In response to General Assembly resolution 57/196 [YUN 2002, p. 687], the Secretary-General transmitted in July a report of the Special Rapporteur [A/58/115], which addressed the definition of mercenaries and made suggestions regarding the international adoption of a new definition. The Special Rapporteur noted that the gaps in the legal provisions on mercenaries rendered the international community, particularly the smallest countries, defenceless in the face of mercenary activities. The legal definition proposed by the Special Rapporteur, which was annexed to the report, reflected the multi-purpose criminal characteristics of mercenary activity, linking it to participation in armed conflicts, attacks against the self-determination of peoples, trafficking in persons and in arms/ammunition and drugs, and terrorism. He recommended that the Assembly: prohibit all activities that encouraged the presence of mercenaries, and suggest that the Commission extend the mandate on mercenary activities; circulate among States parties to the 1989 Convention the proposed new legal definition of mercenary, which would replace articles 1, 2 and 3 of the Convention, and suggest that they study it and adopt a position thereon; and arrange for the distribution of the proposed definition to enable the Special Rapporteur to gather additional comments and observations towards the review and acceptance of amendments to the Convention. Other aspects of the report dealt with the Special Rapporteur's activities and the status of the Convention.

Commission action. On 14 April [res. 2003/2], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 37 to 9, with 7 abstentions, called on States that had not done so to sign or ratify the Convention. The Commission requested OHCHR to publicize the adverse effects of mercenary activities and to render advisory services to affected States. The Special Rapporteur teur was asked to report in 2004, and the High Commissioner to assist him.

1989 International Convention

As at 31 December, 25 States had become parties to the 1989 International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/34 [YUN 1989, p. 825], with Guinea acceding in 2003. The Convention entered into force in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 632].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/507], adopted resolution 58/162 by recorded vote (125-26-29) [agenda item 116].

Use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/196 of 18 December 2002, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/2 of 14 April 2003,

Recalling also all of its relevant resolutions, in which, inter alia, it condemned any State that permitted or tolerated the recruitment, financing, training, assembly, transit and use of mercenaries with the objective of overthrowing the Governments of States Members of the United Nations, especially those of developing countries, or of fighting against national liberation movements, and recalling further the relevant resolutions and international instruments adopted by the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Organization of African Unity, inter alia, the Organization of African Unity Convention for the elimination of mercenarism in Africa,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations concerning the strict observance of the principles of sovereign equality, political independence, the territorial integrity of States, the self-determination of peoples, the non-use of force or of the threat of use of force in international relations and non-interference in affairs within the domestic jurisdiction of States,

Reaffirming also that, by virtue of the principle of self-determination, all peoples have the right freely to determine their political status and to pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that every State has the duty to respect this right in accordance with the provisions of the Charter,

Reaffirming further the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Alarmed and concerned at the danger that the activities of mercenaries constitute to peace and security in developing countries, in particular in Africa and in small States,

Deeply concerned at the loss of life, the substantial damage to property and the negative effects on the policy and economies of affected countries resulting from criminal mercenary activities,

Convinced that, notwithstanding the way in which they are used or the form that they take to acquire some semblance of legitimacy, mercenaries or mercenary-related activities are a threat to peace, security and the self-determination of peoples and an obstacle to the enjoyment of human rights by peoples,

1. Welcomes the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the question of the use of mercenaries as a means of impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination;

2. Reaffirms that the use of mercenaries and their recruitment, financing and training are causes for grave concern to all States and violate the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Recognizes that armed conflict, terrorism, arms trafficking and covert operations by third Powers, inter alia, encourage the demand for mercenaries on the global market;

4. Urges all States to take the necessary steps and to exercise the utmost vigilance against the menace posed by the activities of mercenaries and to take legislative measures to ensure that their territories and other territories under their control, as well as their nationals, are not used for the recruitment, assembly, financing, training and transit of mercenaries for the planning of activities designed to impede the right of peoples to self-determination, to destabilize or overthrow the Government of any State or to dismember or impair, totally or in part, the territorial integrity or political unity of sovereign and independent States conducting themselves in compliance with the right of peoples to self-determination;

5. Requests all States to exercise the utmost vigilance against any kind of recruitment, training, hiring or financing of mercenaries by private companies offering international military consultancy and security services, as well as to impose a specific ban on such companies intervening in armed conflicts or actions to destabilize constitutional regimes;

6. Welcomes the entry into force of the International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider taking the necessary action to accede to or ratify the Convention;

7. Welcomes also the cooperation extended by those countries that have received visits from the Special Rapporteur;

8. Welcomes further the adoption by some States of national legislation that restricts the recruitment, assembly, financing, training and transit of mercenaries;

9. Calls upon States to investigate the possibility of mercenary involvement whenever and wherever criminal acts of a terrorist nature occur and to bring to trial those found responsible or to consider their extradition, if so requested, in accordance with domestic law and applicable bilateral or international treaties;

10. Welcomes the organization, in Geneva from 13 to 17 May 2002, in compliance with General Assembly resolution 56/232 of 24 December 2001, of the second meeting of experts on traditional and new forms of mercenary activities as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, and takes note of its conclusions;

11. Takes note with appreciation of the proposal for an enhanced legal definition of mercenaries contained in the report of the Special Rapporteur, and requests the Secretary-General to circulate it to the Member States and to seek their views in order to include them in the report of the Special Rapporteur to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

12. Requests the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, as a matter of priority, to publicize the adverse effects of the activities of mercenaries on the right of peoples to self-determination and, when requested and where necessary, to render advisory services to States that are affected by those activities;

13. Requests the Special Rapporteur to continue to take into account, in the discharge of his mandate, the fact that mercenary activities continue to occur in many parts of the world and are taking on new forms, manifestations and modalities;

14. Recommends that the Commission on Human Rights renew the mandate of the Special Rapporteur for a period of three years;

15. Urges all States to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur in the fulfilment of his mandate;

16. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide the Special Rapporteur with all the necessary assistance and support for the fulfilment of his mandate, both professional and financial, including through the promotion of cooperation between the Special Rapporteur and other components of the United Nations system that deal with countering mercenary-related activities;

17. Requests the Special Rapporteur to consult States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in the implementation of the present resolution and to report, with specific recommendations, to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session his findings on the use of mercenaries to undermine the right of peoples to self-determination;

18. Decides to consider at its fifty-ninth session the question of the use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination under the item entitled "Right of peoples to self-determination".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/162:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Australia, Austria, Croatia, Cyprus, Georgia, Greece, Ireland, Kazakhstan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Malta, Nauru, New Zealand, Palau, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Tonga, Turkey, Uzbekistan.

Administration of justice

Commission action. On 23 April [dec. 2003/108], the Commission decided to approve the Subcommission's 2002 decision [YUN 2002, p. 689] to appoint Leïla Zerrougui (Algeria) as Special Rapporteur to conduct a detailed study of discrimination in the criminal justice system, its request that she submit a preliminary report in 2003, a progress report in 2004 and a final report in 2005, and its request to the Secretary-General to assist her.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision and approved its request to the Secretary-General (decision 2003/265).

Working group activities. Established by the Subcommission on 28 July [dec. 2003/101], the five-member sessional working group on the administration of justice met on 28 and 30 July and 7 August [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/6]. The group discussed the imposition of the death penalty; the privatization of prisons; current trends in international penal justice; the domestic implementation in practice of the obligation to provide domestic remedies; mechanisms of truth and reconciliation; and witnesses and rules of evidence, including medical secrecy, problems in prosecuting rape and sexual assault cases, especially the problem of gender discrimination, and the need for guidelines on the criminalization, investigation and prosecution of acts of serious sexual violence during armed conflict against civilians and provision of remedies.

The group considered a working paper on the problem of evidence in cases of sexual abuse [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/WG.1/CRP.1], prepared by Lalaina Rakotoarisoa (Madagascar), and proposed that she prepare an expanded background paper examining procedural and evidential barriers that impacted on victims of sexual abuse.

Pursuant to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 689], the group had before it a preliminary report on a study of discrimination in the criminal justice system [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/3], submitted by Ms. Zerrougui, which clarified the general approach and conceptual framework of the study, and proposed, for the Subcommission's consideration, a work plan culminating in the elaboration of conclusions and recommendations, including guidelines, to guarantee vulnerable persons the right to non-discrimination and respect for their basic rights in the criminal justice system. In accordance with a further request of the Subcommission [YUN 2002, p. 690], the group had before it a June report on the administration of justice through military tribunals [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/4], submitted by Mr. Decaux, which updated a previous report on the subject considered in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 689]. The author analysed the special jurisdictions of military tribunals and of the judicial guarantees in the concept of an independent and impartial tribunal. He concluded that the administration of justice through military tribunals was being gradually "demilitarized" through a process that limited their jurisdiction and strengthened guarantees of a fair trial, with a view to making the tribunals an integral part of the general judicial system. He made recommendations regarding the competence of military courts to try civilians, trial of persons accused of serious human rights violations, limitations on military secrecy, guarantees of habeas corpus, the right to an independent and impartial tribunal, publicity of hearings, strengthening the rights of the defence, victims' access to proceedings, recourse procedures in ordinary courts, the principle of due obedience, conscientious objection to military service, the trial of children and minors under 18 years, and the death penalty.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/7], the Subcommission, concerned that historically discriminatory practices might sometimes lead to disproportionate numbers of the poor and minorities in a criminal justice system, urged States to examine their treatment of convicted persons after they had served their punishment. It requested the sessional working group to examine the question and suggest types of information that could be collected to understand better the extent of discrimination against convicted persons who had served their sentences and the relevant international human rights standards applicable in such situations.

Also on 13 August [res. 2003/8], the Subcommission asked Mr. Decaux to continue to develop principles governing the administration of justice through military tribunals and to submit an updated report in 2004.

In further action on 13 August [dec. 2003/107], the Subcommission asked Ms. Rakotoarisoa to prepare, without financial implications, an expanded working paper on the difficulties of establishing guilt and/or responsibility with regard to crimes of sexual violence and to submit it in 2004.

On the same date [dec. 2003/104], the Subcommission asked working group member Florizelle O'Connor (Jamaica) to prepare, without financial implications, a working paper on women in prison and to submit it in 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/183 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Human rights in the administration of justice

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the principles embodied in articles 3, 5, 8, 9 and 10 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the relevant provisions of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocols thereto, in particular article 6 of the Covenant, which states, inter alia, that no one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life and prohibits the imposition of the death penalty for crimes committed by persons below 18 years of age, and article 10, which provides that all persons deprived of their liberty shall be treated with humanity and with respect for the inherent dignity of the human person,

Bearing in mind also the relevant provisions of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, in particular the right to equal treatment before tribunals and all other organs administering justice, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in particular article 37, according to which every child deprived of liberty shall be treated in a manner that takes into account the needs of persons of his or her age, and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, in particular the obligation to treat men and women equally in all stages of procedures in courts and tribunals,

Calling attention to the numerous international standards in the field of the administration of justice,

Convinced that the independence and impartiality of the judiciary are essential prerequisites for the protection of human rights and for ensuring that there is no discrimination in the administration of justice and should therefore be respected in all circumstances,

Emphasizing that the right to access to justice, as contained in applicable international human rights instruments, forms an important basis for strengthening the rule of law through the administration of justice,

Mindful of the importance of ensuring respect for the rule of law and human rights in the administration of justice, in particular in post-conflict situations, as a crucial contribution to building peace and justice and ending impunity,

Recalling the Guidelines for Action on Children in the Criminal Justice System and the establishment and subsequent meetings of the coordination panel on technical advice and assistance in juvenile justice,

Calling attention to the relevant provisions of the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, and of the plans of action for its implementation and follow-up,

Recalling its resolution 56/161 of 19 December 2001, as well as Commission on Human Rights resolution 2002/47 of 23 April 2002 and Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/30 of 22 July 2003, entitled "United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice",

1. Reaffirms the importance of the full and effective implementation of all United Nations standards on human rights in the administration of justice;

2. Reiterates its call to all Member States to spare no effort in providing for effective legislative and other mechanisms and procedures, as well as adequate resources, to ensure the full implementation of those standards;

3. Affirms that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism, including in the administration of justice, complies with their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law;

4. Invites Governments to provide training, including anti-racist, multicultural and gender-sensitive training, in human rights in the administration of justice, including juvenile justice, to all judges, lawyers, prosecutors, social workers, immigration and police officers and other professionals concerned, including personnel deployed in international field presences;

5. Invites States to make use of technical assistance offered by the relevant United Nations programmes in order to strengthen national capacities and infrastructures in the field of the administration of justice;

6. Appeals to Governments to include in their national development plans the administration of justice as an integral part of the development process and to allocate adequate resources for the provision of legal-aid services with a view to promoting and protecting human rights, and invites the international community to respond favourably to requests for financial and technical assistance for the enhancement and strengthening of the administration of justice;

7. Encourages the regional commissions, the specialized agencies, United Nations institutes active in the areas of human rights and crime prevention and criminal justice, and other relevant parts of the United Nations system, as well as intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, including national professional associations concerned with promoting United Nations standards in this field, and other segments of civil society, including the media, to continue to develop their activities in promoting human rights in the administration of justice;

8. Takes note with interest of the debates held in the Security Council on the agenda item entitled "Justice and the Rule of Law: the United Nations role";

9. Invites the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, as well as the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the crime programme of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, to closely coordinate their activities relating to the administration of justice;

10. Calls upon mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary bodies, including special rapporteurs, special representatives and working groups, to continue to give special attention to questions relating to the effective promotion and protection of human rights in the administration of justice, including juvenile justice, and to provide, where appropriate, specific recommendations in this regard, including proposals for advisory services and technical assistance measures;

11. Calls upon the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to reinforce, within his mandate, his activities relating to national capacity-building in the field of the administration of justice, in particular in post-conflict situations;

12. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to continue organizing training courses and other relevant activities aimed at enhancing the promotion and protection of human rights in the field of the administration of justice, and welcomes the publication of the Manual on Human Rights for Judges, Prosecutors and Lawyers within the framework of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004;

13. Welcomes the increased attention paid to the issue of juvenile justice by the High Commissioner and the United Nations Children's Fund, in particular through technical assistance activities, and, taking into account the fact that international cooperation to promote juvenile justice reform has become a priority within the United Nations system, encourages the further activities of the High Commissioner and the United Nations Children's Fund, within their mandates, in this regard;

14. Calls upon the coordination panel on technical advice and assistance in juvenile justice to further increase cooperation among the partners involved, to share information and to pool their capacities and interests in order to increase the effectiveness of programme implementation;

15. Invites Governments, relevant international and regional bodies, national human rights institutions and non-governmental organizations to devote increased attention to the issue of women in prison, including the children of women in prison, with a view to identifying the key problems and ways in which they can be addressed, and notes the proposal of the Sub-commission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights to prepare a working paper on this question;

16. Underlines the importance of rebuilding and strengthening structures for the administration of justice and respect for the rule of law and human rights in post-conflict situations, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure system-wide coordination and coherence of programmes and activities of the relevant parts of the United Nations system in the field of the administration of justice in post-conflict situations, including assistance provided through United Nations field presences;

17. Stresses the special need for national capacity-building in the field of the administration of justice, in particular through reform of the judiciary, the police and the penal system, as well as juvenile justice reform, in order to establish and maintain stable societies and the rule of law in post-conflict situations, and in this context welcomes the role of the Office of the High Commissioner in supporting the establishment and functioning of transitional justice mechanisms in post-conflict situations;

18. Decides to consider the question of human rights in the administration of justice at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Compensation for victims

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/34], the Commission asked the Secretary-General to circulate to Member States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs the draft text of the basic principles and guidelines on the right to restitution, compensation and rehabilitation for victims of grave violations of human rights and humanitarian law [YUN 2000, p. 665], and to request them to send their comments to OHCHR. Taking note of the 2002 consultative meeting held to finalize the text [YUN 2002, p. 690], the Commission asked the High Commissioner to hold a second consultative meeting (see below), with a view to finalizing the text; to consider, if appropriate, options for the adoption of those principles and guidelines; and to report in 2004. The Chairperson-Rapporteur of the 2002 consultative meeting was asked to prepare, in consultation with independent experts Theo van Boven (Netherlands) and Cherif Bassiouni (Egypt/United States), a revised version of the text and to conduct informal consultations with interested parties.

Consultative meeting. In accordance with Commission resolution 2003/34 (see above), OHCHR, in cooperation with Chile, convened the second international consultation (Geneva, 20, 21 and 23 October) [E/CN.4/2004/57] to finalize the draft basic principles and guidelines. Participants considered a revised text and a proposal put forward by the Chairperson-Rapporteur following informal consultations, which were appended to the meeting's report. Subsequently, the Chairperson-Rapporteur summarized the main issues addressed and announced that he planned to convene an additional one-day informal consultation prior to the Commission's 2004 session, in order to give delegations more time to examine the proposal and revised text, and to submit their written comments and suggestions.

State of siege or emergency

As requested by the Commission in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 664], OHCHR submitted, in June [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/39], a list of States in which a state of emergency had been proclaimed before June 2001 and continued thereafter, as well as states of emergency proclaimed between June 2001 and May 2003.

Civilians in armed conflict

On 15 December [meeting 4882], the Security Council discussed the protection of civilians in armed conflict. Its President made statement S/PRST/2003/27 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council recalls its resolutions 1265 (1999) of 17 September 1999 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, as well as the statements by its President of 12 February 1999 (S/PRST/1999/6) and 15 March (S/PRST/2002/6) and 20 December 2002 (S/PRST/2002/41), and reaffirms the need to keep the protection of civilians in armed conflict as an important item on the Council's agenda.

The Council also reaffirms its concern at the suffering inflicted upon and hardships borne by civilians during armed conflict and recognizes the consequent impact that this has on durable peace, reconciliation and development. The Council strongly condemns all attacks and acts of violence directed against civilians or other persons protected under international law, in particular international humanitarian law, in situations of armed conflict, including attacks and acts of violence against women, children, refugees, internally displaced persons and other vulnerable groups. The Council reaffirms the need for parties to armed conflict to take all possible measures to ensure the safety, security and freedom of movement of United Nations and associated personnel as well as personnel of international humanitarian organizations in accordance with applicable international law and recognizes that secure humanitarian access and the swift re-establishment of the rule of law, justice and reconciliation are essential components for an effective transition from conflict to peace. The Council reiterates its call to all parties to armed conflict to comply fully with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and with the rules and principles of international law, in particular international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law, and to implement fully the relevant decisions of the Council. The Council recalls the obligations of States to respect and to ensure respect for international humanitarian law, including the four Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and emphasizes the responsibility of States to end impunity and to prosecute those responsible for genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity and serious violations of humanitarian law. The Council also notes with interest the proposal presented by the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs at the 9 December open meeting of the Council for a "10-point action plan" on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, and looks forward to further discussions and consultations on this issue.

Recalling that on 15 March 2002 the Council adopted the aide-memoire annexed to the statement by its President as a means to facilitate its consideration of issues pertaining to protection of civilians, and recalling further that in the statement by its President of 20 December 2002 the Council expressed its willingness to update the aide-memoire annually in order to reflect emerging trends in the protection of civilians in armed conflict. The Council adopts the updated aide-memoire contained in the annex to the present statement by its President. The Council reiterates the importance of the aide-memoire as a practical tool that provides a basis for improved analysis and diagnosis of key protection issues during deliberations on peacekeeping mandates, and stresses the need to implement the approaches set out therein on a more regular and consistent basis, taking into account the particular circumstances of each conflict situation, and undertakes to remain actively seized of the matter.

Annex

Protection of civilians in armed conflict*Aide-memoire for the consideration of issues pertaining to the protection of civilians during the Security Council's deliberation of peacekeeping mandates

Protection of civilians in armed conflict is at the core of the work of the Security Council for peace and security. On 15 March 2002, the Council adopted an aide-memoire as a practical guide for its consideration of protection issues and agreed to review and update its contents periodically. The present document provides the first update of this important operational tool, adopted as an annex to the statement by the President of the Security Council of 15 December 2003.

In a letter dated 21 June 2001 from the President of the Security Council addressed to the Secretary-General, the members of the Council welcomed the report of the Secretary-General of 30 March 2001 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, and were of the view that further advice of the Secretary-General would be useful in the Council's consideration of the issues contained in the report.

In order to facilitate due consideration, whenever appropriate, of issues pertaining to the protection of civilians in its deliberations on the establishment, change, or close of peacekeeping operations, the members of the Council suggested that an aide-memoire listing those issues that are relevant in this regard should be drafted in close cooperation with the Council.

The present aide-memoire is the result of an interactive consultation between the Council and the Secretariat, and comprises the experiences of a wide range of agencies within the United Nations, including the Inter-Agency Standing Committee. The document is based on the Council's previous consideration of these issues, including resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000. It highlights primary objectives for Council action, offers specific issues for consideration in meeting those objectives, and lists previous Council resolutions and presidential statements that make reference to such concerns.

Bearing in mind that each peacekeeping mandate has to be designed on a case-by-case basis, the document is not intended as a blueprint. The relevance and practicality of each issue described has to be considered and adapted to the specific conditions in each situation. As highlighted in the report of the Secretary-General entitled "No exit without strategy", the Council should reach agreement on clear and achievable mandates for peace operations based on a common understanding of the conflict. In this respect, mobilization, from the outset, of necessary funding and adequate resources needs to be an integrated part of the Council's overall consideration.

Most frequently civilians are caught in circumstances of dire need where a peacekeeping operation has not been established. Such situations may require the Council's urgent attention. The present aide-memoire may therefore also provide guidance in circumstances where the Council may wish to consider action outside the scope of a peacekeeping operation.

As a practical tool, the aide-memoire is without prejudice to the provisions of Council resolutions and other decisions by the Council. The document is regularly reviewed and updated to reflect the latest concerns pertaining to the protection of civilians in armed conflict, including new trends and measures to address them.

*Primary objectivesIssues for considerationPrecedentsSecurity for displaced persons and host communities

1. To prioritize and support the immediate protection needs of displaced persons and civilians in host communities.

Measures to enhance security for displaced persons, support the location of camps in secure areas, and facilitate return under safe and dignified conditions.

Measures to enhance security for civilians who remain in their communities and for host communities living in or around areas where refugees or internally displaced persons take shelter.

Provision of appropriate and rapid international assistance.

Resolutions 1509(2003), paras. 3 (j) and (j) and 6, 1508(2003), para. 10, 1493(2003), para. 27, 1484(2003), para. 1, 1479(2003), para. 10, 1470(2003), para. 16, 1427(2002), para. 12, 1419(2002), para. 11, 1393(2002), para. 11, 1355(2001), para. 14, 1346(2001), paras. 7-9, 1319(2000), para. 1, 1296(2000), paras. 12 and 14, 1286(2000), para. 12, 1270(1999), para. 19, 1244(1999), paras. 9 (c), 11 (k) and 18 and 1208(1998), paras. 4 and 12.

2. To prioritize and support the maintenance of the humanitarian and civilian character of camps and settlements for displaced persons.

Provision of external and internal security (screening procedures to separate armed elements from civilians; demobilization and disarmament measures; technical assistance and training by international civilian police and/or military observers; location of camps at a significant distance from international border and risk zones; regional and subregional arrangements).

Cooperation with host State in provision of security measures, including through technical assistance and training. Deployment of multidisciplinary assessment and security evaluation teams.

Regional approach to massive population displacement, including appropriate security arrangements.

Primary objectives	Issues for consideration	Precedents
Access to vulnerable populations
To facilitate safe and unimpeded access to vulnerable populations as the fundamental prerequisite for humanitarian assistance and protection.	Appropriate security arrangements (role of multinational force; safe corridors; protected areas; armed escorts). Engagement in sustained dialogue with all parties to the armed conflict. Facilitation of the delivery of humanitarian assistance. Compliance with obligations under relevant international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law. Counter-terrorism measures (legislation, training, enforcement, regional and international cooperation) in full compliance with all obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law.	Resolutions 1509(2003), paras. 3 (j), 5 and 8, 1502(2003), paras. 4 and 5 (b), 1494(2003), para. 25, 1493(2003), paras. 12, 15 and 25, 1479(2003), para. 10, 1456(2003), annex, para. 6, 1445(2002), para. 14, 1419(2002), para. 12, 1417(2002), para. 7, 1405(2002), para. 1, 1379(2001), paras. 4 and 5, 1378(2001), para. 2, 1314(2000), paras. 7 and 14, 1296(2000), paras. 8, 10, 12 and 15, 1286(2000), paras. 9 and 10, 1279(1999), paras. 5 (e) and 7, 1272(1999), paras. 2 (d), 10 and 11, 1270(1999), paras. 8 (d) and (g), 13, 14 and 22, 1265(1999), paras. 7, 8 and 10, 1264(1999), para. 2, 1244(1999), para. 9 (h), and presidential statement S/PRST/2000/4.
Safety and security of humanitarian and associated personnel
To ensure the safety and security of humanitarian, United Nations and associated personnel.	Respect by all parties to the conflict for the impartiality and neutrality of humanitarian operations. Support for a safe and secure working environment for humanitarian personnel.	Resolutions 1509(2003), paras. 3 (j) and 5, 1502(2003), paras. 1, 3, 4, 5 (a)-(c) and 6, 1494(2003), paras. 25 and 26, 1493(2003), para. 25, 1445(2002), para. 14, 1417(2002), para. 7, 1378(2001), paras. 2 and 5, 1319(2000), para. 1, 1296(2000), para. 12, 1286(2000), para. 9, 1272(1999), para. 10, 1270(1999), paras. 8 (d), 13 and 14, 1265(1999), paras. 7-10, 1244(1999), para. 9 (h), and presidential statement S/PRST/2000/4.
Security and the rule of law
To strengthen the capacity of local police and judicial systems to physically protect civilians and enforce law and order.	Deployment of qualified and well-trained international civilian police as a component of peacekeeping operations to enhance the capacity of the United Nations and to assist the host State with law enforcement. Technical assistance for local police, judiciary and penitentiaries (mentoring; legislative drafting; integration of international personnel). Reconstruction and rehabilitation of institutional infrastructure (salaries; buildings; communications). Mechanisms for monitoring and reporting of alleged violations of humanitarian, human rights and criminal law.	Resolutions 1509(2003), para. 3 (n), 1493(2003), para. 7, 1401(2002), para. 4, 1400(2002), para. 7, 1378(2001), paras. 3 and 4, 1315(2000), para. 4, 1272(1999), para. 2 (a)-(c) and (e), 3 (a) and 13, 1270(1999), para. 23, 1265(1999), para. 15, and 1244(1999) para. 9 (d) and 11 (i) and (j).
Disarmament, demobilization, reintegration and rehabilitation
To facilitate the stabilization and rehabilitation of communities.	Programmes for disarmament and demobilization of combatants, including special measures for women, children and dependants (amnesties; weapons buy-back; economic and development incentives). Programmes for reintegration and rehabilitation of ex-combatants within their communities, including special measures for women and children (community service; counselling services; appropriate education/skills training; family reunification; employment opportunities). Encouragement of full participation of armed groups in disarmament, demobilization, reintegration and rehabilitation programmes. Measures to address the regional dimensions affecting disarmament, demobilization, reintegration and rehabilitation programmes.	Resolutions 1509(2003), paras. 3 (f) and (g), 17 and 18, 1479(2003), paras. 3 (f) and 9, 1460(2003), para. 13, 1445(2002), paras. 4-6, 1417(2002), para. 9, 1400(2002), para. 6, 1379(2001), paras. 11 (c), (d) and (f) and 12 (a), 1376(2001), para. 12, 1366(2001), para. 16, 1325(2000), paras. 8 (a) and 13, 1318(2000), annex, sect. V, 1296(2000), para. 16, 1270(1999), paras. 3, 4, 8 (b) and (c), 9 and 20, 1265(1999), para. 12, 1261(1999), para. 15, and presidential statements S/PRST/2000/10 and S/PRST/1999/28.

Primary objectives	Issues for consideration	Precedents
Small arms and mine action
To facilitate a secure environment for vulnerable populations and humanitarian personnel.	Mine-action (coordination centres; land-mine clearance; mine-awareness training; victim assistance). Measures to control and reduce the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons (voluntary moratoria; arms embargoes; sanctions; regional and subregional approaches). Involvement of ex-combatants and local communities, in particular women, in the collection and destruction of small arms and light weapons and in demining and other mine-action activities.	Resolutions 1479(2003), para. 13, 1460(2003), para. 7, 1433(2002), para. 3 (b) (ii), 1379(2001), paras. 6 and 9 (d), 1318(2000), annex, sect. VI, first para., 1314(2000), para. 8, 1296(2000), paras. 10 and 20, 1286(2000), para. 12, 1265(1999), para. 17, 1261(1999), paras. 14 and 17 (a), 1244(1999), para. 9 (e), and presidential statement S/PRST/1999/28.
Effects on and contribution of women
1. To address the specific needs of women for assistance and protection.	Special measures to protect women and girls from gender-based discrimination and violence, rape and other forms of sexual violence (access to legal redress, crisis centres, shelters, health care, counselling and other assistance programmes; monitoring and reporting mechanisms). Implementation of measures for reporting on and prevention of sexual abuse and exploitation of civilians by humanitarian workers and peacekeepers. Mainstreaming of a gender perspective, including the integration of gender advisers in peace operations.	Resolutions 1509(2003), para. 11, 1493(2003), para. 9, 1479(2003), para. 5, 1460(2003), para. 10, 1436(2002), para. 15, 1400(2002), para. 14, 1379(2001), para. 4, 1325(2000), paras. 1, 4, 5, 8 (a), 10, 13 and 15, 1314(2000), paras. 13 and 16 (e), 1296(2000), paras. 9 and 10, and presidential statement S/PRST/2001/31.
2. To strengthen the role of women as constructive actors in developing and implementing appropriate responses to protecting civilians.	Expansion of the representation, role and contribution of women in United Nations field-based operations (among military observers, civilian police and humanitarian and human rights personnel). Increased and more equitable participation of women at all decision-making levels (political processes; organization and management of refugee and internally displaced persons camps; design and distribution of assistance; local governance; education; rehabilitation policies).
Effects on children
To address the specific needs of children for assistance and protection.	Prevention of and putting an end to the recruitment of child soldiers in violation of international law. Initiatives, where appropriate, to secure access to war-affected children (days of immunization; temporary ceasefires; days of tranquillity). Negotiated release of children abducted in situations of armed conflict. Effective measures to disarm, demobilize, reintegrate and rehabilitate children recruited or used in hostilities. Specific provisions for the protection of children, including where appropriate, the integration of child protection advisers in peace operations. Implementation of measures for reporting on, and prevention of, sexual abuse and exploitation of civilians by humanitarian workers and peacekeepers. Family reunification of separated children. Monitoring and reporting on the situation of children.	Resolutions 1509(2003), paras. 9 and 10, 1493(2003), para. 13, 1479(2003), para. 15, 1460(2003), paras. 3, 9, 10, 12 and 13, 1436(2002), para. 15, 1400(2002), para. 14, 1379(2001), paras. 2, 4, 8 (e), 10 (c), 11 (c), (d) and (f) and 12 (a), 1314(2000), paras. 11-14, 16 and 17, 1296(2000), paras. 9 and 10, 1270(1999), para. 18, 1261(1999), paras. 2, 8, 13, 15 and 17 (a), and presidential statement S/PRST/1998/18.
Justice and reconciliation
1. To put an end to impunity for those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian, human rights and criminal law.	Establishment and use of effective arrangements for investigating and prosecuting serious violations of humanitarian and criminal law at the local and/or international level (from the outset of the operation). Cooperation of States for the apprehension and surrender of alleged perpetrators. Technical assistance to strengthen local capacities for apprehension, investigation, and prosecution of alleged perpetrators. Exclusion of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes from amnesty provisions.	Resolutions 1509(2003), para. 10, 1479(2003), para. 8, 1436(2002), paras. 11 and 15, 1400(2002), para. 5, 1398(2002), para. 14, 1379(2001), para. 9 (a), 1325(2000), para. 11, 1319(2000), paras. 2 and 3, 1318(2000), annex, sect. VI, third para., 1315(2000), paras. 1-3 and 8, 1314(2000), paras. 2 and 9, 1271(1999), para. 16, 1270(1999), para. 17, 1265(1999), paras. 4 and 6, 1261(1999), para. 3, 955(1994), paras. 1 and 2 and 827(1993), paras. 2 and 4.

Primary objectives	Issues for consideration	Precedents
	Referral of situations, where possible and appropriate, to international courts and tribunals.
2. To build confidence and enhance stability within the host State by promoting truth and reconciliation.	Requests for troop-contributing States to investigate and prosecute, when appropriate, their peacekeepers and security personnel suspected of violating criminal law while in a host State. Appropriate locally adapted mechanisms for truth and reconciliation (technical assistance; funding; amnesties for lower-level perpetrators; just reinstallation of civilians within communities). Measures for restitution and reparations (trust funds; property commissions).
Training of security and peacekeeping forces
To ensure adequate sensitization of multinational forces to issues pertaining to the protection of civilians.	Appropriate training in humanitarian and human rights law, civil-military coordination, codes of conduct, negotiation and communication skills, child protection and child rights, gender and cultural sensitization, and the prevention of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases.	Resolutions 1460(2003), para. 9, 1445(2002), para. 18, 1379(2001), para. 10 (b), 1325(2000), para. 6, 1318(2000), annex, sect. III, second para., 1308(2000), para. 3, 1296(2000), para. 19, 1270(1999), para. 15, 1265(1999), para. 14, and presidential statements S/PRST/2001/31, S/PRST/2001/16 and S/PRST/1998/18.
Media and information
1. To counter occurrences of speech used to incite violence.	Establishment of media-monitoring mechanisms to ensure effective monitoring, reporting and documenting of any incidents, origins and contents that incite "hate media". Responsive steps to media broadcasts inciting genocide, crimes against humanity and/or serious violations of international humanitarian law, including, as a last resort, consideration of closing down such media broadcasts.	Resolutions 1509(2003), para. 16, 1417(2002), paras. 4 and 5, 1353(2001), annex I, sect. B, paras. 10 and 11 and 1296(2000), paras. 17 and 18.
2. To promote and support accurate management of information on the conflict.	Technical assistance to draft and enforce anti-hate speech legislation. Establishment of media coordination centres to facilitate accurate and reliable information management on, and awareness of, the conflict. Establishment and assistance of local and international media and information outlets in support of peace operations.
Natural resources and armed conflict
To address the impact of natural resource exploitation on the protection of civilians.	Investigation of the linkages between illicit trade in natural resources and the conduct of the conflict. Measures to address the direct or indirect import of natural resources where proceeds are used to fuel conflict (sanctions; regional and subregional approaches). Measures against corporate actors, individuals and entities involved in illicit trade of natural resources in violation of relevant Security Council resolutions and the Charter of the United Nations (legislation; penalties for dealers; certification and registration systems; embargoes).	Resolutions 1509(2003), para. 3 (r), 1493(2003), para. 28, 1460(2003), para. 16 (b), 1436(2002), para. 8, 1417(2002), para. 15, 1379(2001), paras. 6 and 9 (d), 1376(2001), para. 8, 1318(2000), annex, sect. VI, second para., 1314(2000), para. 8 and 1306(2000), paras. 1, 2, 9 and 19 (a).
Humanitarian impact of sanctions
To minimize unintended adverse side effects of sanctions on the civilian population.	Humanitarian exemptions in sanction regimes. Targeted sanctions (sanctions limited in scope and targeted at specific individuals, groups, or activities). Relevant assessment and review of the humanitarian impact of sanctions, and the behaviour of those targeted by the sanctions.	Resolutions 1478(2003), paras. 18 and 19, 1409(2002), paras. 4-6, 1408(2002), para. 16, 1379(2001), para. 7, 1343(2001), paras. 5 (a)-(d), 6, 7 (a) and (b) and 13 (a), 1333(2000), paras. 5 (a)-(c), 7, 8 (a)-(c), 10-12, 14, 15 (d) and 23, 1325(2000), para. 14, 1314(2000), para. 15, 1298(2000), paras. 6-8 and 16, 1296(2000), para. 21, 1267(1999), para. 4, 1265(1999), para. 16, and presidential statement S/PRST/1999/28.

Index of resolutions***

- 1509(2003) on the situation in Liberia
 1508(2003) on the situation in Sierra Leone
 1502(2003) on the protection of United Nations personnel, associated personnel and humanitarian personnel in conflict zones
 1494(2003) on the situation in Georgia
 1493(2003) on the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo
 1484(2003) on the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo
 1479(2003) on the situation in Côte d'Ivoire
 1478(2003) on the situation in Liberia
 1470(2003) on the situation in Sierra Leone
 1460(2003) on children and armed conflict
 1456(2003) on the high-level meeting of the Security Council: combating terrorism
 1445(2002) on the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo
 1436(2002) on the situation in Sierra Leone
 1433(2002) on the situation in Angola
 1427(2002) on the situation in Georgia
 1419(2002) on the situation in Afghanistan
 1417(2002) on the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo
 1409(2002) on the situation between Iraq and Kuwait
 1408(2002) on the situation in Liberia
 1405(2002) on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestine question
 1401(2002) on the situation in Afghanistan
 1400(2002) on the situation in Sierra Leone
 1393(2002) on the situation in Georgia
 1379(2001) on children and armed conflict
 1378(2001) on the situation in Afghanistan
 1376(2001) on the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo
 1366(2001) on the role of the Security Council in the prevention of armed conflicts
 1355(2001) on the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo
 1353(2001) on strengthening cooperation with troop-contributing countries
 1348(2001) on the situation in Sierra Leone
 1343(2001) on the situation in Liberia
 1333(2000) on the situation in Afghanistan
 1327(2000) on ensuring an effective role of the Security Council in the maintenance of international peace and security
 1325(2000) on women and peace and security
 1319(2000) on the situation in East Timor
 1318(2000) on ensuring an effective role for the Security Council in the maintenance of international peace and security, particularly in Africa
 1315(2000) on the situation in Sierra Leone
 1314(2000) on children and armed conflict
 1308(2000) on the responsibility of the Security Council in the maintenance of international peace and security: HIV/AIDS and international peacekeeping operations
 1306(2000) on the situation in Sierra Leone
 1298(2000) on the situation between Eritrea and Ethiopia
 1296(2000) on the protection of civilians in armed conflict
 1286(2000) on the situation in Burundi
 1279(1999) on the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo
 1272(1999) on the situation in East Timor
 1270(1999) on the situation in Sierra Leone
 1267(1999) on the situation in Afghanistan
 1265(1999) on the protection of civilians in armed conflict
 1264(1999) on the situation in East Timor
 1261(1999) on children and armed conflict
 1244(1999) on Security Council resolutions 1160(1998), 1199(1998), 1203(1998) and 1239(1999)
 1208(1998) on the situation in Africa
 955(1994) on the situation concerning Rwanda
 827(1993) on the establishment of an international tribunal for the prosecution of persons responsible for serious violations in international humanitarian law committed in the territory of the former Yugoslavia
 824(1993) on the situation in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina

*The Security Council also recognized the relevance of General Assembly resolutions 46/182 of 19 December 1991 and 55/2 of 8 September 2000 in the broader context of the protection of civilians and the root causes of conflicts.

Index of presidential statements

- S/PRST/2002/41 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict
 S/PRST/2002/6 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict
 S/PRST/2001/31 on women and peace and security
 S/PRST/2001/16 on the responsibility of the Security Council in the maintenance of international peace and security: HIV/AIDS and international peacekeeping operations
 S/PRST/2000/10 on maintaining peace and security and post-conflict peace-building

S/PRST/2000/4 on the protection of United Nations personnel, associated personnel and humanitarian personnel in conflict zones

S/PRST/1999/28 on small arms

S/PRST/1998/18 on children and armed conflict

(For Security Council action regarding the situation of children in armed conflict, see p. 788.)

Arbitrary detention

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/31], the Commission decided to extend for three years the mandate of the Working Group and asked it to report in 2004. The Secretary-General was asked to assist Governments, special rapporteurs and working groups to ensure the promotion and observance of guarantees relating to states of emergency embodied in international instruments, and to assist the Group.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision to extend the Working Group's mandate for three years (decision 2003/247).

Working Group activities. The Working Group on Arbitrary Detention held its thirty-sixth (5-9 May), thirty-seventh (1-5 September) and thirty-eighth (19-28 November) sessions, all in Geneva [E/CN.4/2004/3]. During the year, the Group adopted 26 opinions regarding 151 persons in 12 countries; the text of the opinions were contained in a separate report [E/CN.4/2004/3/Add.1]. The Group also transmitted 157 urgent appeals to 47 Governments regarding 812 individuals, of which 147 appeals were issued jointly by the Group and thematic or geographical special rapporteurs. In 33 cases, the Governments concerned informed the Group that they had taken measures to remedy the situation of the detainees.

The Group examined the question of protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms in the context of the fight against terrorism and other issues, including discrimination, the deprivation of liberty of vulnerable persons, pre-trial detention and the deprivation of liberty linked to the use of the Internet. It drew the Commission's attention to the fact that, since the events of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60], it had received many communications about the arbitrary character of detention in many countries where inquiries into terrorist acts had been carried out. Bearing in mind the rising importance of the Internet and other modern information media, the Group expressed concern that some States unduly interfered with the use of the Internet through the application of criminal law sanctions. It considered that the question of arbitrary detention with regard to the use of the Internet deserved more extensive study.

Two Working Group members visited Iran at the invitation of the Government (15-27 February) [E/CN.4/2004/3/Add.2 & Corr.1], where they analysed the prospects for reform of the administration of justice, particularly with regard to detention pending trial and visiting rights, and reform of the public prosecution service and criminal procedure. Among the causes of situations of arbitrary detention were: the shortcomings of due process, the abuse of solitary confinement, special clerical courts, sentences disproportionate to the seriousness of the offence, non-respect for procedural formalities as a guarantee against arbitrary detention and the removal of prosecutors between 1995 and 2002, which affected the exercise of the right to due process. The Group, while acknowledging that the visit was conducted transparently and without hindrance, noted that follow-up exchanges with the authorities regarding specific individuals or incidents had not been encouraging. It also indicated that the persecution of the press had increased. The Group made recommendations regarding the reduction of the proliferation of judicial decision-making bodies, the practice of solitary confinement, the situation of prisoners of conscience, the right to due process and imprisonment for debt.

In Argentina (22 September-2 October) [E/CN.4/2004/3/Add.3], the Group recommended that the Government review its legislation and practices regarding pre-trial detention at both the federal and provincial levels; address overcrowding in prisons and at police stations; avoid detaining children and foreigners under immigration laws; guarantee detainees the right to communicate freely with their attorney; monitor the behaviour of police officers; ensure an effective judicial remedy in situations of arrest for a minor offence and for detained foreigners; pay particular attention to compliance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child (see p. 675) with regard to the arrest and detention of juveniles; and study the practice of detaining social protesters, bearing in mind that the protests emanated from jobs lost owing to the country's recession.

Communications. In March [E/CN.4/2003/G/53], Mexico transmitted its comments on the report of the Working Group following the Group's 2002 visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 698].

On 2 April [E/CN.4/2003/G/72], the United States, in response to a 2002 opinion of the Working Group [YUN 2002, p. 698] relating to the detention of two persons, stated that the Group's findings were based on unsubstantiated and false facts, and on a misunderstanding of its laws.

Also on 2 April [E/CN.4/2003/G/73], the United States stated that it disagreed with the Group's conclusions [YUN 2002, p. 698] regarding persons detained at the Naval Base at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Impunity

Report of Secretary-General. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 699], the Secretary-General, in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/97], summarized replies received from Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs regarding steps they had taken to combat impunity for human rights violations and on remedies available to victims. He concluded that there was broad agreement that there should be no impunity for human rights violations, war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide. Information provided by Member States highlighted the importance of pursuing prosecutions, finding and publicizing the truth, assisting and protecting victims, witnesses and others involved in the proceedings, and providing reparation and remedies to victims.

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/72], the Commission asked the Secretary-General to obtain information from States on steps taken to combat impunity for human rights violations and on remedies available to victims; to commission an independent study on best practices to assist States in strengthening their domestic capacity in that regard, taking into account the application of the 1997 set of principles for the promotion and protection of human rights through action to combat impunity [YUN 1997, p. 655], as well as comments received pursuant to the resolution; and to report in 2004.

Working paper. On 6 August [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/SR.12], Françoise Hampson (United Kingdom) described progress made in preparing a working paper on the scope of activities and accountability of armed forces, UN civilian police, international civil servants and experts taking part in peace support operations, entrusted to her by the Subcommission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 699].

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/10], the Subcommission, convinced that ratification of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209], which entered into force in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1298], by the largest number of States would constitute an important guarantee in combating impunity, welcomed the Court's establishment following the election of its judges, representatives of all continents and legal systems, and the appointment of its prosecutor. It urged all States to ratify the Statute as soon as possible and to ensure its implementation.

Independence of the judicial system

Report of Special Rapporteur. In January, the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers, Dato' Param Cumaraswamy (Malaysia), submitted a report covering his activities in 2002 [E/CN.4/2003/65]. He transmitted 24 interventions to 20 Governments, three interventions jointly with other special rapporteurs to three States and 13 urgent appeals to nine States. Replies were received from 13 countries to the interventions and from 13 countries to the urgent appeals. To avoid duplication of work, the Special Rapporteur joined other special rapporteurs and working groups to transmit 46 additional urgent appeals to 22 countries. An addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2003/65/Add.1] contained summaries of the urgent appeals and interventions, and replies thereto. Annexed to the January report were the Bangalore Principles of Judicial Conduct, designed to promote judicial integrity and accountability around the world, which were adopted by a round-table meeting of Chief Justices (The Hague, Netherlands, 25-26 November 2002). The Special Rapporteur observed that the independence of the judicial system and of the legal profession continued to be threatened in many parts of the world, and accountability had become a source of concern owing to increasing allegations of judicial corruption. Since the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60], the principles of due process, including the right to a fair public hearing by independent and impartial tribunals, were in jeopardy in some countries, among them, well-developed States that previously supported those values. The Special Rapporteur recommended greater monitoring of the implementation of the United Nations Basic Principles on the Independence of the Judiciary, adopted in 1985 by the Seventh UN Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders [YUN 1985, pp. 738 & 757], as well as the Guidelines on the Role of Prosecutors and the Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers, both adopted in 1990 by the Eighth UN Congress [YUN 1990, p. 697]. Addressing the impact of terrorism on the principles of due process, the Special Rapporteur urged the Commission to remind Member States of their obligations under international law, and to address issues of concern in Swaziland, Zimbabwe, countries in transition in Eastern and Central Europe and Asia, particularly Timor-Leste and Afghanistan, and the United Kingdom and the United States.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 31 to 1, with 21 abstentions, the Commission, on 23 April [res. 2003/39], called on States that used military courts to try criminal offenders to ensure that the courts were an integral part of the general judicial system and employed established legal proceedings. The Special Rapporteur was asked to report in 2004.

Also on 23 April [res. 2003/43], the Commission asked the High Commissioner to continue to provide technical assistance to train judges and lawyers. It decided to extend the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a further three years and asked him to report in 2004, and asked the Secretary-General to assist him.

The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's requests on 23 July (decision 2003/250).

Communication. On 3 March [E/CN.4/2003/G/46], Italy responded to the Special Rapporteur's report on his visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 700], regarding the independence of Italian magistrates.

Capital punishment

Note by Secretariat. A January note [E/CN.4/2003/106/Add.1] of the Secretariat stated that information received as at 20 January from Member States regarding the death penalty, pursuant to a 2002 Commission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 701], were summarized in the Secretary-General's report (see below).

Report of Secretary-General. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 701], the Secretary-General, in January [E/CN.4/2003/106], supplemented information in his sixth quinquennial report [YUN 2000, p. 672] on capital punishment and implementation of the safeguards guaranteeing protection of the rights of those facing the death penalty, covering the period from January 2001 to December 2002. The report summarized information received from 15 countries relating to the use of capital punishment, changes in law and practice concerning the death penalty and implementation of the safeguards, with special attention to the imposition of the death penalty against persons younger than 18 years of age at the time of the offence. Additional information was provided by five inter-governmental organizations and NGOs. During the reporting period, two countries abolished the death penalty for all crimes, two abolished it for ordinary crimes, one limited its use, eight acceded to or ratified instruments that abolished it, four established a moratorium on executions and one reintroduced the death penalty. Overall, at least 5,265 persons were sentenced to death in 68 countries, and 3,048 people were executed in 31 countries during 2001. Nonetheless, the Secretary-General concluded that the trend towards abolition continued, given that the number of completely abolitionist countries increased from 76 to 77, while abolitionist countries for ordinary crimes increased from 11 to 15. The number of retentionist countries remained at 71 and de facto abolitionist countries numbered 33. An increasing number of countries ratified international instruments abolishing the death penalty. During the reporting period, Amnesty International reported three executions of juvenile offenders in three countries. The report highlighted initiatives by the Commission and its mechanisms regarding relevant international developments and the implementation of safeguards.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 24 to 18, with 10 abstentions, the Commission, on 24 April [res. 2003/67], called on States parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights that had not done so to consider acceding to or ratifying the Second Optional Protocol thereto on the death penalty (see p. 669). Among other measures, States that maintained the death penalty were urged not to impose it for crimes committed by persons below 18 years of age and to exclude pregnant women and mothers with dependent infants; to restrict the number of offences for which the penalty might be imposed; to establish a moratorium on executions; and to provide the Secretary-General and relevant UN bodies with information relating to the use of capital punishment and the observance of the safeguards guaranteeing the rights of those facing the death penalty, as contained in Economic and Social Council resolution 1984/50 [YUN 1984, p. 709]. The Secretary-General was asked to submit annually a supplement to his quinquennial report, paying attention to the imposition of the death penalty against persons under 18 years of age at the time of the offence.

Communication. In April [E/CN.4/2003/G/84], Saudi Arabia, also on behalf of 62 other States, dissociated itself from the Commission's resolution.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/11], the Subcommission urged States not to transfer persons to the jurisdiction of other States which still imposed the death penalty unless there was a guarantee that the penalty would neither be sought nor applied; not to transfer persons to States where they might be held without trial or subjected to an unfair trial; to ensure that no person was transferred outside the context of extradition; and to ensure that all persons had the possibility to challenge in courts any proposed transfer to the jurisdiction of another State.

Forensic science

On 23 April [res. 2003/33], the Commission, welcoming the publication by OHCHR of the Istanbul Protocol: Manual on the Effective Investigation and Documentation of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (Professional Training Series, No. 8) [Sales No. E.01.XIV.1], and the establishment by the Office of a consolidated database of forensic experts, asked the High Commissioner to update the database continuously. It recommended that OHCHR encourage forensic experts to produce additional manuals on examinations of living persons and asked it to report in 2005. The Commission further recommended that the Secretary-General establish procedures to evaluate the use of forensic experts and the results of those efforts, and asked him to provide resources to fund OHCHR activities in implementing the Commission's current resolution, including a revision of the Manual on the Effective Prevention and Investigation of Extrajudicial, Arbitrary and Summary Executions [Sales No. E.91.IV.1].

Right to democracy

Report of High Commissioner. The Commission had before it a report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2003/64], submitted pursuant to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 701], which summarized the views of one UN body, one specialized agency, one regional organization and two national institutions on the role they played in promoting and consolidating democracy.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 36 to none, with 17 abstentions, the Commission, on 23 April [res. 2003/36], called on OHCHR to pay increased attention to the promotion and consolidation of democracy by the UN system, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs; to coordinate efforts with relevant UN bodies to collect and analyse data; to invite the views of regional, subregional and other organizations and arrangements on the role they played in promoting and consolidating democracy; and to report in 2004. It asked the Office to compile documents or texts adopted and used by various intergovernmental, international, regional and subregional organizations aimed at promoting and consolidating democracy, and to report in 2005, and to organize a second expert seminar in 2004 on the interdependence between democracy and human rights, and to report on the seminar's conclusions in 2005.

Note by Secretariat. A July note [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/7] by the Secretariat stated that Manuel Rodríguez Cuadros (Peru) would submit in 2004 an expanded working paper on measures to promote and consolidate democracy, pursuant to a 2002 Subcommittee request [YUN 2002, p. 702].

Subcommission action. On 13 August [dec. 2003/106], the Subcommittee decided to request Mr. Rodríguez Cuadros to prepare, without financial implications, the final version of his 2002 working paper [YUN 2002, p. 702] for consideration in 2004.

Report of Secretary-General. A September report [A/58/323] of the Secretary-General evaluated progress made in fulfilling the commitments contained in the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] (see also p. 48). Regarding human rights and democracy, in many countries the transition to democracy had been accompanied by serious social and economic problems, while in some others resistance to democracy was strong, even though the majority of the people desired change. Although primarily home-grown, the international community could respond to democratization processes in post-conflict situations, and also provide electoral assistance.

Electoral processes

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 29 to 12, with 12 abstentions, the Commission, on 23 April [res. 2003/35], urged States to foster a democracy that guaranteed all citizens participation in government. The Secretary-General and the High Commissioner were asked to bring the Commission's resolution to the attention of Member States, UN organs, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, and to disseminate it widely.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 56/159 [YUN 2001, p. 640], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/212] covering UN electoral activities undertaken since his 2001 report on the subject [YUN 2001, p. 640], stated that the United Nations had received 52 requests for electoral assistance from Member States, of which 26 were for technical assistance. Major electoral missions, in Afghanistan, East Timor and Sierra Leone were supported, while advance planning began for a future electoral mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. Coordination and support were provided in five countries, and in several cases more than one request for assistance was submitted by the same Member State. Technical assistance continued to be the most widely requested form of assistance for electoral processes such as registration, training for polling officers, civic education and advisory support for national election administrations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/180 by recorded vote (169-0-8) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Strengthening the role of the United Nations in enhancing the effectiveness of the principle of periodic and genuine elections and the promotion of democratization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject, in particular resolution 56/159 of 19 December 2001,

Reaffirming that United Nations electoral assistance and support for the promotion of democratization are provided only at the specific request of the Member State concerned,

Noting with satisfaction that increasing numbers of Member States are using elections as a peaceful means of discerning the will of the people, which builds confidence in representational governance and contributes to greater national peace and stability,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted on 10 December 1948, in particular the principle that the will of the people, as expressed through periodic and genuine elections, shall be the basis of government authority, as well as the right freely to choose representatives through periodic and genuine elections, which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and held by secret vote or by equivalent free voting procedures,

Noting with interest Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/36 of 23 April 2003,

Recognizing the need for strengthening democratic processes, electoral institutions and national capacity-building, including the capacity to administer fair elections, increase citizen participation and provide civic education in requesting countries in order to consolidate and regularize the achievements of previous elections and support subsequent elections,

Welcoming the support provided by States to the electoral assistance activities of the United Nations, inter alia, through the provision of electoral experts, including electoral commission staff, and observers, as well as through contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for Electoral Observation,

Welcoming also the contributions made by international and regional organizations and also by non-governmental organizations to enhancing the effectiveness of the principle of periodic and genuine elections and the promotion of democratization,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on United Nations activities aimed at enhancing the effectiveness of the principle of periodic and genuine elections and the promotion of democratization,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Commends the electoral assistance provided upon request to Member States by the United Nations, and requests that such assistance continue on a case-by-case basis in accordance with the evolving needs of requesting countries to develop, improve and refine their electoral institutions and processes, recognizing that the fundamental responsibility of organizing free and fair elections lies with Governments;

3. Requests the Electoral Assistance Division of the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat, in its role as coordinator of United Nations electoral assistance, to continue to inform Member States regularly about the requests received and the nature of any assistance provided;

4. Requests that the United Nations continue its efforts to ensure, before undertaking to provide electoral assistance to a requesting State, that there is adequate time to organize and carry out an effective mission for providing such assistance, including the provision of long-term technical cooperation, that conditions exist to allow a free and fair election and that the mission's results will be reported comprehensively and consistently;

5. Recommends that, throughout the time span of the entire electoral process, including before and after elections, as appropriate, based on needs assessment missions, the United Nations continue to provide technical advice and other assistance to requesting States and electoral institutions in order to help to strengthen their democratic processes;

6. Notes with appreciation additional efforts being made to enhance cooperation with other international, governmental and non-governmental organizations in order to facilitate more comprehensive and needs-specific responses to requests for electoral assistance, and encourages those organizations to share knowledge and experience in order to promote best practices in the assistance they provide and in the reporting they make on electoral processes, and expresses its appreciation to those Member States, regional organizations and non-governmental organizations that have provided observers or technical experts in support of United Nations electoral assistance efforts;

7. Recalls the establishment by the Secretary-General of the United Nations Trust Fund for Electoral Observation, and calls upon Member States to consider contributing to the Fund;

8. Encourages the Secretary-General, through the Electoral Assistance Division, to continue responding to the evolving nature of requests for assistance and the growing need for specific types of medium-term expert assistance aimed at supporting and strengthening the existing capacity of the requesting Government, in particular through enhancing the capacity of national electoral institutions;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Electoral Assistance Division with adequate human and financial resources to allow it to carry out its mandate, and to continue to ensure that the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights is able to respond, within its mandate and in close coordination with the Division, to the numerous and increasingly complex and comprehensive requests from Member States for advisory services;

10. Notes with satisfaction the comprehensive coordination between the Electoral Assistance Division and the United Nations Development Programme, and encourages further engagement of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in this context;

11. Requests the United Nations Development Programme to continue its governance assistance programmes in cooperation with other relevant organizations, in particular those that strengthen democratic institutions and linkages between civil society and Governments;

12. Reiterates the importance of reinforced coordination within and outside the United Nations system in this regard;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution, in particular on the status of requests from Member States for electoral assistance, and on his efforts to enhance support by the Organization for the democratization process in Member States.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/180:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Brunei Darussalam, China, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Myanmar, Syrian Arab Republic, Viet Nam.

Also on 22 December [meeting 77], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/189 by recorded vote (111-10-55) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Respect for the principles of national sovereignty and diversity of democratic systems in electoral processes as an important element for the promotion and protection of human rights

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the purpose of the United Nations to develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling also its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970, by which it approved the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the right to self-determination, by virtue of which all peoples can freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development,

Recognizing that the principles enshrined in Article 2 of the Charter of the United Nations, in particular respect for national sovereignty, should be respected in the holding of elections,

Recognizing also the richness and diversity of democratic political systems and models of free and fair electoral processes in the world, based on national and regional particularities and various backgrounds,

Stressing the responsibility of States in ensuring ways and means to facilitate full and effective popular participation in their electoral processes,

Recognizing the contribution made by the United Nations of electoral assistance provided to numerous States upon their request,

Reaffirming the solemn commitment of all States to fulfil their obligations to promote universal respect for, and observance and protection of, all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all in accordance with the Charter, other instruments relating to human rights, and international law,

Welcoming the commitment of all Member States, expressed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to work collectively for more inclusive political processes allowing genuine participation by all citizens in all countries,

1. Reaffirms that all peoples have the right to self-determination, by virtue of which they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that every State has the duty to respect that right, in accordance with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reiterates that periodic, fair and free elections are important elements for the promotion and protection of human rights;

3. Reaffirms the right of peoples to determine methods and to establish institutions regarding electoral processes and, consequently, that there is no single model of democracy or of democratic institutions and that States should ensure all the necessary mechanisms and means to facilitate full and effective popular participation in those processes;

4. Reaffirms also that free development of the national electoral process in each State should be fully honoured in a manner that fully respects the principles established in the Charter and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

5. Calls upon all States to refrain from financing political parties or other organizations in any other State in a way that is contrary to the principles of the Charter and that undermines the legitimacy of its electoral processes;

6. Condemns any act of armed aggression or threat or use of force against peoples, their elected Governments or their legitimate leaders;

7. Reaffirms that the will of the people shall be the basis of the authority of government and that this will shall be expressed in periodic and genuine elections, which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and shall be held by secret vote or by equivalent free voting procedures.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/189:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Argentina, Australia, Canada, Chile, Israel, New Zealand, Norway, Sudan, Switzerland, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Armenia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Bulgaria, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, Iceland, India, Ireland, Italy, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Mexico, Monaco, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, Papua New Guinea, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Uzbekistan.

Other issues

Extrajudicial executions

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In a January report with a later addendum [E/CN.4/2003/3 & Corr.1 & Add.1 & Add.1/Corr.1], the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, Asma Jahangir (Pakistan), updated developments since her last report [YUN 2002, p. 705]. Between 2 December 2001 and 1 December 2002, she transmitted 56 communications containing allegations of violations of the right to life of a large number of individuals and groups to 42 countries and the Palestinian Authority (PA). In more than 29 of those cases, she intervened jointly with other special rapporteurs. In addition, she transmitted 188 urgent appeals, 128 of them jointly with other Commission mechanisms, to prevent imminent loss of life on behalf of several thousand persons and several groups in 54 States and the PA. The report summarized the cases transmitted and the replies received. The Special Rapporteur said that during the reporting period the situation with regard to extrajudicial, summary and arbitrary executions had not improved. An issue of serious concern was resorting to extrajudicial killings in order to fight terrorism. There were growing reports of extrajudicial killings of journalists, and human rights defenders, lawyers, students, trade union officials and judges were increasingly targeted. Special forces, intelligence services and military personnel accused of killings often enjoyed impunity and were rarely held accountable. Stating that the recommendations in her 2002 reports to the Commission and the General Assembly [YUN 2002, p. 705] remained valid, the Special Rapporteur further recommended a greater focus on preventive actions to ensure that violence did not escalate or turn into armed conflict; a stronger system of response to early warnings; and addressing past suspected crimes against humanity in Afghanistan. Other recommendations were made regarding journalists at risk, the use of the military for internal security, respect for relevant safeguards and restrictions when imposing the death penalty, and ending impunity for those who killed women in the name of honour.

The Special Rapporteur visited Jamaica (17-27 February) [E/CN.4/2004/7/Add.2 & Corr.1] following reports over the years of alleged extrajudicial executions by Jamaican security and police forces, and information she received that international standards on safeguards and restrictions relating to the imposition of capital punishment had not always been observed. She described the international human rights legal framework as it related to Jamaica, provided a historical, social and economic overview of the country, and statistics regarding incidents of alleged extrajudicial executions over the past few years. Individual cases were summarized and the issue of capital punishment was examined. The Special Rapporteur concluded that extrajudicial executions of civilians by the police, and possibly by the Jamaica Defence Force, had taken place, and although the figures provided by various sources, including the Government, were not consistent, they were high enough to cause concern. There was a tendency, across the board, to cover up suspected cases of extrajudicial killings. The Special Rapporteur recommended, among other measures, that the Government streamline the criminal justice system to grant complainants access to all legal remedies and to ensure an acceptable level of accountability on the part of the security forces. The authorities should condemn the misuse of force by the security forces, not protect those accused of extrajudicial executions, and refrain from imposing capital punishment on minors or mentally ill persons.

The Special Rapporteur visited Brazil (16 September-8 October) [E/CN.4/2004/7/Add.3], where she investigated alleged violations of the right to life, including extrajudicial executions by the police and death in custody. Numerous accounts of extrajudicial killings by the police, which she had gathered from a variety of sources, were summarized in an appendix to the report. Some 521 civilians were reportedly killed in confrontations with the police in greater Rio de Janeiro alone during the first five months of 2003. The Special Rapporteur, while aware of government efforts to improve the criminal legal system for preventing extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, concluded that the measures adopted were inadequate. She recommended that all proposed legislative or administrative reforms address both prevention and accountability of extrajudicial or summary executions, and the Government ensure that persons in danger of such executions were protected. The Special Rapporteur proposed that the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers undertake a mission to Brazil.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 37 to none, with 16 abstentions, the Commission, on 24 April [res. 2003/53], encouraged the Special Rapporteur to continue to collect information, respond effectively to reliable information that came before her, follow up on communications and country visits, seek the views of Governments and continue to draw the High Commissioner's attention to situations of serious concern or where early action might prevent further deterioration. The Secretary-General was asked to provide the Special Rapporteur with adequate resources, to continue to use his best endeavours in cases where the minimum standard of legal safeguards provided for by the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (see p. 669) appeared not to be respected, and to ensure that personnel specialized in human rights and humanitarian law formed part of UN missions.

Communications. On 21 March [E/CN.4/2003/G/57], Singapore, referring to its reply to the Special Rapporteur's urgent appeal [E/CN.4/2003/3/Add.1], listed the reasons why it felt that she had transgressed her mandate.

In April [E/CN.4/2003/G/78], Honduras, referring to the Special Rapporteur's report on her 2001 visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 705], transmitted a report of its Standing Committee for the Protection of the Physical and Moral Integrity of the Child.

On 14 April [E/CN.4/2003/G/80], the United States transmitted its response to the Special Rapporteur's communication [E/CN.4/2003/3] regarding an incident in Yemen in 2002. It presented reasons why the Commission and Special Rapporteur lacked the competence to address the issue, which arose under the law of armed conflict.

Disappearance of persons

Draft instrument. Pursuant to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 709], the intersessional open-ended working group established to prepare a draft legally binding instrument for the protection of all persons from enforced disappearance held its first meeting (Geneva, 6-17 January) [E/CN.4/2003/71]. After considering the report of the independent expert charged with examining the existing international criminal and human rights framework on the issue [YUN 2002, p. 709], the group discussed the draft's provisions, including the definition of enforced disappearance, offences and penalties, protection against impunity, domestic prosecution and international cooperation, prevention, victims' rights and the children of disappeared persons. The group concluded that, in order to ensure further progress within a reasonable time, it should meet before the Commission's 2004 session.

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/38], the Commission urged Governments to cooperate with the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances and invited States to provide it with information on prevention measures and in giving effect to the 1992 Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 47/133 [YUN 1992, p. 744]. The Working Group was asked to report in 2004 and the Secretary-General was asked to assist it, to provide resources to update the database on cases of enforced disappearance and to inform the Commission of steps taken to disseminate and promote the Declaration. The Commission asked the intersessional working group (see above) to meet for 10 working days before the Commission's 2004 session and to report at that session. On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council authorized the group to meet and endorsed the request for a report in 2004 (decision 2003/249). The group's Chairperson-Rapporteur was asked to hold informal consultations and the High Commissioner to invite experts to participate in the group's activities.

Working Group activities. The five-member Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances held three sessions in 2003: its sixty-ninth (22-25 April), seventieth (11-15 August) and seventy-first (10-19 November), all in Geneva [E/CN.4/2004/58]. In addition to its original mandate, which was to act as a channel of communication between families of disappeared persons and the Governments concerned, with a view to ensuring that sufficiently documented individual cases were investigated, the Working Group monitored States' compliance with the 1992 Declaration. Cases under active consideration by the Group totalled 41,934, while countries with outstanding cases of alleged disappearance numbered 79. During the period under review, up to 19 November, the last day of its seventy-first session, the Group transmitted 234 new cases of disappearances to 22 States, 43 of which allegedly occurred in 2003. It also sent urgent action appeals to 10 countries in respect of 43 cases and clarified 837 cases. The Group's report summarized information concerning disappearances received from 53 countries.

Torture and cruel treatment

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 712], the Special Rapporteur on torture, Theo van Boven (Netherlands), described his activities from 1 December 2001 to 15 December 2002 [E/CN.4/2003/68]. He sent 109 letters to 65 countries regarding the alleged torture of individuals, 68 letters reminding Governments of cases transmitted in previous years and 294 urgent appeals to 82 Governments on behalf of individuals who, it was feared, might be subjected to torture and other forms of ill-treatment. Replies were received from 72 Governments. A summary of the communications sent by the Special Rapporteur and of the replies received were summarized in an addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2003/68/Add.1]. The Special Rapporteur revised recommendations put forth by his predecessor [YUN 2001, p. 644] and asked States that had not done so to accede to relevant international instruments, including the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, annexed to General Assembly resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813] (see p. 674). He recommended that States define torture as a crime of the utmost gravity in national legislation, abolish corporal punishment, investigate complaints of torture, ensure that victims obtained redress and adequate compensation, and prohibit the expulsion or extradition of a person to another State where there were substantial grounds to believe they would be in danger of being tortured.

As requested by the Commission [YUN 2002, p. 712], the Special Rapporteur, in January [E/CN.4/2003/69], submitted a preliminary study on the trade in and production of equipment specifically designed to inflict torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, with a view to finding the best ways to prohibit it and combat its proliferation. The Special Rapporteur said that certain kinds of equipment, such as handcuffs and kinetic and chemical devices, the use of which was recognized as legitimate in certain circumstances, were allegedly being misused or intentionally used to inflict torture. Numerous other types of equipment, including stun devices and bar fetters, breached the prohibition of torture. The Special Rapporteur found that the trade in such equipment was a phenomenon that involved countries in every region. He believed that States' enactment of legal and other measures to stop the production and trade of the equipment was part of their obligation to prevent acts of torture under the 1984 Convention, and that it was necessary to keep the study ongoing. He drew the Commission's attention to the European Commission's proposal for a regulation on trade in certain equipment and products and to Amnesty International's recommendations to Governments and companies, both of which were annexed to his report.

The Special Rapporteur reported [E/CN.4/2004/56/Add.3] on follow-up to recommendations made regarding visits to Azerbaijan [YUN 2000, p. 682], Brazil [ibid., p. 681], Chile [YUN 1995, p. 756], Mexico [YUN 1997, p. 666], Romania [YUN 1999, p. 636], Turkey [YUN 1998, p. 681] and Uzbekistan [YUN 2002, p. 712].

Communication. In March [E/CN.4/2003/G/67], Uzbekistan, referring to the Special Rapporteur's report on his 2002 visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 712], presented a number of proposals and remarks to reflect more fully and objectively the outcome of the visit, update data on some regulations of the country's criminal legislation and explain the reasons for a misunderstanding that occurred during the visit.

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/32], the Commission urged States to become parties to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. Governments were called on to eliminate the practice, to provide redress and to prevent and prohibit the production, trade, export and use of equipment specifically designed to inflict torture. States and NGOs were called on to provide information requested by the Special Rapporteur and to combat the equipment's proliferation; he was asked to report on the phenomenon. He was also asked to submit an interim report to the General Assembly in 2003 and a full report to the Commission in 2004.

Further reports of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/200 [YUN 2002, p. 713] and to Commission resolution 2003/32 (see above), the Secretary-General, in July, transmitted an interim report of the Special Rapporteur [A/58/120]. As follow-up to his 2002 report to the Assembly [YUN 2002, p. 712], which had addressed the prohibition of torture and other forms of ill-treatment in the context of anti-terrorism measures, the Special Rapporteur drew attention to recent conclusions and recommendations on the topic issued by international and regional human rights monitoring bodies. He summarized information contained in his study on trade in and production of equipment that was specifically designed to inflict torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment (see p. 741). Regarding reparation for victims of torture, he drew attention to an initiative of Redress Trust, a London-based human rights/legal organization, which indicated that laws were inadequate and/or lacking in most of the 30 countries studied and, even when present, were rarely implemented. He noted renewed efforts to underscore the need for justice in that regard, through a review of the draft basic principles and guidelines on the right to a remedy and reparation for victims of violations of human rights and humanitarian law (see p. 727). Annexed to the report were a statement issued jointly by the Commission's mechanisms on torture and OHCHR on the occasion of the UN International Day in Support of Victims of Torture, observed on 26 June, and a joint statement by the special rapporteurs/representatives, experts and chairpersons of the working groups of the special procedures of the Commission on 30 June.

The Special Rapporteur visited Spain (5-10 October) [E/CN.4/2004/56/Add.2], where he focused on investigating allegations of torture or ill-treatment of detainees held on terrorism charges, studying various safeguards for protecting the detainees and identifying possible approaches on how to fight terrorism while respecting human rights. He found that a recurring factor with negative implications for human rights was acts and threats of terrorism, mainly by Euskadi Ta Askatasuna, (ETA) which had victimized hundreds of people and spread fear among many more. The Government's denial of allegations of torture and ill-treatment was countered by credible sources. While denouncing terrorist acts, the Special Rapporteur emphasized that counterterrorism laws should conform with international human rights law, and recommended that the highest authorities officially and publicly prohibit torture and draw up a plan to prevent it; abrogate incommunicado detention, which seemed to encourage acts of torture; ensure detainees the rights of access to a lawyer, to a doctor of their choice and to have relatives informed of their arrest and place of detention; ensure that reports of torture or ill-treatment were investigated promptly and effectively; and ensure that torture victims obtained redress and adequate reparation.

Voluntary fund for torture victims

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/32], the Commission appealed to Governments, organizations and individuals to contribute annually to the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture and, if possible, to increase their contributions. It called on the Fund's Board of Trustees to report in 2004 on an independent evaluation of the Fund's functioning, to be initiated before the Commission's next session. The Secretary-General was asked to continue to include the Fund among the programmes receiving donations at the annual UN Pledging Conference for Development Activities and to ensure adequate staffing and technical facilities for UN bodies and mechanisms dealing with torture.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's request for an independent evaluation (decision 2003/248).

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 713], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [E/CN.4/2003/61], which supplemented and updated information contained in his previous report on the operation of the Fund [YUN 2002, p. 713].

In his annual report to the General Assembly on the status of the Fund, submitted in August [A/58/284], the Secretary-General stated that contributions received between 12 May 2002 and 28 May 2003 totalled $7,332,981 from 39 countries, two NGOs and seven private individuals. The Board of Trustees held its twenty-second session in Geneva (12-28 May). The total available for new grants to assist victims of torture amounted to some $7 million, against requests amounting to $13 million. In addition, some $50,000 was available for emergency grants before the Board's next annual session. During the year, new grants were allocated to 186 projects in 68 countries that provided psychological, medical, social, legal and economic assistance to victims of torture and members of their families. In accordance with Commission resolution 2003/32 (see p. 741), OHCHR initiated an independent evaluation of the Fund, including the lessons and best practices learned from its activities, with a view to further enhancing its effectiveness. The Secretary-General urged Governments, organizations and individuals in a position to do so to contribute to the Fund yearly, to enable it to meet the increasing demand for assistance.

In a December report [E/CN.4/2004/53], the Secretary-General stated that additional contributions received as at 1 December 2003 amounted to $202,365.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.1], adopted resolution 58/164 without vote [agenda item 117 (a)].

Torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment

The General Assembly,

Recalling article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and its resolution 39/46 of 10 December 1984, by which it adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment,

Recalling also that freedom from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment is a non-derogable right that must be protected under all circumstances, including in times of internal or international disturbance or armed conflict, and that the prohibition of torture is explicitly affirmed in all relevant international instruments,

Recalling further all previous resolutions or decisions on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights, in particular Assembly resolution 57/200 of 18 December 2002 and Commission resolution 2003/32 of 23 April 2003,

Recalling the recommendation contained in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993 that high priority should be given to providing the necessary resources to assist victims of torture and effective remedies for their physical, psychological and social rehabilitation, inter alia, through additional contributions to the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture,

Noting with satisfaction the existence of a considerable international network of centres for the rehabilitation of victims of torture, which plays an important role in providing assistance to victims of torture, and the collaboration of the Fund with the centres,

Commending the persistent efforts by non-governmental organizations to combat torture and to alleviate the suffering of victims of torture,

Mindful of its proclamation, in its resolution 52/149 of 12 December 1997, of 26 June as the United Nations International Day in Support of Victims of Torture,

1. Condemns all forms of torture, including through intimidation, as described in article 1 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment;

2. Urges all Governments to promote the full implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, and stresses in particular that all allegations of torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment should be promptly and impartially examined by the competent national authority, that those who encourage, order, tolerate or perpetrate acts of torture must be held responsible and severely punished, including the officials in charge of the place of detention where the prohibited act is found to have been committed, and that national legal systems should ensure that the victims of such acts obtain redress, are awarded fair and adequate compensation and receive appropriate social and medical rehabilitation, and encourages the development of rehabilitation centres for victims of torture;

3. Takes note of the Principles on the Effective Investigation and Documentation of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment annexed to its resolution 55/89 of 4 December 2000 as a useful tool in efforts to combat torture;

4. Urges Governments to take effective measures to provide redress and to prevent torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, including their gender-based manifestations;

5. Stresses that, under article 4 of the Convention, torture must be made an offence under domestic criminal law, and emphasizes that acts of torture are serious violations of international humanitarian law and that the perpetrators are liable to prosecution and punishment;

6. Notes with appreciation that one hundred and thirty-four States have become parties to the Convention, and urges all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Convention as a matter of priority;

7. Invites all States ratifying or acceding to the Convention and those States that are parties to the Convention and have not yet done so to consider joining the States parties that have already made the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 of the Convention and to consider the possibility of withdrawing their reservations to article 20;

8. Urges all States parties to the Convention to notify the Secretary-General of their acceptance of the amendments to articles 17 and 18 of the Convention as soon as possible;

9. Urges States parties to comply strictly with their obligations under the Convention, including, in view of the high number of reports not submitted, their obligation to submit reports in accordance with article 19 of the Convention, and invites States parties to incorporate a gender perspective and information concerning children and juveniles when submitting reports to the Committee against Torture;

10. Emphasizes the obligation of States parties under article 10 of the Convention to ensure education and training for personnel who may be involved in the custody, interrogation or treatment of any individual subjected to any form of arrest, detention or imprisonment;

11. Stresses, in this context, that States must not punish personnel referred to in paragraph 10 above for not obeying orders to commit or conceal acts amounting to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

12. Calls upon States parties to consider signing and ratifying the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 57/199 of 18 December 2002, which provides further measures for use in the fight against and the prevention of torture, and notes in this context that ratifications by twenty States parties are required for the Optional Protocol to enter into force, and that twenty-one States have already signed the Protocol and two States have ratified it;

13. Calls upon all Governments to take appropriate effective legislative, administrative, judicial or other measures to prevent and prohibit the production, trade, export and use of equipment that is specifically designed to inflict torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment;

14. Welcomes the work of the Committee against Torture and the report of the Committee, submitted in accordance with article 24 of the Convention;

15. Calls upon the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in conformity with his mandate established in General Assembly resolution 48/141 of 20 December 1993, to continue to provide, at the request of Governments, advisory services for the preparation of national reports to the Committee and for the prevention of torture, as well as technical assistance in the development, production and distribution of teaching material for this purpose;

16. Urges States parties to take fully into account the conclusions and recommendations made by the Committee after its consideration of their reports;

17. Notes with appreciation the interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the question of torture, describing the overall trends and developments with regard to his mandate, and encourages the Special Rapporteur to continue to include in his recommendations proposals on the prevention and investigation of torture;

18. Invites the Special Rapporteur to continue to examine questions of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment directed against women, and conditions conducive to such torture, and to make appropriate recommendations for the prevention and redress of gender-specific forms of torture, including rape or any other form of sexual violence, and to exchange views with the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences, with the aim of enhancing further their effectiveness and mutual cooperation;

19. Also invites the Special Rapporteur to continue to consider questions relating to the torture of children and conditions conducive to such torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and to make appropriate recommendations for the prevention of such torture;

20. Calls upon all Governments to cooperate with and assist the Special Rapporteur in the performance of his task, to supply all necessary information requested by the Special Rapporteur, to respond appropriately and expeditiously to his urgent appeals and to give serious consideration to requests by the Special Rapporteur to visit their countries, and urges them to enter into a constructive dialogue with the Special Rapporteur in following up his recommendations;

21. Reiterates the need for the Special Rapporteur to be able to respond effectively, in particular to urgent appeals, to credible and reliable information that comes before him, and invites the Special Rapporteur to continue to seek the views and comments of all concerned, in particular Member States;

22. Requests the Special Rapporteur to continue to consider including in his report information on the follow-up by Governments to his recommendations, visits and communications, including progress made and problems encountered;

23. Stresses the need for the continued regular exchange of views among the Committee against Torture, the Special Rapporteur and other relevant United Nations mechanisms and bodies, as well as for the pursuance of cooperation with relevant United Nations programmes, notably the United Nations

Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, with a view to enhancing further their effectiveness and cooperation on issues relating to torture, inter alia, by improving their coordination;

24. Expresses its gratitude and appreciation to the Governments, organizations and individuals that have already contributed to the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture;

25. Stresses the importance of the work of the Board of Trustees of the Fund, and appeals to all Governments and organizations to contribute annually to the Fund, preferably by 1 March before the annual meeting of the Board, if possible with a substantial increase in the level of contributions, so that consideration may be given to the ever-increasing demand for assistance;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to all Governments the appeals of the General Assembly for contributions to the Fund and to continue to include the Fund on an annual basis among the programmes for which funds are pledged at the United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities;

27. Also requests the Secretary-General to assist the Board of Trustees of the Fund in its appeal for contributions and in its efforts to make better known the existence of the Fund and the financial means currently available to it, as well as in its assessment of the global need for international funding of rehabilitation services for victims of torture and, in this effort, to make use of all existing possibilities, including the preparation, production and dissemination of information materials;

28. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure, within the overall budgetary framework of the United Nations, the provision of adequate staff and facilities for the bodies and mechanisms involved in combating torture and assisting victims of torture, commensurate with the strong support expressed by Member States for combating torture and assisting victims of torture;

29. Invites donor countries and recipient countries to consider including in their bilateral programmes and projects relating to the training of armed forces, security forces, prison and police personnel and health-care personnel matters relating to the protection of human rights and the prevention of torture, while bearing in mind a gender perspective;

30. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the status of the Convention and a report on the operations of the Fund;

31. Calls upon all Governments, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and other United Nations bodies and agencies, as well as relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to commemorate, on 26 June, the United Nations International Day in Support of Victims of Torture;

32. Decides to consider at its fifty-ninth session the reports of the Secretary-General, including the report on the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture, the report of the Committee against Torture and the interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the question of torture.

Freedom of expression

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In accordance with a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 716], the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression, Ambeyi Ligabo (Kenya), described his 2002 activities [E/CN.4/2003/67]. He had sent allegation letters to 109 countries, on behalf of numerous individuals whose right to the freedom of opinion and expression was reportedly threatened or violated. The texts of the communications he had sent and replies received from Governments were summarized in a separate report [E/CN.4/2003/67/Add.1]. As requested by the Commission, the Special Rapporteur also discussed access to information for the purposes of education on and prevention of HIV/AIDS, and the right to freedom of opinion and expression in the context of counter-terrorism measures.

The Special Rapporteur concluded that, although violations of the right might occur in all countries, democratic institutions offered more guarantees for its protection. He expressed concern that journalists suffered attacks, including killings, which were often perpetrated with impunity, and was of the view that an in-depth study on the security of journalists was necessary, particularly in situations of armed conflict. Regarding HIV/AIDS, he believed that respect for and protection of freedom of opinion and expression had a direct impact on the effectiveness of education and information policies, programmes and campaigns for preventing the disease. As to counter-terrorism activities, the Special Rapporteur recommended that, in considering measures restricting human rights, particularly the freedom of opinion and expression, attention should be paid to the provisions of article 4 (1) of the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 423] (see p. 669), concerning the latitude of measures that States might take during a public emergency. The Special Rapporteur encouraged ongoing efforts, particularly within the United Nations, to develop a universally valid definition of terrorism and terrorist acts to help the human rights monitoring of measures adopted to combat terrorism, as well as technical assistance to States when adopting such measures.

During the Special Rapporteur's visit to Iran (4-10 November) [E/CN.4/2004/62/Add.2], he found that, although some constituent elements of the freedom of opinion and expression were recognized in the Constitution, there were no provisions that specifically protected it as the right to hold opinions without interference. Other laws also contained clauses that restricted the right.

Persons and institutions mostly affected were the print media, journalists and intellectuals, students, lawyers, parliamentarians and persons involved in political activities. Over the past years, the situation regarding the right seemed to have deteriorated. Although he found a strong desire for reform among civil society and at the highest levels of Government, there were impediments to reform, particularly owing to the control exercised by unelected institutions and bodies that had no accountability. He urged the authorities to review the relevant laws and bring them into line with international human rights norms and standards, and pointed to an urgent need to define more clearly the contents of Islamic principles in law. The Special Rapporteur endorsed the findings of members of the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, who had visited Iran (see p. 733), regarding human rights violations, and called on the authorities to grant a complete amnesty to all prisoners prosecuted or convicted for related offences. He believed that a visit to the country by the Special Rapporteurs on torture (see p. 741) and on the independence of judges and lawyers (see p. 734) would be useful.

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/42], the Commission called on States to ensure respect and support for all persons who exercised the right to freedom of opinion and expression and related rights, and that relevant national legislation complied with their international human rights obligations; to promote and protect those rights in the media; to investigate threats and acts of violence against journalists; and to refrain from using counter-terrorism as a pretext to restrict freedom of expression. The Special Rapporteur was invited to draw the High Commissioner's attention to situations of particularly serious concern; pay particular attention, in cooperation with the Special Rapporteur on violence against women (see p. 777), to the situation of women; consider approaches taken to access to information with a view to sharing best practices; provide his views on the advantages and challenges of new information technologies; seek the views of Governments and others concerned; seek to participate in the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857); and report in 2004, including on the issue of security and protection of media professionals. The Secretary-General was asked to assist him.

Terrorism

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/219 [YUN 2002, p. 717], the Secretary-General, in a March report on protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism [E/CN.4/2003/120], described action taken by UN bodies and entities, including the Security Council (see p. 63), the High Commissioner, the Secretary-General's Policy Working Group on the United Nations and Terrorism, and UN human rights mechanisms and special procedures. The dialogue that had been established between the Council's Counter-Terrorism Committee and OHCHR would be further built upon, as would the dialogue initiated within the UN system and with regional and non-governmental partners and Member States, in order to better implement resolution 57/219.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 30 to 12, with 11 abstentions, the Commission, on 23 April [res. 2003/37], urged relevant human rights mechanisms to address the consequences of the acts, methods and practices of terrorist groups, and asked OHCHR to respond to requests from interested Governments for assistance and advice on ensuring full compliance with international human rights standards when undertaking measures to combat terrorism. The Secretary-General was asked to seek the views of Member States on the implications of terrorism for the full enjoyment of all human rights and on how the needs of victims of terrorism might be addressed, including through the possible establishment of a voluntary fund. The Commission asked the Special Rapporteur to give attention to the questions raised in the resolution and endorsed the Subcommittee's 2002 request [YUN 2002, p. 717] to the Secretary-General to assist her.

On 25 April [res. 2003/68], the Commission asked the High Commissioner to examine the question of the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, to make recommendations to States, to provide them with assistance and advice upon their request, and to report to the General Assembly in 2003 and to the Commission in 2004.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's request to the High Commissioner (decision 2003/256).

Further reports of Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/219 [YUN 2002, p. 717], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/266], reviewed comments received from Governments, international organizations and NGOs in response to a request of the High Commissioner seeking their views on the protection of human rights while countering terrorism. The report also described action taken in that regard by UN bodies and entities. Areas of concern in the protection of human rights while countering terrorism included the rights to life, to freedom from torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and to a fair trial; conditions and treatment in detention; the principle of legality, according to which criminal conduct should be defined before an offence could be committed, and with sufficient precision so as to prevent arbitrary enforcement; pre-trial detention; access to counsel; freedom of thought, conscience and religion; freedom of expression and assembly; freedom from discrimination; the treatment of non-nationals, including asylum-seekers; and states of emergency. The Secretary-General pointed to the urgent need for States to act against terrorism, with respect for human rights as an essential part of an effective counter-terrorism strategy, not an impediment to it. OHCHR had compiled a digest of universal and regional jurisprudence on protecting human rights while countering terrorism, and States should consider availing themselves of the technical assistance the Office was willing to provide to help them fully integrate human rights protection into measures against terrorism.

In October [A/58/533], the Secretary-General, in response to Assembly resolution 56/160 [YUN 2001, p. 649], summarized the views of two Member States on the implications of terrorism for the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, and on the possible establishment of a voluntary fund for the victims of terrorism.

Report of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Subcommittee request [YUN 2002, p. 717], the Special Rapporteur on terrorism and human rights, Kalliopi K. Koufa (Greece), submitted, in August, a progress report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/WP.1], in which she presented preliminary comments and updated information relating to the scope of the study on non-State terrorism since she submitted her first progress report [YUN 2001, p. 648]. Addenda to the report reviewed and updated information regarding international anti-terrorist activities and initiatives undertaken at the global and regional levels [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/WP.1/Add.1] since her 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 717], and summarized the views of Governments, intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and UN special procedures between May 2002 and May 2003 [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/WP.1/Add.2].

Subcommittee action. On 13 August [res. 2003/6], the Subcommittee, having considered the Special Rapporteur's additional progress report (see above), requested its translation into the UN official languages and publication as an official document. OHCHR was asked to ensure its distribution at the Commission's 2004 session, and the Secretary-General to ensure that the report and addenda could be accessed by those seeking information on the Web and to transmit it to Governments, specialized agencies and concerned intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, with the request that they submit to the Special Rapporteur comments, information and data relating to the study on terrorism and human rights. He was also requested to make available to the Special Rapporteur all the collected information and to assist her to finalize her study. The Special Rapporteur was asked to submit her final report in 2004.

Also on 13 August [res. 2003/15], the Subcommission decided, with a view to rationalizing its work on terrorism, to rename sub-item 6 (c) "New priorities, in particular terrorism and counter-terrorism", in order to study the compatibility of counter-terrorism measures with international human rights standards, emphasizing their impact on the most vulnerable groups, with a view to elaborating detailed guidelines. The Subcommission appointed Ms. Koufa as coordinator, with a mandate to gather the necessary documentation, and asked Governments, inter-governmental organizations, national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, experts and NGOs to provide it and the coordinator with pertinent information.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/174 by recorded vote (120-42-18) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Human rights and terrorism

The General Assembly,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recalling the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations, as well as the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism,

Recalling also the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, in which the Conference reaffirmed that the acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, as well as its linkage in some countries to drug trafficking, are activities aimed at the destruction of human rights, fundamental freedoms and democracy, threatening territorial integrity and the security of States and destabilizing legitimately constituted Governments, and that the international community should take the necessary steps to enhance cooperation to prevent and combat terrorism,

Recalling further the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted by the General Assembly,

Recalling, in this regard, the reference in the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the Millennium Declaration to the fact that terrorism itself is a violation of human rights and must be combated as such and that efforts at combating it must be pursued, however, in full compliance with established international norms,

Recalling also its resolutions 48/122 of 20 December 1993, 49/185 of 23 December 1994, 50/186 of 22 December 1995, 52/133 of 12 December 1997, 54/109 and 54/110 of 9 December 1999, 54/164 of 17 December 1999, 55/158 of 12 December 2000, 56/160 of 19 December 2001 and 57/219 and 57/220 of 18 December 2002,

Recalling in particular that, in its resolution 52/133, it requested the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the implications of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations for the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling previous resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights,

Bearing in mind all other relevant General Assembly resolutions,

Bearing in mind also relevant Security Council resolutions,

Aware that, at the dawn of the twenty-first century, the world is witness to historic and far-reaching transformations, in the course of which forces of aggressive nationalism and religious and ethnic extremism continue to produce fresh challenges,

Alarmed that acts of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations aimed at the destruction of human rights have continued despite national and international efforts,

Bearing in mind that the right to life is the basic human right, without which a human being can exercise no other right,

Bearing in mind also that terrorism creates an environment that destroys the right of people to live in freedom from fear,

Reiterating that all States have an obligation to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms and to ensure effective implementation of their obligations under international law,

Seriously concerned about the gross violations of human rights perpetrated by terrorist groups,

Expressing its deepest sympathy and condolences to all the victims of terrorism and their families,

Alarmed in particular at the possibility that terrorist groups may exploit new technologies to facilitate acts of terrorism, which may cause massive damage, including huge loss of human life,

Emphasizing the need to intensify the fight against terrorism at the national level, to enhance effective international cooperation in combating terrorism in conformity with international law, including relevant State obligations under international human rights and international humanitarian law, and to strengthen the role of the United Nations in this respect,

Emphasizing also that States shall deny safe haven to those who finance, plan, support or commit terrorist acts or provide safe havens,

Reaffirming that all measures to counter terrorism must be in strict conformity with international law, including international human rights standards and obligations,

Mindful of the need to protect the human rights of and guarantees for the individual in accordance with the relevant human rights principles and instruments, in particular the right to life,

Noting the growing consciousness within the international community of the negative effects of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations on the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms and on the establishment of the rule of law and democratic freedoms as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Noting also the developments that have occurred since its fifty-sixth session, on addressing the issue of human rights and terrorism at the national, regional and international levels,

1. Reiterates its unequivocal condemnation of the acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations as activities aimed at the destruction of human rights, fundamental freedoms and democracy, threatening the territorial integrity and security of States, destabilizing legitimately constituted Governments, undermining pluralistic civil society and having adverse consequences for the economic and social development of States;

2. Strongly condemns the violations of the right to life, liberty and security;

3. Profoundly deplores the increasing number of innocent persons, including women, children and the elderly, killed, massacred and maimed by terrorists in indiscriminate and random acts of violence and terror, which cannot be justified in any circumstances;

4. Expresses its solidarity with the victims of terrorism;

5. Reaffirms the decision of the heads of State and Government, as contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to take concerted action against international terrorism and to accede as soon as possible to all the relevant regional and international conventions;

6. Urges the international community to enhance cooperation at the regional and international levels in the fight against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, in accordance with relevant international instruments, including those relating to human rights, with the aim of its eradication;

7. Calls upon States to take all necessary and effective measures, in accordance with relevant provisions of international law, including international human rights standards, to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomever it is committed, and also calls upon States to strengthen, where appropriate, their legislation to combat terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

8. Urges all States to deny safe haven to terrorists;

9. Calls upon States to take appropriate measures, in conformity with relevant provisions of national and international law, including international human rights standards, before granting refugee status, for the purpose of ensuring that an asylum-seeker has not planned, facilitated or participated in the commission of terrorist acts, including assassinations, and in this context urges those States that have granted refugee status or asylum to persons involved in or claiming to have committed acts of terrorism to review those situations;

10. Condemns the incitement to ethnic hatred, violence and terrorism;

11. Stresses that every person, regardless of nationality, race, sex, religion or any other distinction, has a right to protection from terrorism and terrorist acts;

12. Expresses concern about the growing connection between terrorist groups and other criminal organizations engaged in the illegal traffic in arms and drugs at the national and international levels, as well as the consequent commission of serious crimes such as murder, extortion, kidnapping, assault, the taking of hostages and robbery, and requests the relevant United Nations bodies to continue to give special attention to this question;

13. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on human rights and terrorism, and requests him to continue to seek the views of Member States on the implications of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations for the full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms and on the possible establishment of a voluntary fund for the victims of terrorism, as well as on ways and means to rehabilitate the victims of terrorism and to reintegrate them into society, with a view to incorporating his findings in his report to the General Assembly;

14. Decides to consider this question at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/174:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Palau, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Chile, Cyprus, Fiji, Israel, Japan, Nauru, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Republic of Moldova, San Marino, Spain, Syrian Arab Republic.

