social Council, on 23 July, endorsed the Commission's requests to the Special Rapporteur (decision 2003/252).

Further reports of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/208 [YUN 2002, p. 683], the Secretary-General, by an August note [A/58/296], transmitted the interim report of the Special Rapporteur, which summarized 41 communications sent to 33 States and the replies of five States. The Special Rapporteur reviewed his country visits and follow-up since his 1993 appointment and his activities regarding follow-up to the International Consultative Conference on School Education in relation to Freedom of Religion and Belief, Tolerance and Non-discrimination [YUN 2001, p. 627]. He concluded that the communications and replies contained in the report indicated that nearly two years after 11 September 2001, the events of that day impacted profoundly on the exercise of human rights, particularly the right to freedom of religion or belief. In many cases, States had used the pretext of security in response to terrorist threats to limit the exercise of that right. The Special Rapporteur hoped that, in addressing genuine security problems, States would respect their fundamental obligations regarding civil and political rights, and emphasized that action in the area of education and culture was a prerequisite to combat extremism and intolerance.

At the invitation of the Government, the Special Rapporteur visited Georgia (31 August-7 September) [E/CN.4/2004/63/Add.1], particularly the capital, Tbilisi, where the great majority of religious activities in the country occurred, and where most of the religious communities were based. He focused on the status and importance of the Georgian Orthodox Church, to which 70 per cent of the country's estimated population of 5.5 million belonged, and on the situation of non-Orthodox religious minorities and government policy on freedom of religion, especially regarding incidents of intolerance and religious violence that had occurred in recent years. The Special Rapporteur said the main concern was the frequency and extent of the persecution of many religious minorities in the country. Noting that acts of violence and religious intolerance, which appeared to have begun in 1999 or earlier, had grown more serious and diverse, the Special Rapporteur called on the Government to investigate such incidents, subject those responsible to due process and ensure that alleged victims were able to set forth their grievances without hindrance. The authorities should ensure that the practical application of the constitutional agreement and other relations between the Church and the State did not give rise to confusion between their powers that might affect the rights of religious minorities. He proposed action against messages that aroused religious hatred, and against religious intolerance in the education system.

In Romania (7-13 September) [E/CN.4/2004/63/Add.2], the Special Rapporteur focused mainly on the status of the Romanian Orthodox Church, to which some 19 million persons belonged, comprising 86.7 per cent of an estimated total population of 22 million, and on the situation of religious minorities, government policy regarding freedom of religion or belief and the return of religious property. He encouraged the Government to abolish Romanian law that distinguished between religions that were recognized and those that were not, and recommended that all religious minorities be consulted about a new draft law before its approval. As to the restitution of confiscated property, the Special Rapporteur, although he believed that the issue concerned situations that did not necessarily violate the right to freedom of religion or belief, asked the Government to speed up and complete the restitution process as soon as possible and to end its policy of non-involvement in related dispute-settlement arrangements. Regarding speeches and other means of conveying messages of religious intolerance and hatred in the press, in politics and in schools, the Special Rapporteur encouraged the authorities to be more proactive in identifying related incidents, and to punish and stop such behaviour. Education, he pointed out, was one of the main tools for combating intolerance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/184 by recorded vote (179-0-1) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Elimination of all forms of religious intolerance

The General Assembly,

Recalling that all States have pledged themselves, under the Charter of the United Nations, to promote and encourage universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Reaffirming that discrimination against human beings on the grounds of religion or belief constitutes an affront to human dignity and a disavowal of the principles of the Charter,

Recalling article 18 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and paragraph 4 of the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Reaffirming its resolution 36/55 of 25 November 1981, by which it proclaimed the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief,

Noting the provisions of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, aimed at combating religious intolerance,

Emphasizing that the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief is far-reaching and profound and that it encompasses freedom of thought on all matters, personal conviction and the commitment to religion or belief, whether manifested individually or in community with others, and in public or in private,

Reaffirming the call, made ten years ago in Vienna at the World Conference on Human Rights, for all Governments to take all appropriate measures in compliance with their international obligations and with due regard to their respective legal systems to counter intolerance and related violence based on religion or belief, including practices of discrimination against women and the desecration of religious sites, recognizing that every individual has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, expression and religion,

Underlining the important role of education in the promotion of tolerance, which involves the acceptance of and respect for diversity, and underlining also that education, in particular at school, should contribute in a meaningful way to promoting tolerance and the elimination of discrimination based on religion or belief,

Alarmed that serious instances of intolerance and discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, including acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by religious intolerance, continue to occur in many parts of the world and threaten the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Profoundly concerned at acts and situations of violence and discrimination resulting from religious intolerance that affect many women,