Also on 22 December [meeting 77], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/187 by recorded vote (181-0-1) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the fundamental importance, including in response to terrorism and the fear of terrorism, of respecting all human rights and fundamental freedoms and the rule of law,

Recalling that States are under the obligation to protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms of all persons,

Recognizing that the respect for human rights, the respect for democracy and the respect for the rule of law are interrelated and mutually reinforcing,

Recalling its resolution 57/219 of 18 December 2002 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/68 of 25 April 2003,

Recalling also its resolution 48/141 of 20 December 1993 and, inter alia, the responsibility of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to promote and protect the effective enjoyment of all human rights,

Reiterating paragraph 17 of section I of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, which states that acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations are activities aimed at the destruction of human rights, fundamental freedoms and democracy, threatening territorial integrity, security of States and destabilizing legitimately constituted Governments, and that the international community should take the necessary steps to enhance cooperation to prevent and combat terrorism,

Noting its resolution 56/160 of 19 December 2001, and noting also Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/37 of 23 April 2003 on human rights and terrorism,

Noting also the declaration on the issue of combating terrorism contained in the annex to Security Council resolution 1456(2003) of 20 January 2003, in particular the statement that States must ensure that any measures taken to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law and should adopt such measures in accordance with international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council,

Noting the declarations, statements and recommendations by a number of human rights treaty monitoring bodies and special procedures on the question of the compatibility of counter-terrorism measures with human rights obligations,

Reaffirming its unequivocal condemnation of all acts, methods and practices of terrorism, in all their forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, regardless of their motivation, as criminal and unjustifiable, and renewing its commitment to strengthen international cooperation to prevent and combat terrorism,

Stressing that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights without distinction of any kind, including on the grounds of race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status,

Recalling that, in accordance with article 4 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, certain rights are recognized as non-derogable in any circumstances and that any measures derogating from the provisions of the Covenant must be in accordance with that article in all cases, and underlining the exceptional and temporary nature of any such derogations, as stated in General Comment No. 29, on states of emergency, adopted by the Human Rights Committee on 24 July 2001,

1. Reaffirms that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism complies with their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law;

2. Calls upon States to raise awareness about the importance of these obligations among national authorities involved in combating terrorism;

3. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/219, and welcomes its conclusions on the necessity of ensuring respect for human rights in the international fight to eliminate terrorism and on the important role that the United Nations has in promoting the maintenance of international peace and security and in achieving international cooperation for the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all;

4. Takes note with interest of the report of the Secretary-General on the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, and welcomes the various initiatives to strengthen the protection of human rights in the context of counter-terrorism adopted by the United Nations and regional intergovernmental bodies as well as by States;

5. Welcomes the publication of the "Digest of Jurisprudence of the United Nations and Regional Organizations on the Protection of Human Rights while Countering Terrorism", and requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to update and publish it periodically;

6. Also welcomes the ongoing dialogue established in the context of the fight against terrorism between the Security Council and its Counter-Terrorism Committee and the relevant bodies for the promotion and protection of human rights, and encourages the Security Council and its Counter-Terrorism Committee to continue to develop the cooperation with relevant human rights bodies, in particular with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, giving due regard to the promotion and protection of human rights in the ongoing work pursuant to relevant Security Council resolutions relating to terrorism;

7. Requests all relevant special procedures and mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights, as well as the United Nations human rights treaty bodies, to consider, within their mandates, the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the context of measures to combat terrorism and to coordinate their efforts, as appropriate, in order to promote a consistent approach on this subject;

8. Encourages States, while countering terrorism, to take into account relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions on human rights, and encourages them to consider the recommendations of the special procedures and mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights and the relevant comments and views of United Nations human rights treaty bodies;

9. Requests the High Commissioner, making use of existing mechanisms, to continue:

(a) To examine the question of the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, taking into account reliable information from all sources;

(b) To make general recommendations concerning the obligation of States to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms while taking actions to counter terrorism;

(c) To provide assistance and advice to States, upon their request, on the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, as well as to relevant United Nations bodies;

10. Also requests the High Commissioner, taking into account the views of States, to submit a study on the extent to which the human rights special procedures and treaty monitoring bodies are able, within their existing mandates, to address the compatibility of national counter-terrorism measures with international human rights obligations in their work, for consideration by States in strengthening the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, with regard to the international human rights institutional mechanisms;

11. Further requests the High Commissioner to submit the requested study to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, with an interim report to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixtieth session;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/187:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: India.

The Committee retained paragraphs 10 and 11 by a recorded vote of 136 to 1, with 15 abstentions. The Assembly retained the paragraphs by a recorded vote of 160 to 1, with 12 abstentions.

Hostage-taking

On 23 April [res. 2003/40], the Commission, condemning all acts of hostage-taking, demanded the immediate and unconditional release of all hostages. It called on States to prevent, combat and punish hostage-taking and urged thematic rapporteurs and working groups to address the consequences of such acts in their reports.

Peace and security

By a recorded vote of 33 to 16, with 4 abstentions, the Commission, on 24 April [res. 2003/61], affirming that States should promote international peace and security, urged them to respect and put into practice the principles and purposes of the UN Charter in their relations with other States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/192 by recorded vote (119-50-9) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Promotion of peace as a vital requirement for the full enjoyment of all human rights by all

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/216 of 18 December 2002,

Recalling also Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/61 of 24 April 2003, entitled "Promotion of peace as a vital requirement for the full enjoyment of all human rights by all",

Recalling further its resolution 39/11 of 12 November 1984, entitled "Declaration on the Right of Peoples to Peace", and the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Bearing in mind the fundamental principles of international law set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Underlining, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations, its full and active support for the United Nations and for the enhancement of its role and effectiveness in strengthening international peace, security and justice and in promoting the solution of international problems, as well as the development of friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Reaffirming the obligation of all States to settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security and justice are not endangered,

Emphasizing its objective of promoting better relations among all States and contributing to setting up conditions in which their people can live in true and lasting peace, free from any threat to or attempt against their security,

Reaffirming the obligation of all States to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, or in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also its commitment to peace, security and justice and the continuing development of friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Rejecting the use of violence in pursuit of political aims, and stressing that only peaceful political solutions can ensure a stable and democratic future for all people around the world,

Reaffirming the importance of ensuring respect for the principles of the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of States and non-intervention in matters that are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State, in accordance with the Charter and international law,

Reaffirming also that all peoples have the right to self-determination, by virtue of which they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development,

Reaffirming further the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Underlining that the subjection of peoples to alien subjugation, domination and exploitation constitutes a denial of fundamental rights, is contrary to the Charter and is an impediment to the promotion of world peace and cooperation,

Recalling that everyone is entitled to a social and international order in which the rights and freedoms set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights can be fully realized,

Convinced of the aim of creating conditions of stability and well-being, which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principles of equal rights and self-determination of peoples,

Convinced also that life without war is the primary international prerequisite for the material well-being, development and progress of countries and for the full implementation of the rights and fundamental human freedoms proclaimed by the United Nations,

1. Stresses that peace is a vital requirement for the promotion and protection of all human rights for all;

2. Solemnly declares that the preservation and promotion of peace constitute a fundamental obligation of each State;

3. Emphasizes that the preservation and promotion of peace demand that the policies of States be directed towards the elimination of the threat of war, particularly nuclear war, the renunciation of the use or threat of use of force in international relations and the settlement of international disputes by peaceful means on the basis of the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Affirms that all States should promote the establishment, maintenance and strengthening of international peace and security and an international system based on respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter and the promotion of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to development and the right of peoples to self-determination;

5. Urges all States to respect and to put into practice the purposes and principles of the Charter in their relations with other States, irrespective of their political, economic or social system and of their size, geographical location or level of economic development;

6. Decides to continue consideration of the question of the promotion of the right of peoples to peace at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/192:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Argentina, Chile, Guatemala, India, Marshall Islands, Neuru, Samoa, Singapore, Timor-Leste.

Weapons of mass destruction

In accordance with a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 720], Yeung Kam Yeung Sik Yuen (Mauritius) submitted, in June, an updated working paper [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/35] regarding a possible study on the real and potential dangers to the enjoyment of human rights posed by the testing, production, storage, transfer, trafficking or use of weapons of mass destruction or with indiscriminate effect, or of a nature to cause superfluous injury. He reviewed his 2002 working paper [YUN 2002, p. 720], focusing on aspects regarding humanitarian law, and presented new information on depleted uranium weapons, nuclear weapons, cluster bombs, other weapons (anthrax, fuel-air bombs, landmines) and new weapons. He concluded that all the weapons reviewed should be universally banned for all States and that those who employed them should assume their duties relative to compensation, clean-up and warning. There was a pressing need to know what weapons were used and where in Afghanistan, Iraq and other conflict areas in order to assess damage and provide medical assistance to affected persons, in conformity with the right to health. The Subcommission could join in the appeal of other UN entities for disclosure; call for a new environmental assessment of Afghanistan that would more closely examine the effects from weaponry used after the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60]; and call for an in-depth study of the nature of newer weapons, their ill effects and potential misuse. Owing to rapid developments, the Subcommittee might consider requesting the High Commissioner to prepare a paper for its 2004 session on progress achieved on those issues.

Small arms

Commission action. On 25 April [dec. 2003/112], the Commission decided to endorse the Subcommittee's 2002 appointment [YUN 2002, p. 720] of Barbara Frey (United States) as Special Rapporteur with the task of preparing a comprehensive study on the prevention of human rights violations committed with small arms and light weapons; its request to her to submit a preliminary report in 2003, a progress report in 2004 and a final report in 2005; and its request to the Secretary-General to assist her.

On 23 July, the Commission's decision was endorsed by the Economic and Social Council (decision 2003/268).

Report of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Subcommittee request [YUN 2002, p. 720], the Special Rapporteur on the prevention of human rights violations committed with small arms and light weapons, Ms. Frey, submitted a June preliminary report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/29], which developed the broad parameters for the legal and practical issues involved and analysed the role of international human rights laws and procedures in preventing the violations. Arms were used to foment a range of human rights abuses and more guns were getting into more hands with fewer restraints. The most visible impact of small arms on human rights was the human carnage, including half a million people killed yearly in war, homicides, accidents and suicides. The report discussed the misuse of small arms by State agents, such as police and military officials, and by armed individuals and groups, as well as the transfer of those arms to commit serious violations of international human rights and humanitarian law. It recommended measures to reduce the demand for small arms and the spiralling violence that occurred in heavily armed communities, and to prevent their misuse and transfer. It further proposed that States adopt national laws regarding small arms and incorporate into those laws the United Nations Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials [YUN 1990, p. 701].

Subcommission action. On 13 August [dec. 2003/105], the Subcommittee requested the Secretary-General to transmit a questionnaire developed by the Special Rapporteur to Governments, national human rights institutions and NGOs to solicit information required in connection with her study so that she might take them into account in preparing her 2004 progress report.

Economic, social and cultural rights

Right to development

Reports of High Commissioner. In response to a 1998 Commission request [YUN 1998, p. 683], the High Commissioner submitted a [E/CN.4/2003/7], which described OHCHR activities taken to implement the right to development and provided information regarding the implementation of relevant General Assembly and Commission resolutions, as well as inter-agency coordination within the UN system to implement Commission resolutions.

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/223 [YUN 2002, p. 722], the Secretary-General, in a February note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2003/125], drew attention to the High Commissioner's report.

A further report of the High Commissioner on the importance and application of the principle of equity [E/CN.4/2003/25], submitted pursuant to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 722], examined the various ways and contexts in which "equity" was used and referred to, and the views of Member States, international organizations, programmes and funds. It concluded that, although none of the human rights instruments adopted under UN auspices contained a definition of equity, there were references to it in those instruments and in the general comments/recommendations adopted by treaty monitoring bodies. It appeared more frequently in the decisions of the main UN human rights bodies and in Commission and Subcommittee reports. It was also often referred to in global conferences and was particularly mentioned in the UN Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49].

Report of independent expert. In accordance with 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 657] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 722] Commission requests, the independent expert on the right to development, Arjun Sen Gupta (India), submitted a preliminary study [E/CN.4/2003/WG.18/2] to the Working Group on the Right to Development (see p. 753) on the implications of international economic issues for realization of the right. He summarized the imperatives of the right, and examined the main characteristics of the globalized world and their relationship with possible indicators of rights-based development. The expert discussed international assistance and trade liberalization, the extent to which they had met developing countries' requirements, and the possible implications of integrative policies that those countries might follow towards poverty reduction and the realization of the right to development. The expert concluded that the process of globalization and integration into the world economy had not improved developing countries' enjoyment of the right because appropriate policies had rarely been adopted. He recommended that the policies be aimed at the realization of a rights-based approach to development and summarized barriers that needed to be overcome, especially regarding merchandise trade in textiles and clothing and in agriculture. It was also necessary to examine the functioning of the World Trade Organization (WTO) and other trade arrangements, "safeguards" of special and preferential treatment of poor countries and the dispute-settlement mechanism, with a view to enabling trade liberalization policies to realize a rights-based process of development. For that purpose, a group of professionals and experts from WTO and the Commission should be established. The expert suggested that he present a position paper to move the discussion towards concrete proposals for action.

Working Group activities. The open-ended Working Group on the Right to Development, at its fourth session (Geneva, 3-14 February) [E/CN.4/2003/26 & Corr.1], considered the High Commissioner's report and the independent expert's study (see p. 752) and the expert's 2002 report on the proposed development compact [YUN 2002, p. 721]. It asked the High Commissioner to bring its conclusions to the attention of major international institutions, to consider supplementing future reports with additional analyses of the issues covered, to ensure that OHCHR representatives participated in the Group's future deliberations, to strengthen the technical assistance programme and to prioritize the right to development. The Chairperson-Rapporteur recommended that OHCHR consider collecting good practices related to the implementation of the right in development programmes and policies, including specific initiatives such as those aimed at combating HIV/AIDS, and that the Office undertake analytical studies of the role that national human rights institutions could play in creating and implementing development partnerships. The Group indicated the need for further clarification of a number of aspects of the proposed development compact. The Chairperson-Rapporteur suggested that the expert pursue further the feasibility of implementing the proposal in consultation with bilateral donors, multilateral agencies and other stakeholders. As to the expert's preliminary study, the Group asked him to provide further analysis at its 2004 session on the impact of such topics as international trade, access to technology, good governance and equity at the international level, and the debt burden on the right to development. Regarding existing development instruments and mechanisms, the Group discussed the World Bank/International Monetary Fund (IMF) poverty reduction strategy papers, the common country assessment, the United Nations Development Assistance Framework, the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) and South-South cooperation as potential mechanisms for the advancement of the right. It encouraged OHCHR, international agencies and financial institutions to integrate all human rights in those and other existing development instruments and mechanisms, to use them to promote the right and to report to the Group in 2004. The expert and OHCHR were encouraged to develop, in cooperation with international agencies and financial institutions, country-specific studies in developed and developing countries, examining in an integrated manner national and international aspects and the role of all stakeholders in the right in those countries. Stressing that NEPAD could provide a suitable framework for implementing the right, the Group expected the expert and OHCHR to present information to it in that regard in 2004 and hoped that the NEPAD secretariat would participate in the discussions. Following the Group's discussion of the question of holding an expert seminar on crucial aspects of the right, the Chairperson-Rapporteur stated that the Commission should facilitate such a seminar. The Group scheduled for its 2004 session the discussion of a suitable and permanent follow-up mechanism, and recommended the extension of its mandate for an additional year.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 47 to 3, with 3 abstentions, the Commission, on 25 April [res. 2003/83], asked the Subcommission to prepare a concept document, for consideration in 2005, proposing options for the implementation of the right to development and their feasibility, including an international binding legal standard, guidelines on the implementation of the right and principles for development partnership, based on the 1986 Declaration on the Right to Development, annexed to General Assembly resolution 41/128 [YUN 1986, p. 717]. It asked the Subcommission to take into account the outcomes of all major UN and global meetings in the economic and social areas, as well as the Group's 2002 conclusions [YUN 2002, p. 721]. OHCHR was asked to assist the Subcommission, and the High Commissioner to convene a two-day high-level seminar prior to the Group's 2004 session and within its 10 working days, to review and identify effective strategies for mainstreaming the right in the policies and operational activities of the major international organizations/institutions, and as a way of contributing to the Subcommittee's work on the proposed concept document. The expert was asked to collaborate with the Subcommittee in preparing the document and, in consultation with relevant UN agencies and the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and IMF), to deepen his study on the elements contained in his preliminary study on the impact of international economic and financial issues on the right's enjoyment and to report in 2004. The Commission renewed the Working Group's mandate for a further year and asked it to convene its fifth session before the Commission's 2004 session to consider the outcome of the seminar and further initiatives.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/261 by recorded vote (51-3) [agenda item 14 (g)].

The right to development

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/83 of 25 April 2003, and decided to endorse the decision of the Commission to renew the mandate of the Working Group on the Right to Development for one year and to convene its fifth session before the sixtieth session of the Commission, for a period of ten working days.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/261:

In favour: Andorra, Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Sweden, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Japan, United States.

Note by Secretariat. In May [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/8], the Secretariat, referring to a 1999 Subcommittee request to the Secretary-General [YUN 1999, p. 652], noted that, as at 21 May 2003, no reply had been received from UN bodies and agencies regarding steps taken to promote international cooperation for the realization of the right to development in the context of the United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006) (see p. 848). However, the Secretary-General drew the Subcommittee's attention to the High Commissioner's report (see p. 752) containing information on OHCHR activities relating to the right's implementation, and to the General Assembly's request to him in resolution 57/223 [YUN 2002, p. 722].

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/223, the Secretary-General submitted an August report with later addendum on the right to development [A/58/276 & Add.1] based on information received from seven Governments and from seven UN specialized agencies, departments and programmes, and other international organizations.

On 22 December, the Assembly took note of the report (decision 58/538).

Subcommission action. On 14 August [dec. 2003/116], the Subcommittee requested Florizelle O'Connor (Jamaica) to prepare, without financial implications, for consideration in 2004, a working paper identifying and analysing possible alternatives to enable the Subcommittee to respond fully and effectively to the request contained in Commission resolution 2003/83 (see p. 753).

Also on 14 August [dec. 2003/115], the Subcommittee, referring to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 722], asked Rui Baltazar Dos Santos Alves (Mozambique) to prepare, without financial implications, a working paper on human rights and international solidarity as a component of efforts of developing countries to realize the right to development, for consideration in 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/172 by recorded vote (173-3-5) [agenda item 117 (b)].

The right to development

The General Assembly,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, which expresses, in particular, the determination to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom, as well as to employ international mechanisms for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

Reaffirming the objective of making the right to development a reality for everyone, as set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly on 8 September 2000,

Stressing the need for undertaking urgent measures to implement the goals and targets set at all the major United Nations conferences and summits and their review processes, which are paramount in the process of the realization of the right to development,

Taking note of the outcome of the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held in Doha from 9 to 14 November 2001,

Recalling that the Declaration on the Right to Development, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 41/128 of 4 December 1986, confirmed that the right to development is an inalienable human right and that equality of opportunity for development is a prerogative both of nations and of individuals who make up nations, and the individual as the central subject and beneficiary of development,

Stressing that the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action reaffirmed the right to development as a universal and inalienable right and an integral part of fundamental human rights, and the individual as the central subject and beneficiary of development,

Recalling all its previous resolutions and those of the Commission on Human Rights on the right to development, in particular Commission resolution 1998/72 of 22 April 1998, on the urgent need to make further progress towards the realization of the right to development as set out in the Declaration on the Right to Development,

Welcoming its adoption of the United Nations Convention against Corruption on 31 October 2003,

Recalling the high-level plenary meetings of the General Assembly held on 22 September 2003 devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of its twenty-sixth special session and the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS,

Recalling also the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of the Non-Aligned Movement, held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003,

Reiterating its continuing support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development as a development framework for Africa,

Recognizing that historical injustices have undeniably contributed to the poverty, underdevelopment, marginalization, social exclusion, economic disparity, instability and insecurity that affect many people in different parts of the world, in particular in developing countries,

Stressing that poverty eradication is one of the critical elements in the promotion and realization of the right to development and that poverty is a multifaceted problem that requires a multifaceted and integrated approach in addressing economic, political, social, environmental and institutional dimensions at all levels, especially in the context of the millennium development goal of halving, by 2015, the proportion of the world's people whose income is less than one dollar a day and the proportion of people who suffer from hunger,

Expressing regret that the Working Group on the Right to Development, at its fourth session, did not reach a conclusion, in particular on the implementation of the conclusions of the third session of the Working Group, while aware of the views and observations of the Chairperson-Rapporteur,

1. Endorses the conclusions of the third session of the Working Group on the Right to Development, as adopted by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 2002/69 of 25 April 2002, which constitute a solid foundation for further initiatives towards the promotion and the realization of the right to development;

2. Requests the Working Group at its fifth session to revisit and build upon the conclusions of its third session in order to constructively and effectively fulfil its mandate, bearing in mind that the Working Group did not reach a conclusion at its fourth session;

3. Stresses the importance of the core principles contained in the conclusions of the third session of the Working Group, congruent with the purpose of international human rights instruments, such as equality, non-discrimination, accountability, participation and international cooperation, as critical to mainstreaming the right to development at the international level, and underlines the importance of the principles of equity and transparency;

4. Reaffirms the commitment to implement the goals and targets set out in all the outcome documents of the major United Nations conferences and summits and their review processes, in particular those relating to the realization of the right to development, recognizing that the realization of the right to development is critical to achieving the objectives, goals and targets set in those outcome documents;

5. Reaffirms also that the realization of the right to development is essential to the implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, which regards all human rights as universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated, places the human person at the centre of development and recognizes that, while development facilitates the enjoyment of all human rights, the lack of development may not be invoked to justify the abridgement of internationally recognized human rights;

6. Stresses that the basic responsibility for the promotion and protection of all human rights lies with the State, and reaffirms that States have the primary responsibility for their own economic and social development and that the role of national policies and development strategies cannot be overemphasized;

7. Reaffirms that States have the primary responsibility for the creation of national and international conditions favourable to the realization of the right to development and their commitment to cooperating with each other to that end;

8. Reaffirms also the need for an international environment that is conducive to the realization of the right to development;

9. Stresses the need to strive for greater acceptance, operationalization and realization of the right to development at the international and national levels, and calls upon States to institute the measures required for the implementation of the right to development as a fundamental human right;

10. Emphasizes the critical importance of identifying and analysing obstacles impeding the full realization of the right to development at both the national and the international levels;

11. Affirms that, while globalization offers both opportunities and challenges, the process of globalization remains deficient in achieving the objectives of integrating all countries into a globalized world, and stresses the need for policies and measures at the national and global levels to respond to the challenges and opportunities of globalization if this process is to be made fully inclusive and equitable;

12. Recognizes that, despite continuous efforts on the part of the international community, the gap between developed and developing countries remains unacceptably wide, that developing countries continue to face difficulties in participating in the globalization process and that many risk being marginalized and effectively excluded from its benefits;

13. Reaffirms the commitment, and urges developed countries that have not yet done so, to make concrete efforts towards meeting the targets of 0.7 per cent of their gross national product for official development assistance to developing countries and 0.15 to 0.2 per cent of their gross national product to least developed countries, and encourages developing countries to build on the progress achieved in ensuring that official development assistance is used effectively to help to meet development goals and targets;

14. Recognizes the need to address market access for developing countries, including in respect of agriculture, services and non-agricultural products, in particular those of interest to developing countries;

15. Considers that a desirable pace of meaningful trade liberalization, including in areas under negotiation; implementation of commitments on implementation-related issues and concerns; review of special and differential-treatment provisions, with a view to strengthening them and making them more precise, effective and operational; avoidance of new forms of protectionism; and capacity-building and technical assistance for developing countries are important issues in making progress towards the effective implementation of the right to development;

16. Underlines the fact that the international community is far from meeting the target set in the United Nations Millennium Declaration of halving the number of people living in poverty by 2015, and emphasizes the principle of international cooperation, including partnership and commitment, between developed and developing countries towards achieving the goal;

17. Recognizes the important link between the international economic, commercial and financial spheres and the realization of the right to development, stresses, in this regard, the need to broaden the base of decision-making at the international level on issues of development concern and to fill organizational gaps, as well as strengthen the United Nations system and other multilateral institutions, and also stresses the need to broaden and strengthen the participation of developing countries and economies in transition in international economic decision-making and norm-setting;

18. Recognizes also that good governance and the rule of law at the national level assist all States in the promotion and protection of human rights, including the right to development, and agrees on the value of the ongoing efforts being made by States to identify and strengthen good governance practices, including transparent, responsible, accountable and participatory government, that are responsive and appropriate to their needs and aspirations, including in the context of agreed partnership approaches to development, capacity-building and technical assistance;

19. Recognizes further the important role and the rights of women and the application of a gender perspective as a cross-cutting issue in the process of realizing the right to development, and notes in particular the positive relationship between women's education and their equal participation in the civil, cultural, economic, political and social activities of the community and the promotion of the right to development;

20. Stresses the need for the integration of the rights of children, girls and boys alike, in all policies and programmes, and for ensuring the protection and promotion of those rights, especially in areas relating to health, education and the full development of their capacities;

21. Stresses also that further and additional measures must be taken at the national and international levels to fight HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases, taking into account ongoing efforts and programmes, and reiterates the need for international assistance in this regard;

22. Recognizes the need for strong partnerships with civil society organizations and the private sector in pursuit of poverty eradication and development, as well as for good corporate governance;

23. Emphasizes the urgent need for taking concrete measures to fight against all forms of corruption at the national and international levels, to prevent, detect and deter in a more effective manner international transfers of illicitly acquired assets and to strengthen international cooperation in asset recovery, stresses the importance of a genuine political commitment on the part of all Governments through a firm legal framework, and in this context urges States to sign and ratify the United Nations Convention against Corruption as soon as possible;

24. Looks forward to the consideration by the Commission on Human Rights at its sixty-first session of the concept document to be prepared by the Sub-commission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights establishing options for the implementation of the right to development and their feasibility;

25. Emphasizes the need to strengthen further the activities of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in the promotion and realization of the right to development, including ensuring effective use of the financial and human resources necessary to fulfil its mandate and better servicing of and support for the Working Group on the Right to Development;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Office of the High Commissioner effectively assists in implementing the recommendations contained in the conclusions of the third session of the Working Group on the Right to Development, and to ensure also the meaningful participation and contribution of all relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, the specialized agencies and international organizations in the next session of the Working Group;

27. Calls upon the United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, as well as the specialized agencies, to mainstream the right to development in their operational programmes and objectives, and stresses the need for the international financial and multilateral trading systems to mainstream the right to development in their policies and objectives;

28. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of Member States, United Nations organs and bodies, specialized agencies, funds and programmes, international development and financial institutions, in particular the Bretton Woods institutions, and non-governmental organizations;

29. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session and an interim report to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution, including efforts undertaken at the national, regional and international levels in the promotion and realization of the right to development.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/172:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Canada, Georgia, Japan, Sweden.

Democratic and equitable international order

By a recorded vote of 31 to 15, with 7 abstentions, the Commission, on 24 April [res. 2003/63], urged States to continue efforts to establish a democratic and equitable international order. The Commission asked human rights treaty bodies, OHCHR and Commission and Subcommission mechanisms to contribute to the implementation of its resolution. The Secretary-General was asked to bring the resolution to the attention of Member States, UN organs and bodies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs and to disseminate it widely.

Globalization

Report of High Commissioner. The Commission had before it a report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2003/49], submitted in response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 725], which described activities integrating the theme of globalization in regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights, covering Latin America and the Caribbean and the Asia-Pacific region.

Note by Secretariat. A February note of the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2003/50], referring to a 2002 Commission request for a study on the principle of non-discrimination in the context of globalization [YUN 2002, p. 725], stated that OHCHR held consultations with the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, WTO, the World Intellectual Property Organization, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), academics and other experts. The Office prepared a draft report, which was shared with those organizations and experts for review. Following further discussion, the final report would be submitted in 2004.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 38 to 15, the Commission, on 22 April [res. 2003/23], reaffirmed the commitment to create an environment conducive to development and to the elimination of poverty through good governance, transparency in the financial, monetary and trading systems and the commitment to an open, equitable, rule-based, predictable and non-discriminatory multilateral trading and financial system. The High Commissioner was asked to bring his 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 725] to the attention of WTO and the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization, launched by ILO with the aim of building a consensus on a model of globalization that reduced poverty and insecurity and increased opportunities for all. Referring to the Secretariat's note (see above), the Commission asked the High Commissioner to focus on the need to clarify the human rights principle of non-discrimination relative to WTO's trade rules, especially as they applied to the WTO Agreement on Agriculture.

Report of Special Rapporteurs. In a final report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/14], the Special Rapporteurs on globalization and its impact on human rights, Joseph Oloka-Onyango (Uganda) and Deepika Udagama (Sri Lanka), updated developments since their 2001 report [YUN 2001, p. 663]. They reviewed areas for future study and action by the Subcommission, considered the manner in which the events of 11 September 2001 [ibid., p. 60] had reshaped many concerns in the debate about globalization, and summarized the implications of the continued drive towards increased trade liberalization at WTO and the current state of discussions about and within multilateral lending institutions. The Special Rapporteurs, noting that the processes of globalization would grow in magnitude in terms of the exercise and protection of human rights, recommended that the Subcommission remain seized of the issue and maintain oversight of the major institutional actors and of the manner in which the varied processes of globalization developed. Annexed to the report was a proposal of issues key to the extension of the dialogue between the Subcommission and the main actors involved in the globalization process, which drew attention to the human rights obligations of the latter.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/205 [YUN 2002,

p. 726], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/237], submitted the views of one Government on globalization and its impact on human rights.

Subcommission action. On 15 August [dec. 2003/117], the Subcommission decided to transmit to the Commission the Special Rapporteurs' preliminary report [YUN 2000, p. 696], progress report [YUN 2001, p. 663] and final report (see p. 757), with a request that they be published in the UN official languages.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/193 by recorded vote (123-51-4) [agenda item 117 (b)].

Globalization and its impact on the full enjoyment of all human rights

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and expressing in particular the need to achieve international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, as well as the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Recalling also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Recalling further the Declaration on the Right to Development adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 41/128 of 4 December 1986,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the outcome documents of the twenty-third and twenty-fourth special sessions of the General Assembly, held, respectively, in New York from 5 to 10 June 2000 and in Geneva from 26 June to 1 July 2000,

Recalling also its resolutions 57/204 and 57/205 of 18 December 2002,

Recalling further Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/23 of 22 April 2003 on globalization and its impact on the full enjoyment of human rights,

Recognizing that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated and that the international community must treat human rights globally in a fair and equal manner, on the same footing and with the same emphasis,

Realizing that globalization affects all countries differently and makes them more exposed to external developments, positive as well as negative, inter alia, in the field of human rights,

Realizing also that globalization is not merely an economic process, but that it also has social, political, environmental, cultural and legal dimensions, which have an impact on the full enjoyment of all human rights,

Realizing further the need to undertake a thorough, independent and comprehensive assessment of the social, environmental and cultural impact of globalization on societies,

Recognizing in each culture a dignity and value that deserve recognition, respect and preservation, and convinced that, in their rich variety and diversity and in the reciprocal influences that they exert on one another, all cultures form part of the common heritage belonging to all humankind, and aware that the risk of a global monoculture poses more of a threat if the developing world remains poor and marginalized,

Recognizing also that multilateral mechanisms have a unique role to play in meeting the challenges and opportunities presented by globalization,

Expressing concern at the negative impact of international financial turbulence on social and economic development and on the full enjoyment of all human rights,

Deeply concerned that the widening gap between the developed and the developing countries, and within countries, has contributed, inter alia, to deepening poverty and has adversely affected the full enjoyment of all human rights, in particular in developing countries,

Noting that human beings strive for a world that is respectful of human rights and cultural diversity and that, in this regard, they work to ensure that all activities, including those affected by globalization, are consistent with those aims,

1. Recognizes that, while globalization, by its impact on, inter alia, the role of the State, may affect human rights, the promotion and protection of all human rights is first and foremost the responsibility of the State;

2. Reaffirms that narrowing the gap between rich and poor, both within and between countries, is an explicit goal at the national and international levels, as part of the effort to create an enabling environment for the full enjoyment of all human rights;

3. Reaffirms also the commitment to creating an environment at both the national and the global level that is conducive to development and to the elimination of poverty through, inter alia, good governance within each country and at the international level, transparency in the financial, monetary and trading systems and commitment to an open, equitable, rule-based, predictable and non-discriminatory multilateral trading and financial system;

4. Recognizes that, while globalization offers great opportunities, the fact that its benefits are very unevenly shared and its costs unevenly distributed represents an aspect of the process that affects the full enjoyment of all human rights, in particular in developing countries;

5. Welcomes the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on globalization and its impact on the full enjoyment of human rights, which focuses on the liberalization of agricultural trade and its impact on the realization of the right to development, including the right to food, and takes note of the conclusions and recommendations contained therein;

6. Calls upon Member States, relevant agencies of the United Nations system, intergovernmental organizations and civil society to promote equitable and environmentally sustainable economic growth for managing globalization, so that poverty is systematically reduced and the international development targets are achieved;

7. Recognizes that only through broad and sustained efforts, including policies and measures at the global level to create a shared future based upon our common humanity in all its diversity, can globalization be made fully inclusive and equitable and have a human face, thus contributing to the full enjoyment of all human rights;

8. Underlines the urgent need to establish an equitable, transparent and democratic international system in which poor people and countries have a more effective voice;

9. Affirms that globalization is a complex process of structural transformation, with numerous interdisciplinary aspects, which has an impact on the enjoyment of civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, including the right to development;

10. Affirms also that the international community should strive to respond to the challenges and opportunities posed by globalization in a manner that ensures respect for the cultural diversity of all;

11. Underlines, therefore, the need to continue to analyse the consequences of globalization for the full enjoyment of all human rights;

12. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to seek further the views of Member States and relevant agencies of the United Nations system and to submit a substantive report on this subject to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/193:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Palau, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Brazil, Chile, Guatemala, Singapore.

Liberalization of trade in services

In response to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 728], the High Commissioner, in a July report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/9] on the relationship between human rights and investment and on trade concerns that were directly related to investment, examined the liberalization of investment through investment agreements and reviewed areas of those agreements relevant to human rights promotion and protection. The report considered the need to allow flexibility to enable States to respect, protect and fulfil human rights through appropriate regulation. Areas for action included the incorporation of human rights promotion and protection among the objectives of investment agreements, promoting investors' obligations alongside their rights, fostering international cooperation as part of investment liberalization, advancing human rights in the context of privatization, increasing dialogue on human rights and trade, and undertaking human rights assessments of investment liberalization.

Structural adjustment policies

Note by Secretariat. The Commission had before it a note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2003/57] referring to Economic and Social Council decision 2002/57 [YUN 2002, p. 728], which stated that the fourth session of the open-ended working group on structural adjustment programmes (SAPs), scheduled for November 2002 in Geneva, had been postponed as the working group's Chairman-designate needed more time to consult with regional groups.

Reports of independent expert. The Commission considered a report [E/CN.4/2003/10 & Corr.1] of the independent expert on the effects of structural adjustment policies and foreign debt on human rights, Bernard Mudho (Kenya), which examined debt reduction and poverty alleviation and described the ambiguities arising from the implementation of SAPs and the inadequacy of debt relief alone to realize the human rights dimension of poverty, as illustrated by a case study of Bolivia. The expert observed that, although the effects of foreign debt and SAPs on the full enjoyment of human rights varied in scope and severity in heavily indebted poor countries (HIPC) and least developed countries (LDCs), there was common ground that heavy foreign borrowing by developing countries in the 1970s and 1980s, supposedly to finance large-scale development projects, led to unsustainably high levels of debt by those countries. Consequently, both borrowers and lenders were jointly responsible for the current untenable levels of foreign debt incurred by HIPC and LDCs. The expert recommended a series of actions by the Commission, including establishing a reporting mechanism to monitor accomplishments, problems and lessons learned in promoting and protecting human rights with regard to implementing the Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 51] (see also p. 48).

The expert visited Uganda (26-30 May) [E/CN.4/2004/47/Add.1] to examine the effects of foreign debt and policies adopted to deal with them, and to initiate dialogue in efforts to secure economic and social rights. He accorded particular attention to the situation of HIV/AIDS in the country. The expert said that, although Uganda had made impressive strides in the human development of its people, it still faced significant challenges, in terms of ensuring gender parity in secondary education, combating infant and maternal mortality, reducing malaria and improving environmental sanitation while maintaining the necessary macroeconomic stability and debt sustainability. The expert suggested that more expanded and explicit linkages be made between the country's development goals and human rights and, towards that end, recommended that the Government and its development partners, while encouraging increased support by donors, explore ways to reduce dependence on external resources and the adverse implications for poverty reduction and the realization of human rights.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 29 to 14, with 10 abstentions, the Commission, on 22 April [res. 2003/21], affirmed that the exercise of the basic rights of the people of debtor countries to food, housing, clothing, employment, education, health services and a healthy environment could not be subordinated to the implementation of structural adjustment policies, growth programmes and economic reforms arising from the debt problem. It decided to renew the independent expert's mandate for three years and asked him to submit an analytical report annually on the implementation of the current resolution; the Secretary-General was asked to assist him. The High Commissioner was asked to pay attention to the problem of the debt burden of developing countries.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/243 by recorded vote (31-17-5) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Effects of structural adjustment policies and foreign debt on the full enjoyment of all human rights, particularly economic, social and cultural rights

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/21 of 22 April 2003, and approved the Commission's decision to renew the mandate of the independent expert on the effects of structural adjustment policies and foreign debt on the full enjoyment of human rights, particularly economic, social and cultural rights, for three years and to request him to submit an analytical report to the Commission on an annual basis on the implementation of Commission resolution 2003/21, paying particular attention to the effects of the burden of foreign debt and the policies adopted to face them on the capacity of the Governments of developing countries to adopt policies and programmes for the enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights, as well as to recommend measures and actions that could be taken to alleviate such effects, especially in the poorest and heavily indebted countries.

The Council also approved the Commission's request to the Secretary-General to provide the independent expert with all necessary assistance, in particular the staff and resources required to carry out his functions.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/243:

In favour: Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guatemala, India, Iran, Jamaica, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Qatar, Russian Federation, Senegal, South Africa, Uganda, Zimbabwe.

Against: Andorra, Australia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Argentina, Georgia, Peru, Saudi Arabia, Ukraine.

Adverse effects of debt

On 13 August [dec. 2003/109], the Subcommission asked El-Hadji Guissé (Senegal) to prepare, without financial implications, a working paper on the effects of debt on human rights, for submission in 2004.

Social Forum

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 36 to 1, with 16 abstentions, the Commission, on 22 April [dec. 2003/107], taking note of a 2002 Subcommission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 729], recommended that the Economic and Social Council authorize the holding of the Social Forum, an annual pre-sessional forum on economic, social and cultural rights, for two days and on dates that would permit the attendance of 10 Subcommission members. The Council was asked to provide the facilities for the preparation and servicing of the event.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/264 by recorded vote (34-2-18) [agenda item 14 (g)].

The Social Forum

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights decision 2003/107 of 22 April 2003, and authorized the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights to convene in Geneva an annual intersessional forum on economic, social and cultural rights, to be known as the "Social Forum", for two days on dates that would permit the possible participation of ten members of the Subcommittee, to be appointed by the regional groups of the Subcommittee, and also authorized the provision of all the necessary facilities for the preparation and servicing of the event.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/264:

In favour: Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guatemala, India, Iran, Jamaica, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Qatar, Russian Federation, Senegal, South Africa, Uganda, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Ukraine, United Kingdom.

Note by Secretariat. A June note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/16] provided information regarding the Forum's next session, as requested by the Commission and authorized by the Economic and Social Council (see p. 760). Annexed to the note was a memorandum prepared by José Bengoa (Chile), which summarized the Forum's goals and the key aspects of its 2002 session [YUN 2002, p. 729], and stated that the Subcommittee, in consultation with the Secretariat, would decide on a suitable date for its next session, bearing in mind the need for proper preparation. The memorandum contained proposals on the Forum's organization and work, policies to be adopted, campaigns to be conducted relative to the Forum's objectives, and a proposal on the rights of rural communities and peasants.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/14], the Subcommittee decided that the Social Forum would meet in Geneva on 20 and 21 May 2004, and recommended that it address themes relating to civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights; the relationship between poverty, extreme poverty and human rights; income distribution; basic resources; the impact of trade, finance and economic policies on vulnerable groups; multilateral and bilateral international development cooperation; follow-up to world conferences and summits; and social and economic indicators. The Subcommittee decided that the 2004 session would have as its overall theme "Rural poverty, development and the rights of peasants and other rural communities", and asked Mr. Bengoa to prepare a working paper on the topic and related matters. OHCHR was requested to seek effective means of ensuring consultation with the most vulnerable on the theme. UN bodies and specialized agencies, functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council, regional commissions, international financial institutions, the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, special rapporteurs and independent experts, NGOs, scholars, trade unions and workers' associations were invited to participate in and to submit studies to the Forum. The Forum was invited to submit in 2004 a separate report on its discussions, in addition to recommendations, including draft resolutions. The Commission was requested to establish a voluntary fund to facilitate the participation of grass-roots groups and similar disadvantaged organizations in the Forum, and the Secretary-General to disseminate information about the Forum, invite relevant individuals and organizations to the Forum, prepare two video-conferences before the Forum and take measures to ensure its success.

Transnational corporations

Working group activities. The working group on the working methods and activities of transnational corporations (TNCs), at its fifth session (Geneva, 29-31 July) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/13], continued to work towards a binding instrument. The group had before it an updated version of the draft norms on the responsibilities of TNCs and other business enterprises [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/12], which took into account related comments considered in an earlier intersessional meeting, as well as the commentary thereto [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/38]. The group, in response to a 2002 Subcommittee request [YUN 2002, p. 730], had disseminated various versions of the draft and encouraged Governments, international organizations, NGOs, TNCs, other business enterprises, unions and other interested parties to provide suggestions, observations or recommendations.

At its July meeting, the group considered proposed amendments to the draft norms and commentary and, on 31 July, adopted revisions to both [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/12/Rev.1, E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/38/Rev.1 & Corr.1], which were submitted to the Subcommittee. The group considered the impact of TNCs on the enjoyment of civil, cultural, economic, political and social rights, and recommendations for its future work regarding the effects of TNC activities on human rights, including the rights to development and to a healthy environment.

Subcommission action. On 28 July [dec. 2003/102], the Subcommittee decided to establish a sessional working group to examine the working methods and activities of TNCs (see above).

On 13 August [res. 2003/16], the Subcommittee approved the revised draft norms on the responsibilities of TNCs and other business enterprises with regard to human rights submitted by the working group [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/12/Rev.2] and decided to transmit them to the Commission for consideration and adoption. It recommended that the Commission invite Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies, NGOs and other in-interested parties to submit to the Commission and Subcommission in 2005 comments on the draft norms and commentary [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/38/Rev.2], and to consider establishing an open-ended working group to review both. The working group was asked to receive information from Governments, NGOs, business enterprises, individuals and other sources regarding the possible negative impact of the activities of TNCs and other business enterprises on human rights, and particularly affecting the implementation of the norms, to invite comments thereon from TNCs and other business enterprises concerned, and to study the information submitted and transmit its comments and recommendations to the appropriate TNCs or other businesses, Governments and relevant NGOs. The Subcommission recommended that the group continue its discussions, in accordance with its mandate, and particularly pursue efforts to explore possible mechanisms for implementing the norms, such as the continuation of the 1998 working document on the impact of TNCs on the realization of economic, social and cultural rights [YUN 1998, p. 688], prepared by Mr. Guissé. The Subcommission asked the Secretary-General to provide the group with the services required to complete its work, and the Working Group on Indigenous Populations (see p. 798) to gather the views of indigenous peoples, organizations and communities, as well as other interested parties, to supplement the commentary on the norms and/or to draft a new set of principles that would include further references to indigenous concerns and rights with regard to TNCs and other business enterprises.

Coercive economic measures

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 36 to 14, with 2 abstentions, the Commission, on 22 April [res. 2003/17], requested the open-ended working group established to monitor and review progress made in the promotion and implementation of the right to development (see p. 753) to consider the question of human rights and the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures. The Commission decided to consider the negative impact of such measures in its work regarding the implementation of the right to development. It asked the High Commissioner to give urgent consideration to its resolution, and the Secretary-General to bring the resolution to the attention of States, to seek their views on the implications and negative effects of those measures and to report in 2004.

Note by Secretariat. The Commission had before it a Secretariat note [E/CN.4/2003/47], which stated that, in accordance with a 2002 Commission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 730], the Secretary-General had brought the resolution to the attention of all Member States. As at 10 December 2002, no information had been received from States regarding the implications and negative effects of unilateral coercive measures.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/222 [YUN 2002, p. 730], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/279], stated that, as at 13 August, no information had been received from Member States regarding the effects of unilateral coercive measures.

On 22 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 58/538).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/171 by recorded vote (125-53) [agenda item 17 (b)].

Human rights and unilateral coercive measures

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its previous resolutions, the most recent of which was resolution 57/222 of 18 December 2002, and Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/17 of 22 April 2003,

Reaffirming the pertinent principles and provisions contained in the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States proclaimed by the General Assembly in its resolution 3281 (XXIX) of 12 December 1974, in particular article 32 thereof, in which it declared that no State may use or encourage the use of economic, political or any other type of measures to coerce another State in order to obtain from it the subordination of the exercise of its sovereign rights,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, submitted pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1999/21 of 23 April 1999, and the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolutions 52/120 of 12 December 1997 and 55/110 of 4 December 2000,

Recognizing the universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated character of all human rights, and, in this regard, reaffirming the right to development as an integral part of all human rights,

Recalling that the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, called upon States to refrain from any unilateral coercive measure not in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations that creates obstacles to trade relations among States and impedes the full realization of all human rights,

Bearing in mind all the references to this question in the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development, adopted by the World Summit for Social Development on 12 March 1995, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women on 15 September 1995, the Istanbul Declaration on Human Settlements and the Habitat Agenda, adopted by the second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) on 14 June 1996, and their five-year reviews,

Expressing its concern about the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures on international relations, trade, investment and cooperation,

Expressing its grave concern that, in some countries, the situation of children is adversely affected by unilateral coercive measures not in accordance with international law and the Charter that create obstacles to trade relations among States, impede the full realization of social and economic development and hinder the well-being of the population in the affected countries, with particular consequences for women and children, including adolescents,

Deeply concerned that, despite the recommendations adopted on this question by the General Assembly and recent major United Nations conferences, and contrary to general international law and the Charter, unilateral coercive measures continue to be promulgated and implemented with all their negative implications for the social-humanitarian activities and economic and social development of developing countries, including their extraterritorial effects, thereby creating additional obstacles to the full enjoyment of all human rights by peoples and individuals under the jurisdiction of other States,

Bearing in mind all the extraterritorial effects of any unilateral legislative, administrative and economic measures, policies and practices of a coercive nature against the development process and the enhancement of human rights in developing countries, which create obstacles to the full realization of all human rights,

Noting the continuing efforts of the open-ended Working Group on the Right to Development of the Commission on Human Rights, and reaffirming in particular its criteria, according to which unilateral coercive measures are one of the obstacles to the implementation of the Declaration on the Right to Development,

1. Urges all States to refrain from adopting or implementing any unilateral measures not in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations, in particular those of a coercive nature with all their extraterritorial effects, which create obstacles to trade relations among States, thus impeding the full realization of the rights set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other international human rights instruments, in particular the right of individuals and peoples to development;

2. Also urges all States to take steps to avoid and to refrain from adopting any unilateral measures not in accordance with international law and the Charter that impede the full achievement of economic and social development by the population of the affected countries, in particular children and women, that hinder their well-being and that create obstacles to the full enjoyment of their human rights, including the right of everyone to a standard of living adequate for their health and well-being and their right to food, medical care and the necessary social services, as well as to ensure that food and medicine are not used as tools for political pressure;

3. Invites all States to consider adopting administrative or legislative measures, as appropriate, to counteract the extraterritorial applications or effects of unilateral coercive measures;

4. Rejects unilateral coercive measures with all their extraterritorial effects as tools for political or economic pressure against any country, in particular against developing countries, because of their negative effects on the realization of all the human rights of vast sectors of their populations, in particular children, women and the elderly;

5. Calls upon Member States that have initiated such measures to commit themselves to their obligations and responsibilities arising from the international human rights instruments to which they are party by revoking such measures at the earliest time possible;

6. Reaffirms, in this context, the right of all peoples to self-determination, by virtue of which they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development;

7. Urges the Commission on Human Rights to take fully into account the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures, including the enactment of national laws and their extraterritorial application, in its task concerning the implementation of the right to development;

8. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in discharging his functions relating to the promotion, realization and protection of the right to development and bearing in mind the continuing impact of unilateral coercive measures on the population of developing countries, to give priority to the present resolution in his annual report to the General Assembly;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all Member States, to continue to collect their views and information on the implications and negative effects of unilateral coercive measures on their populations and to submit an analytical report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, highlighting the practical and preventive measures in this respect;

10. Decides to examine this question on a priority basis at its fifty-ninth session under the sub-item entitled "Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/171:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Palau, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States.

Corruption

Working paper. In response to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 732], Christy Mbonu (Nigeria) submitted a May working paper on the impact of corruption on the realization and enjoyment of all human rights [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/18]. Economically, corruption led to inefficient resource allocation, increased investment costs and lowered investors' confidence, promoted inequalities and inefficiency in the private sector and compromised the quality of related services. The report described the various forms and causes of corruption, and its impact on individuals and institutions. It summarized national, regional and international initiatives against the phenomenon, and observed that, despite past remedies, the problem was worsening and should be accorded priority. Recommendations included undertaking a study to help promote transparency, accountability and good governance in Member States.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/2], the Subcommission decided to appoint Ms. Mbonu as Special Rapporteur with the task of preparing a comprehensive study on corruption and its impact on the full enjoyment of human rights, particularly economic, social and cultural rights, and asked her to submit a preliminary report in 2004, a progress report in 2005 and a final report in 2006. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her.

Also on 13 August [res. 2003/20], the Subcommission recommended that the proposed international convention against corruption (see p. 1126) should provide for strong measures to criminalize corrupt practices and prevent the transfer of illicit funds, and for the seizure, confiscation and repatriation of such funds to countries of origin.

Extreme poverty

Reports of independent expert. In accordance with a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 732], the independent expert on the question of human rights and extreme poverty, Anne-Marie Lizin (Belgium), submitted a January report [E/CN.4/2003/52] indicating the various themes she intended to explore in a report to be submitted in 2004. She continued to analyse good practices by States, NGOs and local authorities in taking account of the needs of the poorest, examined the link between extreme poverty, migration and trafficking in human beings, and reviewed and reaffirmed the validity of key recommendations contained in her previous report [YUN 2002, p. 732]. She summarized her ongoing dialogue with international financial institutions. Evidence of action to reduce poverty remained mixed, despite some positive developments, such as States' increasing willingness to tackle the issue, successes in countries like China and the multiplication of poverty-reduction programmes presented to donors. However, the situation was deteriorating in Argentina, Mongolia, the Republic of Moldova, Southern Africa and in various other countries where the State fabric continued to unravel. The expert recommended poverty reduction measures relating specifically to the nature of the State and its capacity to protect and establish respect for the rights of its citizens. The expert hoped that States would respond to a related questionnaire she intended to send to them, which was annexed to the report.

The expert visited Yemen (2-5 October) [E/CN.4/2004/43/Add.1], where impoverishment had worsened as a result of conflicts in the region and some 42 per cent of the people lived below the poverty line. Since the events of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60], port activity had slumped, the oil sector had difficulties, unemployment had risen and revenue from tourism had declined. The expert recommended that the Government pursue its efforts to promote recognition of women's rights; re-establish an independent national human rights institution; assign priority to combating illiteracy among women and to reducing the birth rate; ratify relevant international instruments; continue to strengthen the role of local authorities in dealing with the problem; and further develop the civil registration programme in the Ministry of the Interior. She recommended a series of actions for UN agencies in the field and other lenders, and called on the Secretary-General to ensure that Yemen's efforts were made known to UN institutions. International NGOs should continue to support Yemeni voluntary organizations, particularly those dealing with persons with disabilities and women's rights.

In the Sudan (18-23 November), the expert observed how the Government took advantage of the peace process, initiated to resolve many years of civil war (see p. 256), to begin preparing an interim poverty reduction strategy, geared to cut military spending in order to increase the welfare budget. She said a lack of statistics made the task difficult and that decentralized budgets of the federated States did not permit real spending on education or health to be measured. The expert studied the system for collecting and distributing zakat—a donation proportionate to one's wealth, collected and distributed to the poor as money or food under Muslim culture—and made suggestions that would enable the Sudan to draw up a proper map of the poorest segment of its population benefiting from the donation, in line with the poverty reduction strategy being prepared. The expert recommended a series of actions by the Sudanese authorities to further strengthen the status of women and to expand the role of the savings and social development banks in the area of microcredit.

The expert visited Washington, D.C. (30 November–5 December), where, with IMF officials, she highlighted factors that complemented the monetary and trade policies of interest to the Fund, such as social safety nets, improved performance by relevant institutions, including the judiciary, and incentives to prevent corruption. Following parallel talks with the World Bank, the expert described the differences between the Bank and IMF. She recommended enhancing the Bank's human rights unit and advocated the integration of human rights into the poverty and social impact analyses and assessments carried out by international financial institutions; closer relations between officials of international financial institutions and of UN human rights bodies; and the implementation of a new generation of more comprehensive and participatory poverty reduction strategies.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 2003/24], the Commission urged States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to continue to take into account, in activities carried out under the United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006), proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 50/107 [YUN 1995, p. 844] (see p. 848), the links between human rights and extreme poverty, and efforts to empower people living in poverty to participate in decision-making processes regarding policies affecting them. The United Nations was called on to strengthen poverty eradication as a priority throughout the system. The ad hoc working group, appointed by the Subcommission in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 668] to prepare a study to contribute to the drafting of an international declaration on extreme poverty and human rights (see below), was encouraged to adopt an approach based on the universality, indivisibility, interdependence and interrelation of all human rights.

Report of High Commissioner. In June [E/2003/73], the High Commissioner stated that OHCHR had developed draft guidelines on a human rights approach to poverty reduction strategies, to guide development practitioners on how to integrate human rights into national poverty reduction strategies and illustrate how attention to human rights could reinforce each of the Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 51]. The draft guidelines, which included a set of operational guidelines for a number of specific human rights, would be piloted through substantive consultations and field testing during 2003-2004.

International declaration

Working paper. In response to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 733], Mr. Bengoa, coordinator of the ad hoc working group appointed to work towards a draft international declaration on extreme poverty and human rights, submitted, in June, a preliminary working paper [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/17] on the need to develop guiding principles on the implementation of existing human rights norms and standards in the context of the fight against extreme poverty. He proposed broad consultations on the basis of a conceptual framework and collaboration with actors involved in poverty reduction; a review of the ad hoc group's work programme; and the submission of an interim joint working paper to the Subcommission in 2004 on the need to develop guiding principles.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/13], the Subcommission approved the underlying principles of the conceptual framework set out in the working paper (see above). It requested Iulia-Antoanelle Motoc (Romania), Emmanuel Decaux (France), Yozo Yokota (Japan), El-Hadji Guissé (Senegal) and Mr. Bengoa to prepare, without financial implications, a joint working paper on the need to develop guiding principles on the implementation of existing human rights norms and standards in the context of the fight against extreme poverty, and to submit a progress report in 2004 and a final report in 2005. They were also asked to work towards a specific instrument that did not overlap with existing treaties, to consider specifically situations of poverty in various parts of the world, as well as the policies of the World Bank, WTO, IMF and other international bodies for fighting poverty, to adopt an approach towards extreme poverty that strengthened bonds of solidarity and social inclusion mechanisms, and to present conclusions and recommendations on the draft declaration on extreme poverty and human rights. The Secretariat was asked to assist in the study, while Governments, regional specialized bodies in Asia, Africa, Europe and Latin America and international agencies were asked to provide information for the study.

Right to food

Reports of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 735], the Special Rapporteur on the right to food, Jean Ziegler (Switzerland), in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/54], focused on two new initiatives to protect the right at the international level. The first, a development arising from the World Food Summit + 5 [YUN 2002, p. 1225], was the establishment by Governments of voluntary guidelines on the right, under the auspices of FAO, which strengthened hope in the fight against hunger. The second was the adoption of a new general comment No. 15 on the right to water by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights [YUN 2002, p. 628], which greatly improved the legal framework for protecting the right. The Special Rapporteur discussed concrete examples of the relationship between the rights to water and to food in Bangladesh, Brazil and the Niger, and presented appeals he had made regarding allegations in three countries to which he had received no reply. At the World Food Summit + 5, it became clear that little action had been taken to meet the goal of halving the number of hunger victims by 2015, set at the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129]. The Special Rapporteur recommended the development of voluntary guidelines on the right to food, based on the legal interpretation of the right contained in general comment No. 12 of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights [YUN 1999, p. 575]; the wide dissemination of general comment No. 15 on the right to water; and government action to meet the 1996 commitment to halve the number of hunger victims by 2015, to enshrine the right to food in a national law, to develop a national strategy to realize the right and to combat hunger and malnutrition in their territory.

The Special Rapporteur visited the Occupied Palestinian Territories (3-12 July) [E/CN.4/2004/10/Add.2] to gain a greater understanding of the emerging food crisis there. He travelled to the West Bank and Gaza Strip, home to some 3.5 million Palestinians, where he reported that the area was on the verge of a humanitarian catastrophe owing to harsh military measures by Israeli forces since the outbreak of the second intifada in September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 416]. Malnutrition levels among Palestinians had increased rapidly and affected over 22 per cent of children under five, of whom an estimated 16 per cent suffered acute anaemia, with potential permanent effects on their physical and mental development. Food consumption had fallen by 25-30 per cent per capita, owing largely to job losses and curfews, and the situation was exacerbated by an economic crisis. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Israeli Government respect its de jure obligations under international human rights and humanitarian law and end restrictions on humanitarian access and the regime of closures and curfews, ease measures that restricted the people's access to food and prevented the destruction of their land and other resources, monitor violations of the right to food and implement his current recommendations, and, among other measures, end the occupation, since most of the violations of the right stemmed from it.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 51 to 1, with 1 abstention, on 22 April [res. 2003/25], the Commission decided to extend the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a further three years, encouraged him to continue mainstreaming a gender perspective in his work and asked him to report to the General Assembly in 2003 and to the Commission in 2004. The High Commissioner was asked to assist him, while Governments, UN agencies, funds and programmes, treaty bodies and NGOs were invited to cooperate with him by submitting suggestions on ways to realize the right to food.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/244 by recorded vote (52-1-1) [agenda item 14 (g)].

The right to food

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/25 of 22 April 2003, and endorsed the Commission's decision to extend the mandate of the Special Rapporteur on the right to food for a further three years and to request the Special Rapporteur to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session and to the Commission at its sixtieth session on the implementation of resolution 2003/25.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/244:

In favour: Andorra, Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Sweden, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/9], the Subcommission recommended convening in early 2004 the fourth expert consultation on the right to food, proposed by the Commission [YUN 2001, p. 669], drawing on the findings of the earlier consultations held in 1997 and 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 693], and in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 669], and on the lessons learned from national seminars on the subject. It appealed to the High Commissioner to continue to seek funds to facilitate the fourth consultation, and to donor countries to express their interest in funding it.

Further report of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/226 [YUN 2002, p. 736], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/330], transmitted a report of the Special Rapporteur, which discussed two new thematic issues—gender and TNC activities—as they related to the right to food. Gender discrimination persisted in a variety of forms that had a profound impact on women's right to food, as did the activities of TNCs. He recommended that Governments address discrimination against women, particularly where it contributed to the malnutrition of women and girls; improve the enforcement of existing legislation to protect women; and regulate TNCs and their activities in the food system and implement the human rights norms relating to their responsibilities. He advocated judicial and administrative remedies for violations of the right.

Communications. On 18 September [E/CN.4/2004/G/9], Israel claimed that an unedited copy of the Special Rapporteur's report on his visit (see p. 766) had been made available to a journalist before it was given to the Israeli authorities. It requested that steps be taken to ensure that such disregard for procedure did not recur.

On 23 October [E/CN.4/2004/G/13], the Permanent Observer of Palestine, referring to Israel's communication (see above), questioned how Israel could evaluate the Special Rapporteur's work as Israel had never cooperated with or respected the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/186 by recorded vote (176-1-2) [agenda item 117 (b)].

The right to food

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/226 of 18 December 2002, as well as all Commission on Human Rights resolutions in this regard, in particular resolution 2003/25 of 22 April 2003,

Recalling also the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which provides that everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for her or his health and well-being, including food,

Recalling further the provisions of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, in which the fundamental right of every person to be free from hunger is recognized,

Recalling the Universal Declaration on the Eradication of Hunger and Malnutrition, as well as the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Bearing in mind the Rome Declaration on World Food Security and the World Food Summit Plan of Action,

Bearing in mind also the Declaration of the World Food Summit: five years later, adopted in Rome on 13 June 2002,

Reaffirming that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated,

Recognizing that the problems of hunger and food insecurity have global dimensions and that they are likely to persist and even to increase dramatically in some regions unless urgent, determined and concerted action is taken, given the anticipated increase in the world's population and the stress on natural resources,

Reaffirming that a peaceful, stable and enabling political, social and economic environment, at both the national and the international levels, is the essential foundation that will enable States to give adequate priority to food security and poverty eradication,

Reiterating, as in the Rome Declaration and the Declaration of the World Food Summit: five years later, that food should not be used as an instrument of political or economic pressure, and reaffirming in this regard the importance of international cooperation and solidarity, as well as the necessity of refraining from unilateral measures that are not in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations and that endanger food security,

Convinced that each State must adopt a strategy consistent with its resources and capacities to achieve its individual goals in implementing the recommendations contained in the Rome Declaration and the World Food Summit Plan of Action and, at the same time, cooperate regionally and internationally in order to organize collective solutions to global issues of food security in a world of increasingly interlinked institutions, societies and economies where coordinated efforts and shared responsibilities are essential,

Stressing the importance of reversing the continuing decline of official development assistance devoted to agriculture, both in real terms and as a share of total official development assistance,

1. Reaffirms that hunger constitutes an outrage and a violation of human dignity and therefore requires the adoption of urgent measures at the national, regional and international levels for its elimination;

2. Also reaffirms the right of everyone to have access to safe and nutritious food, consistent with the right to adequate food and the fundamental right of everyone to be free from hunger, so as to be able to fully develop and maintain their physical and mental capacities;

3. Considers it intolerable that there are around 840 million undernourished people in the world, that every seven seconds a child under the age of 10 dies, directly or indirectly, of hunger somewhere in the world and that more than 2 billion people worldwide suffer from "hidden hunger" or micronutrient malnutrition;

4. Expresses its concern that women are disproportionately affected by hunger, food insecurity and poverty, in part as a result of gender inequality, that in many countries, girls are twice as likely as boys to die from malnutrition and preventable childhood diseases, and that it is estimated that almost twice as many women suffer from malnutrition as men;

5. Encourages all States to take steps with a view to achieving progressively the full realization of the right to food, including steps to promote the conditions for everyone to be free from hunger and, as soon as possible, to enjoy fully the right to food, and to create and adopt national plans to combat hunger;

6. Also encourages all States to take action to address discrimination against women, particularly where it contributes to the malnutrition of women and girls, including measures to ensure the realization of the right to food, and ensuring that women have equal access to resources, including income, land and water, to enable them to feed themselves;

7. Stresses the need to make efforts to mobilize and optimize the allocation and utilization of technical and financial resources from all sources, including external debt relief for developing countries, and to reinforce national actions to implement sustainable food security policies;

8. Invites once again all international financial and developmental institutions, as well as the relevant United Nations agencies and funds, to give priority to and provide the necessary funding to realize the aim of halving by 2015 the proportion of people who suffer from hunger, as well as the right to food as set out in the Rome Declaration on World Food Security and the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

9. Urges States to give adequate priority in their development strategies and expenditures to the realization of the right to food;

10. Takes note with appreciation of the interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the right to food, and commends the Special Rapporteur for his valuable work in the promotion of the right to food;

11. Supports the realization of the mandate of the Special Rapporteur as extended by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 2003/25;

12. Expresses its appreciation to the Special Rapporteur for his effective contribution to the medium-term review of the implementation of the Rome Declaration on World Food Security and the World Food Summit Plan of Action through the submission to the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights of his recommendations on all aspects of the right to food, and his participation in and contribution to the proceedings of that event;

13. Encourages the Special Rapporteur to mainstream a gender perspective in the activities relating to his mandate;

14. Requests the Secretary-General and the High Commissioner to provide all the necessary human and financial resources for the effective fulfilment of the mandate of the Special Rapporteur;

15. Welcomes the work already done by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in promoting the right to adequate food, in particular its general comment No. 12 (1999) on the right to adequate food (article 11 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights), in which the Committee affirmed, inter alia, that the right to adequate food is indivisibly linked to the inherent dignity of the human person and is indispensable for the fulfilment of other human rights enshrined in the International Bill of Human Rights, and is also inseparable from social justice, requiring the adoption of appropriate economic, environmental and social policies, at both the national and the international levels, oriented to the eradication of poverty and the fulfilment of all human rights for all;

16. Also welcomes the work of the Intergovernmental Working Group mandated by the Council of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to elaborate, in a period of two years, a set of voluntary guidelines to support the efforts of Member States to achieve the progressive realization of the right to adequate food in the context of national food security;

17. Further welcomes the continued cooperation of the High Commissioner, the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Special Rapporteur, and encourages them to continue their cooperation in this regard;

18. Requests the Special Rapporteur to submit a comprehensive report to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixtieth session and an interim report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

19. Invites Governments, relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, treaty bodies and non-governmental organizations to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur in the fulfilment of his mandate, inter alia, through the submission of comments and suggestions on ways and means of realizing the right to food;

20. Decides to continue the consideration of this matter at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/186:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Israel, Marshall Islands.

Right to adequate housing

Reports of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur on the right to adequate housing, Miloon Kothari (India), in a March report [E/CN.4/2003/5], highlighted emerging issues relating to water and sanitation as essential elements for the realization of the right, the need for further research on innovative local responses to globalization in urban and rural development, the development of rights-based indicators and assessment tools for monitoring the Millennium Development Goals and other relevant outcomes of major UN conferences and summits, and the rights of persons with disabilities. The Special Rapporteur recommended a series of actions to the Commission, including that it request him to seek, receive and respond to information on all aspects of the realization of the right, focus on issues relating to water, sanitation and disability, and report to the General Assembly and relevant mechanisms of the Economic and Social Council, and ask OHCHR to organize, in collaboration with relevant treaty bodies, an expert group meeting to further develop policy guidelines for preventing discrimination and segregation in housing and civic services, and to develop, jointly with the United Nations Programme on Human Settlements (UN-Habitat) and civil society, criteria for and a database on good practices regarding housing rights. He further recommended that the Commission address additional measures to UN-Habitat, States, UN agencies, intergovernmental organizations and the Commission on Sustainable Development (see p. 842).

The Special Rapporteur visited Peru (3-15 March) [E/CN.4/2004/48/Add.1] to examine the status of the realization of the right to adequate housing and other related rights, with particular attention to gender equality and non-discrimination, and to identify practical solutions and best practices. Impediments to securing the right were the lack of title, security of tenure and of civic services, particularly water and sanitation; houses built in areas vulnerable to floods, earthquakes and landslides; land collapse from mining activities; eviction; the pollution of natural resources; and the impact of privatization and globalization on the housing and living conditions of the poor. Challenges in the country's housing sector needed to be tackled from a human rights perspective and should address issues relating to housing, water, sanitation, electricity and protection from eviction, according priority to women and vulnerable groups. A series of further measures outlined policy recommendations for the Government and other concerned parties.

Key issues in Afghanistan (31 August-13 September) [E/CN.4/2004/48/Add.2] related to land occupation, the destruction of houses and land, sanitation facilities, water resources and livelihood, inadequate housing for many of the over

2 million returning refugees repatriated from neighbouring countries and for a large number of internally displaced persons, forced evictions without compensation or alternative arrangements, and land speculation that made housing and land inaccessible to many people. The Special Rapporteur recommended measures to be taken by the Transitional Government and other stakeholders to establish a workable framework to address the issue, based on a combined humanitarian, human rights and sustainable development approach.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 2003/27], the Commission decided to renew the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a three-year period and requested him to report in 2004. The High Commissioner was asked to support cooperation between the Special Rapporteur and other Commission mechanisms and relevant UN bodies. The Secretary-General was asked to assist him. The Commission requested OHCHR and UN-Habitat to strengthen their cooperation, to continue developing the joint United Nations Housing Rights Programme and to explore further possibilities to support the Special Rapporteur.

On 23 July (decision 2003/245), the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision to renew the Special Rapporteur's mandate and its request to him to report.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/17], the Subcommission asked the High Commissioner to accord attention to the practice of forced eviction and urged the Commission to invite States to consider the comprehensive human rights guidelines on development-based displacement, as contained in the report of the 1997 expert seminar on the practice of forced evictions [YUN 1997, p. 676], with a view to approving the guidelines in 2005.

Communication. On 14 March [E/CN.4/2003/G/52], Mexico transmitted its comments on the report of the Special Rapporteur on his 2002 visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 739].

Women's right to property and adequate housing

Report of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 739], the Special Rapporteur on the right to adequate housing (see above) submitted a March study [E/CN.4/2003/55] on women's equal ownership of, access to and control over land and equal rights to own property and to adequate housing, which analysed national and international legal provisions for the rights and highlighted existing gaps. It concluded that a considerable difference existed between the recognition of women's right to housing in international and national laws and the reality of large-scale denial in the implementation or non-implementation of those laws. The Special Rapporteur requested more detailed responses to a questionnaire he had circulated to States, as well as information on good practices to enable him to make a more comprehensive analysis and to identify practical solutions. He asked the Commission to recommend that OHCHR and UN-Habitat hold additional regional consultations, request UN agencies to intensify their work in the area, ask OHCHR, in collaboration with the United Nations Development Fund for Women and UN-Habitat, to organize an expert seminar, and expand the study's mandate to include women's rights to land, property and inheritance.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 2003/22], the Commission encouraged Governments to increase access to land and housing for women living in poverty. OHCHR, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and other relevant international organizations were asked to address discrimination against women with respect to land, property and adequate housing. The Secretary-General was invited to encourage UN entities to take further initiatives that promoted women's equal ownership of, access to and control over land and their equal rights to own property and to adequate housing, and to allocate further resources to study the impact of complex emergency situations. The Special Rapporteur was asked to submit a study in 2005, and States were invited to respond to the questionnaire he had prepared.

Right to education

Reports of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur on the right to education, Katarina Tomasevski (Croatia), in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/9], summarized trends in the realization of education as a civil, cultural, economic political and social right, and addressed the importance of strengthening related human rights safeguards. She proposed action to clarify and simplify the legal framework of the right to education, highlight key principles and core standards, and identify the most important quantitative and qualitative data concerning the right as a civil, cultural, economic, political and social right. Additional areas covered related to commitments to free primary education, integrating human rights in global funding strategies, rights-based law reform, the rights of the child, delineating public and private law, the potential and limitations of quantitative data, benchmarks for the quality of education, a multifaceted right to education, eliminating obstacles to teaching and promoting rights-based learning. She recommended an assessment of the conformity of World Bank policy and practice in education lending with the international human rights obligations of borrowers.

In China (10-19 September) [E/CN.4/2004/45/Add.1], the Special Rapporteur found that the country's law did not conform to the international legal framework defining the right to education. Provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child (see p. 675) regarding parental freedom to choose education for their children were not recognized in domestic law. Also, in China's Constitution and legislation, although the term "the right to education" was used abundantly, education was defined as an individual duty, and, contrary to China's international human rights obligations, religious education remained prohibited. The country's goal of eliminating illiteracy and attaining nine years of compulsory education by the end of its ninth five-year plan (1996-2000) was not accomplished. Obstacles were linked to poor budgetary allocations, poverty and increasing tuition costs, a free market in education and limited access owing to gender, migration and disability. The Special Rapporteur recommended a review of Chinese law using the yardstick of international human rights law; affirmation of China's international obligation to ensure free education; monitoring school attendance; elimination of the practice of permitting schoolchildren to work; increasing the budgetary allocation for education to cover the costs of compulsory schooling; and raising teachers' status, including guarantees of their freedom of association.

In Colombia (1-10 October) [E/CN.4/2004/45/Add.2], the Special Rapporteur learned of a large number of cases of violation of the right to education and of human rights in education. She noted that Colombian law did not recognize adults' right to education, despite the international obligations Colombia had undertaken in that regard, and in most cases there was a lack of available and accessible schooling for children of school age. Other problems were related to a dysfunctional system that permitted both private and public schools, as well as free and fee-paying ones, which created confusion, exorbitant tuition, a history of exclusions based on all the discriminatory criteria currently prohibited, and violence against teachers, which had resulted in many deaths. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Government commit itself to protecting economic, social and cultural rights, reaffirm its obligation to ensure free education for all children of compulsory school age, take measures against the problems undermining the educational system and ensure the full realization of the right to education. She proposed studies on the impact of an education revolution on the right and on the nature and extent of discrimination in education, and increased budget spending on education.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 2003/19], the Commission urged States to submit information on best practices to eliminate discrimination in education. The Special Rapporteur was asked to report in 2004 and the Secretary-General was asked to assist her.

Communications. On 18 March [E/CN.4/2003/G/45], Turkey alleged that the Special Rapporteur's January report misrepresented facts regarding efforts to follow up on her 2002 visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 740]. It claimed that, contrary to what the Special Rapporteur reported, she enjoyed the Government's full cooperation.

On 10 December [E/CN.4/2004/G/16], China, referring to the Special Rapporteur's report on her visit to the country (see p. 770), stated that she had made groundless comments and accusations regarding the Government's efforts to protect human rights and realize the right to education based on information from overseas sources. It requested the Special Rapporteur to revise her report accordingly.

Environmental and scientific concerns

Toxic wastes

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/2003/56], the Special Rapporteur on the adverse effects of the illicit movement and dumping of toxic and dangerous products and wastes on the enjoyment of human rights, Fatma-Zohra Ouhachi-Vesely (Algeria), described her activities and presented replies received from five Governments and a number of intergovernmental organizations and NGOs in response to a communication she had circulated pursuant to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 741]. She also summarized communications concerning six new cases involving 11 countries brought to her attention, and an additional communication updating one case mentioned in her previous reports. Reaffirming the validity of the findings in her previous reports, the Special Rapporteur drew the Commission's attention to the conclusions and recommendations relating to her 2002 visits to Canada and the United States [YUN 2002, p. 741] and underlined a new trend regarding the export of hazardous electronic waste from developed countries to Asian States. According to a variety of sources, those wastes were being processed in operations that were extremely harmful to human health and the environment, with severe implications for human rights. The problem posed by pesticides, particularly persistent organic pollutants, remained very serious and the majority of the incidents reported related to that issue. The Special Rapporteur intended to present in 2004 a report on the last three years of her mandate.

The Special Rapporteur visited the United Kingdom (27 May–6 June) [E/CN.4/2004/46/Add.2] where in England and Wales alone about 5 million tonnes of toxic and dangerous waste were produced yearly, and some 750,000 consignment notes pertaining to 500,000 shipments of those materials were processed annually. Issues of concern were the lack of transparency regarding waste, claims by NGOs regarding limitations and difficulties, particularly with respect to information and the costs of waste management, and the fact that, other than the restrictions arising from the 1998 Convention on the Prior Informed Consent Procedure for Certain Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides in International Trade (Rotterdam Convention) [YUN 1998, p. 997], there was currently no ban on the export of chemical products that had been restricted or prohibited in the United Kingdom. She recommended that the Government introduce a ban and complement its promotion of voluntary initiatives by implementing legally binding minimum standards for corporate behaviour and transparency, including regarding corporate activities abroad, and advocated strengthening the enforcement of legislation and more dissuasive civil and criminal sanctions against those who broke the law. The Special Rapporteur pointed out that the scope and validity of her findings and conclusions were limited by the fact that many of the country's central regulations or legislation in areas of concern were under review, being drafted or in the process of implementation. Consequently, parts of her observations and recommendations were based on draft or future legislation rather than practice.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 38 to 13, with 2 abstentions, the Commission, on 22 April [res. 2003/20], requested Governments of developed countries and international financial institutions to provide financial assistance for the implementation of the Programme of Action adopted at the First Continental Conference for Africa on the Environmentally Sound Management of Unwanted Stocks of Hazardous Wastes and Their Prevention [YUN 2001, p. 972]. The Special Rapporteur was asked to study existing problems of and solutions to illicit trafficking, particularly in developing countries, and to report in 2004. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her.

Environmental protection and sustainable development

On 25 April [res. 2003/71], the Commission, welcoming actions taken by States that assisted in promoting environmental protection and sustainable development, asked the High Commissioner and the United Nations Environment Programme to coordinate their efforts in capacity-building activities for the judiciary. The Secretary-General was asked to report in 2004 on the consideration being given by States to the possible relationship between the environment and human rights.

Disappearance of States for environmental reasons

On 14 August [res. 2003/24], the Subcommission, noting environmental changes which reduced significantly the surface area of States, with serious social, economic and cultural consequences, recommended a decision to the Commission on the implications of the phenomenon.

Right to physical and mental health

Report of Special Rapporteur. In accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2002/259 [YUN 2002, p. 742], the Special Rapporteur on the right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, Paul Hunt (New Zealand), submitted a February preliminary report [E/CN.4/2003/58], in which he proposed to examine poverty reduction strategies, neglected diseases, impact assessments, relevant WTO agreements, mental health and the role of health professionals. He said he attached particular importance to the identification of good practices, some of which he hoped to set out in subsequent reports.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 39 to 1, with 13 abstentions, the Commission, on 22 April [res. 2003/28], asked the High Commissioner to solicit proposals from Governments, NGOs and UN bodies and specialized agencies, particularly the World Health Organization (WHO), for possible measures and activities to be carried out during the proposed United Nations Year for Violence Prevention (see Economic and Social Council action below), and to submit a compilation thereof in 2004. OHCHR, WHO and other UN bodies and specialized agencies were invited to organize an international expert consultation on violence prevention and human rights, with the aim of developing guidelines on violence, based on human rights instruments. Special rapporteurs were invited to report on the issue of violence prevention and to make recommendations in 2004. The Commission asked the Special Rapporteur to pay particular attention to the linkages between poverty reduction strategies and the right to health, and between the realization of that right and aspects of discrimination and stigma, and to the identification of best practices. He was also asked to pursue his analysis of neglected diseases and the role of health impact assessments, to report annually to the Commission and to submit an interim report to the General Assembly. The High Commissioner was asked to assist him.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted resolution 2003/45 by recorded vote (33-1-17) [agenda item 14 (g)].

The right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/28 of 22 April 2003, in which the Commission highlighted the importance of enhancing the international community's response to violence by strengthening prevention efforts at the national level and through international cooperation,

1. Recommends that the General Assembly declare 2007 the United Nations Year for Violence Prevention;
2. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to submit to the Council a draft programme of action for the Year.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2003/45:

In favour: Argentina, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guatemala, Iran, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, Uganda, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Australia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, India, Ireland, Italy, Netherlands, Portugal, Romania, Sweden, Ukraine, United Kingdom.

Further reports of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur undertook a mission to WTO (Geneva, 16-23 July and 27-28 August) [E/CN.4/2004/49/Add.1] to enhance the quality of dialogue between the human rights right to health and trade communities. He outlined the sources and scope of the right in relation to trade, explored analytical frameworks to deepen understanding of key issues and considered a number of specific trade agreements and other relevant questions, including the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights and neglected diseases, the General Agreement on Trade in Services, impact assessments, gender and trade, technical assistance, the Trade Policy Review Mechanism and acceding countries. The Special Rapporteur was concerned that pressure in trade negotiations, particularly by stronger trading partners over smaller acceding countries, might lead to unsustainable commitments to trade liberalization that, in practice, diminished States' capacity to realize the right to health. He recommended deepening the dialogue between the human rights and trade communities and supporting it by research on issues such as the relationship between international human rights law and trade law. He proposed a series of measures to the Commission, special rapporteurs, human rights treaty bodies, WTO member States, international organizations and civil society.

Pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/45 (see p. 772), the Secretary-General, in October [A/58/427], transmitted the Special Rapporteur's interim report, which addressed relevant conceptual issues, such as the consideration of what constituted a right-to-health indicator and an overview of good practices for the right. He also discussed the obstacles that HIV/AIDS and neglected diseases, such as leprosy, posed to the realization of the right. The Special Rapporteur concluded that some components of a right to health strategy demanded new concepts and tools and suggested that human rights indicators could help States and others recognize when national and international policy adjustments were needed, and proposed the establishment of a right to health approach to the elimination of leprosy, and the adoption of an optional protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (see p. 670) to help ensure that those living in poverty received attention and provide both a complaints and an enquiry procedure.

The Special Rapporteur visited Mozambique (15-19 December) [E/CN.4/2004/49/Add.2], but stated that his report on the mission could not be prepared and shared with the Government prior to the deadline for submitting reports to the Commission. Therefore, he would submit a written report on the visit in 2005 and an oral report in 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/173 by recorded vote (174-2-4) [agenda item 117 (b)].

The right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Reaffirming also that the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health is a human right, and that such right derives from the inherent dignity of the human person,

Recalling that, according to the Constitution of the World Health Organization, health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity,

Recognizing the need to progressively achieve the full realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health,

Recalling the relevant provisions of declarations and programmes of action adopted by the major United Nations conferences, summits and special sessions and at their follow-up meetings, in particular the four health-related development goals contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Noting Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/28 of 22 April 2003 and all previous resolutions adopted by the Commission concerning the realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health,

Welcoming the adoption of the World Health Organization Framework Convention on Tobacco Control by the fifty-sixth World Health Assembly, on 21 May 2003,

Recognizing the important contribution of all regional and subregional intergovernmental initiatives regarding HIV/AIDS, including those aimed at strengthening horizontal technical cooperation and encouraging best practices,

Aware that for millions of people throughout the world the full realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health still remains a distant goal and that, in many cases, especially for those living in poverty, this goal is becoming increasingly remote,

Recognizing the need for States, in cooperation with international organizations and civil society, including non-governmental organizations and the private sector, to create favourable conditions at the national, regional and international levels to ensure the full and effective realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health,

Recognizing also, in this regard, the important role of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, and in particular that of people living with HIV/AIDS, in the fight against this pandemic,

Recognizing further the indispensable role that health professionals play in the promotion and protection of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health,

Welcoming the initiatives by the Secretary-General and relevant United Nations bodies and programmes, including the World Health Organization and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, as well as public-private partnership initiatives, such as the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, which contribute to improvements in addressing health issues worldwide, including in developing countries, while noting that further progress should be achieved in this regard, including in the mobilization of resources,

Concerned about the interrelationships between poverty and the realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, and in particular about the fact that ill health can be both a cause and a consequence of poverty,

Considering that sexual and reproductive health are integral elements of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health,

Recalling the Declaration on the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement) and Public Health adopted at the Fourth World Trade Organization Ministerial Conference in Doha in November 2001, and welcoming the World Trade Organization General Council decision of 30 August 2003 on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Declaration,

1. Urges States to take steps, individually and through international assistance and cooperation, especially economic and technical, to the maximum extent of their available resources, with a view to achieving progressively, by all appropriate means, the full realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, including, in particular, the adoption of legislative measures;

2. Calls upon the international community to continue to assist the developing countries in promoting the full realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, including through financial and technical support as well as training of personnel, while recognizing that the primary responsibility for promoting and protecting all human rights rests with States;

3. Calls upon States to guarantee that the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health will be exercised without discrimination of any kind;

4. Reaffirms that the achievement of the highest attainable level of health is a most important worldwide social goal, the realization of which requires action on the part of many other social and economic sectors in addition to the health sector;

5. Affirms that good governance at all levels, sound economic policies and solid democratic institutions responsive to the needs of the people are also key to the full realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

6. Calls upon States to pay special attention to the situation of vulnerable groups, including by the adoption of positive measures, in order to safeguard the full realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

7. Also calls upon States to place a gender perspective at the centre of all policies and programmes affecting women's health;

8. Further calls upon States to protect and promote sexual and reproductive health as integral elements of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

9. Invites States to consider signing and ratifying the World Health Organization Framework Convention on Tobacco Control;

10. Takes note with interest of the interim report of the Special Rapporteur on the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

11. Also takes note with interest of the approach proposed by the Special Rapporteur to encompass the responsibilities of States at all levels in his future work on how to evaluate the progressive realization of the right of everyone to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, and of his efforts to apply this approach to specialized areas of health care, such as essential medicines, sexual and reproductive health, HIV/AIDS, children's health and water and sanitation;

12. Welcomes the special attention given by the Special Rapporteur to the identification of good practices for the effective implementation of the right of everyone to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

13. Recognizes the need for further international cooperation and research to promote the development of new drugs, vaccines and diagnostic tools for diseases causing a heavy burden in developing countries, and stresses the need to support developing countries in their efforts in this regard, taking into account that the failure of market forces to address such diseases has a direct negative impact on the progressive realization in these countries of the right of everyone to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

14. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide the necessary resources for the effective fulfilment of the mandate of the Special Rapporteur from within existing resources;

15. Calls upon Governments to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur in the implementation of his mandate, to provide all information requested and to respond promptly to his communications;

16. Notes the request of the Commission on Human Rights to the Special Rapporteur to submit annually a report to the Commission and an interim report to the General Assembly on the activities performed under his mandate;

17. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue consideration of this matter at its sixtieth session under the same agenda item.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/173:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Marshall Islands, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Czech Republic, Sweden, United Kingdom.

Water and sanitation services

Report of Special Rapporteur. In response to 2002 Commission and Subcommission requests [YUN 2002, p. 743], the Special Rapporteur on the right to adequate water and sanitation, El Hadji Guissé, submitted an August progress report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/WR.3] on a study on the relationship between the enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights and the promotion of the realization of the right to drinking water supply and sanitation. He noted that the right to clean water impacted other human rights, including the rights to peace, self-determination, development, a healthy environment, health, adequate housing and education. Problems relating to water were universal and, in addressing them, collaboration among all nations was essential. The obligation of States to cooperate in that regard was enshrined in the UN Charter and in a number of international instruments.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/1], the Subcommission asked the Secretary-General to invite Governments, UN bodies and specialized agencies and interested NGOs to provide the Special Rapporteur with information for the preparation of his final report, and to assist him.

Bioethics

Report of Secretary-General. In response to a 2001 Commission request [YUN 2001, p. 674], the Secretary-General, in a February report with later addendum [E/CN.4/2003/98 & Add.1], summarized information received from five Governments, two specialized agencies and the secretariat of the Convention on Biological Diversity (see p. 1051) regarding the coordination of activities and thinking on bioethics.

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/69], the Commission invited the High Commissioner to participate in the discussion on questions relating to human rights and bioethics and Governments that had not done so to consider establishing ethics committees, in conjunction with UNESCO's International Bioethics Committee, to assess the ethical, social and human rights questions raised by biomedical research regarding humans and to inform the Secretary-General of action taken. It asked the Subcommission to consider the contribution it could make to the Committee regarding the follow-up to the 1997 Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights [YUN 1997, p. 1530] and to report in 2005. The Secretary-General was asked to report in 2005 based on those contributions.

Working paper. In response to a 2002 Subcommission decision [YUN 2002, p. 743], Iulia-Antoanella Motoc (Romania) submitted, in July, an expanded working paper [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/36] on the question of bioethics and human rights, which outlined the main questions to be analysed in a future study: the human genome as the common heritage of mankind; manipulation of the human genome and human rights; discrimination and the human genome; and intellectual property rights and human rights. She advocated the development of an international framework, taking into account public and private research in the field. A proposal to organize a world summit on the future of the human species, to protect the integrity of the human species and to prevent the market and its industries, businesses and self-serving scientists from deciding the future of humanity, was worthy of consideration.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/4], the Subcommission decided to appoint Ms. Motoc as Special Rapporteur to undertake a study on human rights and the human genome based on her working paper and asked her to submit a preliminary report to the Subcommission in 2004 and a final report to the Commission in 2005. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her.

Genetic privacy

Pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2001/39 [YUN 2001, p. 675], the Secretary-General submitted a June report with later addendum [E/2003/91 & Add.1], which summarized information received from two Member States and UN system entities regarding genetic privacy and non-discrimination. The Secretary-General said there was a need to ensure non-discrimination on genetic grounds, and to assist countries, particularly developing countries, in taking advantage of genetics, biotechnologies and other related scientific progress in their development process, with due respect for human rights. He said the Council might wish to be kept informed of developments regarding the draft international declaration on human genetic data and to continue considering the implications relating to ethical, legal, medical and employment issues, as well as other aspects of social life, and to advocate for assistance to countries to deal better with those issues.

On 22 July, the Council decided to postpone consideration of the question of genetic privacy and non-discrimination to 2004, to allow for a thorough review of the matter and its implications on ethical, legal, medical, employment-related and other aspects of social life, on the basis of the Secretary-General's report, among other things (decision 2003/232).

Slavery and related issues

Working group activities. The five-member Working Group on Contemporary Forms of Slavery, at its twenty-eighth session (Geneva, 16-20 June) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/31], reviewed developments in contemporary forms of slavery and measures to prevent and repress all its forms, including the consideration of corruption and international debt as promoting factors of the phenomenon. It considered as a matter of priority contemporary forms of slavery related to and generated by discrimination, particularly gender discrimination, such as forced and child marriage and the sale of wives. Other issues examined related to the activities of the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund on Contemporary Forms of Slavery (see p. 777), forced labour, the status of slavery conventions, migrant and domestic workers, especially women, bonded labour and debt bondage, child labour, trafficking in persons and the exploitation of the prostitution of others, including children, the activities of the Special Rapporteurs on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and on violence against women (see pp. 777 & 787), the activities of certain religious and other sects, traffic in children's organs and tissues, and slavery-like practices in armed conflict. The Group concluded that serious forms of slavery still existed and that new insidious forms were emerging. It made recommendations on the issues it considered during the session and decided to focus on the question of forced labour in 2004 and to consider as a priority issue in 2005 the assessment of its activities, in commemoration of the thirtieth anniversary of its establishment.

Documents considered by the Group included May notes by the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.2/2003/2, E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.2/2003/3] updating the status of the slavery conventions (1956 Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery [YUN 1956, p. 228] and 1949 Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 317(IV) [YUN 1948-49, p. 613]) and a May report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.2/2003/4] containing information submitted by Governments and a specialized agency on measures they had taken to prevent and repress all forms of slavery.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [res. 2003/3], the Subcommission addressed contemporary forms of slavery related to and generated by discrimination, particularly gender discrimination; traffic in persons and exploitation of the prostitution of others; sexual exploitation of children and the activities of the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography; bonded labour and child labour; migrant workers; forced labour; corruption in the perpetuation of slavery and slavery-like practices; and the misuse of the Internet for the purpose of sexual exploitation.

The Subcommission recommended that the General Assembly consider declaring a UN year against trafficking in persons, especially women, youth and children. It requested the Secretary-General to ask States to continue to inform the Group of measures adopted to implement the 1992 Programme of Action for the Prevention of the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography (see below) and on measures adopted to implement the 1993 Programme of Action for the Elimination of the Exploitation of Child Labour [YUN 1993, p. 966], and to report to the Subcommission and the Commission in 2004. The Group was asked to consider in 2004 the issue of forced labour, and ILO to consider organizing, in cooperation with the Group, consultations on the topic.

1992 Programme of Action

In response to a 1998 Subcommission request [YUN 1998, p. 697], a May report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/26] summarized the activities of six Governments and two NGOs to implement the 1992 Programme of Action for the Prevention of the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography [YUN 1992, p. 814].

Sexual exploitation during armed conflict

Report of High Commissioner. The High Commissioner, in a June report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/27], supplemented information contained in a previous report [YUN 2002, p. 744] regarding steps taken by human rights mechanisms, the Commission, UN field offices, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR) to address the problem of systematic rape, sexual slavery and slavery-like practices during armed conflicts. The High Commissioner said that, despite legal advances, such as ICTY verdicts and the provisions of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (see p. 1332), women continued to face widespread sexual gender-based violence during conflicts. Human rights mechanisms should continue to strengthen their consideration of all gender-based human rights violations, and, to assist them, the international community should provide relevant information on the issue. To end impunity for such crimes, political will and concerted action were required from the international community, Governments and non-governmental actors.

Subcommission action. On 13 August [dec. 2003/108], the Subcommission, in follow-up to a 1998 report on systematic rape, sexual slavery and slavery-like practices during armed conflict [YUN 1998, p. 698], requested Françoise Hampson (United Kingdom) to prepare, without financial implications, a working paper on the criminalization, investigation and prosecution of acts of serious sexual violence occurring in the context of an armed conflict or committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against any civilian population, for consideration in 2004.

On 14 August [res. 2003/26], the Subcommission encouraged States to provide effective criminal penalties and compensation for unremedied violations in order to end impunity regarding sexual violence during armed conflicts. The High Commissioner was asked to report in 2004.

Fund on slavery

Reports of Secretary-General. In February [E/CN.4/2003/83/Add.1], August [A/58/306] and December [E/CN.4/2004/78], the Secretary-General reported on the status of the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund on Contemporary Forms of Slavery.

The Fund's Board of Trustees, at its eighth session (Geneva, 20-24 January), recommended 28 project grants, amounting to $130,920, and eight travel grants, amounting to $21,995, to enable NGO representatives to participate in the deliberations of the Working Group on Contemporary Forms of Slavery (see p. 776). The Board estimated that in order to fulfil its mandate satisfactorily, the Fund would need at least $300,000 before its ninth session, scheduled for January 2004. The High Commissioner, in October, launched an appeal for that amount. The Secretary-General reported that contributions available to the Fund as at 18 November 2003 stood at $45,394.

On 22 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's August report (decision 58/537).

Subcommission action. On 14 August [res. 2003/27], the Subcommission urged Governments, NGOs and other private or public entities to contribute to the Fund.

Vulnerable groups

Women

In a September report [A/58/323] on progress made to implement the UN Millennium Declaration, as set out in General Assembly resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49] (see also p. 48), the Secretary-General noted that, despite increased global awareness of issues affecting women's rights, little progress had been made at the country level and, in many cases, the rights that had been achieved were threatened. Rape and sexual violence continued to be used as weapons of war and women continued to be excluded from almost all peace negotiations. Also of grave concern was the increasing and widespread practice of trafficking in women and girls, one of the fastest-growing aspects of organized crime. Highlighting women's underrepresentation in decision-making at all levels of government, the Secretary-General noted that specific support was needed to ensure women's effective participation.

Violence against women

Note of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 50/166 [YUN 1995, p. 1188], the Secretary-General submitted, in January, to the Commission on Human Rights and to the Commission on the Status of Women the report of the United Nations Development Fund for Women regarding the Fund's activities to eliminate violence against women [E/CN.6/2003/11-E/CN.4/2003/121] (see p. 1193).

Report of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, Radhika Coomaraswamy (Sri Lanka), in a January final report to the Commission [E/CN.4/2003/75 & Corr.1], reviewed developments at the international, regional and national levels aimed at eliminating the violence since the 1994 creation of her mandate [YUN 1994, p. 1122], in order to present her successor with information necessary to assess future developments. She described how the international community had considered the violence with regard to situations of armed conflict, family violence, sexual violence/rape, sexual harassment, trafficking, and religious extremism and harmful traditional practices. In the course of the preceding decade, the greatest achievements to eradicate the violence were awareness-raising and standard-setting, said the Special Rapporteur. The development of jurisprudence and the prosecution of perpetrators through international, regional and national courts were important steps in the fight against impunity for gender-based crimes. However, very little had changed in the lives of most women, and statistics continued to show high rates of violence and abuse, mostly resulting in impunity for the perpetrators. The Special Rapporteur suggested that her successor focus on how to protect women's rights effectively and equal access to justice for women who had suffered violence. Measures at the national and international levels highlighted the need to address the root causes of violence, including women's poor economic, social and political status, which constrained knowledge of their rights and access to options and resources; equal access to the criminal justice system; and impunity for gender-based violence.

Addenda to the report detailed country-by-country developments from 1994 to 2003 [E/CN.4/2003/75/Add.1], to which Bhutan provided additional information [E/CN.4/2004/G/3], and a summary of recent communications she had sent to 29 Governments and the PA regarding specific allegations and replies received [E/CN.4/2003/75/Add.2 & Corr.1].

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/45], the Commission decided that the Special Rapporteur's mandate should be renewed for a three-year period and asked her to report annually and to respond effectively to reliable information that came before her. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her and to ensure that her reports were brought to the attention of the Commission on the Status of Women (see p. 1192) in 2004 and of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (see p. 1190).

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision to renew the Special Rapporteur's mandate and its request to the Secretary-General to assist her (decision 2003/251).

In August, Yakin Ertürk (Turkey) was appointed Special Rapporteur.

On 22 December, the General Assembly, in resolution 58/185 (see p. 1172), requested the Secretary-General to conduct an in-depth study on all forms and manifestations of violence against women, as identified in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women [YUN 1995, p. 1170] and the outcome of the Assembly's twenty-third special session on women [YUN 2000, p. 1082].

Women migrant workers

On 23 April [res. 2003/46], the Commission requested States to promote the human rights and fundamental freedoms of migrants, particularly women and children, and to prosecute violations of labour law with regard to migrant workers' conditions of work.

On 22 December, the General Assembly, in resolution 58/143, urged concerned Governments, particularly those of the countries of origin and destination, to strengthen further their national efforts to protect and promote the rights and welfare of women migrant workers (see also p. 1172).

Traditional practices affecting the health of women and girls

Report of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 746], the Special Rapporteur on traditional practices affecting the health of women and the girl child, Halima Warzazi (Morocco), in a July report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/30], reviewed national legislative measures and programmes and recent regional initiatives to combat female genital mutilation. Major initiatives were a conference on zero tolerance for the practice (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 4-6 February), held by the Inter-African Committee on Traditional Practices Affecting the Health of Women and Children, which adopted a joint programme of action aimed at eradicating the practice by 2010, and a consultation of experts from the African and Arab regions (Cairo, Egypt, 21-23 June), held within the context of a campaign launched and financed by the EU. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Subcommission follow up on the implementation of the agenda for action drawn up by the Addis Ababa conference, and proposed a study on the problems of host countries resulting from harmful practices imported by communities in their territory. The Special Rapporteur suggested that she prepare a questionnaire for Governments to identify all practices aimed at maintaining women in a situation of inferiority, dependence and submission, and an evaluation to assess progress made to combat female genital mutilation.

Subcommission action. On 14 August [res. 2003/28], the Subcommission called on the General Assembly to declare 6 February the international day on the elimination of female genital mutilation and all other harmful traditional practices affecting the health of women and girls. Governments were called on to give attention to the implementation of the 1994 Plan of Action for the Elimination of Harmful Traditional Practices [YUN 1994, p. 1123], and the Secretary-General was requested to invite them to submit information on the situation regarding harmful practices in their countries. The Subcommission proposed that three seminars be held in Africa, Asia and Europe to review progress achieved and to explore ways of overcoming the obstacles encountered in implementing the Plan of Action, and asked the High Commissioner to help raise funds to organize the seminars. It decided to renew for a further three-years the Special Rapporteur's mandate, requested her to submit an updated report in 2004 and recommended that the Commission approve its decision and request. The Commission was invited to consider the possibility of appointing a special rapporteur on harmful traditional practices affecting the health of women and girls. (See also p. 1174.)

Women in Afghanistan

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/77], the Commission called on the Afghan Transitional Authority to investigate allegations of human rights violations, particularly against women and girls. It asked the Secretary-General to ensure that the post of senior gender adviser in the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (see p. 289) was filled immediately and on a permanent basis, in order to mainstream a gender perspective in its activities. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences was invited to continue to review the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan and to report to the General Assembly and the Commission.

Report of Special Rapporteur. In accordance with Commission resolution 2003/77 (see above), the Secretary-General, in October [A/58/421], transmitted a report of Yakin Ertürk, the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, which reviewed new developments regarding the opportunities for and continuing vulnerabilities of women and girls in Afghanistan. The most significant development was the March ratification by the Afghan Transitional Authority, without reservation, of the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 34/180 [YUN 1979, p. 895] (see also p. 1190). Also encouraging was that, despite many obstacles, large numbers of women sought to participate in public consultations on the drafting of the country's new constitution. On the negative side, the Special Rapporteur said persisting political instability posed a continuing challenge to the Transitional Authority and the international community, and for the promotion of women's and girls' human rights and their protection from multiple forms of violence and abuse. Outside Kabul, in particular, women's security was threatened by the presence and influence of local commanders who reportedly committed acts of extortion, looting, harassment, kidnapping and sexual abuse of women with impunity. The Special Rapporteur made recommendations to the Afghan Transitional Authority regarding non-discrimination on the basis of gender, ethnicity and religion; strict adherence to obligations under human rights instruments and international humanitarian law; support to the Ministry of Women's Affairs; action to ensure that harmful practices and rituals that violated women's human rights were eliminated; and strategies involving legislative and educational reforms and awareness-raising. She recommended that the international community provide long-term assistance for the social and economic reconstruction and rehabilitation of Afghan society, and for ensuring sustainable change for women. (See also p. 1175.)

On 22 December, the Assembly took note of the Special Rapporteur's report (decision 58/539).

The girl child

On 25 April [res. 2003/86], the Commission called on States to take measures, including legal reforms, to ensure girls' enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, and to eliminate discrimination and all forms of violence against them.

(See also p. 1185.)

Mainstreaming women's rights

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 748], the Secretary-General, in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/72], described measures to integrate gender perspectives into the UN system, taken by Commission mechanisms and procedures, human rights treaty bodies and OHCHR. Although there had been progress in improving the integration of gender and women's rights issues into the UN human rights system, it was uneven. The Commission might wish to reiterate the importance of the relevant provisions of the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women [YUN 1995, p. 1170] and of its resolutions, and to invite the Secretary-General to bring gender trends in the membership of treaty bodies to the attention of States parties when inviting their nominations for the election of members. In addition, gender balance and gender expertise in the designation of experts by the Commission required further attention. More specific references to gender analysis should be included in designing and assessing all Commission mandates, particularly those concerning special procedures.

A further report [E/CN.4/2003/73-E/CN.6/2003/5] of the Secretary-General presented the joint work plan of the UN Division for the Advancement of Women and OHCHR for 2003. The two bodies would continue to cooperate on the work of treaty bodies in training activities on reporting under international human rights instruments, in the creation of multimedia training packages on international human rights instruments, in the preparation of reports on similar issues to be submitted to intergovernmental bodies, in disseminating relevant information and within the framework of inter-agency mechanisms, including with regard to activities related to the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1113] on women, peace and security. Their web sites would be improved further and they would share information on and coordinate planned technical cooperation activities. The Division would update the 1998 study on integrating a gender perspective into the work of human rights treaty bodies [YUN 1998, p. 611] and continue to provide targeted input for the work of extra-conventional human rights mechanisms, particularly the Commission's Special Rapporteurs on the elimination of violence against women, the human rights of migrants, the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and the right to adequate housing, as well as the Secretary-General's Special Representative on the situation of human rights defenders.

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/44], the Commission requested special procedures and other Commission and Subcommission mechanisms and human rights treaty bodies to integrate a gender perspective into the implementation of their mandates and to include in their reports information on and analysis of women's and girls' human rights. It invited the Secretary-General to bring the current resolution to the attention of the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857) in order to stress the need for integrating a gender perspective into the outcome of the Summit, and requested him to report in 2004. The Commission decided to integrate a gender perspective into all its agenda items.

Trafficking in women and girls

As requested by the Commission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 748], the Secretary-General, in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/74], described activities taken by UN bodies, specialized agencies and other international organizations to combat trafficking in women and girls. Noting that in many parts of the world trafficking was perceived as a criminal law matter rather than a human rights issue, the Secretary-General pointed out that trafficked persons were victims of serious human rights violations and that it was important that human rights promoters took up the issue fully. Human rights were the common frame that should underpin anti-trafficking efforts. The Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights and Human Trafficking [YUN 2002, p. 748] contributed to the identification of the basic principles on which that common frame should be built.

Children

On 25 April [res. 2003/86], the Commission called on States to ensure children's registration immediately after birth; to respect children's rights and to preserve their identity; and to ensure children's right to know and be cared for by their parents and not be separated from their parents against their will, except when competent authorities determined that it was in the child's best interests. Among other things, States were also called on to support and participate in global poverty eradication efforts and to promote the rights of the child in that context; ensure children's right, without discrimination, to health; support and rehabilitate children and their families affected by HIV/AIDS and ensure the prevention of HIV infections; promote children's right to education and ensure they did not suffer discrimination; protect the rights of children with disabilities, and those of migrant children, street children, and refugee and internally displaced children; ensure that children were not deprived of their liberty except as a last resort and protect those deprived of their liberty from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment; and eliminate child labour. The Commission requested the independent expert on violence against children (see below) to conduct a study on the topic as soon as possible, in collaboration with OHCHR, UNICEF and WHO, and asked Member States, UN bodies and intergovernmental organizations to support the study; NGOs were asked to contribute to it and the Secretary-General to submit a progress report in 2004 and a final report in 2005. The Secretary-General was requested to submit a further report on the problems addressed in the Commission's current resolution in 2004. Human rights mechanisms, particularly special rapporteurs and working groups, were asked to pay attention to the special situation of violence against children.

(Other aspects of the Commission's resolution—child labour, the prevention and eradication of the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and the protection of children affected by armed conflict—are covered below.)

In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 748], Paulo Sérgio Pinheiro (Brazil) was appointed independent expert to conduct a study on violence against children, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 56/138 [YUN 2001, p. 681].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/504], adopted resolution 58/157 by recorded vote (179-1) [agenda item 113].

Rights of the child

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the rights of the child, the most recent of which is resolution 57/190 of 18 December 2002, as well as Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/86 of 25 April 2003,

Emphasizing that the Convention on the Rights of the Child must constitute the standard in the promotion and protection of the rights of the child, and bearing in mind the importance of the Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, as well as other relevant human rights instruments,

Affirming that the general principles of, inter alia, the best interests of the child, non-discrimination, participation and survival and development provide the framework for all actions concerning children, including adolescents,

Reaffirming also the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and the Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s adopted by the World Summit for Children, held in New York on 29 and 30 September 1990, and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, held in Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993,

Reaffirming further the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS,

Reaffirming the outcome document of the special session of the General Assembly on children, entitled "A world fit for children", and the commitments contained therein to promote and protect the rights of each child, every human being below the age of 18 years, including adolescents, and the integration of child rights issues into the outcome documents of all major United Nations conferences, special sessions and summits,

Reaffirming also the essential roles of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights in promoting and protecting the rights and welfare of children, and noting the importance of the debates held by the Security Council on children and armed conflict, of Council resolutions 1379(2001) of 20 November 2001 and 1460(2003) of 30 January 2003 and of the undertaking by the Council to give special attention to the protection, welfare and rights of children in armed conflict when taking action aimed at maintaining peace and security, including provisions for the protection of children in the mandates of peacekeeping operations, as well as the inclusion of child protection advisers in these operations,

Welcoming the reports of the Secretary-General on the status of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and on progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in the document entitled "A world fit for children", and the report of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict,

Welcoming also the work of the Committee on the Rights of the Child in examining the progress made by States parties to the Convention in implementing the obligations undertaken in the Convention and in providing recommendations to States parties on the implementation of the Convention and, in cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in enhancing awareness of the principles and provisions of the Convention,

Welcoming further the increase in the membership of the Committee on the Rights of the Child from ten to eighteen,

Welcoming the appointment by the Secretary-General of the independent expert for the United Nations study on violence against children,

Profoundly concerned that the situation of children in many parts of the world remains critical as a result of the persistence of poverty, social inequality, inadequate social and economic conditions in an increasingly globalized economic environment, pandemics, in particular HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis, environmental damage, natural disasters, armed conflict, displacement, exploitation, illiteracy, hunger, intolerance, discrimination, gender inequality, disability and inadequate legal protection, and convinced that urgent and effective national and international action is called for,

Bearing in mind the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010, and recalling the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace, which serve as the basis for the Decade,

Recognizing that the family is the basic unit of society and as such should be strengthened, that it is entitled to receive comprehensive protection and support, that the primary responsibility for the protection, upbringing and development of children rests with the family and that all institutions of society should respect the rights of the child and secure his or her well-being and render appropriate assistance to parents, families, legal guardians and other caregivers so that children can grow and develop in a safe and stable environment and in an atmosphere of happiness, love and understanding, bearing in mind that in different cultural, social and political systems, various forms of family exist,

Recognizing also that partnership among Governments, international organizations and relevant organs and organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Children's Fund, and all actors of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, as well as the private sector, is important for the realization of the rights of the child,

Underlining the need for mainstreaming a gender perspective in all policies and programmes relating to children,

Implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography

1. Urges States that have not yet done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention on the Rights of the Child as a matter of priority, and urges States parties to implement it fully, while stressing that the implementation of the Convention and the achievement of the goals of the World Summit for Children and the special session of the General Assembly on children are mutually reinforcing;

2. Expresses its concern about the great number of reservations to the Convention, and urges States parties to withdraw reservations incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention and to consider reviewing other reservations with a view to withdrawing them;

3. Urges States that have not yet done so to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and urges States parties to implement them fully;

4. Calls upon States parties to ensure that the rights set forth in the Convention are respected without discrimination of any kind and that the best interest of the child is a primary consideration in all actions concerning children, to recognize the child's inherent right to life and to ensure the child's survival and development to the maximum extent possible and to ensure also that the child is able to express his or her views freely in all matters affecting him or her and that these views are listened to and given due weight in accordance with his or her age and maturity;

5. Urges States parties to take all appropriate measures for the implementation of the rights recognized in the Convention, bearing in mind article 4 of the Convention, by:

(a) Putting in place effective national legislation, policies and action plans and by strengthening relevant governmental structures for children, including, where appropriate, ministers in charge of child issues and independent commissioners for the rights of the child;

(b) Ensuring adequate and systematic training in the rights of the child for professional groups working with and for children, including specialized judges, law enforcement officials, lawyers, social workers, medical doctors, health professionals and teachers, and coordination among various governmental bodies involved in children's rights, and encourages States and relevant bodies and organizations of the United Nations system to continue to promote education and training in this regard;

6. Calls upon States parties:

(a) To ensure that the members of the Committee on the Rights of the Child are of high moral standing and recognized competence in the field covered by the Convention, and serve in their personal capacity, consideration being given to equitable geographical distribution as well as to the principal legal systems;

(b) To strengthen their cooperation with the Committee and to comply in a timely manner with their reporting obligations under the Convention and the Optional Protocols thereto, in accordance with the guidelines elaborated by the Committee, as well as to take into account the recommendations made by the Committee in the implementation of the provisions of the Convention;

7. Calls upon all States and relevant actors concerned to continue to cooperate with the special rapporteurs and special representatives of the United Nations system in the implementation of their mandates, requests the Secretary-General to provide them with appropriate staff and facilities from the United Nations regular budget, when this is in accordance with their respective mandates, invites States to continue to make voluntary contributions, where appropriate, and urges all relevant parts of the United Nations system to provide them with comprehensive reporting to make possible the full discharge of their mandates;

8. Calls upon all States to end impunity for perpetrators of crimes committed against children, recognizing in this regard the contribution of the establishment of the International Criminal Court as a way to prevent violations of human rights and international humanitarian law, in particular when children are victims of serious crimes, including the crime of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes, and to bring perpetrators of such crimes to justice, and not to grant amnesties for these crimes;

9. Encourages all States:

(a) To strengthen their national statistical capacities and to use statistics disaggregated, inter alia, by age, gender and other relevant factors that may lead to disparities and other statistical indicators at the national, subregional, regional and international levels to develop and assess social policies and programmes so that economic and social resources are used efficiently and effectively for the full realization of the rights of the child;

(b) To strengthen their partnership with United Nations organs, within their respective mandates, the Bretton Woods institutions and other multilateral agencies, as well as other relevant actors;

10. Requests all relevant organs of the United Nations system, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and United Nations mechanisms regularly and systematically to incorporate a strong child rights perspective throughout all activities in the fulfilment of their mandates, as well as to ensure that their staff is trained in child protection matters, and calls upon States to cooperate closely with them;

11. Encourages Governments and relevant United Nations bodies, as well as relevant non-governmental organizations and child rights advocates, to continue to contribute, as appropriate, to the web-based database launched by the United Nations Children's Fund in order to continue the provision of information on laws, structures, policies and processes adopted at the national level to translate the Convention into practice, and in this regard commends that body for its work to disseminate lessons learned in the implementation of the Convention;

Promoting and protecting the rights of children and non-discrimination against children, including children in particularly difficult situations

Identity, family relations and birth registration

12. Calls upon all States to intensify efforts to ensure the registration of all children immediately after birth, including through the consideration of simplified, expeditious and effective procedures;

13. Also calls upon all States to undertake to respect the right of the child to preserve his or her identity, including nationality, name and family relations as recognized by law, without unlawful interference and, where a child is illegally deprived of some or all of the elements of his or her identity, to provide appropriate assistance and protection with a view to speedily re-establishing his or her identity;

14. Urges all States to ensure, as far as possible, the right of the child to know and be cared for by his or her parents;

15. Calls upon States to guarantee, to the extent consistent with each State's obligations, the right of a child whose parents reside in different States to maintain, on a regular basis, save in exceptional circumstances, personal relations and direct contact with both parents by providing means of access and visitation in both States and by respecting the principle that both parents have common responsibilities for the upbringing and development of their children;

16. Urges all States to ensure that a child shall not be separated from his or her parents against their will, except when the competent authorities, subject to judicial review, determine, in accordance with applicable law and procedures, that such separation is necessary in the best interest of the child, and, where alternative care is necessary, to promote family and community-based care in preference to placement in institutions, recognizing that such determination may be necessary in a particular case, such as one involving abuse or neglect of the child by the parents or one in which the parents are living separately and a decision must be made as to the child's place of residence;

17. Calls upon States to take all necessary measures to ensure that the best interest of the child is the primary consideration in the adoption of children and to take all necessary measures to prevent and combat illegal adoptions and adoptions that do not follow the normal procedures;

18. Also calls upon States to take all necessary measures to address the problem of children growing up without parents, in particular orphaned children and children who are victims of family and social violence, neglect and abuse;

19. Urges States to address cases of international kidnapping of children by one of the parents;

Poverty

20. Reaffirms that investments in children and the realization of their rights are among the most effective ways to eradicate poverty;

21. Calls upon States and the international community to cooperate, support and participate in the global efforts for poverty eradication at the global, regional and country levels, recognizing that strengthened availability and effective allocation of resources are required at all of these levels, in order to ensure that all the development and poverty eradication goals, as set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, are realized within their time framework, and to promote the enjoyment of the rights of the child;

Health

22. Calls upon all States to take all appropriate measures to develop sustainable health systems and social services and to ensure access to such systems and services without discrimination and to pay particular attention to adequate food and nutrition to prevent disease and malnutrition, to prenatal and post-natal health care, to the special needs of adolescents, to reproductive and sexual health and to threats from substance abuse and violence, in particular to all vulnerable groups, and calls upon all States parties to take all necessary measures to ensure the right of all children, without discrimination, to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health;

23. Urges all States to assign priority to activities and programmes aimed at preventing the abuse of narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and inhalants as well as preventing other addictions, in particular addiction to alcohol and tobacco, among children and young people, especially those in vulnerable situations, and to counter the use of children and young people in the illicit production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

24. Calls upon all States to give support and rehabilitation to children and their families affected by HIV/AIDS and to involve children and their caregivers, as well as the private sector, to ensure the effective prevention of HIV infections through correct information and access to voluntary and confidential care, treatment and testing, including pharmaceutical products and medical technologies, affordable to all, giving due importance to the prevention of mother-to-child transmission of the virus;

Education

25. Also calls upon all States:

(a) To recognize the right to education on the basis of equal opportunity by making primary education compulsory and available free to all, without discrimination, by ensuring that all children, including girls, children in need of special protection, children with disabilities, indigenous children, children belonging to minorities and children from different ethnic origins, have access without discrimination to education of good quality, as well as by making secondary education generally available and accessible to all, in particular by the progressive introduction of free education, bearing in mind that special measures to ensure equal access, including affirmative action, contribute to achieving equal opportunity and combating exclusion, and to ensure that the education of the child is carried out and States parties develop and implement programmes for the education of the child in accordance with articles 28 and 29 of the Convention;

(b) To develop national plans of action, or to strengthen existing ones, in order to achieve the objectives of Education for All so as to ensure that all boys and girls complete a full course of primary schooling, and reaffirms the coordinating role of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in this regard;

(c) To design and implement programmes to provide social services and support to pregnant adolescents and adolescent mothers, in particular to enable them to continue and complete their education;

(d) To promote an educational setting that eliminates all barriers that impede the schooling of pregnant adolescents and adolescent mothers;

(e) To take all appropriate measures to prevent racism and discriminatory and xenophobic attitudes and behaviour through education, keeping in mind the important role that children play in changing those practices;

(f) To ensure that children, from an early age, benefit from education and from participation in activities that develop respect for human rights and emphasize the practice of non-violence, with the aim of instilling in them the values and goals of a culture of peace, and invites States to develop national strategies for human rights education that are comprehensive, participatory and effective;

(g) To ensure that education programmes and materials reflect fully the promotion and protection of human rights and values of peace, tolerance and gender equality, using every opportunity presented by the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010;

(h) To harness the rapidly evolving information and communication technologies to support education at an affordable cost, including open and distance education, while reducing inequality in access and quality;

26. Urges States:

(a) To take measures to protect students from violence, injury or abuse, including sexual abuse and intimidation or maltreatment in schools, to establish complaint mechanisms that are age-appropriate and accessible to children and to undertake thorough and prompt investigations of all acts of violence and discrimination;

(b) To take measures to eliminate the use of corporal punishment in schools;

Freedom from violence

27. Calls upon States to take all appropriate measures to prevent and protect children from all forms of violence, including physical, mental and sexual violence, torture, child abuse, abuse by police, other law enforcement authorities and employees and officials in detention centres or welfare institutions, including orphanages, and domestic violence;

28. Also calls upon States to investigate and submit cases of torture and other forms of violence against children to the competent authorities for the purpose of prosecution and to impose appropriate disciplinary or penal sanctions against those responsible for such practices;

29. Requests all relevant human rights mechanisms, in particular special rapporteurs and working groups, within their mandates, to pay attention to the special situations of violence against children, reflecting their experiences in the field;

Non-discrimination

30. Calls upon all States to ensure that children are entitled to their civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights without discrimination of any kind;

31. Notes with concern the large number of children, particularly girls, among the victims of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and stresses the need to incorporate special measures, in accordance with the principle of the best interests of the child and respect for his or her views, in programmes to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, in order to give priority attention to the rights and the situation of children who are victims of these practices, and calls upon States to provide special support and ensure equal access to services for those children;

32. Calls upon all States in which ethnic, religious or linguistic minorities or persons of indigenous origin exist not to deny to a child belonging to such a minority or an indigenous child the right, in community with other members of his or her group, to enjoy his or her own culture, to profess and practise his or her own religion or to use his or her own language;

The girl child

33. Calls upon all States to take all necessary measures, including legal reforms where appropriate:

(a) To ensure the full and equal enjoyment by girls of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, to take effective actions against violations of those rights and freedoms and to base programmes and policies on the rights of the child, taking into account the special situation of girls;

(b) To eliminate all forms of discrimination against girls and all forms of violence, including female infanticide and prenatal sex selection, rape, sexual abuse and harmful traditional or customary practices, including female genital mutilation, the root causes of son preference, marriages without free and full consent of the intending spouses, early marriages and forced sterilization, by enacting and enforcing legislation and, where appropriate, formulating comprehensive, multidisciplinary and coordinated national plans, programmes or strategies protecting girls;

Children with disabilities

34. Also calls upon all States to take necessary measures to ensure the full and equal enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by children with disabilities in both the public and the private spheres, including access to good quality education and health care and protection from violence, abuse and neglect, and to develop and, where it already exists, to enforce legislation to prohibit discrimination against them to ensure their dignity, promote their self-reliance and facilitate their active participation and integration in the community, taking into account the particularly difficult situation of children with disabilities living in poverty;

35. Encourages the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities to consider the issue of children with disabilities in its deliberations;

Migrant children

36. Calls upon all States to ensure, for migrant children, the enjoyment of all human rights as well as access to health care, social services and education of good quality and to ensure that migrant children, and especially those who are unaccompanied, in particular victims of violence and exploitation, receive special protection and assistance;

Children working and/or living on the street

37. Also calls upon all States to prevent violations of the rights of children working and/or living on the street, including discrimination, arbitrary detention and extrajudicial, arbitrary and summary executions, torture, all kinds of violence and exploitation, and to bring the perpetrators to justice, to adopt and implement policies for the protection, social and psychosocial rehabilitation and reintegration of these children and to adopt economic, social and educational strategies to address the problems of children working and/or living on the street;

Refugee and internally displaced children

38. Further calls upon all States to protect refugee, asylum-seeking and internally displaced children, in particular those who are unaccompanied, who are particularly exposed to risks in connection with armed conflict, such as recruitment, sexual violence and exploitation, to pay particular attention to programmes for voluntary repatriation and, wherever possible, local integration and resettlement, to give priority to family tracing and reunification and, where appropriate, to cooperate with international humanitarian and refugee organizations, including by facilitating their work;

Child labour

39. Calls upon all States to translate into concrete action their commitment to the progressive and effective elimination of child labour that is likely to be hazardous to or interfere with the child's education or to be harmful to the child's health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral or social development, to eliminate immediately the worst forms of child labour, to promote education as a key strategy in this regard, including the creation of vocational training and apprenticeship programmes and the integration of working children into the formal education system, and to examine and devise economic policies, where necessary, in cooperation with the international community, that address factors contributing to these forms of child labour;

40. Urges all States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying the Convention concerning Minimum Age for Admission to Employment, 1973 (Convention No. 138) and the Convention concerning the Prohibition and Immediate Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour, 1999 (Convention No. 182) of the International Labour Organization, and calls upon States parties to those instruments to implement them fully and to comply in a timely manner with their reporting obligations;

Children alleged to have infringed or recognized as having infringed penal law

41. Calls upon:

(a) All States, in particular States in which the death penalty has not been abolished, to comply with their obligations as assumed under relevant provisions of international human rights instruments, including, in particular, articles 37 and 40 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and articles 6 and 14 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, keeping in mind the safeguards guaranteeing protection of the rights of those facing the death penalty and guarantees set out in Economic and Social Council resolutions 1984/50 of 25 May 1984 and 1989/64 of 24 May 1989, and calls upon those States to abolish by law, as soon as possible, the death penalty for those below the age of 18 years at the time of the commission of the offence;

(b) All States to protect children deprived of their liberty from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

(c) All States to take appropriate steps to ensure compliance with the principle that depriving children of their liberty should be used only as a measure of last resort and for the shortest appropriate period of time, in particular before trial, and to ensure that, if they are arrested, detained or imprisoned, children are provided with adequate legal assistance and are separated from adults, to the greatest extent feasible, unless it is considered in their best interest not to do so, and also to take appropriate steps to ensure that no child in detention is sentenced to forced labour or corporal punishment or deprived of access to and provision of health-care services, hygiene and environmental sanitation, education, basic instruction and vocational training, taking into consideration the special needs of children with disabilities in detention, in accordance with their obligations under the Convention;

Recovery and social reintegration

42. Encourages States to cooperate, including through bilateral and multilateral technical cooperation and financial assistance, in the implementation of their obligations under the Convention, including in the prevention of any activity contrary to the rights of the child and in the rehabilitation and social integration of the victims, such assistance and cooperation to be undertaken in consultation among concerned States and relevant international organizations as well as other relevant actors;

Prevention and eradication of the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography

43. Calls upon all States:

(a) To take all appropriate national, bilateral and multilateral measures, inter alia, to develop national laws and allocate resources for the development of long-term policies, programmes and practices and to collect comprehensive data, disaggregated by age, gender and other relevant factors, to facilitate the participation of child victims of sexual exploitation in the development of strategies, taking into account their age and maturity, and to ensure the effective implementation of relevant international instruments concerning the prevention and the combating of trafficking and sale of children for any purpose or in any form, including the transfer of the organs of the child for profit, child prostitution and child pornography, and encourages all actors of civil society, the private sector and the media to cooperate in efforts to this end;

(b) To increase cooperation at all levels to prevent and dismantle networks trafficking in children;

(c) To consider ratifying or acceding to the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

(d) To criminalize and effectively penalize all forms of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse of children, including within the family or for commercial purposes, child pornography and child prostitution, child sex tourism, the sale of children and their organs, and the use of the Internet for these purposes, while ensuring that, in the treatment by the criminal justice system of children who are victims, the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration, and to take effective measures against the criminalization of children who are victims of exploitation and effective measures to ensure the prosecution of offenders, whether local or foreign, by the competent national authorities, either in the country where the crime was committed, or in the country of which the offender is a national or resident, or in the country of which the victim is a national, or on any other basis permitted under domestic law in accordance with due process of law;

(e) In cases of the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, to address effectively the needs of victims, including their physical and psychological recovery and full reintegration into their family and society;

(f) To combat the existence of a market that encourages such criminal practices against children, including through the adoption, effective application and enforcement of preventive, rehabilitative and punitive measures targeting customers or individuals who sexually exploit or sexually abuse children, as well as by ensuring public awareness;

(g) To afford one another the greatest measure of assistance in connection with investigations or criminal or extradition proceedings brought in respect of the offences set forth in article 3, paragraph 1, of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, including assistance in obtaining evidence at their disposal for the proceedings;

(h) To contribute to the elimination of the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography by adopting a holistic approach, addressing the contributing factors, including underdevelopment, poverty, economic disparities, inequitable socio-economic structures, dysfunctional families, lack of education, urban-rural migration, gender discrimination, irresponsible adult sexual behaviour, harmful traditional practices, armed conflicts and trafficking in children;

Children in armed conflict

44. Recognizes the inclusion in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, as a war crime, of crimes involving sexual violence and crimes of conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years or using them to participate actively in hostilities in both international and non-international armed conflicts;

45. Urges all States and all other parties to armed conflicts to end the recruitment and use of children in situations of armed conflict contrary to international law and to ensure their demobilization, effective disarmament and rehabilitation, physical and psychological recovery and reintegration into society;

46. Urges all States:

(a) When ratifying the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict, to raise the minimum age for voluntary recruitment of persons into their national armed forces from that set out in article 38, paragraph 3, of the Convention, bearing in mind that under the Convention persons below the age of 18 years are entitled to special protection, and to adopt safeguards to ensure that such recruitment is not forced or coerced;

(b) To protect children affected by armed conflict, in particular to protect them from acts that constitute violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law and to ensure that they receive timely, effective and unhindered humanitarian assistance as well as support for physical and psychological recovery;

47. Emphasizes the importance of giving systematic consideration to the rights, special needs and particular vulnerability of the girl child during conflicts and in post-conflict situations;

48. Regrets the fact that the report on a comprehensive assessment of the United Nations response to the issue of children affected by armed conflict, requested in resolution 57/190, has not yet been submitted, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to submit his report for consideration as soon as possible;

Follow-up

49. Urges those States that have not yet done so to complete a national action plan as soon as possible incorporating the goals agreed at the special session of the General Assembly on children, as reflected in its outcome document entitled "A world fit for children", and to place those goals within the framework of the Convention on the Rights of the Child;

50. Decides:

(a) To request the Secretary-General to prepare an updated report on progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in the document entitled "A world fit for children", with a view to identifying problems and constraints and making recommendations on the action needed to achieve further progress, and to submit his report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

(b) To request the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the rights of the child containing information on the status of the Convention and the problems addressed in the present resolution;

(c) To request the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict to continue to submit to the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Commission on Human Rights reports containing relevant information on the situation of children affected by armed conflict, taking into account the outcome document adopted by the General Assembly at its special session on children and bearing in mind existing mandates and reports of relevant bodies;

(d) To request the independent expert for the United Nations study on violence against children to conduct the study as soon as possible, invites Member States, United Nations bodies and organizations, including the Committee on the Rights of the Child, as well as other relevant intergovernmental organizations, to provide substantive and, where appropriate, financial support, including through voluntary contributions, for the effective conduct of the study, invites non-governmental organizations to contribute to the study, taking into account the recommendations of the Committee made following the general discussions on violence against children held in September 2000 and 2001, and encourages the independent expert to also seek the participation of children in the study, taking into account their age and maturity;

(e) To invite the independent expert for the United Nations study on violence against children to present an oral progress report on the study to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

(f) To request the Secretary-General to ensure the provision of appropriate staff and facilities from the United Nations regular budget for the effective and expeditious performance of the functions of the Committee, and invites the Committee to continue to enhance its constructive dialogue with the States parties to the Convention and its transparent and effective functioning;

(g) To continue its consideration of this question at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Promotion and protection of the rights of children".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/157:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

The Third Committee adopted, by separate recorded votes, paragraph 26 (b) and the words "corporal punishment" in paragraph 41 (c) by 117 to 10, with 23 abstentions, and 123 to 6, with 24 abstentions, respectively. The Assembly retained the paragraph and the words by recorded votes of 135 to 8, with 27 abstentions, and 129 to 4, with 31 abstentions, respectively.

Sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 757], the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, Juan Miguel Petit (Uruguay), submitted a January report [E/CN.4/2003/79] on the legal consequences of the problem, particularly the criminalization of child victims and recent national policy and legislative developments addressing those concerns. The report was based on 97 responses to the Special Rapporteur's request for information from Governments, international organizations and NGOs, of which 53 were summarized in the report. The report summarized communications sent to five Governments concerning individual or country-specific complaints, of which two were sent jointly with the Special Rapporteur on violence against women (see p. 777) and one with the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention (see p. 733). The Special Rapporteur also focused on illegal or coercive adoption practices and the relationship between HIV/AIDS and sexual exploitation. He stated that, although criminal liability for crimes against children was being strengthened, the treatment of child victims, especially when they were placed in protective custody, continued to have a punitive effect. He pointed to a continuing lack of data concerning the nature and extent of the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, noting that in many countries those offences were not criminalized. There was an alarming lack of child rights training for law enforcement officials and members of the judiciary, even in some developed countries. The Special Rapporteur recommended giving special protection to child victims of sexual exploitation, penalizing those who sexually abused or exploited children, or who profited from such crimes, and making accessible to children education, information and services to enable them to make informed choices about their future sexual behaviour.

An October report [E/CN.4/2004/9/Add.1] of the Special Rapporteur, which focused on the sale of children in the context of trafficking and child prostitution, and on child pornography and its links with domestic child sexual abuse, supplemented the conclusions and recommendations contained in his report on his 2002 visit to France [YUN 2002, p. 757].

The Special Rapporteur visited Brazil (3-14 November) [E/CN.4/2004/9/Add.2], where he focused on child sexual exploitation, which was linked to social problems such as poverty, social exclusion, child labour, gender discrimination and violence. The victims were predominantly female and adolescent Afro-Brazilians, of whom the most targeted were between 15 and 17 years old. The Government's commitment to fight child sexual exploitation was strong. However, filtering related policies and programmes to the grass-roots level posed a major difficulty, as did the ineffectiveness of the Statute for the Child and Adolescent (ECA), designed as the framework for protecting children's rights. The Special Rapporteur recommended as a priority measure steps towards the full implementation of ECA, as well as combating impunity through the reform of the police and judiciary; promoting the role of public defenders in protecting children's rights; reforming juvenile detention centres; extending assistance programmes to cover sexually exploited children; addressing the root causes of sexual exploitation by strengthening social programmes aimed at reducing poverty and social inequalities in ways that were relevant to children's rights; and focusing on education.

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/86], the Commission called on States to take measures to prevent and combat the trafficking and sale of children and to criminalize and penalize all forms of sexual exploitation and abuse of children, child pornography and child prostitution, child sex tourism, the sale of children and their organs and the use of the Internet for those purposes. The Special Rapporteur was asked to report in 2004.

Child labour

On 25 April [res. 2003/86], the Commission called on States to eliminate child labour that was hazardous, interfered with a child's education or was harmful to the child's health, and to promote education as a key strategy. It also called on them to consider ratifying and implementing ILO Convention No. 182 concerning the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labour (Worst Forms of Child Labour Convention), adopted in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1388], and Convention No. 138 concerning the minimum age for employment (Minimum Age Convention), adopted in 1973 [YUN 1973, p. 885].

Children and armed conflict

On 30 January [meeting 4695], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1460 (2003). The draft [S/2003/112] was prepared in consultations with Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolutions 1261(1999) of 25 August 1999, 1314(2000) of 11 August 2000 and 1379(2001) of 20 November 2001, which provide a comprehensive framework for addressing the protection of children affected by armed conflict,

Recalling its resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999, 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000, 1306(2000) of 5 July 2000, 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000, and 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, as well as all statements by its President on children and armed conflict, and taking note of the report of the Secretary-General of 16 October 2002 on women, peace and security,

Reiterating its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security and, in this connection, its commitment to address the widespread impact of armed conflict on children,

Underlining the need for all parties concerned to comply with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and international law, in particular those regarding children,

Emphasizing the responsibilities of States to end impunity and to prosecute those responsible for genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and other egregious crimes perpetrated against children,

Underlining the importance of the full, safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel and goods and the delivery of humanitarian assistance to all children affected by armed conflict,

Welcoming the entry into force on 12 February 2002 of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict,

Noting the fact that the conscription or enlistment of children under the age of 15 into the national armed forces or using them to participate actively in hostilities is classified as a war crime by the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which recently entered into force,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 26 November 2002 on the implementation of, inter alia, its resolution 1379(2001),

1. Supports the call of the Secretary-General for "an era of application" of international norms and standards for the protection of children affected by armed conflict;

2. Encourages the agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations, within their respective mandates, to strengthen their cooperation and their coordination when addressing the protection of children in armed conflict;

3. Calls upon all parties to armed conflict who are recruiting or using children in violation of the international obligations applicable to them to halt immediately such recruitment or use of children;

4. Expresses its intention to enter into dialogue, as appropriate, or to support the Secretary-General in entering into dialogue with parties to armed conflict in violation of the international obligations applicable to them on the recruitment or use of children in armed conflict, in order to develop clear and time-bound action plans to end this practice;

5. Notes with concern the list annexed to the report of the Secretary-General, and calls upon the parties identified in this list to provide information on steps they have taken to halt their recruitment or use of children in armed conflict in violation of the international obligations applicable to them to the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, bearing in mind the provisions of paragraph 9 of its resolution 1379(2001);

6. Expresses, accordingly, its intention to consider taking appropriate steps further to address this issue, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and its resolution 1379(2001), if it deems that insufficient progress has been made upon the review of the next report of the Secretary-General;

7. Urges Member States, in accordance with the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, to take effective action through, inter alia, conflict resolution and the development and implementation of national legislation, in a manner which is consistent with existing responsibilities of States under relevant international law, to control the illicit trade of small arms to parties in armed conflict that do not respect fully the relevant provisions of applicable international law relating to the rights and protection of children in armed conflict;

8. Calls upon States to respect fully the relevant provisions of applicable international humanitarian law relating to the rights and protection of children in armed conflict, in particular the four Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, inter alia, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War;

9. Reiterates its determination to continue to include specific provisions for the protection of children in the mandates of United Nations peacekeeping operations, including provisions recommending child protection advisers on a case-by-case basis and training for United Nations and associated personnel on child protection and child rights;

10. Notes with concern all the cases of sexual exploitation and abuse of women and children, especially girls, in humanitarian crisis, including those cases involving humanitarian workers and peacekeepers, and requests contributing countries to incorporate the six core principles of the Inter-Agency Standing Committee on Emergencies into pertinent codes of conduct for peacekeeping personnel and to develop appropriate disciplinary and accountability mechanisms;

11. Requests the agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations, with support from contributing countries, to implement HIV/AIDS education and offer HIV testing and counselling services for all United Nations peacekeepers, police and humanitarian personnel;

12. Calls upon all concerned parties to ensure that the protection, rights and well-being of children are integrated into the peace processes, peace agreements and the post-conflict recovery and reconstruction phases;

13. Calls upon Member States and international organizations to ensure that children affected by armed conflict are involved in all disarmament, demobilization and reintegration processes, taking into account the specific needs and capacities of girls, and that the duration of these processes is sufficient for a successful transition to normal life, with a particular emphasis on education, including the monitoring, through, inter alia, schools, of children demobilized in order to prevent re-recruitment;

14. Calls upon parties involved in armed conflict to abide by the concrete commitments they have made to the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and to cooperate fully with the United Nations system in the implementation of their commitments;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, in all his reports to the Council on country-specific situations, the protection of children in armed conflict is included as a specific aspect of the report;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a report by 31 October 2003 on the implementation of the present resolution and of its resolution 1379(2001) which would include, inter alia:

(a) Progress made by the parties listed in the annex to his report in ending the recruitment or use of children in armed conflict in violation of international obligations applicable to them, taking into account the parties to other armed conflicts that recruit or use children which are mentioned in the report in accordance with paragraph 16 of resolution 1379(2001);

(b) An assessment of violations of rights and abuses of children in armed conflict, including in the context of illicit exploitation and trafficking of natural resources and of illicit trafficking of small arms in conflict zones;

(c) Specific proposals on ways to ensure monitoring and reporting in a more effective and efficient way within the existing United Nations system on the application of the international norms and standards for the protection of children in situations of armed conflict in all its various aspects;

(d) Best practices on integrating the specific needs of children in armed conflict into disarmament, demobilization, rehabilitation and reintegration programmes, including an assessment of child protection advisers in peacekeeping and peace-building support operations, and on negotiations aimed at ending the recruitment or use of children in armed conflict in violation of international obligations applicable to the parties concerned;

17. Decides to remain actively seized of this matter.

Report of Special Representative. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 51/77 [YUN 1996, p. 665], the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Children and Armed Conflict, Olara A. Otunnu (Côte d'Ivoire), in a March report [E/CN.4/2003/77], outlined progress and new developments regarding the situation of children affected by armed conflict. He described the activities of his Office relating to impunity and to bring to justice violators of children's rights in conflict situations, the engagement of youth in tackling the issue, the work of the Inter-Agency Working Group on the Incorporation of Child Protection in United Nations Peacemaking, Peacekeeping and Peace-building Processes and of the Inter-Agency Standing Committee Task Force on Prevention of Sexual Exploitation, deployment of child protection advisers, the impact on children of the illicit commercial exploitation of natural resources in conflict zones, the activities of relevant regional and subregional organizations and arrangements, field missions, and the work of the Committee on the Rights of the Child on Guinea-Bissau and of the Commission. The Special Representative urged the UN system to consider the issue of war-affected children as a cross-cutting theme in agendas and to coordinate efforts in that regard.

Commission action. On 25 April [res. 2003/86], the Commission called on States to end the use of children in armed conflicts and, together with parties to armed conflict, to respect international humanitarian law. It asked States, UN bodies and agencies and regional organizations to integrate the rights of the child in all activities in conflict and post-conflict situations and to support national and international mine-action efforts.

Further reports of Special Representative. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/190 [YUN 2002, p. 749], the Secretary-General, in August, transmitted a report of the Special Representative [A/58/328 & Corr.1], which further reviewed progress achieved since his appointment by Assembly resolution 52/107 [YUN 1997, p. 687] and proposed a course of action for the next three years. He said that, although the international community possessed unprecedented means and collective influence that could be brought to bear on parties in conflict to ensure the observance of relevant standards, children continued to be abused and brutalized worldwide on a massive and horrendous scale. The most pressing challenge facing the international community was to galvanize and unify that collective influence into a coherent and concerted project to serve as an effective regime of protection for war-affected children. For that purpose, the Special Representative proposed an agenda for action, which encompassed two interrelated tasks: the first was to ensure that the initiatives and gains made over the past several years were consolidated and institutionalized, and the second involved the imperative of embarking on the era of application. Specific measures relating to the proposed agenda were outlined in the report.

In a 20 October statement to the Third Committee [A/C.3/58/SR.18], the Special Representative, reflecting on the extension of his mandate, further reviewed the progress achieved by his Office and the constraints it had faced.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1460(2003) (see p. 788), the Secretary-General, in a November report [A/58/546-S/2003/1053 & Corr.1, 2], described advances made to protect children affected by armed conflict. He made proposals for systematic monitoring, reporting and action. In order to deepen and sustain progress made, and to strengthen the foundation of the "era of application", the Secretary-General recommended the incorporation of children's issues into all peace negotiations, accords and post-conflict programmes; the inclusion of child protection in the mandates of all UN peace operations; the development of a systematic and concerted monitoring and reporting mechanism to provide objective, regular and accurate reports on violations against children by parties to conflict; the deployment of child protection advisers in peace operations; encouraging regional organizations to strengthen their activities for war-affected children, particularly advocacy, cross-border initiatives, monitoring and peer review; targeting measures against parties responsible for and complicit in the illicit exploitation of natural resources and, in that context, establishing an effective monitoring mechanism for the application of the certification scheme under the Kimberley Process (the regime established in 2000 to stem the illicit flow of rough diamonds used to finance armed conflict and to protect the legitimate diamond industry [YUN 2000, p. 76]). Other recommendations for action by the Council included travel restrictions, a ban on arms supply and military assistance, and restricting the flow of financial resources in cases where insufficient or no progress had been made by parties in adhering to its resolutions 1379 (2001) [YUN 2001, p. 684] and 1460(2003); updating annually the list of parties that recruited or used children in armed conflict, of which a currently updated version was annexed to the report; specific steps to ensure that persons responsible for crimes against children were prosecuted by the International Criminal Court; and deploying greater and more concerted efforts to end ongoing conflicts, which were destroying the lives of millions of children, and addressing the key factors that facilitated those conflicts.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/504], adopted resolution 58/245 by recorded vote (115-20-28) [agenda item 113].

Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict

The General Assembly,

Recalling paragraphs 35 to 37 of its resolution 51/77 of 12 December 1996 on the rights of the child, in which the mandate of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict was established,

Recalling also its resolution 57/190 of 18 December 2002, in which it requested the Secretary-General to undertake a comprehensive assessment of the scope and effectiveness of the United Nations system response to the issue of children affected by armed conflict, including recommendations for strengthening, mainstreaming, integrating and sustaining those activities,

Taking note of the report of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and his oral statement to the Third Committee of the General Assembly on 20 October 2003,

Recalling the role of the General Assembly in promoting the protection of children affected by armed conflict,

Recognizing the progress achieved since the establishment of the mandate of the Special Representative and the recommendation by which the Secretary-General extended the mandate of the Special Representative for a further period of three years,

Commending the support and the voluntary contributions of donor countries for the work of the Special Representative in the fulfilment of his mandate,

Expressing concern about the financial instability of the Office of the Special Representative and its adverse impact on the implementation of the mandate,

Decides that the activities under the mandate of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict shall be supported through regular budgetary funding.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/245:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, France, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Georgia, Germany, Iceland, Israel, Japan, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Poland, Sweden, Switzerland, Uganda, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Argentina, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Bulgaria, Croatia, Czech Republic, Estonia, Fiji, Hungary, Latvia, Mongolia, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Solomon Islands, Spain, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Tuvalu, Venezuela.

Abduction of children in Africa

On 25 April [res. 2003/85], the Commission, deeply alarmed at the spread of the practice of abduction of children during armed conflicts in many African countries, demanded the immediate demobilization and disarmament of child soldiers and the unconditional release and safe return of those abducted. The Commission called on African States to prohibit and criminalize such practices and asked them, in cooperation with UN agencies, to assist the victims and their families and to support sustainable rehabilitation and reintegration programmes for them, taking into account the special needs of abducted girls. The donor community was called on to provide financial assistance to existing national mechanisms in African countries, with a view to complementing national efforts.

Freedom of movement

Mass exoduses

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2000 Commission request [YUN 2000, p. 688], the High Commissioner, in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/84], described activities carried out by OHCHR, Member States, UN bodies, specialized agencies and other organizations to address the problem of mass exoduses. The High Commissioner said that, although the international community had become more aware of the global problem of mass exoduses and displacements, there was a need to further strengthen efforts and for worldwide cooperation and assistance to address those situations.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/52], the Commission requested the High Commissioner to pay particular attention to human rights situations that caused or threatened to cause mass exoduses and to contribute to efforts to address such situations through promotion and protection measures, emergency preparedness and response mechanisms, early warning and information-sharing, technical advice and expertise and cooperation in countries of origin and host countries. He was further asked to report in 2005, taking into account information and comments provided by Governments, intergovernmental organizations, specialized agencies and NGOs, and to annex to the report a thematic compilation of relevant Commission and Sub-commission reports and resolutions.

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 56/166 [YUN 2001, p. 651], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/58/186] on human rights and mass exoduses, described UN efforts to protect and assist those displaced during mass exoduses and to facilitate their return and reintegration. The report contained information on continuing efforts to enhance the UN capacity to avert new flows of refugees and other displaced persons and to tackle the root causes of such flows. The Secretary-General said that human rights violations were a cause of mass exoduses. The United Nations, through technical cooperation, peacekeeping operations and development programmes, played a central role in ensuring that the human rights situations in places of origin were suitable for the return and reintegration of displaced persons. It also had at its disposal mechanisms that could provide crucial early warning information. The challenge for the United Nations was to implement effectively action plans to assist States and avert mass exoduses.

An October bulletin of the Secretary-General [ST/SGB/2003/13], taking into account General Assembly resolution 57/306 (see p. 1237) on the sexual exploitation of refugees by aid workers in West Africa, presented special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and abuse.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/169 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Human rights and mass exodusesThe General Assembly,*

Deeply disturbed by the scale and magnitude of exoduses and displacements of people in many regions of the world and by the human suffering of refugees and displaced persons, a high proportion of whom are women and children,

Recalling its previous resolutions on this subject, as well as those of the Commission on Human Rights, and the conclusions of the World Conference on Human Rights, which recognized, inter alia, that gross violations of human rights, persecution, political and ethnic conflicts, famine and economic insecurity, poverty and generalized violence are among the root causes leading to mass exoduses and displacements of people,

Mindful of the open debates that have been held within the Security Council on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, the three reports of the Secretary-General on that subject and the related resolutions adopted,

Reaffirming the continuing relevance of the provisions of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol thereto to the situation of people in mass exoduses, and welcoming in this respect the process of Global Consultations on International Protection and the Agenda for Protection and other follow-up processes endorsed by States as a result, which sought, inter alia, to strengthen international responses to mass influx situations,

Welcoming the increased attention being given by the United Nations to the problem of refugee camp security, including through the development of operational guidelines on the separation of armed elements from refugee populations, and the increasing attention to registration and camp layout and design,

Stressing the importance of adherence to international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law in order to avert mass exoduses and to protect refugees and internally displaced persons, and expressing its deep concern at the lack of respect for those laws and principles, especially during armed conflict, including the denial of safe and unimpeded access to the displaced,

Reaffirming the primary responsibility of States to ensure the protection of refugees and internally displaced persons,

Noting with satisfaction the efforts of the United Nations system to develop a comprehensive approach to addressing the root causes and effects of movements of refugees and other displaced persons and strengthening emergency preparedness and response mechanisms,

Recognizing that the human rights machinery of the United Nations, including the mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights and the human rights treaty bodies, has important capabilities to address human rights violations that cause movements of refugees and displaced persons or prevent durable solutions to their plight,

Taking note of the work in progress of the United Nations system to clarify the role of the United Nations in post-conflict transition situations, including mass exodus situations,

Recognizing the complementarity between the systems for the protection of human rights and for humanitarian action, in particular the mandates of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, as well as the work of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, the Representative of the Secretary-General on internally displaced persons and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, and that cooperation between them, in accordance with their respective mandates, as well as coordination between the human rights, humanitarian, development, political and security components of the United Nations system, makes important contributions to the promotion and protection of the human rights of persons forced into mass exodus and displacement,

Acknowledging with appreciation the important and independent work of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement and other humanitarian agencies in protecting and assisting refugees and internally displaced persons, in cooperation with relevant international bodies,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Strongly deplores ethnic and other forms of intolerance as one of the major causes of forced migratory movements, and urges States to take all necessary steps to ensure respect for human rights, especially the rights of persons belonging to minorities;
3. Reaffirms the need for all Governments, inter-governmental bodies and relevant international organizations to intensify their cooperation and assistance in worldwide efforts to address human rights situations that lead to, as well as the serious protection and assistance problems that result from, mass exoduses of refugees and displaced persons;
4. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to give high priority to the consolidation and strengthening of emergency preparedness and response mechanisms, including early warning activities in the humanitarian area, so that, inter alia, effective action is taken to identify all human rights abuses that contribute to mass exoduses of persons;
5. Encourages States that have not already done so to consider acceding to the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees and to other relevant regional instruments concerning refugees, as applicable, and relevant international instruments of human rights and humanitarian law, to take appropriate measures to disseminate and implement those instruments domestically, to encourage compliance with provisions against arbitrary and forcible displacement and greater respect for the rights of those who flee and, as appropriate, to address the situation of the forcibly displaced in their reports to the human rights treaty bodies;
6. Calls upon States to ensure the effective protection of refugees by, inter alia, respecting the principle of non-refoulement, emphasizes the responsibility of all States and international organizations to cooperate with those countries, particularly developing countries, which are affected by mass exoduses of refugees and displaced persons, and also calls upon all relevant international and non-governmental organizations to continue to respond to the assistance and protection needs of refugees and displaced persons, including through the promotion of durable solutions to their plight;

7. Urges States to uphold the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and settlements, consistent with international law, inter alia, through effective measures to prevent the infiltration of armed elements, to identify and separate any such armed elements from refugee populations, to settle refugees at safe locations, where possible away from the border, and to afford prompt and unhindered access to them by humanitarian personnel;

8. Condemns all incidents of sexual exploitation and abuse and violence against refugees and internally displaced persons, encourages Governments to adopt and implement initiatives aimed at preventing, and at addressing allegations of, sexual exploitation and abuse in emergency situations, and calls upon all relevant United Nations agencies to ensure the effective implementation and monitoring of the Secretary-General's bulletin, the Inter-Agency Standing Committee Plan of Action on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse in Humanitarian Crises and other relevant codes of conduct;

9. Encourages the special rapporteurs, special representatives and working groups of the Commission on Human Rights and the United Nations human rights treaty bodies, acting within their mandates, to seek information, where appropriate, on human rights problems that may result in mass exoduses of populations or impede their voluntary return home, where appropriate, to include such information, together with recommendations thereon, in their reports and to bring such information to the attention of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights for appropriate action in fulfilment of his mandate, in consultation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

10. Requests all United Nations bodies, acting within their mandates, the specialized agencies and governmental, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to cooperate fully with all mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights and, in particular, to provide them with all relevant information in their possession on the human rights situations creating or affecting refugees and displaced persons, and to exchange such information among themselves, within their mandates, in order to encourage effective international responses;

11. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in the exercise of his mandate, as set out in General Assembly resolution 48/141 of 20 December 1993, and in cooperation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to pay particular attention to situations that cause or threaten to cause mass exoduses or displacements and to contribute to efforts to address such situations effectively and promote sustainable returns through promotion and protection measures, including human rights monitoring of those who have fled or returned as part of mass exoduses, emergency preparedness and response mechanisms, early warning and information-sharing, technical advice, expertise and cooperation in countries of origin as well as host countries;

12. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to contribute to the creation of a viable environment for the sustainable return of displaced persons in post-conflict societies, working in cooperation with the States concerned, through initiatives such as the rehabilitation of the justice system, the creation of national institutions capable of defending human rights and broad-based programmes of human rights education and the strengthening of local non-governmental organizations through field presences and programmes of advisory services and technical cooperation;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare and submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution as it pertains to all aspects of human rights and mass exoduses, with particular emphasis on the efforts of the United Nations system to enhance the protection of those who become displaced during mass exoduses, and to facilitate their return and reintegration, as well as information on efforts to continue to enhance the capacity of the United Nations to avert new flows of refugees and other displaced persons and to tackle the root causes of such flows;

14. Decides to continue its consideration of this question at its sixtieth session.

Internally displaced persons

Report of Secretary-General's Representative. In January [E/CN.4/2003/86], the Secretary-General's Representative, Francis M. Deng (Sudan), updated developments regarding the promotion, dissemination and application of the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement [YUN 1998, p. 675] and efforts to develop an institutional framework for internally displaced persons. He gave an overview of the progress made over the preceding decade and the remaining challenges in responding effectively to the global crisis of internal displacement, as well as the evolution of the international response and activities he had undertaken. Overall, he said, important progress had been made, as reflected particularly in a heightened worldwide awareness of the problem, the development and increasing use of the Guiding Principles, the development of policies at the international, regional and national levels, and various improvements in institutional arrangements and response. However, internal displacement remained a worldwide crisis of epic proportions, affecting some 25 million people, of whom many were without adequate assistance and protection.

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/51], the Commission called on the High Commissioner, in cooperation with Governments, the Representative and other relevant parts of the UN system, to promote the rights of internally displaced persons, enhance their protection and develop projects to address their plight as part of the programme of technical cooperation and advisory services (see p. 678), and to provide information thereon to the Representative for inclusion in his report. The Representative was asked to continue to report on his activities and the Secretary-General to assist him.

Further reports of Representative. In Uganda (10-16 August) [E/CN.4/2004/77/Add.1], where an estimated 1.4 million persons had been displaced mainly by conflict between the Government and the Lord's Resistance Army, the Representative, among other things, consulted with the Government on a proposed national policy on internal displacement. The Representative said Uganda's internal displacement problem, largely neglected outside the country and described as a "forgotten crisis", was one of the world's gravest humanitarian crises, and recommended that the Government adopt its draft policy on the issue and ensure its quick and effective implementation. He further recommended that the Government consider all options for durable solutions and encouraged support by UN, international humanitarian and development organizations, and international donors and other actors.

The Representative summarized the proceedings of an experts' meeting on internal displacement (Khartoum, Sudan, 30 August-1 September) [E/CN.4/2004/77/Add.4], which he had organized in cooperation with the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) and the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, at which participants adopted recommendations that formed the basis for the Khartoum Declaration on Internally Displaced Persons in the IGAD Sub-region, adopted on 2 September by Ministers of IGAD member States (Djibouti, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya, Somalia, Sudan, Uganda).

The Representative visited the Russian Federation (7-13 September) [E/CN.4/2004/77/Add.2], where hundreds of thousands of persons had been displaced by the conflict in the Chechen Republic and other conflicts elsewhere in the Federation. In the Northern Caucasus (Chechnya and Ingushetia), the Representative engaged the Government, international agencies, NGOs and other relevant actors in a dialogue aimed at ensuring effective responses to internal displacement, and encouraged the various actors to make increased use of the Guiding Principles. The Representative recommended that all actors, particularly the Government, give due consideration to the programme of action adopted at the International Conference on Internal Displacement in the Russian Federation [YUN 2002, p. 761]. He proposed that the Government improve relations between ethnic and national groups in areas of integration, and guarantee that international humanitarian principles regarding the safety of humanitarian workers would be respected and upheld. Further areas for action were presented to the Governments of the Russian Federation, Ingushetia and Chechnya to improve the situation.

In a September report [A/58/393], submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 56/164 [YUN 2001, p. 654] and Commission resolution 2003/51 (see p. 793), the Representative further reviewed progress made in addressing the global crisis of internal displacement and outlined the challenges ahead. He noted that significant progress had been made with regard to norm-setting, institutional arrangements and operational responses to the needs of the internally displaced, but that the most progress had been made on the Principles, which were widely accepted. However, there remained a disturbing gap between expressed commitments and actual national and international action. There was a need, said the Representative, for a more thorough appraisal of the system of assistance and protection, and its operations.

Communication. On 14 March [E/CN.4/2003/G/56], Mexico transmitted its comments regarding the Representative's report on his visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 760].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/177 without vote [agenda item 117 (b)].

Protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons

The General Assembly,

Deeply disturbed by the alarmingly high numbers of internally displaced persons throughout the world, for reasons including armed conflict, violations of human rights and natural or human-made disasters, who receive inadequate protection and assistance, and conscious of the serious challenges that this is creating for the international community,

Conscious of the human rights and the humanitarian dimensions of the problem of internally displaced persons and the responsibilities of States and the international community to strengthen further their protection and assistance,

Emphasizing that States have the primary responsibility to provide protection and assistance to internally displaced persons within their jurisdiction as well as to address the root causes of the displacement problem in cooperation with the international community,

Noting the growing awareness of the international community of the issue of internally displaced persons worldwide and the urgency of addressing the root causes of their displacement and finding durable solutions, including voluntary return in safety and with dignity, or local integration,

Recalling the relevant norms of international human rights law, international humanitarian law and international refugee law, and recognizing that the protection of internally displaced persons has been strengthened by identifying, reaffirming and consolidating specific standards for their protection, in particular through the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement,

Emphasizing the central role of the Emergency Relief Coordinator for the inter-agency coordination of protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons, and welcoming initiatives taken in order to ensure better protection, assistance and development strategies for internally displaced persons, as well as better coordination of activities regarding them,

Commending the Representative of the Secretary-General on internally displaced persons for the activities undertaken so far, for the catalytic role that he plays in raising the level of consciousness about the plight of internally displaced persons and for his efforts to promote a comprehensive strategy that focuses on prevention as well as better protection and assistance and addressing the development needs of internally displaced persons,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/51 of 23 April 2003, and recalling the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, regarding the need to develop global strategies to address the problem of internal displacement,

Deploing practices of forced displacement and their negative consequences for the enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms by large groups of populations, and noting that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court defines the deportation or forcible transfer of population as a crime against humanity and the unlawful deportation or transfer of the civilian population, as well as ordering the displacement of the civilian population, as war crimes,

Noting the increasing dissemination, promotion and application of the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement when dealing with situations of internal displacement,

Welcoming the cooperation established between the Representative of the Secretary-General and the United Nations and other international and regional organizations, and encouraging further strengthening of this collaboration in order to promote better protection, assistance and development strategies for internally displaced persons,

Acknowledging with appreciation the important and independent contribution of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement and other humanitarian agencies in protecting and assisting internally displaced persons, in cooperation with relevant international bodies,

Recalling its resolution 56/164 of 19 December 2001,

1. Welcomes the report of the Representative of the Secretary-General on internally displaced persons;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations that have provided protection and assistance to internally displaced persons and have supported the work of the Representative of the Secretary-General;

3. Encourages the Representative of the Secretary-General, through continuous dialogue with Governments and all intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned, to continue his analysis of the causes of internal displacement, the needs and rights of those displaced, measures of prevention and ways to strengthen protection, assistance and solutions for internally displaced persons, taking into account specific situations, and to include information thereon in his reports to the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly;

4. Expresses particular concern at the grave problems faced by many internally displaced women and children, including violence and abuse, sexual exploitation, forced recruitment and abduction, and welcomes the commitment of the Representative of the Secretary-General to pay more systematic and in-depth attention to their particular assistance, protection and development needs, as well as to other groups with special needs such as older persons and persons with disabilities, taking into account the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and bearing in mind Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000;

5. Notes with appreciation the increasing role of national human rights institutions in assisting internally displaced persons and in promoting and protecting their human rights;

6. Notes the importance of taking the human rights and the specific protection and assistance needs of internally displaced persons into consideration, when appropriate, in peace processes and reintegration and rehabilitation processes;

7. Expresses its appreciation of the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement as an important tool for dealing with situations of internal displacement, welcomes the fact that an increasing number of States, United Nations agencies and regional and non-governmental organizations are applying them as a standard, and encourages all relevant actors to make use of the Guiding Principles when dealing with situations of internal displacement;

8. Welcomes the fact that the Representative of the Secretary-General continues to use the Guiding Principles in his dialogue with Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and other relevant actors, and requests him to continue his efforts to further the dissemination, promotion and application of the Guiding Principles;

9. Urges all Governments to continue to facilitate the activities of the Representative of the Secretary-General, in particular Governments with situations of internal displacement, and to give serious consideration to inviting the Representative to visit their countries so as to enable him to study and analyse more fully the issues involved, and thanks those Governments that have already done so;

10. Invites Governments to give serious consideration, in dialogic with the Representative of the Secretary-General, to the recommendations and suggestions addressed to them, in accordance with his mandate, and to inform him of measures taken thereon;

11. Calls upon Governments to provide protection and assistance, including reintegration and development assistance, to internally displaced persons, and to facilitate the efforts of relevant United Nations agencies and humanitarian organizations in these respects, including by further improving access to internally displaced persons;

12. Emphasizes the central role of the Emergency Relief Coordinator for the inter-agency coordination of protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons, notes the work of the Internal Displacement Unit within the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, and encourages further strengthening of the collaboration with the Representative of the Secretary-General in line with the memorandum of understanding of 17 April 2002 between the Representative and the Emergency Relief Coordinator;

13. Emphasizes also the need to strengthen further inter-agency arrangements and the capacities of the United Nations agencies and other relevant actors to meet the immense humanitarian challenges of internal displacement, and underlines in this regard the importance of an effective, accountable and predictable collaborative approach;

14. Encourages all relevant United Nations agencies and humanitarian assistance, human rights and development organizations to enhance further their collaboration and coordination, through the Inter-Agency Standing Committee and in countries with situations of internal displacement, and to provide all possible assistance and support to the Representative of the Secretary-General;

15. Notes with appreciation the increased attention paid to the issue of internally displaced persons in the consolidated inter-agency appeals process, and encourages further efforts in this regard;

16. Recognizes the relevance of the global database on internally displaced persons advocated by the Representative of the Secretary-General, and encourages the members of the Inter-Agency Standing Committee and Governments to continue to collaborate and support this effort, including by providing relevant data on situations of internal displacement and financial resources;

17. Welcomes the initiatives undertaken by regional organizations, such as the African Union, the Organization of American States, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development, the Council of Europe, the Commonwealth and the Economic Community of West African States, to address the protection, assistance and development needs of internally displaced persons, and encourages them and other regional organizations to strengthen their activities and their cooperation with the Representative of the Secretary-General;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to provide his Representative, from within existing resources, with all necessary assistance to carry out his mandate effectively, and encourages the Representative to continue to seek the contributions of States, relevant organizations and institutions in order to create a more stable basis for his work;

19. Requests the Representative of the Secretary-General to prepare, for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

20. Decides to continue its consideration of the question of protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons at its sixtieth session.

Housing and property restitution

Commission action. On 24 April [dec. 2003/109], the Commission endorsed the Subcommittee's 2002 decision [YUN 2002, p. 761] to appoint Paulo Sérgio Pinheiro (Brazil) as Special Rapporteur to prepare a comprehensive study on housing and property restitution in the context of the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and its request to him to submit a preliminary report in 2003, a progress report in 2004 and a final report in 2005.

The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision on 23 July (decision 2003/266).

Report of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Subcommittee request [YUN 2002, p. 761], the Special Rapporteur on housing and property restitution, Mr. Pinheiro, submitted a June preliminary report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/11] on a study on housing and property restitution in the context of the return of refugees and internally displaced persons. The report presented an overview of selected housing and property restitution programmes, instituted as a result of internal conflict and mass displacement, such as those in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Georgia, Guatemala, Kosovo (Serbia and Montenegro) and Rwanda. It illustrated that the programmes had been used in many post-conflict situations, and, when properly implemented, were indispensable to creating a durable peace. However, success was varied, mostly because of the lack of a comprehensive approach, governed by international human rights law. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Subcommittee develop, in consultation with relevant UN agencies and organs, Governments and NGOs, universal principles and guidelines, and a model policy on housing and property restitution for refugees and other displaced persons.

Subcommittee action. On 13 August [res. 2003/18], the Subcommittee urged States to ensure the free and fair exercise of the right to return to one's home and place of habitual residence by all refugees and internally displaced persons and to develop effective and expeditious legal, administrative and other procedures to ensure the exercise of the right.

Indigenous people

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 763], the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous people, Rodolfo Stavenhagen (Mexico), submitted a January report [E/CN.4/2003/90] on the impact of large-scale or major development projects on the human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous communities. He said that sometimes the projects were beneficial, but very often they were devastating and related to the loss of traditional territories and land, eviction, migration and eventual resettlement, depletion of resources necessary for physical and cultural survival, destruction and pollution of the traditional environment, social and community disorganization, long-term negative health and nutritional impacts, and, in some cases, harassment and violence. The Special Rapporteur advocated that indigenous peoples participate freely as equal partners and citizens in the decision-making processes that affected their future survival as specific peoples. Their voices should be heard and their demands and grievances met when major decisions were taken at national and international levels regarding development priorities and resource allocation.

In a later report [E/CN.4/2004/80/Add.1], the Special Rapporteur summarized communications he had sent to Governments and replies received during the year. He transmitted 20 urgent appeals and 11 letters alleging violations of indigenous peoples' rights to 12 Governments, some of which were sent jointly with other thematic and country mechanisms. He had received replies pertaining to 22 of a total of 31 cases addressed. The Special Rapporteur noted an increase in the number and substance of communications he had received, as well as severe human rights violations against indigenous peoples worldwide. He was particularly concerned about the status of indigenous women and children.

The Special Rapporteur visited Mexico (1-18 June) [E/CN.4/2004/80/Add.2], where the indigenous population, estimated at 13 million and comprising 62 ethnic groups, accounted for about 12 per cent of the total population and resided mostly in the poorest parts of the country. Current violations of their rights frequently occurred during periods of high tension and dispute. Notable problems related to agrarian conflicts involving the question of land and resources; political disputes regarding the exercise of power and access to public resources; discrimination in the justice system; the conflict in the state of Chiapas; the situation of indigenous women, children and migrants; education, language and culture; and constitutional reform and reconciliation. The Special Rapporteur concluded that, despite Mexico's long history of pro-indigenous policy, accumulated setbacks suffered by the indigenous population placed them at a disadvantage in relation to the rest of the population. He recommended measures for improving indigenous peoples' status, with regard to issues concerning constitutional legislation, the Chiapas peace process, the ILO Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention (Convention No. 169), adopted in 1957 [YUN 1957, p. 428], revised in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 917] and which entered into force in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 936], agrarian and environmental conflicts, internally displaced persons, the justice system, militarization and armed groups, indigenous migrants, education and culture, as well as the role of OHCHR and relevant UN agencies.

In Chile (18-29 July) [E/CN.4/2004/80/Add.3], which had an indigenous population of some 700,000 persons comprising 4.6 per cent of the total population, the Special Rapporteur, while noting the Government's readiness to cooperate with the international community in addressing questions concerning indigenous populations' rights, said that there were some human rights issues of grave concern. He drew attention to the failure to monitor and deal properly with the needs of indigenous communities in terms of their economic, social and cultural rights, and highlighted a situation of vulnerability and extreme poverty. Recommendations to the Government related to legislation and other legal measures, poverty reduction, land acquisition, sustainable development, the administration of justice, educational and social policy, publicizing indigenous issues in order to combat discrimination and the establishment of a national institution for the promotion and protection of human rights. Additional recommendations were addressed to the international community, civil society, the media and the academic community.

The Special Rapporteur visited Copenhagen, Denmark (6-7 October) [E/CN.4/2004/80/Add.1], where he focused on the right to return of the relocated Inughuit in Greenland, forcibly moved from their ancestral lands in 1953 to make way for the construction of an air base, and on the country's legal system and the administration of justice.

In Norway and Finland (10-14 October), the Special Rapporteur considered the situation of Sami communities, the original indigenous inhabitants of northern Scandinavia, residing in the polar region extending from Norway, Sweden and Finland to the Kola Peninsula in the Russian Federation. In Norway, a major concern related to a proposed land-management bill—the Finnmark Act—under consideration in the Norwegian Parliament, which was not in compliance with ILO Convention No. 169. In Finland, where the Sami population numbered some 6,500 persons, the Special Rapporteur found that, under Finnish law, the Sami did not have any special rights to use public land for securing their livelihoods. They claimed that their culture was being destroyed, demanded the return of their lands and protested the increasing presence of and ownership of land by tourists in the area.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/56], the Commission requested the Special Rapporteur to request, receive and exchange information on violations of indigenous people's rights from Governments, UN human rights treaty bodies, specialized agencies, Commission and Subcommission special mechanisms, intergovernmental organizations, relevant UN system organizations and civil society, and to respond to the information; to consider the recommendations of the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615], of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues (see p. 803) and of the Working Group on Indigenous Populations (see below); to continue working on the topics included in his first report [YUN 2002, p. 762]; and to report in 2004. The Secretary-General and the High Commissioner were asked to assist him. The Commission took note of the intention of OHCHR to organize, with the participation of governmental, indigenous, non-governmental and independent experts, a seminar on the administration of justice (see below) to assist the Special Rapporteur in examining the main topic of his annual report for 2004.

Expert seminar. The Special Rapporteur transmitted to the Commission the report of the expert seminar on indigenous peoples and the administration of justice (Madrid, Spain, 12-14 November) [E/CN.4/2004/80/Add.4], organized by OHCHR in cooperation with the National University for Distance Education in Madrid, pursuant to Commission resolution 2003/56 (see above). The experts discussed issues relating to discrimination against indigenous peoples in the judicial system and indigenous peoples' own legal systems. They concluded that indigenous peoples' rights were often violated within judicial systems, particularly regarding indigenous women and children, and identified the causes of the problem. The experts adopted recommendations addressed to Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies and human rights mechanisms, and indigenous peoples.

Communication. On 13 February [E/CN.4/2003/G/59], Guatemala stated that, while the Special Rapporteur's report on his visit to the country [YUN 2002, p. 762] contained many elements reflecting the reality of the situation of the rights of indigenous peoples, it did not constitute a fair assessment of the Government's efforts.

Working Group on Indigenous Populations

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/55], by a recorded vote of 34 to 15, with 4 abstentions, the Commission, noting that the respective mandates of the Working Group on Indigenous Populations (see below), the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues (see p. 803) and the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous people were complementary and did not give rise to duplication, recommended that the Economic and Social Council, in 2003, take into account the contents of its current resolution when reviewing existing UN mechanisms, procedures and programmes regarding indigenous issues. It endorsed the recommendations contained in the Subcommission's 2002 resolutions [YUN 2002, p. 764].

Also on 24 April [res. 2003/58], the Commission recommended that the Council authorize the Group to meet for five working days prior to the Subcommission's 2003 session.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/254 by recorded vote (52-1-1) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Working Group on Indigenous Populations of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights and the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/58 of 24 April 2003, and authorized the Working Group on Indigenous Populations to meet for five working days prior to the fifty-fifth session of the Subcommission.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/254:

In favour: Andorra, Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Sweden, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia.

Working Group activities. The Working Group on Indigenous Populations held its twenty-first session (Geneva, 21-25 July) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/22] to review developments pertaining to the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous populations and to give special attention to the evolution of standards regarding their rights. In annotations to the provisional agenda [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/1/Add.1], the Secretariat presented background information on indigenous peoples and globalization; cooperation with other UN bodies regarding indigenous issues; follow-up to the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615]; the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People (1995-2004) (see p. 800); and standard-setting activities.

The Group had before it May working papers on the possible development of draft guidelines relating to TNCs whose activities affected indigenous communities [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/5] and on cooperation between the Special Rapporteur and the Group [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/7], both submitted by Yozo Yokota (Japan). It also considered a list with commentaries on possible studies to be undertaken by the Group, prepared by Miguel Alfonso Martínez (Cuba) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/4], working papers on globalization and the economic, social and cultural rights of indigenous populations, submitted by Mr. Guissé [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/14], and on ways and means of developing cooperation between the Group and the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, prepared by Mr. Martínez [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/8], a list of standard-setting activities that could be considered by the Group, submitted by Ms. Motoc [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/3], and a note by the Secretariat on follow-up to the 2001 World Conference. It further considered a report on a workshop (Washington, D.C., 19-20 February) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/10], organized by OHCHR, which reviewed indigenous peoples' participation at the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] and discussed a rights-based approach to sustainable development. Regarding the session's principal theme—indigenous peoples and globalization—the Group considered a Secretariat note [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/2], which highlighted related themes such as migration/urbanization, communication/technology and culture, poverty, development policies, and trade and intellectual property.

In its recommendations, the Group decided to maintain on its agenda for 2004 a sub-item on globalization and indigenous peoples, to allow for a follow-up discussion on the issue, and asked Mr. Guissé to submit in 2004 a supplementary working paper on the topic that would provide an outline for a possible future study; invited OHCHR to organize a second workshop on indigenous peoples, mining companies and human rights, the first having been held in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 688], with a view to preparing guidelines for companies when planning activities on indigenous peoples' lands; and recommended to the coordinator of the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People that OHCHR organize an international seminar at the end of the Decade in December 2004 to evaluate the Decade and determine the extent to which the Programme of Action had been implemented. In other action, the Group invited Ms. Motoc to prepare a preliminary working paper as a basis for a future standard-setting activity; decided to start at its 2004 session a review of the 1995 draft principles and guidelines on the heritage of indigenous people, developed by Erica-Irene A. Daes (Greece) [YUN 1995, p. 780]; and requested Mr. Yokota to prepare a working paper on possible approaches to the issue. It decided to adopt as the principal theme for its 2004 session indigenous peoples and conflict resolution, asked its Chairperson/Rapporteur to prepare a background paper on the topic and invited Governments, indigenous peoples, the UN system and NGOs to provide relevant information on the theme. The Group decided to invite WTO, WIPO and the World Bank to present at its 2004 session their work relevant to indigenous peoples.

Subcommission action. On 14 August [res. 2003/29], the Subcommission asked the Secretary-General to transmit the Working Group's report on its 2003 session to the High Commissioner, indigenous organizations, Governments, inter-governmental organizations, concerned NGOs, treaty bodies and all thematic rapporteurs, special representatives, independent experts and working groups, and asked that it be made available to the Commission in 2004. It recommended that the Group, upon request, assist the open-ended intersessional working group to elaborate further the draft UN declaration on the rights of indigenous people (see p. 802). The Subcommission decided that the Group, in 2004, should adopt as its principal theme "Indigenous peoples and conflict resolution" and review the revised draft principles and guidelines on the heritage of indigenous people elaborated by Ms. Daes. It decided on the Group's agenda for 2004 and agreed with the Group's decision to establish as principal themes for its 2005 and 2006 sessions "Domestic and international protection of indigenous traditional knowledge" and "Indigenous children and youth", respectively. The Subcommission called for working papers in 2004 from: Mr. Yokota, to serve as a guideline for the review of the draft principles and guidelines; Mr. Guissé, on globalization and indigenous peoples; Ms. Motoc, on the principle of free, prior and informed consent of indigenous people in relation to development affecting their land and natural resources that would serve as a framework for the drafting of a legal commentary on that concept; Ms. Hampson, on possible follow-up by the Group on the human rights situation of indigenous peoples in States and territories threatened with extinction for environmental reasons; and

Mr. Martínez, on indigenous peoples and conflict resolution. The Secretary-General was asked to prepare an annotated agenda for the 2004 session. OHCHR was asked to organize, as a matter of priority and in consultation with the Group's Chairperson/Rapporteur, a second workshop on indigenous peoples, mining and other private sector companies and human rights; to invite Governments, intergovernmental and indigenous organizations and NGOs to provide information and data relevant to the Group's 2004 agenda, particularly on the principal theme; to organize, in consultation with interested Governments, meetings on indigenous issues in different parts of the world to provide greater opportunity for indigenous peoples' participation and to raise public awareness about issues affecting them, particularly in Africa, Asia, Oceania and Latin America; and to encourage studies with respect to the rights to food and adequate nutrition of indigenous peoples, and indigenous peoples and poverty. The Subcommission emphasized that the Economic and Social Council, in reviewing all UN mechanisms relating to indigenous peoples, take into account the fact that the mandates of the Group, the Special Rapporteur and the Permanent Forum were distinct and complementary. It requested the Commission to endorse that view, as well as the participation of the Group's Chairperson/Rapporteur at the Forum's third session, and recommended that the Council approve the participation and that the Commission request the Council to authorize the Group to meet for five working days prior to the Subcommission's 2004 session.

Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations

The Board of Trustees of the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations, at its sixteenth session (Geneva, 31 March–4 April) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/12], recommended travel grants totalling $144,000 to enable 80 representatives of indigenous communities and organizations to attend the Working Group on Indigenous Populations (see p. 798), and other travel grants amounting to $41,000 to allow 15 indigenous representatives to attend the working group on the draft UN declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples (see p. 802). The Board's recommendations were approved by the High Commissioner on the Secretary-General's behalf on 9 April and 6 May. Annexed to the report was a list of beneficiaries.

Subcommission action. On 14 August [res. 2003/29], the Subcommission appealed to Governments, organizations, NGOs, indigenous groups and other potential donors in a position to do so to contribute to the Fund.

International Decade of the World's Indigenous People

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/58], the Commission invited the Working Group to continue its review of activities undertaken during the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People (1995–2004), proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 48/163 [YUN 1993, p. 865]. The High Commissioner, in his capacity as coordinator of the Decade, was asked to submit in 2004 an updated annual report on activities within the UN system under the Decade's programme of activities (see p. 801), to ensure that OHCHR's indigenous people's unit was adequately staffed and resourced, and to give due regard to developing human rights training for indigenous people. UN financial and development institutions, operational programmes and specialized agencies were asked to give increased priority and resources to improving the conditions of indigenous people; launch special projects to strengthen their community-level initiatives and facilitate the exchange of information and expertise among indigenous people and other relevant experts; and designate focal points or other mechanisms to coordinate with the High Commissioner activities relating to the Decade. The Commission recommended that the situation of indigenous people be taken into account in forthcoming relevant UN conferences, including the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857), and requested the Secretary-General to begin implementing the evaluation of the Decade, as called for by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615]. The Commission requested the Economic and Social Council, within the context of the Council's intended review of all existing UN mechanisms, procedures and programmes concerning indigenous issues, to take into account the views expressed by Governments, NGOs, indigenous people's organizations, the Permanent Forum and all existing mechanisms, the Working Group and the Subcommission.

On 25 April [dec. 2003/117], the Commission, taking note of a 2002 Subcommission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 766], recommended that the Council request the High Commissioner to organize, before the Decade's end, a seminar on treaties, agreements and other constructive arrangements between States and indigenous peoples to explore possible ways to follow up on the recommendations contained in the 1999 report of the Special Rapporteur [YUN 1999, p. 686].

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision

2003/271 by recorded vote (50-1-3) [agenda item 14 (g)].

International Decade of the World's Indigenous People

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights decision 2003/117 of 25 April 2003, and endorsed the Commission's recommendation that it request the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to organize, before the end of the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People, a seminar on treaties, agreements and other constructive arrangements between States and indigenous peoples to explore possible ways and means to follow up on the recommendations included in the final report of the Special Rapporteur, Mr. Miguel Alfonso Martínez.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/271:

In favour: Andorra, Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Senegal, South Africa, Sweden, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Qatar, Saudi Arabia.

Note by Secretary-General. In August [A/58/289], the Secretary-General summarized implementation of the Decade's programme of activities undertaken by OHCHR during the period from August 2002 to July 2003. Of particular note were the second session of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues (see p. 803), the twenty-first (2003) session of the Working Group (see p. 798) and the activities undertaken by the Special Rapporteur (see p. 796). OHCHR continued to promote inter-agency cooperation and the mainstreaming of indigenous rights into technical cooperation programmes. Other ongoing programmes included a joint research project with UN-Habitat on indigenous peoples and their housing rights and the Indigenous Fellowship Programme.

Subcommission action. On 14 August [res. 2003/30], the Subcommission, welcoming the observance in 2003 of the International Day of the World's Indigenous People (24 July), recommended that it be held on the fourth day of the Working Group's 2004 session to ensure as large a participation of indigenous peoples as possible. It recommended that the Decade's coordinator appeal to Governments and other donors to contribute to the Voluntary Fund for the Decade (see below), and that attention be given to improving the extent of indigenous peoples' participation in planning and implementing the Decade's activities. It also recommended that the High Commissioner, in consultation with interested Governments, organize meetings, particularly in Africa, Asia, Oceania and Latin America, prior to the completion of the Decade, to raise public awareness about indigenous issues, and organize an international seminar at the Decade's end to evaluate its impact and to recommend future action in relation to indigenous peoples. The Subcommission further recommended that a second international decade of the world's indigenous people be proclaimed by the General Assembly, which would focus on promoting and protecting their rights.

Report of High Commissioner. A November report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2004/79] reviewed UN activities undertaken to implement the programme for the Decade. OHCHR held the Indigenous Fellowship Programme (28 April–3 October) for five fellows from Burundi, Chile, India, Indonesia and the United States, and cooperated with the University of Deusto (Bilbao, Spain) to provide training for five additional indigenous fellows from Bolivia, Colombia, Guatemala, Paraguay and Venezuela, and with the University of Bourgogne (Dijon, France) to offer similar training to five fellows from Algeria, Canada, Morocco and the Niger. The report described activities regarding inter-agency cooperation on indigenous issues and the work of the Voluntary Fund for the Decade (see below) and the Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations (see p. 800).

Voluntary Fund for International Decade

The Advisory Group of the United Nations Voluntary Fund for the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People, at its eighth session (Geneva, 7–11 April) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/13], recommended 46 project grants, which were approved for a total of $274,000, and the allocation of $46,600 on a contingency basis for programmes to be implemented by the indigenous projects team, of which $12,000 would be spent on a community-led human rights training programme and $34,600 for the participation of 10 indigenous representatives in a seminar on indigenous peoples and the administration of justice. It proposed to the High Commissioner that the cost of workshops and seminars be met from OHCHR's regular budget and extrabudgetary resources, and that, subject to the availability of funds, a minimum of $50,000 be set aside for organizing at least one workshop or seminar for the remaining year of the Decade. Based on requests received and activities financed in 2003, the Group recommended a minimum allocation of $200,000 for new projects and programmes in 2004.

Draft declaration

Working group activities. The working group established to elaborate a draft declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples, at its eighth session (Geneva, 2-13 December 2002) [E/CN.4/AC.4/2003/92], focused on articles relating to the rights to self-determination; treaties, agreements and other constructive arrangements concluded with States; lands, territories and other resources; cultural and intellectual property; not to be subjected to ethnocide and genocide; their distinct identities and characteristics; and special protection and security in periods of armed conflict. A lack of consensus persisted within the group regarding the term "indigenous peoples". Annexed to the report was a compilation of amendments put forth by States, indigenous representatives and one NGO on the articles examined. An addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2003/92/Add.1] contained the articles, which were discussed and supported by all indigenous organizations, and information on participating Governments and NGOs and on working papers and background documents considered by the group.

On 1 May (decision 2003/218), the Economic and Social Council, in accordance with its resolution 1995/32 [YUN 1995, p. 777], authorized three indigenous organizations (Chickaloon Village Traditional Council, Indigenous Peoples and Nations Coalition, United Native Nations) to participate in the group's work.

At its ninth session (Geneva, 15-26 September) [E/CN.4/2004/81], the working group continued to discuss various proposed amendments or new language for 26 of the articles contained in the draft declaration, of which a summary was annexed to the report. An addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2004/81/Add.1] listed the documents considered and the participants who attended. It contained the text of the articles discussed and supported by all indigenous organizations and a proposal submitted by one indigenous organization.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 2003/57], the Commission recommended that the group meet for 10 working days prior to its 2004 session and asked the group to report in 2004.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council authorized the group to meet (decision 2003/253).

Note by Secretariat. A June note [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/2003/6] of the Secretariat stated that, as at 4 June, it had not received the working paper containing commentaries on the most important provisions of the draft declaration, which the Subcommittee had entrusted Ms. Hampson to prepare [YUN 2002, p. 765].