Deeply concerned at the overall rise in intolerance and discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, including restrictive legislation, administrative regulations and discriminatory registration and the arbitrary application of these and other measures,

Recognizing that such intolerance and discrimination frequently manifests itself through acts of violence against religious minorities in all parts of the world,

Believing that further intensified efforts are therefore required to promote and protect the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief and to eliminate all forms of hatred, intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief, as emphasized also at the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance,

1. Reaffirms that freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief is a human right derived from the inherent dignity of the human person and guaranteed to all without discrimination;

2. Urges States to ensure that their constitutional and legal systems provide effective guarantees of freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief, including the provision of effective remedies in cases where the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief is violated;

3. Also urges States to ensure, in particular, that no one within their jurisdiction is, because of their religion or belief, deprived of the right to life, liberty and security of person, the right to freedom of expression, the right not to be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and the right not to be arbitrarily arrested or detained, and to protect their physical integrity and bring to justice all perpetrators of violations of these rights;

4. Further urges States, in conformity with international standards of human rights, to take all necessary action to combat hatred, intolerance and acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by intolerance based on religion or belief, with particular regard to persons belonging to religious minorities;

5. Urges States to devote particular attention to combating all practices motivated by religion or belief which lead, directly or indirectly, to human rights violations and to discrimination against women;

6. Emphasizes that, as underlined by the Human Rights Committee, restrictions on the freedom to manifest religion or belief are permitted only if those limitations that are prescribed by law are necessary to protect public safety, order, health or morals, or the fundamental rights and freedoms of others, and are applied in a manner that does not vitiate the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion;

7. Urges States to ensure that all public officials and civil servants, including members of law enforcement bodies, the military and educators, in the course of their official duties, respect different religions and beliefs and do not discriminate on the grounds of religion or belief and to ensure that all necessary and appropriate education or training is provided;

8. Calls upon all States to recognize, as provided in the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, the right of all persons to worship or assemble in connection with a religion or belief and to establish and maintain places for those purposes;

9. Expresses its grave concern at all attacks upon religious places, sites and shrines, and calls upon all States, in accordance with their national legislation and in conformity with international human rights standards, to exert their utmost efforts to ensure that such places, sites and shrines are fully respected and protected and to take additional measures in cases where they are vulnerable to desecration or destruction;

10. Recognizes that legislation alone is not enough to prevent violations of human rights, including the right to freedom of religion or belief, and that the exercise of tolerance and non-discrimination by persons and groups is necessary for the full realization of the aims of the Declaration, and in this regard invites States, religious bodies and civil society to undertake dialogue at all levels to promote greater tolerance, respect and understanding of freedom of religion or belief and to encourage and promote, through the educational system and by other means, understanding, tolerance and respect in matters relating to freedom of religion or belief;

11. Emphasizes the importance of a continued and strengthened dialogue among religions or beliefs, including as encompassed in the dialogue among civilizations, to promote greater tolerance, respect and mutual understanding;

12. Takes note with appreciation of the interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on freedom of religion or belief, and encourages his continued efforts to examine incidents and governmental actions in all parts of the world that are incompatible with the provisions of the Declaration and to recommend remedial measures as appropriate;

13. Urges all States to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur, including by considering favourably his requests to visit their countries so as to enable him to fulfil his mandate even more effectively, welcomes the initiatives of States to collaborate with the Special Rapporteur, and encourages civil society to continue its active collaboration with him;

14. Urges States to make all appropriate efforts to encourage those engaged in education to cultivate respect for all religions or beliefs, thereby promoting mutual understanding and tolerance;

15. Encourages Governments, when seeking the assistance of the United Nations Programme of Advisory Services and Technical Assistance in the Field of Human Rights, to consider, where appropriate, including requests for assistance in the field of the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief;

16. Welcomes and encourages the continuing efforts of non-governmental organizations and religious bodies and groups to promote the implementation and dissemination of the Declaration, and further encourages their work in relation to promoting freedom of religion or belief and in highlighting cases of religious intolerance, discrimination and persecution;

17. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue its consideration of measures to implement the Declaration;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Special Rapporteur receives the necessary resources to enable him to discharge his mandate fully;

19. Decides to consider the question of the elimination of all forms of religious intolerance at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions", and requests the Special Rapporteur to submit an interim report to the General Assembly on the item.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/184:

Civil and political rights

Right to self-determination

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/197 [YUN 2002, p. 685], the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/180], summarized the views of one Member State on the right of peoples to self-determination, and provided an account of the Commission's consideration of the topic and related issues during the year.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/507], adopted resolution 58/161 by recorded vote (109-3-61) [agenda item 116].

Universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the importance, for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights, of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and embodied in the International Covenants on Human Rights, as well as in the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Welcoming the progressive exercise of the right to self-determination by peoples under colonial, foreign or alien occupation and their emergence into sovereign statehood and independence,

Deeply concerned at the continuation of acts or threats of foreign military intervention and occupation that are threatening to suppress, or have already suppressed, the right to self-determination of peoples and nations,

Expressing grave concern that, as a consequence of the persistence of such actions, millions of people have been and are being uprooted from their homes as refugees and displaced persons, and emphasizing the urgent need for concerted international action to alleviate their condition,

Recalling the relevant resolutions regarding the violation of the right of peoples to self-determination and other human rights as a result of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, adopted by the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-ninth and previous sessions,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination, including resolution 57/197 of 18 December 2002,

Reaffirming also its resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, containing the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which, inter alia, upholds the right to self-determination of peoples under colonial domination and foreign occupation,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the right of peoples to self-determination,

1. Reaffirms that the universal realization of the right of all peoples, including those under colonial, foreign and alien domination, to self-determination is a fundamental condition for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights and for the preservation and promotion of such rights;

2. Declares its firm opposition to acts of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, since these have resulted in the suppression of the right of peoples to self-determination and other human rights in certain parts of the world;

3. Calls upon those States responsible to cease immediately their military intervention in and occupation of foreign countries and territories and all acts of repression, discrimination, exploitation and maltreatment, in particular the brutal and inhuman methods reportedly employed for the execution of those acts against the peoples concerned;

4. Deplores the plight of millions of refugees and displaced persons who have been uprooted as a result of the aforementioned acts, and reaffirms their right to return to their homes voluntarily in safety and honour;

5. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue to give special attention to the violation of human rights, especially the right to self-determination, resulting from foreign military intervention, aggression or occupation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report on this question to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Right of peoples to self-determination".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/161:

Rights of Palestinians

By a recorded vote of 51 to 1, with 1 abstention, the Commission, on 14 April [res. 2003/3], reaffirming the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, requested the Secretary-General to transmit its resolution to Israel and all other Governments, to disseminate it as widely as possible, and to make available to the Commission before its 2004 session information pertaining to its implementation by the Government of Israel.

The Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2003/15], stating that he had received no reply from Israel to his request for information regarding the implementation of the Commission's 2002 resolution on the situation in occupied Palestine [YUN 2002, p. 685]. The United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) had undertaken activities to implement the Commission's resolution, by revising and updating the departmental publication: The question of Palestine and the United Nations, and through news coverage programmes, dissemination of press releases and related public information services.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/507], adopted resolution 58/163 by recorded vote (169-5) [agenda item 116].

The right of the Palestinian people to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Aware that the development of friendly relations among nations, based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, is among the purposes and principles of the United Nations, as defined in the Charter,

Recalling the International Covenants on Human Rights, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted at the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Recalling also the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations,

Recalling further the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Expressing the urgent need for the resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and for the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Affirming the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

1. Reaffirms the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including the right to their independent State of Palestine;

2. Urges all States and the specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system to continue to support and assist the Palestinian people in the early realization of their right to self-determination.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/163:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Western Sahara

On 14 April [res. 2003/1], the Commission urged Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro to cooperate with the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy, with a view to reaching a mutually acceptable political solution to their dispute. It reaffirmed support for further efforts of the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the African Union, for a UN-supervised referendum on self-determination of the people of Western Sahara (see p. 616). The parties were further called on to cooperate with ICRC to solve the problem of the fate of people unaccounted for and to abide by their obligation under international humanitarian law to release all those being held.

Mercenaries

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Commission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 687], the Special Rapporteur on the question of the use of mercenaries, Enrique Bernales Ballesteros (Peru), submitted a report [E/CN.4/2003/16] on the implementation of the resolution. He summarized replies received from States in response to his request for information on mercenary activities, described progress towards a legal definition of a mercenary and reviewed the current status of mercenary operations, focusing on the role of mercenaries in African conflicts and the relationship between terrorism and mercenary activities. Mercenary operations had increased, and recent studies and statements attributable to some government spokespersons had suggested the possible legalization of mercenary activities, by allowing and formalizing the recruitment and use of mercenaries by private security and military consultancy companies. Terrorist groups and organizations, with their shifting operational links to mercenaries, remained active. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Commission reaffirm its condemnation of mercenary activities as something incompatible with the purposes and principles of the United Nations and human rights, call on States to reject the practice and ensure that domestic law prohibited and punished it, and pay particular attention to the recent concentration of mercenaries in Africa, especially West Africa. He further recommended that the Commission invite States not parties to the 1989 International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries (see p. 723) to ratify or accede to the Convention.