Subcommission action. On 14 August [res. 2003/30], the Subcommission recommended the adoption of the draft declaration as early as possible, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/157 [YUN 1995, p. 772], and appealed to the group's participants and others concerned to accelerate its preparation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/505], adopted resolution 58/158 without vote [agenda item 114].

International Decade of the World's Indigenous PeopleThe General Assembly,*

Recalling its resolution 57/192 of 18 December 2002 and previous resolutions on the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People, including resolution 50/157 of 21 December 1995, by which it adopted the programme of activities for the Decade,

Recalling also its resolution 40/131 of 13 December 1985, by which it established the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations, and its resolution 57/191 of 18 December 2002, as a result of which the Trust Fund in Support of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues was established,

Recalling further that the goal of the Decade is to strengthen international cooperation for the solution of problems faced by indigenous people in such areas as human rights, the environment, development, education and health, and that the theme of the Decade is "Indigenous people: partnership in action",

Welcoming, in this respect, the contributions to the realization of the goals of the Decade made by the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues at its first and second sessions, held in New York from 13 to 24 May 2002 and from 12 to 23 May 2003, respectively,

Welcoming also the contributions to the realization of the goals of the Decade made by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held at Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, and the World Summit on Sustainable Development, held at Johannesburg, South Africa, from 26 August to 4 September 2002,

Welcoming further the reports of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous people, submitted to the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-eighth and fifty-ninth sessions,

Recognizing the importance of consultation and cooperation with indigenous people in planning and implementing the programme of activities for the Decade, the need for adequate financial support from the international community, including support from within the United Nations system, and the need for adequate coordination and communication channels,

Urging all parties to continue to use their best efforts to achieve the goals of the Decade,

1. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the implementation of the programme of activities for the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People;

2. Affirms its conviction of the value and diversity of the cultures and forms of social organization of indigenous people and its conviction that the development of indigenous people within their countries will contribute to the socio-economic, cultural and environmental advancement of all the countries of the world;

3. Emphasizes the importance of strengthening the human and institutional capacity of indigenous people to develop their own solutions to their problems;

4. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, as coordinator for the Decade:

(a) To continue to promote the objectives of the Decade, taking into account, in the fulfilment of his or her functions, the special concerns of indigenous people;

(b) To give due regard to the dissemination, from within existing resources and voluntary contributions, of information on the situation, cultures, languages, rights and aspirations of indigenous people and, in that context, to consider the possibility of organizing projects, special events, exhibitions and other activities addressed to the public, in particular to young people;

(c) To submit, through the Secretary-General, an annual report to the General Assembly on the implementation of the programme of activities for the Decade;

5. Reaffirms the adoption of a declaration on the rights of indigenous people as a major objective of the Decade, and underlines the importance of effective participation by indigenous representatives in the open-ended intersessional working group of the Commission on Human Rights charged with elaborating a draft declaration on the rights of indigenous people, established pursuant to Commission resolution 1995/32 of 3 March 1995;

6. Welcomes the active consideration by the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues of a number of topics pertaining to the Decade, as reflected in its report to the Economic and Social Council on its second session, and encourages the Forum to continue to work towards the realization of the goals of the Decade;

7. Encourages Governments to support the Decade by:

(a) Preparing relevant programmes, plans and reports in relation to the Decade, in consultation with indigenous people;

(b) Seeking means, in consultation with indigenous people, of giving indigenous people greater responsibility for their own affairs and an effective voice in decisions on matters that affect them;

(c) Establishing national committees or other mechanisms involving indigenous people to ensure that the objectives and activities of the Decade are planned and implemented on the basis of full partnership with indigenous people;

(d) Contributing to the following funds:

(i) The United Nations Trust Fund for the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People;

(ii) The United Nations Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations, in order to assist indigenous representatives in participating in the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, the Working Group on Indigenous Populations of the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights and the open-ended intersessional working group of the Commission on Human Rights charged with elaborating a draft declaration on the rights of indigenous people;

(iii) The Trust Fund in Support of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues;

(iv) The Fund for the Development of Indigenous Peoples in Latin America and the Caribbean;

(e) Identifying resources for activities designed to implement the goals of the Decade, in cooperation with indigenous people and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations;

8. Invites United Nations financial and development institutions, operational programmes and the specialized agencies and secretariats, as well as other regional and international organizations, in accordance with the existing procedures of their governing bodies:

(a) To give increased priority and resources to improving the conditions of indigenous people, with particular emphasis on the needs of those people in developing countries, inter alia, through the preparation of specific programmes of action for the implementation of the goals of the Decade, within their areas of competence;

(b) To launch special projects, through appropriate channels and in cooperation with indigenous people, to strengthen their community-level initiatives and to facilitate the exchange of information and expertise among indigenous people and other relevant experts;

(c) To designate focal points for the coordination of activities relating to the Decade with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights; and commends those institutions, programmes, agencies and regional and international organizations that have already done so;

9. Recommends that the Secretary-General ensure coordinated follow-up to the recommendations concerning indigenous people of relevant United Nations conferences;

10. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to submit, through the Secretary-General, a report on the implementation of the programme of activities for the Decade to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

11. Takes note of Economic and Social Council decision 2003/306 of 25 July 2003 concerning the initiation of its review of the Decade, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 50/157;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Programme of activities for the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People, 1995-2004".

Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues

Commission action. On 24 April [dec. 2003/111], the Commission, taking note of a 2002 Subcommission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 769], approved the Subcommission's invitation to the Chairperson/Rapporteur of the Working Group on Indigenous Populations to attend the second session of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues (see p. 803) and recommended that the Economic and Social Council endorse its decision.

Note by Secretariat. By a 22 April note [E/2003/52], the Secretariat transmitted to the Economic and Social Council the provisional agenda for the second session of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues for review and approval.

On 1 May, the Council approved the provisional agenda (decision 2003/219).

Permanent Forum session. The 16-member Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, established by Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/22 [YUN 2000, p. 731] to address indigenous issues relating to economic and social development, the environment, health, education and culture, and human rights, at its second session (New York, 12-23 May) [E/2003/43], considered the theme, "Indigenous children and youth". It recommended seven draft decisions for adoption by the Council (see below). Matters brought to the Council's attention were indigenous children and youth, economic and social development, the environment, health, human rights, culture, education, the Forum's methods of work with the UN system and the future of its work.

An annex to the Forum's report listed the documents considered.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 July, the Council authorized the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs to convene a three-day workshop on the collection of data concerning indigenous peoples, and decided that the workshop would produce a report containing recommendations for the Forum's consideration in 2004 (decision 2003/300); decided to consider indigenous issues as a theme for its high-level segment in 2006 (decision 2003/301); taking into account the importance for the Forum to be represented by its Chairperson or designated members at meetings of relevance to its mandate, confirmed such representation as one of the Forum's methods of work (decision 2003/302); taking note that the Forum had considered it useful to designate six members for its Bureau at its first and second sessions, confirmed the practice as a method of the Forum's work (decision 2003/303); decided that the Forum's third session would be held in New York from 10 to 21 May 2004 (decision 2003/304) and approved that session's provisional agenda and documentation (decision 2003/305); and decided to transmit to the General Assembly the Forum's recommendation regarding a second international decade of the world's indigenous people, with a view to initiating consideration of the decade, taking into account the forthcoming review by the Council, and further decided to initiate the review (decision 2003/306).

Review of existing mechanisms

Pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/22 [YUN 2000, p. 731], the Secretary-General, in a June report [E/2003/72], summarized information received from eight Governments, 21 NGOs and indigenous organizations, one member each of the Working Group on Indigenous Populations and of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, one official of an indigenous community and 20 UN system bodies and agencies, and other relevant intergovernmental organizations, in response to a questionnaire regarding the Council's planned review of all existing UN mechanisms, procedures and programmes concerning indigenous issues. The Secretary-General observed that the review, scheduled for 2003, should contribute to determining how best to promote and support the legitimate interests and concerns of indigenous peoples. The key objectives should be to avoid duplication of work, promote effectiveness and rationalize activities. It was important that UN work in that area be in line with the Organization's broader reform objectives, endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353].

The Secretary-General, in a July report [E/2003/CRP.3], summarized additional information received from UN system bodies and other intergovernmental organizations, and the actual questions posed by the questionnaires.

On 25 July (decision 2003/307), the Council decided to postpone consideration of the review and requested the Secretary-General to seek information related to the review from Governments, NGOs, indigenous peoples' organizations and relevant UN system organs and bodies, including the special mechanisms seized with indigenous issues that had not yet submitted their views. It also asked him to provide an analysis of elements contained in paragraph 8 of Council resolution 2000/22, which related to a review of all existing UN mechanisms, programmes and procedures regarding indigenous issues.

Study on treaties, agreements and other constructive arrangements

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 765], the High Commissioner, in a February report [E/CN.4/2003/91], summarized replies received as at 10 January from two Governments, four NGOs and one member of the Permanent Forum regarding the issues raised in a 1999 study on treaties, agreements and other constructive arrangements between States and indigenous populations [YUN 1999, p. 686].

Working paper. In July [E/2003/92], the Secretariat transmitted a working paper prepared by the Special Rapporteur on treaties, agreements and constructive arrangements between States and indigenous populations, Mr. Martínez, which contained suggestions in connection with a seminar on the topic, as called for in Commission decision 2003/117 (see p. 800). The paper reviewed a number of recommendations for follow-up action, put forth in the Special Rapporteur's 1999 study, and proposed issues for discussion at the seminar, including the possibility of undertaking a new study on the question of treaty-based relations between States and indigenous peoples; confidence-building steps to be taken by both indigenous and non-indigenous interested parties facing situations of potential or actual conflict; a review of ways of implementing other recommendations in the 1999 study; and preliminary consideration of other activities that might contribute to harmonious relations between indigenous and non-indigenous peoples.

Seminar. In response to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 766] and to Commission decision 2003/117 (see p. 800), the High Commissioner organized an expert seminar on treaties, agreements and other constructive arrangements between States and indigenous peoples (Geneva, 15-17 December) [E/CN.4/2004/111]. Participants considered that the treaties and agreements had not been respected. They recommended that States educate the public, and presented guidelines for conflict resolution on processes. Other recommendations were addressed to the Commission, working groups, treaty bodies and special procedures, UN bodies and specialized agencies and OHCHR.

Indigenous peoples' permanent sovereignty over natural resources

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 34 to 8, with 10 abstentions, the Commission, on 24 April [dec. 2003/110], taking note of a 2002 Subcommission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 771], endorsed the Subcommission's request to appoint Ms. Daes as Special Rapporteur to undertake a study on indigenous peoples' permanent sovereignty over natural resources, and its request to her to submit a preliminary report in 2003 and a final report in 2004, and to the Secretary-General to assist her.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/267 by recorded vote (36-12-6) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Indigenous peoples' permanent sovereignty over natural resources

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights decision 2003/110 of 24 April 2003 and endorsed the Commission's decisions:

(a) To approve the appointment of Ms. Erica-Irene Daes as Special Rapporteur to undertake a study on indigenous peoples' permanent sovereignty over natural resources, based on her working paper, and to request her to submit a preliminary report to the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights at its fifty-fifth session and her final report at its fifty-sixth session;

(b) To request the Secretary-General to provide the Special Rapporteur with all necessary assistance to enable her to carry out her study.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/267:

In favour: Argentina, Azerbaijan, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Georgia, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, India, Iran, Jamaica, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Uganda, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Finland, France, Germany, Hungary, Netherlands, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Sweden, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Brazil, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Romania.

Report of Special Rapporteur. As requested by the Subcommission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 771], the Special Rapporteur on indigenous peoples' permanent sovereignty over natural resources, Ms. Daes, submitted a July preliminary report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2003/20], which examined whether the term "sovereignty" could appropriately be used in reference to indigenous peoples and their natural resources within independent States. She determined that the term referred to legal governmental control and authority over resources, as an aspect of the exercise of self-determination. No State enjoyed unfettered sovereignty, as States' sovereignty was limited by treaties and customary international law. In legal principle, therefore, there was no objection to using the term in reference to indigenous peoples acting in their governmental capacity, but that capacity might be limited in various ways. It would create conceptual problems if the word "sovereignty" was removed from the long-established principle of permanent sovereignty over natural resources, said the Special Rapporteur. Annexed to the report was a preliminary selected bibliography, a list of relevant cases and a compilation of relevant international law standards.

Subcommission action. On 14 August [dec. 2003/113], the Subcommission requested the Secretary-General to transmit the Special Rapporteur's preliminary report to Governments, indigenous peoples' communities and organizations, specialized agencies, other intergovernmental organizations and NGOs concerned for comments, information and data that would be important for the Special Rapporteur in preparing her final report.

Persons with disabilities

Report of High Commissioner. In accordance with a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 772],

the High Commissioner, in a January report [E/CN.4/2003/88], reviewed progress made in implementing the recommendations contained in a 2002 study on human rights and disability [YUN 2002, p. 771]. The report summarized information received from 12 Governments on measures they had adopted to implement those recommendations, and highlighted action taken by treaty bodies, the Commission, national human rights institutions and NGOs. The report detailed OHCHR's efforts to implement the study's recommendations and its further activities regarding human rights and disability, including its contribution relating to proposals for a new convention on the human rights and dignity of persons with disabilities. Should the Commission decide to appoint a special rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, as recommended by the 2002 study, it was important to ensure complementarity with the Special Rapporteur on disability of the Commission for Social Development. The High Commissioner said it was vital that Governments, relevant UN bodies and organizations, national disability and human rights institutions, NGOs and independent experts contribute to the work of the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities established in General Assembly resolution 56/168 [YUN 2001, p. 1012] (see p. 1107).

Commission action. On 23 April [res. 2003/49], the Commission requested the Secretary-General to make the High Commissioner's January report (see above) available to the Ad Hoc Committee and to include in relevant reports to the General Assembly information on progress made to ensure the full recognition and enjoyment of the human rights of persons with disabilities. It called on OHCHR to report to the Commission in 2004. The Special Rapporteur on disability was invited to address the Commission in 2004 on the human rights dimension gained through monitoring the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 48/96 [YUN 1993, p. 978]. Governments were urged to cover the human rights of persons with disabilities in their reporting obligations under relevant UN human rights instruments, while UN organizations and agencies and intergovernmental institutions for development cooperation were called on to integrate disability measures into their activities and to reflect that in their reports.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 772], the Secretary-General submitted a July report with later addendum [A/58/181 & Add.1], which focused on the issue of procedural safeguards for persons with mental disabilities and aimed at clarifying the protection afforded them under international human rights law. The report was based on replies to a questionnaire, to which responses were received from 19 States, three UN bodies and several national human rights institutions. It analysed such issues as legal capacity, involuntary institutionalization and involuntary or forced treatment, and defined "mental disability" or "mental illness" to include persons with intellectual and psychiatric disabilities, individuals with no disability but who were subjected to discrimination on the perception that they had a mental illness and those with a background of past treatment or hospitalization as patients with a mental disability. The report concluded that a major obstacle to the implementation of existing human rights standards for persons with mental disabilities was the lack of specific guidelines. Although the Principles for the Protection of Persons with Mental Illness and for the Improvement of Mental Health Care, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 46/119 [YUN 1991, p. 620], provided a valuable starting point for clarifying the content of those standards, a more detailed analysis of the implementation of State human rights obligations regarding mental health institutions would be desirable. The Secretary-General proposed, among other measures, a review of the criteria set forth in principle 16 (1) for compulsory institutionalization, detailed monitoring of the implementation of the rights of persons with mental disabilities and the provision by Governments to the human rights treaty bodies of information on measures adopted regarding the norms in their periodic report.

In resolution 58/246 of 23 December, the General Assembly encouraged Member States and observers to participate actively in the Ad Hoc Committee in order to present to the Assembly the draft text of a convention (see p. 1108).

People with HIV/AIDS

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 772], the Secretary-General, in a January report and February addendum [E/CN.4/2003/48 & Add.1], summarized information received from 16 States, four UN bodies, three NGOs and one intergovernmental organization on steps they had taken to promote access to medication in the context of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS. The Secretary-General said that, although some countries had succeeded in slowing the spread of the disease, much more needed to be done to ensure the highest attainable standard of health for people living with and affected by it, including through greater access to medication and a comprehensive approach to prevention, treatment, care and support.

In another January report [E/CN.4/2003/81], submitted in response to a 2001 Commission request [YUN 2001, p. 695], the Secretary-General summarized further comments received from Governments, UN bodies, national human rights institutions and NGOs regarding steps they had taken to promote and implement the Guidelines on HIV/AIDS and Human Rights, recommended by the experts who participated in the Second International Consultation on the topic [YUN 1996, p. 617]. The Secretary-General acknowledged that positive steps had been taken at the national and international levels towards ensuring respect for human rights in the context of HIV/AIDS. Legislation had been adopted in some countries to prohibit discrimination against people living with the disease, and policies and strategies had been developed to promote access to prevention, treatment, care and support for those affected. Moreover, Governments had committed themselves to addressing the root causes of vulnerability to HIV infection and had pledged international cooperation and assistance to ensure respect for the human rights of people affected by the disease.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 2003/29], the Commission called on States, in furtherance of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS adopted in General Assembly resolution S-26/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1126], to address factors affecting the provision of drugs related to the treatment of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS. It asked the Secretary-General to solicit comments from Governments, UN organs, programmes and specialized agencies, international organizations and NGOs on steps they had taken to promote and implement the Commission's current resolution, and to report in 2004.

On 23 April [res. 2003/47], the Commission asked its special representatives, special rapporteurs and working groups to integrate the protection of HIV-related human rights within their respective mandates. The Secretary-General was requested to solicit comments from Governments, UN organs, programmes and specialized agencies, international organizations and NGOs on steps taken to promote and implement the Guidelines on HIV/AIDS and Human Rights and to report in 2005.

In resolution 58/179 (see p. 1253), the Assembly called on States to refrain from taking measures that would deny or limit equal access for all persons to preventive, curative or palliative pharmaceutical products or medical technologies used to treat HIV/AIDS.

Chapter III

Human rights violations

Alleged violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in a number of countries were examined in 2003 by the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, the Commission on Human Rights and its Subcommittee on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, as well as by special rapporteurs, special representatives of the Secretary-General and independent experts.

---

General aspects

---

On 28 March and 2 April, pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/3 [YUN 2000, p. 596], the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23] considered the situation of human rights in Chad, Djibouti, Liberia and Uzbekistan. It decided to discontinue consideration of the situation in Uzbekistan. Under the confidential procedure established by Council resolutions 1503(XLVIII) (1503 procedure) [YUN 1970, p. 530], to deal confidentially with communications alleging denial or violation of human rights, and 2000/3, the Commission decided to discontinue consideration of the situations in Chad and Liberia and to consider them publicly under the item on human rights advisory services and technical cooperation (see p. 678). On 2 April, the Commission decided that its decisions regarding Chad [dec. 2003/104] and Liberia [dec. 2003/105] should be made public. It recommended the appointment of an independent expert for Liberia (see p. 683).

(For information on the right to restitution, compensation and rehabilitation for victims of grave violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms, see p. 726.)

---

Africa

---

Burundi

Commission action. On 17 April [E/2003/23 (res. 2003/16)], the Commission on Human Rights expressed concern at the ongoing violence, the violation of human rights and international humanitarian law and the security situation in parts of Burundi and noted efforts by the authorities to ensure respect for human rights safeguards and international standards. It welcomed the willingness of the Transitional Government to find agreed solutions to the problem of war-affected persons through the establishment of the Standing Consultation Machinery for the Protection of Displaced Persons and its technical monitoring group, and called on Burundi to establish a security environment conducive to the work of aid organizations. It urged the Transitional Government to strengthen its efforts to end impunity and all parties to the conflict to cease using children as soldiers.

The Commission decided to extend the Special Rapporteur's mandate for an additional year and asked her to submit an interim report to the General Assembly in 2003 and to report to the Commission in 2004, giving her work a gender-specific dimension. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision and its requests to the Special Rapporteur on 23 July (decision 2003/241).

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In her October interim report [A/58/448], Special Rapporteur Marie-Thérèse A. Kéita-Bocoum (Côte d'Ivoire) reviewed the situation in Burundi from March to August, based on her visit to the country (11-19 May). The political climate during the Special Rapporteur's mission was relatively calm owing to the grace period granted to the new President and his team. Subsequently, and fairly rapidly, the situation deteriorated and an atmosphere of violence once again ensued. Throughout the period under review, the security situation was marked by numerous arbitrary arrests, kidnappings and murders, directed especially against local civilian officials and various high-ranking political leaders. Implementation of the Arusha Agreement on Peace and Reconciliation [YUN 2000, p. 146] had been slowed by the lack of a ceasefire, jeopardizing the many reforms envisaged. However, the Special Rapporteur noted some significant advances, such as the transfer of power to the Transitional Government, the installation of the National Commission for the Rehabilitation of Simistrés (survivors) and the restructuring of the government Commission on Human Rights, which had resumed its visits in the field with assistance from the United Nations Development Programme. However, war and a fragile economy continued to alter the social fabric of the country.

The Special Rapporteur reported that attacks on civil and political rights abounded, while the impunity that surrounded the actions of certain groups, especially members of the regular army and the rebel groups, continued to fuel the widespread feeling of insecurity, curtailing the authorities' determination to fight it. She described violations, attributed to agents of the State, rebel groups and persons unknown, of the rights to life, liberty, security and inviolability of the person, freedom of movement and to choose one's residence, freedom of opinion and expression, women's and children's rights, and the proliferation of rape and the situation of the Batwa minority. With regard to justice and the rule of law, laws on genocide and on the Truth and Reconciliation Committee were adopted. However, people were still being detained in military camps, impunity persisted and widespread incidents of rape by both parties to the conflict remained unpunished. Prisons were severely overcrowded and the hygienic conditions were appalling. The Burundi office of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) increased its human rights training sessions and organized a seminar for journalists and police representatives on the media's role in combating torture. The Special Rapporteur observed that the improvement in the human rights situation was closely linked to the creation of a climate of stability in the Great Lakes region (see p. 107).

She reiterated the recommendations she had made in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 774] and urged all parties to the conflict to discontinue hostilities, implement the agreements they had signed, respect civilians' rights, respect international humanitarian law, refrain from attacking economic and social infrastructures, and not involve children or civilians in armed conflict. She recommended that the Burundian authorities combat impunity and cease arbitrary detention and torture, implement the recommendations of the independent commission on issues relating to prisoners, stop child recruitment into the army and demobilize those already enrolled, demobilize and disarm the militias and other civilian self-defence forces, combat discrimination against the Batwa, protect vulnerable populations, end sexual violence, punish the perpetrators and ensure support to victims, respect all conventions on human rights and international humanitarian law to which Burundi was a party and enhance the efficiency of the government Commission on Human Rights and establish a national human rights commission. The international community was encouraged to increase support for the proper implementation of the transition timetable and for regional mediation and the African Union. The Special Rapporteur appealed to donors to continue supporting humanitarian and development assistance and emphasized the urgency of increasing the resources of OHCHR/Burundi. The General Assembly took note of the report on 22 December (decision 58/539).

In a later report [E/CN.4/2004/35], the Special Rapporteur reviewed developments from 1 October to 31 December, based on reports received from OHCHR/Burundi and non-governmental organizations (NGOs), and on data provided by the Burundian authorities and UN bodies. She said that a ceasefire agreement between the Transitional Government and the Conseil national pour la défense de la démocratie-Forces pour la défense de la démocratie marked an important step forward in the military and political situation. It was expected that a decrease in acts of violence, especially towards civilians, would follow. Although it seemed premature, it was wise to envisage the creation of a national commission for human rights. The Special Rapporteur made recommendations regarding acts of violence against civilians, the recruitment of children as soldiers, impunity, the protection of vulnerable populations, women's rights and support by the international community.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Reports of High Commissioner. By a 24 February note [S/2003/216], the Security Council President transmitted the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the human rights situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) (see p. 117). The report covered the period 18 July 2002 to 30 January 2003. The High Commissioner highlighted specific atrocities perpetrated in the territories controlled by the Government and rebels and pointed to the continuing need for the Council to exert pressure on the Government and the other belligerents and their foreign supporters to end the human rights violations and the culture of impunity.

On 25 June [S/2003/674], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council President a report of the High Commissioner on the violent events of 3 April in Drodro (Ituri province), which described the findings of a special investigation team charged with supplementing information provided by the United Nations Organization Mission in the DRC (see p. 121).

(For further details on the situation in the DRC, see p. 113 et seq.)

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 2003/15], the Commission expressed concern at the continuing violation of human rights and international humanitarian law in the DRC, especially in Ituri province and the east of the country, and condemned the massacres and violence there. It also condemned reprisals against civilians, cases of summary or arbitrary execution, disappearance, torture, harassment, arrest, widespread persecution and arbitrary detention, the widespread sexual violence against women and children, the recruitment and use of child soldiers, impunity for those responsible for human rights violations and the illegal exploitation of the natural resources of the DRC. All parties to the conflict were urged to cease military activity, protect human rights and respect international humanitarian law, end the recruitment and use of child soldiers, respect women's rights and protect women and children from sexual and other violence, cooperate with the Ituri Pacification Commission to oversee the settlement of the conflict in the north-east, bring to justice those connected with serious violations of international humanitarian law and human rights, ensure the safety and freedom of movement of UN personnel and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel, and cooperate with the UN system, humanitarian organizations and the World Bank to ensure rapid demobilization and reintegration of armed groups and of child soldiers. The High Commissioner was requested to keep the Commission informed of the consultations between the Human Rights Field Office in the DRC and the Secretary-General regarding ways to assist the transitional Government of the DRC to tackle impunity.

The Commission extended the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a further year and requested her to submit an interim report to the General Assembly in 2003 and a report to the Commission in 2004. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decisions on 23 July (decision 2003/240).

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In April [E/CN.4/2003/43], in response to the Commission's 2002 request [YUN 2002, p. 774], Special Rapporteur Iulia Motoc (Romania) described the human rights situation in the DRC, following her visit to the country (28 February–10 March). In view of the extent of human rights violations in the DRC, she opted to deal in depth with: the protection of civilians in armed conflicts; the situation of women and children victims of sexual violence; the problem of impunity; the administration of justice; and the use of military courts to try cases of mass violations of human rights. She concluded that the situation of human rights and international humanitarian law in the DRC remained tragic, despite some positive developments. The Special Rapporteur made recommendations to the Government, the Rassemblement congolais pour la démocratie, the Mouvement de libération du Congo and the international community.

In October, the Secretary-General, in response to Commission resolution 2003/15 (above), transmitted to the General Assembly the Special Rapporteur's interim report [A/58/534], covering the period up to 4 October, based on information regularly submitted to her by the Human Rights Field Office in the DRC and on her visit to the country (26 August–6 September). She noted that while considerable progress had been made at the political level in recent months (see p. 129), the situation continued to be characterized by mass human rights violations. All violations reflected the constituent elements, as defined in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (ICC) [YUN 1998, p. 1209], of the crime of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes. The Special Rapporteur welcomed the decision of the ICC Prosecutor to make the DRC the first State to be the subject of his investigations. Impunity remained a problem, as did difficult conditions of detention and the numerous irregularities committed in prisons and detention centres. As for the justice system, the Special Rapporteur was aware of abuses committed by those responsible for preliminary investigations in criminal proceedings, including security and intelligence officers. Regarding vulnerable populations, the recruitment of children by various groups continued, violence against women had become common practice and indigenous peoples were subjected to large-scale acts of discrimination by the majority of the population. The Special Rapporteur presented recommendations to the parties to the conflict and to the Government.

In a later report [E/CN.4/2004/34], the Special Rapporteur, following her visit to the DRC (29 November–10 December), stated that she was favourably impressed by the progress made at the political level in 2003, but that the process remained fragile and incomplete. She noted the delay in drafting, considering and adopting important legislation indispensable to a successful transition and the holding of elections. She expressed concern about the fate of institutions responsible for human rights and the lack of progress in combating impunity. Civilians lacked security and were subjected to violence by the military and police, while human rights defenders were arrested. Some 3.4 million internally displaced persons faced security problems and lived in precarious conditions. Over the preceding few months, there had been some positive developments regarding the administration of justice, with the adoption of decrees on the organization of the judiciary and the removal of 315 judges from office. The judicial system in Ituri had become operational. Punishment cells (cachots) were still in use in prisons and detention centres, in which conditions were inhuman and torture was practised. Little progress had been made towards implementing legislation regarding children associated with armed groups. The Special Rapporteur said that women continued to be subjected to sexual violence and noted a strong reluctance on the part of judges to try and punish rapists. Minority indigenous peoples continued to be discriminated against on a large scale. The Special Rapporteur welcomed the adoption of a national multisectoral programme to combat HIV/AIDS, together with the formation, inside the armed forces and the national police force, of sectoral HIV/AIDS control committees. Although the DRC was one of the world's richest countries in natural resources, its population suffered from ingrained poverty. Some 17 million people, or two thirds of the population, suffered from malnutrition. According to a survey in the equatorial zone, people were living on less than $0.10 per person per day, 85 per cent of the population did not have access to proper food and 80 per cent had no access to medical care.

The Special Rapporteur called on all parties to the conflict to end military activities, respect the obligations relating to the implementation of the Transitional Constitution, implement the Bujumbura agreements of June 2003 (see p. 129), respect women's rights and protect women and children who were victims of sexual violence, cease recruiting and using children in violation of international law, ensure the security and freedom of movement of UN staff and guarantee unhindered access by humanitarian personnel, verify allegations of massive violations of human rights and of humanitarian law, and cooperate with human rights protection mechanisms. The Government should eliminate impunity, cooperate with ICC and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, implement the Constitution, continue to reform military justice, close unauthorized detention centres, protect children, end discrimination against the Batwa and against persons with HIV/AIDS, and abolish capital punishment. The international community was called on to assist the transition, help formulate strategies to protect refugees, displaced persons and other vulnerable groups, and consider the illegal exploitation of natural resources with a view to creating a mechanism to benefit deprived population groups.

Joint mission. In a July note [A/58/127], the Secretary-General stated that the joint mission of investigation by the Special Rapporteurs on the situation of human rights in the DRC and on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions and a member of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, which the General Assembly had requested in resolution 57/233 [YUN 2002, p. 776], did not take place because of the worsening security situation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/58/508/Add.3], adopted resolution 58/196 by recorded vote (81-2-91) [agenda item 117 (c)].

Situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo

The General Assembly,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and other human rights instruments,

Reaffirming that all States Members of the United Nations have an obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Noting that the Democratic Republic of the Congo is a party to several international and regional human rights instruments and to several instruments pertaining to international humanitarian law,

Recalling all its previous resolutions, as well as those of the Commission on Human Rights, on the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1493(2003) of 28 July 2003,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Bearing in mind also Security Council resolution 1460 (2003) of 30 January 2003 on children and armed conflict, and the report of the Secretary-General of 10 November 2003 on children and armed conflict,

Welcoming the Final Act of the inter-Congolese political negotiations signed in Sun City, South Africa, on 2 April 2003,

Taking note of the second special report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo of 27 May 2003, the report of the Security Council mission to Central Africa, 7 to 16 June 2003, the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights of 13 February 2003 and the report of the High Commissioner on the events of 3 April 2003 in Drodoro,

Deeply concerned about the continuation of hostilities in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, particularly in North and South Kivu and Ituri, and the grave violations of human rights and international humanitarian law that accompany them, as described in the above-mentioned reports,

Deploing the impunity that characterizes much of the fighting and the accompanying human rights abuses and humanitarian crises in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

1. Welcomes:

(a) The promulgation by the head of State on 4 April 2003 of the Constitution that is to govern the country throughout the transition, the swearing of allegiance to the new Constitution by President Joseph Kabila on 7 April 2003, the installation on 17 July 2003 of the Government of National Unity and Transition in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the inauguration of the National Assembly and the Senate on 22 August 2003 and the installation of the five transitional institutions on 28 August 2003;

(b) The signing on 18 March 2003 of a ceasefire agreement by the Governments of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Uganda and six armed groups, which paved the way for the convening of the Ituri Pacification Commission from 4 to 14 April 2003 and the setting up of an interim administration in Ituri;

(c) The ceasefire agreement signed in Dar es Salaam, United Republic of Tanzania, on 16 May 2003, and the signing on 19 June 2003 of the Bujumbura Commitment by the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Congolese Rally for Democracy-Goma, the Congolese Rally for Democracy-Liberation Movement;

(d) The abolition of the Military Order Court;

(e) The interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and her visits to the country from 26 February to 10 March and from 26 August to 6 September 2003;

(f) The visit by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to the Democratic Republic of the Congo from 12 to 15 January 2003 and the action taken by his Office in the country;

(g) The consultations between the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on ways of dealing with the problem of impunity in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and takes note of the proposal of the High Commissioner to establish an international body of inquiry to investigate serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law;

(h) The extension of the mandate, the continuing presence and the increased deployment of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo in accordance with Security Council resolution 1493(2003);

(i) The collaboration between the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the establishment of national institutions and infrastructures to protect human rights as well as transitional justice mechanisms;

(j) The work of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Chief of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

2. Condemns:

(a) The continuing violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, particularly in Ituri, North and South Kivu and other areas in the eastern part of the country;

(b) The persistence, in the eastern part of the country, of the armed violence and reprisals against the civilian population, especially in North and South Kivu and in Ituri;

(c) All the massacres that have occurred in the province of Ituri, particularly the massacres at Drodoro, and most recently, at Katchele on 6 October 2003, while supporting the efforts of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to investigate them;

(d) The reported perpetration of acts of mutilation and cannibalism in the Mambasa region;

(e) The cases of summary or arbitrary execution, disappearance, torture, harassment, unlawful arrest, widespread persecution and arbitrary detention for long periods;

(f) The widespread recourse to sexual violence against women and children, inter alia, as a means of warfare;

(g) The continuing recruitment and use of child soldiers by armed forces and groups, in particular in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, which are contrary to international law;

(h) The impunity of those responsible for violations of human rights and international humanitarian law, and points out in this connection that the Democratic Republic of the Congo is a party to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

(i) The illegal exploitation of the natural resources of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in view of the link between that exploitation and the continuation of the conflict;

3. Expresses its concern regarding:

(a) The breaches of freedom of expression, opinion, association and assembly and the attacks on human rights defenders throughout the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in particular in the eastern part of the country;

(b) The continued suspension of the moratorium on the carrying out of the death penalty, in particular the death sentences passed on 7 January 2003 by the Military Order Court which had tried the persons accused of assassinating the former President of the Republic;

(c) The excessive accumulation and spread of small arms and the distribution, circulation and illicit trafficking of arms in the region and their negative impact on human rights;

(d) The increase in the number of refugees and internally displaced persons, in particular in the eastern part of the country;

(e) The continued insecurity, particularly in the east of the country in the zones still held by armed groups, which seriously hampers the efforts of humanitarian organizations to gain access to people affected by the worrying humanitarian situation;

4. Urges all parties to the conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo:

(a) To cease immediately all military activities, including support for the armed groups allied to them, in order to facilitate the re-establishment of the sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

(b) To implement fully and without delay both the Bujumbura Commitment of 19 June 2003 and the Dar es Salaam Agreement of 16 May 2003 and to cooperate with the Ituri Interim Administration in overseeing the settlement of the conflict in the north-eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

(c) To continue to respect their obligations as regards the implementation of the Transitional Constitution;

(d) To allow free and secure access to all areas so as to permit and support investigations of the presumed serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law, with a view to bringing those responsible to justice, and to cooperate fully to that end with national and international human rights protection mechanisms to investigate alleged human rights violations and breaches of international humanitarian law in the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

(e) To put an immediate end to the recruitment and use of child soldiers, which are in contravention of international law and the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child, with the understanding that, under the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocol thereto on the involvement of children in armed conflict, persons under the age of 18 are entitled to special protection, and to provide information without delay on measures taken to discontinue such practices;

(f) To meet the special needs of women and girls in post-conflict reconstruction as well as to ensure the full participation of women in all aspects of conflict resolution and peace processes, including peace-keeping, conflict management and peace-building, as a matter of priority;

(g) To implement all necessary measures to put an end to the widespread violations of human rights and to impunity, in particular with regard to the sexual violence against women and children;

(h) To protect human rights and to respect international humanitarian law, in particular by ensuring the safety, security and freedom of movement of all civilians, as well as United Nations and associated personnel, and the unhindered access of humanitarian personnel to all of the affected population throughout the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

(i) To prevent conditions that might lead to flows of refugees and displaced persons in the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and across its borders and to take and apply all necessary measures to establish conditions conducive to the voluntary return of refugees and displaced persons;

5. Urges the Government of National Unity and Transition to ensure that the protection of human rights and the establishment of a State based on the rule of law and of an independent judiciary are among its highest priorities, including the establishment of the necessary institutions as reflected in the Global and All-Inclusive Agreement on the Transition in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, signed in Pretoria on 17 December 2002;

6. Calls upon the Government of National Unity and Transition to take specific measures:

(a) To achieve the objectives of the transitional period as laid down in the Global and All-Inclusive Agreement, in particular the holding of free and transparent elections at all levels, enabling the establishment of a democratic constitutional regime, and the formation of a restructured and integrated national army;

(b) To strengthen the transitional institutions and to re-establish stability and the rule of law over the entire territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, thereby returning peace and progress to its people;

(c) To comply fully with its obligations under international human rights instruments and, accordingly, to continue to cooperate with United Nations mechanisms for the protection of human rights and further strengthen its cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

(d) To carry out a comprehensive reform of the judicial system;

(e) To reinstate the moratorium on capital punishment and adhere to its commitment to progressively abolish the death penalty;

(f) To put an end to impunity and to ensure that those responsible for human rights violations and grave breaches of international humanitarian law are brought to justice in accordance with due process;

(g) To cooperate with the International Criminal Court and to continue to cooperate with the International Tribunal for Rwanda;

7. Calls upon the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to keep it informed of the consultations between his/her Office and the Secretary-General concerning the ways in which to assist the transitional Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in tackling the problem of impunity;

8. Calls upon the international community:

(a) To support the human rights field office in the Democratic Republic of the Congo in order to make possible the effective implementation of its programmes;

(b) To support the organization, at the appropriate time and under the aegis of the United Nations and the African Union, of an international conference on peace, security, democracy and development in the Great Lakes region of Africa, with the participation of all the Governments of the region and all other parties concerned, and to support the introduction of human rights and humanitarian issues as one of the main themes of this conference;

9. Requests:

(a) The Special Rapporteurs of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions and a member of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances of the Commission to carry out a mission of investigation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and to report to the Commission at its sixtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

(b) The Secretary-General to give the Special Rapporteurs and the joint mission all necessary assistance to enable them to discharge their mandate fully;

(c) The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide the technical skills needed by the joint mission to discharge its mandate;

(d) The Secretary-General to encourage the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to continue to raise the awareness of and provide training to all Mission staff, including civilian police and military personnel, with respect to the relevant child protection standards, in particular when dealing with child soldiers, and to cooperate closely with the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict;

(e) The Secretary-General to encourage the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to continue to actively address the issues of gender, the full enjoyment of all human rights by women and the fight to eliminate violence against women and to provide adequate training to all Mission personnel in this regard;

10. Decides to continue to examine the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and requests the Special Rapporteur to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/198:

In favour: Albania, Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Belgium, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Nauru, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela.

Against: Rwanda, Uganda.

Abstaining: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, China, Comoros, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

The Third Committee retained the fourth preambular paragraph by a recorded vote of 82 to 4, with 75 abstentions, and paragraphs 3 (b) and 6 (e) by 73 to 50, with 35 abstentions. An oral amendment to paragraph 6 (g) by the United States was rejected by a recorded vote of 93 against to 2 in favour, with 55 abstentions. The text as a whole was adopted by a recorded vote of 74 to 3, with 85 abstentions. The Assembly retained the fourth preambular paragraph by a recorded vote of 89 to 3, with 75 abstentions, and paragraphs 3 (b) and 6 (e) by 73 to 49, with 44 abstentions.

Liberia

(For information on the human rights situation in Liberia, see p. 683.)

Sierra Leone

(For information on the human rights situation in Sierra Leone, see p. 684.)

Somalia

(For information on the human rights situation in Somalia, see p. 685.)

Sudan

During the fifty-ninth session of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], the Sudan, on 16 April, requested a recorded vote on a draft resolution on the situation of human rights in the Sudan [E/CN.4/2003/L.35]. By that text, the Commission would have expressed deep concern at the continuing violations of human rights and international law in the country and extended the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a further year. The draft was rejected by 26 votes to 24, with 3 abstentions.

(See p. 764 for details of the visit to the Sudan by the independent expert on extreme poverty.)

Zimbabwe

During the fifty-ninth session of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], South Africa introduced a motion to take no action on a draft resolution on the situation of human rights in Zimbabwe [E/CN.4/2003/L.37]. By that text, the Commission would have expressed deep concern at continuing human rights violations by the Government of Zimbabwe and requested the Special Rapporteurs on torture, on the independence of the judiciary, on the right to freedom of opinion and expression, on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, on violence against women and on the right to food, and the Secretary-General's Special Representative on human rights defenders to consider missions, including joint missions, to examine alleged human rights violations in the country. The motion was carried by 28 votes to 24, with 1 abstention.

---

Americas

---

Colombia

Commission action. The Commission on Human Rights Chairperson, in a 25 April statement regarding the human rights situation in Colombia [E/2003/23], welcomed the new Government's commitment to the principles of democracy, respect for human rights, good governance and the rule of law. The Commission noted government efforts to increase human rights training, but remained concerned at continued reports of human rights abuses attributed to the armed and security forces. Expressing deep concern at reports that the Office of the Attorney-General was not showing sufficient willingness to investigate serious human rights violations, the Commission urged the Attorney-General to secure and strengthen the independence of the Human Rights and International Humanitarian Law Unit within that Office, to guarantee the protection of its prosecutors and investigators and to secure funding to continue its investigations. The Commission urged the Government to end impunity and to guarantee the right to life, physical integrity and the ability of leaders of trade unions and employers' organizations to function freely. It condemned all acts of terrorism and other criminal acts, impunity, the recruitment of children by illegal armed groups, all violent acts and breaches of international humanitarian law committed by paramilitary groups and other illegal armed groups, kidnapping and the campaign of intimidation against mayors and town councilors, which represented an offence against local liberties and the running of democratic institutions. The High Commissioner was requested to report in 2004.

Report of High Commissioner. The High Commissioner's report on the human rights situation in Colombia in 2003 [E/CN.4/2004/13], based on information collected by OHCHR/Bogotá, stated that the office had registered complaints of violations of the right to life, to physical integrity, to personal freedoms and security, to due process and judicial guarantees, to the independence and impartiality of the judicial system, to respect for privacy and intimacy, to the fundamental freedoms of circulation, residence, opinion and expression, and to political rights. Growing numbers of complaints of violations by the security forces and the Attorney-General's Office were received. Of concern was the increase in numbers of complaints regarding arbitrary or illegal detentions, forced disappearances, extrajudicial executions, violations of the right to due process and the right to intimacy. The number of complaints of torture and mistreatment increased. Economic, social and cultural rights continued to be affected by the large gap in the distribution of wealth, extreme poverty, exclusion and social injustice. Although there was a decrease in killings of union leaders, the situation of human rights defenders and union leaders continued to be critical. The internal armed conflict aggravated the situation of indigenous communities and Afro-Colombians. Measures taken against impunity continued to register few concrete results. The High Commissioner's recommendations, which were addressed to the State authorities, illegal armed groups, civil society and the international community, covered matters relating to prevention and protection, the internal armed conflict, the rule of law and impunity, economic and social policies, the promotion of a culture of human rights, and the advisory services and technical cooperation of OHCHR/Bogotá.

Communication. Responding to the High Commissioner's report [E/CN.4/2004/G/23], Colombia observed that the report did not recognize the gravity of the threat to its institutions and society at the hands of the illegal armed groups using terrorist methods. The Government considered that the report undervalued such 2003 achievements as a reduction in the homicide rate, murders of union leaders, forced displacement and massacres, and an increase in freedom of movement. It enumerated action taken to apply the High Commissioner's previous recommendations [YUN 2002, p. 786].

(For information on the visits to Colombia by the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and by the Special Rapporteur on the right to education, see pp. 705 and 770, respectively.)

Cuba

Communication. On 11 February [E/CN.4/2003/G/37], Cuba transmitted its views on Commission resolution 2002/18 [YUN 2002, p. 787]. It summarized its history of international cooperation in human rights matters and set forth the reasons why it did not accept any part of the resolution.

Commission action. A March note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2003/36] stated that, pursuant to Commission resolution 2002/18, the High Commissioner, on 27 January, designated Christine Chanet (France) as his Personal Representative for Cuba.

On 17 April [res. 2003/13], by a recorded vote of 24 to 20, with 9 abstentions, the Commission urged the Government of Cuba to receive the High Commissioner's Personal Representative and to assist her to fulfil her mandate.

Report of Personal Representative. In a report to the Commission [E/CN.4/2004/32 & Corr.1], the High Commissioner's Personal Representative stated that in February and May she invited Cuban authorities to meet with her to plan a constructive dialogue. Although the High Commissioner had backed her request, the Cuban authorities notified the High Commissioner in June that they did not recognize the Representative's mandate. Under those circumstances, the Representative gathered information from the Commission's thematic special rapporteurs who had inquired into the human rights situation in Cuba and from NGOs wishing to express their views. She also held discussions in Geneva with representatives of the Commission's member States who wished to meet her, and familiarized herself with the concluding observations adopted by the treaty bodies to which Cuba had submitted reports, as well as reports drawn up by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights.

On the positive side, the Representative said that the Government maintained a sound health system, 100 per cent of the children attended school, school success rates were high, particularly in mathematics, and illiteracy stood at just 0.2 per cent. The proportion of women in the National Assembly, the judiciary and decision-making posts had risen. At the time of Pope John Paul II's visit to Cuba in 1998, an improvement was seen in the exercise of freedom of religion. Cuba had ratified human rights conventions and had submitted reports to the respective treaty bodies. During 2003, Cuba responded to urgent appeals launched on 8 April by the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention and on 19 May jointly by the Special Rapporteur on the right to freedom of opinion and expression, the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers, and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on human rights defenders.

Subjects of concern related to the arbitrary arrest in March/April of some 80 persons, most of whom supported the Varela project, which involved the collection of signatures for the organization of a referendum on changing the electoral system and the fostering of other legislative reforms. Those arrested were charged with such actions as receiving funds from foreign countries or engaging in subversive activities, communicating with international human rights organizations, possessing radio or video equipment, or participating in trade unions, associations or academic groups deemed to be counter-revolutionary. Independent counsel, diplomats and foreign journalists were barred from attending the trials. Prison terms ranging from 6 to 28 years were imposed. In June, the Personal Representative appealed to Cuba's President to pardon the detainees, but no reply had been received. Particularly alarming information on their prison conditions had been communicated to the Representative. Annexed to the report was a list of the persons arrested in March/April. Also of concern was the execution on 11 April of three individuals who had attempted to hijack a ferry carrying many persons and force it to sail to the United States on 2 April.

The Representative recommended that the Government halt the prosecution of citizens exercising the rights enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 217 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 535]; release detainees who had not committed violent acts against individuals and property; review laws that led to criminal prosecutions for the exercise of freedom of expression, demonstration, assembly and association; uphold the moratorium on the application of the death penalty introduced in 2000; reform the rules of criminal procedure; establish an independent body to receive complaints of human rights violations; review regulations relating to the freedom of movement; authorize NGOs to enter Cuba; foster pluralism in respect of associations, trade unions, the press and political parties; and accede to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocols thereto, and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (see pp. 669 and 670, respectively).

Haiti

(For information on the human rights situation in Haiti, see p. 683.)

---

Asia and the Pacific

---

Afghanistan

(For information on the human rights situation in Afghanistan, see p. 679.)

Cambodia

(For information on the human rights situation in Cambodia, see p. 679.)

Democratic People's Republic of Korea

On 16 April [res. 2003/10], by a recorded vote of 28 to 10, with 14 abstentions, the Commission expressed deep concern about reports of systematic, widespread and grave human rights violations in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), regretted that the DPRK authorities did not permit the international community to verify the reports in an independent manner and called on the Government to respond urgently. Deeply concerned about reports of a precarious humanitarian situation, the Commission called on the DPRK authorities to ensure that humanitarian organizations had free and unimpeded access to all parts of the country. The High Commissioner was requested to engage in a dialogue with the DPRK authorities, with a view to es-establishing human rights technical cooperation programmes and to report to the Commission in 2004.

Iran

(For information on the human rights situation in Iran regarding arbitrary detention and freedom of opinion and expression, see pp. 733 and 745, respectively.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.3], adopted resolution 58/195 by recorded vote (68-54-51) [agenda item 17 (c)].

Situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran

The General Assembly,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and other international human rights instruments,

Reaffirming that all Member States have an obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms and to fulfil the obligations they have undertaken under the various international instruments in this field,

Mindful that the Islamic Republic of Iran is a party to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject, the most recent of which is resolution 56/171 of 19 December 2001, and recalling also Commission on Human Rights resolution 2001/17 of 20 April 2001,

Noting the commitment made by the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran to strengthen respect for human rights in the country and to promote the rule of law,

1. Welcomes:

(a) The open invitation extended by the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran to all human rights thematic monitoring mechanisms in April 2002;

(b) The visit of the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention of the Commission on Human Rights to the Islamic Republic of Iran from 15 to 27 February 2003 and its subsequent report;

(c) The visit of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression to the Islamic Republic of Iran from 4 to 10 November 2003 and the scheduled visit of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances of the Commission in February 2004;

(d) The recommendation by the head of the judiciary of the Islamic Republic of Iran to judges that they choose alternative punishment in cases where the sentence of stoning would otherwise be imposed;

(e) The efforts of the elected Government to foster the growth of civil society;

(f) The opening of human rights dialogues with a number of countries;

(g) The efforts made by Parliament, in particular the Article 90 Commission, and by the Islamic Human Rights Commission to improve the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran;

2. Expresses its serious concern at:

(a) The continuing violations of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran;

(b) The continuing deterioration of the situation with regard to freedom of opinion and expression, especially the increased persecution for the peaceful expression of political views, including arrest and detention without charge or trial; crackdowns by judiciary and security forces against journalists, parliamentarians, students, clerics and academics; and the harsh reactions to student demonstrations, including imprisonment, mistreatment and use of university disciplinary committees against those who participate;

(c) The continuing executions in the absence of respect for internationally recognized safeguards, and in particular deplores public executions;

(d) The use of torture and other forms of cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment, in particular the practice of amputation and flogging;

(e) The continuing restrictions on free assembly and the forcible dissolution of political parties;

(f) The failure to comply fully with international standards in the administration of justice, the absence of due process of law, the use of national security laws to deny the rights of the individual and the lack of respect for internationally recognized legal safeguards, inter alia, with respect to persons belonging to religious minorities;

(g) The systemic discrimination against women and girls in law and in practice and the refusal of the Guardian Council to take steps to address this systematic discrimination, noting in this context its refusal, in August 2003, to consider the proposal of the elected Parliament to accede to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women;

(h) The continuing discrimination against persons belonging to minorities, including the Baha'is, Christians, Jews and Sunnis, including cases of arbitrary arrest and detention, the denial of free worship or of publicly carrying out communal affairs and the disregard of property rights;

(i) The continuing persecution and arbitrary sentencing to prison of human rights defenders, political opponents, religious dissenters and reformists;

3. Calls upon the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran:

(a) To abide by its obligations freely undertaken under the International Covenants on Human Rights and other international human rights instruments, including those relating to freedom of opinion and expression, the use of torture and other forms of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment and the promotion and protection of the human rights of women and girls, and to continue its efforts to consolidate respect for human rights and the rule of law;

(b) To respond fully to the recommendations of the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention of the Commission on Human Rights;

(c) To continue to cooperate with United Nations mechanisms, in particular with the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression and the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, and to respond fully to their recommendations;

(d) To expedite judicial reform, to guarantee the dignity of the individual and to ensure the full application of due process of law and fair and transparent procedures by an independent and impartial judiciary, and in this context to ensure respect for the rights of the defence and the equity of verdicts in all instances, including for members of religious minority groups;

(e) To appoint an impartial prosecutor, noting the re-establishment, since December 2001, within the Islamic Republic of Iran of the Office of the Prosecutor General;

(f) To eliminate all forms of discrimination based on religious grounds or against persons belonging to minorities, including the Baha'is, Christians, Jews and Sunnis, and to address this matter in an open manner, with the full participation of the minorities themselves;

(g) To take all necessary measures to end amputation and public flogging and to pursue vigorously penitentiary reform;

4. Encourages the thematic mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights, including the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions and the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture, to visit the Islamic Republic of Iran, and encourages the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran to cooperate with these special mechanisms and to respond fully to their subsequent recommendations;

5. Decides to continue its examination of the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran, paying particular attention to further developments, including the situation of the Baha'is and other minority groups, at its fifty-ninth session, under the item entitled "Human rights questions", in the light of additional elements provided by the Commission on Human Rights.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/195:

In favour: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Costa Rica, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Grenada, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Nauru, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sweden, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Tuvalu, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: Afghanistan, Algeria, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belarus, Benin, Brunei Darussalam, China, Colombia, Comoros, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Egypt, Gabon, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Maldives, Mauritania, Morocco, Myanmar, Niger, Oman, Pakistan, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Togo, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bhutan, Botswana, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Cyprus, Dominica, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Georgia, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Jamaica, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Mauritius, Mongolia, Mozambique, Namibia, Nepal, Nigeria, Panama, Republic of Korea, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Singapore, Suriname, Switzerland, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Zambia.

Iraq

Commission action. At its fifty-ninth session [E/2003/23], the Commission, on 27 March, rejected, by a roll-call vote of 25 to 18, with 7 abstentions, a proposal by several Commission members to convene a special sitting on the effect of the war against Iraq, which began on 20 March (see p. 333), on the Iraqi people and their humanitarian situation.

On 25 April [res. 2003/84], by a recorded vote of 31 to 3, with 12 abstentions, the Commission strongly condemned the systematic, widespread and extremely grave violations of human rights and international humanitarian law by the Government of Iraq over many years. It requested all parties to the current conflict to abide by their obligations under international humanitarian law. The Commission called on the international community to address urgently the major humanitarian needs of the Iraqi people and to assist in the development of free and democratic institutions. The Commission decided to extend the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a further year and requested him to report to the General Assembly in 2003 and to the Commission in 2004. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision on 23 July (decision 2003/262).

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In an addendum [E/CN.4/2003/40/Add.1] to an earlier report [YUN 2002, p. 794], Special Rapporteur Andreas Mavrommatis (Cyprus) described the human rights situation in Iraq covering the period 1 January to 28 February, based on meetings with the Permanent Representative of Iraq to the United Nations Office at Geneva, members of the Human Rights Department of the Iraqi Ministry for Foreign Affairs, representatives of OHCHR and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), and NGOs. Discussions focused on the abolition of the death penalty for certain crimes, the abolition of decrees on the amputation of hands or the branding of people, the abolition of the Special Courts and their replacement by a State Security Court attached to the Ministry of Justice, and the number of prisoners and detainees having benefited from the amnesty decree. Also discussed were political rights, democracy, a multiparty system and other efforts to establish respect for fundamental freedoms. The Special Rapporteur suggested that a human rights presence in Iraq could assist in developing ways to entrench a human rights culture. He urged the Government to respect the rights of individuals at all times, including in times of war, and to cooperate on the question of Kuwaiti prisoners of war and persons unaccounted for.

By a September note [A/58/338], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the interim report of the Special Rapporteur on Iraq, who stated that he had received a positive response from the United States, on behalf of the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA), in reply to his request to visit Iraq to examine past gross and systematic human rights violations. The Special Rapporteur had proposed the period from 22 to 27 September for his visit. However, his visit had to be postponed for security reasons. The Assembly took note of the report on 22 December (decision 58/539).

In a later report [E/CN.4/2004/36], the Special Rapporteur described his activities in the light of his inability to travel to Iraq. In Geneva, he held meetings with the Permanent Representatives of Iraq, Kuwait, the United Kingdom and the United States, and with CPA experts dealing with such issues as transitional justice, the Iraqi Special Tribunal, mass graves and other human rights violations; in New York, with UN bodies and specialized agencies, international NGOs and the Executive Director of the oil-for-food programme; in Madrid, during the Iraq Reconstruction Donor Conference (23-25 October); and in Amman, Jordan, with a Kurdish delegation (7-10 December). However, despite his efforts, it proved almost impossible to collect and appraise any significant new evidence and much remained to be done. From October onwards, he focused on summary executions, mass graves, the Anfal campaign against the Kurds and the Arabization process, including of property rights. The CPA Office of Human Rights and Transitional Justice made available to him evidence recorded in a list cataloguing past atrocities. A selection of 20 serious cases was provided to the Special Rapporteur, describing almost 15 different methods of torture. He recommended that the Iraqi authorities systematize and accelerate the process of investigation and make available to him selected cases of past violations and establish a quick and effective system of communication with him. All investigations should be carried out in full compliance with Iraq's international obligations, and the transfer of power to the Iraqis should take place as soon as possible as part of the democratization process.

Myanmar

Communication. On 18 March [E/CN.4/2003/G/47], Myanmar submitted information to the Commission regarding the country's difficulties in its transition to a new political system and the Government's achievements in many areas. It cited efforts towards peace and stability and progress in economic development, health care, education, the suppression of narcotic drugs, democratization, the right to development, the rights of the child and the status of women. It refuted allegations of violence against women in Shan State, the use of child soldiers and religious intolerance.

Commission action. On 16 April (res. 2003/12), the Commission welcomed positive developments in Myanmar, including the freedom of movement enjoyed by Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, leader of the National League for Democracy (NLD), the release of political detainees, cooperation with ICRC, the dissemination of human rights standards for public officials and some NGOs and ethnic groups, and the establishment by the Government of a committee on human rights as a precursor to the establishment of a human rights commission. However, it expressed grave concern at the ongoing systematic human rights violations. It called on the Government to restore the independence of the judiciary; eradicate forced labour; ensure safe and unhindered access by UN and international humanitarian organizations; end permanently conflict with all ethnic groups; and establish a human rights commission.

The Commission decided to extend the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a further year and asked him to report to the General Assembly in 2003 and to the Commission in 2004. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision on 23 July (decision 2003/239).

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/231 [YUN 2002, p. 798], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [E/CN.4/2003/33] on his good offices efforts and those of his Special Envoy, Razali Ismail, in facilitating national reconciliation and democratization in Myanmar. Discussions with the Myanmar authorities focused on UN assistance in moving confidence-building talks to a more substantive dialogue. Although Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's freedom of movement had been restored since May 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 797], she had had no substantive dialogue with the Government. The Secretary-General called on both parties to set aside their differences, unite for a larger cause and start their political dialogue as soon as possible.

In August [A/58/325], the Secretary-General described the events of 30 May in northern Myanmar, when pro-Government protesters attacked an NLD convoy carrying Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, NLD members and other supporters.

Several persons were killed and Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, NLD members and other supporters were subsequently arrested and detained. The Secretary-General called on the authorities to remove, without delay, all the restrictions imposed on their freedom of movement and political activities. Although the events of 30 May had seriously undermined it, the national reconciliation process could be saved with the efforts of all parties.

In a November addendum to his report [A/58/325/Add.1], the Secretary-General noted that the situation prevailing in Myanmar had not changed significantly since the issue of his August report (above). The Government had announced a seven-step road map to a democratic transition on 30 August, which, the Secretary-General said, should involve all Myanmar's political parties, national leaders, ethnic nationalities and strata of society from the beginning. He appealed to the Government to lift the remaining restrictions imposed on Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, other NLD leaders and those detained in connection with the 30 May incident, and to allow NLD to reopen its offices across the country.

The General Assembly took note of the report and addendum on 22 December (decision 58/539).

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to Commission resolution 2003/12 and Economic and Social Council decision 2003/239 (see p. 819), the Secretary-General, by an August note [A/58/219], transmitted the report of Special Rapporteur Paulo Sérgio Pinheiro (Brazil) on the human rights situation in Myanmar, based on his visit to the country (19-24 March) and information received by him up to 28 July. The Special Rapporteur's visit was curtailed when he discovered a listening device in the room at Insein prison where he was interviewing political prisoners on 22 March. The incident constituted a breach of the standard operating procedures relating to the conduct of fact-finding missions by UN special rapporteurs.

The Special Rapporteur said that the 30 May-related developments (above) had constituted a potentially terminal setback on the political and human rights front. The economic and social situation in Myanmar remained precarious, with massive inflation pervading the country. During the reporting period, the Special Rapporteur continued to pursue his efforts to obtain access to ethnic minority areas to investigate allegations of serious human rights violations. He had received informal suggestions from Myanmar regarding the possibility of an independent assessment mission and, in April, he had submitted to Myanmar the draft modalities of the assessment, which were annexed to his report. Since he had been unsuccessful in his attempts to obtain Myanmar's agreement on the modalities, the Special Rapporteur made public the findings of his research on the human rights situation in ethnic areas of Myanmar conducted in Thailand in October and November 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 797]. The research, which was summarized in his report, documented widespread human rights abuses such as forced labour, arbitrary taxation and extortion, forced relocations, torture, rape and extrajudicial executions.

In a later report [E/CN.4/2004/33], the Special Rapporteur described his visit to Myanmar (3-8 November) and provided information received by him up to 17 December. Despite his repeated calls on the Government to refrain from new arrests, he received reports of some 250 new arrests since 30 May. Grounds for arrest remained highly arbitrary, based on the legislation criminalizing the exercise of basic rights and the freedoms of expression, information, movement, assembly and association, including the use of some provisions of the Penal Code. The Special Rapporteur welcomed slight improvements in the conditions of detention of convicted political prisoners since his March visit. However, concerns remained about disparities in the conditions of different prison blocks in terms of food quality and the lack of basic necessities. He continued to be concerned about ill-treatment of detainees in pre-trial detention, detainees kept in incommunicado detention, reports of religious intolerance, allegations of serious human rights violations in ethnic minority areas, including Shan State, the forcible recruitment of boys as child soldiers and the widespread forced military training of civilians. The Special Rapporteur called for a full and independent inquiry into the events of 30 May, restored freedom of movement for Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other NLD leaders and members, the lifting of remaining restrictions on the freedoms of expression, movement, information, assembly and association, the repeal of security legislation, the opening and reopening of all political parties' offices and the release of all political prisoners.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.3], adopted resolution 58/247 without vote [agenda item 117 (c)].

Situation of human rights in Myanmar

The General Assembly,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and other human rights instruments,

Reaffirming that all States Members of the United Nations have an obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms and to fulfil the obligations they have undertaken under the various international instruments in the field,

Aware that Myanmar is a party to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide and the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 for the protection of victims of war, as well as the Convention concerning Forced or Compulsory Labour, 1930 (Convention No. 29) and the Convention concerning Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organize, 1948 (Convention No. 87), of the International Labour Organization,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 1460 (2003) of 30 January 2003 on children and armed conflict and the report of the Secretary-General pursuant thereto,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject, the most recent of which is resolution 57/231 of 18 December 2002, those of the Commission on Human Rights, the most recent of which is resolution 2003/12 of 16 April 2003, and resolution I adopted by the International Labour Conference at its eighty-eighth session, on 14 June 2000, concerning the practice of forced or compulsory labour in Myanmar,

Affirming that the will of the people is the basis of the authority of government and that the will of the people of Myanmar was clearly expressed in the elections held in 1990,

Affirming also that the establishment of a genuine democratic government in Myanmar is essential for the realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recognizing that good governance, democracy, the rule of law and respect for human rights are essential to achieving sustainable development and economic growth,

Taking note of the increasing awareness of the Government of Myanmar of the need to comprehensively address the production of opium in Myanmar,

Taking note also of the road map for the transition to democracy announced by the Prime Minister of Myanmar on 30 August 2003,

1. Welcomes:

(a) The visits to Myanmar by the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for Myanmar during the past year and the visits by the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Myanmar;

(b) Efforts by the international community, including support from countries in the region, to encourage the Government of Myanmar to resume its efforts towards national reconciliation and dialogue, pursuant to acknowledging the importance of strengthening democracy as a fundamental element of regional security;

(c) The report of the Secretary-General;

(d) The interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Myanmar;

(e) The agreement, reached on 27 May 2003, on the Joint Government of the Union of Myanmar-International Labour Organization Plan of Action for the Elimination of Forced Labour Practices in Myanmar, including the agreement to an independent facilitator to assist possible victims of forced labour, while noting that the conditions for the implementation of the Plan of Action do not exist at present;

(f) The continued cooperation of the Government of Myanmar with the International Committee of the Red Cross;

2. Expresses its grave concern at:

(a) The events of 30 May 2003, the corresponding, subsequent and continuing violations of human rights, which constitute a serious setback for the human rights situation in the country, and the apparent involvement of the Government-affiliated Union Solidarity and Development Association in those events;

(b) The detention and the house arrest of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and the persistent denial of her human rights and fundamental freedoms, including freedom of movement, as well as the continued detention of other senior leaders of the National League for Democracy;

(c) The closure of offices of the National League for Democracy throughout the country and the increased surveillance and imprisonment of members and supporters of the National League for Democracy and other political organizations, as well as the continuing detentions, including of prisoners whose sentences have expired;

(d) The systematic and consistent harassment and intimidation of members of the National League for Democracy by members of the Union Solidarity and Development Association;

(e) The lack of cooperation shown by the Government of Myanmar towards the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Myanmar, in particular with regard to his proposal to visit ethnic nationality areas to investigate allegations of serious human rights violations;

3. Expresses once again its grave concern at:

(a) The ongoing systematic violation of the human rights, including civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, of the people of Myanmar, in particular:

(i) Extrajudicial killing; continuing use of torture; rape and other forms of sexual violence persistently carried out by members of the armed forces; unsatisfactory conditions of detention; forced relocation; wide disrespect for the rule of law and lack of independence of the judiciary; trafficking in persons; forced labour, including child labour; destruction of livelihoods and confiscation of land by the armed forces; and violations of the right to an adequate standard of living, including food, medical care and education;

(ii) Denial of freedom of expression, including freedom of the media, of association, of assembly and of movement;

(iii) Discrimination and persecution on the basis of religious or ethnic background suffered by persons belonging to ethnic minorities, women and children;

(b) The situation of the large number of internally displaced persons and the flow of refugees to neighbouring countries, and recalls in this context the obligations of Myanmar under international law;

4. Calls upon the Government of Myanmar:

(a) To initiate a full and independent inquiry, with international cooperation, into the Depayin incident of 30 May 2003;

(b) To immediately facilitate and cooperate fully with the proposed investigation by the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Myanmar into charges of rape and other abuse of civilians carried out by members of the armed forces in Shan and other states, including unhindered access to the region, and to guarantee the safety of those cooperating with and covered by the investigation;

(c) To immediately secure the safe and unhindered access to all parts of Myanmar of the United Nations and international humanitarian organizations to ensure the provision of humanitarian assistance and to guarantee that it reaches the most vulnerable groups of the population;

(d) To pursue through dialogue and peaceful means an immediate end to conflict with all remaining ethnic groups with which ceasefire agreements have not yet been signed, and to live up to its obligations to improve the development and human rights situation in ceasefire areas;

(e) To take all necessary steps to pursue cooperation with the International Labour Organization, with a view to implementing fully the recommendations of the Commission of Enquiry established to examine the observance by Myanmar of the International Labour Organization Convention concerning Forced or Compulsory Labour, and to create an environment in which the Joint Government of the Union of Myanmar-International Labour Organization Plan of Action for the Elimination of Forced Labour Practices in Myanmar, in particular the facilitator mechanism which it established, may be implemented in a credible manner;

5. Strongly urges the Government of Myanmar:

(a) To end the systematic violations of human rights in Myanmar and to ensure full respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms;

(b) To immediately and unconditionally release Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, other leaders of the National League for Democracy and members of the National League for Democracy detained on or after 30 May 2003 and to allow them to play a full role in bringing about national reconciliation and the transition towards democracy;

(c) To immediately and unconditionally release all other political detainees;

(d) To immediately reverse all the other "temporary" measures imposed following the incident of 30 May 2003, including by reopening all the offices of the National League for Democracy throughout the country;

(e) To immediately lift all restraints on peaceful political activity and to fully guarantee freedom of expression, including freedom of the media, association and assembly;

(f) To put an end to impunity by investigating and bringing to justice any perpetrators of human rights violations, including members of the military and of the Union Solidarity and Development Association, and other government agents in all circumstances;

(g) To enhance cooperation with the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for Myanmar and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Myanmar in order to assess first-hand the situation after 30 May 2003, to bring the country towards a transition to civilian rule, to ensure that they are both granted full and free access to Myanmar and that all persons cooperating with them are not subjected to any form of intimidation, harassment or punishment and, while in Myanmar, to provide them with equal access to the leaders and members of all the country's political parties, including the National League for Democracy;

(h) To restore democracy and respect the results of the 1990 elections and to enter immediately into substantive and structured dialogue with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other leaders of the National League for Democracy towards democratization and national reconciliation and, at an early stage, to include other political leaders in those talks, including representatives of the ethnic groups;

(i) To elaborate the road map, which is still lacking in essential elements such as concrete timing and an adequate plan for the involvement of all political groups and ethnic nationalities, in a way that ensures that the process is transparent and inclusive;

6. Once again urges the Government of Myanmar, as stated in its resolution 57/231 and in Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/12:

(a) To ensure the independence of the judiciary and due process of law;

(b) To consider as a matter of high priority becoming a party to those remaining international human rights instruments to which it is not already party, and to comply fully with its obligations under international human rights instruments;

(c) To put an immediate end to the recruitment and use of child soldiers, inter alia, by some armed ethnic groups, and ensure their disarmament, demobilization and reintegration, to end systematic enforced displacement and provide protection and assistance to internally displaced persons, to allow the safe and dignified voluntary return of refugees, and to carry out the appropriate action to fight the HIV/AIDS epidemic;

7. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To continue to provide his good offices and to pursue his discussions on the situation of human rights and the restoration of democracy with the Government and people of Myanmar, including all relevant parties to the national reconciliation process in Myanmar;

(b) To report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session and to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixtieth session on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution;

(c) To give all necessary assistance to enable his Special Envoy to implement the present resolution and, in the context of the facilitation role, to explore any and all possibilities for discharging fully and effectively his mandate;

(d) To continue to give all necessary assistance to the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Myanmar to enable him to discharge his mandate fully;

8. Decides to continue the consideration of this question at its fifty-ninth session.

Timor-Leste

During the fifty-ninth session of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], the Commission Chairperson, in a statement on Timor-Leste, acknowledged the Government's human rights achievements. He noted the steps taken by Indonesia to bring to justice perpetrators of violations of human rights and humanitarian law in Timor-Leste in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 707] but expressed disappointment at the way in which the trials of those responsible were carried out. The Commission encouraged Indonesia to improve the current legal processes in a transparent way to ensure that justice would be done. The High Commissioner was asked to develop and implement with the Government of Timor-Leste a human rights technical cooperation programme and to report in 2004.

(For information on the human rights situation in Timor-Leste, see p. 685.)

Turkmenistan

Communication. In a 28 March letter to the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2003/G/65], Austria, Canada, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Norway, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States referred to their request to the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) for the establishment of a fact-finding mission to investigate conflicting reports of the circumstances surrounding an alleged attack of 25 November 2002 on the President of Turkmenistan. The countries stated that the report of the mission proceeded with a single rapporteur and was presented to the OSCE Permanent Council on 13 March 2003. They requested that the mission report be circulated to the Commission.

Commission action. On 16 April [res. 2003/11], by a recorded vote of 23 to 16, with 14 abstentions, the Commission, while expressing appreciation at the decision to abolish the death penalty in Turkmenistan, expressed grave concern at the repression of political opposition activities through arbitrary detention, imprisonment and surveillance of persons; the suppression of independent media and freedom of expression; restrictions on the exercise of freedom of thought, conscience and religion; heavy prison sentences given to objectors to compulsory military service on religious grounds; discrimination against minorities; obstacles to marriages of Turkmen with foreigners; curtailment of the right to liberty of movement and freedom to leave the country; and the elections of 6 April, which did not represent a free and fair process. The Commission urged the Government to ensure full respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms; end forced displacement and guarantee freedom of movement inside the country; bring to justice those responsible for human rights violations; remove restrictions on NGO activities; develop a constructive dialogue with the High Commissioner and OHCHR; cooperate with the Commission's mechanisms; and submit reports to relevant UN treaty bodies and implement their recommendations. The Special Rapporteurs on the independence of judges and lawyers, on the question of torture, on extrajudicial, summary and arbitrary executions, on the right to freedom of opinion and expression and on freedom of religion or belief, the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, the Secretary-General's Representative on internally displaced persons and the Secretary-General's Special Representative on the situation of human rights defenders were called on to seek invitations to visit the country. The Secretary-General was requested to bring the Commission's resolution to the attention of all relevant parts of the UN system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/58/508/Add.3], adopted resolution 58/194 by recorded vote (73-40-56) [agenda item 117 (c)].

Situation of human rights in Turkmenistan

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming that all States Members of the United Nations have the obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms and the duty to fulfil the obligations that they have undertaken under the various international instruments in this field,

Expressing its grave concern about the serious and continuing human rights violations occurring in Turkmenistan,

Recalling Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/11 of 16 April 2003,

Taking note of the recommendations outlined in the report of the Rapporteur of the Moscow Mechanism of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, issued on 12 March 2003,

Noting with appreciation the recent offer of the Government of Turkmenistan to invite a delegation of experts of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide technical assistance in the area of human rights as well as the recent visits of the Personal Envoy of the Chairman-in-Office of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe for Participating States in Central Asia and of the High Commissioner on National Minorities of the Organization,

Calls upon the Government of Turkmenistan:

(a) To implement fully the measures set out in Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/11 and to inform the Commission before its sixtieth session of the steps being taken in this regard;

(b) To implement fully the recommendations outlined in the report of the Rapporteur of the Moscow Mechanism of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, to work constructively with the various institutions of the Organization and to facilitate further visits of the Personal Envoy of the Chairman-in-Office of the Organization for Participating States in Central Asia and of the High Commissioner on National Minorities of the Organization;

(c) To develop a constructive dialogue with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and to cooperate fully with all the mechanisms of the Commission on Human Rights;

(d) To grant immediate access by independent bodies, including the International Committee of the Red Cross, as well as lawyers and relatives, to detained persons.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/194:

In favour: Albania, Andorra, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Belgium, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Nauru, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Palau, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay.

Against: Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belarus, Brunei Darussalam, Cambodia, China, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Egypt, Georgia, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritania, Morocco, Myanmar, Niger, Oman, Pakistan, Qatar, Republic of Moldova, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sri Lanka, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brazil, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Congo, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Jamaica, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Madagascar, Malawi, Maldives, Mali, Mongolia, Mozambique, Namibia, Nepal, Nigeria, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Suriname, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Zambia.

Europe

Belarus

On 17 April [res. 2003/14], by a recorded vote of 23 to 14, with 16 abstentions, the Commission expressed deep concern at reports from credible sources implicating senior officials of the Government of Belarus in the forced disappearance and/or summary execution of three political opponents of the incumbent authorities and of a journalist. It also expressed concern about reports of arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment of NGOs, opposition political parties and individuals engaged in opposition activities and independent media, and increased restrictions on religious organizations. It urged Belarus to dismiss or suspend law enforcement officers implicated in forced disappearances and/or summary executions, pending an impartial, credible and full investigation; bring the actions of the police and security forces into conformity with its obligations under relevant international standards; establish an independent judiciary and end impunity; and release journalists and others detained for politically motivated reasons and cease harassment of NGOs and political parties. The Government was urged to cooperate with Commission mechanisms, including by extending invitations to the Special Rapporteurs on the question of torture, on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, and on the right to freedom of opinion and expression, and the Secretary-General's Representative on the situation of human rights defenders and the Working Groups on Arbitrary Detention and on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances.

Cyprus

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 802], the Secretary-General transmitted a March OHCHR report, which provided an overview of human rights issues in Cyprus covering the period up to January 2003 [E/CN.4/2003/31].

The human rights concerns in Cyprus derived predominantly from the division of the island and the political situation. The continuing division had consequences for the enjoyment of the freedoms of movement, property rights, expression, religion and economic, social and cultural rights. Voting rights and the human rights issues pertaining to missing persons were also affected. The Secretary-General concluded that the human rights situation would benefit greatly from a comprehensive settlement of the political impasse.

Commission action. On 17 April [dec. 2003/106], the Commission retained the item on Cyprus on its agenda, on the understanding that previous resolutions would continue to remain operative, including its request to the Secretary-General to report on their implementation.

(See also p. 445.)

Russian Federation

At its fifty-ninth session [E/2003/23], the Commission had before it a draft resolution [E/CN.4/2003/L.13/Rev.1] by which the Commission would have expressed deep concern at reported ongoing violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law in Chechnya. It would also have strongly condemned all terrorist acts and assassinations of local administration officials, religious leaders and other Chechens, as well as two major terrorist attacks in the Russian Federation in 2002—the hostage-taking at a Moscow theatre and the suicide bomb attack on the main government building in Grozny. The draft was rejected by a recorded vote of 21 to 15, with 17 abstentions.

(See p. 794 for details of the visit to the Russian Federation by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on internally displaced persons.)

Middle East

Lebanon

Commission action. On 16 April [res. 2003/8], by a recorded vote of 32 to 1, with 20 abstentions, the Commission called on Israel to comply with the Geneva Conventions for the protection of war victims of 12 August 1949 and the Additional Protocols thereto [YUN 1977, p. 706], release imprisoned Lebanese citizens held as hostages for bargaining purposes and submit to the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon all maps of the landmine fields laid throughout civilian areas. The Secretary-General was asked to bring the Commission's resolution to Israel's attention and to report to the General Assembly in 2003 and to the Commission in 2004.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2003/23], adopted decision 2003/238 by recorded vote (26-2-24) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Human rights situation of the Lebanese detainees in Israel

At its 45th plenary meeting, on 23 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/8 of 16 April 2003, and endorsed the Commission's decision to request the Secretary-General:

(a) To bring Commission resolution 2003/8 to the attention of the Government of Israel and to call upon it to comply with its provisions;

(b) To report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session and to the Commission at its sixtieth session on the results of his efforts in this regard.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2003/238:

In favour: Argentina, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, India, Iran, Jamaica, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Nigeria, Pakistan, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Uganda, Zimbabwe.

Against: Georgia, United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Australia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Peru, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Sweden, Ukraine, United Kingdom.

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 805], the Secretary-General stated that he had asked Israel for information on the extent of the implementation of the Commission's 2002 resolution on the human rights situation of Lebanese detainees in Israel, but had received no reply [E/CN.4/2003/32].

In August [A/58/218], the Secretary-General reported that, pursuant to Economic and Social Council decision 2003/238 (above), he had asked Israel for information on the implementation of Commission resolution 2003/8 regarding Lebanese detainees in Israel (above) and had received no reply.

The General Assembly took note of the report on 22 December (decision 58/539).

Territories occupied by Israel

During 2003, the question of human rights violations in the territories occupied by Israel as a result of the 1967 hostilities in the Middle East was again considered by the Commission on Human Rights. Political and other aspects were considered by the General Assembly, its Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (Committee on Israeli Practices) and other bodies (see PART ONE, Chapter VI).

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 806], the Secretary-General reported that he had brought the Commission's resolution on the occupied Syrian Golan to the attention of all Governments, UN organs, the specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations and international humanitarian organizations [E/CN.4/2003/28]. It was also communicated to the Committee on Israeli Practices, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA).

In a further report [E/CN.4/2003/27], submitted in response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 806], the Secretary-General stated that he had brought the Commission's resolution on the violation of human rights in the occupied Arab territories to the attention of the Government of Israel and all other Governments, UN organs, the specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations and international humanitarian organizations, the Committee on Israeli Practices, the Committee on Palestinian Rights and UNRWA. He had received no reply from Israel.

A January note by the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2003/29] listed all General Assembly reports issued since 26 April 2002 on the situation of the population living in the occupied Arab territories.

Commission action. On 15 April [res. 2003/5], by a recorded vote of 31 to 1 with 21 abstentions, the Commission called on Israel to comply with UN resolutions on the occupied Syrian Golan and demanded that it rescind its decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied territory. It also called on Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the area and to desist from imposing Israeli citizenship and identity cards on the Syrian citizens of the Syrian Golan and from its repressive measures against them. The Secretary-General was requested to bring the Commission's resolution to the attention of all Governments, UN organs, the specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations and international humanitarian organizations, to widely publicize the resolution and to report in 2004.

Also on 15 April [res. 2003/6], by a recorded vote of 33 to 5, with 15 abstentions, the Commission condemned Israel's human rights violations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, its occupation of the territory, the war launched by the Israeli army against Palestinian towns and camps, extrajudicial executions carried out by the Israeli army against Palestinians, the establishment of Israeli settlements, the expropriation of Palestinian homes in Jerusalem and Hebron, the torture of Palestinians during interrogation, the Israeli army's offensives against hospitals and sick persons, and the use of Palestinian citizens as human shields. Israel was called on to desist from all forms of human rights violations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. The Secretary-General was requested to bring the Commission's resolution to the attention of Israel and all other Governments, UN organs, the specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations and international humanitarian organizations, to disseminate it widely and to report in 2004 on its implementation by Israel. He was also asked to provide the Commission with all UN reports issued between its sessions dealing with Palestinians' living conditions under Israeli occupation.

On the same date [res. 2003/7], by a recorded vote of 50 to 1, with 2 abstentions, the Commission, expressing grave concern at the continued escalation of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict (see p. 458), Israeli settlement activities in the occupied territories, the restriction of freedom of movement of the Palestinians, and the construction of the so-called security fence, and condemning all acts of violence, including terrorist attacks, urged Israel to comply with the Commission's previous resolutions; reverse its settlement policy; prevent any new installation of settlers; stop the construction of the security fence; implement the High Commissioner's recommendations [YUN 2000, p. 777]; and guarantee the safety and protection of Palestinian civilians. The parties were urged to cooperate in implementing the road map endorsed by the Quartet (European Union, Russian Federation, United Nations, United States) [YUN 2002, p. 436], with the aim of resuming negotiations on a political settlement.

Report of Special Rapporteur. In a September report [E/CN.4/2004/6], Special Rapporteur John Dugard (South Africa) described the human rights situation in the occupied territories, based on his visit to Gaza, Ramallah, Nablus, Bethlehem, Jericho and Jerusalem (22-29 June).

The Special Rapporteur stated that Israel was building a wall between Israel and the West Bank that, when completed, would be some 450 kilometres long and would incorporate substantial parts of Palestine within Israel. Much of the Palestinian land on the Israeli side of the wall consisted of fertile agricultural land and some of the most important water wells in the region. The path of the wall changed regularly in response to demands from settlers and other political interest groups within Israel and there was no transparency surrounding its construction. The wall had serious human rights implications, as it further restricted the freedom of movement of Palestinians, restricted access to health and education facilities, and resulted in the unlawful taking of Palestinian property. Furthermore, it violated the prohibition of the forcible acquisition of territory and the right to self-determination. The construction of the wall within the West Bank and the continued expansion of settlements, which, on the face of it, had more to do with territorial expansion, de facto annexation or conquest, raised serious doubts about the good faith of Israel's justifications in the name of security.

The restrictions on the freedom of movement imposed on the Palestinian people continued to create a humanitarian crisis. Curfews continued, but without the severity of 2002. However, people under curfew in Hebron, Jenin and parts of Gaza were frequently under tighter and more continuous curfew in 2003. Checkpoints, closures and curfews had had a major impact on the Palestinian economy, resulting in unemployment and poverty; a drop in health standards resulting from inability to access hospitals and clinics; and the failure to acquire nutritious food and sufficient clean water. Children had suffered from school closings and curfews, which made it difficult to reach schools. Some 22 per cent of children under five suffered from acute or chronic malnutrition, while the breakdown of family life had a severe impact on children. The loss of life and killing of civilians continued to rise, as did administrative detention and the mistreatment of prisoners. The destruction of property continued unabated and was particularly acute in Gaza. New Israeli settlements were being built and existing settlements continued to grow. Further evidence of the Government's determination to entrench the settlements was provided by the construction of the wall.

Communications. Israel, on 28 March [E/CN.4/2003/G/60], responding to the Special Rapporteur's report (above), said that Mr. Dugard continued to view Israel's security measures as taking place in a vacuum, without any recognition of the terrorism and security threats that necessitated them. Among other matters, Israel commented on his assertions regarding the humanitarian crisis, children in the conflict and the security fence.

The Commission also received a number of communications from Palestine regarding the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories, describing Israeli military aggression [E/CN.4/2003/G/27, E/CN.4/2003/G/29, E/CN.4/2003/G/30, E/CN.4/2003/G/33, E/CN.4/2003/G/39, E/CN.4/2003/G/40, E/CN.4/2003/G/76, E/CN.4/2003/G/77, E/CN.4/2004/G/2, E/CN.4/2004/G/4, E/CN.4/2004/G/5, E/CN.4/2004/G/7, E/CN.4/2004/G/11, E/CN.4/2004/G/12]. On 15 September [E/CN.4/2004/G/8], Palestine stated its views on the Israeli Government's decision to expel from the Occupied Palestinian Territories President Yasser Arafat, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization and President of the Palestinian National Authority.

(See p. 766 for details of the visit to the Occupied Palestinian Territories by the Special Rapporteur on the right to food.)

This page intentionally left blank

PART THREE

Economic and social questions

This page intentionally left blank

Chapter I

Development policy and international economic cooperation

In 2003, the world economy began to gain momentum following more than two years of sluggish growth. Although the war in Iraq and the outbreak of severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) in several countries caused some setbacks early in the year, the global economy experienced a stronger-than-expected upturn in the second half of the year, raising the overall rate of growth of world output to 2.5 per cent. Despite the improved global prospects, large imbalances remained, making it unlikely that most developing countries would attain the rates of growth necessary for the achievement of the primary Millennium Development Goal (MDG), adopted by the General Assembly in 2000, of halving by 2015 the proportion of the world's people living in extreme poverty.

Eradicating poverty and achieving the other MDGs continued to be a focus of the work of UN bodies in 2003. The Assembly emphasized the vital role of the United Nations in promoting development and partnerships in order to meet the challenges of globalization and to realize the key MDGs of poverty reduction and sustainable development. The Assembly also discussed the ongoing implementation of the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006) and the preparations for the International Year of Microcredit, 2005. The high-level segment of the Economic and Social Council adopted a ministerial declaration aimed at promoting an integrated approach to rural development as a means for eradicating poverty and achieving sustainable development. The Council also endorsed the establishment of the World Solidarity Fund to eradicate poverty, which was set up as a trust fund of the United Nations Development Programme. In April, the Committee of Experts on Public Administration addressed ways to enhance the capacity of public administration for achieving the MDGs.

Follow-up to the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development, which reviewed progress in implementing Agenda 21, the action plan on sustainable development adopted by the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, was also a priority. The Commission on Sustainable Development, which was charged with overseeing Summit follow-up, considered its own future role in that regard, as well as that of major groups. The Assembly reviewed plans by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for implementing the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development (2005-2014).

The implications of science and new technologies, especially information and communication technologies (ICTs), for development remained another focus of UN deliberations during the year. In December, the International Telecommunication Union convened the first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society, which adopted the Declaration of Principles and a Plan of Action to build an inclusive information society. The Assembly considered the role of biotechnology in promoting economic development and proposals for increasing global cybersecurity through the protection of critical information infrastructures. The Council welcomed the orientation of the UN ICT Task Force towards the use of ICTs in the advancement of the MDGs. The Commission on Science and Technology considered technology development and capacity-building for competitiveness in a digital society, with particular emphasis on ICTs.

In addition, a variety of UN organs continued efforts to improve the lives of the millions of people living in particularly vulnerable areas of the world, including the least developed countries (LDCs), small island developing States (SIDS) and landlocked developing countries. In April, the Committee for Development Policy conducted the triennial review of the list of officially designated LDCs, adding one country to the list and recommending two countries for future graduation. In August, the International Ministerial Conference on Transit Transport Cooperation adopted the Almaty Declaration and Programme of Action, a global framework for addressing the special needs of landlocked developing countries and their transit developing neighbours. Preparations were under way for the comprehensive review in 2004 of implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of SIDS, adopted at the global conference on the subject in 1994.

International economic relations

Development and international economic cooperation

A number of UN bodies addressed development and international economic cooperation issues during 2003, including the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council.

The Assembly, by decision 58/528 of 17 December, deferred consideration of the launching of global negotiations on international economic cooperation for development and included the item in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

On 23 December, the Assembly took note of the reports of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee on its discussion of macro-economic policy questions [A/58/481 & Corr.1] (decision 58/544) and on sustainable development and international economic cooperation [A/58/483] (decision 58/548).

Economic and Social Council consideration. On 14 April, the Economic and Social Council held its sixth special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund (IMF)) and the World Trade Organization (WTO) [A/58/77-E/2003/62 & Add.1,2]. It had before it a March note [E/2003/50] by the Secretary-General containing background information on increased coherence, coordination and cooperation of economic policy for the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus, adopted at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953] (see p. 987).

Globalization and interdependence

In response to resolution 57/274 [YUN 2002, p. 814], the Secretary-General submitted a 26 September report on the role of the United Nations in promoting development in the context of globalization and interdependence [A/58/394]. The report assessed the impact of globalization on the realization of the MDGs, adopted by the Millennium Summit in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 51]. It also discussed how to manage globalization so as to maintain and translate the momentum created by the consensus forged at the 2001 WTO Ministerial Meeting [YUN 2001, p. 1432], the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953] and the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [ibid., p. 821] into action to achieve the MDGs. In discussing globalization, poverty reduction and sustainable development, the report called for UN system organizations to undertake mutual reviews of the impact of their work on the MDGs. International financial institutions and WTO should also be part of such evaluation exercises. The Economic and Social Council and the UN System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) could contribute to the reviews. Also examined were the linkages between international migration, financial flows, especially workers' remittances, and trade; between corruption, organized crime, trafficking, arms trade and terrorism and measures to reduce their negative impact on growth and development; and between globalization of production patterns and environmental protection and sustainability.

The report concluded that Governments, international organizations, business institutions, and all civil society actors should take new steps to ensure that the measures and policies they adopted in areas such as finance, trade, science and technology, population and migration were supportive of the MDGs and of the developing countries' integration into the world economy. The General Assembly had an important role to play in maintaining the focus on ensuring that the MDGs and other development goals were placed at the centre of economic institutions and policies. It could also give guidance for continuing the international debate on the governance of globalization following the conclusion of the work of the World Commission on the Social Dimensions of Globalization, established by the International Labour Organization (ILO) in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 814].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/490], adopted resolution 58/225 without vote [agenda item 100].

Role of the United Nations in promoting development in the context of globalization and interdependence

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/169 of 15 December 1998, 54/231 of 22 December 1999, 55/212 of 20 December 2000, 56/209 of 21 December 2001 and 57/274 of 20 December 2002 on the role of the United Nations in promoting development in the context of globalization and interdependence,

Reaffirming the resolve expressed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to ensure that globalization becomes a positive force for the people of the entire world,

Recognizing that globalization and interdependence are opening new opportunities and posing new challenges through trade, investment and capital flows and advances in technology, including information technology, for the growth of the world economy, development and the improvement of living standards around the world, within which some countries have made progress in successfully benefiting from the opportunities of globalization, while others have faced difficulties in coping with its challenges,

Noting with concern that, notwithstanding the current improvement, global economic growth has slipped since the adoption of the Millennium Declaration, with a negative impact on development prospects for developing countries,

Recognizing the importance of appropriate policy responses at the national level by all countries to the challenges of globalization, in particular by pursuing sound policies, stressing that such national policies can yield better results with international support and with an enabling international economic environment, noting the need for support from the international community for the efforts of the least developed countries, in particular in improving their institutional and management capacities, and recognizing that all countries should pursue policies conducive to economic growth and to promoting a favourable global economic environment,

Noting with serious concern that a large number of developing countries have not yet been able to benefit fully from the existing multilateral trading system, and underlining the importance of promoting the integration of developing countries into the world economy so as to enable them to take the fullest possible advantage of the trading opportunities arising from globalization and liberalization,

Bearing in mind the commitment made at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held at Doha from 9 to 14 November 2001, to maintain the process of reform and the liberalization of trade policies, thus ensuring that the system plays its full part in promoting recovery, growth and development, to reaffirm strongly the principles and objectives set out in the Agreement Establishing the World Trade Organization and to pledge to reject the use of protectionism and place development at the heart of the Doha work programme, ensuring that globalization benefits all and that the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, are achieved,

Stressing that the process of reform for a strengthened and stable international financial architecture should be based on broad participation in a genuine multilateral approach, involving all members of the international community, to ensure that the diverse needs and interests of all countries are adequately represented,

Underlining the urgent need to ensure the effective participation of all developing countries in the process of globalization, as an instrument for economic growth and poverty eradication,

Recognizing that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated,

Noting with concern the increasing linkages between corrupt practices and the transfer of illicitly acquired assets, money-laundering and other related organized crimes across national borders, and calling for better international efforts to effectively address these global trends, including through effective economic and banking regulations in all countries and the return of illicitly acquired assets to the countries of origin, in accordance with the United Nations Convention against Corruption, and in this regard welcoming its adoption by the General Assembly,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms that the United Nations has a central role in promoting international cooperation for development and in promoting policy coherence on global development issues, including in the context of globalization and interdependence;

3. Reiterates that success in meeting the objectives of development and poverty eradication depends, inter alia, on good governance, both within individual countries and at the international level, sound economic policies, solid democratic institutions that are responsive to the needs of the people and improved infrastructure, which are the basis for sustained growth, poverty eradication and employment creation, and that transparency in financial, monetary and trading systems and commitment to an open, equitable, rule-based, predictable and non-discriminatory multilateral trading and financial system, which are equally essential;

4. Stresses the need to address asymmetries in the current global system, including those related to the vulnerability of countries to external shocks, the concentration of technical innovation in industrialized countries and the limited international mobility of labour, as well as such issues as increasing the flow of foreign direct investment and enhancing the participation of developing countries in the world trading and financial systems;

5. Welcomes the commitment by all countries to promote national and global economic systems based on the principles of justice, equity, democracy, participation, transparency, accountability and inclusion, as contained in the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development;

6. Strongly urges the international community to take all necessary and appropriate measures, including support for structural and macroeconomic reform, foreign direct investment, enhanced official development assistance, the search for a durable solution to the external debt problem, market access, capacity-building and the dissemination of knowledge and technology, in order to achieve sustainable development and promote the participation in the global economy of all African countries, as well as the least developed countries, the landlocked developing countries and small island developing States;

7. Stresses that, in the increasingly globalizing interdependent world economy, a holistic approach to the interconnected national, international and systematic challenges of financing for development, namely, sustainable, gender-sensitive and people-centred development, is essential in order to open up opportunities for all and to ensure that resources are created and used effectively, and that solid and accountable institutions are established at all levels;

8. Also stresses the special importance of creating an enabling international economic environment through strong cooperative efforts by all countries and institutions to promote equitable economic development in a world economy that benefits all people, and in that context invites developed countries, in particular the major industrialized countries, which have significant weight in influencing world economic growth, when formulating their macroeconomic policies, to take into account whether the effects of those policies in terms of the external economic environment would be favourable to growth and development;

9. Encourages all countries to consider, in the context of existing regional or subregional arrangements, reviewing the contribution of their national financial, trade, debt relief and other policies to the realization of agreed development goals and commitments;

10. Reaffirms the significant importance of an open, universal, equitable, rule-based, predictable, non-discriminatory and balanced multilateral trading system in pursuit of sustained economic growth, poverty eradication and sustainable development, as set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

11. Stresses the need to promote corporate responsibility and accountability, including through the full development and effective implementation of inter-governmental agreements and measures, international initiatives and public-private partnerships and appropriate national regulations, and to support continuous improvement in corporate practices in all countries;

12. Invites all countries, as well as the United Nations, the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization, within their respective mandates, to continue to strengthen interactions with civil society, including the private sector and non-governmental organizations, as important partners in development;

13. Expresses its concern about the setback at the Fifth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held in Cancún, Mexico, from 10 to 14 September 2003, and stresses the importance of redoubling efforts in working towards the successful, timely and development-oriented conclusion of the Doha negotiations no later than 1 January 2005, as set out in the Ministerial Declaration of the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization ("Doha Ministerial Declaration");

14. Notes the importance of advancing current efforts to reform the international financial architecture, as envisaged in the Monterrey Consensus, emphasizes that those efforts need to include the effective participation of developing countries and countries with economies in transition, and in this regard encourages the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank to continue examining the issues of the voice and effective participation of those countries, as provided for in the communiqués of the International Monetary and Financial Committee and the Development Committee at their last meetings, held in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, on 21 and 22 September 2003, and looks forward to the consideration of a road map on the issue at their next meeting in April 2004;

15. Underlines the importance, for the improved access of developing countries to international financial markets, of considering counter-cyclical macroeconomic policies in the face of volatile capital flows and of strengthening macroeconomic stability;

16. Also underlines the fact that, in addressing the linkages between globalization and sustainable development, particular focus must be placed on identifying and implementing policies and practices that advance and strengthen the interdependent and mutually reinforcing pillars of sustainable development, namely, economic development, social development and environmental protection, taking into account the Rio principles, including the principle of common but differentiated responsibilities, as set out in principle 7 of the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development, and bearing in mind that good governance, at both national and international levels, is essential for sustainable development and to facilitate the transfer of environmentally sound technologies on concessional and preferential terms as mutually agreed;

17. Stresses the need to build an inclusive information society, which is intrinsically global in nature, and that therefore national efforts need to be supported by effective international and regional cooperation among Governments, the private sector, civil society and other stakeholders, including the international financial institutions, in order, inter alia, to assist in bridging the digital divide, promoting access to information and communication technologies, creating digital opportunities and harnessing the potential of information and communication technologies for development, and invites the World Summit on the Information Society to encourage all stakeholders in this regard;

18. Reiterates the need to address the specific concerns and needs of the least developed countries and small island developing States, and in this regard calls upon the least developed countries and their development partners, including multilateral financial institutions, to continue to implement expeditiously the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010 and to adopt further measures to effectively integrate the least developed countries into the global economy and the multilateral trading system;

19. Welcomes the Almaty Programme of Action, adopted at the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation, held in Almaty, Kazakhstan, on 28 and 29 August 2003, which addresses the special needs of landlocked developing countries within a new global framework for transit transport cooperation for landlocked and transit developing countries, and calls upon all stakeholders fully and effectively to implement the Programme of Action;

20. Emphasizes the importance of recognizing and addressing the specific concerns of countries with economies in transition so as to help them to benefit from globalization, with a view to their full integration into the world economy;

21. Invites all relevant agencies of the United Nations system, through, inter alia, the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, within existing resources, to review the impact of its work on the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and to focus its report to the Economic and Social Council on progress made in this regard;

22. Stresses the need for the United Nations system to continue to address the social dimension of globalization, encourages in that regard the work of the International Labour Organization on the social dimension of globalization, and takes note of the ongoing work of its World Commission on the Social Dimensions of Globalization;

23. Also stresses the importance of migration as a phenomenon accompanying increased globalization, including its impact on economies, and underlines further the need for greater coordination and cooperation among countries as well as relevant regional and international organizations;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on globalization and interdependence, in the context of the present resolution, which should focus on ways to forge greater coherence in order to advance the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Globalization and interdependence".

Development through partnership

Commission for Social Development action. In February, the Commission for Social Development [E/2003/26] (see p. 1099), as part of its consideration of its priority theme, "National and international cooperation for social development", discussed the topic of forging partnerships for social development. It recommended for adoption by the Economic and Social Council a set of agreed conclusions calling for renewed and effective partnerships between developed and developing countries and countries with economies in transition, and among all relevant actors, to achieve the internationally agreed social development objectives and commitments. The Council, by decision 2003/15 of 21 July, endorsed the Commission's conclusions on partnerships (see p. 1100).

Commission on Sustainable Development action. The Commission on Sustainable Development, in April/May [E/2003/29] (see p. 840), discussed the issue of partnership initiatives on the basis of proposals contained in the Secretary-General's February report on the follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development and the future role of the Commission on Sustainable Development: the implementation track [E/CN.17/2003/2]. It proposed criteria and guidelines for the development of partnerships in the context of the World Summit on Sustainable Development process and its follow-up, which were adopted by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 2003/61 of 25 July (see p. 842).

Private sector partnerships

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/76 [YUN 2001, p. 744], the Secretary-General submitted an 18 August report on enhanced cooperation between the United Nations and all relevant partners, in particular the private sector [A/58/227]. The report reviewed recent developments, including the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] and the International Conference on Financing for Development [ibid., p. 953], to illustrate the variety of partnership arrangements between UN entities and the non-State sector, and attempted to derive lessons and formulate proposals for meeting the challenges ahead. It noted that, in recent years, partnerships between the United Nations and non-State actors—including businesses, foundations and other private sector organizations—had played an increasingly important role and were considered an important tool to complement the Organization's efforts to achieve UN goals and objectives, including the MDGs. At the same time, such partnerships contributed to the Organization's renewal by introducing new methods of work. Partnerships took many forms, ranging from time-bound project partnerships involving a small number of actors to global initiatives involving a multitude of actors. They were an integral part of the work of many UN organizations, especially those with on-the-ground capacities to deliver. UN organizations were still learning how best to utilize the potential benefits of partnerships and were learning from experience gained so far. Among the lessons learned were that successful partnerships had to prove their worth in a practical manner by achieving concrete results and that they needed to make good business sense.

However, to exploit fully the potential contribution that partnerships could make to the Organization's work, a more coherent and systematic approach to developing and supporting them across the UN system was needed. Such an approach could include providing stronger incentives for their development, sharing best practices more systematically, developing a stronger skill base and creating more robust processes for reporting and accountability. The new UN Partnership Office, which would bring under one umbrella the Global Compact Office and the UN Fund for International Partnerships (UNFIP), would be well placed to build on lessons learned thus far, enhance quality assurance and provide a more solid institutional framework in support of new and promising partnership initiatives. It would also identify strategies for ensuring a more systematic and coordinated approach to developing effective cooperation with non-State actors and consider the political issues raised by the Organization's increased use of partnership approaches as a modality for delivering its goals.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/129 [draft: A/58/L.51 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 46].

Towards global partnerships

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/215 of 21 December 2000 and 56/76 of 11 December 2001,

Reaffirming the vital role of the United Nations, in particular the General Assembly, in the promotion of partnerships in the context of globalization,

Underlining the intergovernmental nature of the United Nations,

Reaffirming its resolve to create an environment, at the national and global levels alike, that is conducive to sustainable development and the elimination of poverty,

Recalling the objectives formulated in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, particularly in regard to developing partnerships through the provision of greater opportunities to the private sector, non-governmental organizations and civil society in general so as to enable them to contribute to the realization of the goals and programmes of the Organization, in particular in the pursuit of development and the eradication of poverty,

Underlining the importance of the contribution of the private sector, non-governmental organizations and civil society in general to the implementation of the outcomes of United Nations conferences in the economic, social and related fields,

Recalling the central role and responsibility of Governments in national and international policy-making,

Stressing that efforts to meet the challenges of globalization could benefit from enhanced cooperation between the United Nations and all relevant partners, in particular the private sector, in order to ensure that globalization becomes a positive force for all,

Underlining the fact that cooperation between the United Nations and all relevant partners, in particular the private sector, shall serve the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations and make concrete contributions to the realization of the goals contained in the Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits and their reviews, in particular in the area of development and the eradication of poverty, and shall be undertaken in a manner that maintains the integrity, impartiality and independence of the Organization,

Emphasizing that all relevant partners, in particular the private sector, can contribute in several ways to addressing the obstacles confronted by developing countries in mobilizing the resources needed to finance their sustainable development, and to the realization of the development goals of the United Nations through, inter alia, financial resources, access to technology, management expertise, and support for programmes, including through the reduced pricing of drugs, where appropriate, for the prevention, care and treatment of HIV/AIDS and other diseases,

Encouraging the private sector to engage as reliable and consistent partners in the development process and to take into account not only the economic and financial, but also the developmental, social, human rights, gender and environmental implications of their undertakings and, in general, towards accepting and implementing the principle of good corporate citizenship, that is, bringing social values and responsibilities to bear on a conduct and policy premised on profit incentives, in conformity with national laws and regulations,

Recalling that the International Conference on Financing for Development welcomed all efforts to encourage good corporate citizenship and noted the initiative undertaken in the United Nations to promote global partnerships,

Noting that the World Summit on Sustainable Development, in order to promote the effective implementation of Agenda 21 at the international level, encouraged partnership initiatives for implementation by all relevant stakeholders to support the outcome of the Summit,

Also noting that the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 2003/61 of 25 July 2003, reiterated, upon the recommendation of the Commission on Sustainable Development at its eleventh session, that partnerships for sustainable development, as voluntary multi-stakeholder initiatives, contribute to the implementation of Agenda 21 and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Further noting that the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 2003/15 of 21 July 2003, endorsed the conclusion adopted by the Commission for Social Development at its forty-first session that, at the international level, recent initiatives towards building voluntary partnerships for social development should be encouraged,

Taking note of the work of the United Nations on partnerships, such as the Global Compact Initiative launched by the Secretary-General, the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force and the United Nations Fund for International Partnerships, and welcoming the establishment of a multitude of partnerships at the field level, entered into by various United Nations agencies, non-State partners and Member States, such as the United Nations Public-Private Alliance for Rural Development,

Stressing that partnerships should focus on the achievement of concrete results,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Stresses that the principles and approaches that govern such partnerships should be built on the firm foundation of United Nations purposes and principles, as set out in the Charter of the United Nations, and invites the United Nations system to continue to adhere to a common and systematic approach to partnership which, without imposing undue rigidity in partnership agreements, includes the following principles: common purpose, transparency, bestowing no unfair advantages upon any partner of the United Nations, mutual benefit and mutual respect, accountability, respect for the modalities of the United Nations, striving for balanced representation of relevant partners from developed and developing countries and countries with economies in transition, sectoral and geographic balance, and not compromising the independence and neutrality of the United Nations system in general and the agencies in particular;

3. Encourages the relevant United Nations bodies and agencies, and invites the Bretton Woods institutions, as well as the World Trade Organization, to continue to explore possibilities of enhancing the use of partnerships to better implement their goals and programmes, in particular in the pursuit of development and the eradication of poverty, bearing in mind the different mandates, modes of operation and objectives of the bodies and agencies, as well as the particular roles of the non-State partners involved;

4. Recalls that the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation designated the Commission on Sustainable Development to serve as a focal point for discussions on partnerships that promote sustainable development, and in this context reaffirms the criteria and guidelines for partnerships in the context of the World Summit on Sustainable Development process and its follow-up, as set out by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 2003/61;

5. Stresses the importance of the contribution of voluntary partnerships to the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, while reiterating that they are a complement to but not intended to substitute for the commitments made by Governments with a view to achieving these goals;

6. Also stresses that partnerships should be consistent with national laws, national development strategies and plans, as well as the priorities of countries where their implementation takes place, bearing in mind the relevant guidance provided by Governments;

7. Calls upon all bodies within the United Nations system that engage in partnerships to ensure the integrity and independence of the Organization and to include information on partnerships in their regular reporting, as appropriate, on their web sites and through other means;

8. Stresses that partnerships should be designed and implemented in a transparent and accountable manner, and in that regard calls upon partners to provide to and exchange relevant information with Governments, other stakeholders and the relevant United Nations agencies and bodies and other international organizations in which they engage, in an appropriate way, including through reports, with particular attention to the importance of sharing among partnerships information on their practical experience;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to promote the transparency and accountability of partnerships;

10. Acknowledges that serving successful partnerships requires specific skills on the part of the Secretariat staff, and calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to support and further to develop such skills, through appropriate training and the sharing of best practices;

11. Recalls the relevant paragraph in its resolution 57/300 of 20 December 2002;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Progress, challenges and constraints to achieving major UN development goals

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/246 [YUN 2002, p. 818], the Secretary-General submitted a 28 August report on progress towards and challenges and constraints to the achievement of the major development goals and objectives adopted by the United Nations during the past decade [A/58/327]. The report noted that, since the adoption of the 1990 Declaration on International Economic Cooperation, in particular the Revitalization of Economic Growth and Development of the Developing Countries, in General Assembly resolution S-18/3 [YUN 1990, p. 337], and the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade (the 1990s), adopted by the Assembly in resolution 45/199 [ibid., p. 343], the United Nations had held a series of global conferences that had contributed to the forging of a new global consensus on development goals and policies. Also, in 2000, the Assembly had adopted, by resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49], the Millennium Declaration, in which the international community resolved to move towards the implementation of the commitments made in the conferences by establishing measurable targets, referred to as the MDGs [ibid., p. 51]. The report also addressed a selection of challenges to and opportunities for development in the first decade of the new millennium. Among the positive forces for development, the report identified opportunities offered by technological progress for attaining food security and the contribution of information and communication technologies. Constraints to global development included the fight against HIV/AIDS, the challenges arising from demographic trends, including ageing and social safety nets, youth unemployment and migrant workers, and the reversal of the peace dividend due to increasing global military spending.

The report concluded that the focus of the international community's development efforts should be on implementation of the MDGs and the goals of the global conferences, which provided a concrete agenda for development in the new millennium. However, the progress achieved in the first quarter of the current decade in almost all fields was less than what was required to achieve all the development goals and targets established in recent years. Thus, extraordinary efforts and measures were required by the international community and Governments in all parts of the world to revitalize development.

On 23 December, by decision 58/549, the Assembly took note of the report.

Coercive economic measures

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/179 [YUN 2001, p. 746], the Secretary-General submitted an 11 September report [A/58/301] summarizing replies received from 10 Governments in response to his request for information on the issue of unilateral economic measures as a means of political and economic coercion against developing countries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/481/Add.1], adopted resolution 58/198 by recorded vote (125-1-37) [agenda item 91 (a)].

Unilateral economic measures as a means of political and economic coercion against developing countries

The General Assembly,

Recalling the relevant principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, which states, inter alia, that no State may use or encourage the use of unilateral economic, political or any other type of measures to coerce another State in order to obtain from it the subordination of the exercise of its sovereign rights,

Bearing in mind the general principles governing the international trading system and trade policies for development contained in relevant resolutions, rules and provisions of the United Nations and the World Trade Organization,

Recalling its resolutions 44/215 of 22 December 1989, 46/210 of 20 December 1991, 48/168 of 21 December 1993, 50/96 of 20 December 1995, 52/181 of 18 December 1997, 54/200 of 22 December 1999 and 56/179 of 21 December 2001,

Gravely concerned that the use of unilateral coercive economic measures adversely affects the economy and development efforts of developing countries in particular and has a general negative impact on international economic cooperation and on worldwide efforts to move towards a non-discriminatory and open multilateral trading system,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Urges the international community to adopt urgent and effective measures to eliminate the use of unilateral coercive economic measures against developing countries that are not authorized by relevant organs of the United Nations or are inconsistent with the principles of international law as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and that contravene the basic principles of the multilateral trading system;
3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to monitor the imposition of measures of this nature and to study the impact of such measures on the affected countries, including the impact on trade and development;
4. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/198:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Israel, Japan, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Monaco, Norway, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, San Marino, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Ukraine.

The Assembly, on 4 November, adopted resolution 58/7 on the necessity of ending the economic, commercial and financial embargo imposed by the United States against Cuba (see p. 286).

Sustainable development

Follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development

In 2003, several UN bodies, including the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Sustainable Development, addressed implementation of the outcomes of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821], in particular the Johannesburg Declaration and the Plan of Implementation, which outlined actions and targets for stepping up implementation of Agenda 21—a programme of action for sustainable development worldwide, adopted at the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED) [YUN 1992, p. 672]. The actions and targets related to the five priority areas of water and sanitation, energy, health, agriculture and biodiversity (known as the WEHAB issues) and to new partnerships for sustainable development.

Commission on Sustainable Development consideration. As the main body responsible for coordinating and monitoring implementation of the Summit outcomes, the Commission on Sustainable Development, at its eleventh session (New York, 29 January, 28 April–9 May) [E/2003/29], discussed the Summit follow-up during its high-level segment (28–30 April). A multi-stakeholder dialogue and five regional implementation forums, held during the high-level segment, contributed to the deliberations. The Commission had before it a 21 February report of the Secretary-General on follow-up to the World

Summit and the future role of the Commission: implementation track [E/CN.17/2003/2], which discussed the outcomes of the Summit and their implications for follow-up at all levels, the future role of the Commission and the role of partnerships in meeting the Summit's objectives. The Secretary-General stated that, in order to achieve the specific goals and time-bound targets contained in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, the UN system, Governments and other actors would have to significantly change their policies, programmes and modalities of work. While the primary focus of implementation remained at the national level, UN agencies, funds and programmes would assist Governments by supporting national sustainable development strategies. The United Nations Development Group, led by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), would play a major role in promoting integration of the follow-up to the Summit and in ensuring that operational activities were coordinated and focused on practical results. At the regional level, the regional commissions and other regional organizations would need to reorient their activities to pursue the goal of sustainable development more effectively. At the global level, the Plan of Implementation required UN system-wide policy coherence and consistency. It called for major changes in the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development, greater involvement of the Economic and Social Council in sustainable development-related work and stronger linkages with the governing bodies of UN agencies, funds and programmes. The Commission would have to integrate the cross-sectoral dimension of the various sectoral issues and focus on the interrelationship between them, devote more attention to reviewing implementation and suggesting measures to overcome obstacles and undertake implementation reviews and policy discussions and negotiations in alternate years. The Commission's methods of work would therefore vary considerably for the two alternating sessions. Changes in the methods of work could include the redesign of the multi-stakeholder dialogues, creating a forum for partnerships and regional implementation forums. The Commission's post-Johannesburg programme of work needed to be linked more directly with practical implementation and progress towards the agreed goals and targets. The programme for the next decade should have the flexibility to allow the Commission to address emerging challenges, which would require changing and modifying the programme of work over the years. The nature of the outcomes of the Commission was also expected to change, with decisions being more specific, action-oriented and focused, based on comprehensive and up-to-date reports on implementation. The Commission could also provide a forum to nurture and foster partnerships. The Secretary-General submitted, in annexes to his report, specific proposals for meeting the new challenges through innovations in the work of the Commission; a proposed matrix of issues on which the Commission could focus; a proposed typical two-year work cycle of the Commission; proposed new organizational arrangements; a flow chart of the Commission's proposed two-year cycle; a flow chart of the Commission's transition work cycle (2003-early 2005); and lessons learned through major group participation in the Commission and the Summit processes.

The Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption a draft resolution on the future programme, organization and methods of work of the Commission (resolution 2003/61) (see p. 842).

Implementation activities

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/253 [YUN 2002, p. 825], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on activities undertaken in implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Implementation of Agenda 21 and the outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development [A/58/210]. He provided an overview of initial actions taken by Governments, the UN system, intergovernmental bodies and major groups in follow-up to the World Summit and reviewed activities and proposals by various stakeholders aimed at meeting Summit goals and targets.

In his proposed 2004-2005 programme budget (see p. 1399), the Secretary-General had aligned the activities of the United Nations with the priorities identified by the General Assembly, one of which was the promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development. The five UN regional commissions were integrating the Summit outcomes with their ongoing work and reorienting relevant programme activities towards focused implementation. The Economic Commission for Europe agreed to mainstream the dimensions of sustainable development into all areas of its work (see p. 1016) and the other commissions were taking steps to incorporate the Summit outcomes into their intergovernmental and expert group meetings. The Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) [A/58/25] (see p. 1036) had called for full and concrete implementation of the Summit outcomes and agreed that UNEP should have an important role to play in helping countries to develop policies and legislation to deal with environmental impacts associated with globalization.

A major international event was the International Expert Meeting on the 10-Year Framework of Programmes for Sustainable Consumption and Production (Marrakech, Morocco, 16-19 June), organized by the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs, in cooperation with UNEP, which agreed on the Marrakech Process on sustainable consumption and production.

The report noted that there was great enthusiasm and dynamism in the follow-up to the Summit and consensus on the sharper focus needed on implementation. An important thrust of implementation had been to identify obstacles and constraints and to share lessons learned and best practices at all levels. The widely varied actions and partnership initiatives being implemented at the national, regional and international levels demonstrated the imperative of strengthened cooperation and coordination within and between organizations of the UN system and other international institutions. The Commission on Sustainable Development, as the high-level intergovernmental body on sustainable development within the UN system, provided an important forum for reviewing progress in implementation, for sharing experiences and lessons learned in implementation at the country, regional and global levels and for integrating such experiences and lessons with policy review and guidance. The report concluded with several recommendations for General Assembly action.

CEB consideration. The UN System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), at its first regular session (Paris, 25-26 April) [CEB/2003/1], reviewed the deliberations of its High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP) at its fifth session (Rome, 26-27 March) [CEB/2003/4] on the UN system's follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development. CEB asked HLCP to further elaborate its recommendations on the overall approaches to the follow-up to the Summit in the light of the Board's observations and to focus its further work on the substance of Summit follow-up. In that regard, CEB highlighted the need for: coherence and consistency and strong linkages among operational, regional and global levels; country ownership of the follow-up process; coordination support for capacity-building and full use of existing country-level mechanisms; a focus on sustainability and productivity, and on natural resources as the engine for sustainable growth; greater attention to the regional dimensions of the follow-up; and linking implementation to the broader processes of integrated follow-up to UN conferences and summits, particularly the Millennium Summit.

At its second regular session (New York, 31 October-1 November) [CEB/2003/2], CEB endorsed the conclusions of HLCP at its sixth session (Rome, 18-19 September) [CEB/2003/7] on inter-agency collaborative arrangements for the integrated follow-up to Summit outcomes in the areas of freshwater, water and sanitation, energy, oceans and coastal areas, and patterns of consumption and production. Executive heads asked the Committee to take account of the multi-year programme of work of the Commission on Sustainable Development (see p. 847) in framing its future work programme on follow-up to the World Summit. The Board requested HLCP to continue to monitor implementation of inter-agency arrangements for follow-up to the Summit to ensure policy and programme coherence.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/485], adopted resolution 58/218 without vote [agenda item 95].

Implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/199 of 20 December 2000, 56/226 of 24 December 2001, 57/253 of 20 December 2002 and 57/270 A and B of 20 December 2002 and 23 June 2003, respectively,

Recalling also the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development, Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21, the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Reaffirming the commitment to implement the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, including the time-bound goals and targets, and other internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Expressing its satisfaction that the Commission on Sustainable Development, at its eleventh session, agreed on its new organization of work and multi-year programme of work, as well as new methods of work aimed at promoting and supporting implementation and the provision for the Commission to work in a series of two-year action-oriented implementation cycles, alternating review and policy years,

Noting the adoption by the Commission, at its eleventh session, of criteria and guidelines on partnership initiatives voluntarily undertaken by some Governments, international organizations and major groups, announced at the World Summit on Sustainable Development and in the follow-up to the Summit, as endorsed by the Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming the continuing need to ensure a balance between economic development, social development and environmental protection as interdependent and mutually reinforcing pillars of sustainable development,

Reaffirming also that poverty eradication, changing unsustainable patterns of production and consumption and protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development are overarching objectives of, and essential requirements for, sustainable development,

Noting the convening in Marrakech, Morocco, from 16 to 19 June 2003, of an international expert meeting on a ten-year framework of programmes for sustainable consumption and production,

Recognizing that good governance within each country and at the international level is essential for sustainable development,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the activities undertaken in implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development;

2. Reiterates that sustainable development is a key element of the overarching framework for United Nations activities, in particular for achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

3. Calls upon Governments, all relevant international and regional organizations, the Economic and Social Council, the United Nations funds and programmes, the regional commissions and specialized agencies, the international financial institutions, the Global Environment Facility and other intergovernmental organizations, in accordance with their respective mandates, as well as major groups, to take action to ensure the effective implementation of and follow-up to the commitments, programmes and time-bound targets adopted at the Summit, and encourages them to report on concrete progress in that regard;

4. Calls for the implementation of the commitments, programmes and time-bound targets adopted at the Summit and, to that end, for the fulfilment of the provisions relating to the means of implementation, as contained in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to strengthen system-wide inter-agency cooperation and coordination for the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and in that regard to report on such inter-agency cooperation and coordination activities to the Commission on Sustainable Development and the Economic and Social Council in 2004;

6. Welcomes the decision of the Commission at its eleventh session to invite the regional commissions, in collaboration with the secretariat of the Commission, to consider organizing regional implementation meetings in order to contribute to the work of the Commission, and in this regard urges the regional commissions to take into account the relevant thematic clusters contained in the Commission's programme of work and to provide inputs as specified by the Commission at its eleventh session;

7. Also welcomes the decision of the Commission at its eleventh session to invite other regional and subregional bodies and institutions within and outside the United Nations system to contribute to the preparations for the Commission's review and policy sessions and the intergovernmental preparatory meeting;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, in reporting to the Commission at its twelfth session on the state of implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, on the basis of inputs from all levels, as specified by the Commission at its eleventh session, to submit:

(a) One report on each of the issues of water, sanitation and human settlement, to be addressed in an integrated manner during the session, which should contain a detailed review of the progress of implementation relating to those issues, taking into account, as appropriate, their interlinkages, while addressing the cross-cutting issues identified by the Commission at its eleventh session;

(b) A report on overall progress in the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, reflecting:

(i) Cross-cutting issues identified by the Commission at its eleventh session;

(ii) Progress made in the three dimensions of sustainable development and their integration;

(iii) Constraints, challenges, opportunities, best practices, information-sharing and lessons learned;

9. Invites the Bureau of the Commission at its twelfth session to continue to recommend to the Commission the specific organizational modalities through open-ended and transparent consultations to be conducted in a timely manner, following the established United Nations rules of procedure, bearing in mind that the activities during Commission meetings should provide for balanced involvement of participants from all regions, as well as for gender balance;

10. Decides to allocate the resources previously devoted to the former ad hoc intersessional working groups of the Commission to support the participation of representatives of member States of the Commission in one of their respective regional meetings in each implementation cycle;

11. Invites donor countries to consider supporting the participation of experts from developing countries in the areas of water, sanitation and human settlement in the next review and policy sessions of the Commission;

12. Decides that resources released by the termination of the work of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources for Development, whose work has been transferred to the Commission, shall be used to support the work of the Commission;

13. Encourages Governments and organizations at all levels, as well as major groups, including the scientific community and educators, to undertake results-oriented initiatives and activities to support the work of the Commission and to promote and facilitate the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, including through voluntary multi-stakeholder partnership initiatives;

14. Encourages Governments to participate, at the appropriate level, through representatives of relevant departments and agencies responsible for water, sanitation and human settlement, in the next review and policy sessions of the Commission,

15. Requests the Secretariat to submit a summary report containing synthesized information on partnerships to the Commission at its twelfth session, in accordance with its programme and organization of work, noting the particular relevance of such reports in review years, with a view to sharing lessons learned and best practices and identifying and addressing problems, gaps and constraints in the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

16. Requests the Commission, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 47/191 of 22 December 1992 and as specified by the Commission at its eleventh session, to examine progress made in the cross-cutting issues in the relevant thematic clusters, utilizing inputs from all levels;

17. Requests the Economic and Social Council to implement the provisions of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation relevant to its mandate, in particular to promote the implementation of Agenda 21 by strengthening system-wide coordination;

18. Urges the Secretariat, in the preparation of the reports of the Secretary-General referred to in paragraph 8 above, to take due account of national reports;

19. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development", and requests the Secretary-General, at that session, to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Commission on Sustainable Development

The Commission on Sustainable Development held an organizational session on 27 January and the second part of its eleventh session in New York from 28 April to 9 May [E/2003/29]. The session's high-level segment focused on the Commission's future role in the context of follow-up to the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development (see p. 838) and included three interactive high-level round tables and five regional implementation forums. A multi-stakeholder dialogue addressed the role of major groups in relation to the future work of the Commission and implementation of the Summit outcomes.

The Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption two draft resolutions: one on the Commission's future programme, organization and working methods (see below) and the other on preparations for an international meeting to review implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States (SIDS) (see p. 871). It also recommended to the Council for adoption a decision on the report of the eleventh session and the provisional agenda for the twelfth. The Commission adopted a decision [dec. 11/1] recommending Council consideration of the status of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) that were accredited to the World Summit so that the Commission could benefit from their contributions, and another decision [dec. 11/2] asking the Council to consider the term of the Commission's Bureau for future sessions, taking into account the Commission's two-year work cycle.

The Commission had before it the report of the Secretary-General on the follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development and the future role of the Commission (see p. 838); a 7 February letter from Austria [E/CN.17/2003/4], transmitting the executive summary of the third meeting of the Global Forum on Sustainable Energy (Graz, Austria, 27-29 November 2002); proposed revisions to subprogramme 4, Sustainable development, of programme 7, Economic and social affairs, of the medium-term plan for 2002-2005 [E/CN.17/2003/4]; and the draft programme of work for the UN Division for Sustainable Development for the 2004-2005 biennium [E/CN.17/2003/5].

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 July [meeting 49], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Sustainable Development [E/2003/29], adopted resolution 2003/61 without vote [agenda item 13 (a)].

Future programme, organization and methods of work of the Commission on Sustainable Development

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development, Agenda 21 and the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21,

Recalling also the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), adopted at the World Summit,

Reaffirming in that regard the commitment to achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences held and international agreements made since 1992,

Recalling that the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation will build further on the achievements made since the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development and that the Plan expedites the realization of the remaining goals; to that end, committing itself to undertaking concrete actions and measures at all levels and to enhancing international cooperation, taking into account the Rio principles, including, inter alia, the principle of common but differentiated responsibilities as set out in principle 7 of the Rio Declaration, efforts that will also promote the integration of the three components of sustainable development—economic development, social development and environmental protection—as interdependent and mutually reinforcing pillars; and recalling that poverty eradication, changing unsustainable patterns of production and consumption, and protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development are overarching objectives of, and essential requirements for, sustainable development.

Reaffirming that the Commission on Sustainable Development should continue to be the high-level commission responsible for sustainable development within the United Nations system,

Reaffirming also the mandate of the Commission on Sustainable Development as stipulated in Agenda 21, General Assembly resolution 47/191 of 22 December 1992 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation,

Taking into account General Assembly resolution 57/253 of 20 December 2002,

Having considered the report of the Commission on Sustainable Development on its eleventh session,

Future organization of work of the Commission

1. Decides that the organization of work of the Commission on Sustainable Development should contribute to advancing the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation at all levels;

2. Also decides that in order to fulfil its mandate the work of the Commission will be organized in a series of two-year action-oriented implementation cycles, which will include a review session and a policy session. The cycles will function as follows:

(a) The review sessions of the Commission, to be held in April/May for a period of two to three weeks in the first year of the cycle, will undertake an evaluation of progress in implementing Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, while focusing on identifying constraints and obstacles in the process of implementation with regard to the selected thematic cluster of issues for the cycle;

(b) The review sessions will include a high-level segment, an exchange of regional experiences, dialogues with experts, including scientific experts, and sharing of best practices and lessons learned, with a view to facilitating implementation, as well as capacity-building activities, such as learning centres and partnership fairs;

(c) The review sessions will undertake the above-mentioned evaluation on the basis of:

- (i) The reports of the Secretary-General on the state of implementation, which should reflect overall progress in the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, based on information provided in particular in countries' reports and in reports by United Nations organizations and bodies as identified in subparagraph (ii) below, and on information from regions and subregions, as appropriate, as well as major groups. In addition, the reports of the Secretary-General on the state of implementation should contain a detailed review of progress in implementation in the selected thematic cluster of issues for the cycle at all levels, and should also reflect new challenges and opportunities related to the implementation of Agenda 21;

- (ii) The contributions of United Nations agencies, programmes and funds, the Global Environment Facility and international financial and trade institutions;
- (iii) The outcomes of regional and subregional meetings and activities, as appropriate;
- (iv) The contributions of major groups, including scientific experts, as well as educators, taking into account paragraphs 139 (g) and 149 (c) and (d) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, on their results-oriented activities concerning the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(d) The review session evaluation should enable an improved understanding of priority concerns in the implementation of the selected thematic cluster of issues and facilitate an effective policy discussion in the course of the policy year with a view to strengthening implementation in those areas;

(e) The outcome of the review session will be a report, including a chairperson's summary, identifying constraints and obstacles and possible approaches and best practices for the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(f) In the policy year, the Commission will convene an intergovernmental preparatory meeting for one week in New York in February/March to discuss policy options and possible actions to address the constraints and obstacles in the process of implementation identified during the review year;

(g) The discussions of the intergovernmental preparatory meeting will be based on the outcome of the review session, reports by the Secretary-General as well as other relevant inputs. Based on those discussions, the Chair will prepare a draft negotiating document for consideration at the policy session;

(h) The policy sessions of the Commission, to be held in April/May of the second year of the cycle, will take policy decisions on practical measures and options to expedite implementation in the selected thematic cluster of issues, taking account of the discussions of the intergovernmental preparatory meeting, the reports of the Secretary-General and other relevant inputs;

(i) The review sessions and the policy sessions should mobilize further action by all implementation actors to overcome obstacles and constraints in the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and should address new challenges and opportunities and share lessons learned and best practices;

(j) Specific organizational modalities for Commission meetings will be recommended by the Bureau of the Commission through open-ended and transparent consultations conducted in a timely manner, following the established United Nations rules of procedure. Activities during Commission meetings should provide for balanced involvement of participants from all regions, as well as for gender balance;

3. Decides, in order to allow effective consideration of regional and subregional inputs throughout the implementation cycle and to ensure maximum flexibility:

(a) To invite the regional commissions, in collaboration with the secretariat of the Commission on Sustainable Development, to consider organizing regional implementation meetings in order to contribute to the work of the Commission, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and in collaboration with other regional and sub-regional organizations and bodies, as appropriate, as well as the regional offices of funds, programmes and international finance and trade institutions and other organizations and bodies of the United Nations system. Such meetings should preferably take place before the review session of the Commission, and should:

- (i) Contribute to advancing the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;
- (ii) Focus on the thematic cluster of issues to be addressed in the ongoing implementation cycle;
- (iii) Provide input to the reports of the Secretary-General and the sessions of the Commission. Those inputs may include identification of obstacles and constraints, new challenges and opportunities related to the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and sharing of lessons learned and best practices;
- (iv) Provide for contributions from major groups, taking into account paragraphs 139 (g) and 149 (c) and (d) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(b) To invite the General Assembly to consider using the resources previously devoted to the former ad hoc intersessional working groups of the Commission to support the participation of representatives of member States of the Commission in one of their respective regional meetings in each implementation cycle;

(c) To invite the regional commissions to provide other inputs to the review and policy sessions of the Commission and the intergovernmental preparatory meeting;

(d) To invite other regional and subregional bodies and institutions within and outside the United Nations system to contribute to the preparations for the review and policy sessions of the Commission and the intergovernmental preparatory meeting;

4. Recommends to the General Assembly that resources released by the termination of the work of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources for Development, whose work has been transferred to the Commission, could be used to support the work of the Commission;

5. Invites Governments, as well as organizations at all levels and major groups, to undertake results-oriented initiatives and activities that support the programme of work of the Commission and promote and facilitate the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation. The results of such initiatives and activities should be an input to the work of the Commission, as appropriate;

6. Decides that the results of the work of the Commission could also include the sharing of best practices and lessons learned, capacity-building activities, exchange of experiences concerning the implementation of sustainable development strategies, as appropriate, and partnerships that support the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

7. Also decides that Commission sessions should include high-level segments, involving ministers or their representatives with responsibilities relevant to the thematic cluster of issues under discussion. The segments should be organized so that ministerial leadership, oversight and guidance in decision-making concerning the outcomes of the sessions would be enhanced. High-level segments should include focused dialogue, with the active participation of agencies, funds, programmes and other organizations of the United Nations system, international finance and trade institutions, and representatives of major groups at the appropriate level, taking into account paragraphs 139 (g) and 149 (c) and (d) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

8. Further decides to organize the periodic consideration of sustainable development themes in regard to the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, including the means of implementation, and invites the Commission to submit recommendations to the Council with regard to such themes, which may include recommendations to assist the Council with its work in the pursuance of paragraph 144 of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, including its role in promoting system-wide coordination;

Multi-year programme of work of the Commission for the period after 2003

9. Decides to adopt the multi-year programme of work of the Commission for the period after 2003 as outlined in the annex to the present resolution;

10. Also decides that the implementation of that programme of work will be guided by the following considerations:

(a) The review and evaluation of the implementation of actions, commitments and targets will be dealt with in accordance with the relevant provisions of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21, the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and the decisions of the Commission. The thematic clusters should be addressed in an integrated manner, taking into account the economic, social and environmental dimensions of sustainable development. Recognizing that all the issues identified in Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation are important, the implementation process should cover all those issues equally, and the selection of some issues during a given cycle does not therefore diminish the importance of the commitments undertaken with respect to the issues to be considered during future cycles;

(b) Means of implementation, as identified in Agenda 21 and chapter X of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, should be addressed in every cycle and for every relevant issue, action and commitment;

(c) Other cross-cutting issues, as referred to in the annex to the present resolution, should also be addressed in every cycle;

(d) African and other regional initiatives, as well as initiatives on small island developing States and least developed countries, will be considered in every cycle with respect to all relevant issues, actions and targets;

(e) The Commission should focus on those issues where it can add value to intergovernmental deliberations on cross-sectoral and sectoral issues, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 47/191, in particular its paragraphs 3 (h), 21 and 23 thereof, as well as 139 (f) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(f) The Commission should take into account the outcome of the work of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the General Assembly on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields;

(g) The Commission may decide to incorporate new challenges and opportunities related to implementation into its multi-year programme of work;

***

11. Emphasizes that in order to enable the Commission to perform the relevant requirements provided for in chapter XI of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, in particular paragraphs 145, 147 and 148 thereof, an effective system of reporting is essential for reviewing, evaluating and monitoring progress in the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, sharing of lessons learned and best practices, as well as identifying actions taken, opportunities for and obstacles and constraints to implementation;

12. Encourages countries to present, on a voluntary basis, national reports, in particular to the review sessions of the Commission, focusing on concrete progress in implementation, including achievements, constraints, challenges and opportunities;

13. Encourages, with the purpose of implementing paragraphs 130 and 131 of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and paragraph 3 of Commission decision 9/4 of 27 April 2001, further work on indicators for sustainable development by countries at the national level, including integration of gender aspects, on a voluntary basis, in line with national conditions and priorities, and requests the Secretary-General to consider progress made in that regard, including further work on the above-mentioned indicators, in reporting to the Commission, as appropriate;

14. Underscores the fact that reporting to the Commission should be guided by the following considerations:

(a) Reporting should reflect the overall progress made on the three dimensions of sustainable development, focusing on the thematic cluster of issues for the cycle, and should include inputs from all levels, as appropriate, including the national, subregional, regional and global levels, and drawing on those sources listed in subparagraphs (ii) to (iv) of paragraph 2 (c) above;

(b) The existing reporting systems should be used to the fullest extent possible and will be expected to provide the bulk of information required;

(c) Reporting should focus on concrete progress in implementation, taking into account the three dimensions of sustainable development and their integration, and should include information-sharing, lessons learned, progress made and best practices, identifying actions taken, constraints, challenges and opportunities;

(d) The effective use of indicators, as described in paragraph 13 above;

(e) Country reporting should provide information on the status of national strategies for sustainable development;

15. Requests the secretariat of the Commission, working in close cooperation with other organizations of the United Nations system:

(a) To take measures to streamline reporting in order to avoid duplication and unnecessary burden on States, including in accordance with the report of the Secretary-General on United Nations reform;

(b) To provide focused information that highlights relevant trends, constraints, challenges and emerging issues;

(c) To provide technical assistance to countries, upon their request, in national reporting through regular and extrabudgetary sources;

16. Invites the secretariat of the Commission to improve national reporting guidelines and questionnaires with the intention of making reporting more efficient and less burdensome on countries and more focused on implementation, bearing in mind the provisions of the present resolution, in consultation with Governments, United Nations organizations and secretariats of multilateral environmental agreements, and to report to the Commission for its consideration;

***

17. Invites, further to paragraph 140 of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, relevant United Nations agencies, programmes and funds, the Global Environment Facility, and international and regional financial and trade institutions, within their mandates, to participate actively in the work of the Commission in order to inform it of their activities designed to further the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation. To that end, it is essential to undertake further measures:

(a) To promote stronger linkages between global, regional and country-level implementation measures;

(b) To strengthen coherence and collaboration within and between organizations;

(c) To identify areas where further implementation measures may be required in order to improve progress;

(d) To mobilize and increase the effective use of resources from all sources for implementation;

(e) To enhance collaboration and coordination in all areas, including information exchange and knowledge-sharing on all aspects of the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

18. Requests the Secretary-General, taking into account the ongoing process of United Nations reform and utilizing the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, including through informal collaborative efforts, to further promote system-wide inter-agency cooperation and coordination to enhance the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and to report on its activities to the Economic and Social Council and the Commission;

19. Also requests the Secretary-General, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/253, to include in his report proposals outlining an integrated and comprehensive response of the United Nations system to sustainable development, taking into account the work of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the General Assembly on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields;

***

20. Decides that contributions to the Commission from major groups, including the scientific community and educators, taking into account paragraphs 139 (g) and 149 (c) and (d) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, while following the established rules of procedure and practices of the Commission, should be further enhanced, taking into account chapter XI of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, through such measures as:

(a) Strengthening major group involvement in the activities of the Commission, including through the participation of representatives of major groups at the appropriate level in an interactive dialogue during high-level segments, taking into account paragraphs 139 (g) and 149 (c) and (d) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(b) Making multi-stakeholder dialogues more action- and implementation-oriented;

(c) Enhancing the participation and effective involvement of civil society and other relevant stakeholders in the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, as well as promoting transparency and broad public participation;

(d) Striving for a better balance and better representation of major groups from all regions at the Commission;

(e) Active involvement in partnership-related and capacity-building activities at all levels, including the partnerships fairs and learning centres organized as part of the meetings of the Commission;

***

21. Recalls that the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation designated the Commission to serve as the focal point for discussion on partnerships that promote sustainable development, and reiterates that partnerships, as voluntary multi-stakeholder initiatives, contribute to the implementation of intergovernmental commitments contained in Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation. They are a complement to, but not intended to substitute for, those commitments;

22. Stresses that partnerships in the context of the World Summit on Sustainable Development process and its follow-up should be developed and implemented in accordance with the following criteria and guidelines, taking note in that regard of the preliminary work undertaken on partnerships during the preparatory process for the Summit, including the Bali guiding principles, and General Assembly resolution 56/76 of 11 December 2001:

(a) Partnerships are voluntary initiatives undertaken by Governments and relevant stakeholders, such as major groups and institutional stakeholders;

(b) Partnerships should contribute to the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and should not divert resources from the commitments contained in those agreements;

(c) Partnerships are not intended to substitute commitments made by Governments but to supplement the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(d) Partnerships should add concrete value to the implementation process and should be new, that is, they should not merely reflect existing arrangements;

(e) Partnerships should bear in mind the economic, social and environmental dimensions of sustainable development in their design and implementation;

(f) Partnerships should be based on predictable and sustained resources for their implementation, should include the mobilization of new resources and, where relevant, should result in the transfer of technology to, and capacity-building in, developing countries;

(g) It is desirable that partnerships have a sectoral and geographical balance;

(h) Partnerships should be designed and implemented in a transparent and accountable manner. In that regard, they should exchange relevant information with Governments and other relevant stakeholders;

(i) Partnerships should be publicly announced with the intention of sharing the specific contribution that they make to the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(j) Partnerships should be consistent with national laws and national strategies for the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, as well as the priorities of countries where their implementation takes place;

(k) The leading partner of a partnership initiative should inform the national focal point for sustainable development of the involved country or countries about the initiation and progress of the partnership, and all partners should bear in mind the guidance provided by Governments;

(l) The involvement of international institutions and United Nations funds, programmes and agencies in partnerships should conform to intergovernmentally agreed mandates and should not lead to the diversion to partnerships of resources otherwise allocated for their mandated programmes;

23. Decides that the provision of information and reporting by partnerships registered with the Commission should be transparent, participatory and credible, taking into account the following elements:

(a) The registration of partnerships should be voluntary and should be based on written reporting to the Commission, taking into account the provisions specified above. Reporting by partnerships should focus on their contribution to the implementation of the goals, objectives and targets of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(b) Partnerships should submit a regular report, preferably at least on a biennial basis;

(c) The Secretariat is requested to make information available on partnerships, including their reports, through a database accessible to all interested parties, including through the Commission web site and other means;

(d) The Secretariat is requested to produce a summary report containing synthesized information on partnerships for consideration by the Commission, in accordance with its programme and organization of work, noting the particular relevance of such reports in review years;

(e) The Commission, during review years, should discuss the contribution of partnerships towards supporting the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation with a view to sharing lessons learned and best practices, identifying and addressing problems, gaps and constraints, and providing further guidance, including on reporting, during policy years, as necessary;

24. Calls for activities aimed at strengthening partnerships in the context of the World Summit on Sustainable Development process and its follow-up and facilitating new ones, including through such initiatives as partnerships fairs and learning centres, mindful of the importance of sharing information on existing activities, particularly across the United Nations system.

Annex

Multi-year programme of work of the Commission on Sustainable Development

Cycle	Thematic cluster	Cross-cutting issues
2004/2005	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Water</li> <li>• Sanitation</li> <li>• Human settlements</li> </ul>	Poverty eradication; changing unsustainable patterns of consumption and production; protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development; sustainable development in a globalizing world; health and sustainable development; sustainable development of small island developing States; sustainable development for Africa; other regional initiatives; means of implementation; institutional framework for sustainable development; gender equality; education
2006/2007	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Energy for sustainable development</li> <li>• Industrial development</li> <li>• Air pollution/atmosphere</li> <li>• Climate change</li> </ul>	Poverty eradication; changing unsustainable patterns of consumption and production; protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development; sustainable development in a globalizing world; health and sustainable development; sustainable development of small island developing States; sustainable development for Africa; other regional initiatives; means of implementation; institutional framework for sustainable development; gender equality; education
2008/2009	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Agriculture</li> <li>• Rural development</li> <li>• Land</li> <li>• Drought</li> <li>• Desertification</li> <li>• Africa</li> </ul>	Poverty eradication; changing unsustainable patterns of consumption and production; protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development; sustainable development in a globalizing world; health and sustainable development; sustainable development of small island developing States; sustainable development for Africa; other regional initiatives; means of implementation; institutional framework for sustainable development; gender equality; education
2010/2011 <sup>a</sup>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Transport</li> <li>• Chemicals</li> <li>• Waste management</li> <li>• Mining</li> <li>• Ten-year framework of programmes on sustainable consumption and production patterns</li> </ul>	Poverty eradication; changing unsustainable patterns of consumption and production; protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development; sustainable development in a globalizing world; health and sustainable development; sustainable development of small island developing States; sustainable development for Africa; other regional initiatives; means of implementation; institutional framework for sustainable development; gender equality; education
2012/2013 <sup>a</sup>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Forests</li> <li>• Biodiversity</li> <li>• Biotechnology</li> <li>• Tourism</li> <li>• Mountains</li> </ul>	Poverty eradication; changing unsustainable patterns of consumption and production; protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development; sustainable development in a globalizing world; health and sustainable development; sustainable development of small island developing States; sustainable development for Africa; other regional initiatives; means of implementation; institutional framework for sustainable development; gender equality; education
2014/2015 <sup>a</sup>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Oceans and seas</li> <li>• Marine resources</li> <li>• Small island developing States</li> <li>• Disaster management and vulnerability</li> </ul>	Poverty eradication; changing unsustainable patterns of consumption and production; protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development; sustainable development in a globalizing world; health and sustainable development; sustainable development of small island developing States; sustainable development for Africa; other regional initiatives; means of implementation; institutional framework for sustainable development; gender equality; education
2016/2017	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Overall appraisal of the implementation of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation</li> </ul>

<sup>a</sup>This thematic cluster will remain as part of the multi-year programme of work as scheduled, unless otherwise agreed by the Commission (applies to clusters for 2010/2011, 2012/2013 and 2014/2015).

The Council, by decision 2003/289 of 24 July, took note of the report of the Commission on its eleventh session and approved the provisional agenda for the Commission's twelfth (2004) session.

By decisions 2003/295 and 2003/296 of 25 July, the Council took note of the Commission's decisions on the status of NGOs and the Bureau, respectively, and deferred further consideration of those matters to its resumed 2003 session. On 19 December, by decision 2003/316, the Council deferred consideration of those matters until its 2004 organizational session.

Education for sustainable development

In 2003, in accordance with resolution 57/254 [YUN 2002, p. 826], by which the General Assembly proclaimed the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development (2005-2014), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)—lead agency for promoting the Decade—developed a framework for a draft international implementation scheme for the Decade. The framework, which was presented orally to the Assembly in October [A/C.2/58/SR.15], gave a time line for activities in relation to the Decade up to December 2005 and outlined processes, players, outputs and strategies from which the implementation scheme would be developed.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/486], adopted resolution 58/219 without vote [agenda item 96].

United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development

The General Assembly,

Recalling chapter 36 of Agenda 21, on promoting education, public awareness and training, adopted at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 3 to 14 June 1992,

Recalling also the relevant provisions of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") on education, in particular its provision 124 (d) on the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development,

Recalling further its resolution 57/254 of 20 December 2002,

Reaffirming the internationally agreed development goal of achieving universal primary education, in particular that by 2015 children everywhere, boys and girls alike, will be able to complete a full course of primary schooling,

Taking note of the report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development,

Welcoming the fact that the Commission on Sustainable Development, at its eleventh session, identified education as one of the cross-cutting issues of its multi-year programme of work,

Emphasizing that education is an indispensable element for achieving sustainable development,

1. Takes note of the Framework for a Draft International Implementation Scheme prepared by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, as the designated lead agency, to promote the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development, in coordination with other relevant United Nations agencies and programmes, and further requests it to finalize the international implementation scheme, while clarifying its relationship with the existing educational processes, in particular the Dakar Framework for Action adopted at the World Education Forum and the United Nations Literacy Decade, in consultation with Governments, the United Nations and other relevant international organizations, non-governmental organizations and other stakeholders;

2. Reaffirms that education for sustainable development is critical for promoting sustainable development, and in this regard encourages Governments to consider the inclusion of measures to implement the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development in their respective educational strategies and national development plans by 2005;

3. Invites Governments to promote public awareness of and wider participation in the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development, including through cooperation and initiatives engaging civil society and other relevant stakeholders;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session, under the item entitled "Environment and sustainable development", a sub-item entitled "United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development".

Eradication of poverty

UN Decade for Eradication of Poverty

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/266 [YUN 2002, p. 828], the Secretary-General submitted a July report on the implementation of the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006) and a draft programme of action for observance of the International Year of Microcredit in 2005 (see p. 853) [A/58/179].

The report stated that progress in reducing poverty had been patchy and uneven, with the poorer developing countries, where economic and social development was needed most, still lagging behind the faster-growing developing countries on many fronts. On current performance, many countries, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa, were not likely to achieve the MDG of halving the proportion of the world's people living on less than one dollar a day by 2015. However, there were some fresh developments and results that pointed towards progress in two key areas—governance at the international and national levels and poverty reduction strategies—considered to be among the preconditions necessary for countries to achieve rapid growth and poverty eradication.

The report also described a modest revival of official development assistance (ODA) levels, following the commitments made at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953]. Although the levels were still well below their historical highs and considerably below the minimum levels needed to attain the MDGs, there was optimism that ODA would continue to rise.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/488], adopted resolution 58/222 without vote [agenda item 98].

Implementation of the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006)

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 47/196 of 22 December 1992, 48/183 of 21 December 1993, 50/107 of 20 December 1995, 56/207 of 21 December 2001 and 57/266 of 20 December 2002,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted by heads of State and Government on the occasion of the Millennium Summit, and their commitment to eradicate extreme poverty and to halve, by 2015, the proportion of the world's people whose income is less than one dollar a day and the proportion of people who suffer from hunger,

Underlining the priority and urgency given by the heads of State and Government to the eradication of poverty, as expressed in the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development and in the outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development,

Recalling the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Bearing in mind the outcomes of the World Summit for Social Development and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly,

Expressing its deep concern that the number of people living in extreme poverty in many countries continues to increase, with women and children constituting the majority and the most affected groups, in particular in the least developed countries and in sub-Saharan Africa,

Recognizing that, while the rate of poverty in some countries has been reduced, some developing countries and disadvantaged groups are being marginalized and others are at risk of being marginalized and effectively excluded from the benefits of globalization, resulting in increased income disparity among and within countries, thereby constraining efforts to eradicate poverty,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Reiterates that eradicating poverty is the greatest global challenge facing the world today and an indispensable requirement for sustainable development, in particular for developing countries, that each country has the primary responsibility for its own sustainable development and poverty eradication, that the role of national policies and development strategies cannot be overemphasized and that concerted and concrete measures are required at all levels to enable developing countries to eradicate poverty and achieve sustainable development;

3. Recognizes that, in order for developing countries to reach the targets set in the context of national development strategies for the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in particular the goal of the eradication of poverty, and for such poverty eradication strategies to be effective, it is imperative that they be integrated into the world economy and share equitably in the benefits of globalization;

4. Reaffirms that, within the context of overall action for the eradication of poverty, special attention should be given to the multidimensional nature of poverty and the national and international conditions and policies that are conducive to its eradication, fostering, inter alia, the social and economic integration of people living in poverty and the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, including the right to development;

Global response for the eradication of poverty

5. Stresses the importance of the follow-up to the outcome of the International Conference on Financing for Development, and calls for the full and effective implementation of the Monterrey Consensus;

6. Reaffirms that good governance at the international level is fundamental for achieving poverty eradication and sustainable development; in order to ensure a dynamic and enabling international economic environment, it is important to promote global economic governance by addressing the international finance, trade, technology and investment patterns that have an impact on the development prospects of developing countries; to that end, the international community should take all necessary and appropriate measures, including ensuring support to structural and macro-economic reform, a comprehensive solution to the external debt problem and increasing market access for developing countries; efforts to reform the international financial architecture need to be sustained with greater transparency and with the effective participation of developing countries in decision-making processes; and that a universal, rule-based, open, non-discriminatory and equitable multilateral trading system, as well as meaningful trade liberalization, can substantially stimulate development worldwide, benefiting countries at all stages of development;

7. Also reaffirms that good governance at the national level is essential for poverty eradication and sustainable development, that sound economic policies, solid democratic institutions responsive to the needs of the people and improved infrastructure are the basis for sustained economic growth, poverty eradication and employment creation, and that freedom, peace and security, domestic stability, respect for human rights, including the right to development, the rule of law, gender equality, market-oriented policies and an overall commitment to just and democratic societies are also essential and mutually reinforcing;

8. Recognizes the major role that trade can play as an engine of growth and development and in eradicating poverty, regrets that the Fifth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held in Cancun, Mexico, from 10 to 14 September 2003, failed to produce an agreement, and calls for the resumption of the negotiations and the implementation of the Doha agenda, adopted at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held at Doha from 9 to 14 November 2001;

9. Also recognizes the responsibility of all Governments to adopt policies aimed at preventing and combating corrupt practices at the national and international levels, and welcomes in this regard the adoption of the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

10. Underlines that, together with coherent and consistent domestic policies, international cooperation is essential in supplementing and supporting the efforts of developing countries to utilize their domestic resources for development and poverty eradication and in ensuring that they will be able to achieve the development goals as envisioned in the Millennium Declaration;

11. Reiterates that a substantial increase in official development assistance and other resources will be required if developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, are to achieve the internationally agreed development goals and objectives, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and that, to build support for official development assistance, cooperation is necessary to further improve policies and development strategies to enhance aid effectiveness, both nationally and internationally, requests, in that regard, those countries that made announcements of increased official development assistance at the International Conference on Financing for Development to make those resources available as soon as possible, and notes in this context the recent upward trend in official development assistance;

12. Urges developed countries that have not done so to make concrete efforts to reach the targets of 0.7 per cent of their gross national product as official development assistance to developing countries and 0.15 to 0.20 per cent of their gross national product to least developed countries, as reconfirmed at the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, held in Brussels from 14 to 20 May 2001, encourages developing countries to build on progress achieved in ensuring that official development assistance is used effectively to help achieve development goals and targets, acknowledges the efforts of all donors, commends those donors whose official development assistance contributions exceed, reach or are increasing towards the targets, and underlines the importance of undertaking to examine the means and time frames for achieving the targets and goals;

13. Recognizes that an enabling domestic environment is vital for mobilizing domestic resources, increasing productivity, reducing capital flight, encouraging the private sector and attracting and making effective use of international investment and assistance, and that efforts to create such an environment should be supported by the international community;

14. Also recognizes that creditors and debtors must share the responsibility for preventing and resolving unsustainable debt situations and that debt relief can play a key role in liberating resources that should be directed towards activities consistent with attaining poverty eradication, sustainable economic growth, sustainable development and the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and in that regard urges countries to direct those resources freed through debt relief, in particular through debt cancellation and reduction, towards these objectives;

15. Calls upon the developed countries, by means of intensified and effective cooperation with developing countries, to promote capacity-building and facilitate access to and transfer of technologies and corresponding knowledge, in particular to developing countries, on favourable terms, including concessional and preferential terms, as mutually agreed, taking into account the need to protect intellectual property rights as well as the special needs of developing countries;

16. Recognizes the crucial role that microcredit and microfinance could play in the eradication of poverty, the promotion of gender equality, the empowerment of vulnerable groups and the development of rural communities, encourages Governments to adopt policies that support access to microcredit as well as the development of microfinance institutions and their capacities, and calls upon the international community to support those efforts;

Policies for the eradication of poverty

17. Reaffirms that the eradication of poverty should be addressed in an integrated way, as set out in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), taking into account the importance of the need for the empowerment of women and sectoral strategies in such areas as education, development of human resources, health, human settlements, rural, local and community development, productive employment, population, environment and natural resources, water and sanitation, agriculture, food security, energy and migration, and the specific needs of disadvantaged and vulnerable groups, in such a way as to increase opportunities and choices for people living in poverty and to enable them to build and strengthen their assets so as to achieve development, security and stability, and in that regard encourages countries to develop their national poverty reduction policies in accordance with their national priorities, including, where appropriate, through poverty reduction strategy papers;

18. Underlines, in this context, the importance of further integration of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, in the national development strategies and plans, including the poverty reduction strategy papers where they exist, and calls upon the international community to continue to support developing countries in the implementation of those development strategies and plans;

19. Recognizes the importance of disseminating best practices for the reduction of poverty in its various dimensions, taking into account the need to adapt those best practices to suit the social, economic, cultural and historical conditions of each country;

20. Reaffirms that all Governments and the United Nations system should promote an active and visible policy of mainstreaming a gender perspective in all policies and programmes aimed at the eradication of poverty, at both the national and the international levels, and encourages the use of gender analysis as a tool for the integration of a gender dimension into planning the implementation of policies, strategies and programmes for the eradication of poverty;

21. Also reaffirms that poverty eradication, changing unsustainable patterns of production and consumption and protecting and managing the natural resource base of economic and social development are overarching objectives of, and essential requirements for, sustainable development;

22. Emphasizes the critical role of both formal and non-formal education, in particular basic education and training, especially for girls, in empowering those living in poverty, reaffirms in that context the Dakar Framework for Action adopted at the World Education Forum, and recognizes the importance of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization strategy for the eradication of poverty, especially extreme poverty, in supporting the Education For All programmes as a tool to achieve the millennium development goal on universal primary education by 2015;

23. Recognizes the devastating effect of HIV/AIDS, malaria, tuberculosis and other infectious, contagious diseases on human development, economic growth and poverty reduction efforts in all regions, in particular in sub-Saharan Africa, urges Governments and the international community to give urgent priority to combating those diseases, takes note of the convening of the fifteenth International Conference on HIV/AIDS, to be held in Thailand from 11 to 16 July 2004, and in that regard welcomes the recent decision adopted by members of the World Trade Organization on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Doha Declaration on the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights and Public Health;

24. Emphasizes the link between poverty eradication and improving access to safe drinking water, and stresses in this regard the objective to halve, by 2015, the proportion of people who are unable to reach or to afford safe drinking water and the proportion of people who do not have access to basic sanitation, as reaffirmed in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

25. Recognizes that the lack of adequate housing remains a pressing challenge in the fight to eradicate extreme poverty, particularly in the urban areas in developing countries, expresses its concern at the rapid growth in the number of slum dwellers in the urban areas of developing countries, particularly in Africa, stresses that, unless urgent and effective measures and actions are taken at the national and international levels, the number of slum dwellers, who constitute one third of the world's urban population, will continue to increase, and emphasizes the need for increased efforts, with a view to significantly improving the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020;

Specific initiatives in the fight against poverty

26. Also recognizes the important potential contribution of the World Solidarity Fund to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals, in particular the objective to halve, by 2015, the proportion of people living on less than one dollar a day and the proportion of the people who suffer from hunger;

27. Reiterates its endorsement of the decision of the World Summit on Sustainable Development to establish the World Solidarity Fund to eradicate poverty and to promote social and human development in the developing countries, while stressing the voluntary nature of the contributions and the need to avoid duplication of existing United Nations funds and encouraging the role of the private sector and individual citizens relative to Governments in funding the endeavours, as set out in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

28. Encourages Member States, international organizations, the private sector, relevant institutions, foundations and individuals to contribute to the World Solidarity Fund;

29. Requests the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme, in that regard, to take further measures to operationalize the World Solidarity Fund by establishing, on an urgent basis, the high-level committee whose task it is to define the strategy of the Fund and to mobilize resources to enable it to start its activities in the field of poverty alleviation;

30. Acknowledges the significance of greater involvement of developing countries in joint efforts, including those among developing countries, to overcome extreme poverty, and in this context takes note of the initiatives undertaken by the developing countries, including those announced at the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly;

31. Welcomes the initiatives undertaken by regional and subregional organizations for overcoming extreme poverty;

Africa, least developed countries, landlocked developing countries and small island developing States

32. Stresses the importance, as recognized in the Millennium Declaration, of meeting the special needs of Africa, where poverty remains a major challenge and where most countries have not benefited fully from the opportunities of globalization, which has further exacerbated the continent's marginalization;

33. Reaffirms its support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development, encourages further efforts in the implementation of the commitments contained therein in the political, economic and social fields, and calls upon the developed countries and the United Nations system to continue to support the Partnership, the primary objective of which is to eradicate poverty and promote sustainable development on the basis of African ownership and leadership and enhanced partnerships with the international community, in accordance with the principles, objectives and priorities of the Partnership;

34. Calls upon the Governments of the least developed countries and their development partners to implement fully the commitments contained in the Brussels Declaration and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, adopted at the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries;

35. Stresses the significant challenge to poverty reduction posed by the geographical disadvantages of landlocked developing countries and the vulnerabilities of small island developing States, and in this context welcomes the adoption of the Almaty Programme of Action, at the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation, held in Almaty, Kazakhstan, on 28 and 29 August 2003, and supports the comprehensive review of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, to be held in Mauritius from 30 August to 3 September 2004;

The United Nations and the fight against poverty

36. Calls for the full implementation of its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields, which provides a comprehensive basis for the follow-up to the outcomes of those conferences and summits and contributes to the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, in particular the goal of the eradication of poverty and hunger, and notes in this context the decision to review in 2005 the progress achieved in implementing all commitments made in the Millennium Declaration and that there is scope for a major event;

37. Reaffirms the role of United Nations funds and programmes, in particular the United Nations Development Programme and its associated funds, in assisting the national efforts of developing countries, inter alia, in the eradication of poverty, and the need for their funding in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

38. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

39. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Implementation of the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006)".

World Solidarity Fund

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/265 [YUN 2002, p. 831], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly, in April, the report of the UNDP Administrator on the establishment of the World Solidarity Fund [A/57/72-E/2003/53]. The Administrator described measures taken to operationalize the Fund, which was established by the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] to eradicate poverty and promote social development in developing countries, and endorsed by the Assembly in resolution 57/265 [ibid., p. 831]. The Fund was set up in February as a UNDP trust fund and steps had been taken to operationalize and publicize it. A high-level committee was to be established to define the Fund's strategy.

The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2003/4 of 11 July (see p. 889), requested the UNDP Administrator, among other things, to mobilize the financial resources to enable the Fund to start its activities in poverty alleviation.

In resolution 58/222 (see p. 849), the Assembly encouraged Member States, international organizations, the private sector and others to contribute to the Fund.

Rural poverty

Committee for Development Policy consideration. The Committee for Development Policy (New York, 7-11 April) [E/2003/33] considered the question of promoting an integrated approach to rural development in developing countries for poverty eradication and sustainable development. The Committee noted that rural development as a strategy to eradicate poverty should reflect the multidimensional nature of poverty, be multi-targeted, extend across disciplines and encompass demographic, economic, social, institutional and political factors. That integrated approach would differ from previous, more sector-specific experiences in rural development. Among the major causes of the persistence of rural poverty in most developing countries were low or stagnant economic growth in rural areas, often below the rate of population growth, inadequate investment in human capital, agricultural technology and infrastructure, and inadequacies in institutional mechanisms that addressed the needs of the rural poor. A fundamental reorientation of integrated rural development should focus on enhancing rural employment and income-generation, and more resources had to be directed towards those areas. The Committee reviewed the poor state of health and education in rural areas, excessive rural-urban migration and rural environmental degradation.

The Committee recommended that both developing countries and the international community should focus on four priority areas: expanding education and health services and providing incentives for rural people to take advantage of the services; increasing agricultural productivity and non-farm activities through the use of technology, diversification and access to inputs and credits; improving access to local, national and global markets; and examining all policies through "rural lenses" with a special focus on women.

Economic and Social Council consideration. In accordance with decision 2002/309 [YUN 2002, p. 814], the Economic and Social Council, at the high-level segment of its substantive session (30 June-2 July) [A/58/3/Rev.1], considered the theme "Promoting an integrated approach to rural development in developing countries for poverty eradication and sustainable development". The segment included four ministerial round-table discussions on: natural resources and rural development in developing countries; an integrated approach to the implementation of the MDGs in the area of rural development; global partnerships for rural development; and rural/urban interface and slums.

The Council had before it an April report by the Secretary-General on the theme of the high-level segment [E/2003/51]. He noted that three quarters of the world's poor lived in rural areas of developing countries and depended mainly on agriculture and related activities for their livelihood. In 2025, when the majority of the world population was expected to be urban, 60 per cent of poverty would still be rural. Accelerated rural development was essential to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including the MDGs. The international community had an important role to play in supporting national efforts and contributing to an enabling environment for poverty eradication and sustainable development. The Secretary-General stated that an integrated approach to rural development had to encompass economic, social and environmental dimensions and consist of mutually reinforcing policies and programmes to address the range of rural development-related issues, while meeting the specific conditions and requirements of a given country. He outlined the common elements of the integrated approach, which included creating an enabling macroeconomic policy environment conducive to poverty eradication and sustainable development in rural areas; reversing the decline in the flow of domestic resources and ODA; strengthening agricultural and food policies, improving agricultural productivity and fostering non-farm rural economic activities and diversification in production; and enhancing the access of poor rural people, especially women and smallholder farmers, to productive assets, such as land and water, and to financial services.

In a ministerial declaration of 2 July, the Council stated, among other things, that rural development should be pursued through an integrated approach, encompassing economic, social and environmental dimensions, taking into account the gender perspective and consisting of mutually reinforcing policies and programmes. It should be balanced, targeted, situation-specific and locally owned, include local synergies and initiatives and be responsive to the needs of rural populations. The Council expressed its commitment to responding effectively to Africa's special needs for achieving sustainable development and reiterated its support for the priorities of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 937). It also recognized the special needs of the least developed countries, the small island developing States and the landlocked developing countries. The Council committed itself to implementing its ministerial declaration and called on civil society, the UN system and other relevant actors and organizations to support the realization of the objectives of integrated rural development. It agreed to review the implementation of the declaration in 2005.

On 24 July, the Council decided that the coordination segment of its 2004 substantive session would consider the theme of a coordinated and integrated UN system approach to promote rural development in developing countries for poverty eradication and sustainable development (decision 2003/287).

By decision 2003/290 of 24 July, adopted on the recommendation of the Commission on Science and Technology for Development [E/2003/31], the Council took note of that Commission's contribution to its consideration of the theme of the high-level segment, which was addressed by the Commission in its 2001 deliberations on national capacity-building in biotechnology [YUN 2001, p. 757], in which the Commission had underlined the need for national capacity-building in biotechnology to support efforts in rural development, including food security, agricultural productivity, health and environmental sustainability.

International Year of Microcredit, 2005

In response to General Assembly resolution 53/197 [YUN 1998, p. 785], by which the year 2005 was declared the International Year of Microcredit, the Secretary-General presented a draft programme of action for the observance of the Year [A/58/179].

The Secretary-General said that the International Year would give impetus to microcredit and microfinance programmes and activities around the world. The objectives of the Year might include building upon promoting the contribution of microcredit and microfinance towards achieving the MDGs and the goals of major conferences and summits; promoting awareness and understanding of microcredit and microfinance, and their roles in poverty eradication; identifying critical measures for Governments to stimulate sustainable, pro-poor financial sectors and build strategies to position microcredit and microfinance as integral parts of a country's financial system; increasing the capacity of microcredit and microfinance service providers to address the needs of poor people more efficiently; and promoting and creating strategic partnerships between Governments, UN system organizations and other microcredit and microfinance stakeholders. The report also outlined activities and initiatives that could be undertaken at the national, regional and international levels.

The Secretary-General concluded that observance of the International Year would provide a significant opportunity to raise awareness of the importance of microcredit and microfinance in the eradication of poverty, share good practices and further enhance programmes that supported sustainable pro-poor financial sectors around the world. Expanding outreach could contribute to achieving the MDGs, particularly the poverty reduction targets, and promoting gender equality and the empowerment of women.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/488], adopted resolution 58/221 without vote [agenda item 98].

Programme of Action for the International Year of Microcredit, 2005

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/197 of 15 December 1998, by which it proclaimed 2005 the International Year of Microcredit and requested that the observance of the Year be a special occasion for giving impetus to microcredit programmes in all countries, particularly the developing countries,

Recalling also its resolution 52/194 of 18 December 1997, in which it emphasized the role of microcredit and microfinance as an important anti-poverty tool that promotes asset creation, employment and economic security and empowers people living in poverty, especially women,

Stressing that people living in poverty in rural and urban areas need access to microcredit and microfinance that enhance their ability to increase income, build assets and mitigate vulnerability in times of hardship,

Bearing in mind the importance of microfinance instruments such as credit, savings and related business services in providing access to capital for people living in poverty,

Recognizing the need to facilitate the access of people living in poverty, especially women, to microcredit and microfinance to enable them to undertake micro-enterprises so as to generate self-employment and contribute to achieving empowerment,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General containing the draft programme of action for the International Year of Microcredit, 2005;

2. Emphasizes that the observance of 2005 as the International Year of Microcredit will provide a significant opportunity to raise awareness of the importance of microcredit and microfinance in the eradication of poverty, to share good practices and to further enhance financial sector developments that support sustainable pro-poor financial services in all countries;

3. Invites the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat and the United Nations Capital Development Fund to jointly coordinate the activities of the United Nations system regarding the preparations for and observance of the Year;

4. Recognizes the importance of scaling up microcredit and microfinance services and of using the Year as a platform to find ways of enhancing development impact and sustainability through the sharing of best practices and lessons learned;

5. Invites Member States to consider establishing national coordinating committees or focal points with responsibility for promoting the activities related to the preparations for and observance of the Year;

6. Invites Member States, relevant organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations, the private sector and civil society to collaborate in the preparations for and observance of the Year and to raise public awareness and knowledge about microcredit and microfinance;

7. Recognizes that access to microcredit and microfinance can contribute to achieving the goals and targets of major United Nations conferences and summits, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in particular the targets relating to poverty eradication, gender equality and the empowerment of women;

8. Encourages the holding of regional and sub-regional events on microcredit and microfinance, and, in this regard, welcomes the holding of the Asia-Pacific Region Microcredit Summit Meeting of Councils, in Dhaka, from 16 to 19 February 2004;

9. Encourages Member States, relevant organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations, the private sector and foundations to make voluntary contributions and/or to lend other forms of support to the Year, in accordance with the guidelines for international years;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the preparations for the International Year of Microcredit, 2005, in consultation with Member States, relevant organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations, the private sector and civil society, and to submit it to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session under the item entitled "Implementation of the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006)".

Science and technology for development

Commission on Science and Technology for Development

The Commission on Science and Technology for Development held its sixth session in Geneva from 5 to 9 May [E/2003/31]. The session had as its main substantive theme "Technology development and capacity-building for competitiveness in a digital society", with particular attention to information and communication technologies (ICT) as pervasive tools of global impact with wide application and growing potential, and considered a report by the Secretary-General on the subject (see below). The Commission also heard country reports on ICT policies. It had before it notes by the Secretariat on: implementation of and progress made on decisions taken at the Commission's fifth (2001) session [E/CN.16/2003/3]; the Commission's budget [E/CN.16/2003/4]; and the functioning of the Commission, including its role in coordinating science and technology for development [E/CN.16/2003/5]. The Commission recommended a draft resolution and three draft decisions for adoption by the Economic and Social Council. It brought to the Council's attention its decisions noting the Secretary-General's synthesis report on its panels on technology development and capacity-building in a digital society (see below) [E/2003/31 (dec. 6/101)] and the report of the Commission's Open-ended Working Group, the text of which it decided to include in its report [dec. 6/102].

Technology development and capacity-building

The Commission had before it a report by the Secretary-General [E/CN.16/2003/2] that provided an overview of the outcomes of three panels, convened during its 2001-2003 intersessional period, on its main substantive theme of technology development and capacity-building for competitiveness in a digital society. The panels discussed indicators of technology development (Geneva, 22-24 May 2002), foreign direct investment and technology capacity-building for strategic competitiveness (Colombo, Sri Lanka, 15-17 October 2002), and enhancing strategic competitiveness in ICT (Luanda, Angola, 15-17 January 2003). The report summarized the main findings and presented the policy recommendations that emerged from the three panels.

The Commission decided that the substantive theme and focus of its work during the 2003-2004 intersessional period would be "Promoting the application of science and technology to meet the MDGs".

On 9 May, the Commission took note of the report [dec. 6/101].

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 48], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Science and Technology for Development [E/2003/31], adopted resolution 2003/56 without vote [agenda item 13 (b)].

Science and technology for development

I. Technology development and capacity-building for competitiveness in a digital society

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the work of the Commission on Science and Technology for Development on its theme "Technology development and capacity-building for competitiveness in a digital society", and noting the findings, which indicate, inter alia, the following:

(a) Information and communication technologies create new opportunities to tackle the problems of poverty, poor communications, economic stagnation and environmental degradation. At the same time, they generate new challenges, especially for those countries in which technological capability, skill capacity and supporting infrastructure are not sufficiently developed,

(b) The diffusion of information and communication technologies throughout the world is extremely uneven. Many of the developing countries face significant barriers in access to and effective applications of information and communication technologies owing to limited telecommunications infrastructure, low computer literacy levels and lack of a regulatory framework,

(c) Information and communication technologies will continue to play an increasingly important role in development. Most developing countries are not in a position to compete with industrialized countries at the frontier of innovation. The most effective way of raising the level of technology in developing countries is therefore through acquisition of technology from the industrialized countries. The experience of successful economies suggests that foreign direct investment has a crucial role to play in the acquisition of technology by developing countries,

(d) Mere transfer and imports of new technology through foreign direct investment and other channels do not ensure technology acquisition. In order to build capacity to acquire and master technology, it is essential that Governments build a sound human resources capital and put in place credible and more focused long-term policies and regulations that encourage the active international transfer, effective diffusion and development of technology,

(e) In order to facilitate and promote information and communication technology use in developing countries, there is a need for an enhanced partnership between Governments, the private sector, academic institutions and non-governmental organizations,

Heeding the call of the ministerial declaration adopted at the high-level segment of the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council in 2000 to work cooperatively to bridge the digital divide and to foster "digital opportunity",

Decides to recommend the following actions for consideration by national Governments, the Commission on Science and Technology for Development and the international community:

1. Governments are encouraged to undertake the following actions:

(a) Utilize the benchmarking tools developed by the Commission to assess their progress in information and communication technology development and to establish mechanisms involving all stakeholders for the ongoing review, evaluation and analysis of information and communication technology strategies, programmes and projects, including strategies to facilitate the attraction of foreign direct investment in information and communication technologies;

(b) Accelerate investment in information and communication technology human capacity-building and promote computer literacy and lifelong learning;

(c) Build up physical and institutional infrastructure to facilitate information and communication technology development and improve efficiency and transparency through e-government;

(d) Develop policy initiatives in order to facilitate the building of information and communication technology infrastructure at the regional level;

(e) Develop strategies to facilitate access to and lower costs of information and communication technology hardware and software by providing tax incentives and encouraging the use and further development of free and open source software;

(f) Apply innovative approaches with a focus on shared infrastructure, public access facilities and the use of intermediaries and other services to interact with individuals who may lack functional literacy;

(g) Establish a regulatory framework that supports infrastructure development and accelerate deployment of appropriate and cost-effective technologies;

(h) Promote sustained measures to ensure the mastery and adaptation of technology by creating and/or strengthening local research and development units, promoting foreign direct investment with high-technology content and fostering collaboration in research and development between foreign investors and domestic research institutions;

(i) Develop strategies for local content development, including the use of icon-based programmes and the integration of traditional mass media, print, television and radio, with electronic media;

2. The international community is invited:

(a) To promote the compilation of more appropriate data on technology indicators, taking into account that there is a lack of data for many developing countries, which typically have a large informal sector so that more accurate information and communication technology and technology development indices could be developed;

(b) To reaffirm the right of developing countries to use to the full the flexibilities provided in international agreements such as the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights;

3. The Commission on Science and Technology for Development is invited:

(a) To interact closely with the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force to promote greater information exchange and coordination of activities in the field of information and communication technologies in order to contribute to the World Summit on the Information Society and, as feasible, update its publication Knowledge Societies: Information Technologies for Sustainable Development in order to raise awareness on recent developments in the field of information and communication technologies;

(b) To play an active role within the United Nations system in the analysis, promotion and recommendation of applications of science and technology to meet the development goals contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

(c) To ensure that the Science and Technology for Development Network further develops and expands into an inter-agency gateway on information on science and technology activities, which also links information technology networks at the regional, subregional and interregional levels to the network;

(d) To liaise with the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to develop further its benchmarking tool in information and communication technologies, promote its use by other relevant United Nations agencies and consider the possibility of carrying out information and communication technology needs assessment for interested developing countries, in particular least developed countries, to help formulate or update national strategies and action plans for information and communication technologies, coordinating efforts with the United Nations Development Programme and other entities carrying out similar work in order to promote complementarity and efficiency.

II. New substantive theme and other activities

The Economic and Social Council

Welcomes the choice of the theme "Promoting the application of science and technology to meet the development goals contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration" for the work of the Commission on Science and Technology during the intersessional period 2003-2004. In undertaking work on this theme, the Commission is invited to analyse policies and measures that would lead to:

(a) Improving the policy environment for the application of science and technology to development by identifying potential risks and benefits of new and emerging technologies;

(b) Strengthening basic and applied research in developing countries and international scientific networking;

(c) Strengthening technology support institutions and science advisory mechanisms, building human capacity, identifying new technologies and applications, and encouraging international collaboration to support research in neglected fields;

(d) Promoting affordable universal Internet access and building strategic partnerships in the field of science and technology for development and capacity-building for competitiveness, taking care to ensure complementarity with efforts under way by other organizations, such as the United Nations Development Programme, the International Telecommunication Union and the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force, and to promote efficiency. All entities of the United Nations system working in these areas are invited to collaborate and provide input to the work of the Commission on its main theme;

III. Strengthening coordination of science and technology for development in the United Nations system

The Economic and Social Council,

Noting with appreciation the work carried out by the Gender Advisory Board of the Commission on Science and Technology for Development, including at the regional and national levels,

Requests the Commission to take into account the need to integrate meaningfully and systematically a gender component into all its programmes and to improve its collaboration with its Gender Advisory Board.

In other action, the Council, by decision 2003/291 of 24 July, decided that the duration of the regular sessions of the Commission should be one week. By decision 2003/293 of the same date, the Council took note of the report of the Commission on its sixth session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the Commission's seventh (2004) session.

Information and communication technologies

In 2003, the United Nations continued to ensure that the benefits of new technologies, especially ICTs, were available to all, in conformity with recommendations contained in the ministerial declaration adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its 2000 high-level segment [YUN 2000, p. 799] and the Millennium Declaration [ibid., p. 49]. In December, the first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society adopted a Declaration of Principles and Plan of Action that outlined specific goals for bridging the digital divide. The second phase of the Summit was scheduled to be held in 2005. During the year, the UN ICT Task Force continued its substantive work as a global forum on integrating information on ICT into development programmes.

World Summit on the Information Society (first phase)

The first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society (Geneva, 10-12 December) [WSIS-03/GENEVA/9(Rev.1)-E] was attended by political leaders from 175 countries, including 44 heads of State or Government, and representatives of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the private sector. It adopted the Declaration of Principles and the Plan of Action for establishing the foundations for an information society for all, reflecting all the different interests at stake. In three round tables, the Summit discussed the themes of creating digital opportunities; diversity in cyberspace; and ICT as a tool for achieving the MDGs. It also considered reports on a number of multi-stakeholder events held in preparation for the Summit. Planned in two phases, the Summit was the first multi-stakeholder global effort to share and shape the use of ICTs for a better world. The second phase was to be held in Tunis, Tunisia, in November 2005.

Declaration of Principles and Plan of Action

The Declaration of Principles adopted on 12 December, "Building the information society: a global challenge in the new Millennium", stated the commitment to build a people-centred, inclusive and development-oriented information society to enable people to achieve their full potential in promoting their sustainable development and improving their quality of life. The challenge was to harness the potential of ICT to promote the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51]. The Summit committed itself to realizing that vision, focusing especially on young people and paying attention to the needs of women and of vulnerable groups, particularly the poor in remote rural and marginalized urban areas and the peoples of developing countries and economics in transition. Recognizing that building an inclusive information society required new forms of partnerships and cooperation among Governments and other stakeholders to realize the goal of bridging the digital divide and ensuring harmonious, fair and equitable development for all, the Summit called for national and international digital solidarity.

The Declaration enumerated key principles for an information society for all, covering the role of Governments and all stakeholders in the promotion of ICTs for development: information and communication infrastructure as an essential foundation for an inclusive information society; access to information and knowledge; capacity-building; building confidence and security in the use of ICTs; creating an enabling environment at the national and international levels based on the rule of law within a supportive policy and regulatory framework; and the benefits in all aspects of life of ICT applications. The key principles also covered respect for cultural and linguistic diversity, freedom of the press, the ethical dimensions of the information society and international and regional cooperation. All stakeholders were invited to commit to the "Digital Solidarity Agenda" set forth in the Plan of Action (see below). The Summit participants also committed themselves to evaluate and follow up progress in bridging the digital divide and to assess the effectiveness of investment and international cooperation efforts in building the information society.

The Plan of Action, based on the common vision and guiding principles of the Declaration, had as its objectives to build an inclusive information society; to put the potential of knowledge and ICTs at the service of development; to promote the use of information and knowledge to achieve internationally agreed development goals; and to address new challenges of the information society at all levels. Specific targets for improving connectivity and access in the use of ICTs, to be achieved by 2015, included: connecting villages with ICTs and establishing community access points; connecting universities, colleges, secondary schools and primary schools; connecting scientific and research centres; connecting public libraries, cultural centres, museums, post offices and archives; connecting health centres and hospitals; and connecting local and central government departments and establishing web sites and e-mail addresses. Other targets included adapting all primary and secondary school curricula to meet the challenges of the information society, taking into account national circumstances; ensuring that all of the world's population had access to television and radio services; encouraging the development of content and putting in place technical conditions to facilitate the presence and use of all world languages on the Internet; and ensuring that more than half the world's inhabitants had access to ICTs within their reach.

The Plan of Action set out action lines under each of the key principles in the Declaration. It also established the Digital Solidarity Agenda for putting in place the conditions for mobilizing the necessary human, financial and technological resources for including all men and women in the emerging information society. The priorities of the Agenda would be: making national e-strategies an integral part of national development plans, including poverty reduction strategies; and mainstreaming ICTs into ODA through more effective donor information-sharing and co-ordination and sharing best practices and lessons learned. A task force was established, under the auspices of the Secretary-General, to review the adequacy of all existing financial mechanisms in meeting the challenges of ICT for development by December 2004, for consideration at the second phase of the Summit, with a view to creating a voluntary Digital Solidarity Fund. Countries were asked to consider establishing national mechanisms to achieve universal access in underserved rural and urban areas to bridge the digital divide. International performance evaluation and benchmarking should be developed to follow up on implementation of the objectives, goals and targets in the Plan of Action.

The Summit also adopted a resolution regarding the arrangements for the second phase of the Summit, to be held in Tunis in 2005. It decided that a preparatory meeting would be held in the first half of 2004 to review those issues of the information society that should form the focus of the Tunis phase.

Summit preparations

In accordance with General Assembly resolutions 56/183 [YUN 2001, p. 764] and 57/238 [YUN 2002, p. 836], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, in April, the report of the ITU Secretary-General on preparations for the World Summit on the Information Society [A/58/74-E/2003/58]. The second meeting of the Preparatory Committee (Geneva, 17-28 February) agreed on working documents to serve as a basis for further discussions on the draft declaration and draft action plan and established an intersessional mechanism to advance negotiations on the draft texts, including a meeting to be held in Paris (15-18 July). The third meeting was scheduled to be held from 15 to 26 September.

Five regional preparatory meetings were held prior to the second preparatory meeting for Africa (Bamako, Mali, 25-30 May 2002); Europe (Bucharest, Romania, 7-9 November 2002); Asia and the Pacific (Tokyo, 13-15 January 2003); Latin America and the Caribbean (Bavaro, Dominican Republic, 29-31 January); and Western Asia (Beirut, Lebanon, 4-6 February) (see p. 1027). Other initiatives included a meeting of the League of Arab States (Cairo, Egypt, 16-18 June); the Mauritius Ministerial Conference on Access to Information and Communication Technologies for All (Pointe aux Piments, 3-5 April); and a meeting of francophone ministers (Rabat, Morocco, 3-5 September).

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2003/309 of 25 July, and the Assembly, by decision 58/546 of 23 December, took note of the ITU report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/19 [draft: E/2003/L.30/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 13 (b)].

World Summit on the Information Society

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 56/183 of 21 December 2001 and 57/238 of 20 December 2002, related in particular to the launching of the preparatory process of the World Summit on the Information Society, which will be held in two phases, in Geneva, from 10 to 12 December 2003, and in Tunis, from 16 to 18 November 2005,

Welcoming the progress achieved in the preparatory process of the Summit,

Taking note of the contribution of the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force to the preparatory process of the Summit,

Encouraging all countries to continue to support the preparatory process,

Encouraging civil society, non-governmental organizations and the private sector to contribute further to the preparations for the Summit,

Reaffirming the urgent need to harness the potential of knowledge and technology for promoting the goals of the United Nations Millennium Declaration and to find effective and innovative ways to put this potential at the service of development for all.

Reaffirming also the pivotal role of the United Nations system in promoting development, in particular with regard to access to and transfer of technology, especially information and communication technologies and services, inter alia, through partnerships with all relevant stakeholders,

Reaffirming further the need to harness synergies and to create cooperation among the various information and communication technologies initiatives, at both the regional and global levels, currently being undertaken or planned to promote and foster the potential of information and communication technologies for development by other international organizations and civil society,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General of the International Telecommunication Union on the ongoing preparatory process for the World Summit on the Information Society;

2. Takes note also of the results of the first two meetings of the intergovernmental Preparatory Committee, held in Geneva from 1 to 5 July 2002 and from 17 to 28 February 2003;

3. Welcomes the holding of the regional preparatory conferences in Bamako, from 25 to 30 May 2002, in Bucharest from 7 to 9 November 2002, in Tokyo from 13 to 15 January 2003, in Bavaro, Dominican Republic, from 29 to 31 January 2003, in Beirut from 4 to 6 February 2003, and in Cairo from 16 to 18 June 2003;

4. Encourages all relevant United Nations bodies and other intergovernmental organizations, including international and regional institutions, as well as the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force, to intensify their work in the preparatory process of the Summit;

5. Invites countries to be represented at the highest political level at the two phases of the Summit;

6. Encourages civil society, non-governmental organizations and the private sector to contribute further to and participate actively in the intergovernmental preparatory process of the Summit, and in the Summit itself, according to the modalities of participation established by the Preparatory Committee;

7. Requests the International Telecommunication Union, in the context of its role in the preparatory process for the Summit, in close cooperation with the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat and other information offices of the United Nations system, to intensify its public information campaign to raise global awareness of the Summit, within existing resources and through voluntary contributions;

8. Invites the international community to continue providing extrabudgetary resources, in particular through voluntary contributions, to the special trust fund established by the International Telecommunication Union to support the preparations for and the holding of the two phases of the Summit and to facilitate the effective participation of representatives of developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, in the third meeting of the intergovernmental Preparatory Committee, to be held in Geneva from 15 to 26 September 2003, as well as in future meetings of the Preparatory Committee and in the two phases of the Summit.

UN role

ICT Task Force. In April, the Secretary-General submitted to the Economic and Social Council the first annual report [E/2003/56 & Corr.1] of the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force, which was established in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 762] to provide a global forum on integrating ICT into development programmes and a platform for promoting public and private partnerships to help bridge the digital divide and foster digital opportunity.

During the first year of its mandate, the Task Force had become a universally recognized forum for the ICT and development communities to interact in support of the MDGs with the use of ICT and had helped to develop a holistic policy response to the challenge of putting ICT in the service of development, paying special attention to Africa. The Task Force had also begun to address policy issues related to the integration of national e-strategies into overall development and poverty eradication strategies and had strongly advocated mainstreaming ICT into ODA policies and programmes. In the coming years, the Task Force would implement a focused strategy to support the realization of the MDGs. A major challenge was awareness-raising and advocacy for policy and regulatory reform, of which a key part would be to help shape an agenda for the World Summit on the Information Society and build a common platform for action.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 48], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/54 [draft: E/2003/L.46] without vote [agenda item 7 (i)].

Information and communication technologies for development

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of the first annual report of the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force,

Welcomes the achievements of the Task Force thus far, its orientation towards the use of information and communication technologies in the advancement of the development goals contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, its support of the preparations for the World Summit on the Information Society and its work, including through its regional networks and working groups and regional nodes on information and communication technology issues.

Development of a system-wide ICT strategy

CEB consideration. At its sixth session (New York, 20-21 October) [CEB/2003/5], the CEB High-level Committee on Management noted progress made by ICT managers on a number of projects, including the UN system Extranet and the search engine, and encouraged all organizations in the system that had not already done so to join the UN system Extranet so that it could truly become a system-wide tool for communication. The Committee also supported increased interaction between ICT managers and programme managers as part of the development of a system-wide ICT strategy and encouraged the exchange of policies on hardware replacement among organizations in the UN system.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/295 [YUN 2002, p. 836], the Secretary-General, as Chairman of CEB, submitted a report [A/58/568] on progress in the development of a comprehensive ICT strategy for the UN system. He reviewed the status of collaboration on ICT in the UN system, including the work of the ICT Task Force and the launch of joint work of the UN system and the Task Force, which concluded that a single e-policy for the UN system was not feasible, but coordination and information-sharing should be enhanced towards the elaboration of a system-wide ICT strategy. Regarding future actions, the report stated that to move towards enhanced coordination in ICT, work was needed in parallel at several levels, including that of ICT managers, senior managers and Member States, to overcome a number of basic roadblocks and impediments. In particular, more coherence was required with regard to budget, procurement and financial procedures, which tended to breed isolationist approaches to funding ICT programmes.

The report called for the elaboration of an action plan outlining the building blocks for a system-wide framework of ICTs, including milestones, benchmarks, resources, responsibilities and accountabilities for results. On the basis of consultation among CEB members and with inputs from the ICT Task Force, a proposal for such a strategy and accompanying action plan would be submitted to the Secretary-General in 2004.

By decision 58/565 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on ICT for development would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session.

Biotechnology

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/182 [YUN 2001, p. 761], the Secretary-General submitted a May report on the impact of new biotechnologies, with particular attention to sustainable development, including food security, health and economic productivity [A/58/76]. The report presented an overview of sectors and countries where biotechnology was making a significant contribution to economic productivity and human welfare and identified measures that needed to be taken in order to build indigenous capabilities in biotechnology. It put forward proposals on the aspects of the transfer of such technologies, particularly to developing countries and countries with economies in transition, while taking into account the need to protect intellectual property rights and the special needs of developing countries.

The Assembly, by decision 58/545 of 23 December, took note of the Secretary-General's report and asked that it be circulated at the Global Biotechnology Forum (see below).

UNIDO action. The UNIDO Industrial Development Board, at its twenty-seventh session (Vienna, 26-28 August) [GC.10/4], taking note of preparations for the Global Biotechnology Forum [IDB.27/15], scheduled to be held in Concepción, Chile, from 2 to 5 March 2004, requested the UNIDO Director-General to prepare a draft final statement of the Forum and urged member States to participate in the Forum at the highest appropriate level and encourage the participation of all other stakeholders [GC.10/4 (IDB.27/Dec.8)]. The UNIDO General Conference (Vienna, 1-5 December) [GC.10/INF.4] encouraged the Forum to discuss ways of addressing the issues of accelerating the quest for and acquisition, adaptation and dissemination of innovations, creating capacity for utilizing biotechnology and establishing strategic partnerships [GC.10/INF.4 (GC.10/Res. 7)].

The General Assembly, by decision 58/545 of 23 December, reiterated its invitation to the UNIDO Director-General to report to the Assembly's fifty-ninth (2004) session on the outcome of the Forum.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/481/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/200 without vote [agenda item 91 (b)].

Science and technology for development

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the role that international cooperation on science and technology can play in addressing the technological gap and the digital divide between the North and the South,

Recognizing also the importance of North-South as well as South-South cooperation in the field of science and technology,

Recognizing further the vital role of new and emerging technologies in raising the productivity and competitiveness of nations and the need, inter alia, for capacity-building, measures promoting the transfer and diffusion of technologies to developing countries, and the promotion of private sector activities and public awareness of science and technology,

Reaffirming the need to enhance the science and technology activities of the organizations of the United Nations system and the role of the Commission on Science and Technology for Development in providing policy guidance, in particular on issues of relevance to developing countries,

Recognizing the role of information and communication technologies in promoting development as an important step towards addressing the challenges of bridging the digital divide, and in this regard welcoming the convening of the first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society, held in Geneva from 10 to 12 December 2003, and its second phase, to be held in Tunis from 16 to 18 November 2005,

Welcoming the Commission's selection of the substantive theme "Promoting the application of science and technology to meet the development goals contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration", for its work during the intersessional period 2003-2004, as welcomed by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 2003/56 of 24 July 2003,

Noting with appreciation the Commission's work during its intersessional period 2001-2003 on its theme "Technology development and capacity-building for competitiveness in a digital society", in particular the information and communication technologies development indices, which serve as an important contribution to the preparation of the World Summit on the Information Society,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the impact of new biotechnologies, with particular attention to sustainable development, including food security, health and economic productivity,

Taking note also of Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/56, in which the Council invited the Commission to interact closely with the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force to promote greater information exchange and coordination of activities in the field of information and communication technologies in order to contribute to the World Summit on the Information Society,

1. Urges the relevant bodies of the United Nations system engaged in biotechnology to work cooperatively so as to ensure that countries receive sound scientific information and practical advice to enable them to take advantage of these technologies, as appropriate, to promote economic growth and development;

2. Takes note of the proposal of the Secretary-General for an integrated framework for biotechnology development within the United Nations system, as contained in his report, and requests him to report further on the status of coordination between the relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system with a view to strengthening the coordination of activities in the area of biotechnology, in particular in the promotion of biotechnology within the United Nations system;

3. Also takes note of the publication entitled Information and Communication Technology Development Indices, and invites the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development in collaboration with the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force and the International Telecommunication Union, to update that publication as part of its contribution to the World Summit on the Information Society, recalling General Assembly resolution 56/183 of 21 December 2001, in which the Assembly encouraged effective contributions from and the active participation of all relevant United Nations bodies;

4. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that the Commission and its secretariat within the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development are provided with the necessary resources to enable the Commission to better carry out its mandate;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Cybersecurity

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/481/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/199 without vote [agenda item 91 (b)].

Creation of a global culture of cybersecurity and the protection of critical information infrastructures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 57/239 of 20 December 2002 on the creation of a global culture of cybersecurity, 55/63 of 4 December 2000 and 56/121 of 19 December 2001 on establishing the legal basis for combating the criminal misuse of information technologies, and 53/70 of 4 December 1998, 54/49 of 1 December 1999, 55/28 of 20 November 2000, 56/19 of 29 November 2001 and 57/53 of 22 November 2002 on developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security,

Recognizing the growing importance of information technologies for the promotion of socio-economic development and the provision of essential goods and services, the conduct of business and the exchange of information for Governments, businesses, other organizations and individual users,

Noting the increasing links among most countries' critical infrastructures—such as those used for, inter alia, the generation, transmission and distribution of energy, air and maritime transport, banking and financial services, e-commerce, water supply, food distribution and public health—and the critical information infrastructures that increasingly interconnect and affect their operations,

Recognizing that each country will determine its own critical information infrastructures,

Recognizing also that this growing technological interdependence relies on a complex network of critical information infrastructure components,

Noting that, as a result of increasing interconnectivity, critical information infrastructures are now exposed to a growing number and a wider variety of threats and vulnerabilities that raise new security concerns,

Noting also that effective critical infrastructure protection includes, inter alia, identifying threats to and reducing the vulnerability of critical information infrastructures, minimizing damage and recovery time in the event of damage or attack, and identifying the cause of damage or the source of attack,

Recognizing that effective protection requires communication and cooperation nationally and internationally among all stakeholders and that national efforts should be supported by effective, substantive international and regional cooperation among stakeholders,

Recognizing also that gaps in access to and the use of information technologies by States can diminish the effectiveness of cooperation in combating the criminal misuse of information technology and in creating a global culture of cybersecurity, and noting the need to facilitate the transfer of information technologies, in particular to developing countries,

Recognizing further the importance of international cooperation for achieving cybersecurity and the protection of critical information infrastructures through the support of national efforts aimed at the enhancement of human capacity, increased learning and employment opportunities, improved public services and better quality of life by taking advantage of advanced, reliable and secure information and communication technologies and networks and by promoting universal access,

Noting the work of relevant international and regional organizations on enhancing the security of critical information infrastructures,

Recognizing that efforts to protect critical information infrastructures should be undertaken with due regard for applicable national laws concerning privacy protection and other relevant legislation,

1. Takes note of the elements set out in the annex to the present resolution for protecting critical information infrastructures;

2. Invites all relevant international organizations, including relevant United Nations bodies, to consider, as appropriate, inter alia, these elements for protecting critical information infrastructures in any future work on cybersecurity or critical infrastructure protection;

3. Invites Member States to consider, inter alia, these elements in developing their strategies for reducing risks to critical information infrastructures, in accordance with national laws and regulations;

4. Invites Member States and all relevant international organizations to take, inter alia, these elements and the need for critical information infrastructure protection into account in their preparations for the second phase of the World Summit on the Information Society, to be held in Tunis from 16 to 18 November 2005;

5. Encourages Member States and relevant regional and international organizations that have developed strategies to deal with cybersecurity and the protection of critical information infrastructures to share their best practices and measures that could assist other Member States in their efforts to facilitate the achievement of cybersecurity;

6. Stresses the necessity for enhanced efforts to close the digital divide, to achieve universal access to information and communication technologies and to protect critical information infrastructures by facilitating the transfer of information technology and capacity-building, in particular to developing countries, especially the least developed countries, so that all States may benefit fully from information and communication technologies for their socio-economic development.

Annex

Elements for protecting critical information infrastructures

1. Have emergency warning networks regarding cyber-vulnerabilities, threats and incidents.

2. Raise awareness to facilitate stakeholders' understanding of the nature and extent of their critical information infrastructures and the role each must play in protecting them.

3. Examine infrastructures and identify inter-dependencies among them, thereby enhancing the protection of such infrastructures.

4. Promote partnerships among stakeholders, both public and private, to share and analyse critical infrastructure information in order to prevent, investigate and respond to damage to or attacks on such infrastructures.

5. Create and maintain crisis communication networks and test them to ensure that they will remain secure and stable in emergency situations.

6. Ensure that data availability policies take into account the need to protect critical information infrastructures.

7. Facilitate the tracing of attacks on critical information infrastructures and, where appropriate, the disclosure of tracing information to other States.

8. Conduct training and exercises to enhance response capabilities and to test continuity and contingency plans in the event of an information infrastructure attack, and encourage stakeholders to engage in similar activities.

9. Have adequate substantive and procedural laws and trained personnel to enable States to investigate and prosecute attacks on critical information infrastructures and to coordinate such investigations with other States, as appropriate.

10. Engage in international cooperation, when appropriate, to secure critical information infrastructures, including by developing and coordinating emergency warning systems, sharing and analysing information regarding vulnerabilities, threats and incidents and coordinating investigations of attacks on such infrastructures in accordance with domestic laws.

11. Promote national and international research and development and encourage the application of security technologies that meet international standards.

---

Economic and social trends

---

The World Economic and Social Survey 2003 [Sales No. E.03.II.C.1], prepared in mid-2003 by the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA), observed that the tentative recovery of the world economy from the global slowdown of 2001, which began in the second half of 2002, quickly faded, largely due to the geopolitical uncertainties associated with the looming confrontation in Iraq (see p. 333). Those uncertainties caused oil prices to rise, equity markets to plummet, and consumer and business confidence to fall to their lowest levels in a decade. Gross world product (GWP) increased by less than 2 per cent in 2002, marking a second consecutive year of below-potential growth. China, India and a number of transition economies were notable exceptions to the sub-par performance that characterized the majority of the world's economies. A global recovery was forecast for the second half of 2003, led by the developed countries, notably the United States, which was expected to provide a stimulus to the rest of the world. However, geopolitical uncertainties continued to pose a downside risk to the global economy in early 2003, as did a new economic shock—severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS). The most important factors that could pose a threat to short-term global growth were the nature and adjustment of the United States external deficit and the possibility of deflation in a growing number of countries.

Growth in the developed economies as a group, which had been below 1.5 per cent for two years, was expected to be only marginally stronger in 2003. Although the prospects for economic growth in North America were improving, the war in Iraq derailed an already anaemic recovery in the United States and moderated substantially the robust domestic demand that had offset external weaknesses in Canada. While some weaknesses could linger, a gradual rebound was expected in the second half of 2003, to be strengthened further in 2004. Business spending, rather than household consumption, was considered crucial for the strength of the recovery. Following growth of only 1 per cent in 2002, Western Europe was expected to recover somewhat in 2003. The region's extended period of below-trend growth had led to higher region-wide unemployment and increased fiscal deficits, which, together with the appreciation of the euro, would dampen the region's recovery. Japan's economy remained fragile, with gross domestic product (GDP) growth forecast at less than 1 per cent in both 2003 and 2004. Despite an improvement in some economic indicators early in 2003, economic fundamentals continued to be weak, with the ongoing decline in asset prices aggravating severe problems in the banking sector and in the real economy. In Australia and New Zealand, GDP growth was expected to moderate in 2003 and 2004, although it would still exceed 3 per cent.

Growth in the economies in transition had decelerated in 2002 but was expected to strengthen again in 2003 and 2004. Economic growth in the Central and Eastern European countries, which decreased from 2.7 per cent in 2001 to 2.5 per cent in 2002, was expected to strengthen to about 3 per cent in 2003. The Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) economies continued to be largely sheltered from global economic uncertainties, having recorded strong growth each year since 2000. GDP growth for the region was projected at 4.5 per cent in 2003 (compared with 4.7 per cent in 2002).

In the developing countries overall, economic growth was expected to accelerate slightly to 3.5 per cent in 2003, compared with 3.2 per cent in 2002. However, not all regions were participating in that mild recovery: Latin America would record only modest growth; both East Asia and Western Asia would decelerate; and Africa would grow at only 3 per cent. The only bright spots in the outlook were South Asia, where growth was expected to reach 5.75 per cent in 2003, and China, which would continue its strong performance of recent years.

The Trade and Development Report, 2003 [Sales No. E.03.II.D.7], published by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), stated that the global economy was experiencing an anxious time. The long-anticipated rebound in the United States continued to be delayed and there were concerns that the imbalances and excesses created during the high-tech boom of the 1990s could result in a long period of erratic and sluggish growth. Adverse consequences for the developing countries, even the most resilient, were unavoidable. Brighter political conditions could help avoid a repetition of the previous year's recession in Latin America, but any recovery there would be fragile. Africa appeared to be relatively insulated from global trends, but the continued weakness of many commodity prices meant that it might not be able to repeat its performance of the preceding two years. Given the current level of development cooperation and the structural weaknesses across the region, there was growing consensus that it would be impossible to meet the MDGs even under the most optimistic growth scenario for the world economy.

A report on the world economic situation and prospects [Sales No. E.04.II.C.2], prepared jointly by DESA and UNCTAD, stated that at the end of 2003 the world economy was gaining momentum; GNP for the year as a whole had risen to 2.5 per cent. Despite some lingering uncertainties and downside risks, the recovery was expected to strengthen and broaden further, raising global economic growth to 3.5 per cent in 2004. The recovery was being driven mainly by the United States but with increasing contributions from a number of other economies, notably China. The acceleration in growth was greater in the developed countries than in the developing countries. While growth was highest in North America, Asia and Oceania achieved the greatest improvement because of Japan's return to productive growth. Overall, the Western European economies performed less well than in 2002, but improved as the year progressed. The CIS countries rebounded solidly from the deceleration in 2002 and growth in other economies in transition also improved. The international economic environment for most developing countries improved during 2003, but the long-term downward trend in the real prices of commodities and the pro-cyclical nature of international capital flows would continue to challenge many of them over the longer term. In Africa, progress in political and economic governance and in achieving macroeconomic stability, along with other positive factors, characterized the economy in 2003. Growth in Latin America and the Caribbean was expected to recover, boosted by the improvement in both external conditions and the domestic economic policy environment. In East Asia, the external sector, private consumption, public spending and business investment were all contributing to a strong recovery. In South Asia, the economic spillover from the war in Iraq was relatively modest and favourable agricultural production, rising rural incomes, increased exports, low interest rates, growing remittances and the improved security situation would continue to support a broad recovery in most countries. The prospects for Western Asia depended on developments in Iraq and on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Growth in the oil-exporting countries of the region was expected to accelerate. A key feature of the global recovery was the rising economic weight of the two most populous countries, China and India, which were growing at a rate more than twice the world average. Continued strong growth in those two large low-income countries would benefit the world economy as a whole. However, their size meant that their fast growth would have far-reaching implications for international patterns of trade, production and financing, and for the global supply and demand of energy and commodities.

Human Development Report 2003

The Human Development Report 2003 [Sales No. 03.II.B.1], prepared by UNDP, assessed progress made towards achieving the MDGs of halving extreme poverty by 2015 and advancing other areas of human development. It also reviewed how the MDGs were transforming development, as Governments, aid agencies and civil society reoriented their work around them. The Report found that, although much of the world was on track for some of the Goals, when progress was broken down by region and country and within countries, it was clear that a huge amount of work remained. Many had seen life expectancy plummet due to HIV/AIDS, and some of the worst performers—often torn by conflict—were seeing school enrolments shrink and access to basic health care fall. Nearly everywhere the environment was deteriorating. The Report also assessed where the problems in achieving the MDGs were, analysed what needed to be done to reverse the setbacks and made proposals for accelerating progress everywhere towards achieving all the Goals. Building on the commitments made at the 2002 Monterrey Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953], the Report also set out a Millennium Development Compact that provided a broad framework for how national development strategies and international support from donors and others could be better aligned, commensurate with the scale of the challenge of the MDGs.

In addition to providing a critical analysis of a different theme each year, the Report assessed the state of human development across the globe, involving country data that focused on human well-being, not just economic trends. In 2003, it ranked 175 countries in its human development index by combining indicators of life expectancy, educational attainment and adjusted per capita income, among other factors. Of the 175 countries listed, 55 were in the high human development category, 87 were in the medium category and 33 were in the low category. The Report also included a special set of tables containing indicators relating to the MDGs.

UNDP consideration. In June [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/21)], the UNDP/United Nations Population Fund Executive Board took note of a report of the UNDP Administrator [DP/2003/17] on strengthening consultations with Member States on the Human Development Report, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/264 [YUN 2002, p. 841]. The Administrator made proposals for improving the consultation process by increasing the number and enhancing the quality of consultations, and by holding special consultations on specific issues.

By decision 2003/225 of 11 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report.

---

Development policy and public administration

---

Committee for Development Policy

The Committee for Development Policy (CDP), at its fifth session (New York, 7-11 April) [E/2003/33], considered the issues of promoting an integrated approach to rural development in developing countries for poverty eradication and sustainable development (see p. 852) and global public goods and financial mechanisms in the pursuit of sustainable development. It also reviewed the list of least developed countries (LDCs), including criteria for their identification (see p. 867).

Concerning global public goods (GPGs) and innovative financial mechanisms in the pursuit of sustainable development, CDP focused on the contribution of the perspective on GPGs to thinking regarding development in developing countries and to accelerated progress towards meeting the MDGs. The Committee considered GPGs as those goods whose benefits had strong qualities of publicness and were global in terms of countries, people and generations. It agreed that GPGs had the potential for generating a better formulation of effective, efficient and equitable paths towards development. However, the concept needed further clarification. Limited until recently to the provision of national or local public goods, the concept had been extended to the international context. CDP suggested: raising public awareness about the nature and role of GPGs; developing new institutional and finance arrangements; identifying the financing gap and developing realistic estimates of financing requirements for the provision of GPGs by category; and considering new potential sources to supplement existing resources to help ensure the provision of GPGs and increasing the role of the private sector.

On 24 July, the Economic and Social Council (decision 2003/281) took note of chapters I, II, III and V of the CDP report on its fifth session.

Public administration

As decided by the Economic and Social Council on 28 January (decision 2003/207), the Committee of Experts on Public Administration held its second session (New York, 7-11 April) [E/2003/44]. The Committee had before it Secretariat reports on: status of and trends in the development of e-Government [E/C.16/2003/2]; basic data on the public sector [E/C.16/2003/3]; strategies for high-quality staffing in the public sector [E/C.16/2003/4]; and the role of public administration in mainstreaming poverty reduction strategies within the MDGs [E/C.16/2003/5].

The Committee concluded that it was an overarching priority for all countries to revitalize and revalidate public administration. Given the importance of efficient public administration systems for the attainment of social development goals, the Committee recommended that the Economic and Social Council establish linkages between the Committee's work and that of the Commission for Social Development. The Council should bring the issue of governance and public administration to the forefront of the development agenda and consider devoting its next high-level segment to that topic. The Committee further recommended that public administration issues should become an integral part of the process of follow-up to UN conferences and summits, and that the Committee could serve as a valuable source of advice to the intergovernmental machinery in that respect.

The Committee also reviewed and commented and made recommendations on the United Nations Programme in Public Administration and Finance. In particular, it recommended that the Secretariat continue to provide, at the request of Member States, technical advisory support for enhancing the quality of personnel in the public sector; reinforcing governance and public administration systems and institutions; and fostering transparency and accountability, as well as reconstructing public administration in post-conflict countries and in situations of decentralized governance. The Secretariat should further analyse and delineate the role of the State as enabler and user of knowledge and technology to support and encourage innovation throughout public administration and society as a whole. It should also continue its work on basic data on the public sector and expand the number of indicators, in partnership with agencies and institutes currently working on the topic, focusing in particular on government efficiency, transparency and participation.

The Committee commended the World Public Sector Report as being an extremely valuable tool for policy makers and practitioners in Member States; recommended that the Secretariat should focus, in its next issue, on human resources development; and advised the Secretariat of the usefulness of having the publication translated into other languages. The Committee stressed the importance of capitalizing on the successes of the United Nations Online Network in Public Administration and Finance (UNPAN) by expanding its reach to the subregional level in order to strengthen the capacity of subregional institutions in public administration.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 July [meeting 49], the Economic and Social Council [draft: E/2003/L.45, orally revised] adopted resolution 2003/60 without vote [agenda item 13 (g)].

Public administration and development

*The Economic and Social Council,
Recalling its resolution 2002/40 of 19 December 2002,*

1. Takes note of the report of the Committee of Experts on Public Administration on its second session;

2. Reiterates that efficient, accountable, effective and transparent public administration, at both the national and the international levels, has a key role to play in the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and in that context stresses the need to strengthen national public sector administrative and managerial capacity-building, in particular in developing countries and countries with economies in transition;

3. Reiterates also that strengthening public administration and the State are at the forefront of the development agenda to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and that revitalizing public administration is considered to be one of the essential components of economic and social development, and in this context decides to explore the possibility of considering this theme at a future high-level segment;

4. Decides that the Committee shall meet annually, instead of biennially, for one week, given the need to adapt to the ever-changing environment and owing to the fact that rapidly emerging issues need to be addressed in a timely manner, with a focus on the need to modernize in all countries public sector human resource systems, strengthen systems of accountability and transparency and explore the potential of e-government to develop innovative public administrative tools;

5. Decides also that the Committee, within the framework decided upon in General Assembly resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003, should contribute to the integrated and coordinated follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields;

6. Approves the following agenda for the next meeting of the Committee, to be held at United Nations Headquarters from 29 March to 2 April 2004:

1. Revitalizing public administration.
2. Public sector institutional capacity for African renewal.
3. Analysis of existing basic data on the public sector.
4. Review of the United Nations Programme in Public Administration and Finance.
7. Urges the Committee to continue to work in accordance with its mandate.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/277 [YUN 2002, p. 843], the Secretary-General submitted an 11 July report on the role of public administration in the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49]. International organizations and bodies had been invited to provide information on: initiatives undertaken to improve the capacity of the public sector of Member States to meet the MDGs; and innovative and successful practices that contributed directly to those Goals. The information collected revealed five areas of interventions that were conducive to the attainment of the MDGs: decentralization; transparency and accountability; "engaged governance" or mainstreaming citizens' voices in public policy; the application of ICT; and capacity-building in statistics. The report found that the first four reforms reinforced each other to transform traditional public administration into a public sector that emphasized participation, partnership and openness. Describing capacity-building in statistics as a cross-cutting need, the Secretary-General stated that, to help replicate best practices, the United Nations would regularly document those practices for knowledge transfer, while offering technical and advisory services to Member States for capacity-building.

Global Forum. On 12 September [A/58/388], Morocco transmitted to the Assembly the text of the Marrakech Declaration, adopted by the Fourth Global Forum on Reinventing Government (Marrakech, 11-12 December 2002), devoted to the theme "Citizens, Businesses and Governments: dialogue and partnerships for democracy and development".

Santa Cruz Consensus. On 28 July [A/58/193], Bolivia transmitted to the Secretary-General the texts of the Santa Cruz Consensus and the Ibero-American Charter for the Public Service, adopted at the fifth Ibero-American Conference of Ministers for Public Administration and State Reform (Santa Cruz de la Sierra, Bolivia, 26-27 June 2003).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/495 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/231 without vote [agenda item 12].

Public administration and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/225 of 19 April 1996, 53/201 of 15 December 1998, 56/213 of 21 December 2001 and 57/277 of 20 December 2002 on public administration and development, as well as Economic and Social Council resolution 2001/45 of 20 December 2001,

Stressing the need for capacity-building initiatives aimed at institution-building, human resources development, strengthening financial management and harnessing the power of information and technology,

Recalling that 2006 will mark the tenth anniversary of the resumed fiftieth session of the General Assembly, on public administration and development,

Welcoming the adoption of the Ibero-American Charter for the Public Service at the fifth Ibero-American Conference of Ministers for Public Administration and State Reform, held in Santa Cruz de la Sierra, Bolivia, on 26 and 27 June 2003,

Expressing its deep appreciation for the generosity of the Government of Mexico in hosting the fifth Global Forum on Reinventing Government, held in Mexico City from 3 to 7 November 2003,

Welcoming e-Government initiatives as a tool to promote development,

Welcoming also the adoption of the United Nations Convention against Corruption,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the role of public administration in the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

2. Reiterates that efficient, accountable, effective and transparent public administration, at both the national and international levels, has a key role to play in the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and in that context stresses the need to strengthen national public sector administrative and managerial capacity-building, in particular in developing countries and countries with economies in transition;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the commemoration of 23 June as United Nations Public Service Day and the granting of the United Nations Public Service Awards, which provide motivation for public servants all over the world to enhance public administration as a tool for development, and in this regard encourages Member States to participate in the award process by nominating candidates;

4. Also takes note with appreciation of the Marrakech Declaration, adopted by the Fourth Global Forum on Reinventing Government, held in Marrakech, Morocco, from 11 to 13 December 2002;

5. Welcomes with appreciation the offer of the Government of the Republic of Korea to host the Sixth Global Forum on Reinventing Government in Seoul in 2005;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to make proposals for commemorating the tenth anniversary of the resumed fiftieth session of the General Assembly, on public administration and development, during the sixty-first session of the General Assembly, in 2006;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to support information exchange and research and to disseminate successful practices and advisory services in public administration that contribute to achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration;

8. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue supporting the e-Government initiatives in the African, Asian, Central American and Caribbean regions as a tool for development;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Developing countries and transition economies

Least developed countries

The special problems of the officially designated LDCs were considered in several UN forums in 2003, especially through the implementation of the Brussels Declaration and the Programme Action for the LDCs for the Decade

2001-2010, adopted at the Third UN Conference on the LDCs in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 770] and endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 55/279 in July of that year [ibid., p. 771]. In April, CDP undertook the triennial review of the official LDC list, recommending one country for addition to and two countries for future graduation from the list (see below).

LDC list

The number of countries officially designated as LDCs increased to 50, when the Economic and Social Council endorsed the CDP recommendation to add Timor-Leste to the list.

The full list of LDCs comprised: Afghanistan, Angola, Bangladesh, Benin, Bhutan, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Kiribati, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Myanmar, Nepal, Niger, Rwanda, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sudan, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania, Vanuatu, Yemen, Zambia.

Triennial review

CDP, which was responsible for adding countries to or graduating them from the LDC list, conducted, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1998/46 [YUN 1998, p. 1262], a triennial review of the list of LDCs at its fifth session in April [E/2003/33]. As requested by the Council in resolution 2002/36 [YUN 2002, p. 847], the Expert Group Meeting on the Review of the List of Least Developed Countries (New York, 23-24 January) continued to revise the criteria for identification of LDCs, reviewed eligibility for inclusion and graduation, examined the situation of certain economies in transition and discussed the issue of smooth graduation from LDC status.

Based on the Expert Group proposals and its own review, CDP adopted a three-year average of $750 per capita as the threshold for inclusion in the category under the gross national income per capita criterion and increased the margin for graduation from 15 to 20 per cent above the threshold for inclusion, making the graduation threshold a three-year average of $900 per capita. The Committee agreed that the threshold for inclusion with regard to both the human assets index and the economic vulnerability index criteria should be chosen so that three quarters of the most disadvantaged countries would be eligible under each of those criteria. The margin between the thresholds for inclusion and graduation should be decreased from 15 to 10 per cent for those indicators.

Applying those thresholds, the Committee concluded that Timor-Leste qualified for inclusion in the list of LDCs; Cape Verde and Maldives qualified for graduation from the list in 2006; and Samoa was eligible to be considered for graduation in 2006. The Committee emphasized the need for a smooth transition for countries that graduated from the list and called on the international community to give urgent attention to the matter. Since all of the countries that qualified or were eligible for graduation were small island developing States, CDP considered it imperative that the international meeting on small island developing States in 2004 should make progress in formulating policies and actions to address the development challenges faced by that group of countries, particularly those that qualified for graduation from LDC status.

Economic and Social Council action. By decision 2003/280 of 24 July, the Economic and Social Council included Timor-Leste in the list of LDCs. By decision 2003/281 of the same date, the Council deferred consideration of the review of the list of LDCs, including the question of graduating Cape Verde and Maldives, to a resumed session. The Secretary-General was asked to provide the Council with technical support in that regard.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/112 [draft: A/58/L.36 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 12].

Report of the Committee for Development Policy

The General Assembly,

Noting that Timor-Leste became a member of the United Nations on 27 September 2002,

Recalling Economic and Social Council decisions 2003/280 and 2003/281 of 24 July 2003 on the report of the Committee for Development Policy,

Noting that Timor-Leste has given its consent to be included in the list of least developed countries,

Endorses the recommendation of the Economic and Social Council that Timor-Leste be added to the list of the least developed countries.

Programme of Action (2001-2010)

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/276 [YUN 2002, p. 846] and Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/33 [ibid., p. 845], the Secretary-General issued a May report [A/58/86-E/2003/81] on implementation of the Brussels Programme of Action for the LDCs, adopted at the Third United Nations Conference on the LDCs (LDC-III) in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 770]. The report chronicled the policies adopted by LDCs and progress made and challenges remaining in implementing the Brussels Programme of Action. It also examined the decisions and programmes undertaken by the international development partners, including the UN system, the Bretton Woods institutions, other multilateral organizations, the donor community, civil society and the private sector, in mainstreaming the Brussels Programme of Action.

The report concluded that LDC actions to fulfil the Brussels Programme of Action commitments were yet to materialize, given the limited time since its adoption, the lack of data, the complexity of the issues involved and capacity constraints. While LDC Governments had shown a willingness to reverse the fortunes of their peoples, the right economic and social policies had to be pursued and suitable international conditions should prevail in order for them to make meaningful progress towards achieving the Programme of Action's commitments and targets. In addition, only a few LDCs had established national forums or designated national focal points, both of which were crucial for facilitating follow-up and monitoring the implementation of the Programme of Action.

The report recommended a number of actions to address the challenges that were impeding implementation of the Programme of Action. They covered: the need for international support; a clearly defined operational plan designating the roles of stakeholders, sequenced priorities and coordinated actions at the national, regional/subregional and global levels; and the effective functioning of arrangements for follow-up, coordination, monitoring and review.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/17 [draft: E/2003/L.15/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 6 (b)].

Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Brussels Declaration and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010,

Recalling also its decision 2001/320 of 24 October 2001 on the establishment of a regular sub-item entitled "Review and coordination of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010",

Recalling further its resolution 2002/33 of 26 July 2002, in which it took note of the oral report of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States on the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010,

1. Takes note of the progress report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010;

2. Expresses its deep concern over the weak implementation of the Programme of Action, and expresses its expectation of more vigorous implementation by all partners;

3. Calls upon the Secretary-General, while stressing the central role of the Economic and Social Council in the coordination of actions in the United Nations system for the implementation of the Programme of Action, to take appropriate measures to strengthen the efficiency and effectiveness of the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States so that it can fulfil its functions in accordance with General Assembly resolution 56/227 of 24 December 2001;

4. Urges all Member States and the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system and invites the international financial institutions and other multilateral organizations to extend to the Office of the High Representative their full support for the fulfilment of its mandate, including through staffing support;

5. Stresses the need for the effective implementation of the Programme of Action and its annual assessment at the substantive session of the Council, recognizes in this regard the critical importance of the participation of the least developed countries in the assessment process of the Programme of Action, and requests the Secretary-General to make, in consultation with Member States, recommendations to facilitate the participation of the delegations of the least developed countries at the annual substantive sessions of the Council and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session;

6. Reiterates that the Programme of Action offers a framework for partnership, based on mutual commitments by least developed countries and their development partners to undertake concrete actions in a number of interlinked areas set out in the Programme of Action;

7. Calls upon least developed countries, with the support of their development partners, to continue to fulfil their commitments and to promote the implementation of the actions contained in the Programme of Action by translating them into specific measures within their national development frameworks and poverty eradication strategies, in particular poverty reduction strategy papers, where they exist, with the involvement of civil society, including the private sector, on the basis of a broad-based inclusive dialogue, as well as to continue to promote an enabling environment for the effective mobilization and utilization of resources consistent with paragraph 82 of the Programme of Action;

8. Calls upon all development partners of the least developed countries, including multilateral financial institutions, to continue to fulfil their commitments regarding the effective and expeditious implementation of the Programme of Action, and urges the developed countries that have not yet done so to make concrete efforts to implement effectively their commitments on official development assistance to the least developed countries, as contained in paragraph 83 of the Programme of Action;

9. Invites the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, including the Bretton Woods institutions, and all other international organizations, within their respective mandates, to support, as a priority, the implementation of the Programme of Action, including programmes of financial and technical co-operation devoted to least developed countries in support of their national development programmes, including their poverty reduction strategies;

10. Welcomes the initiatives of the United Nations and the Group of Eight to bridge the digital divide that has further marginalized the least developed countries, particularly in the area of information technology, calls upon the international community to address the special needs of the least developed countries therein, and in this regard invites the forthcoming World Summit on the Information Society to adopt concrete actions to bridge the digital divide in the least developed countries;

11. Invites the forthcoming Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, to be held in Cancún, Mexico, in September 2003, to address the marginalization of the least developed countries in international trade and to adopt further measures to integrate effectively the least developed countries into the multilateral trading system and the global economy;

12. Invites the members of the World Trade Organization to facilitate and accelerate accession to the organization for those least developed countries that are candidates by expeditiously implementing the guidelines to facilitate and accelerate the accession of the least developed countries to the World Trade Organization, which were adopted by the General Council of the World Trade Organization on 10 December 2002;

13. Calls upon the Secretary-General to submit his annual progress report on the implementation of the Programme of Action in such a way as to make it more analytical and results-oriented by putting greater emphasis on concrete results and indicating the progress achieved in the implementation of the Programme of Action.

The Council, by decision 2003/287 of 24 July, decided that the high-level segment of its 2004 substantive session would consider the theme "Resources mobilization and enabling environment for poverty eradication in the context of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010".

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/17 (above), the Secretary-General submitted a 24 October report [A/58/532] containing recommendations for facilitating the participation of delegations of LDCs at the Council's annual substantive sessions.

Trade and Development Board. The UNCTAD Trade and Development Board (TDB), at its fiftieth session (Geneva, 6-17 October) [A/58/15], having considered the third progress report of the UNCTAD secretariat on UNCTAD-wide activities in favour of LDCs [TD/B/50/3], an UNCTAD secretariat note on preliminary impact assessment of the main recent initiatives in favour of LDCs in the area of preferential market access [TD/B/50/5 & Corr.1] and a conference room paper describing progress on the implementation of the Integrated Framework for Trade-Related Technical Assistance for LDCs (IF), adopted agreed conclusions [A/58/15 (agreed conclusions 476(L))] in which it urged the secretariat to work with donors to reverse the declining share of LDCs in UNCTAD's technical cooperation resources and intensify its activities in support of LDCs and to report thereon, including on IF-related activities, and to continue to contribute to the Economic and Social Council's reviews of the Brussels Programme of Action. It urged development partners and others in a position to do so to implement market access commitments in favour of LDCs, give priority to enhancing LDCs' supply capacities and address bottlenecks hindering market entry. The secretariat should also undertake further work on how to enhance the benefits to LDCs from preferential market access and other international support measures. In the run-up to UNCTAD XI, to be held in 2004, the secretariat should address the issues of supply capacities and diversification with a view to enabling LDCs to benefit more effectively from preferential market access. TDB encouraged the secretariat to intensify activities for strengthening country ownership of the IF process and called for donor support through the IF Trust Fund. In the area of commodities, the secretariat should strengthen activities in commodity diversification, technical assistance and capacity-building. TDB invited bilateral donors to regularly replenish the UNCTAD Trust Fund for LDCs and asked the secretariat to mobilize adequate extrabudgetary resources for the participation of LDCs in the UNCTAD XI preparatory process and in the conference itself; donors were invited to earmark contributions for that purpose. TDB called for further strengthening of cooperation between UNCTAD and the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second

Committee [A/58/492], adopted resolution 58/228 without vote [agenda item 102].

Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/279 of 12 July 2001, in which it endorsed the Brussels Declaration and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, and its resolution 57/276 of 20 December 2002 on the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries,

Reaffirming its resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, by which it adopted the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in particular paragraph 15 thereof, in which the heads of State and Government undertook to address the special needs of the least developed countries,

Recalling Economic and Social Council decision 2001/320 of 24 October 2001, in which the Council decided to establish a regular sub-item entitled "Review and coordination of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010",

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/17 of 22 July 2003, in which the Council took note of the progress report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries,

Taking note also of Economic and Social Council decision 2003/287 of 24 July 2003, in which the Council adopted the theme "Resources mobilization and enabling environment for poverty eradication in the context of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010" as the theme of its high-level segment of 2004,

Taking note further of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Expresses its deep concern over the weak implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, and expresses its expectation of more vigorous implementation by all partners;

2. Reiterates that the Programme of Action offers a framework for partnership, based on mutual commitments by the least developed countries and their development partners to undertake concrete actions in a number of interlinked areas, as set out in the Programme of Action;

3. Calls upon the least developed countries to continue, with the support of their development partners, to fulfil their commitments and to promote the implementation of the actions contained in the Programme of Action by translating them into specific measures within their national development frameworks and poverty eradication strategies, in particular poverty reduction strategy papers, where they exist, with the involvement of civil society, including the private sector, on the basis of a broad-based inclusive dialogue, as well as to continue to promote an enabling environment for the effective mobilization and utilization of resources consistent with paragraph 82 of the Programme of Action;

4. Calls upon the development partners of the least developed countries, including the multilateral financial institutions, to fulfil their commitments regarding the effective and expeditious implementation of the Programme of Action, and urges the developed countries that have not yet done so to make concrete efforts to effectively implement their commitments on official development assistance to the least developed countries, as contained in paragraph 83 of the Programme of Action;

5. Urges the least developed countries and their development partners to make the Programme of Action an effective tool for the implementation of the poverty reduction strategies at the national level for the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

6. Invites the United Nations system, including the Bretton Woods institutions, and all other international organizations, within their respective mandates, to support as a priority the implementation of the Programme of Action, including programmes of financial and technical cooperation devoted to the least developed countries in support of their national development programmes, including their poverty reduction strategies;

7. Stresses the need for the effective implementation of the Programme of Action and its annual assessment at the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council, and recognizes in this regard the critical importance of the participation of the least developed countries in the assessment process of the Programme of Action;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to facilitate the participation of government representatives from the least developed countries in the annual assessment by the Economic and Social Council of the Programme of Action within the context of the overall financial provisions established by the General Assembly in its resolution 1798(XVII) of 11 December 1962 and subsequent amendments;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures, within existing resources and with the full participation of the regional commissions and relevant United Nations bodies, to support the participation of the least developed countries in international meetings, as well as in their preparation and consultation processes;

10. Emphasizes the importance of coordinating action within the United Nations system for the implementation of the Programme of Action, and calls upon the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to ensure the efficiency and effectiveness of the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States to fulfil its functions in accordance with General Assembly resolution 56/227 of 24 December 2001;

11. Calls upon the Secretary-General to submit, through the Economic and Social Council, an annual progress report on the implementation of the Programme of Action in a more analytical and results-oriented way by placing greater emphasis on concrete results and indicating the progress achieved in its implementation.

Island developing countries

Implementation of the Programme of Action

Preparations for international review meeting

Commission on Sustainable Development. Pursuant to resolution 57/262 [YUN 2002, p. 848], by which the General Assembly decided to convene in 2004 an international meeting to undertake a comprehensive review of the implementation of the Barbados Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States (SIDS), adopted at the 1994 Global Conference on the subject [YUN 1994, p. 783], the Commission on Sustainable Development considered, at its eleventh session (27 January and 28 April-9 May) [E/2003/29], its role in the preparatory process for the conduct of that review. There was broad agreement that the Commission should act as the high-level policy forum for the preparatory process. The review should not renegotiate the Programme of Action but should assess the successes and failures of its implementation and focus on developing actions and modalities to further implementation and provide a strong foundation for the sustainable development of SIDS. There was general agreement also that effective regional, subregional and major group input into the preparatory process should be assured through regional preparatory meetings.

The Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption a draft resolution on the preparations for the international review meeting.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 48], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Sustainable Development [E/2003/29], adopted resolution 2003/55 without vote [agenda item 13 (a)].

Preparations for an international meeting to review the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the decision of the General Assembly in its resolution 57/262 of 20 December 2002 to convene an international meeting in 2004 in Mauritius, including a high-level segment, for a full and comprehensive review of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States,

Recalling also the decision to convene regional and interregional preparatory meetings of small island developing States,

Recalling further the decision to invite the Commission on Sustainable Development, at its eleventh session, to consider its role in the preparatory process for the comprehensive review of the implementation of the Programme of Action,

Noting the preliminary discussion of the issues by the Commission at its eleventh session in its consideration of its role in the preparations for the international meeting,

1. Decides that the Commission on Sustainable Development, during its twelfth session, in 2004, shall convene a three-day preparatory meeting for an international meeting for an in-depth assessment and appraisal of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, and shall finalize the preparations for the international meeting, including its agenda;

2. Also decides that the three-day preparatory meeting shall consider a synthesis report, to be prepared by the Secretary-General on the basis of the recommendations contained in:

(a) National assessment reports of small island developing States, where available;

(b) Expert thematic workshop reports;

(c) Reports of the regional and interregional preparatory meetings referred to in paragraph 6 below on the implementation of the Programme of Action;

3. Invites the international donor and development community and international organizations to provide information, on or before 31 January 2004, on their activities in support of the Programme of Action, as well as on recommendations for further action in support of its full implementation, and requests that the information provided be considered by the Secretary-General in the preparation of the synthesis report referred to in paragraph 2 above;

4. Welcomes the work in progress in all small island developing States to continue and to enhance their preparations for the international meeting, and calls upon the international community, United Nations agencies and intergovernmental bodies to support the efforts of small island developing States in their preparations of national assessment reports to be completed by July 2003, given that national reports are a critical component for the comprehensive review of the Programme of Action in providing information on respective national circumstances;

5. Emphasizes that in the preparation of the reporting referred to in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 above, the provisions of paragraph 9 of General Assembly resolution 57/262 should be taken into account, and invites the Secretary-General to make full use of the Small Island Developing States Information Network in his efforts to disseminate the various reports;

6. Welcomes, in accordance with paragraph 7 of General Assembly resolution 57/262, the regional preparatory meetings for:

(a) Pacific small island developing States, to be held in Apia from 4 to 8 August 2003;

(b) Caribbean small island developing States, to be held in Port of Spain from 18 to 22 August 2003;

(c) Atlantic, Indian Ocean, Mediterranean and South China Seas small island developing States, to be held in Praia from 1 to 5 September 2003;

as well as an interregional preparatory meeting, with ministerial participation, for all small island developing States, to be held in Nassau from 26 to 30 January 2004;

7. Encourages Governments and participants at the high-level segment of the twelfth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development to also address, within the thematic cluster of issues for that session, matters related to the sustainable development of small island developing States and the Programme of Action;

8. Invites the international community, United Nations agencies and intergovernmental bodies to support regional initiatives and to collaborate closely, in partnership with the regional organizations and institutions, to expedite preparations for the review, noting the work already done by the regional organizations and institutions, bearing in mind the coordinating role assigned to the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat by the General Assembly, and to the Water, Natural Resources and Small Island Developing States Branch of the Department in its capacity as Chair of the inter-agency task force for the international meeting;

9. Reiterates the need for the full participation of small island developing States in the preparatory process leading up to, as well as during, the international meeting, and invites Governments and international and regional intergovernmental organizations to contribute to the voluntary fund called for in paragraph 15 of General Assembly resolution 57/262;

10. Reiterates also the need for the effective participation of associate members of the regional commissions, and calls for their participation to be facilitated through the voluntary fund referred to in paragraph 9 above;

11. Invites interested Governments and donor organizations to support the participation of major groups in the preparatory process and in the international meeting itself;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to work within existing resources and especially to utilize fully the savings from the budget that would result from not implementing the two intersessional meetings of the Commission on Sustainable Development as programmed in 2003 and voluntary contributions, as necessary, for the preparatory process referred to above.

Also on 24 July, by decision 2003/283, the Council recommended to the Assembly that travel and subsistence allowances for participants from SIDS in the preparatory meetings and the international review meeting should be provided from the funds designated by donors for that purpose in the voluntary fund established by the Assembly in resolution 57/262 [YUN 2002, p. 848].

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/262 [YUN 2002, p. 848], the Secretary-General submitted an 18 July report on further implementation of the outcome of the Global Conference on the Sustainable Development of SIDS [A/58/170]. He provided an overview of activities planned at the national, regional and international levels in anticipation of the international review meeting, to be hosted by Mauritius in 2004. The report, which included input from the Inter-Agency Task Force established by the Secretary-General for the purpose of preparing the international meeting, also gave information on the schedule of regional preparatory meetings that would coordinate regional platforms based on the national assessment reports of small island developing States, which were expected to play a key role in the preparatory process.

Three regional preparatory meetings were held in 2003: for Pacific SIDS (Apia, Samoa, 4-8 August) [A/58/303]; for Caribbean SIDS (Port of Spain, Trinidad and Tobago, 6-10 October) [A/C.2/58/14]; and SIDS of the Atlantic, Indian Ocean, Mediterranean and South China Seas (Praia, Cape Verde, 1-5 September) [A/C.2/58/12]. Other regional-level preparations included the Expert Meeting on Capacity-Building for Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency in SIDS (Niue, 7-11 July) [A/58/675] and a workshop on the vulnerability of SIDS (Dominica, 29 September-3 October). Those regional preparatory and expert meetings would culminate in the convening of an interregional preparatory meeting with ministerial-level participation to harmonize the platform for all SIDS, to be held in Nassau, Bahamas, in January 2004. In addition, the SIDS Unit of the Secretariat was compiling best practices and success stories regarding field projects and programmes in SIDS aimed at implementing the Programme of Action at the international, regional and local levels. A publication and web-based databank were envisaged in time for the Mauritius meeting.

The report concluded that preparatory work for the international meeting was progressing steadily, but there was a need for high-level regional and global advocacy in support of the preparations.

The Secretary-General, by a November note [A/58/567 & Corr.1], submitted to the General Assembly the draft provisional rules of procedure of the 2004 International Meeting to Review the Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of SIDS.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/484/Add.4], adopted resolution 58/213 A without vote [agenda item 94 (d)].

Further implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration of Barbados and the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, adopted by the Global Conference on the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, and recalling also its resolution 49/122 of 19 December 1994 on the Global Conference,

Recalling also its resolutions 51/183 of 16 December 1996, 52/202 of 18 December 1997 and 53/189 of 15 December 1998, the review document adopted by the Assembly at its twenty-second special session, and its resolutions 54/224 of 22 December 1999, 55/199 and 55/202 of 20 December 2000, 56/198 of 21 December 2001 and 57/262 of 20 December 2002,

Recalling further the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), in particular the emphasis given to small island developing States in chapter VII of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, as well as the references to the specific needs of small island developing States contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development,

Recalling its decision to convene an international meeting in 2004, including a high-level segment, to undertake a full and comprehensive review of the implementation of the Programme of Action, as called for in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation,

Welcoming the preparatory activities undertaken at the national and regional levels for the international meeting, and expressing its appreciation to the Governments of Samoa, Cape Verde and Trinidad and Tobago for hosting regional preparatory meetings,

Reaffirming the political importance of the forthcoming ten-year review of the progress achieved since the Global Conference, and stressing that the risk from the vulnerabilities of and challenges to small island developing States has increased and requires the strengthening of cooperation and more effective development assistance towards achieving the goals of sustainable development,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Approves the provisional rules of procedure of the International Meeting to Review the Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, as contained in the note by the Secretary-General;

3. Decides that the International Meeting shall be open to all States Members of the United Nations and States members of the specialized agencies, with the participation of observers, in accordance with the established practice of the General Assembly and its conferences and with the rules of procedure of the International Meeting;

4. Welcomes the efforts made at the national, sub-regional and regional levels to implement the Programme of Action, and takes note of the reports of the regional preparatory meetings for the Pacific, the Atlantic, Indian Ocean, Mediterranean and South China Seas and the Caribbean regions of small island developing States;

5. Reiterates the urgent need for the full and effective implementation of the Programme of Action, the Declaration of Barbados and the review document adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-second special session so as to assist small island developing States in their efforts to achieve sustainable development;

6. Decides that the International Meeting will be convened from 30 August to 3 September 2004 and will include a high-level segment to undertake a full and comprehensive review of the implementation of the Programme of Action, as called for in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and welcomes the offer of the Government of Mauritius to host the International Meeting;

7. Also decides to hold, if deemed necessary by an open-ended preparatory meeting, and if funded from voluntary resources, two days of informal consultations in Mauritius, on 28 and 29 August 2004, to facilitate the effective preparation of the International Meeting;

8. Urges that representation and participation at the International Meeting be at the highest possible level;

9. Decides that the International Meeting will seek a renewed political commitment by the international community and will focus on practical actions for the further implementation of the Programme of Action, taking into consideration new and emerging issues, challenges and situations since the adoption of the Programme of Action;

10. Endorses Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/55 of 24 July 2003, in which it decided, on the recommendation of the Commission on Sustainable Development at its eleventh session, to convene an interregional preparatory meeting for small island developing States in Nassau from 26 to 30 January 2004, expresses its appreciation to the Government of the Bahamas for hosting the meeting, and encourages participation in the meeting at the ministerial level;

11. Also endorses the decision of the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 2003/55, on the recommendation of the Commission on Sustainable Development at its eleventh session, to convene during the twelfth session of the Commission a three-day preparatory meeting for the International Meeting, from 14 to 16 April 2004, for an in-depth assessment and appraisal of the implementation of the Programme of Action and to finalize the preparations for the International Meeting, including its agenda;

12. Decides that the preparatory meeting shall be open-ended and shall be held in accordance with the rules of procedure of the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council and the supplementary arrangements established for the Commission on Sustainable Development by the Council in its decisions 1993/215 of 12 February 1993 and 1995/201 of 8 February 1995, applied to all Member States and other participants, as was the practice in the preparatory committee for the World Summit on Sustainable Development, while maintaining the provisions of the Commission in relation to travel assistance, in accordance with the provisions of Economic and Social Council decision 2003/283 of 24 July 2003;

13. Encourages associate members of the regional commissions that are small island developing States to participate in the International Meeting, and decides that their participation shall be in accordance with rule 61 of the provisional rules of procedure of the International Meeting;

14. Decides that the participation of major groups, including non-governmental organizations, in the International Meeting shall be in accordance with rule 65 of the provisional rules of procedure of the International Meeting;

15. Also decides that non-governmental organizations whose work is relevant to the subject of the International Meeting, that are not currently accredited by the Economic and Social Council, may submit applications to participate as observers in the International Meeting, as well as its preparatory meeting, subject to the approval of the open-ended preparatory meeting;

16. Takes note of the appointment of a Secretary-General of the International Meeting;

17. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the relevant United Nations agencies and organizations, and taking into account the submissions he may receive from bilateral, regional and multilateral donor agencies as well as from major groups, including non-governmental organizations, to ensure the timely submission to the Commission on Sustainable Development at its twelfth session of a synthesis report on the basis of the national, regional and interregional preparations and reports by small island developing States and other parties;

18. Requests that the necessary resources, from within existing resources, be provided to the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to ensure that the goals and purposes of the International Meeting receive the widest possible dissemination within Member States, major groups, including non-governmental organizations, and national, regional and international media, including through the Small Island Developing States Information Network, with a view to encouraging contributions to and support for the International Meeting and its preparatory process;

19. Expresses its appreciation for the contributions made to the voluntary trust fund established for the purpose of assisting small island developing States to participate fully and effectively in the International Meeting and its preparatory process, as approved by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 2003/55 and decision 2003/283, and urges all Member States and organizations to contribute generously to the fund;

20. Encourages the full and effective participation of developing countries in the International Meeting, and invites donor countries and agencies to provide additional extrabudgetary resources, in particular through voluntary contributions to the trust fund, to facilitate their participation;

21. Welcomes the coordinating efforts undertaken in the United Nations system through the creation of an inter-agency task force to enable the United Nations system to improve coordination and enhance cooperation on matters pertaining to the preparatory process and to the International Meeting itself;

22. Calls upon the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, through the Division for Sustainable Development and its Small Island Developing States Unit, to undertake activities in both the preparatory processes and the International Meeting to enhance coordination and cooperation within the United Nations system as well as with other relevant multilateral organizations to ensure the effective implementation and monitoring of and follow-up to the outcomes of the ten-year review of the Programme of Action;

23. Calls upon the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States to fulfil its mandate and to advocate strongly, in partnership with the relevant parts of the United Nations as well as with major groups, media, academia and foundations, for the mobilization of international support and resources for the successful outcome of the International Meeting and for the follow-up to the outcomes of the ten-year review of the Programme of Action;

24. Welcomes the generous contributions by donors to provide for staffing of the Small Island Developing States Unit, and calls upon the Secretary-General to explore practical options for strengthening the Unit, including by redeployment of resources, on a permanent basis during the biennium 2004-2005, pursuant to resolutions 56/198 and 57/262, with a view to facilitating the full and effective implementation of the Declaration of Barbados and the Programme of Action and the outcomes of the International Meeting;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session, under the item entitled "Environment and sustainable development", a sub-item entitled "Further implementation of the outcome of the Global Conference on the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States: follow-up to the outcomes of the International Meeting to Review the Implementation of the Barbados Programme of Action", and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session the report of the International Meeting.

Landlocked developing countries

In 2003, the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation (Almaty, Kazakhstan, 28-29 August) adopted the Almaty Declaration and Programme of Action, a global framework outlining partnerships, objectives and priorities for addressing the special needs of landlocked developing countries [A/CONF.202/3].

In December, the General Assembly, in resolution 58/201 (see p. 877), endorsed the Almaty Programme of Action and called for its effective implementation.

Ministerial communiqué. On 2 October [A/C.2/58/3], the Lao People's Democratic Republic transmitted to the Secretary-General the ministerial communiqué adopted at the Fourth Annual Ministerial Meeting of Landlocked Developing Countries (New York, 30 September) and the communiqué issued by the ministers of landlocked developing countries attending the fifth session of the WTO Ministerial Conference (Cancún, Mexico, 13 September) (see p. 1535).

International Ministerial Conference

In accordance with General Assembly resolutions 56/180 [YUN 2001, p. 777] and 57/242 [YUN 2002, p. 850], the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation was held in Almaty, Kazakhstan, on 28 and 29 August [A/CONF.202/3]. The Conference reviewed the current situation of transit transport systems in landlocked developing countries and the implementation of the 1995 Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation between Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and the Donor Community (YUN 1995, p. 876) and formulated policy measures and action-oriented programmes aimed at developing efficient transit transport systems. At the conclusion of the Conference, the ministers adopted the Almaty Declaration and the Almaty Programme of Action: Addressing the Special Needs of Landlocked Developing Countries within a New Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation for Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries.

In conjunction with the Conference, three parallel events were organized by UNCTAD (on trade facilitation); by the World Bank (a high-level investment forum); and by the Economic Commission for Europe (regional initiatives on trade and transport facilitation).

Almaty Programme of Action and Declaration

The Almaty Programme of Action stated that landlocked developing countries, as a group, were among the poorest of developing countries. Lack of territorial access to the sea, remoteness and isolation from world markets contributed to their relative poverty, substantially inflating transportation costs and lowering their effective participation in international trade. High transit transport costs constrained export development and caused the price of imports to soar. The transit neighbours of landlocked developing countries were themselves mostly developing countries, often of broadly similar economic structure, beset by similar scarcities of resources, and burdened by the financial, infrastructural and social impacts deriving from transit transport. The transit developing countries were in need of improved technical and administrative arrangements in their transport and customs and administrative systems to which their landlocked neighbours were expected to link.

The objective of the Programme of Action was to address the special needs of landlocked developing countries and establish a new global framework for action for developing efficient transit transport systems in landlocked and transit developing countries, taking into account the interests of both groups. It aimed to: secure access to and from the sea by all means of transport according to applicable rules of international law; reduce costs and improve services so as to increase the competitiveness of their exports; reduce the delivered costs of imports; address problems of delays and uncertainties in trade routes; develop adequate national networks; reduce loss, damage and deterioration en route; open the way for export expansion; and improve safety of road transport and security of people along the corridors.

The Programme of Action outlined five priorities: fundamental transit policy issues; infrastructure development and maintenance, including rail transport, road transport, ports, inland waterways, pipelines, air transport and communications; international trade and trade facilitation; international support measures; and implementation and review. The Conference recommended specific actions under each priority. In terms of international support measures, the Conference recommended that the international community, including financial and development institutions and donor countries, should assist landlocked and transit developing countries to deal effectively with their transit problems and requirements by, among other actions, facilitating an external supporting environment for the timely realization of the objectives of the Programme of Action, providing technical support through partnerships and encouraging increased foreign direct investment. Donor countries and multilateral financial and development institutions should provide landlocked and transit developing countries with financial and technical assistance in the form of grants and/or concessional loans for the needs identified in the Programme of Action. Special attention should be given to institutional capacity-building to promote effective government policy-making and practices addressing transport and transit needs. The Programme of Action identified areas for priority financing, including investments to complete "missing links" in the transit transport chain to extend railways and roads to landlocked developing countries; maintenance of existing physical transit transport infrastructure; development and maintenance of cost-effective routes; development of dry port projects; projects to improve existing or establish adjacent border points; and rehabilitation and reconstruction of transport infrastructure, especially in countries or regions emerging from war and internal conflict and natural disasters.

The Programme of Action stated that implementation required individual and concerted efforts by the landlocked and transit developing countries, their development partners, the UN system, relevant international organizations, including the World Bank and regional development banks, WTO, and the World Customs Organization and regional and other organizations. International and regional organizations should give priority to requests for technical assistance to supplement national and regional efforts to promote efficient use of existing transit facilities. The private sector should be actively involved in implementing the Programme of Action, and South-South cooperation and triangular cooperation with the involvement of donors should be promoted, as should cooperation among sub-regional and regional organizations. The UN regional commissions should expand their programmes consistent with the Programme of Action and specific subregional meetings should be organized to consider how to implement the Programme of Action effectively.

The UN Secretary-General should report on the implementation of the Programme of Action to the Assembly, which would decide on periodicity. The Assembly was invited to conduct a comprehensive review of the implementation of the Programme of Action at a time to be decided. The Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States should coordinate the preparatory review process, and UNCTAD, the World Bank and the regional commissions were invited to provide substantive assistance for that process. The Office of the High Representative was asked to enhance cooperation and coordination with UN system organizations, particularly those engaged in operational activities on the ground in landlocked and transit developing countries, and to carry out advocacy work to mobilize international awareness and focus attention on the implementation of the Programme of Action.

In the Almaty Declaration, participating Governments recognized that high trade transaction costs were a major reason for the marginalization of landlocked developing countries from the global trading system and committed themselves to minimizing that marginalization and enhancing the beneficial integration of landlocked developing countries into the global economy through the establishment of efficient transit transport systems in both landlocked and transit developing countries, and through genuine partnerships between landlocked and transit developing countries and their development partners at the national, bilateral, subregional, regional and global levels. They reaffirmed the right of access of landlocked countries to and from the sea and freedom of transit through transit countries. They also reaffirmed that transit countries had the right to take all measures necessary to ensure that the rights and facilities provided for landlocked countries in no way infringed upon their legitimate interests. They emphasized the importance of effective implementation of and regular follow-up to the Almaty Programme of Action and committed themselves to that end, and requested the High Representative to ensure that the Conference was effectively followed up. The Conference also adopted a resolution thanking the people and Government of Kazakhstan for hosting the Conference.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/242 [YUN 2002, p. 850], the Secretary-General submitted a 23 September report [A/58/388] on the outcome of the International Ministerial Conference and some aspects of the preparatory process that preceded it. He concluded that the Conference successfully galvanized international solidarity and partnerships to address the special needs of landlocked developing countries as called for in the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2002, p. 49]. Implementation of the specific actions in the five priority areas agreed upon in the Almaty Programme of Action would facilitate establishing the efficient transit transport systems in landlocked and transit developing countries that were inevitably required for landlocked developing countries to be effectively integrated into the international trading system.

Preparatory meetings

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/242 [YUN 2002, p. 850], the Intergovernmental Preparatory Committee for the International Ministerial Conference held two sessions during 2003. The sixth Meeting of Governmental Experts from Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Representative Donor Countries and Financial and Development Institutions (New York, 23-27 June) served as the first preparatory session [A/CONF.202/PC/5]. It included a high-level panel discussion and considered a draft outcome document [A/CONF.202/PC/L1 & Corr.1]. The session also had before it a May report of the Secretary-General [A/CONF.202/PC/2] on the state of preparations for the Conference, including the outcomes of regional and subregional preparations. Annexed to the report were the Asunción Programme of Action, adopted in Asunción, Paraguay (12-13 March); the Asian Action Plan on Transit Transport Cooperation, adopted at the fifty-ninth session of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, 24-25 April); and the African Action Plan, adopted in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia (7 May). The report also highlighted other aspects of the preparatory process for the Ministerial Conference, including support from the UN system, consultations with the host Government, mobilization of resources, and advocacy and promotion of the Conference. In addition, the structure and format of the Conference were reviewed. The report concluded that the Conference would need to agree on action-oriented measures that took into account a broad range of factors, such as unfettered access to the sea by all means of transport, inadequate infrastructure, imbalance of trade, inefficient transport organization, poor utilization of assets, reform of transit transport policies and weak managerial, procedural, regulatory and institutional systems, and international support measures.

A Meeting of Senior Officials (Almaty, 25-27 August) served as the second preparatory session [A/CONF.202/PC.2/1], which finalized the draft outcome document, the Almaty Programme of Action, and recommended it to the Conference for adoption.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/481/Add.3], adopted resolution 58/201 without vote [agenda items 91 (c) & (f)].

Almaty Programme of Action: Addressing the Special Needs of Landlocked Developing Countries within a New Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation for Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/180 of 21 December 2001, in which it requested the Secretary-General to convene in 2003 the international ministerial meeting now known as the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation, as well as its resolution 57/242 of 20 December 2002,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the outcome of the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation;

2. Expresses its deep appreciation to the Government of Kazakhstan for hosting the International Ministerial Conference in Almaty on 28 and 29 August 2003;

3. Endorses the Almaty Programme of Action: Addressing the Special Needs of Landlocked Developing Countries within a New Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation for Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and the Almaty Declaration, adopted by the International Ministerial Conference;

4. Calls for full and effective implementation of the Almaty Programme of Action;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Specific actions related to the particular needs and problems of landlocked developing countries: outcome of the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation";

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the Almaty Programme of Action.

On 23 December, the Assembly took note of a report by the UNCTAD Secretary-General [A/58/209] on the transit environment in the landlocked States in Central Asia and their transit developing neighbours (decision 58/547) (see p. 1010).

Chapter II

Operational activities for development

In 2003, the United Nations system continued to provide development assistance to developing countries and countries with economies in transition through the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the central United Nations funding body for technical assistance. UNDP's income in 2003 amounted to $3.2 billion, a 10 per cent increase over 2002. Total expenditure for all programme activities and support costs in 2003 was $2.6 billion as compared with $2.8 billion the previous year. Technical cooperation funded through other sources included $50.7 million provided through the programme executed by the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs, $73.7 million through the United Nations Fund for International Partnerships and $21.1 million through the United Nations Capital Development Fund. In July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the establishment of the World Solidarity Fund, as a UNDP trust fund, for the eradication of poverty and the promotion of social and human development in developing countries.

In April, the General Assembly confirmed the appointment of Mark Malloch Brown as Administrator of UNDP for a further four-year term of office beginning on 1 July. The Administrator submitted an end-of-cycle assessment of the multi-year funding framework (MYFF), 2002-2003, which highlighted the progress achieved in meeting the MYFF goals, and the 2004-2007 MYFF, which set out the strategic goals and service lines to be pursued by UNDP. He also presented a review of the implementation of the UNDP Business Plans, 2002-2003.

The Secretary-General reported in May on progress in implementing General Assembly resolution 56/201 on the triennial comprehensive policy review of UN operational activities for development. In July, the Economic and Social Council reviewed progress in implementing the resolution and called for continued reform of the UN development system. In particular, it noted that most UN organizations were realigning their policies, strategies, programmes and activities on the basis of internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals. In the context of his programme for strengthening the United Nations: an agenda for change, the Secretary-General submitted a report reviewing the functioning of UN technical cooperation and how the clarification of roles and responsibilities could help improve its overall impact.

The United Nations Office for Project Services had a project delivery of $490.6 million, an increase of 1 per cent over its original target for the year.

The United Nations Volunteers programme expanded for the seventh consecutive year, with over 5,600 volunteers carrying out more than 5,800 assignments in 150 countries.

In December, the Assembly called for an intensification of efforts to mainstream technical and economic cooperation among developing countries and declared 19 December as the UN Day for South-South Cooperation.

---

System-wide activities

---

Review of UN technical cooperation

The Secretary-General, responding to General Assembly resolution 57/300 on strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change [YUN 2002, p. 1353], submitted a report reviewing technical cooperation of the United Nations [A/58/382]. The objective was to provide information on a representative selection of UN technical cooperation issues in order to assist programme countries in their decision-making with regard to technical cooperation and donors in adjusting their funding decisions. It examined how UN system technical cooperation functioned and reviewed how clarification of roles and responsibilities might help to improve overall impact. The issues examined were chosen to illustrate the breadth and differing natures of UN technical cooperation undertakings. Some were traditional sectoral issues, such as natural disasters, trade and energy; others were cross-cutting, such as women and gender, peace-building and information and communication technologies; and some reflected new and emerging issues of a sensitive political and cultural nature, such as the rule of law and peace-building. Yet another, HIV/AIDS, reflected a primary preoccupation for the UN system. For each issue, the report documented the main focus and type of activity carried out by each UN entity; identified current structural challenges within the UN system to the effective and efficient delivery of technical cooperation; and highlighted areas where future work might be required to determine if some form of consolidation, transfer or clarification of responsibilities was required.

The report stated that the complex and at times under-resourced system of UN technical cooperation appeared to be performing reasonably well. Managers were aware of their mandates and of the need to work with others to achieve the range of inputs required. The system had not been designed for optimal efficiency, but had evolved over decades as a result of incremental decision-making by governance bodies and the system's funders. The variety of differing mechanisms in the system for the delivery of technical cooperation continued to attract funding support, and their services continued to be of value to developing countries.

Any major structural rationalization would be complex, involving the fundamental questioning of the continued relevance of some existing mandates and an assessment of donors' willingness to support any such rationalization with a reform of their own funding practices. Rationalization that imperiled resource flows could prove counter-productive. Donor funding practices had a major impact on the structure of the system. Rationalization of the supply-side structure therefore had to be carefully addressed, as there was no guarantee that existing funding arrangements would continue following any functional reorganization in the system. The report emphasized the linkages between the supply side, the demand side and the system of financing. Each had to complement and support the others if an optimal system was to be achieved. Despite the large number of entities involved overall and actions taken by them on any single issue, duplication was limited.

The Secretary-General concluded that follow-up to the main recommendations contained in the report, to be undertaken by the UN Deputy Secretary-General, would ensure that optimum synergies within the system were achieved. The UNDP Administrator would undertake, in collaboration with UN department heads, a review of a few key issues on which the division of labour could be improved and report to the Deputy Secretary-General. Attention would be given to ensuring effective collaboration between the regional commissions and the funds and programmes, in cases where there was shared sectoral priority and where the required expertise existed. Member States would be informed of the follow-up actions as part of the triennial comprehensive review of operational activities in 2004.

The General Assembly, in resolution 58/270 of 23 December, requested the Secretary-General to undertake a comprehensive review of the regular programme of technical cooperation and to make proposals to the Assembly at its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

Operational activities segment of the Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council, at its 2003 substantive session [A/58/3/Rev.1], considered the question of operational activities of the United Nations for international development cooperation at meetings on 3, 4, 7, 10 and 11 July, based on the programme of work for that segment, which it had noted on 5 March (decision 2003/211). The Council held discussions on the follow-up to policy recommendations of the General Assembly and the Council; the reports of the Executive Boards of UNDP/United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the World Food Programme (WFP); and economic and technical cooperation among developing countries (see p. 910), including high-level panel discussions on resources for operational activities for development and on an impartial and independent assessment of the extent to which UN funds, programmes and agencies at the field level learned lessons from their evaluations, and proposals for improving the feedback mechanisms at the field level.

Among the documents before the Council were the Secretary-General's reports on progress in the implementation of Assembly resolution 56/201 on the triennial policy review of operational activities for development [E/2003/61], comprehensive statistical data on operational activities for development for 2001 [E/2003/57], assessment of the lessons learned by UN organizations from evaluation activities at the field level [E/2003/64] and funding of UN system development cooperation activities [E/2003/89] (see sections below).

On 4 July, the Council held a dialogue with the UN country team for Senegal.

Implementation of resolution 56/201

In May [E/2003/61], the Secretary-General reported to the Economic and Social Council on progress in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 56/201 [YUN 2001, p. 784] on the triennial policy review of operational activities for development of the UN system, in the areas of funding, capacity-building, strategic frameworks (common country assessment (CCA) and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF)), evaluation, field-level coordination, gender mainstreaming, humanitarian assistance, regional and subregional dimensions and South-South cooperation, and technical and economic cooperation among developing countries.

Progress was assessed in the light of the outcomes of a number of high-level conferences and summits (the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], the Monterrey Consensus of the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953], the Doha Development Agenda of the fourth World Trade Organization Ministerial Conference [YUN 2001, p. 1432], and the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]), which reflected agreement within the international community on an overarching policy framework to support national efforts to fight poverty through a global partnership between developed and developing countries, and on the basis of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 5]. The Council was invited to undertake the progress review with the aim of preparing the ground for the next triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities, which the Assembly would conduct in 2004, and to provide guidance to the Secretary-General. Recommendations were made to the Council on action it might consider for further implementation of resolution 56/201.

The Secretary-General reported that the UN system had improved coherence and coordination at the country level in support of the MDGs and other internationally agreed goals, linking regional and country dimensions and adjusting to complex development situations, including humanitarian emergencies and post-conflict situations. Guidance and training were provided to country teams, encouraging learning and the sharing of experience, and establishing quality assurance and support mechanisms at country, regional and global levels. The system assisted recipient countries in integrating macro-economic imperatives with social concerns and addressing challenges, such as achieving budget trade-offs between economic and social objectives. While significant progress was made in harmonizing and simplifying processes, improving efficiency and reducing transaction costs for government partners, more could be done to improve the mix of skills, expertise and services that the UN system could mobilize to support countries in implementing development strategies.

For capacity-building—a long-term, country-driven process at the core of development—the report suggested that external support should focus on developing existing national capacities and address institutional, organizational and societal dimensions. CCA, UNDAF and the poverty reduction strategy papers (PRSPs) processes should be used as entry points for the system's support. The report suggested that UN organizations devise country-level strategies for capacity-building and reflect them in CCA and UNDAF, and intensify information-sharing on experience gained, benchmarks and indicators concerning capacity-building as linked to the MDGs.

The focus of CCA and UNDAF on the MDGs was strengthened, thereby improving their quality, enhancing UNDAF's role in supporting coordinated implementation of the outcome of major UN conferences and summits, and providing an integrated response to national priorities. The United Nations Development Group (UNDG) was developing a new support and oversight system for the CCA and UNDAF processes through a comprehensive system of quality support and assurance for country teams. The new support system would provide consolidated inter-agency feedback with a view to creating a learning development system and a greater sense of accountability at all levels. The CCA and UNDAF guidelines had promoted a results-based approach; the UNDAF results matrix harmonized result-based management terminology to establish a link with national priorities and organizations' country programmes as the basis for increased inter-agency coordination, joint or collaborative programming and improved evaluations.

In terms of field-level coordination, in response to the Assembly's request in resolution 56/201 that UN system organizations simplify and harmonize rules and procedures for operational activities, UN funds and programmes had submitted a programme of work to the Council, including proposals to phase out redundant rules and procedures, with benchmarks and time-bound targets to be achieved by 2004. That programme of work was being implemented. New harmonized procedures adopted by UNDP/UNFPA, UNICEF and WFP included simplification and harmonization modalities regarding standard instruments such as: the UNDAF results matrix; the country programme action plan, a standard document highlighting commitments of each UN agency and the Government concerned; the annual output work plan, a standardized document that provided an activity plan for each output; and the UNDAF monitoring and evaluation plan and the UNDAF final evaluations.

Progress in joint programming was still limited, but new guidelines were being completed, which would require new financial mechanisms for reducing transaction costs and increasing the emphasis on capacity-building and effectiveness and efficiency. The full range of new modalities was being phased in, beginning in five countries with country programmes, starting in 2004.

With regard to decentralization, UN funds and programmes that were members of the UNDG Executive Committee concluded that a high degree of delegation and decentralization of authority had been reached in their country and regional offices and that no further action was needed in that area. However, in other UN agencies, different degrees of decentralization and different levels of authorization still prevailed, hindering collaborative programming. Greater attention was still needed to harmonize recruitment, remuneration and training of national project personnel and information technology platforms.

The Secretary-General pursued the "United Nations House" initiative and had supported the development of shared administrative services since his 1997 reform programme (YUN 1997, p. 1390), so as to increase efficiency at the country level. A total of 52 UN Houses had been established, and five new ones were planned to open in 2003.

The resident coordinator system played a central role in field-level coordination, and its responsibilities had become more complex. Practical measures were being implemented to enhance the effectiveness of the system in facilitating joint programming, pooling of resources, and establishing common databases and knowledge networks. Mechanisms to select, train and appraise the performance of resident coordinators had improved, broadening the pool of candidates, while attempting to improve the gender balance. Major challenges to the optimal functioning of the system continued to be the mobilization of technical expertise and resources, and more active participation of all UN organizations, in particular specialized and technical agencies and regional commissions. More extensive use of information and communication technologies might lead to improvement.

UN organizations and the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund (IMF)) had been working over the past few years to create new opportunities for country-level cooperation, provide greater avenues for joint actions and increase interaction between their respective instruments. Both of them, in particular the World Bank, were recasting their priorities so as to focus on poverty and the MDGs. Areas for further cooperation included: support to national capacity development for policy design and budget management; support to more systematic monitoring and reporting on policy trends; development of policy and reform scenarios for the macro-economic frameworks underpinning PRSPs; alignment of donor assistance to PRSP priorities; efforts to address statistical deficiencies to monitor progress on the MDGs; and building results-based indicators into the PRSP framework.

Efforts to mainstream gender into programmes and policies were carried out through mechanisms such as thematic groups, CCAs and UNDAFs. The Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality (see p. 1187), chaired by the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), coordinated an assessment of 15 CCAs and UNDAFs, and a parallel assessment was led by UNICEF on CCA and UNDAF initiatives in West Africa. Both called for measures to clarify roles and responsibilities in respect of gender equality and women's rights at the country level, strengthen the capacity of gender theme groups in the CCA and UNDAF processes, improve availability of gender-disaggregated data, promote capacity-building, and ensure that lessons learned were shared within the system and with Governments and other partners. Concrete initiatives focused on the development of country-specific gender equality indicators and the identification of intermediary targets for achieving the MDGs.

The work of the United Nations in humanitarian assistance was linked to that in operational activities for development, especially for complex emergency situations such as civil strife and armed conflicts. There was increasing awareness among humanitarian agencies of the need to tailor emergency assistance in support of recovery and development and by development assistance providers for early involvement in rehabilitation efforts. There was also a growing recognition of the need for an integrated approach among all donors to ensure field-level coordination in transition periods. The use of ad hoc approaches and appeals processes in post-conflict periods, using a combination of methodological tools available to country teams, suggested that those teams needed more flexible mechanisms to support Governments and institutions in the early stages of post-conflict, while meeting urgent humanitarian needs.

Regional and subregional coordination of operational activities was encouraged through the involvement of the regional bureaux, among other things, in support of country-level preparation of CCAs and UNDAFs. A more systematic participation of the regional commissions in their preparation would be mutually beneficial.

UNDP played a lead role in promoting technical and economic cooperation among developing countries, and all UN system organizations had focal points for technical cooperation among developing countries. Advisory services provided by UN system organizations to developing countries increasingly relied on experts from those countries in such fields as judicial reform, local government, and information and communication technologies.

The Secretary-General, in an April report [E/2003/57] issued to complement his report on progress in implementing resolution 56/201, provided detailed statistical data on resources channelled through the organizations of the UN system for 2001, which the Council noted on 11 July (decision 2003/225).

The General Assembly, in resolution 57/270 B of 23 June (see p. 1468), recognized the progress achieved towards a more coherent UN performance in the development field, as reflected by the shared responsibility, cooperation and coordination among members of UNDG, and invited the UNDP Administrator, in his capacity as chair of UNDG, to report regularly to the Council on the Group's activities relating to the integrated and coordinated implementation of the outcome of major UN conferences and summits.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 11 July [meeting 30], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/3 [draft: E/2003/L.20] without vote [agenda item 3 (a)].

Progress in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 56/201 on the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 56/201 of 21 December 2001 on the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system and Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/29 of 25 July 2002,

Reiterating that the fundamental characteristics of the operational activities of the United Nations system should be, inter alia, their universal, voluntary and grant nature, their neutrality and their multilateralism as well as their ability to respond to development needs in a flexible manner, and that the operational activities of the United Nations system are carried out for the benefit of recipient countries, at the request of those countries and in accordance with their own policies and priorities for development,

Reaffirming and underscoring the collective commitment and political will of Member States to strengthening the role and capacity of the United Nations development system to assist developing countries in the implementation of the goals, targets and commitments set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and by the major United Nations conferences and summits,

Stressing that national Governments have the primary responsibility for their countries' development, and recognizing the importance of national ownership of development programmes,

Reiterating the need for all organizations of the United Nations development system, in accordance with their respective mandates, to focus their efforts at the field level in accordance with the priorities identified by recipient countries and with the goals, targets and commitments set in the Millennium Declaration and by the major United Nations conferences and summits,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the progress in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 56/201, on assessment of the lessons learned by United Nations organizations from evaluation activities at the field level and on funding of development cooperation activities of the United Nations system;

2. Takes note also of the request contained in General Assembly resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 to invite the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme, in his capacity as chair of the United Nations Development Group, to present, on a regular basis, to the Economic and Social Council at its coordination segment, the activities carried out by the United Nations Development Group related to the integrated and coordinated implementation of the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits;

3. Takes note further of the progress made in the reform of the United Nations development system, and calls for its continuation;

4. Takes note of the fact that most organizations of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, are currently realigning their policies, strategies, programmes and activities on the basis of internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, including through mechanisms such as multi-year strategic frameworks, where they exist, the common country assessment and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework, as well as in the context of their contribution to national poverty reduction strategies, including poverty reduction strategy papers, where they exist;

Funding of operational activities for development of the United Nations system

5. Reiterates that regular/core resources, inter alia, because of their untied nature, are the bedrock of the operational activities of the United Nations and essential for the maintenance of the multilateral, neutral and universal nature of the United Nations development system;

6. Notes with regret that, although significant progress has been achieved with regard to the governance and functioning of the United Nations development system, there has not been, as part of that overall process of change, a significant increase in core resources for operational activities for development;

7. Recognizes that strengthening the role and capacity of the United Nations development system to assist countries in achieving their development goals requires continuing improvement in its effectiveness, efficiency, coherence and impact, along with a significant increase in and expansion of its resource base on a continuous, more predictable and assured basis;

8. Invites all United Nations funds and programmes, as well as the specialized agencies, to further explore possibilities to strengthen their resource base, including, as appropriate, through multi-year funding frameworks as resource management tools integrating programme objectives, results and resources;

9. Calls upon all donor countries and countries in a position to do so to substantially increase their contributions to the core/regular budgets of the United Nations development system, in particular the funds and programmes, and wherever possible, to contribute on a multi-year basis, and also stresses the need for further exploration of other sources of funding that could complement but should not replace traditional sources;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake further analytical work on the issue of funding and to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session in the context of the triennial comprehensive policy review;

Capacity-building

11. Reaffirms the need for all organizations of the United Nations development system at the country level to focus on capacity-building as one of their primary objectives, within their respective mandates, and urges these organizations:

(a) To support recipient Governments and other relevant stakeholders in devising country-level strategies for capacity-building in the pursuit of internationally agreed development goals;

(b) To intensify inter-agency information sharing at the system-wide level on good practices and experience gained, results achieved, benchmarks and indicators, monitoring and evaluation criteria concerning capacity-building, and reflect them in the common country assessment and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework;

(c) To invite all organizations to include reporting on capacity-building in their annual reports to their respective governing bodies;

12. Reiterates that the United Nations development system should use, to the fullest extent possible and practical, national execution and available national expertise and technologies as the norm in the implementation of the operational activities;

Common country assessment and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework

13. Requests the United Nations development system and its country-level structures to continue their efforts to enhance the quality of the common country assessment, in particular its analytical aspects, and to strengthen the operational impact of the United Nations Development Assistance Framework, including by inviting the active engagement of the specialized agencies and other partners, as appropriate, in the formulation and the use of these instruments, under the leadership of national Governments;

14. Welcomes efforts by the members of the Executive Committee of the United Nations Development Group to explicitly link their programme support to national development goals and priorities, through the revised Framework and its results matrix, invites other United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies to use the results matrix, and requests that the matrix be submitted to the Executive Boards as an annex to the country programme;

15. Requests United Nations funds, programmes and the specialized agencies to continue to ensure the alignment and integration of their operational activities for development with national development efforts and priorities, through the active and full government participation and leadership at all stages of the common country assessment and Framework processes, as well as broader involvement of all relevant stakeholders;

16. Notes the increased collaboration between the United Nations system and the Bretton Woods institutions, and invites the United Nations system and the Bretton Woods institutions to explore further ways to enhance cooperation, collaboration and coordination, including through greater harmonization of strategic frameworks, instruments, modalities and partnership arrangements, in full accordance with the priorities of the recipient Governments, and in this regard emphasizes the importance of ensuring, under the leadership of national authorities, greater consistency between the strategic frameworks developed by the United Nations funds, programmes and agencies and the Bretton Woods institutions, and the national poverty reduction strategies, including the poverty reduction strategy papers, where they exist;

17. Also notes the efforts of the United Nations Development Group to promote the role of the regional bureaux of the funds and programmes in assisting country teams in the preparation of the common country assessment and the Framework;

18. Encourages the regional commissions to provide, when requested, their inputs for the preparation of those frameworks;

Evaluation of operational activities for development

19. Emphasizes the importance of monitoring and evaluation of operational activities of the United Nations system in order to enhance their effectiveness and impact, and calls upon the Secretary-General to integrate in future reports a stronger focus on lessons learned, results and outcomes;

20. Stresses the need to ensure the full participation of national authorities as well as the involvement of relevant stakeholders in the design, programming, implementation and evaluation processes, as well as in the drafting of the terms of reference, the development of methodologies and indicators and the selection of teams in all evaluation exercises conducted at the field level;

21. Recommends that United Nations funds, programmes and the specialized agencies make systematic efforts to enhance the capacity for identifying, documenting and synthesizing lessons learned from evaluation activities in order to retain and absorb their results, ensure their dissemination, in particular at the country level, by placing the evaluation reports in the public domain using the Internet, and use evaluation findings and lessons learned in the design and implementation of programmes and projects, and also recommends that they assist national efforts to create country-level repositories of evaluation findings and lessons learned that are relevant in each national context, supporting the use of information and communication technology, national databases of lessons learned from evaluation, the development of analysis, documentation, distillation and synthesis of those lessons learned, and promoting the development of publications and the use of other means of communication;

22. Calls upon all organizations of the United Nations system to make additional efforts to promote the development of national evaluation capacities, including capacities to make use of lessons learned from past United Nations activities that are relevant in each national context, and encourages them to communicate findings of evaluation activities and disseminate corresponding lessons learned to national entities, also, as appropriate, through more frequent use of local national languages;

23. Recommends that all organizations of the United Nations development system consider lessons learned and their dissemination as a specific required component of their activities and designate those responsible for monitoring the effectiveness of the lessons learned process both at Headquarters and at the country level;

24. Requests the organizations of the United Nations development system to encourage country teams to make greater use of lessons learned from evaluations in the preparation of the common country assessment, the United Nations Development Assistance Framework, individual country programmes and other relevant country documents and to encourage enhanced country-level absorption of lessons learned, including through the intensification of activities such as joint evaluations, as appropriate under the Framework umbrella, of programmes and joint support to national databases of lessons learned from evaluation;

Simplification and harmonization of rules and procedures on operational activities

25. Welcomes progress made by the members of the Executive Committee of the United Nations Development Group in the harmonization and simplification of rules and procedures, and requests the United Nations funds and programmes to enhance and accelerate their simplification and harmonization efforts to ensure full implementation of the programme of work submitted in 2002 before the end of 2004;

26. Requests that efforts be undertaken across the United Nations system, including the specialized agencies, to make progress in all the areas of simplification and harmonization of rules and procedures at the field level, taking into account efforts and ongoing initiatives by bilateral donors and multilateral development banks, with the ultimate intent of reducing transaction costs, increasing effectiveness and efficiency in aid delivery and enhancing government ownership of development processes through better coordination and management of external assistance;

27. Requests the funds and programmes of the United Nations system, through their Executive Boards, to include in their programmes of work the harmonization and simplification of recovery policies for non-core resources contributions;

28. Requests the Secretary-General, in due consultation with the funds and programmes, through the Executive Committee of the United Nations Development Group, to submit to the next substantive session of the Economic and Social Council, in 2004, a report on the assessment of the value added of the joint meetings of the Executive Boards and their impact on the operational activities segment of the Economic and Social Council and to make recommendations as appropriate;

Common premises and shared services

29. Encourages the members of the United Nations Development Group to continue their efforts in the area of common premises, shared services and joint offices, with the objective of ensuring higher quality and cost-effectiveness of country-level functioning of the United Nations system;

Resident coordinator system

30. Reiterates the need for greater participation by the specialized and technical agencies in the functioning of the resident coordinator system, encouraging all the organizations of the United Nations system to set in place innovative and collaborative ways to enable the resident coordinator system to tap, to an even greater degree, into the wealth of expertise in those areas that are relevant to support national efforts towards internationally agreed development goals;

31. Also reiterates the need to increase the number of women resident coordinators;

32. Encourages the resident coordinators to continue to work closely with the country representatives of individual agencies, including the World Bank and other relevant partners, in order to ensure effective coordination and collaboration under the leadership of national authorities, including in post-conflict situations;

33. Requests the United Nations Development Group and the Executive Committee on Humanitarian Affairs to continue their efforts to provide a coordinated response to the needs of countries in transition from relief to development;

34. Encourages the resident coordinator system to facilitate the formulation and use of integrated and flexible approaches in complex emergency and post-conflict situations, ensuring that all relevant partners, including those outside the United Nations system, are involved under the leadership and with the fullest involvement of the Government, wherever possible;

Gender mainstreaming in operational activities

35. Calls upon the organizations of the United Nations system to improve their gender mainstreaming efforts in operational activities of the United Nations system in all fields, including in support of poverty eradication, reiterating that the empowerment of women is a development priority, and to strengthen their efforts in support of the development of national capacities to improve the status of women in the context of development and poverty eradication policies;

South-South cooperation/economic and technical cooperation among developing countries

36. Requests the organizations of the United Nations system to take appropriate measures to improve the effective incorporation of technical cooperation among developing countries into their programmes and projects and to intensify efforts towards mainstreaming the modality of technical cooperation among developing countries, including through support for the activities of the Special Unit for Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries, and encourages other relevant international institutions to take similar measures;

Guidelines for the next triennial comprehensive policy review

37. Requests the Secretary-General to focus the analysis for the triennial comprehensive policy review in 2004, in the context of the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, on:

(a) Assessment of the assistance that the United Nations development system provides to developing countries in order to support their efforts to pursue poverty eradication, economic growth and sustainable development;

(b) Integration of operational activities for development of the United Nations system with national efforts and priorities;

(c) Identification of measures for further improvement in coherence and efficiency of the United Nations system at the country level;

(d) Harmonization and simplification processes, further identifying possible areas for an agenda for the period from 2004 to 2007;

(e) Identification of ways to enhance capacity-building in order to assist developing countries to pursue poverty eradication, economic growth and sustainable development;

(f) Adequacy of United Nations development funding, in the light of the challenges that internationally agreed development goals present to the developing countries and the international community, and to make recommendations accordingly, and the identification of ways to ensure adequate funding for operational activities in this context;

(g) Adequacy of human resources and necessary skills available at the country level within the United Nations system to support national efforts and priorities;

(h) Effectiveness of the reforms of the operational activities of the United Nations in improving development results and outcomes and increasing the coherence, efficiency and quality of programming at the country level, ensuring in this regard that particular attention is paid to the contribution of the common country assessment and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework and the associated results matrix in improving operational effectiveness;

(i) Contribution of the Millennium Development Goals as a framework to support the alignment of the operational activities of the United Nations system with national development efforts and priorities;

(j) Results identified, outcomes and lessons learned at the country level from evaluation activities.

Assessment of lessons learned

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/201 [YUN 2001, p. 784], the Secretary-General, in May [E/2003/64], issued an assessment of the lessons learned by UN organizations from field-level evaluation activities.

He stated that the demand for lessons from evaluation had been changing as the content and context of operational activities had changed, shifting the focus of evaluations away from input-oriented accountability towards strategic and policy issues and questions of development success. Evaluation ultimately had to satisfy the requirements of accountability, better programme management and lesson learning. Major contributors to development cooperation activities, in particular bilateral agencies, had devoted considerable attention to evaluation issues and to lesson learning and feedback. However, those considerations focused on management and accountability issues. The evaluation of UN operational activities, however, required special consideration because of the UN role as an advocate and catalyst of developing countries' efforts to pursue agreed goals. The evaluation of the effectiveness of UN system activities should be able to identify both lessons learned and good practices that might assist Member States in pursuing policies or programmes that moved towards those goals and had a direct bearing on the immediate impact of operational activities.

The report identified weaknesses and strengths in identifying lessons learned from evaluations. In general, it found that not enough efforts were invested in documenting and synthesizing lessons learned from evaluations carried out at the project, programme, thematic and country levels. The capacity to identify lessons learned was small, a major cause of the limited institutional memory of the UN system at the field level. There was a lack of sufficient professional evaluation staff at the headquarters and country levels. The process for incorporating lessons learned from evaluations in training courses and other learning mechanisms was lengthy, and evaluation results were not well disseminated across projects, offices and organizational units.

Among strengths of the lesson learning process, the report noted that most organizations had set up evaluation processes, providing coverage of most activities. Evaluation was often decentralized and linked to demand from local managers and country offices for project evaluations, and from headquarters managers and governing bodies for country programme evaluations and thematic studies. Current practice often relied on external evaluators, so as to preserve independence, with increasing emphasis being placed on the use of local evaluators. Evaluations were participatory, allowing for inputs by stakeholders, thereby increasing national ownership of the results. A small number of UN organizations used evaluation lessons learned in preparing CCAs and UNDAFs and in the collective evaluation of UNDAF outcomes.

The methods used to disseminate lessons learned included country-level workshops, publication of evaluation reports in several languages, the development of newsletters, the compilation of annual evaluation reports at the agency level, discussion among agency staff, posting lessons learned on intranets, and use of the Internet to reach a wider community. However, on the whole, the way UN system organizations planned and implemented strategies for communicating and disseminating lessons learned from evaluations at both the country and headquarters level was inadequate.

To improve learning from evaluations, the report listed a number of needs that had been identified in its analysis, including: a strong commitment by senior management to organizational learning and to holding managers accountable for taking lessons learned into account; enhancing the independence of the office managing evaluations and producing lessons, and giving it adequate resources; preparing a management response to each major evaluation, along with follow-up proposals; organizing wide dissemination of evaluation findings and lessons in accessible summary formats; greater use of self-evaluation using appropriate evaluation methods; and allocating adequate resources to extracting lessons from evaluations. The report suggested that UN organizations make efforts to enhance the capacity for identifying, documenting and synthesizing lessons learned from evaluation activities in order to absorb their results and to ensure their dissemination and use in project design and implementation. They should also consider lesson learning and dissemination as a specific component of their annual plans and identify the persons to be responsible for monitoring their effectiveness at headquarters and in the field.

Funding of development cooperation activities

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 56/201 [YUN 2001, p. 784], reported in June on the funding of development cooperation activities of the UN system [E/2003/89]. He analysed the issue in the new context emerging from the 2000 United Nations Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 47] and the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953], and highlighted the development role of the UN system through its operational structures. The report reviewed the pattern of UN development funding, its trends and current modalities, outlined traditional public funding sources, private initiatives and domestic resources, and described the implications of the relationships with the Bretton Woods institutions and the consequences of the core funding shortfall. It recommended renewed dialogue among Member States with a view to reaching agreement at the 2004 triennial comprehensive policy review on strengthening the resource foundation for the operational work of the system.

The Secretary-General said that, as the Millennium Summit and the International Conference on Financing for Development had created a new development context with a broad consensus on a shared agenda and had given renewed impetus to international development cooperation and a new global partnership, it was time to address the role of UN operational activities for development in helping to achieve those goals. The UN development system needed to be strengthened with increased funding in order to work effectively with national authorities and other bilateral and multilateral actors at the country level, but the issue was how to ensure that UN system operational activities were funded at an adequate level and on a stable footing. The system of annual voluntary contributions for funding UN system operational activities for development had served reasonably well over the past 50 years, and the recent introduction of multi-year funding frameworks (MYFFs) [YUN 1999, p. 806] was intended to reduce the annual volatility of multi-year programming. However, in spite of reforms to increase effectiveness and efficiency, and the increase in overall funding for UN development activities from $5.61 billion in 1992 to $7.73 billion in 2001 (excluding the World Bank Group), core or regular resources of UN funds and programmes had, with the exception of WFP, remained stagnant or declined, although they improved slightly in 2002. The long-term stagnation in resource flows, when adjusted for inflation, resulted in a decline of the resource base in real terms. Moreover, while development dynamics had not kept pace with the changing demands placed on the system, there was a need not only for new money but for new partners and new ways of working with them. Also, increases in humanitarian assistance needs had tended to crowd out the resources required for long-term development, especially in the case of WFP and UNICEF, and reconstruction and post-emergency situations, were increasingly absorbing resources, making them unavailable for regular development programmes.

Within the UN development cooperation system, the funding of the four funds and programmes—UNDP, UNFPA, UNICEF and WFP—was based on annual voluntary contributions, split between core (or regular) and non-core (or supplementary) funds. Over 95 per cent of their core resources came from member countries of the Development Assistance Committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD/DAC), and efforts to broaden that donor base had not borne fruit. While core funding remained the backbone of their development work, non-core funding had increased in recent years, becoming larger than core funding for UNDP and UNICEF. A major concern was the continuing decline in UNDP core funding, from a peak of $1.2 billion for 1992 to a low of $634 million in 2000, while non-core contributions, in the form of third-party cost-sharing arrangements, trust funds and extrabudgetary resources, increased fourfold, from $408 million in 1992 to over $1.6 billion in 2001. UNFPA regular resources were unstable, reaching $337 million in 1997, declining to $244 million in 1999 and returning to $260 million in 2001. Non-core funding had increased over those years. UNICEF funding followed the same pattern, while regular contributions to WFP (which included a considerable portion for humanitarian purposes) rose sharply in 1999, as a result of a change in the criteria for distinguishing between core and non-core resources. Other UN entities, such as the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the Department of Economic and Social Affairs and the regional commissions, were funded largely by extrabudgetary resources. The specialized and technical agencies' activities had been adversely affected by the paucity of programmable funds, and their assessed funding had remained stagnant. Their long-term pattern of technical co-operation funding had also been affected by the reduction of UNDP funding for their activities.

The effectiveness of all the modalities used for funding UN system development cooperation—voluntary contributions, including annual contributions to the core or regular resources and ad hoc non-core or supplementary contributions, the MYFF initiated in UNDP, UNICEF and UNFPA, assessed contributions, such as the Indicative Scale of Contributions used by UNEP, "negotiated replenishment" adopted by the International Development Association and the International Fund for Agricultural Development, and the "programme approach", based on the provision of ad hoc funds linked to a specific thematic issue, such as the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS—could not be judged only on technical grounds, since their suitability depended on the political will of potential contributors and none of them per se could protect the UN system from volatility or inadequacy of funding, unless there was a clear political will on the part of a wide donor base to provide sufficient funding.

However, while funding of operational activities was the primary responsibility of Governments, there was room for intensifying collaborative approaches between the UN development system and the private sector, both domestic private firms and foreign companies. Involvement of the business community was increasing. Collaboration with the private sector had traditionally taken the form of participation of international financial institutions, such as the International Finance Corporation of the World Bank Group, but other schemes included management contracts, private financing of programme components, joint ventures, leasing contracts and arrangements for contracting out services. In spite of those opportunities, public financing, principally official development assistance (ODA), would continue to play the main role in funding UN system development activities, with traditional donors (OECD/DAC countries) being its major donors, although it would be desirable to expand the donor base by increasing the share of other countries and new constituencies, including some developing countries. Moreover, there were encouraging signs that the donor community was making significant progress in fulfilling its commitment to deliver ODA equal to 0.7 per cent of its gross national product. New thinking was also needed on the relationship between UN development funding and domestic financial resources, which bore the brunt of development financing in the vast majority of countries, usually in the form of national contributions to co-finance budgets and in-kind contributions. Tighter links would therefore be required between financial disbursements for UN activities funded by donors and domestic contributions provided by government or non-government sources. Collaboration between the United Nations and the Bretton Woods institutions had increased, including through joint funding, and there had been a shift towards grant funding through the World Bank.

The report noted that all the organizations had implemented reforms designed to bolster their performance, intensifying collaboration to harmonize support for recipient countries, with the expectation that donors would respond with substantial additional and predictable resources. However, there had not been any significant change in the funding dynamics of the UN development system. If the internationally agreed development goals were to be achieved, all countries would have to commit themselves in terms of policies, actions and resource allocations, on a sustained basis, and the international community would have to match its declarations of support with real and substantial increases in ODA over a sustained period.

Financing of operational activities in 2002

Expenditures of the UN system on operational activities, excluding loans through the World Bank Group, totalled $7.3 billion in 2002 [A/59/84-E/2004/53], the most recent year for which figures were available, as compared to $7.1 billion in 2001. Of the 2002 amount, $2,138 million was distributed in development grants by UNDP and UNDP-administered funds, $1,772.4 million by specialized agencies and other organizations from extrabudgetary sources, $1,592.2 million by WFP, $1,043.9 million by UNICEF, $479.3 million by specialized agencies and other organizations from regular budgets, and $312.5 million by UNFPA.

The UNDP Administrator, in an August report on UN system technical cooperation expenditures in 2002 [DP/2003/30 & Add.1], said that the $7.3 billion in technical cooperation between the UN system and the developing world in 2002 was an all-time high, representing a 2.4 per cent increase over the previous year. The high delivery rate by the UN system was due to the positive growth rates attained by other specialized agencies, funds and programmes, UNDP and UNICEF, which posted respective increases of 10.6 per cent (at $2.3 billion), 5.5 per cent (at $2.1 billion) and 3.2 per cent (at $1 billion) in 2002. Although WFP and UNFPA experienced a slight contraction in their delivery levels, their respective performances nevertheless allowed UN system technical cooperation to reach an all-time high.

By region, Africa was the largest recipient, with 25.1 per cent, or $1.8 billion of development assistance. The Asia and Pacific region received the second largest amount, $1.7 billion or 23.1 per cent, reflecting an increase of 9 per cent over the 2001 figure. Latin America and the Caribbean received the third largest share (19 per cent, or $1.4 billion), followed by the Arab States (17 per cent, or $1.2 billion), and Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) (6.6 per cent, or $483 million). Other global and inter-regional activities received 9.2 per cent, or $678 million. The three countries receiving the most development assistance were Afghanistan ($355 million), Brazil ($344 million) and Iraq ($340 million).

The health and humanitarian assistance sectors accounted for 41.2 per cent of the total technical cooperation expenditure, or $3 billion, an increase of 2.3 per cent.

On 12 September [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/29)], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board took note of the Administrator's report on technical cooperation expenditure for 2002.

At the 2003 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities (New York, 4 November) [A/CONF.204/3], Governments made pledges to UN programmes and funds concerned with development. The Conference noted that several Governments were not in a position to announce their contributions but proposed to communicate such contributions when they were able to do so.

The Secretary-General provided a statement of contributions pledged or paid at the 2002 Pledging Conference, as at 30 June 2003, to 21 funds and programmes [A/CONF.200/2]. The total amounted to some $0.8 billion.

Establishment of World Solidarity Fund

In April, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council a progress report of the UNDP Administrator on measures taken to operationalize the World Solidarity Fund [A/58/72-E/2003/53], submitted in accordance with Assembly resolution 57/265 [YUN 2002, p. 831]. The Fund was established in February as a UNDP trust fund, whose purpose was to eradicate poverty and promote social and human development in developing countries. It would operate by encouraging the private sector and individual citizens to fund its endeavours, and would support requests received from developing countries for financing poverty alleviation projects, including initiatives from community-based organizations and small private sector entities. Following its establishment, steps were taken to operationalize and publicize the Fund, but at the time of the report, the Fund had not received contributions.

The Administrator proposed the establishment of a high-level committee to define the strategy of the Fund.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 11 July [meeting 31], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/4 [draft: E/2003/L.21] without vote [agenda item 3 (a)].

World Solidarity Fund

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 55/210 of 20 December 2000, 56/207 of 21 December 2001 and 57/265 of 20 December 2002,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted on 8 September 2000 by heads of State and Government,

Recalling further the Monterrey Consensus, of the International Conference on Financing for Development, and the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development, as well as the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development

("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), adopted at the World Summit on Sustainable Development,

1. Takes note of the note of the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme on the establishment of the World Solidarity Fund;

2. Endorses the decision of the World Summit on Sustainable Development to establish the World Solidarity Fund to eradicate poverty and to promote social and human development in the developing countries, while stressing the voluntary nature of the contributions and the need to avoid duplication of existing United Nations funds and encouraging the role of the private sector and individual citizens relative to Governments in funding the endeavours, as set out in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

3. Recognizes the important potential contribution of the Fund to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals, in particular the objective to halve, by 2015, the proportion of people living on less than one dollar a day and the proportion of the people who suffer from hunger;

4. Takes note of the setting up in February 2003 of the World Solidarity Fund as a trust fund of the United Nations Development Programme, subject to the financial rules and regulations as adopted by the Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme/United Nations Population Fund;

5. Encourages Member States, international organizations, the private sector, relevant institutions, foundations and individuals to contribute to the Fund;

6. Requests, in this regard, the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme to take further measures to operationalize the Fund by establishing on an urgent basis the high-level committee whose task it is to define the strategy of the Fund, inter alia, to mobilize the financial resources to enable it to start its activities in the field of poverty alleviation;

7. Also requests the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme to take all necessary measures to publicize the Fund and to raise awareness of its existence among the public and private sectors as well as civil society;

8. Invites developing countries, as soon as resources are made available to the Fund, to identify indicative projects to be submitted for financing by the Fund, and requests the United Nations Development Programme to cooperate with national authorities in this regard;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to request the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme to submit a progress report on the operationalization of the Fund to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session in 2004.

---

Technical cooperation through UNDP

---

The UNDP Administrator, in his annual report for 2003 [DP/2004/16], described the results of the internal reform that was initiated in the UNDP

Business Plans 2000-2003 [YUN 1999, p. 802]. Those results illustrated the transformation that had taken place in the organization and were reported against each of the five pillars and projected outcomes of the original Business Plans: policy, partnerships, people, performance and resources. In terms of policy, UNDP had become a stronger global advocate for human development. It had worked to operationalize the UN strategy for implementing the MDGs, linking global and country-level campaigning for the MDGs with research, and the institutional and financial reforms needed to achieve them. The United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) guidelines had placed the MDGs at the centre of the UN system work at the country level. UNDP also played a leading role in discussions with other development actors on ways to strengthen linkages between the MDGs and the poverty reduction strategy papers (PRSPs), resulting in a joint UNDG/World Bank/IMF statement on the relationship between the two instruments and their respective roles. UNDP's advocacy work related to the Human Development Report was complemented by regional and national human development reports. The multi-year funding framework (MYFF) 2004-2007 (see p. 901) grouped UNDP's work around five strategic areas within the MDG framework and reduced by 25 per cent the number of service lines in which UNDP was involved. As a result, UNDP withdrew its programme and technical capacity in non-priority areas and refined a niche in areas such as HIV/AIDS and crisis prevention and recovery. Resident representatives were equipped to respond more swiftly and comprehensively to programme country partner needs, and development policy staffing had been radically restructured. More than two thirds of the international policy experts were located in nine subregional resource facilities. Knowledge management was being consolidated for all practice areas, and UNDP staff were held accountable for their contributions to knowledge networking and organizational learning. UNDP had also become a highly networked organization, creating new development opportunities through strategic partnerships, including with the World Bank, the European Commission and non-State actors, particularly the business sector. Progress in the engagement of UNDP with civil society, a critical element to achieving the MDGs, was evidenced by the positive response of those organizations' partners.

The challenges ahead for UNDP needed to be viewed in the context of the new security environment facing the organization and the constraints it imposed on many aspects of its programmes.

Against that backdrop, analysis of the 2000-2003 MYFF and the formulation of the 2004-2007 MYFF, the reformed UNDP programming process had identified a number of key challenges for the organization over the coming years, including the need to improve conceptual clarity and sharpen strategic focus by aligning results, organizational capacities and resources, and better reflect the MDGs; strengthen the coherence and effectiveness of the UN system at the country level; move results orientation to the next stage by encouraging knowledge sharing and skills development; and consolidate reform into a framework to improve performance, advance the UNDP mission, promote partnerships and expand the external support base for the organization.

The Administrator stated in his report to the Economic and Social Council [E/2004/4-DP/2004/12] that UNDP continued to assist developing countries in strengthening governance and enabling all actors in the national development context to play a mutually supportive role in achieving economic growth by harnessing the knowledge potential of the Internet and attracting international financial flows. UNDP support to the information and communication technologies (ICT) for development programme had expanded from 16 to 52 countries between 2000 and 2002. Some 26 countries had received UNDP support in preparing national ICT strategies and policies. Its support to national economies in attracting international financial flows facilitated by globalization was reflected in its support of the New Partnership for Africa's Development [YUN 2002, p. 907]. Those efforts led to UNDP support of the development of African stock exchanges and of the African Capital Markets Development Forum in April 2003, a joint initiative with the African Stock Exchanges Association and the New York Stock Exchange. In late 2003, UNDP decided to mainstream ICT elements into all of its practice areas.

As part of UNDP's work towards achieving the MDGs, the Millennium Project put a basic infrastructure in place and a first set of outputs was delivered by mid-2003. Twenty-five eminent experts were recruited to serve as task force coordinators. Task forces held their second meetings in 2003. A major contribution was made by the task forces and by the secretariat of the Human Development Report towards achieving the MDGs, which included the Millennium Development Compact, a joint effort of the Human Development Report Office and the Millennium Project that outlined how the MDGs could form the core of a goal-oriented development system. The Millennium Development Goals Campaign unit was in place and the building blocks of the Campaign were taking shape. A key focus would be to promote campaigns in developing countries, building on awareness-raising initiatives launched by UNDP country offices and UN country teams. Almost 50 MDG country reports had been produced, and production was planned for 60 more. Five countries had produced their second reports. UNDP took the lead in revising the UNDG guidance note on country monitoring with inputs from several UN organizations.

UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board

In 2003, the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board held two regular sessions (20-23 January and 8-12 September) and an annual session (6-19 June), all in New York [E/2003/35].

At the first regular session, the Board adopted six decisions, including one that gave an overview of the Board's actions taken at that session [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/6)]. Other decisions dealt with improvement of the Board's working methods (see p. 892); assistance to Myanmar (see p. 893); the financial situation of the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS) (see p. 908); an independent review of UNOPS (see p. 907); and implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors (see p. 904).

The Executive Board, at its annual session, adopted 15 decisions. In addition to an overview decision that summarized the action taken at that session [dec. 2003/21], the Board adopted decisions regarding UNFPA funding commitments, joint programming, assessment of its MYFF, delegation of personnel authority and its annual report (see PART THREE, Chapter VIII), and others on joint programming with UNDP (see p. 898); assessment of the UNDP MYFF, 2000-2003, and guidance in preparing the new MYFF, 2004-2007 (see p. 901); the United Nations Capital Development Fund (UNCDF) (see p. 914); technical cooperation among developing countries (see p. 911); funding commitments to UNDP (see p. 903); UNOPS (see p. 907); internal audit and oversight for UNDP, UNFPA and UNOPS (see p. 910); joint field visits (see p. 893); and the Global Environment Facility (see p. 1046).

At its second regular session, the Board adopted eight decisions, including an overview decision [dec. 2003/29]. The other decisions concerned the UNDP biennial support budget, 2004-2005 (see p. 903); the biennial support budgets, 2004-2005, for UNCDF (see p. 914) and the United Nations Development Fund for Women (see p. 1194); the UNDP MYFF, 2004-2007 (see p. 901); UNDP evaluation (see p. 899); UNOPS revised budget estimates for 2002-2003 and budget estimates for 2004-2005 (see p. 909); an independent review of UNOPS (see p. 908); and the UNFPA support budget for 2004-2005 (see p. 1091).

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2003/225 of 11 July, took note of the reports of the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board on its 2002 second regular session and its 2003 first regular session.

Working methods

At its first regular session in January, the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board approved its work plan for 2003 [DP/2003/CRP.1]. It considered a follow-up report on the rationalization of documentation and the streamlining of its working methods [DP/2003/CRP.6], submitted by the secretariat in response to a request by Board members. The report stated that, although there had been a net improvement in the size, content and quality of documents submitted to the Board, a more focused, action-oriented and clearer presentation was still needed, providing a range of options to facilitate policy formulation. The Board should also restrict the number of documents it received for discussion. As to organizational and procedural changes, the report suggested that: informal thematic meetings should take place during Board sessions; UNDP and UNFPA country programmes should be discussed together; interaction between programme and donor countries should be improved through thematic working sub-groups; Board decisions should be communicated more quickly to Member States and its contacts with programme countries improved; and terms of reference should be drawn up for field visits. Other proposals called for a joint informal meeting between the Board and the OECD Development Assistance Committee to exchange views on development policy, shifting from informal to formal discussions with regard to issues such as field visits and joint meetings of the Boards, at which cross-cutting issues of a more strategic nature should be proposed for discussion.

Taking note of the follow-up report, the Board, in January [dec. 2003/1], encouraged a closer relationship between its deliberations and the work in the field, keeping in mind the need to enhance country-driven programming. It decided to include the item on improving its working methods in the agenda of its 2003 annual session and invited Member States, through its Bureau, to submit contributions before 15 May on the rationale for doing so and specific proposals in that regard.

At the Board's annual session in June [E/2003/35], a number of areas for improvement were proposed, including expediting the submission of reports to delegations to allow sufficient time for review; ensuring that meetings of the Board were more focused, while encouraging informal and joint statements; and abolishing the Board's second regular session as it coincided with the opening of the General Assembly. The Board called on its Bureau to follow up on those suggestions and to report accordingly.

Reappointment of UNDP Administrator

The Secretary-General, in an April note [A/57/110], informed the General Assembly that, following consultations with members of the UNDP Executive Board, he was seeking the Assembly's confirmation of the appointment of Mark Malloch Brown as Administrator of UNDP for a further four-year term of office beginning on 1 July 2003. Mr. Malloch Brown was first appointed to that position on 1 July 1999.

By decision 57/415 of 15 April, the Assembly confirmed the reappointment of Mr. Malloch Brown.

UNDP/UNFPA reports

In January [dec. 2003/6], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board took note of the reports of the UNDP Administrator [DP/2003/5] and the UNFPA Executive Director [DP/FPA/2003/2] to the Economic and Social Council and agreed to transmit them to the Council.

In June [dec. 2003/21], the Board took note of the UNDP Administrator's 2002 annual report [YUN 2002, p. 862].

The Council, by decision 2003/225 of 11 July, took note of the combined annual reports of the UNDP Administrator and the UNFPA Executive Director to the Council [E/2003/13].

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/264 [YUN 2002, p. 841], the Administrator reported in April [DP/2003/17] on strengthening consultations with member States on the Human Development Report (see p. 864). Since 1994, UNDP had sought to improve the process of consultation with member States to refine the methodologies used in preparing the Report, with a view to improving quality and accuracy without compromising editorial independence. Over the years, those consultations had taken place at three points in the preparation process, and provided an opportunity for an exchange of information between the Human Development Report Office and the Board. The Office made three proposals for improving the consultation process: increasing the number of consultations with the Executive Board to five; improving the quality of consultation by circulating the proposed "messages" of the report earlier than in previous years; and holding special consultations on specific issues.

In June [dec. 2003/21], the Executive Board took note of the report on strengthening consultations with member States on the Human Development Report and the comments made thereon.

By decision 2003/225 of 11 July, the Council also took note of the Administrator's report.

UNDP operational activities

Country programmes

The UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board, at its first regular session in January [dec. 2003/6], approved country programmes for Bahrain, Bolivia, Botswana, Cameroon, Cape Verde, the Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Dominican Republic, Equatorial Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, India, Jordan, Liberia, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Nigeria, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Seychelles, Timor-Leste and Venezuela, and multi-country programmes for the Cook Islands, Niue and Tokelau, and the Pacific island countries. It approved the extensions of country cooperation frameworks (CCFs) for the Central African Republic and Thailand [DP/2003/8], and took note of the corrigendum to the second CCF for Panama [DP/CCF/PAN/2/Corr.1].

Also at its January session [dec. 2003/2], the Board, recognizing the critical humanitarian and basic human development needs of the people of Myanmar, took note of the Administrator's note on assistance to that country [DP/2003/3] and of the report submitted by the independent assessment mission to Myanmar, in particular the strategic issues and challenges it raised. The Board encouraged UNDP to enhance the impact of the Human Development Initiative, phase IV, taking into account the report submitted by the independent assessment mission.

At its annual session in June [dec. 2003/21], the Board took note of the first country programme outlines for Benin, Croatia, Ecuador, Kenya, the Niger, Pakistan, the Russian Federation and Thailand. It took note of the first one-year extensions of second CCFs for Angola, Mauritius, Tajikistan, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Uruguay and Zimbabwe [DP/2003/16], and approved the two-year extension of the second CCF for Georgia [DP/2003/16] and the one-year extension of the second global cooperation framework. The Board took note [dec. 2003/15] of the reports on the field visits to Mozambique [DP/2003/CRP.10 & Add.1] and Ecuador [DP/2003/CRP.11]. It considered those visits an important contribution to its engagement in the work of the funds and programmes at the country level, and, in particular, to understanding the contribution made by the UN country team to national development strategies. Future joint field visits should focus on themes of common interest to the Executive Boards of UNDP/UNFPA, UNICEF and WFP, such as the UNDAF arrangements, the work of the UN country team on the MDGs and/or other cross-cutting themes. Noting that joint field visits could place a burden on host Governments and the United Nations, the Board requested that that be taken into account in deciding on destinations and the duration of future visits and called for cooperation between the Boards in preparing future joint field visits.

At its second regular session in September [dec. 2003/29], the Board took note of draft country programme documents for the Central African Republic, the Congo, Lithuania, Poland and Sierra Leone. It approved a two-year extension of the CCF for Peru and took note of the one-year extensions of the CCFs for Bosnia and Herzegovina and Chile [DP/2003/37/Rev.1]. The Board took note of the Administrator's note on UNDP assistance to Afghanistan [DP/2003/36] and an oral report on assistance to Myanmar.

UNDP programme results

Poverty reduction

UNDP's efforts to reduce poverty had progressed in recent years from implementing scattered, local poverty reduction projects to supporting national poverty reduction frameworks. The World Bank/IMF PRSP process, which promoted poverty reduction strategies, had given additional impetus to that transformation.

The 1999 results-oriented annual report [YUN 1999, p. 795] revealed that the bulk of UNDP support to poverty reduction was targeted at the community level, with "downstream" expenditures twice as high as "upstream" expenditures. More recently, support in that area had achieved greater focus and strategic coherence. UNDP support to national poverty reduction strategies focused on poverty monitoring and participation, but more needed to be done to strengthen government capacity to develop pro-poor policies and budgets. UNDP provided advice on resource and policy implications and options on human development and poverty reduction. Its support was also effective in facilitating the participation of civil society organizations in the PRSP process, particularly in Southern Africa.

UNDP's expanding role at the country level in furthering the MDG agenda through national goal setting and building capacity for monitoring, reporting and advocacy was reflected in the rapid increase in MDG-linked outcomes. In striving to build national ownership of, and broader participation in, the MDG campaign, UNDP was putting emphasis on partnering with civil society on MDG monitoring, reporting and advocacy. The challenges were to further cement the relationship between PRSPs and the MDGs, and to meet the deadline of producing MDG reports in every country by the end of 2004.

In the area of employment, although country offices had reported numerous small-scale interventions for generating self-employment, UNDP had not moved far enough upstream on employment issues to strengthen the strategic links between employment generation and poverty reduction. In order to increase the access of the poor to productive assets and resources, UNDP, in collaboration with UNCDF, had moved upstream to influence national legal and regulatory frameworks and develop national strategies for sustainable financial services for the poor. In the area of aid, trade and debt relief, through a series of high-profile publications on globalization and participation in initiatives, such as the Integrated Framework (for trade-related technical assistance to least developed countries), UNDP had positioned itself as an advocate for making aid, trade and debt relief work for the poor. Country reports showed, however, that those initiatives had not been translated into national and regional programmes.

UNDP role in the PRSP process

The UNDP Evaluation Office assessed the organization's role in the PRSP process from August 2002 to March 2003. The evaluation examined UNDP's role in the achievement of six key PRSP outcomes: increased country ownership of the preparation process; participation of civil society and the private sector; the multidimensional nature of poverty and pro-poor growth; coherence between PRSPs and other long-term national planning instruments; development partnerships; and poverty monitoring capacity at national and local levels. In a June report [DP/2003/24] on its findings, the evaluation team noted that PRSP represented an area of strategic importance to UNDP and a priority for its key global practice of poverty reduction, in particular through partnerships with the UN system, the World Bank and IMF.

Among its other findings, the report noted that only a few PRSPs had benefited from an analysis of the MDGs. Most countries had simply adopted the MDGs as opposed to adapting them through a national consultative process to make them country-specific. There was no clear link in PRSPs between poverty diagnosis and poverty reduction policies; rather, poverty reduction policies tended to be an "add-on" to a general growth strategy. Lack of clarity of the respective roles of the United Nations and the Bretton Woods institutions had hampered the development of a coherent approach by the UN country team in engaging the PRSP process at the country level. UN organizations did not always understand the relationship between the PRSP process and key UN coordination mechanisms, such as the common country assessment and UNDAF.

In terms of PRSP outcomes, progress was made in fostering government ownership of the PRSP process; however, in most cases progress was limited. Broad-based participation facilitated efforts to transform government ownership of the PRSP process into national ownership, and involved participation by civil society, including the private sector, in the drafting process. Fostering broad-based participation was the weakest outcome for UNDP. The pro-poor content of PRSPs increased when UNDP focused on promoting national discussions on the nature and social costs of poverty and on helping to give a voice to the poor. For long-term planning, PRSPs needed to be integrated into sectoral and thematic programmes. UNDP's partnerships with government and civil society were its strength, yet the full potential of strong partnerships had not been fully realized. Institutional arrangements for poverty monitoring to ensure PRSP implementation were inadequate.

Among the recommendations for strengthening UNDP's capacity to respond to requests from Governments for assistance in the PRSP process, the evaluation report suggested that the UNDP and UN country teams should influence the PRSP framework and support the process in a manner that promoted national ownership of the MDGs. UNDP and the Bretton Woods institutions should act together within the context of a UN team effort led by the resident coordinator, with UNDP taking the lead in UN commitment to the outcomes of the PRSP process. UNDP should make PRSP play a more central role in its country-level operations, and thus a more central role in its policy development and support activities. It should also maximize its potential to provide critical international input to the PRSP process. The success of the PRSP process depended in part on the ability to measure and assess progress in relation to intended outcomes, requiring clear benchmarks and performance criteria for making an evaluation and performance assessment possible. Strengthening evaluation capacity should be an integral part of PRSP assistance provided by external organizations.

The UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board, at its annual session in June [dec. 2003/21], took note of the evaluation of the UNDP role in the PRSP process.

UNDP management, responding to the PRSP evaluation in an August report [DP/2003/35], covered the issues of linking PRSPs to the MDGs, and growth and democratic governance, respectively, to poverty reduction and made recommendations for enhancing UNDP's role in the PRSP process. Overall, management agreed with the central point of the evaluation that the substantial and substantive roles of UNDP in the PRSP process should be enhanced and that the comparative advantage of UNDP lay in its ability to help Governments establish coordinated monitoring systems for poverty and the MDGs, particularly at the local level, and in supporting MDG reports and human development reports as tools for public advocacy and policy advocacy, respectively.

In September, the Executive Board, having considered the UNDP secretariat report containing the management response to the evaluation of UNDP's role in the PRSP process, encouraged UNDP to take into account that response in its PRSP work and requested the Administrator to make recommendations to the Board in 2004 [dec. 2003/25].

Democratic governance

The two most widely practised areas of democratic governance supported by UNDP at the country level were decentralized local governance and public administration reform, with outcomes reported in 90 and 80 countries, respectively. Recently, rapid growth had been observed in decentralization and local governance programme interventions. The major lessons learned in democratic governance involved garnering good practice and moving more rapidly to support integrated decentralization, local governance and public administration reform. Positive results were emerging in the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Mozambique. The area of electoral assistance was a starting point from which UNDP could move to support a broader governance programme. The challenge was to effect a better balance between short-term, event-specific election support projects and longer-term, development-oriented support to electoral systems. While some countries, such as Bangladesh, took a development-related approach, most UNDP projects in that sphere were of less than one year's duration.

In support of parliamentary development, a number of programmes had strengthened rules of procedure, administrative structures, information bases and training of elected members and staff. Several programmes worked to strengthen parliamentary oversight capacity.

Support to justice and human rights was among the fastest growing areas of the governance goal, focusing on strengthening the capacity and functioning of the formal justice sector (courts, prosecutors, justice ministries and police). The next step would be to link support to improved access to justice for the poor.

UNDP supported a number of "e-governance" programmes, with their focus ranging from increased transparency and accountability of national and local governments to the participation of civil society in governance issues. However, despite the demand, UNDP programmes were limited in scope and size by the lack of resources.

Demand had increased for UNDP assistance in multi-stakeholder dialogues on governance priorities and support for national capacities for an independent media and information. Approximately 30 countries had outcomes in that area, ranging from civic dialogue programmes in Latin America to independent media development support in the Gambia and Kazakhstan.

Crisis prevention and recovery

Crisis prevention was a key UNDP priority, with support falling into two categories: downstream support for dealing with the immediate impact of disasters, ranging from the removal of illicit small arms and landmines to the promotion of short-term economic recovery for the worst-affected communities; and upstream support aimed at building capacity for dialogue, facilitating multi-stakeholder consensus on divisive national issues, ranging from constitutional reform to the equitable distribution of natural resources, and addressing the deep-seated inequities and underdevelopment that often constituted the root causes of conflict. In the first category, UNDP provided short-term support for countries emerging from conflict. Joint programmes were launched with the World Bank and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) to reintegrate refugees and displaced persons into their communities in Afghanistan, Sierra Leone and Sri Lanka. Assistance was provided to the Governments of Angola, Colombia and the Democratic Republic of the Congo. UNDP supported multi-stakeholder dialogue in Fiji, Guatemala, the Niger, Peru, Sao Tome and Principe and Venezuela. Training support in peaceful conflict resolution was provided to national stakeholders in a wide range of countries. In Guyana, UNDP was working with stakeholders to implement constitutional reforms vital to the management of internal tensions and to build dialogue and social cohesion. UNDP provided support for the revival of the civil service in Afghanistan and in other countries emerging from conflict.

Nearly half of UNDP programme countries were afflicted by crisis situations or were in some stage of post-crisis recovery. UNDP was increasingly regarded as a critical partner of the UN humanitarian and political arms, in particular for its role in helping to bridge the gap between humanitarian and reconstruction work in post-crisis countries. In 2003, that aspect was central to the corporate agenda as reflected in the MYFF. The UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board decided to strengthen the Bureau for Crisis Prevention and Recovery with 15 additional core posts, and to increase crisis funding from 5 per cent to 7.2 per cent of the UNDP core budget.

UNDP led the initial recovery effort in Afghanistan, organizing the UN system-wide immediate and transitional assistance programme. Building on that experience, UNDP, on behalf of UNDG, led the Iraq reconstruction process, for which it coordinated a needs assessment and led discussions on the establishment of the United Nations/World Bank International Reconstruction Fund Facility for Iraq (see p. 353). Another example of collaboration on needs assessment was Liberia, for which the international reconstruction conference pledged $520 million for 2004-2005. Recognizing that collaboration had to go beyond assessment, UNDP, the World Bank and UNHCR addressed critical gaps in repatriation, reintegration, rehabilitation and reconstruction.

In an effort to remove explosive remnants of war and small arms in post-crisis countries, UNDP supported the collection and destruction of 123,730 weapons and 170 tons of ammunition. UNDP advocated for the inclusion of mine action considerations into the development plans and multi-year strategies of countries, donors and aid agencies. In Cambodia, mine action was integrated into the national poverty reduction strategy and adopted by the Government as a specific national MDC. Support in that area was also provided to Afghanistan, Albania, Colombia, Papua New Guinea, the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo, Solomon Islands and Timor-Leste, which were all emerging from violent conflict, and to countries that might have been made vulnerable as a result of conflicts in their neighbourhood.

Environment and energy

UNDP's activities on the environment and natural resources, particularly with regard to water, energy, agriculture and biodiversity, was aimed at supporting poverty reduction and sustainable development. Most funding for environment and energy was derived from non-core sources, such as global trust funds, including the Global Environment Facility (GEF) (see p. 1045) and the Multilateral Fund for Implementation of the Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer [YUN 1987, p. 686] (see p. 1050). Capacity development to support national and local sustainable development strategies involved development frameworks and policies linked to environmental and human welfare. Country-level efforts included decentralization and governance issues critical to the sustainable use of natural resources, pollution reduction and the generation of livelihoods.

Water governance issues involving access to water resources and related services were increasing in importance. UNDP supported systems of water governance to ensure both ecological integrity and access to adequate safe water resources and services by poor people, as, for example, in Honduras. Other concerns were: strengthening water oversight institutions, legislation and policies, transboundary water issues, and community engagement for improved water management, water supply and sanitation services.

UNDP addressed both poverty and environmental concerns related to access to energy and the consequences of climate change. Significant strides were made in renewable energy, energy efficiency, clean energy technologies and reporting on implementation of the 1992 United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change [YUN 1992, p. 681] (see p. 1049) in over 70 per cent of country operations. In support of agriculture and drylands management, UNDP worked on local and national planning and management frameworks to address legal, institutional and capacity needs, especially in least developed countries, focusing on the local resource base, agricultural viability and human vulnerability to desertification. In many countries, challenges related to land tenure, access to common lands and the legal status of rural populations. UNDP supported country efforts to maintain biodiversity and related ecosystem services. GEF expanded its mandate to include land degradation and persistent organic pollutants. With respect to ozone layer protection, the Montreal Protocol programme was moving away from individual projects towards multi-year, performance-based national and sectoral programmes requiring policy and institutional support, which were operational in 68 countries and were a significant source of programme resources.

Response to HIV/AIDS

The number of country offices reporting activities undertaken regarding HIV/AIDS had increased rapidly. Results were achieved in developing leadership skills and capacity for advocating, planning, managing and implementing HIV/AIDS responses at the national and local levels. Given the limited availability of resources, the main challenge for UNDP was to increase synergies between activities in order to achieve society-wide impact.

Leadership development programmes were implemented in 19 countries, with requests received from over 40 more. Six countries in the Caribbean participated in a regional leadership development programme. Those programmes supported a broad range of actors and sectors (government, civil society, the private sector and the UN system) working together for optimum results. In Ukraine, the programme generated partnerships among participants from several ministries, civil society and the private sector. In Senegal, 180 participants from Government, civil society and the private sector participated in the programmes and 65 per cent of them subsequently underwent HIV/AIDS testing.

Community capacity enhancement initiatives were implemented in nine countries, mainly in Africa and Asia, to strengthen the response of community-based organizations to HIV/AIDS, including community capacity for action and social change, and to link communities to national processes and responses. In Cambodia, the initiative addressed discrimination and domestic violence within communities and helped to link community action with national strategic planning and implementation at the local level. In Ethiopia, the programme was expanded to an additional 100 districts, and led to shifts in behaviour to control the spread of HIV/AIDS, including the commitment by communities to stop practices such as female genital mutilation.

Development planning activities introduced innovative approaches to strengthen governance, development planning and systems to respond comprehensively to HIV/AIDS across sectors, and at the national, sub-national and community levels. UNDP supported national strategic planning and implementation, addressing the gender dimensions of the epidemic in development plans. The "City Responses to HIV/AIDS" project was established in Brazil, Cambodia, Côte d'Ivoire, India, Lebanon, Malawi, Senegal and Trinidad and Tobago, and was strengthening local responses to the epidemic and helping to align city plans with national strategies.

UNDP worked with artists and the media in a number of countries, including Botswana, Ethiopia, Ghana, India, Lesotho, Malaysia, Nepal, South Africa and Swaziland, to generate a gender-sensitive response that respected the rights of people living with HIV/AIDS. In the Arab States, a regional programme motivated media and entertainment personalities to respond to HIV/AIDS, helping to break the silence surrounding the epidemic. In South Africa, an arts, film and media festival was held in Johannesburg in October.

The Southern Africa Capacity Initiative, a collaborative effort led by UNDP, aimed to address the challenges that Southern African countries faced in the loss of their most productive people. The Initiative worked to accelerate capacity development by synergizing the efforts of nine countries with the highest prevalence rates in the Southern African Development Community to stem the loss of capacity for planning and managing key sectors. Microsoft was a key partner in the Initiative, developing ways to help Governments use ICT to upgrade services, including distance learning and telemedicine.

Programme planning and management

UNDP Business Plans 2000-2003

In January, the Executive Board heard an oral presentation by the Administrator on the implementation of the UNDP Business Plans 2000-2003 [YUN 2000, p. 831], and considered a conference room paper [DP/2003/CRP.8], which articulated UNDP's strategy in five areas (policy, partnerships, people, performance and resources) (see p. 890). To measure the progress in UNDP's transformation, the Business Plans contained a scorecard with indicators that were distributed to all country offices and headquarters units.

The Administrator reported that the agenda for transformation was currently taking hold. UNDP was becoming a more practice-oriented, knowledge-driven organization and its outward-looking, more accountable approach had changed its relationship with both development partners and programme countries. The organization was making its voice heard, advocating and acting on the MDGs. Internally, UNDP had integrated learning and accountability for performance more coherently in its development agenda, while focusing on meeting its own performance targets, and it had progressively transformed itself into a field-oriented, decentralized, networked and service-focused organization. It had sharpened its focus in six priority areas: democratic governance, poverty reduction, crisis prevention and recovery, information and communication technology, energy and environment, and HIV/AIDS, which had become its practice areas. Thematic trust funds had been introduced for each practice area to promote the development of signature products and services. The transformation had created a totally new "business line" for UNDP and, in addition to contributing financial resources to programme country Governments, UNDP was currently providing timely, high-quality, knowledge-based advisory services. In the area of crisis prevention and recovery, UNDP assumed the unprecedented role in Afghanistan of bringing together the entire UN system around a single coherent strategy. From a risk-averse culture, UNDP had evolved into a more opportunity-driven organization, resulting in an array of partnerships with more than 30 foundations on every continent.

While internal restructuring had resulted in a more responsive Strategic Management Team within a leaner and more efficient headquarters structure, UNDP had also realigned its entire staff profile. The alignment of competencies with needs was implemented at all levels. In particular, an assessment centre, administered by an outside firm, was launched to evaluate candidates for resident representative/resident coordinator positions. The organization's culture of performance and accountability was reinforced, with leadership management being more performance driven. On the development effectiveness side, results-oriented annual reports were prepared each year for presentation at the annual sessions of the Executive Board. A more systematic performance rating of managers was introduced and staff performance was continuously evaluated through the Results and Competency Assessment instrument.

UNDP's transformation culminated in the adoption of the new UNDP brand, which was formally unveiled at the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]. It was designed to represent the organization's integral connection to the United Nations and commitment to the goals of the UN Charter. UNDP was thus better placed to lead a concerted effort to help developing countries meet the MDGs.

An assumption of the Business Plans was that the changes would result in increased funding and the expansion of UNDP's resource base for development services. Realistic considerations reduced the initial MYFF targets for regular (core) resources to $900 million in 2003. While that target was not achieved, the negative trend in core resources was reversed.

Based on positive feedback from donor and programme country Governments, UNDP decided that its corporate priorities for 2003 would consist of the four 2002 priorities—the practice areas; the MDCs; performance and staff development; and the new ICT platform—and two additional ones, namely, UN reform, to ensure that UNDP supported the Secretary-General's reform agenda, and resources, to ensure that it had sufficient funds to do its work. In each of the six areas, the emphasis was being placed on integration. In the practice areas, UNDP intended to broaden its global network, elaborate concrete service lines and mobilize funds for the thematic trust funds. It would also introduce a more consistent thematic trust fund allocation process. Its results-based management, talent management and cost-sharing systems would be improved. The crisis prevention and recovery practice would receive special focus in 2003. As for the MDGs, UNDP would focus on capturing results at the country level, including improving the MDG reporting process, involving country teams in spreading awareness, developing capacity for monitoring and analysis, promoting national ownership, cooperating with the World Bank and regional development banks, and aligning policy and programme work to reflect the importance of the new MDG mandate.

As 2003 was the final year of the Business Plans, 2000-2003, and with the preparation of the 2004-2007 MYFF process and the 2004-2005 biennium budget (see p. 903), and the design of the new Enterprise Resource Planning System, UNDP would further align its global and country programmes with its practice areas, business processes, resource mobilization and advocacy efforts to ensure that each complemented the others in a focused and strategic manner. It would also further strengthen in 2003 its external partnerships and widen its geographical coverage with a view to enhancing its development impact.

In January [dec. 2003/6], the Executive Board took note of the oral presentation and the conference room paper on the UNDP Business Plans, 2000-2003.

Programme arrangements

The Executive Board, in a June decision [dec. 2003/7], requested the Administrator to submit in 2004 a written report containing an assessment, based on specific country examples, of UNDP experience in joint programming and other innovative and collaborative approaches aimed at improving programming effectiveness and reducing transaction costs for programme countries.

Monitoring and evaluation

In August [DP/2003/33], the UNDP Administrator, in his annual report on evaluation covering the period from July 2002 to June 2003, examined progress made by UNDP in deepening the culture of performance within the organization. The report, which drew upon evaluative evidence from a global trends analysis of development effectiveness and key country-level and corporate evaluations from UNDP to assess development results, elaborated UNDP efforts to promote more dynamic interaction between country operations and the evaluation function in order to improve the link between evaluations, substantive learning, decision-making and partnerships.

UNDP launched a number of initiatives to re-vamp its approach to managing for results, including an outreach strategy for promoting knowledge-sharing and lessons-learning throughout the organization and with partners, which was critical for improving development results at the country level. The report emphasized the importance of accessing "real-time" lessons where evaluation recommendations were fed back into decision-making for more effective learning and accountability, especially in view of the challenges in aligning UNDP strategic goals to the MDGs and fostering a broader range of partners for development effectiveness.

In December [E/2004/4-DP/2004/12], the Administrator said that the demand for evaluation and learning had improved substantially. A major focus was "real-time" lessons, which resulted in more effective learning and accountability. Together with outcome evaluations at the programme level and a select number of country evaluations, the development effectiveness report had emerged as a major platform for that perspective. The report assessed country-level development results, as well as global trends and efforts needed to improve effectiveness.

The 2003 development effectiveness report analysed more than 1,000 UNDP project and programme evaluations, country case studies and reports, which indicated that UNDP interventions were becoming more sustainable.

In August [DP/2003/35], UNDP management responded to the evaluation of the role of UNDP in the PRSP process (see p. 895).

The Executive Board, in September [dec. 2003/25], took note of the report on evaluation for 2002. It appreciated the feeding of lessons learned from previous evaluations into the second MYFF (2004-2007) (see p. 901). The Board encouraged UNDP's work in promoting partnerships on evaluation capacity with development with national administrations and welcomed the partnership on evaluation capacity development with other development partners in strengthening national evaluation capacity, such as cooperation through the International Development Evaluation Association and the Inter-Agency Working Group on Evaluation. It stressed the importance of using indicators developed with national Governments' participation.

The Board requested UNDP to enhance the evaluation of strategic and cross-cutting issues, such as the UNDP role in the UNDAF process and gender. Encouraging UNDP to continue linking UNDP policy work to its operational activities, the Board stressed the need to strengthen the lessons-learned process, especially at the country level. It welcomed the focus on deepening the performance culture and encouraged UNDP to continue working on capacity-building in evaluation. UNDP was urged to submit more thorough evaluation reports on UNIFEM, the United Nations Volunteers Programme and UNCDF. The Board encouraged UNDP to take into account the management response to the evaluation of the UNDP role in the PRSP process in its PRSP work, and requested the Administrator to report to the Board with recommendations in 2004.

Assessing MDG reports

The Evaluation Office conducted an assessment of the MDG reports in early 2003 and submitted in August an executive summary [DP/2003/34] of its report in preparation for a presentation of the full report in 2004. The objective was to assist UNDP and UN country teams to improve reporting on the progress made towards the attainment of the MDGs. The reports were emerging also as an important instrument for tracking and monitoring progress at the national level and for putting into place public campaign strategies for attaining the MDGs. Reporting on the MDGs began in 2001, with seven countries producing reports that year. By April 2003, 23 countries had produced MDG reports and another 50 reports were expected by the end of the year.

Overall, there were wide variations in country ownership, authorship and value added of the reports as advocacy tools and, contrary to expectations, those reports had not yet filtered into national debates on the MDGs. There was a need for convergence and stronger links between the monitoring and reporting processes of the MDGs, PRSPs and other comprehensive national development frameworks and reporting instruments, such as national human development reports, the common country assessment and UNDAFs. UNDP country offices in particular needed to focus on coordinating and harmonizing UN system-wide efforts in support of the MDGs and PRSPs and their alignment with national development frameworks.

There was a lack of clarity on the real value added of the MDG reports and there were major data gaps in reporting. Participation in the preparatory process was often constrained by a country's capacity. Statistical capacity varied within a country from one goal to another. UN system capacity also varied from one country to another and in-house UNDP capacities for policy advice, monitoring, reporting, advocacy, communication and coordination were limited. The assessment identified seven challenges (communication, participation, reporting, statistical, campaign, evaluation, global cooperation) that had to be met as UNDP and the United Nations moved to strengthen reporting on the MDGs.

The assessment report made recommendations for the UN system, specifically UNDP, and global development partners to meet those challenges. It called on the UN system to focus on the real value added of the reports and to position them to generate maximum debate and public action for the MDGs. A strategy was needed for establishing and nurturing partnerships with civil society organizations at both the global and country levels. The resident coordinator should develop a long-term strategic plan on MDG reporting that took into account key considerations at the country level, together with an effective advocacy and dissemination plan. UNDP should develop new programmes for the capacity-building of civil society organizations. UNDP and the UN system as a whole should mobilize global partners to mount a global initiative on statistics that would bring together international and national statistical organizations to engage in a comprehensive assessment of data needed for monitoring the MDGs. Global development partners should collectively explore collaborative mechanisms that would ensure regular reporting on the MDGs by countries.

The UNDP Administrator, in August [DP/2003/41], commenting on the report on the assessment of MDG reports, remarked that the findings were encouraging. UNDP appreciated the objective nature of the assessment, had taken note of the gaps and limitations identified, and agreed with most of the proposed actions. Consequently, it had revised the MDG report guidance note. The country teams were working to bring more civil society organizations into the process of preparing the MDG reports. It was working to differentiate the national human development reports from the MDG reports and to tap the potential synergies between the two.

On 12 September [dec. 2003/29], the Executive Board took note of the report on the assessment of the MDG reports and of the Administrator's note on that report.

Funding strategy

Multi-year funding framework

In May [DP/2003/12], the Administrator submitted an end-of-cycle assessment of performance of the multi-year funding framework (MYFF), 2000-2003, UNDP's primary strategic management tool for guiding its work, comprising a strategic results framework (SRF) and an integrated resources framework (IRF). The report examined the transformation of the organization over three years, provided a summary assessment of progress made towards each SRF goal and an in-depth analysis of specific achievements and trends. It also looked at the IRF for 2000-2002, which presented an overview of the use of UNDP resources during that period.

The Administrator, in a conference room paper [DP/2003/CRP.14], highlighted some substantive lessons learned from the MYFF, relating particularly to service lines within the major areas of UNDP activities. He also explored how the organization implemented and internalized results-based management, and analysed programme expenditures for 2000-2002.

The Executive Board, in June [dec. 2003/8], took note of the 2000-2003 MYFF end-of-cycle assessment and the supplementary information, and welcomed the progress achieved during 2000-2003 towards meeting the MYFF goals. It requested that, in the MYFF, 2004-2007, UNDP align and clarify the relationship between the MDGs, the strategic goals and the practice areas with a view to establishing a consistent framework. It should also revisit the practice areas to sharpen the organization's focus, taking into account the potential for added value and comparative advantages within the multilateral development system. Recognizing UNDP's progress in results orientation, human resource and knowledge management, and re-profiling of country offices, it urged the Administrator to continue efforts to make UNDP a more effective development partner and to strengthen the results-based management system, including improving its performance indicators.

Expressing concern that progress in gender mainstreaming, the empowerment of women and in achieving gender equality was uneven, the Board encouraged UNDP to strengthen those efforts with UNIFEM. It also expressed concern that the level of regular resources during 2000-2003 had remained far below target, but welcomed the modest upward trend in those resources. It urged member States in a position to do so to increase their contributions. UNDP was encouraged, within the context of the next MYFF, to take account of current estimates. The Board stressed the need to clarify and develop the relationship between the priorities in the MYFF, the biennial support budget and the programming arrangements. It urged UNDP to simplify the content and format of the next MYFF to ensure that it became the main policy document as well as its strategic resource and management tool.

2004-2007 MYFF

In response to the Board's request (see p. 900), UNDP, in an August report, submitted the second MYFF, 2004-2007 [DP/2003/32]. The document described the strategic goals and service lines to be pursued by the organization, and detailed the organizational strategies that would be followed over that period. It extended and refined the goals and strategies set out in the UNDP Business Plans, 2000-2003 [YUN 2000, p. 831]. The planned use of resources contained in the 2004-2005 biennial budget estimates (see p. 903) reflected the strategies enumerated in the 2004-2007 MYFF. The strategic goals and service lines of that MYFF were influenced primarily by country-level demand for UNDP support as reflected in the approved UNDAF, the Millennium Declaration, the MDGs, the Secretary-General's reform programme and the transformation of UNDP in terms of operational effectiveness. The proposed core goals were: achieving the MDGs and reducing human poverty; fostering democratic governance; managing energy and the environment for sustainable development; supporting crisis prevention and recovery; and responding to HIV/AIDS. Those goals provided the basis for UNDP services over the next four years, expressed under the corporate SRF as a series of specific service lines (specific areas in which UNDP would contribute to development results at the country level). Unlike the first MYFF, the SRF under the MYFF, 2004-2007, was streamlined into a simpler two-tiered arrangement, with a reduced set of 30 service lines within five goals. UNDP applied strict criteria in selecting the service lines, each of which demonstrated to some degree the following characteristics: record of results; contribution to advancing the MDGs; institutional capacity; UNDP's mandate; resource mobilization potential; and the value of UNDP's country network. Annexed to the report was a list of the strategic goals and corresponding service lines.

In terms of organizational strategies for the second MYFF period, 2004-2007, UNDP intended to consolidate and build on the change initiatives introduced during the MYFF, 2000-2003, focusing on three groups of action: building national capacities, promoting national ownership, advocating and fostering an enabling policy environment, promoting gender equity and forging strategic partnerships; building UNDP's organizational capacities, including initiatives to provide broad-based knowledge services and improve internal efficiency and performance; and deepening partnerships within the UN system and the development community at operational and programme levels.

The IRF, together with the SRF for the second MYFF, was based on the income assumptions that voluntary contributions to core resources would increase to $800 million in 2004, $900 million in 2005, $1,000 million in 2006 and $1,100 million in 2007; donor co-financing in the form of cost-sharing and trust fund contributions would reach $3,600 million during 2004-2007; and other (local) resources, such as Government cost-sharing contributions, would reach $4,200 million for that period. Thus, total projected resources would amount to $11,600 million, or about 15 per cent more than the original 2000-2003 estimates, and about 23 per cent more than the revised estimates for 2000-2003. About 86 per cent of the total would be invested in programme activities, and the remaining 14 per cent would support budget activities. Total donor resources (regular and co-financing) were projected to be $7,761 million, or 67 per cent of the total. Approximately 20 per cent of total donor resources were earmarked for support budget activities.

In September [dec. 2003/24], the Executive Board reaffirmed that the objective of the MYFF was to serve as the main policy document and as a strategic resource and management tool. It endorsed the 2004-2007 MYFF and, recognizing that implementation would depend on the attainment of the targeted level of income and the use of nationally owned development strategies, requested UNDP to report thereon. The Board reaffirmed its 2002 decision on the funding target of $1.1 billion [YUN 2002, p. 870]. Welcoming that the MDGs, particularly poverty reduction, were recognized as the overarching basis for all UNDP activities, it underscored the importance of a balanced approach in achieving the internationally agreed development goals. The Board urged UNDP to strengthen support to national development frameworks and priorities through developing partnerships, and to enhance the role of South-South cooperation in poverty eradication and in promoting the sustained growth of developing countries. It also reiterated that the special needs of the least developed countries be taken into account in the implementation of the MYFF, 2004-2007. The Board recognized the need for an improved reporting mechanism for the MYFF, including on gender and other cross-cutting issues, and based on performance indicators. It requested UNDP to submit proposals on the matter in 2004 and encouraged UNDP to strengthen the relationship between the MYFF, the biennial support budget and the programming arrangements.

Thematic trust funds

In August [DP/2003/31], UNDP provided a summary of the operation of the thematic trust funds (TTFs) mechanism, its programme orientation and initial results achieved during the first year of implementation, with observations regarding key lessons learned, the main challenges and the way forward.

TTFs were established in 2001 as a new instrument to help UNDP address the development priorities expressed in the MYFF, which were referred to as the UNDP practice areas, while allowing donors to provide additional (non-core) resources in support of those areas. Of the eight approved TTFs, seven corresponded to the practice areas (democratic governance, crisis prevention and recovery, poverty reduction, ICT for development, HIV/AIDS, energy and environment) and an additional fund covered gender for development. While some TTFs performed better than others, in general the introduction of the funding mechanism had positive results. Two well-funded TTFs supported country offices in generating significant results at the country level (the governance TTF and the crisis prevention and recovery TTF), while two remained unfunded and non-operational (the environment TTF and the gender and development TTF). The remaining four were in the start-up phase and had only limited resources, supporting the process of catalysing country-level alignment with strategic corporate priorities. While the democratic governance TTF had completed two tranches and the crisis prevention and recovery TTF was making allocations as needs arose, most of the other TTFs would complete their first cycle in the third or fourth quarter of 2003.

On 12 September [dec. 2003/29], the Executive Board took note of the report on TTFs.

Financing

The Administrator, in his annual review of the financial situation [DP/2004/34], said UNDP continued to witness a consistent growth in resources, reaching $3.2 billion in 2003, a 10 per cent increase over the 2002 level of $2.9 billion. Compared to 2002, regular resources also continued an upward trend, increasing by 15 per cent to $770 million, as a result of renewed donor support and a weaker United States dollar, while total expenditure under regular resources increased by 12 per cent to $745 million. The resource balance, exclusive of operational reserves but including after-service health insurance costs, increased by 60 per cent. Contributions received from the top 15 non-programme country donors (Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom, United States) increased by 15 per cent.

Programme expenditure, including programme support to the resident coordinator system, increased by 11 per cent, from $363 million to $404 million. By appropriation group, 59 per cent of expenditure went to programme support activities, 22 per cent to management and administration and 19 per cent to operational activities. In terms of the percentage share of programme expenditure among regions, Latin America and the Caribbean continued to record the highest share of programme delivery ($21 million or 5 per cent and $1.1 billion or 50 per cent for regular and other expenditures, respectively), followed by Asia and the Pacific ($109 million or 27 per cent and $301 million or 14 per cent, respectively), Africa ($175 million or 43 per cent and $184 million or 9 per cent, respectively), the Arab States $29 million or 7 per cent and $268 million or 13 per cent, respectively), and Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) ($30 million or 7 per cent and $146 million or 7 per cent, respectively).

The percentage share for execution modalities showed that national execution represented 66 per cent of the overall UNDP figure; direct execution, 18 per cent; UNOPS, 10 per cent; the "big five" entities (UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, International Labour Organization, United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, United Nations Industrial Development Organization), 2 per cent; other agencies, 3 per cent; and non-governmental organizations (NGOs), 1 per cent.

The growth of direct execution was mainly in crises countries, representing 70 per cent of the total execution.

As at 31 December, the balance of unexpended regular resources stood at $154 million, an increase of 85.5 per cent from the 2002 figure of $83.3 million. UNDP held cash and investments for regular resources totalling $282 million, excluding the operational reserve.

For other resources activities, which comprised local resources (government cost-sharing and cash-counterpart contributions), donor cost-sharing, trust funds, management services agreements, the Junior Professional Officer programme and the reserve for field accommodation, overall income increased from $2.2 billion to $2.3 billion. Overall expenditure increased by 12 per cent ($241 million). Net contributions received totalled $2.3 billion, of which 46 per cent ($1.07 billion) accounted for local resources. Contributions from the OECD/DAC countries increased 13 per cent from $496 million in 2002 to $561 million in 2003.

In September [dec. 2003/29], the Executive Board took note of the Administrator's annual review of the financial situation for 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 871].

Regular funding commitments to UNDP

In June [DP/2003/15], UNDP submitted a report on the status of regular resources funding commitments to the organization and its associated funds and programmes for 2003 and onward. According to the provisional data for 2002, total net income reached $670 million, a 1.5 per cent increase over the previous year. Current projections for gross contributions to regular resources for 2003, using the UN official exchange rate as at 1 May 2003, were $746 million, an 11 per cent increase over the 2002 level. The figure for 2002 resulted from increased contributions in local currency from nine members of OECD/DAC, three of them by over 10 per cent. In United States dollar terms, four of them made contributions in excess of $1 million. Some 33 programme countries made contributions to the regular resource base in 2002, including 7 that increased or resumed their contributions. There were indications that some donors might be in a position to make additional pledges and payments to regular resources during 2003, which was particularly important since the 2003 anticipated income levels were far below the requirements. A total of 14 OECD/DAC countries had provided fixed payment schedules in 2002, compared to 17 in 2001. While the number of donors providing payment schedules had declined over the years, a core group of 12 had systematically done so every year. Donors that had communicated their payment schedules accounted for 77 per cent of the estimated income for 2002. Although adherence to payment schedules was also a concern, 62 per cent of estimated gross income had been received by July 2002, allowing the cash-flow problem to be brought under control and eliminating the need to use the operational reserve. For 2003, five donors had already paid their contributions in full.

In June [dec. 2003/11], the Executive Board welcomed the encouraging, albeit modest, increase in regular resources for the second consecutive year in 2002 and noted the increase in other (non-core) resources. Recognizing that the level of growth in regular contributions continued to be far below target, it urged countries to increase core funding so as to rebuild UNDP's regular resource base. It looked forward to discussing further UNDP funding requirements when adopting the MYFF 2004-2007 (see p. 901).

Budget estimates for 2004-2005

In June, the Administrator submitted budget estimates for the 2004-2005 biennium [DP/2003/28], which formed part of, and underpinned, the MYFF, 2004-2007 (see p. 901). He proposed a budget in net terms of $375.2 million for 2004-2005, an increase of $72.6 million over the net approved budget for 2002-2003 (YUN 2001, p. 809), and which incorporated total net volume increases of $18.6 million, net cost increases of $54 million, and an increase of $6 million to projected income that offset the gross support budget, amounting to $70.3 million, compared to $64.3 million in 2002-2003. The proposals represented a real growth budget in both gross and net terms.

In another document [DP/2003/CRP/20], the Administrator proposed that the Board grant him exceptional authority to access up to 2 per cent of the 2004-2005 support budget as additional funding for security measures amounting to $11.5 million.

In September [DP/2003/29], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) submitted its comments on the 2004-2005 budget estimates.

In September [dec. 2003/22], the Executive Board approved gross appropriations in the amount of $645,478,400 for the 2004-2005 biennial support budget, and resolved that the income estimates of $70,310,000 should be used to offset the gross appropriations, resulting in estimated net appropriations of $575,168,400. The Board endorsed the Administrator's proposal to grant him exceptional authority during 2004-2005 to access up to $11.5 million as additional funding for security measures. It also endorsed the establishment of a base structure concept funded by the regular support budget for both headquarters and country offices, with the aim of progressively increasing the proportionate share for augmentation over the base structure between regular and other resources, and requested UNDP to report back on the application of that approach in the context of the proposed 2006-2007 budget. It further endorsed the proposed increase in cost-recovery rates as a provisional arrangement. It requested the Administrator to report in 2004 on the cost-recovery policy, including the methodology used for calculating the rates, and to provide an update on the adequacy of the provisional rates, options for transparent reporting on income from cost recovery, including the possibility of adding that income in the calculation of the next biennial support budget, and a comparison with the practice of the other funds and programmes within UNDG.

The Board approved the Administrator's proposals for the reclassification of posts and requested UNDP to exercise restraint in future proposals for upward reclassifications. It also approved the proposals on government contributions towards local office costs. Recognizing the need to reach an understanding on the distinction between programme and overhead costs, the Board requested the Administrator to consult with ACABQ, the Board and other UNDG members to address those issues prior to submission of the 2006-2007 biennial support budget. He should also consult with the Board should the level of regular resources available for programming fall below $450 million. It authorized him to redeploy resources between appropriation lines to a maximum of 5 per cent of the appropriation line to which the resources were redeployed.

Audit reports

The Executive Board, at its January session, considered the Administrator's report [DP/2003/6] on implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors for the 2000-2001 biennium [YUN 2002, p. 1388], which contained an update of the actions taken by UNDP on the Board's recommendations, including the status of follow-up action and the target date for completion. The Administrator reported that progress had been achieved in most areas and that efforts were being made to address the issues that were still outstanding.

In January [DP/2003/CRP.7], the Administrator provided an update on the implementation of those recommendations, which highlighted UNDP's ongoing efforts to address the concerns raised by the Board since the earlier report.

In January [dec. 2003/5], the Executive Board took note of those reports and one on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors for the 2000-2001 biennium relating to UNOPS (DP/2003/7 & Corr.1) (see p. 909), and welcomed the improvements made in implementing the Board of Auditor's recommendations. It encouraged UNDP to continue follow-up action with respect to the audits of nationally executed expenditures and welcomed the imminent completion of the service-level agreements for services provided by UNDP to UNFPA and UNOPS. It also welcomed the ongoing consultations between UNDP, UNFPA and UNOPS to develop a fraud-prevention strategy by the end of 2003. Those three organizations were encouraged to take further steps to simplify, harmonize and standardize their financial reporting.

In May [DP/2003/21], the Administrator submitted the annual report on the internal audit and oversight services provided by the Office of Audit and Performance Review, covering 2002. Of the 42 audits conducted, 8 piloted a new approach, which included: sharing audit criteria with country offices to improve transparency and encourage them to undertake regular self-assessments; completing official draft reports within four weeks of field work; limiting the number of recommendations to 30; revising the standard system for rating offices; conducting balanced assessments of performance rather than focusing only on negative findings; and broadening the scope of the audit to include programme as well as financial and administrative aspects. In 2002, 44 internal audit reports were issued, containing 1,336 recommendations, of which 1,264 (95 per cent) were accepted by UNDP management.

In June [dec. 2003/14], the Executive Board encouraged the Administrator and the Executive Directors of UNFPA and UNOPS to address the issues in those reports and to report to the Board in 2004.

---

Other technical cooperation

---

UN activities

Department of Economic and Social Affairs

During 2003, the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) had more than 600 technical cooperation projects under execution in a dozen substantive sectors, with a total project expenditure of $50.7 million. Projects financed by UNDP represented $20.1 million; those by trust funds, $30.2 million; and those by UNFPA, $0.5 million.

On a geographical basis, DESA's technical cooperation programme included expenditures of $26.8 million for interregional and global programmes, $9.6 million in Africa, $6.7 million in Asia and the Pacific, $6 million in the Middle East and $0.5 million in Europe.

Distribution of expenditures by substantive sectors was as follows: associate expert programme, $18.9 million; socio-economic policy, $10.5 million; governance and public administration, $7.1 million; energy, $6.8 million; water, $2 million; Information and Communication Technologies (ICT) Task Force, $1.3 million; infrastructure, $1 million; programme support, $0.9 million; social development, $0.7 million; knowledge management, $0.6 million; statistics, $0.5 million; and minerals, $0.4 million. Of the total delivery of $50.7 million, the associate expert programme comprised 37 per cent; socio-economic policy, 21 per cent; and governance and public administration, 14 per cent.

On a component basis, DESA's delivery in 2003 included $37 million for project personnel; $7.4 million for subcontracts; $3.4 million for training; $2.2 million for equipment; and $0.7 million for miscellaneous expenses.

The total expenditure for DESA against the UN regular programme of technical cooperation was $8.5 million. Distribution of expenditures by sector was as follows: sustainable development, $3 million; public administration and socio-economic issues, $2.9 million; social development, $1.1 million; statistics, $1 million; gender issues, $0.2 million; population, $0.2 million; and administrative support, $0.1 million. On a component basis, expenditures for the year included $6.8 million for the provision of advisory services, including travel; $1.1 million for training activities; and $0.6 million for consultancy services.

Development Account

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 56/237 [YUN 2001, p. 810], issued, in October [A/58/404], the third progress report on the implementation of projects financed from the Development Account, which was funded through savings derived from efficiencies in the regular programme budget. Activities under the Account were aimed at capacity-building through subregional, regional and interregional economic and technical cooperation among developing countries, and implemented as individual projects to achieve distinct development impact.

Since the Account's establishment by the Assembly in resolution 52/12 B [YUN 1997, p. 1392], 43 projects had been approved for a total of $39.2 million. An additional 23 projects were proposed for approval for the fourth tranche (2004-2005) of the Account, which would bring total funding to $52.3 million. As at 30 June, the seven projects of the first tranche had utilized 80 per cent of allotted resources. Four of those projects had been or were about to be completed and the remaining three were expected to be finished by the end of 2003. The second tranche spent 76.5 per cent of allocated resources. Of the 16 projects, 5 were completed, 4 were close to completion and 7 would be completed in 2004. The third tranche, launched in 2002, had an implementation rate of 36.3 per cent, with 3 projects well advanced, 11 on schedule, 3 with an implementation rate of under 15 per cent and 2 just starting. The number of jointly executed projects had increased from zero in the first tranche to 12 in the fourth. Preliminary thematic evaluations were undertaken under two large clusters of projects: sustainable development and statistics. The reviews covered project execution, the effect networking and capacity-building had on the long-term impact of projects on beneficiaries, and lessons learned.

Development Account projects contributed to capacity-building in developing countries in specific areas related to follow-up to global conferences in the economic and social fields. Learning from experience, including the slow start of the first tranche, and following on guidance received from the intergovernmental process, both the implementation rate and the reporting on results had improved.

ACABQ, in October [A/58/7/Add.5], reviewed the report and stated that more emphasis should be placed on the pace of implementation of projects and on the results achieved, rather than on a description of efforts made and processes followed in implementing projects. It recommended that the Secretary-General incorporate information on the implementation of projects financed from the Development Account in his proposed programme budgets, thus obviating the need for a separate report.

On 23 December, the General Assembly, in section XVIII of resolution 58/272 (see p. 1419), took note of the Secretary-General's report on the Development Account and concurred with the ACABQ recommendations thereon.

Also, in resolution 58/270 of the same date (see p. 1399), the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report in 2004 addressing measures to improve the performance of the Development Account, including ways to bring a more focused approach to project formulation, complementarity, implementation and evaluation, and to make proposals for increasing its funding.

UN Fund for International Partnerships

The Secretary-General, in his report on the 2003 activities of the United Nations Fund for International Partnerships (UNFIP) [A/59/170], established in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1297] to manage the process of grant allocations through the United Nations Foundation, a public charity founded by Robert E. Turner to channel his gift to the United Nations of stock valued at some $1 billion, provided data on the thirteenth and fourteenth funding cycles, information on progress in each programmatic area and a description of UNFIP activities in advocacy and partnership-building. A total of $73.7 million was programmed for 2003, $16 million in the thirteenth funding cycle and $33 million in the fourteenth. Of the total, $44 million was for nine projects related to children's health; $18.4 million for 18 projects for the environment; $6.2 million for 14 projects for population and women; $2.9 million for five projects for peace, security and human rights; and $2.2 million for four projects outside the four thematic areas. As at 31 December 2003, a total of $563 million had been allocated to fund 292 projects, with activities in 121 countries involving 35 UN organizations.

The General Assembly, in section XXI of resolution 58/272 of 23 December (see p. 1420), took note of the Secretary-General's report on UNFIP's 2002 activities [YUN 2002, p. 874].

UN Office for Project Services

The United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS), established in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 900] in accordance with General Assembly decision 48/501 [YUN 1994, p. 806] as a separate and self-financing entity of the UN system to act as a service provider to UN organizations, offered a broad range of services, from overall project management to the provision of single inputs.

2003 activities

The year 2003 was the first in a multi-year transition and recovery phase for UNOPS, as the Executive Director reported in his annual report on UNOPS activities for 2003 [DP/2004/23]. UNOPS recorded income exceeding recurring and non-recurring administrative expenditures for the year, thereby adhering to its self-financing principle.

UNOPS project delivery remained on track for the year, reaching $490.6 million. Delivery increased by $6.2 million, or 1 per cent over an original target of $484.4 million. Management service agreements provided for 22 per cent of that total, UNDP for 16 per cent, other UN organizations for 40 per cent, trust funds for 17 per cent, and UNOPS as implementing agent for 5 per cent.

By commodity type, 44 per cent was spent on services and works contracting, 28 per cent on personnel contracting services, 24 per cent on equipment and goods, 3 per cent on training services and 1 per cent on miscellaneous activities.

By geographic region, the Arab States received 24 per cent of the total; Africa, 21 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 18 per cent; Europe and CIS, 15 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 12 per cent; and global and interregional programmes, 10 per cent.

In 2003, UNOPS generated $66.2 million in total revenues, well above the 2003 approved revised estimates of $44.5 million (see below), mainly as the result of one-time advisory services for contract amendments that UNOPS was requested to provide under the United Nations Office of the Iraq Programme. Of the total, project services (total support costs and fees) provided the largest share of total UNOPS revenue ($34.5 million, or 52 per cent). UNDP remained the primary client of UNOPS, accounting for 41 per cent of support costs and fee revenue ($14.3 million). Revenue generated from the loan supervision and administration portfolio—primarily the International Fund for Agricultural Development loans—increased from $6.4 million in 2002 to $7 million in 2003. Interest income remained low during 2002 and 2003, and a small income was generated by subleasing office space in New York.

Administrative expenditures totalled $47.8 million in 2003, or $2.5 million over 2002 actual expenditures. Staff costs for 2002-2003 ($57.8 million) declined from the 2000-2001 biennium ($66.7 million), reflecting the impact of staff reductions. Contractual services, equipment, communications, travel and general operating expenses equalled $9.2 million. UNOPS paid $5.4 million in reimbursements to UNDP and the United Nations for a range of central and operational support services.

The introduction of a single-instance enterprise resource planning system, known as Atlas, increased the UNOPS cost base. UNOPS spent $3.1 million, or 7 per cent of its expenditure base and twice the budgeted amount, on design, gap analysis, technical interfaces with legacy systems, testing, conversion, data scrubbing and training activities. UNOPS paid $1.7 million as a one-time, lump sum settlement for outstanding reimbursements to the United Nations and UNDP for administrative services and costs.

As at 31 December 2003, UNOPS had a fund balance of $23.2 million, composed of $6 million in operational reserve and $17.2 million in working capital.

Independent review

In January [DP/2003/CRP.4], the UNOPS Executive Director and the Management Coordination Committee (MCC) submitted jointly a detailed budget estimate totalling $225,750 for an independent review pertaining to the business model and related UNOPS issues, as requested by the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 878]. Under the terms of reference annexed to the note, the review would formulate a strategy for the long-term growth and sustainability of UNOPS. It would make proposals for aligning its cost and revenue structures and identifying areas of business expansion.

In January [dec. 2003/4], the Board approved a maximum of $255,000 for the budget for the independent review and requested UNDP to pre-finance the study and arrange for reimbursement from interested member countries. The Board amended the terms of reference (paragraph 16) of the review relating to the core team. It decided that the review should be undertaken by a consultancy firm selected through tender and requested MCC to initiate the process, bearing in mind the amended terms of reference. The Board also requested that a preliminary report on the review mission's recommendations be presented to the Board in June and that the final report be made available to the Board before its September session.

In response to the Board's request, the UNOPS Executive Director submitted a June progress report summarizing activities undertaken by UNOPS, MCC and the consultancy firm [DP/2003/CRP.15]. In June [dec. 2003/12], the Board took note of the progress report and requested that comments by UNOPS and MCC be submitted before its September session.

In August [DP/2003/40], the UNOPS Executive Director transmitted the final report of the independent review, prepared by management consultants Goss Gilroy Inc. It gave an overview of the recent history and the current state of affairs, including recent evaluations of UNOPS, covered the UNOPS business model and compared it with similar organizations, assessed the market for UNOPS services, discussed organizational issues such as human resources management development, financial systems and practices, procurement and governance, and presented a framework for moving forward. The review included development of a cost model to project various scenarios of UNOPS operations in order to assess the viability of the organization. It made 57 recommendations on all aspects of UNOPS operations, including on enhancement of viability by making changes so that the organization would be less vulnerable to external pressures and changes in the business environment.

The report noted that, upon becoming a separate, independent, self-financing agency in 1995, UNOPS retained most of the project workload and revenues from UNDP. Initially, UNOPS revenue levels permitted a considerable operational reserve fund to be built up. However, between 1998 and 2001, UNDP core funding was reduced, leaving UNOPS with lower net revenue margin projects. Facing a financial crisis in 2002, UNOPS implemented drastic cost-cutting measures in administrative expenditures totalling $9.3 million. Although UNOPS ended the year with a small excess of income over administrative expenditure, the budget reduction exercise, the staff reductions and the atmosphere of uncertainty regarding UNOPS's future caused mutual staff-management mistrust. With the diminished operating reserve and the forecast requirement to reduce it further, UNOPS had lost much of its capacity for enhancing project delivery capabilities, and its capacity to promote the agency and reinvest in systems had almost totally been eliminated. Moreover, the draft 2003 Business Plan specified that forecasting delivery volumes, income and project acquisition might be difficult beyond a one-year planning horizon.

The consultants found that the UNOPS business model resembled, in part, that of a for-profit consultancy firm in the private sector. For several years the business model appeared to work well, but its viability was undermined by the change in the premise that UNOPS would be UNDP's administrative and implementing arm with the advent of national and direct execution, and the failure of UNOPS management to provide the required leadership to adapt to the new environment and context. The business model had changed as a result of the recent financial difficulties, but further change was required to render it viable and sustainable. It was restricted by its revenue dependency, the condition that it function within the UN system and work through UNDP field offices, and its inability to do its own fundraising. The business model was also affected by the relationship of fees and level of effort, the control of costs in relation to fee income and the fragmentation of the organization.

The consultants were of the view that UNOPS was viable and sustainable within the limitation and independence of a revenue dependency business model, which should allow UNOPS a certain degree of independence, including the loosening of restraints and the removal of barriers. They recommended that the UNOPS Executive Director seek confirmation from the Executive Board that the revenue dependency business model, together with all its implications in terms of changes, removal of barriers and lessening of restrictions, should be the approach to establishing UNOPS long-term viability and sustainability. It should be based on a fee-for-service business model concept with a system to track project-related activities. However, UNOPS needed to undertake considerable change in its organization operations and mechanisms for reducing costs, and prepare a rational market development programme. To that end, UNOPS should prepare a change management plan. Once a new business plan was prepared, the Executive Director should seek the necessary bridge financing to cover the cost of restoring UNOPS to financial health and ensuring its viability and sustainability.

The UNOPS Executive Director, in his August comments on the independent review [DP/2003/CRP.19], summarized actions being taken to address the concerns raised in the review and presented an overview of the business and financial prospects for the remainder of 2003 and for 2004.

On 12 September [dec. 2003/27], the Board expressed concern that, despite the anticipated upturn in revenue in late 2003, current business projections for 2004 fell far short of levels needed to sustain the financial viability of UNOPS. It encouraged the Executive Director in his intent to focus on further business acquisition, including through analysing opportunities to build new relationships. It supported his approach with regard to the immediate steps to be taken and welcomed his intention to implement internal changes immediately. He was requested to develop, in consultation with the Board, a full response to the review's recommendations for the Board to consider in 2004. Noting that the question of UNOPS long-term sustainability was linked to broader issues, such as vision, mandate and governance, the Board considered that that discussion needed to take place in parallel with the implementation of internal reforms, and requested the Executive Director to facilitate that broader consultation process as soon as possible. He should report to the Board in 2004 on the strategy for business acquisition and progress in implementing internal changes; present a comprehensive timetable, detailed budget, benchmarks for monitoring the progress and modalities for meeting the costs of the change process; and report on the broader consultation process.

Budget estimates

Revised 2002 budget and 2003 forecast

The Executive Board, at its January session, considered the report [DP/2003/CRP.3] of the UNOPS Executive Director on implementation of the UNOPS revised 2002 budget. Notwithstanding the significant difficulties faced in 2002 to align its income and expenditure, UNOPS was able to stay on track with its project delivery targets. As at 31 October, UNOPS income totalled $34.8 million, of which $28.8 million was from project delivery, $5.4 million from its services-only portfolio and $0.6 million as other income. That amount represented 79 per cent of the approved target of $44.3 million [YUN 2002, p. 879]. Based on estimated project delivery of $503 million, total income for 2002 was projected at $43.1 million. Administrative expenditures for the same period totalled $36.7 million, exceeding earned income by $1.9 million, which was projected to increase to $3.6 million by the end of the year. Staff separation costs directly charged to the operational reserve amounted to $1 million against the projection of $2 million.

The level of the operational reserve stood at $2.5 million as at 31 October and was projected to fall to $2 million. As there continued to be a number of risk factors that could affect the achievement of targets, UNOPS was ready to implement the contingency plan approved by the Executive Board in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 878].

A paper [DP/2003/CRP.2] on the special reserve for separations, established by the Executive Board in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 878], provided information on UNOPS and the liabilities affecting UNDP. It was reported that, as a result of the workforce reduction at UNOPS, 16 people were displaced from their positions, at an estimated cost of $2.3 million. Based on the apportionment agreement between UNDP and UNOPS, the total cost to UNDP would be $1.1 million. As at 30 November 2002, eight other staff were in the process of being separated at an estimated cost of $0.5 million to UNDP. The estimated cost for separating the other eight if needed was $0.6 million.

In January [dec. 2003/3], the Board noted the UNOPS report on implementation of the revised 2002 budget and that the preliminary 2002 year-end figures were close to those in the revised budget report. It expressed concern over the continued reduction in the operational reserve and requested the Executive Director to submit a report, through MCC, on updated actual end-of-year figures for 2002 and projected income, expenditure and level of the operational reserve for 2003. The Board also noted the report on the special reserve for separation [dec. 2003/6].

As requested, the Executive Director issued an April report [DP/2003/18] providing UNOPS 2002 year-end figures and revised projections for 2003. Delivery, income and administrative expenditures were all slightly lower than the targets approved by the Board in 2002. When compared with the preliminary year-end projections presented to the Board in January (above), UNOPS achieved better results in all of its business parameters. The level of the operational reserve, carried forward at the end of 2002, stood at $4.2 million, which was $0.9 million higher than projected in June 2002.

UNOPS total 2002 year-end income amounted to $43.7 million, or 99 per cent of the approved income target of $44.3 million, comprising $35.4 million (100 per cent) in project delivery income, $7.5 million (96 per cent) from the service portfolio and $0.8 million (73 per cent) from other income, including rental income of $0.6 million. Expenditures amounted to $43.5 million, compared to the approved figure of $44 million, resulting in $0.2 million in excess of recurrent administrative expenditures, reversing the trend for the past two years. Staff separation costs charged to the operational reserve totalled $1.1 million in 2002, less than was anticipated due to fewer separations. Project delivery reached $485.1 million or 96 per cent of the target of $503.2 million.

For 2003, estimated project delivery was revised to $484.4 million. Income was projected at $44.5 million, comprising $35.3 million in project delivery income, $8.2 million in service portfolio income and $1 million in other income. Estimated expenditure was revised to $45.5 million. Staff separation costs were budgeted at $0.3 million, bringing total estimated staff separation costs to $1.4 million, a savings of $0.6 million. The 2003 year-end balance of the operational reserve was projected to be $3.2 million.

In June [dec. 2003/21], the Executive Board took note of the report on year-end figures for UNOPS in 2002 and projected income, expenditure and level of the operational reserve for 2003.

Revised 2002-2003 budget, 2004-2005 budget and operational reserve

In a July report [DP/2003/38], the Executive Director submitted revised budget estimates for the 2002-2003 biennium, based on actual delivery, income and expenditure for 2002 and on projections for 2003 (see above).

The 2002-2003 target for project delivery was revised to $969.5 million, $294.5 million or 23.3 per cent and $46.7 million or 4.6 per cent below the estimates approved in 2001 and 2002, respectively. Total estimated income was revised to $88.2 million, significantly lower than the original projection of $116.2 million, later revised to $87.9 million in 2002. The 2002-2003 expenditures were revised to $90.7 million, $22.3 million or 19.7 per cent less than the level approved in 2001, but $2.79 million or 3.2 per cent more than the 2002 revised estimate.

The Executive Director also submitted budget estimates for 2004-2005. He reported that a review of the UNOPS portfolio for 2004 and beyond revealed that it did not have the required budgets to support an annual project delivery of some $500 million, which would be comparable to what was achieved in 2002 and likely to be realized in 2003. While UNDP remained the main client of UNOPS, the UNDP portfolio had continued to decline, and increases in the project portfolio from other organizations had not been able to compensate for that decline. In addition, increasingly shorter duration of its business acquisition and reductions in delivery budgets, owing to political and economic upheavals, had made forecasting beyond a one-year horizon difficult, forcing UNOPS to change its planning and forecasting cycle from a two-year to a one-year cycle. The 2004-2005 budget was also expected to be influenced by the outcome of the independent review of UNOPS (see p. 906), as well as by the vision and strategy to be articulated by the new UNOPS Executive Director.

In the light of those considerations, UNOPS deferred the detailed formulation of the 2004-2005 biennium budget and proposed to use instead the same level of project delivery, income and expenditure estimated for the 2002-2003 biennium.

With regard to the operational reserve, the Executive Director proposed that the end 2004-2005 operational reserve be estimated at $4.2 million, equivalent to the end of 2002 level.

In August [DP/2003/39], ACABQ recommended that the Executive Board approve the revised budget estimates for 2002-2003, the proposed staffing level and the projections for 2004-2005.

The Board, in September [dec. 2003/26], approved the revised budget estimates for 2002-2003 in the amount of $90.7 million, the budget estimates for 2004-2005 at $87 million and the staffing level as proposed for 2002-2003.

Audit reports

The UNDP Executive Director submitted to the Executive Board in January [DP/2003/7 & Corr.1] a report on implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors for the 2000-2001 biennium [YUN 2002, p. 1388]. Of the 18 recommendations of the Board of Auditors, 15 concerned financial issues and 3 management issues. At the time of the report, 6 of the 18 recommendations had not been completed, although progress was being made towards their completion. The Board, in January [dec. 2003/5], noted that the opinion of the Board of Auditors on UNOPS financial statements was unqualified and expressed concern that a modified report on UNOPS had been issued.

In May [DP/2003/22], the UNDP Office of Audit and Performance Review (OAPR) and the UNOPS Project Services Audit Section reported on internal audit services for UNOPS operations in 2002. The report presented findings in relation to 19 internal audits in 2002 for which reports were issued, covering operational activities in the field (7 audits) and at headquarters (5 audits), and those under management service agreements (7 audits). Together, the reports contained 135 recommendations, of which 51 were in the area of administration (which included contracts and procurement), 36 in finance, 19 in programme, 16 in personnel, 11 in organization and 2 in the area of policy. Based on an arrangement between UNOPS and OAPR, the UNOPS organizational units concerned provided written comments on all the draft audit reports. UNOPS did not agree with only one of the 135 recommendations; in general, the comments indicated that actions had been taken or were being taken to address the audit issues and recommendations.

The Executive Board, in June [dec. 2003/14], strongly encouraged the Executive Director to address the issues contained in the report on internal audit and oversight and to report in 2004.

UN Volunteers

In 2003, the number of volunteers working for the United Nations Volunteers (UNV) programme—administered by UNDP—increased to 5,635 from 5,234 in 2002. The volunteers, from 165 countries, carried out 5,832 assignments in 150 nations. Seventy-two per cent of them were from developing countries and served either in their home countries or abroad. The number of women volunteers grew in absolute terms by 9 per cent during the 2002-2003 biennium, accounting for 37 per cent of all volunteers; however, in percentage terms, the proportion of women volunteers remained unchanged compared to male volunteers. By region, 41 per cent of assignments were carried out in Africa, 25 per cent in Asia and the Pacific, 15 per cent in Latin America and the Caribbean, 12 per cent in Europe and CIS, and 7 per cent in the Arab States.

UN volunteers supported communities and organizations in programme countries through initiatives that brought direct quality-of-life benefits to target populations. Development cooperation activities remained the hallmark of UNV programme implementation. Support was provided to partners in electoral processes, peace-building and humanitarian relief. In those activities, UNV combined the expertise and knowledge of international and national volunteers to enhance capacity development, reinforce sustainability and promote the spirit of volunteerism and global solidarity.

In his report on the UNV financial situation in 2003 [DP/2004/34], the UNDP Administrator stated that income recorded in 2003 for UNV amounted to $23.5 million, slightly below the 2002 level of $23.7 million, due mainly to a decrease in cost-sharing income from $2.6 million in 2002 to $1.4 million in 2003. Programme expenditure in 2003 also decreased to $21.8 million from $23.1 million in 2002. The balance of the operational reserve as at 31 December 2003 was $1.2 million.

Economic and technical cooperation among developing countries

The UNDP Administrator reported in May [DP/2003/14] on the implementation of the second cooperation framework for technical cooperation among developing countries (TCDC) (2001-2003) [YUN 2001, p. 818]. The report assessed the progress made by the Special Unit for TCDC in implementing that framework from 2001 to 2003. The Special Unit continued to promote South-South cooperation in general, including economic and technical cooperation. It developed a strategy for mainstreaming TCDC in the organization, especially in the area of partnerships. It supported strategic interventions to benefit groups of developing countries and to pilot initiatives with the potential for replication in several countries. Particular emphasis was placed on South-South and triangular partnerships, and exchanges of information and expertise. Programme achievements were recorded in the areas of policy dialogue and consensus-building, strengthening multilateral efforts for South-South cooperation, support for South-South sharing of development information, increased economic cooperation among developing countries (ECDC), and cooperation in social policies and social development. Cooperation among Southern countries was also enhanced in science and technology. The Special Unit was the liaison between UNDP and the Group of 77 developing countries, and worked to raise awareness of the importance of ownership by Southern countries in initiating, promoting and building South-South cooperation.

Of the total regular (core) resources of $7,406,000 allocated to the Special Unit for 2001-2003, $2,506,000 was disbursed during 2001-2002, and the remaining resources were fully programmed for implementation in 2003. Other (non-core) resources mobilized for the same period, totalling $9,737,000, were allocated to specific programmes. Of that amount, $8,150,000 was donated by Japan for 17 projects.

In June [dec. 2003/10], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board took note of decisions adopted at the thirteenth session of the High-level Committee on the Review of TCDC (see p. 911) and of the Administrator's report on implementation of the second cooperation framework for TCDC. It encouraged further efforts to make South-South cooperation contribute to the development outcomes of UN conferences and summits, including those contained in the UN Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], and to the mainstreaming of TCDC dimensions in implementing UNDP programme activities. The Board recognized the significant role of South-South cooperation in poverty eradication and in promoting the sustained growth and development of all developing countries, particularly the least developed, landlocked and transit developing countries and small island developing States. Welcoming General Assembly resolution 57/263 [YUN 2002, p. 883], which included the Voluntary Trust Fund for the Promotion of South-South Cooperation in the United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, the Board invited developed and developing countries to contribute to the Fund. It noted with appreciation the lessons learned from the second cooperation framework, which would provide useful inputs in formulating the third cooperation framework to be presented in 2004.

High-level Committee on TCDC

The High-level Committee on the Review of Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries, at its thirteenth session (New York, 27-30 May) [A/58/39], considered a comprehensive biennial report of the progress made in the implementation of the 1978 Buenos Aires Plan of Action for Promoting and Implementing TCDC [YUN 1978, p. 467] and the new directions strategy for TCDC [YUN 1995, p. 902], as well as reports of the UNDP Administrator. It held a thematic discussion on enhancing the role of the private sector in promoting South-South cooperation, including triangular cooperation. The Committee commemorated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the Buenos Aires Plan of Action.

The Committee adopted two substantive decisions. In the first [A/58/39 (dec. 13/1)], it encouraged developing countries that had not done so to establish a national South-South cooperation policy and coordination mechanism, including a clear delineation of the roles of the national focal point and of the various partners for such cooperation. It also encouraged developing countries, regional and subregional institutions and centres of excellence, with assistance from the Special Unit for TCDC, to draw lessons from experiences in triangular cooperation and design innovative South-South cooperation programmes. Member States and international institutions were encouraged, in designing, formulating and executing TCDC projects, to give priority to local capabilities and resources. The Committee requested the Special Unit to promote the use of ICT, with a view to sharing knowledge and benefits, and called on it to assist developing countries to facilitate and enable their connectivity and use of ICT and the establishment of home pages on the Internet. Commending the Special Unit's efforts in establishing an Internet-based gateway for South-South cooperation, the Web of Information for Development (WIDE), it requested UN development system institutions to make information in their databases on South-South cooperation activities accessible through WIDE. The Special Unit should assist in documenting and disseminating the particular problems of the least developed countries, small island developing States and landlocked developing countries to help address their needs. Developed and developing countries and the UN system should intensify efforts to support South-South initiatives designed to benefit those countries, and countries in post-conflict and crisis situations. The Committee requested UN bodies to take further measures to integrate systematically the use of TCDC/ECDC modalities into their cooperation programmes in line with the new directions strategy. It requested the Administrator to report at its fourteenth (2005) session on progress in implementing South-South cooperation and on implementation of its decision.

In a decision on the overall framework for promoting and applying TCDC [dec. 13/2], the Committee approved the revised Guidelines for the Review of Policies and Procedures concerning TCDC, including its annex on the United Nations Common Results Framework on Technical and Economic Cooperation among Developing Countries. The guidelines had been applied on an experimental basis since 1993 and revised in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 891]. Welcoming the emphasis on the promotion of South-South cooperation in the Administrator's Business Plans (see p. 897), the Committee called on the Administrator to promote the focal point mechanism relating to TCDC, especially at the regional and country levels through the resident coordinator system. The Committee decided to change the name of the Special Unit for TCDC to the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation and to periodically review its functioning. It called for raising the volume of UNDP resources available for promoting South-South cooperation activities and requested the executive boards of other funds and programmes to review, and to consider increasing, the allocation of resources for such activities. It requested the Administrator to report on the implementation of its decision in 2005.

The Executive Board, in June [dec. 2003/10], took note of the Committee's decisions.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2003/225 of 11 July, took note of the Committee's report on its thirteenth session.

South-South cooperation

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 56/202 [YUN 2001, p. 820], reported in August [A/58/319] on the state of South-South cooperation, covering the 2001-2002 biennium, in particular with regard to monetary, financial, investment and trade arrangements.

At the global level, the Group of 77 developing countries and China and the Non-Aligned Movement continued to serve as the broadest mechanisms for consultation and policy coordination among developing countries. Most South-South and North-South activities occurred within the framework of regional and subregional arrangements, and most of those were oriented towards promoting flows of trade. By the end of 2002, the World Trade Organization had recognized nearly 250 regional and subregional free-trade arrangements intended to promote economic and social development.

In Africa, the largest integration effort in terms of number of countries and long-term scope was the African Union (AU), which envisaged the eventual formation of a common market. A significant initiative at the first summit meeting of the AU was the launching of the New Partnership for Africa's Development [YUN 2002, p. 907], designed to consolidate democracy and sound economic management on the continent. In Asia, the Association of South-East Asian Nations continued as a leader in South-South cooperation, pursuing digital readiness in the region and launching an agricultural Internet hub. In Latin America and the Caribbean, the five-member Andean Community agreed to a new system of intellectual property rights, among other trade issues, while the Andean Community and the Southern Cone Common Market issued a joint communiqué in April 2002 on economic, social and political priorities. The Caribbean Community worked towards a common external tariff and common protective policy, harmonization of fiscal and taxation arrangements, and co-ordination of economic policies and development planning.

Owing to volatility in the global economy in 2001-2002, South-South cooperation in trade was mixed. Aggregate exports of developing countries accounted for 31.5 per cent of world exports in 2001, with a shift from mainly commodities to manufactures (over 70 per cent). During that period, South-South trade represented 40 per cent of the trade of developing countries. Those figures, however, varied greatly by region, with African countries accounting for 1.9 per cent of world exports in 2001, developing countries in the Americas for 5.5 per cent and Asian developing countries for 23.7 per cent.

Donor countries facilitated South-South cooperation by supporting centres of excellence and knowledge networks. Notable examples of triangular cooperation were Japan's Third Countries Training Programme and the Third Countries Experts Programme and Partnership Programme. Other significant triangular initiatives were the African Capacity-Building Foundation, an initiative of the African Development Bank, UNDP, the World Bank, African Governments and bilateral donors, created in response to the severity of capacity deficits in Africa, European Union support for programmes engaging African countries in trade expansion, environmental protection and the development of human resources, and support by the Netherlands for sectoral programmes in 22 developing countries through multi-donor basket funds.

The report observed that the basic concept of South-South cooperation was having a positive impact on global, regional and national policies and actions relating to trade, investment, monetary and financial arrangements, and on human development in general in the developing world. The emphasis placed on South-South cooperation at UN conferences reaffirmed the relevance of that approach to international development cooperation. As the number of regional and subregional groups grew, efforts needed to be made to expand the scope of South-South and triangular partnerships within the framework of such collaborative arrangements. Rapid globalization underscored the need for a more strategic approach to South-South cooperation, and cooperation in monetary and financial areas should be strengthened. Developing countries needed to avoid counterproductive competition against one another. Growing participation by the private sector, NGOs and civil society organizations in South-South cooperation was a welcome development to be strengthened in future South-South and triangular initiatives.

In September [A/58/345], the Secretary-General, also in response to resolution 57/263, submitted a report on raising public awareness of and support for South-South cooperation, which highlighted the value added and implications of the proposed international decade on South-South cooperation and a UN day for South-South cooperation. It concluded that the proposed UN day and/or an international decade would, on a South-South basis, present new opportunities to mobilize the increasing human and financial resources in the South towards the objective of meeting internationally agreed development goals, including the MDGs. Outlining objectives of the decade and possible activities, the report recommended that the Assembly declare a UN day for South-South cooperation to be held on 12 September and/or an international decade from 2005 to 2015.

The Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Group of 77 and China, in a Ministerial Declaration issued at their twenty-seventh annual meeting (New York, 25 September) [A/58/413], affirmed the importance of strengthening South-South cooperation in the UN system, particularly the Special Unit for TCDC, and called on UNDP to provide it with the necessary support. It decided that the High-level Conference on South-South Cooperation (see below) would consider the progress in the implementation of the outcomes of the 2000 South Summit [YUN 2000, p. 894], as identified in the Havana Programme of Action.

The High-level Conference on South-South Cooperation (Marrakech, Morocco, 16-19 December) [A/58/683] adopted the Marrakech Declaration on South-South Cooperation and the Marrakech Framework for the Implementation of South-South Cooperation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/58/487], adopted resolution 58/220 without vote [agenda item 97 (b)].

Economic and technical cooperation among developing countries

The General Assembly,

Stressing that South-South cooperation, as an important element of international cooperation for development, offers viable opportunities for developing countries and countries with economies in transition in their individual and collective pursuit of sustained economic growth and sustainable development,

Recognizing that developing countries have the primary responsibility for promoting and implementing South-South cooperation, not as a substitute for but rather as a complement to North-South cooperation, and in this context reiterating the need for the international community to support the efforts of the developing countries to expand South-South cooperation,

Taking note of the Ministerial Declaration adopted by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Group of 77 at their twenty-seventh annual meeting, held in New York on 25 September 2003, in which the increased importance and relevance of South-South cooperation were re-emphasized,

1. Takes note of the report of the High-level Committee on the Review of Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries on its thirteenth session, endorses the decisions adopted by the High-level Committee at that session, and decides to change the name of the Committee to High-level Committee on South-South Cooperation, with no change in its mandate or in the scope of its activities;

2. Also takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the state of South-South cooperation and on raising public awareness of and support for South-South cooperation;

3. Reaffirms the need to strengthen further, within its available resources, the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation of the United Nations Development Programme as a separate entity and a focal point for South-South cooperation within the United Nations system, recognizes that its activities should be perceived as an integral part of the overall development policy of the United Nations system and the United Nations Development Programme, and in this context calls upon United Nations funds and programmes and other entities of the United Nations development system to intensify efforts to mainstream technical and economic cooperation among developing countries by using relevant national, regional and international mechanisms in consultation with Member States;

4. Notes with interest that South-South cooperation can have a positive impact on global, regional and national policies and actions in the economic, social and development fields in the developing countries, and urges developing countries and their partners to intensify South-South and triangular cooperation in these areas, as they contribute to the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

5. Recognizes that regional integration initiatives between developing countries constitute an important and valuable form of South-South cooperation and that regional integration is a step towards beneficial integration into the world economy;

6. Also recognizes the urgent need to help to strengthen the capacities of the developing countries, especially the least developed countries, to participate in and benefit from globalization and liberalization processes, and to this end welcomes the initiatives being undertaken at the subregional, regional, interregional and global levels towards establishing public-private partnership mechanisms aiming to enhance and expand South-South cooperation in trade and investment, and in this context notes the initiatives of the World Trade Forum;

7. Reiterates the urgent need to help to strengthen institutions and centres of excellence in the South, especially at the regional and interregional levels, with a view to making more effective use of such entities towards improved South-South knowledge-sharing, networking, capacity-building, information and best practices exchanges, policy analysis and coordinated action among developing countries on major issues of common concern, and in this context encourages such institutions and centres of excellence, as well as regional and subregional economic groupings, to establish closer links and bridges among themselves, including through the Web of Information for Development of the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation;

8. Notes with interest the holding of the High-level Conference on South-South Cooperation in Marrakech, Morocco, from 16 to 19 December 2003, and calls upon developing countries, and encourages their development partners and relevant international organizations, to participate actively in the Conference in order to ensure its success and increase the momentum and intensity of South-South cooperation;

9. Urges all relevant United Nations organizations and multilateral institutions to intensify their efforts to effectively mainstream the use of South-South cooperation in the design, formulation and implementation of their regular programmes and to consider increasing allocations of human, technical and financial resources for supporting South-South cooperation initiatives, and in this regard takes note of the initiatives contained in the Havana Programme of Action adopted by the first South Summit and the follow-up to the High-level Conference on South-South Cooperation in Marrakech, as well as the preparations for the second South Summit in 2005;

10. Recognizes the need to mobilize additional resources for enhancing South-South cooperation, reiterates in this context its decision in its resolution 57/263 of 20 December 2002 to include the Voluntary Trust Fund for the Promotion of South-South Cooperation in the United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, as long as it exists, and in the same manner decides to include the Pérez-Guerrero Trust Fund for Economic and Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries in the same Pledging Conference, and invites all countries, in particular developed countries, to support South-South and triangular cooperation through, inter alia, these funds, bearing in mind the need for these funds to continue to use such resources in an effective manner;

11. Decides to declare 19 December, the date on which the General Assembly endorsed the Buenos Aires Plan of Action for Promoting and Implementing Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries, as the United Nations Day for South-South Cooperation;

12. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session a sub-item entitled "South-South cooperation for development", and requests the Secretary-General to submit at that session a comprehensive report on the state of South-South cooperation and on the implementation of the present resolution.

UN Capital Development Fund

Contributions to the United Nations Capital Development Fund (UNCDF) regular resources increased by $4.7 million, or 21 per cent, in 2003, bringing the total to $26.9 million, from $22.2 million in 2002 [DP/2004/34]. That increase resulted mainly from the fluctuation of the United States dollar against the euro, and the increased contribution of one donor. Contributions to trust funds and cost-sharing more than doubled, to $10.7 million compared to $3.4 million in 2002. Expenditures decreased from $24.8 million in 2002 to $21.1 million in 2003. Although regular resources programme expenditures declined by $6.2 million, or 28 per cent, other resources expenditures increased from $2.2 million in 2002 to $4.8 million in 2003. Unexpended resources at the end of 2003 totalled $64.5 million, including an operational reserve of $22.6 million that had decreased from $33 million in 2002. That level of unexpended resources, including the operational reserve, represented 26 months' expenditure.

In May [DP/2003/13 & Corr.1], UNCDF presented to the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board its 2002 results-oriented annual report (ROAR). The report covered the results achieved in 2002 within the UNCDF strategic results framework for 2002-2003.

In 2002, UNCDF operational activities were severely affected by the low level of contributions to its core resources, which were far short of the $30 million target, forcing UNCDF to reduce expenditures significantly. Starting with a planned budget of about $40 million based on previous years' programme commitments, UNCDF had to align target programme expenditures with actual resources available. Despite the reduction in programme expenditures, results attained in 2002 were robust in a few areas, while others suffered. The area of local governance showed performance gains, mainly as a result of local resource mobilization. Progress was made towards operational self-sufficiency of microfinance institutions. UNCDF made considerable progress in establishing technical advisory services on local governance and microfinance on a cost-recovery basis. It strengthened cooperation with development partners, especially UNDP, through formal partnership agreements. The results attracted additional non-core resource commitments.

In 2002, UNCDF had an active project portfolio of 93 projects, 54 of which met the criteria for reporting (projects lasting more than five months or with expenditure over $50,000). More than half of those were local development projects, followed by infrastructure, microfinance and eco-development projects.

In June [dec. 2003/9], the Executive Board took note of the 2002 ROAR, welcomed the articulation of the complementarity and partnership between UNDP and UNCDF as reflected in two memorandums of understanding, one on collaboration in microfinance and the other on local governance. The Board took note of the independent impact assessment of UNCDF to be submitted in 2004 and invited countries to make financial or in-kind contributions towards that initiative. It noted with concern that the regular (core) resources fell far below the demand of programme countries, in particular the least developed countries, in its two areas of concentration—microfinance and local governance/decentralization. Recognizing UNCDF efforts to broaden the donor base, the Board requested UNCDF to inform it of a strategy to achieve the objectives set out in 2002 on achieving goals and obtaining resources [YUN 2002, p. 884].

The Board, in September [dec. 2003/23], took note of the UNDP Administrator's budget estimates for 2004-2005 for UNCDF [DP/2003/28], and approved a gross appropriation for UNCDF for the 2004-2005 biennial support budget in the amount of $14,376,800.

Chapter III

Humanitarian and special economic assistance

In 2003, the United Nations, through the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA), continued to mobilize and coordinate humanitarian assistance to respond to international emergencies. During the year, consolidated inter-agency appeals were launched for Afghanistan, Angola, the northern Caucasus, the Central African Republic, Côte d'Ivoire, Côte d'Ivoire + 5 (Burkina Faso, Ghana, Guinea, Liberia, Mali), the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Eritrea, the Great Lakes region and Central Africa (Burundi, Congo, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Uganda), Guinea, Indonesia, Iraq, Liberia, the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Sierra Leone, Somalia, the Southern Africa region (Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Swaziland, Zambia, Zimbabwe), the Sudan and Tajikistan. The appeals sought $5.2 billion to assist some 83 million people. Some $3.9 billion was made available, meeting 75.3 per cent of requirements. Excluding contributions in kind and services not costed, OCHA contributions for natural disaster assistance totalled $57 million.

At the request of Burundi, an ad hoc advisory group to elaborate a long-term programme of support was established, while the group created in 2002 on Guinea-Bissau continued its work.

During the year, the Economic and Social Council considered ways to strengthen the coordination of UN emergency humanitarian assistance, including the financing of humanitarian assistance and the transition from relief to development.

Humanitarian assistance*Coordination*Humanitarian affairs segment of the Economic and Social Council

The humanitarian affairs segment of the Economic and Social Council (11 and 14-15 July) [A/58/3/Rev.1] considered the strengthening of the coordination of UN emergency humanitarian assistance, with particular attention to humanitarian financing and the effectiveness of humanitarian assistance and the transition from relief to development; it convened a panel on the sub-theme of responding to the effects of HIV/AIDS and other widespread diseases on humanitarian relief operations (decision 2003/210). Panel discussions were also held on humanitarian financing and the effectiveness of humanitarian assistance and on the transition from relief to development.

The Council considered the Secretary-General's June report [A/58/89-E/2003/85] on strengthening the coordination of UN emergency humanitarian assistance, submitted in response to General Assembly resolutions 46/182 [YUN 1991, p. 421] and 57/153 [YUN 2002, p. 889] and Council resolution 2002/32 [ibid., p. 886]. Following a summary of humanitarian developments over the preceding year, the report addressed the themes of the Council's humanitarian affairs segment (see above) and issues related to the protection of civilians, internally displaced persons, contingency planning, natural disasters and HIV/AIDS in the context of emergencies.

During the preceding year, developments in the humanitarian environment were mixed, with progress seen in ending conflict for some of the world's longer-running emergencies, but others continued to threaten whole regions. The situation in Iraq (see p. 315) underlined the importance of promoting principled humanitarian interaction to address humanitarian needs in the country. Collaborative partnerships among the humanitarian community, Governments and local actors were needed to ensure that durable solutions were found, thus setting the stage for sustainable development. The contribution of regional organizations to humanitarian assistance efforts was becoming increasingly important. A number of issues presented further challenges, including the protection of civilians in armed conflict, safeguarding the security of humanitarian personnel, the resettlement of internally displaced persons, greater integration of a gender perspective into emergency humanitarian assistance, protection from sexual exploitation and abuse, proper preparedness and contingency planning regarding natural disasters and complex humanitarian emergencies, the lack of capacity to reduce the impact of natural hazards and environmental emergencies, and the development of an emergency response to ensure the integration of the HIV/AIDS components into relevant programming areas. In response to the challenge of the involvement of military forces in humanitarian activities, "Guidelines on the Use of Military and Civil Defence Assets to Support United Nations Humanitarian Activities in Complex Emergencies" were developed and released in March. To address civil-military relations in the context of Iraq, the document "General Guidance for Interaction between United Nations Personnel and Military and Civilian Representatives of the Occupying Power in Iraq" was endorsed and released by the Secretary-General, also in March.

The report said that the importance of promoting effective coordination lay at the core of the themes related to transition and humanitarian financing. Coordination in the context of the transition from relief to development required the full engagement of Governments and donors at the earliest stages and a coherent strategy for restoring stability and normalcy. In addition to rebuilding structures or institutions, recovery assistance was needed to aid the consolidation of peace, counter the negative societal transformations that occurred during the crisis and counteract the tensions that led to the conflict. A joint Working Group on Transition Issues had been established by the Secretariat's Executive Committee on Humanitarian Affairs (ECHA) and the United Nations Development Group (UNDG), with the involvement of the International Organization for Migration, the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement and non-governmental organizations (NGOs), to improve the UN response to transition through more coherent planning, effective handover of coordination responsibilities and appropriate resource mobilization. The report of the 22-member Working Group was based on case studies of UN experiences in Afghanistan, Angola, the Congo, the Great Lakes region (Burundi, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Rwanda, United Republic of Tanzania), Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, Tajikistan and Timor-Leste.

The report recommended that UN transition activities be field-driven from conception to implementation and based on a common analysis, a system-wide assessment of needs and a clear identification of the potential UN role. In response to the report, a standing mechanism of the ECHA and UNGD secretariats, as well as a group of senior task teams, was established to provide continuing guidance and practical support to UN country teams engaged in transition planning. A separate report of the Secretary-General on reform measures [A/58/351] (see p. 1384) further discussed the Group's recommendations.

The Secretary-General proposed a series of actions for the Assembly and the Council regarding the protection of civilians, internally displaced persons, gender mainstreaming, sexual violence and exploitation, emergency preparedness and contingency planning, natural disasters, HIV/AIDS in the context of emergencies, transition from relief to development and humanitarian financing.

JIU coordination assessment

JIU evaluation. By a May note [A/58/85-E/2003/80], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on its evaluation of the UN system response in East Timor (renamed Timor-Leste), conducted with a view to improving coordination among UN organizations and maximizing the impact and effectiveness of their operations in emergency and post-conflict situations.

On 15 July (decision 2003/226), the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's note transmitting the JIU report.

Note of Secretary-General. A June note of the Secretary-General [A/58/85/Add.1-E/2003/80/Add.1] transmitted, for the consideration of the General Assembly, his comments, and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), on the JIU report. CEB members noted the actions already taken to address the weaknesses identified in the report.

Communication. On 1 July [A/58/99-E/2003/94], Sweden transmitted the Principles and Good Practice of Humanitarian Donorship and Implementation Plan for Good Humanitarian Donorship, endorsed by the participants of the International Meeting on Good Humanitarian Donorship (Stockholm, 16-17 June).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 July [meeting 35], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/5 [draft: E/2003/L.28] without vote [agenda item 5].

Strengthening of the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming General Assembly resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991, recalling that humanitarian assistance should be provided in accordance with and with due respect for the guiding principles contained in the annex to that resolution and recognizing other relevant resolutions of the Assembly and resolutions and agreed conclusions of the Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2002/32 of 26 July 2002 and General Assembly resolution 57/153 of 16 December 2002,

Recognizing that the affected State has the primary role in the initiation, organization, coordination and implementation of humanitarian assistance within its territory and in the facilitation of the work of humanitarian organizations,

Recognizing also the importance of the principles of neutrality, humanity and impartiality for the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Emphasizing the importance of the discussion of humanitarian policies and activities in the Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the fact that at the humanitarian affairs segment of 2003 the Economic and Social Council considered the theme "Strengthening of the coordination of the United Nations humanitarian assistance, with particular attention to humanitarian financing and effectiveness of humanitarian assistance and the transition from relief to development" and that the Council held a panel, within the framework of the theme, on "Responding to the effects of HIV/AIDS and other widespread diseases on humanitarian relief operations",

Emphasizing the importance of continued international cooperation in support of the efforts of affected States in dealing with natural disasters and complex emergencies in all their phases,

Reiterating that humanitarian assistance should be provided in a way that is not to the detriment of resources made available for international cooperation for development,

Welcoming positive developments towards the resolution of some long-standing conflicts, while remaining deeply concerned about the outbreak of new conflicts and the protracted nature of other conflicts,

Noting with grave concern the growing intensity and recurrence of natural disasters, and reaffirming the importance of sustainable measures to reduce the vulnerability of societies to natural hazards using an integrated, multi-hazard and participatory approach to address vulnerability, risk assessment and disaster prevention, mitigation, preparedness, response and recovery,

Taking note of the 2003 "Guidelines on the Use of Military and Civil Defence Assets to Support United Nations Humanitarian Activities in Complex Emergencies", as well as of the 1994 "Guidelines on the Use of Military and Civil Defence Assets in Disaster Relief",

Bearing in mind the review of the Yokohama Strategy for a Safer World: Guidelines for Natural Disaster Prevention, Preparedness and Mitigation and the Plan of Action therein,

Expressing grave concern about the tragic loss of lives of humanitarian staff while providing humanitarian assistance and the increased insecurity encountered by humanitarian staff as well as the acts of violence committed against them, in particular deliberate attacks, and mindful of the need to provide the fullest possible protection for their security,

Recalling the inclusion of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which was adopted on 17 July 1998 and entered into force on 1 July 2002, and noting the role that the Court could play in appropriate cases in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law,

Bearing in mind that reaching the vulnerable is essential for providing adequate protection and assistance in context of natural disasters and complex emergencies as well as for strengthening local capacity to cope with humanitarian needs in such contexts,

Noting the grave humanitarian and development implications of the HIV/AIDS pandemic and other widespread major infectious diseases prevalent in the humanitarian context, such as malaria, tuberculosis and cholera, on the affected countries,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

Humanitarian developments and challenges

2. Calls upon all parties to armed conflicts to comply with their obligations under international humanitarian law, human rights law and refugee law;

3. Reaffirms the obligation of all States and parties to armed conflict to protect civilians in armed conflicts in accordance with international humanitarian law, and invites States to promote a culture of protection, taking into account the particular needs of women, children, older persons and persons with disabilities;

4. Urges the international community and the relevant organizations of the United Nations system to strengthen humanitarian and other assistance to civilians under foreign occupation;

5. Urges all States to take measures necessary to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel;

6. Strongly condemns any act, or failure to act, contrary to international law, which obstructs or prevents humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel from discharging their humanitarian functions;

7. Calls upon all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, in countries in which humanitarian personnel are operating, in conformity with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, to cooperate fully with the United Nations and other humanitarian agencies and organizations and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel, as well as supplies and equipment, in order to allow them to perform efficiently their task of assisting the affected civilian population, including refugees and internally displaced persons;

8. Strongly urges States to ensure that those responsible for attacks against humanitarian staff are promptly brought to justice, as provided by national law and obligations under international law, and notes the need for States to end impunity for such acts;

9. Notes that an increasing number of States, United Nations organizations and regional and non-governmental organizations are making use of the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement, encourages the strengthening of legal frameworks for the protection of internally displaced persons, and urges the international community to strengthen its support to affected States in their efforts to provide, through national plans or initiatives, protection and assistance to their internally displaced persons;

10. Stresses the continued need and relevance of integrating, through implementation of existing policies, commitments and guidelines on gender mainstreaming, a gender perspective in the planning, programming and implementation of humanitarian assistance activities;

11. Welcomes the establishment by the Inter-Agency Standing Committee of the six core principles in the Plan of Action on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse in Humanitarian Crises, representing minimum standards of behaviour required of all United Nations civilian staff members, and urges the United Nations to take appropriate follow-up action in response to allegations of sexual violence and exploitation by humanitarian workers;

12. Encourages Governments as well as international humanitarian organizations, as appropriate, to take further initiatives to prevent, address and follow up on allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse in humanitarian emergencies, and emphasizes that the highest standards of conduct and accountability are required of all personnel serving in humanitarian and peacekeeping operations;

13. Stresses the need to strengthen institutional capacity at all levels as well as disaster risk reduction programmes, particularly in developing countries and countries with economies in transition, in order to minimize vulnerabilities and disaster risks as well as to avoid or to limit adverse impact of natural hazards within the broad context of sustainable development;

14. Encourages the United Nations Development Programme, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat and the secretariat of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction to continue to strengthen their coordination with the view, inter alia, to advancing the implementation of provisions of vulnerability, risk assessment and disaster management, including prevention, mitigation, preparedness, response and recovery as contained in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation");

15. Encourages humanitarian agencies to ensure, to the extent possible, the participation of those affected by humanitarian situations in the design, implementation and evaluation of humanitarian assistance activities, while respecting the role of authorities of affected countries;

16. Recalls paragraph 3 of Article 101 of the Charter of the United Nations, and invites the United Nations organizations to enhance geographical balance in terms of humanitarian personnel employed by them;

17. Stresses the need for increased national and regional capacity-building in early warning and monitoring of natural hazards, natural disaster preparedness, mitigation and response, including by strengthening coordination in the areas of information sharing and analysis, logistics support, response coordination and strengthening enhanced relationships with existing regional structures, and encourages the international community to provide necessary technical assistance to States in this regard;

18. Welcomes the convening of the Second International Conference on Early Warning: Integration of the Early Warning Process into Public Policy, to be held from 16 to 18 October 2003 in Bonn, Germany, under the auspices of the United Nations;

19. Encourages States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Tampere Convention on the Provision of Telecommunication Resources for Disaster Mitigation and Relief Operations, adopted at Tampere, Finland, on 18 June 1998;

20. Recalls General Assembly resolution 57/150 of 16 December 2002 on strengthening the effectiveness and coordination of international urban search and rescue assistance, and welcomes the work that is being undertaken to further strengthen the effectiveness and coordination of international urban search and rescue assistance;

21. Affirms the leading role of civilian organizations in implementing humanitarian assistance, particularly in areas affected by conflicts, and also affirms the need, in situations where military capacity and assets are used to support the implementation of humanitarian assistance, that their use be in conformity with international humanitarian law and humanitarian principles;

22. Urges States to implement outcomes and commitments of United Nations conferences on the HIV/AIDS pandemic as well as other major infectious diseases, including malaria and tuberculosis, with particular focus on the time-bound targets related to those diseases in complex emergencies and natural disaster-affected countries and regions;

23. Recognizes the important role of humanitarian agencies in addressing HIV/AIDS and other major infectious diseases, such as malaria, tuberculosis and cholera, in emergencies, and urges them to factor considerations pertaining to these major infectious diseases into their planning and coordination efforts, including in the areas of early warning and contingency planning;

24. Calls upon humanitarian and development organizations to strengthen their cooperation, between themselves and with Governments of affected States, in order to ensure that the longer-term developmental implications of the HIV/AIDS epidemic and of the other major infectious diseases are adequately addressed in emergency situations;

Transition from relief to development

25. Takes note of the work in progress by the United Nations system to clarify the role of the United Nations in post-conflict transition situations;

26. Reiterates that emergency assistance must be provided in ways that will support recovery and long-term development;

27. Also reiterates the need to address the strategic planning gap between relief and development activities in the context of natural disasters and complex emergencies;

28. Notes with concern the disturbing trend of low or late funding for rehabilitation programmes aimed at helping affected communities to attain self-sufficiency;

29. Recognizes that, inter alia, early engagement in planning, fuller coverage of the needs of all sectors, more support for recovery and long-term development activities, capacity-building at all relevant levels and enhancement of national ownership are critical to managing the transition from relief to development;

30. Reiterates the need for coordinated humanitarian assistance and adequate financial resources to ensure ongoing capacity for prompt, timely and effective response by the United Nations system to natural disasters and other emergencies, both for immediate relief and also for the smooth transition between relief, rehabilitation, reconstruction and long-term sustainable development;

31. Stresses the importance of addressing, based on need, the situation of the least developed countries affected by conflict, natural disasters and other humanitarian situations and of improving their institutional capacity and providing adequate support for rehabilitation, reconstruction, long-term sustainable development, poverty reduction and, where appropriate, peace-building efforts of least developed countries emerging from those situations;

32. Recognizes that the need for coordination increases and becomes more complex in post-conflict transition, and encourages States and the United Nations system, as appropriate, to enhance their efforts towards the early assumption of the coordination role of the Government as well as integrated coordination, including information management, inclusive planning, donor coordination, strengthening the United Nations resident coordinator system and the full participation of concerned Governments in needs assessment, planning mechanisms and coordination processes;

33. Stresses the need to consider the issue of the transition from relief to development in an integrated manner at a substantive session of the Economic and Social Council in the near future, in view of the importance of getting humanitarian and development organizations, including international and regional financial institutions and non-governmental organizations, to discuss the implications of these situations more fully in their programming;

Humanitarian financing and effectiveness of humanitarian assistance

34. Reaffirms the responsibility of States, first and foremost, to take care of the victims of humanitarian emergencies within their own borders, while recognizing that the magnitude and duration of many emergencies may be beyond the response capacity of many affected countries;

35. Recognizes the role of the Emergency Relief Coordinator, and calls upon relevant United Nations organizations as well as other humanitarian actors to enhance the coordination, effectiveness and efficiency of their humanitarian activities, including by:

(a) Enhancing their commitment to system-wide coordination both at Headquarters and in the field;

(b) Strengthening efforts to report on results, activities and financial matters, including to donors, in a timely and comprehensive manner, and, where possible, to strive for harmonized reporting, bearing in mind specific requirements of donors;

(c) Developing further methods for monitoring and evaluation, including independent evaluations;

(d) Maximizing the portion of humanitarian assistance contributions that directly benefits people in need;

(e) Addressing mutual safety and security concerns at the field level;

36. Calls upon the organizations of the United Nations system to improve and increase consistency in the way in which humanitarian needs are assessed, inter alia, by:

(a) Enhancing the quality, accuracy and transparency of needs assessments;

(b) Agreeing upon minimum standards in order to properly assess needs;

(c) Including States and other humanitarian actors in assessment missions;

(d) Addressing all humanitarian needs;

(e) Taking into account safety and security of humanitarian personnel;

(f) Undertaking joint agency assessments;

37. Urges the Emergency Relief Coordinator to further develop the global humanitarian financial tracking system and to refine the comprehensive system for the collection and dissemination of data on humanitarian needs and contributions;

38. Encourages the donor community to improve its response to humanitarian emergencies through policies and practices of good donorship, along with mechanisms for their review, and welcomes steps taken in that direction;

39. Also encourages the donor community to provide humanitarian assistance in proportion to needs and on the basis of needs assessments, with a view to ensuring a more equitable distribution of humanitarian assistance across humanitarian emergencies, including those of a protracted nature, as well as fuller coverage of the needs of all sectors;

40. Further encourages the donor community to establish reliable, predictable and timely funding to meet humanitarian needs and to consider increasing the flexibility of funding and the share of non-earmarked contributions to United Nations agencies in response to humanitarian emergencies, including within the consolidated appeals;

41. Encourages donors to consider taking steps to harmonize reporting requirements, based on United Nations standards for financial reporting, as well as to enhance reporting to the financial tracking system;

42. Requests the Secretary-General to reflect the progress made in the implementation of and follow-up to the present resolution in his next report to the Council and the General Assembly on the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations.

Also on 15 July, by decision 2003/226, the Council took note of the Secretary-General's report on strengthening the coordination of UN emergency humanitarian assistance (see p. 915).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/114 [draft: A/58/L.39 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (a)].

Strengthening of the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 and the guiding principles contained in the annex thereto, other relevant General Assembly and Economic and Social Council resolutions and agreed conclusions of the Council,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General on the status of implementation of actions described in the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change";

Reaffirming the principles of neutrality, humanity and impartiality for the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Recognizing that independence, meaning the autonomy of humanitarian objectives from the political, economic, military or other objectives that any actor may hold with regard to areas where humanitarian action is being implemented, is also an important guiding principle for the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Gravely concerned about the acts of violence against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, in particular deliberate attacks, which are in violation of international humanitarian law or other international law that may be applicable,

Gravely concerned also about the lack of access by humanitarian personnel to victims of humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflict and in post-conflict situations, in many regions of the world,

Reaffirming the responsibility first and foremost of States to take care of the victims of humanitarian emergencies within their own borders, while recognizing that the magnitude and duration of many emergencies may be beyond the response capacity of many affected countries,

Concerned about the need to mobilize adequate levels of financing for emergency humanitarian assistance,

Emphasizing that the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat should benefit from adequate and more predictable funding, while stressing the importance for the Office to continue to make efforts to broaden its donor base,

Recognizing the importance of humanitarian assistance in ensuring the effective transition from conflict to peace and in preventing the recurrence of armed conflict, and that humanitarian assistance must be provided in ways that will be supportive of recovery and long-term development,

Recognizing also the importance of adequate assistance in the transition from relief to development,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the outcome of the sixth humanitarian affairs segment of the Economic and Social Council, during its substantive session of 2003;

2. Welcomes the appointment of the new Emergency Relief Coordinator, encourages the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat to continue its efforts to strengthen the coordination of humanitarian assistance of the United Nations, including through the consolidated appeals process, and calls upon relevant United Nations organizations as well as other humanitarian and development actors to work with the Office in enhancing the coordination, effectiveness and efficiency of humanitarian assistance;

3. Stresses the need to increase in an incremental way, in the normal course of the budget process, the share of the budget of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs borne by the United Nations regular budget;

4. Emphasizes the importance of the discussion of humanitarian policies and activities in the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council;

5. Calls upon relevant organizations of the United Nations system, other relevant international organizations, Governments and non-governmental organizations to cooperate with the Secretary-General and the Emergency Relief Coordinator to ensure timely implementation of and follow-up to resolutions of the Economic and Social Council adopted at the humanitarian affairs segment of its substantive session;

6. Encourages the Economic and Social Council to consider the issue of the transition from relief to development in an integrated manner, through a possible joint meeting of the humanitarian and operational segments, during its substantive session in the near future, in view of the importance of getting humanitarian and development organizations, including international and regional financial institutions and non-governmental organizations, to discuss and review more fully the implications of the transition from relief to development in their programming, and invites the Council to take into account, inter alia, the work in progress by the United Nations system to clarify its role in post-conflict transition situations as well as other relevant information in its consideration;

7. Strongly condemns all forms of violence to which humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel are increasingly subjected, as well as any act or failure to act, contrary to international law, which obstructs or prevents humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel from discharging their humanitarian functions;

8. Urges all States to take necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel;

9. Reaffirms the leading role of civilian organizations in implementing humanitarian assistance, particularly in areas affected by conflicts, affirms the need, in situations where military capacity and assets are used to support the implementation of humanitarian assistance, for their use to be in conformity with international humanitarian law and humanitarian principles, and in this regard takes note of the 2003 "Guidelines on the Use of Military and Civil Defence Assets to Support United Nations Humanitarian Activities in Complex Emergencies", as well as of the 1994 "Guidelines on the Use of Military and Civil Defence Assets in Disaster Relief";

10. Calls upon all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, in countries in which humanitarian personnel are operating, in conformity with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, to cooperate fully with the United Nations and other humanitarian agencies and organizations and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel as well as supplies and equipment in order to allow them to perform efficiently their task of assisting the affected civilian population, including refugees and internally displaced persons;

11. Encourages Member States with internally displaced persons to develop or strengthen, as appropriate, national laws, policies and minimum standards on internal displacement, inter alia, taking into account the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement, and to continue to work with humanitarian agencies in endeavours to provide a more predictable response to the needs of internally displaced persons, and in this regard calls for international support, upon request, to capacity-building efforts of Governments;

12. Reaffirms the obligation of all States and parties to an armed conflict to protect civilians in armed conflicts in accordance with international humanitarian law, and invites States to promote a culture of protection, taking into account the particular needs of women, children, older persons and persons with disabilities;

13. Welcomes the continued efforts to address the issue of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse in the context of humanitarian crises, and notes with interest the bulletin of the Secretary-General on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse;

14. Encourages the donor community to improve its response to humanitarian emergencies through policies and practices of good donorship, together with mechanisms for their review, and welcomes steps taken in this direction;

15. Calls upon relevant United Nations organizations to improve and increase consistency in the way in which humanitarian needs are assessed;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, through the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2004, on progress made in strengthening the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations, including the implementation of and follow-up to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/5 of 15 July 2003.

UN and other humanitarian personnel

During the year, the Security Council and the General Assembly called for measures to ensure the security and safety of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel (see also p. 1452).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 August [meeting 4814], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1502(2003). The draft [S/2003/581] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reiterating its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security and, in this context, the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international humanitarian law,

Reaffirming its resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000 on protection of civilians in armed conflict, and its resolution 1460(2003) of 30 January 2003 on children and armed conflict, as well as other relevant resolutions, and recalling the statements by its President on protection of civilians in armed conflict (S/PRST/1999/6, S/PRST/2002/6, S/PRST/2002/41) and on protection of United Nations personnel, associated personnel and humanitarian personnel in conflict zones (S/PRST/2000/4).

Welcoming the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 57/28 of 19 November 2002 entitled "Scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel" and resolution 57/155 of 16 December 2002 entitled "Safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel",

Reaffirming the obligation of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel to observe and respect the laws of the country in which they are operating, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations, and underlining the importance for humanitarian organizations of upholding the principles of neutrality, impartiality and humanity in their humanitarian activities,

Emphasizing that there are existing prohibitions under international law against attacks knowingly and intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission undertaken in accordance with the Charter which in situations of armed conflict constitute war crimes, and recalling the need for States to end impunity for such criminal acts,

Aware that the protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel is a concern in situations of armed conflict and otherwise,

Gravely concerned at the acts of violence in many parts of the world against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, in particular deliberate attacks, which are in violation of international humanitarian law as well as other international law that may be applicable, such as the attack against the headquarters of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq in Baghdad on 19 August 2003,

1. Expresses its strong condemnation of all forms of violence, including, inter alia, murder, rape and sexual assault, intimidation, armed robbery, abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention, to which those participating in humanitarian operations are increasingly exposed, as well as attacks on humanitarian convoys and acts of destruction and looting of their property;

2. Urges States to ensure that crimes against such personnel do not remain unpunished;

3. Reaffirms the obligation of all parties involved in an armed conflict to comply fully with the rules and principles of international law applicable to them related to the protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, in particular international humanitarian law, human rights law and refugee law;

4. Urges all those concerned, as set forth in international humanitarian law, including the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention of 18 October 1907, to allow full unimpeded access by humanitarian personnel to all people in need of assistance and to make available, as far as possible, all necessary facilities for their operations, and to promote the safety, security and freedom of movement of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel and their assets;

5. Expresses its determination to take appropriate steps in order to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, including, inter alia, by:

(a) Requesting the Secretary-General to seek the inclusion of, and requesting that host countries include, key provisions of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994, among others, those regarding the prevention of attacks against members of United Nations operations, the establishment of such attacks as crimes punishable by law and the prosecution or extradition of offenders, in future as well as, if necessary, in existing status-of-forces, status-of-mission and host country agreements negotiated between the United Nations and those countries, mindful of the importance of the timely conclusion of such agreements;

(b) Encouraging the Secretary-General, in accordance with his prerogatives under the Charter of the United Nations, to bring to the attention of the Security Council situations in which humanitarian assistance is denied as a consequence of violence directed against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel;

(c) Issuing the declaration of exceptional risk for the purposes of article 1 (c) (ii) of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel in situations where, in its assessment, circumstances would support such a declaration, and inviting the Secretary-General to advise the Council where, in his assessment, circumstances would support such a declaration;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to address in all his country-specific situation reports the issue of the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, including specific acts of violence against such personnel, remedial actions taken to prevent similar incidents and actions taken to identify and hold accountable those who commit such acts, and to explore and propose additional ways and means to enhance the safety and security of such personnel.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/155 [YUN 2002, p. 1414], the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/58/344], described threats against humanitarian and UN personnel over the preceding year. He noted that, while fatalities had decreased significantly in recent years, there were instances in which the Organization's efforts were being frustrated.

The Assembly, in resolution 58/122 of 17 December (see p. 1453), called on Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel.

Resource mobilization

Central Emergency Revolving Fund

In 2003, the Central Emergency Revolving Fund, established in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 584] as a cash-flow mechanism for the initial phase of humanitarian emergencies, granted 12 advances, amounting to $7.2 million.

Consolidated appeals

The consolidated appeals process continued to coordinate and facilitate the capacity of the UN system to meet its inter-agency resource requirements. In 2003, the United Nations and its humanitarian partners issued consolidated appeals seeking $5.2 billion in assistance to Afghanistan, Angola, the northern Caucasus, the Central African Republic, Côte d'Ivoire, Côte d'Ivoire + 5 (Burkina Faso, Ghana, Guinea, Liberia, Mali), the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Eritrea, the Great Lakes region and Central Africa (Burundi, Congo, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Uganda), Guinea, Indonesia, Iraq, Liberia, the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Sierra Leone, Somalia, the Southern Africa region (Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Swaziland, Zambia, Zimbabwe), the Sudan and Tajikistan.

The latest available data indicated that 75.3 per cent ($3.9 billion) of requirements had been met.

White Helmets

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/102 [YUN 2001, p. 827], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/320], described the status of implementation of the "White Helmets" initiative, which was established by Argentina in 1993 to promote the concept of pre-identified standby and trained teams of volunteers from various national volunteer corps to support immediate relief, rehabilitation, construction and development activities and was administered by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). The report, which covered the period from March 2001 to July 2003, highlighted programme activities and their results, existing mechanisms and partnerships, financing and resources mobilization, and underscored opportunities for widening the operationalization of the concept.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/118 [draft: A/58/L.43 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (d)].

Participation of volunteers, "White Helmets", in the activities of the United Nations in the field of humanitarian relief, rehabilitation and technical cooperation for development

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 50/19 of 28 November 1995, 52/171 of 16 December 1997, 54/98 of 8 December 1999 and 56/102 of 14 December 2001,

Reaffirming also its resolutions 46/182 of 19 December 1991, 47/168 of 22 December 1992, 48/57 of 14 December 1993, 49/139 A and B of 20 December 1994, 50/57 of 12 December 1995 and 51/194 of 17 December 1996 and Economic and Social Council resolutions 1995/56 of 28 July 1995 and 1996/33 of 25 July 1996,

Emphasizing the need to address the strategic planning gap between relief and development activities in the context of humanitarian emergencies, taking into account the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recognizing that the international community, in addressing the growing magnitude and complexity of man-made and natural disasters and chronic situations characterized by hunger, malnutrition and poverty, must rely not only on the formulation of a well-coordinated global response within the framework of the United Nations but also on the promotion of a smooth transition from relief to rehabilitation, reconstruction and development,

Recalling once again that prevention, preparedness and contingency planning for emergencies on a global level depend, for the most part, on the strengthening of local and national response capacities as well as on the availability of financial resources, both domestic and international,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, prepared in pursuance of its resolution 56/102 on the participation of volunteers, "White Helmets", in the activities of the United Nations in the field of humanitarian relief, rehabilitation and technical cooperation for development;

2. Recognizes the value of domestic and regional actions aimed at making pre-identified, standby and trained national volunteer corps such as the White Helmets available to the United Nations system, through the United Nations Volunteers and other agencies, and in accordance with accepted United Nations procedures and practices, in order to provide specialized human and technical resources for emergency relief and rehabilitation;

3. Expresses its satisfaction for the progress of the White Helmets initiative as a singular voluntary international effort to provide the United Nations system with voluntary expertise to respond, in a quick and coordinated manner, to United Nations appeals concerning humanitarian relief, rehabilitation, reconstruction and development, while preserving the non-political, neutral and impartial character of humanitarian action;

4. Encourages Member States to identify their respective national focal points for the White Helmets in order to continue to provide the United Nations system with an accessible global network of rapid response facilities in case of humanitarian emergencies;

5. Recognizes with appreciation the progress made by the States members of the Common Market of the South and its associated partners in strengthening and broadening the regional role of the White Helmets initiative, and encourages Member States in other regional associations to make similar joint efforts;

6. Encourages operational partners of the United Nations system, in particular United Nations Volunteers and the United Nations Development Programme, to draw upon the voluntary expertise of the White Helmets, as appropriate, including in their response to chronic situations characterized by hunger, malnutrition and poverty;

7. Recognizes that the White Helmets initiative can play an important role in the promotion, diffusion and fulfilment of the decisions achieved in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and invites Member States in a position to do so to consider means to ensure the integration of the White Helmets initiative into their programme activities and to make the commensurate financial resources available through the special financing window of the Special Voluntary Fund of the United Nations Volunteers, or in coordination with it;

8. Invites the Secretary-General, on the basis of the experience acquired, to consider further the potential use of White Helmets as a resource for preventing and mitigating the effects of post-conflict humanitarian emergencies and, in this context, to maintain adequate support for the White Helmets liaison functions, taking into account the ongoing reforms process;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to take into consideration the ten years that will have passed since the adoption of its resolution 49/139 B, the first resolution on the White Helmets initiative, and, in view of the success of coordinated actions carried out since then with, inter alia, the United Nations Children's Fund, the World Food Programme, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Volunteers, to consider their impact and to analyse possible steps and modalities to enhance the integration of the White Helmets initiative within the work of the United Nations system, suggesting appropriate mechanisms and areas, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Mine clearance

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/159 [YUN 2002, p. 891], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/260], described progress in implementing the goals and objectives of the UN mine-action strategy for the period 2001-2005 [YUN 2001, p. 828]. A review of the six strategic goals identified progress in each goal as follows: increased information and improved information technology through the production of information related to mine-action problems, inter-agency assessment missions to mine-affected countries, enhancement of the Web-based information network E-mine, and installations and upgrading of the software, Information Management System for Mine Action (goal 1); improved capacity to respond to emergencies through the endorsement of an operational framework for rapid response, implementation of a rapid-response plan in Iraq, and the provision of emergency mine-action assistance to seven countries (goal 2); sustained efforts to build national mine-action capacity in over 30 countries (goal 3); significant improvements in quality management realized through strengthened management and oversight of the International Mine Action Standards (IMAS) (goal 4); successful resource mobilization leading to increased resources for mine-action programmes and the issue of the Portfolio of Mine-related Projects: 2003 to coincide with the launch of consolidated appeals (goal 5); and increased advocacy in support of relevant legal instruments through the provision of expert information to Member States considering legislation to regulate explosive remnants of war and assistance in codifying the rights of persons living with disabilities, including landmine survivors (goal 6).

The Secretary-General concluded that the UN mine-action strategy for 2001-2005 had provided valuable direction and guidance for all UN entities involved in its implementation and had fostered coordination and accountability across the mine-action community. He recommended that the Inter-Agency Coordination Group on Mine Action should continuously monitor the 2001-2005 strategy and report annually to the Assembly, and called for the development, in 2005, of a UN mine-action strategy for the period 2005-2009.

An addendum to the report [A/58/260/Add.1] presented the text of the revised strategy.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/127 [draft: A/58/L.50 & Add.1, orally revised] without vote [agenda item 22].

Assistance in mine action

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/159 of 16 December 2002 and all its previous resolutions on assistance in mine clearance and mine action, all adopted without a vote,

Recognizing that, in addition to the primary role of States, the United Nations has a significant role to play in the field of assistance in mine action, and considering mine action to be an important and integrated component of United Nations humanitarian and development activities,

Reaffirming its deep concern at the tremendous humanitarian and development problems caused by the presence of mines and other unexploded ordnance that constitute an obstacle to the return of refugees and other displaced persons, to humanitarian aid operations and to reconstruction and economic development, as well as to the restoration of normal social conditions, and that have serious and lasting social and economic consequences for the populations of mine-affected countries,

Bearing in mind the serious threat that mines and other unexploded ordnance pose to the safety, health and lives of local civilian populations, as well as of personnel participating in humanitarian, peacekeeping and rehabilitation programmes and operations,

Encouraged by the reduction in the number of new mine victims, but reiterating its dismay at the existing high number of victims of mines and other unexploded ordnance, especially among civilian populations, including women and children, and recalling in this context its resolution 57/190 of 18 December 2002 and Commission on Human Rights resolutions 2003/49 of 23 April 2003, on the human rights of persons with disabilities, and 2003/86 of 25 April 2003, on the rights of the child,

Deeply alarmed by the number of mines that continue to be laid each year, as well as the presence of a decreasing but still very large number of mines and other unexploded ordnance as a result of armed conflicts, and therefore remaining convinced of the necessity and urgency of a significant increase in mine-clearance efforts by the international community with a view to eliminating the threat of landmines to civilians as soon as possible,

Noting the inclusion in Amended Protocol II to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects of a number of provisions of importance for mine-clearance operations, notably the requirement of detectability, and provision of information and technical and material assistance necessary to remove or otherwise render ineffective minefields, mines and booby traps, and noting also that Amended Protocol II to the Convention entered into force on 3 December 1998,

Noting also the conclusions and recommendations adopted at the Fourth and Fifth Annual Conferences of the States Parties to Amended Protocol II to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, held in Geneva on 11 December 2002 and on 26 November 2003, respectively,

Noting further the new additional Protocol to address the post-conflict impact of explosive remnants of war adopted by the Meeting of States Parties to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, held in Geneva on 27 and 28 November 2003, and noting the agreement reached on mandates for further work by the same Meeting,

Noting that additional States have ratified or acceded to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction, which entered into force on 1 March 1999, bringing the total number of States that have formally accepted the obligations therein to one hundred and forty-one,

Noting also the conclusions of the Fifth Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction, held in Bangkok from 15 to 19 September 2003, taking note of the reaffirmed commitments that were made by the States parties in the Bangkok Declaration, among other things, to pursue efforts related to the core humanitarian objectives of the Convention, urging all States parties and relevant organizations to participate actively in the work of the intersessional programme established by States parties to the Convention, and taking note also that the First Review Conference, to which the Secretary-General will be invited, will be held in Nairobi, from 29 November to 3 December 2004.

Stressing the need to convince mine-affected States to halt new deployments of anti-personnel mines in order to ensure the effectiveness and efficiency of mine-clearance operations,

Stressing also the pressing need to urge non-State actors to halt immediately and unconditionally new deployments of mines and other associated explosive devices,

Recognizing the importance of assisting mine clearance in mine-affected countries by ensuring that the necessary maps and information and appropriate technical and material assistance are provided to help to remove existing minefields, mines, booby traps and other unexploded ordnance,

Noting that the resources allocated to mine-action activities have increased in recent years, but stressing the need to mobilize additional resources and to secure the best possible utilization of such resources, particularly for victim assistance, in order to meet increasing requirements, and encouraging all States, the United Nations and other international, regional and non-governmental and private organizations to continue their efforts in this regard,

Concerned at the limited availability of safe and cost-effective mine-detection and mine-clearance equipment, as well as the need for effective global coordination in research and development to improve relevant technologies, and conscious of the need to promote further and more rapid progress in this field and to foster international, national and local technical cooperation to that end,

Reaffirming the need to reinforce cooperation and coordination in the area of mine action at all levels and to devote the necessary resources to that end, including resources to support national and regional capacity-building initiatives, where applicable, and the work of the United Nations in this regard,

Noting with appreciation the finalization of an emergency response plan by the United Nations to respond to emergency mine-action requirements,

Welcoming the various established mine-action coordination centres, as well as the creation and existence of international trust funds for mine-action activities,

Noting with satisfaction the inclusion in the mandates of several peacekeeping operations of provisions relating to mine-action work carried out under the direction of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat, in the context of such operations,

Commending the action taken by donor and recipient Governments, the United Nations system, regional organizations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and non-governmental organizations to coordinate their efforts and seek solutions to the problems related to the presence of mines and other unexploded ordnance, as well as their assistance to victims of mines,

Welcoming the role of the Secretary-General in increasing public awareness of the problem of landmines,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on assistance in mine action and the recommendations contained therein, and takes note with appreciation of the revised mine-action strategy contained in the addendum to the report;

2. Calls, in particular, for the continuation of the efforts of States, with the assistance of the United Nations and relevant organizations involved in mine action, as appropriate, to foster the establishment and development of national mine-action capacities in countries in which mines and other unexploded ordnance constitute a serious threat to the safety, health and lives of the local population or an impediment to social and economic development efforts at the national and local levels, and urges all Member States, in particular those that have the capacity to do so, to assist mine-affected countries in the establishment and development of national capacities in mine action;

3. Invites Member States to develop and support national programmes, where appropriate, in cooperation with the relevant bodies of the United Nations system and relevant regional, governmental and non-governmental organizations, to reduce the risks posed by landmines and other unexploded ordnance, including among women and children;

4. Expresses its appreciation to Governments, regional organizations and other donors for their financial and in-kind contributions to mine action, including contributions for emergency operations, peacekeeping operations and for national and local capacity-building programmes;

5. Encourages efforts to conduct mine action in accordance with accepted national and international standards, including International Mine Action Standards, and also encourages all States involved in mine action, including troop-contributing countries conducting mine action in peacekeeping operations, to follow these standards, as applicable;

6. Emphasizes the importance of using an information management system, such as the Information Management System for Mine Action, in full coordination with the United Nations Mine Action Service and with the instrumental support of the Geneva International Centre for Humanitarian Demining;

7. Appeals to Governments, regional organizations and other donors to continue and, whenever possible, increase their support to mine action through reliable, predictable and timely contributions, including contributions through the Voluntary Trust Fund for Assistance in Mine Action as well as to national mine-action efforts and humanitarian mine-action programmes of non-governmental organizations, to allow for the timely delivery of mine-action assistance, and stresses that such assistance should be integrated into broader humanitarian, development and other strategies;

8. Stresses the importance of international support for emergency assistance to victims of mines and other unexploded ordnance and for the care, rehabilitation and social and economic reintegration of the victims, and also stresses that such assistance should be integrated into broader public health and socio-economic strategies;

9. Encourages all relevant multilateral and national programmes and bodies to include, in coordination with the United Nations, activities related to mine action in their humanitarian, rehabilitation, reconstruction and development assistance activities, where appropriate, bearing in mind the need to ensure national and local ownership, sustainability and capacity-building;

10. Encourages Member States, the United Nations system, international and regional organizations and relevant non-governmental organizations to take further action to mainstream a gender perspective and integrate gender and age-appropriate considerations in all aspects of mine-action programming, particularly including programmes to reduce the number of child victims and relieve their plight;

11. Stresses the importance of cooperation and coordination in mine action, while emphasizing once again the important role of the United Nations in the effective coordination of mine-action activities, based on the United Nations policy on mine action and effective coordination, and especially the role of the Mine Action Service, stresses also the important role that national authorities and regional organizations can play in this regard, as well as the important role of relevant non-governmental organizations, and underlines the need for the continuous assessment of these roles by the General Assembly;

12. Emphasizes the role of the Mine Action Service as the focal point for mine action within the United Nations system and its ongoing collaboration with and coordination of all mine-related activities of the United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, and in this regard expresses its appreciation of the roles played by other bodies of the United Nations system, in accordance with United Nations mine-action policy;

13. Urges Member States and regional, governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations to continue to extend full assistance and cooperation to the Secretary-General and, in particular, to provide him with information and data, as well as other appropriate resources that could be useful in strengthening the coordination role of the United Nations in mine action;

14. Takes note with appreciation of the Mine Action Guidelines for Ceasefire and Peace Agreements, requests the Secretary-General to make them widely available to United Nations mediators, moderators, special representatives of the Secretary-General and others, as appropriate, and calls upon all parties to conflict to incorporate provisions on mine action, where relevant, in ceasefire and peace agreements or other relevant arrangements;

15. Takes note of the potential that mine action can have as a peace and confidence-building measure in post-conflict situations among concerned parties;

16. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to propose, where appropriate, provisions related to mine action in his recommendations to the Security Council for peacekeeping operations;

17. Emphasizes the importance of undertaking further multisectoral assessments and surveys to better define the nature, scope and impact of the landmine and other unexploded ordnance problem in affected countries and to support the establishment of clear priorities and national economic and development plans of action, underlining the need for the participation of populations of mine-affected areas in this regard;

18. Notes with appreciation the ongoing development by the United Nations of the International Mine Action Standards, with the assistance of the Geneva International Centre for Humanitarian Demining and other partners in mine action, to support the safe and effective conduct of mine-action activities, and emphasizes the need for an inclusive process to be followed in the development and review of such standards and the importance of developing in mine-affected countries national mine-action standards based on the International Mine Action Standards;

19. Recognizes the importance of building national capacities for and ownership of mine-action programmes, encourages the further establishment of national mine-action centres, including those supported by the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Children's Fund as well as those established under the auspices of the Mine Action Service in emergency situations, and encourages States to support the activities of those centres and the trust funds established for the coordination of assistance in mine action and the promotion of national ownership;

20. Requests the Mine Action Service to continue developing the electronic mine information network as a user-friendly repository of mine-related information and as a means for mine-action programmes to circulate on a regular basis to donors and other partners standard reports on the scope and impact of the mine problem, available mine-action resources and capacities and the progress achieved in the field;

21. Emphasizes the importance of recording the location of mines, of retaining all such records and making them available to concerned parties upon cessation of hostilities, and welcomes the strengthening of the relevant provisions in international law;

22. Calls upon Member States, especially those that have the capacity to do so, to provide the necessary information and technical, financial and material assistance, as appropriate, and to locate, remove, destroy or otherwise render ineffective minefields, mines, booby traps and other devices, in accordance with international law, as soon as possible;

23. Urges Member States and regional, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations that have the ability to do so to provide, as appropriate, technological assistance to mine-affected countries and to promote user-oriented scientific research on and development of mine-action techniques and technology, within reasonable time frames, so that mine-action activities may be carried out more safely and cost-effectively, and also urges them to promote collaboration at all levels in this regard;

24. Invites States to explore the possibility of strengthening internationally negotiated and non-discriminatory legal instruments that address landmines and other unexploded ordnance, as well as their victims;

25. Takes note with appreciation of the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General to increase public awareness of the impact of the problem of landmines and unexploded ordnance;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the progress achieved on all relevant issues outlined both in his previous reports to the Assembly on assistance in mine action and in the present resolution, including the progress made by the International Committee of the Red Cross and other international and regional organizations as well as national programmes, and on the operation of the Voluntary Trust Fund for Assistance in Mine Action and other mine-action programmes, as well as a report on the first implementation of the emergency response plan and lessons learned from this experience and on the implementation of the strategy for the period 2001-2005;

27. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Assistance in mine action".

Humanitarian activities

Africa

Angola

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Angola, launched for a total of $314 million to assist 3.7 million beneficiaries during 2003, received 55.1 per cent ($173 million) of requirements.

The humanitarian situation in Angola improved significantly during 2003 in all areas accessible to humanitarian partners. However, about 100,000 people with critical needs remained in areas where access was hampered by mine infestation, broken bridges and poor road conditions. According to government figures, more than 3.8 million persons returned to their areas of origin. Some 500,000 remained in camps and temporary settlement areas and centres; about 400,000 persons were living with host families in urban centres; and 350,000 refugees were still in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC).

Humanitarian partners adopted a new programme approach for the 2003 appeal, which focused on unifying programmes around a limited set of time-bound and realistic objectives through programme blocs in food security, public health, protection and education, and access and coordination.

Central African Republic

A Flash Appeal for Humanitarian Assistance to the Central African Republic sought $9.1 million to cover assistance for 2.2 million people from April to June, of which 38.8 per cent ($3.5 million) was received.

Since 15 March, the political and military situation in the Central African Republic had changed with the overthrow of the former regime (see p. 155). However, populations in the former conflict-stricken areas were experiencing a serious humanitarian situation. Lack of access to supplies from the capital deprived the local population of basic commodities and basic health services, whose infrastructure had been consistently looted. Incidence of diseases had increased as had cases of malnutrition among children, and there was serious risk of losing the 2003 crop year due to the lack of seeds that either had been looted or consumed by households. Insecurity across the country constrained humanitarian assistance activities.

Eritrea

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Eritrea, launched for a total of $160 million to assist 2.3 million beneficiaries during 2003, met 77.3 per cent ($124 million) of requirements.

The humanitarian situation in Eritrea, which deteriorated throughout 2003, was defined by the effect of another year of severe drought, which threatened the country with widespread crop failures and water shortages, in addition to the continuing effects of war, generalized poverty, the imperative of creating a safe environment for the return of thousands of internally displaced persons, expellees, and returning refugees and their reintegration. The 2002 crop production, at only 9 per cent of the national consumption requirement, led 2.3 million people to depend on food aid. In addition, reports of livestock deaths, increased grain prices and deflated livestock prices indicated a significant reduction of purchasing power and increased food insecurity countrywide.

Great Lakes region and Central Africa

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for the Great Lakes Region and Central Africa, launched for a total of $115 million to cover 2003, received 100 per cent of that amount. Neither Rwanda nor the United Republic of Tanzania issued appeals in 2003, but chose instead to rely on alternative funding mechanisms or targeted development assistance.

Key issues were the region's vulnerability to natural disasters and the impact of climatic trends, peace, security and human rights, health and HIV/AIDS, internally displaced persons, refugees and vulnerable groups, and human rights violations targeting women and children.

Burundi

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Burundi, launched to assist 415,531 beneficiaries in 2003, sought $72 million, of which 44.1 per cent ($32 million) was received.

In 2003, the security situation deteriorated in Burundi, hampering the work of the United Nations and its partners. Acts of abduction, banditry, robbery, looting and assassination of local administrative officials rose markedly. Looting by the rebels and uncontrolled elements of the armed forces stripped communities of their self-sufficiency.

(See also p. 947 for information on the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi.)

Congo (Republic of the)

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for the Republic of the Congo to cover 2003, amounting to $28 million, met 35 per cent ($10 million) of requirements.

The UN Plan for 2003-2004 described strategies to reduce poverty, enhance the role and status of women in society, support national efforts to stop the spread of HIV/AIDS and assist infected and affected persons, strengthen the rule of law and protect human rights, and improve food security and nutrition. Other areas of concern were children and the family, culture and communications, education and science, employment and income generation, the environment, health, refugees, the reintegration of ex-combatants and water, hygiene and sanitation.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for the DRC sought $229 million for assistance to 2.6 million beneficiaries during 2003, of which 47.1 per cent ($108 million) was received.

A fifth year of uninterrupted war in large parts of the DRC further eroded coping mechanisms, and pushed entire populations to near exhaustion, which was reflected in the increase in internally displaced persons from 2.7 million in January to 3.4 million in August. On the positive side, the previous Government and former rebel groups united to form a new transitional Government (see p. 113), which established a new Ministry for Solidarity and Humanitarian Affairs as part of its strategy for consolidating peace and security.

(See also p. 943 under "Special economic assistance".)

Uganda

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Uganda, launched for a total of $127 million to cover 2003, received 97.6 per cent ($124 million) of that amount to assist 750,000 beneficiaries.

While steady economic progress was made in the south, a serious humanitarian crisis was ongoing in the northern and north-eastern parts of the country, where an estimated 1 million persons had been displaced, with most of them living in heavily congested camps or public buildings under appalling health and sanitary conditions. Limited access to the camps had been possible through government-provided armed escorts. The most vulnerable groups—internally displaced persons, refugees and drought-affected people, mainly in Karamoja—were unable to access adequate agricultural land or find employment because of displacement, lack of income-generating activities and, specific to the drought-affected areas, poor weather and soil conditions.

Somalia

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/154 [YUN 2002, p. 896], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/58/133], reviewed conditions in Somalia and the humanitarian relief and rehabilitation assistance provided by the United Nations and its partners from 22 May 2002 to 22 May 2003.

Somalia remained one of the poorest countries in the world. About 350,000 internally displaced persons were living in desperate conditions, with no access to international assistance or protection. Chronic food instability exacerbated the plight of the poorer groups, especially in drought-prone areas. Deterioration in the security situation resulted in the United Nations and other international agencies losing access to large areas, and prevented vulnerable Somalis from rebuilding sustainable livelihoods. In collaboration with implementing partners, the United Nations continued to deliver humanitarian aid and development assistance and remained committed to assisting the country. However, the low donor response to the consolidated appeals process prevented UN agencies from fully addressing Somalia's emergency needs. The United Nations, with the assistance of the international community, would continue to support national reconciliation and social and economic development, employing an incremental approach of increased engagement. It would also undertake inter-agency peace-building strategies to strengthen communities and encourage reconciliation between rival factions.

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Somalia sought $71 million to assist 750,000 beneficiaries in 2003, of which 63.4 per cent ($45 million) was received.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December (meeting 75), the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/115 (draft: A/58/L.40 & Add.1) without vote [agenda item 40 (b)].

Assistance for humanitarian relief and the economic and social rehabilitation of SomaliaThe General Assembly,*

Recalling its resolution 47/160 of 18 December 1992 and subsequent relevant resolutions, in particular resolutions 56/106 of 14 December 2001 and 57/154 of 16 December 2002,

Noting with serious concern that the current four-year drought in Somalia threatens the lives of Somali nomads as well as livestock,

Noting with grave concern the high mortality rates of over 80 per cent of livestock in the worst-affected areas of the Sool and Sanaag plateau of Somalia and the high risk of starvation of Somali nomads,

Noting with serious concern the threat, as a result of this drought, of an imminent collapse of the Somali economy, and in particular of the pastoral economy and social support systems,

Underlining the urgent need for humanitarian assistance, relief and reconstruction,

Noting the linkage between the search for peace and alleviation of the humanitarian crisis in Somalia,

Welcoming the continued focus of the United Nations, in partnership with civil society at the grassroots level, on programmes of assistance, including both humanitarian and development approaches, taking into consideration the conditions on the ground,

Recalling statements by the President of the Security Council of 31 October 2001 and 28 March 2002, by which the Security Council condemned attacks on humanitarian personnel and called upon all parties in Somalia to respect fully the security and safety of personnel of the United Nations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and non-governmental organizations, and to guarantee their complete freedom of movement and access throughout Somalia,

Re-emphasizing the importance of the further implementation of its resolutions 47/160, 56/106 and 57/154 to rehabilitate basic social and economic services throughout the country,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his continued and tireless efforts to mobilize assistance for the Somali people;

2. Reiterates its firm support for the national reconciliation process sponsored by the Intergovernmental Authority on Development, and in particular for the ongoing peace conference in Kenya and the efforts of the Facilitation Committee in this regard, urges all parties throughout Somalia to participate in the process, and invites the Intergovernmental Authority and its member States to continue their efforts to promote national reconciliation in Somalia;

3. Encourages the further implementation of its resolution 47/160 to rehabilitate basic social and economic services throughout Somalia;

4. Welcomes the strategy of the United Nations focusing on the implementation of community-based interventions aimed at rebuilding local infrastructures and increased self-reliance of the local population, and the ongoing efforts by the United Nations agencies, their Somali counterparts and their partner organizations to establish and maintain close coordination and cooperation mechanisms available for the implementation of the relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction programme;

5. Notes the incremental and prioritized approach of the United Nations system to addressing the continuing crisis and needs in Somalia while maintaining long-term commitments to rehabilitation, recovery and development activities;

6. Commends the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat for its response, and underlines the urgent need for putting in place practical measures aimed at the alleviation of the consequences of the drought in Somalia;

7. Urges all States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned to continue to implement further its resolutions 47/160, 56/106 and 57/154 in order to assist the Somali people in embarking on the rehabilitation of basic social and economic services, as well as institution-building aimed at the restoration of structures of civil governance at all levels in all parts of the country in which peace and security prevail;

8. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to mobilize international humanitarian, rehabilitation and reconstruction assistance for Somalia;

9. Calls upon all Somali parties to respect the security and safety of the personnel of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations and to guarantee their complete freedom of movement and safe access throughout Somalia;

10. Urges the international community to provide as a matter of urgency humanitarian assistance and relief to the Somali people to alleviate in particular the consequences of the prevailing drought;

11. Calls upon the international community to provide continuing and increased assistance in response to the United Nations 2004 Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction assistance for Somalia;

12. Commends the Secretary-General for the establishment of the Trust Fund for Peace-Building in Somalia, welcomes the contributions made thus far to the Fund, and appeals to Member States to contribute to it;

13. Requests the Secretary-General, in view of the critical situation in Somalia, to take all necessary and practicable measures for the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

Sudan

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/112 [YUN 2001, p. 836], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/225], described the emergency situation and recovery, rehabilitation and development activities in the Sudan from 15 July 2001 to 22 May 2003.

During the reporting period, positive changes occurred in the operational environment in which humanitarian aid was provided. Nevertheless, the need for such assistance remained high, as armed conflict and ethnic violence continued to destroy infrastructure, isolate populations, erode coping mechanisms and limit access to markets, and also resulted in significant human rights violations. Natural calamities further diverted and drained government resources and caused additional large-scale displacement. In Upper Nile, Kassala, Darfur and the Sobat corridor, the presence of militias constituted a serious impediment to access. Road operations remained hampered by the presence of landmines and conditions were not established to allow internally displaced persons, refugees and ex-combatants to return voluntarily to their homes. From May 2003, some humanitarian workers holding Sudanese visas were not permitted entry to areas in the south. The issuance of travel permits and visas took from three days to three months, and some staff received permits for one month only. Other restrictions were also imposed. Humanitarian access to previously denied or war-affected areas was expected to improve with the conclusion of a peace agreement.

The Secretary-General presented recommendations regarding a coherent transitional assistance programme, which called for sustaining the current multifaceted approach, covering diplomatic, political and economic factors; ensuring adequate funding facilities were responsive to humanitarian and transitional needs prior to the signing of a peace agreement; and the reintegration of internally displaced persons, ex-combatants and refugees into affected communities. He said assistance partners should act urgently to ensure that effective mechanisms were in place for consolidating any peace that was negotiated but not fully implemented.

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for the Sudan, launched for $263 million to cover the needs of 2.8 million beneficiaries in 2003, received 74.2 per cent ($195 million) of requirements.

West Africa

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Flash Appeal, launched in 2002 (YUN2002, p. 898) for $22 million to assist 3.9 million people in Côte d'Ivoire and Burkina Faso, Ghana and Mali from November 2002 to January 2003, received 55.6 per cent ($12 million) of the requirement.

The West Africa subregion had suffered chronic instability, with a coup d'état on 14 September (Guinea-Bissau), state collapse and violent conflict (Côte d'Ivoire and Liberia), disputed governance (Guinea and Togo), weakened economies linked to the crisis in Côte d'Ivoire (Burkina Faso, Ghana, Mali), outburst of political tensions (Mauritania), and increased vulnerability in rural areas due to drought in the Sahel region and civilians seeking asylum in the border areas of Burkina Faso, Ghana, Guinea and Mali.

An appeal for the subregion was planned for 2004.

Côte d'Ivoire + 5

A UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Côte d'Ivoire and the five neighbouring countries of Burkina Faso, Ghana, Guinea, Liberia and Mali, to cover the period from April to December 2003, sought $91 million to assist 3 million beneficiaries. Of the total, 54.3 per cent ($49 million) was received.

The humanitarian situation in Côte d'Ivoire steadily deteriorated and was marked by widespread human rights abuses, continuing insecurity and uncertainty about the political/military situation, and the economic downturn and virtual collapse of basic social services. The crisis portended ominous trends for the wider West Africa subregion.

In Liberia, which was already facing a deep political, economic and humanitarian crisis, the situation worsened due to the spillover effects of the Côte d'Ivoire conflict. The ongoing conflict in Côte d'Ivoire and the resultant closure of its borders with Burkina Faso had a severe impact on the latter country's economy, given its structural links with Côte d'Ivoire, including higher transport action costs, loss of income and rising prices. An estimated 3 million Burkinabé lived in Côte d'Ivoire. Despite its own precarious situation, Guinea continued to bear the burden of a constant flow of refugees from its neighbours. Continuing tensions along the Liberian/Guinean border presented a further security obstacle to the population and critical humanitarian assistance operations. The appeal would target about 176,000 people.

The impact of the Côte d'Ivoire crisis on Mali was seen against the background of an economy vulnerable to world commodity price fluctuations and the effects of recurrent Sahelian droughts. Up to 2 million Malian nationals resided in Côte d'Ivoire. An increase in the prices of basic commodities, food and petroleum products, a shortfall in rain and the unexpected return of thousands of Malians, along with a substantial drop in remittances, meant diminishing opportunities in Côte d'Ivoire and a deepening of poverty in Mali. The ramifications of the crisis in Côte d'Ivoire on Ghana mainly resulted in the influx of third-country nationals transiting to their countries of origin, and Ivorian asylum-seekers, challenging the capacity of the Government, the humanitarian community and host communities to identify and respond to their needs adequately.

Guinea

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Guinea, launched for a total of $48 million to assist 400,000 beneficiaries in 2003, received 61.2 per cent ($29 million) of the requirement.

Guinea provided a safe haven for refugees fleeing conflicts in Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia and Sierra Leone. Populations in its refugee-hosting and war-affected areas near the border with Liberia and Sierra Leone remained vulnerable and in need of aid, due to the volatile security situation linked to the alleged presence of armed militants. Building the country's capacity to manage complex emergencies and natural disasters remained a key priority.

Liberia

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Liberia, which sought $47 million to cover 1.3 million beneficiaries in 2003, received 39.6 per cent ($18 million) of that amount from the donor community.

In 2003, the humanitarian situation in Liberia was severely affected by the continuing escalation of conflict. During the first half of the year, humanitarian agencies had poor access to only one third of the country. Assistance to vulnerable populations in accessible areas also became increasingly difficult. Public social services collapsed and schools closed down prematurely. However, there were signs of hope that enabled greater humanitarian access and assistance, including the signing of the Accra Peace Agreement (see p. 192), the inauguration of an interim president and the arrival of Economic Community of West African States troops in early August. As a result, the humanitarian community was able to return to the capital, Monrovia, in mid-August.

Sierra Leone

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Relief and Recovery for Sierra Leone sought $126 million to assist 1.3 million beneficiaries in 2003. Of the total, 75.6 per cent ($95.1 million) was received from the donor community.

The stable environment in Sierra Leone enabled continued opportunities for reintegration and recovery efforts and accelerated repatriation, while the instability in Liberia generated additional influxes of refugees. Although progress was achieved in meeting humanitarian and recovery needs, delays in the commitment of resources early in the year hampered efforts to implement activities in time for the planting season and before the heavy rains undermined rehabilitation. Priorities for the country during the year included assistance and protection to Liberian refugees; support for the repatriation of Sierra Leonean refugees from neighbouring countries and for reintegration efforts; and enhanced delivery of education, health, agriculture, water and sanitation, and shelter services.

Southern Africa

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal in Response to the Humanitarian Crisis in Southern Africa, launched for a total of $464 million to cover 14.4 million beneficiaries from July 2003 to June 2004, received 65.9 per cent ($306 million) of the requirement.

Although conditions had improved in Southern Africa, primarily in the northern region, as a result of a massive humanitarian response and a reasonable 2002-2003 agricultural season, the overall levels of vulnerability remained high and the underlying causes of the crisis (food insecurity, HIV/AIDS, poor social and economic conditions) remained. The combination of a lack of funding for critical assistance activities and prospects for food production once again compromised by drought continued to expose millions to a life-threatening mix of vulnerability. However, longer-term prospects for addressing the crisis seemed healthier, as there were indications that resources to combat HIV/AIDS would become increasingly available.

Lesotho

For Lesotho, the UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal in Response to the Humanitarian Crisis in Southern Africa sought $3.6 million to cover assistance needs from July 2003 to June 2004, of which 25.9 per cent ($949,322) was received.

Pervasive HIV/AIDS continued to adversely impact livelihoods and incomes in Lesotho. Chronic poverty was still growing owing to the lack of employment opportunities to compensate for income losses due to retrenchment of migrant Basotho workers from South African mines and farms in Free State. For the third consecutive year, bad weather conditions led to drastically reduced agricultural production and severe food insecurity.

Malawi

For Malawi, the UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal in Response to the Humanitarian Crisis in Southern Africa sought $11 million to cover assistance from July 2003 to June 2004, of which 20.1 per cent ($2.2 million) was received.

While progress had been tangible in Malawi, the confluence of chronic poverty, HIV/AIDS and the regular disruptions to food security caused by variable rainfall, among other factors, indicated the need for ongoing emergency assistance. A shortage of qualified staff affected the quality of health services. Sanitation and water supply were of increasing concern as large inequities existed in the distribution of water. The macroeconomic environment had deteriorated, with inflation at 9.5 per cent in October.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/26 [draft: A/58/L.35 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (b)].

Emergency humanitarian assistance to Malawi

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions in particular, resolutions 46/182 of 19 December 1991, 54/219 and 54/233 of 22 December 1999, 55/163 of 14 December

2000 and 56/103 of 14 December 2001, and Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/32 of 26 July 2002,

Convinced that all people have the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of themselves and their families, including food, medical care, necessary social services and security in the event of lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond their control,

Noting that drought and other types of natural disasters have proved to be recurring phenomena in Malawi,

Reiterating that natural disasters damage the social and economic infrastructure of affected countries, although the long-term consequences of such natural disasters are especially severe for poor developing countries, including Malawi, and hamper sustainable development,

Concerned that Malawi continues to face natural catastrophes such as drought, floods and heavy rains, causing serious crop failure, loss of life and extensive damage to property and infrastructure,

Noting that an increasing number of cases of malnutrition, particularly among children, and deaths due to hunger-related diseases continue to occur in Malawi, with adverse long-term consequences,

Deeply alarmed that the rapid spread of HIV/AIDS has increased the vulnerability of communities, creating greater levels of dependency and severely reducing their ability to cope with humanitarian crises,

Gravely concerned that the capability of the national economy to absorb such shocks has been seriously eroded and that the frequent occurrence of extreme natural disasters has increasingly contributed to the stagnation of social and economic development,

Acknowledging that national efforts are critical to prevent the deepening of the humanitarian crisis,

Noting with appreciation the mobilization and allocation of resources by States, relevant organizations of the United Nations system and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to complement the national efforts of Malawi,

Aware that international cooperation remains a critical factor for the success of all national efforts to address the crisis situation,

1. Welcomes the positive role of the Government of Malawi in the relief operations, in particular the close coordination between the United Nations system and the Government;

2. Also welcomes the launching by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat of the consolidated appeal for Malawi on 18 July 2002 and the humanitarian appeal for 2004 on 18 November 2003, as well as the continued monitoring of the situation, including through the activities of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for Humanitarian Needs in Southern Africa;

3. Requests the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs to continue to seek ways and means of improving the effectiveness of the United Nations consolidated appeals process;

4. Calls upon all States to adopt, where required, and to continue to implement effectively, the legislative and other appropriate measures necessary to mitigate the effects of natural disasters, inter alia, in the areas of disaster prevention, including building regulations and appropriate land use, as well as early warning, disaster preparedness and capacity-building in disaster response, and in that context requests the international community to continue to assist Malawi as the need arises;

5. Emphasizes the importance of enhanced international cooperation, including with the United Nations and regional organizations, to assist Malawi in its efforts to build capacity and to predict, prepare for and respond to natural disasters;

6. Stresses, in that context, the need to further strengthen international cooperation in the provision of emergency humanitarian assistance in support of the efforts of Malawi to deal with natural disasters in all their phases, from relief and mitigation to development, including through the provision of adequate resources, and encourages the effective use of multilateral mechanisms;

7. Also stresses that emergency humanitarian assistance for natural disasters should be provided in accordance with the guiding principles contained in the annex to resolution 46/182, on the basis of human dimensions and needs;

8. Urges the international community to continue to support the efforts of Malawi to fight the HIV/AIDS pandemic, poverty and malnutrition in order to increase its capacity to cope during natural disasters;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly for consideration at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Mozambique

For Mozambique, the UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal in Response to the Humanitarian Crisis in Southern Africa sought $20 million to cover assistance from July 2003 to June 2004, of which 13.7 per cent ($2.8 million) was received.

Monitoring assessments, carried out in November, suggested that, while ongoing interventions had a significant effect in stabilizing the food security status of vulnerable people, the sustainability of progress was contingent on the rainy season in January-March 2004. The southern and central parts of the country remained extremely vulnerable due to the prevalence of HIV/AIDS. A growing concern was the unfolding orphan crisis due to AIDS.

Swaziland

For Swaziland, the UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal in Response to the Humanitarian Crisis in Southern Africa sought $6 million to cover assistance needs from July 2003 to June 2004, of which 39 per cent ($2.3 million) was received.

The humanitarian crisis in Swaziland arose from drought and land degradation, deepening poverty and HIV/AIDS, with mutually reinforcing disastrous effects. Many families that would have weathered the drought through family remittances or employment in local industries no longer had such coping mechanisms to rely on due to economic trends and the deaths of family breadwinners. Other coping mechanisms, such as selling assets and liquidating animal herds, were no longer available for most people.

Zambia

For Zambia, the UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal in Response to the Humanitarian Crisis in Southern Africa sought $15 million to cover assistance needs from July 2003 to June 2004, of which 22 per cent ($3.2 million) was received.

A good harvest and a favourable humanitarian response took Zambia off the critical list of countries requiring emergency food support. However, the recovery was fragile, as by December over 1 million people required emergency food assistance in the southern and western provinces. At the national level, the problems of HIV/AIDS, chronic malnutrition, water and sanitation had reached critical proportions and 73 per cent of the population were living in poverty.

Zimbabwe

For Zimbabwe, the UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal in Response to the Humanitarian Crisis in Southern Africa sought $95 million to cover assistance needs from July 2003 to December 2004, of which 12.8 per cent ($12.3 million) was received.

The general humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe did not improve in 2003. A combination of the constrained policy environment, economic decline, climatic instability and HIV/AIDS continued to plague the population. The cumulative effect of five years of humanitarian crisis had resulted in a dramatic depletion of the country's assets, including human health and productivity, essential services, and economic and vital natural resources.

Asia

Afghanistan

The Transitional Assistance Programme for Afghanistan (TAPA), which covered the period from January 2003 to March 2004, sought $728 million to assist 4.1 million people; as at late May, 31 per cent ($225 million) of the requirements were met.

TAPA sought to address the underlying causes of the crisis in Afghanistan—poverty, debt, environmental degradation, insecurity—as well as urgent recovery and reconstruction priorities. It provided support for mine/unexploded ordnance (UXO) victims, returned land for productive use, clearance for reconstruction projects and education for adults and children on the dangers of mines and UXO. TAPA prioritized integrated national and UN agency action in communities of return, to help assure sustainable livelihoods, essential community services, potable water supply and sanitation, and to address problems of debt and asset depletion. It also aimed to promote environmental protection and recovery, arrest environmental degradation, develop a national counter-narcotics strategy and address food insecurity.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/113 B (YUN 2002, p. 900), the Secretary-General, in a December report covering the period from July 2002 to November 2003 [A/58/616], described key political and humanitarian developments in Afghanistan (for political aspects, see p. 304).

The report stated that Afghanistan had made progress towards post-war recovery. Gross domestic product grew by 30 per cent and was expected to grow by a further 20 per cent in 2004. Other achievements included the rehabilitation of the national primary education system and the successful management of one of the largest UN-assisted refugee repatriation efforts in history. However, serious challenges remained, the most important being the creation of a secure environment in the south so that reconstruction activities could take place. Equally crucial were government efforts to extend its authority, enhance its administrative capacity and deliver socio-economic benefits nationwide. UN assistance was channelled through TAPA (see above), which reflected an agreement between the Transitional Administration and the United Nations to ensure that UN humanitarian programming supported the national priorities identified by the Government in the national development budget and strengthened the Government's implementation capacity.

During the review period, some 2.2 million highly vulnerable Afghans, mainly in the north, west and central highlands, received winter assistance. As at June 2003, some 10 million people had received 535,000 metric tons of food commodities; an estimated 6 million Afghans still required food assistance for the remainder of 2003. The majority of food aid projects focused on the restoration of agricultural opportunities, the recovery of agricultural land, seed stocks, irrigation systems, the rehabilitation of pasturelands and the recuperation of livestock, as well as environmental protection. The Ministry of Health, with donor support, focused on providing rural communities with access to primary care by year's end and was establishing an emergency obstetric care centre in each province. A birth registration campaign and national immunization days were launched for children. Progress was made in providing safe drinking water and sanitation facilities to schools, vulnerable villages affected by drought, communities with high numbers of refugee returns and camps for internally displaced persons. The main constraints of the sector were a low funding response, a shortage of sufficient implementing partners and appropriate drilling equipment, and insufficient capacities to plan and manage the sector.

School enrolment increased significantly and 292 schools countrywide were identified for rehabilitation or reconstruction. Efforts to reduce illiteracy among women were under way. Cultural sites and monuments were being restored, and national archives, public libraries and the Kabul theatre were rehabilitated. According to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), over 2.5 million individuals had received repatriation assistance since March 2002. Afghanistan, Iran and UNHCR signed a joint agreement in June 2003, which provided for the gradual return of some 1 million Afghans from Iran over the next two years. UNHCR suspended its repatriation programme from Pakistan in the wake of the killing of one of its staff members in November. Significant efforts were made to combat the threat of landmines and UXO. Road construction began in July on six sectors of the Kabul-Kandahar highway, totalling 439 kilometres. Reconstruction of the Salang Tunnel, the main road link between the north and the south, began in July.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December [meeting 70], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/27 B [draft: A/58/L.32 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (f)].

Emergency international assistance for peace, normalcy and reconstruction of war-stricken Afghanistan

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/113 B of 6 December 2002 and all other relevant resolutions,

Recalling also the agreement reached among various Afghan groups in Bonn, Germany, on 5 December 2001 and the International Conference on Reconstruction Assistance to Afghanistan, held in Tokyo on 21 and 22 January 2002,

Expressing its grave concern about the continuing effects of decades of conflict in Afghanistan, which have resulted in massive loss of life, extensive human suffering, serious violations of human rights, destruction of property, serious damage to the economic and social infrastructure, refugee flows and other forcible displacements of large numbers of people,

Mindful that Afghanistan is highly vulnerable to natural disasters and that some parts of its territory continue to be affected by serious drought,

Noting the accession of Afghanistan to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction,

Remaining deeply concerned about the problem of millions of anti-personnel landmines and unexploded ordnance, which constitutes a great danger for the civilian population and a major obstacle for the return of refugees and displaced populations and for the resumption of agricultural and other economic activities, the provision of humanitarian assistance and rehabilitation and reconstruction efforts,

Welcoming the positive steps taken so far towards an improved situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms for many Afghans, in particular women and children, and commending in this regard the positive role played by the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission and Afghan civil society organizations, while noting with grave concern, however, that there remain discriminatory practices that hinder the full enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Expressing its deep concern about reports of violations of human rights and of international humanitarian law in parts of the country,

Reminding the Transitional Administration and all Afghan groups of their commitment to respect human rights in the country, as contained in the Bonn Agreement,

Reaffirming the importance of the safety and security of the humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel in Afghanistan, and alarmed by the increase in attacks on humanitarian personnel, including Afghan nationals, in parts of the country,

Noting with concern that the increase in such attacks has limited access to certain areas of Afghanistan and led to inadequate conditions for the delivery of aid for internally displaced persons and vulnerable sectors of the civilian population,

Recognizing that a secure environment is indispensable for the safe and effective delivery and distribution of humanitarian assistance and is a precondition for rehabilitation, reconstruction efforts and long-term development, and welcoming the expansion of the mandate of the International Security Assistance Force to allow it, as resources permit, to support the Afghan Transitional Administration and its successors in the maintenance of security in areas of Afghanistan outside Kabul and its environs, so that the Afghan authorities, as well as the personnel of the United Nations and other international civilian personnel engaged, in particular, in reconstruction and humanitarian efforts, can operate in a secure environment, and to provide security assistance for the performance of other tasks in support of the Bonn Agreement,

Welcoming the ownership of the rehabilitation and reconstruction efforts by the Transitional Administration through the National Development Framework and national budget,

Reiterating the importance of a seamless transition from humanitarian relief to the rehabilitation and reconstruction of Afghanistan, and welcoming the important contribution that the integrated approach of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan and of members of the donor community has made in this regard,

Expressing its appreciation to the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Afghanistan and the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan for their continued efforts in coordinating, planning and implementing humanitarian and other assistance in cooperation with the Transitional Administration,

Welcoming the return of large numbers of refugees and internally displaced persons, while noting with concern that displacement remains a widespread phenomenon and that the conditions in certain parts of Afghanistan are not yet conducive to safe and sustainable returns to places of origin,

Expressing gratitude to those countries that continue to host Afghan refugee populations, and at the same time once again calling upon all groups to continue to fulfil their obligations for the protection of refugees and internally displaced persons and to allow international access for their protection and care,

Expressing its appreciation to the United Nations system and to all States and international and non-governmental organizations whose international and local staff continue to respond positively to the humanitarian needs of Afghanistan, as well as to the Secretary-General for mobilizing and coordinating the delivery of appropriate humanitarian assistance,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Stresses that the responsibility for the solution of the humanitarian crisis lies above all with the Afghan people themselves, and urges them to continue their efforts to achieve national reconciliation;

3. Urges all Afghan groups to actively support the Transitional Administration in meeting the responsibilities under the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction, to cooperate fully with the mine action programme coordinated by the United Nations and to execute the destruction of all existing stocks of landmines;

4. Stresses the coordinating role of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Afghanistan for the United Nations system in ensuring a seamless transition from humanitarian relief to the rehabilitation and reconstruction of Afghanistan, including the cooperation of the United Nations system with other actors in the international community, in particular with the international financial institutions;

5. Commends the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan and the Emergency Relief Coordinator for the work accomplished;

6. Welcomes the recent substantial contributions to the Law and Order Trust Fund, and at the same time regrets that the funding provided to the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund and the Law and Order Trust Fund, which were designed to contribute to the mobilization of international support to Afghanistan, remains inadequate;

7. Urges the international community to actively participate in and financially contribute to these rehabilitation and reconstruction efforts, and encourages the international community to channel assistance through the national development budget of the Afghan Transitional Administration and to focus attention on building the capacity of Afghans;

8. Strongly condemns the recent deliberate attacks and all other acts of violence and intimidation directed against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, and regrets the loss of life and physical harm suffered among such staff;

9. Urges the Transitional Administration and local authorities to ensure the safety, security and free movement of all United Nations and humanitarian personnel, as well as their safe and unimpeded access to all affected populations, and to protect the property of the United Nations and of humanitarian organizations, including non-governmental organizations;

10. Notes the ratification by Afghanistan of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women on 5 March 2003, and at the same time strongly condemns once again continuing discrimination against women and girls, as well as against persons belonging to ethnic and religious groups, including minorities;

11. Emphasizes the importance of actively involving all elements of Afghan society, in particular women, in the development and implementation of relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction programmes;

12. Reminds all Afghan groups of their commitment to the Bonn Agreement, and calls upon them to respect fully the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all, without discrimination of any kind, including on the basis of gender, ethnicity or religion, in accordance with their obligations under international law, and to protect and promote the equal rights of women and men;

13. Welcomes the start of the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process by the Transitional Administration and the efforts of the international observer group to verify the fairness of the process, and calls upon the international community to assist the Transitional Administration in these efforts;

14. Also welcomes, in this regard, the accession of the Transitional Administration on 24 September 2003 to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict, and urges Afghan groups to refrain from the recruitment or use of children contrary to international standards, while stressing the importance of demobilizing and reintegrating child soldiers and other war-affected children;

15. Emphasizes the necessity of investigating allegations of violations of human rights and of international humanitarian law, including violations committed against persons belonging to ethnic and religious minorities, as well as against women and girls, of facilitating the provision of efficient and effective remedies to the victims and of bringing the perpetrators to justice in accordance with international law;

16. Appeals to the Transitional Administration and the international community to mainstream gender issues into all humanitarian assistance and future rehabilitation and reconstruction programmes and to actively promote the full and equal participation of and benefit to both women and men in respect of those programmes, underlining the importance of a senior gender adviser position in this context;

17. Calls upon the Transitional Administration to provide Afghan children with educational and health facilities in all parts of the country, recognizing the special needs of girls, and to ensure their full access to those facilities;

18. Expresses its appreciation to those Governments that continue to host Afghan refugees, and reminds them of their obligations under international refugee law with respect to the protection of refugees and the right to seek asylum;

19. Calls upon the Transitional Administration, acting with the support of the international community, to create the conditions for the voluntary, safe, dignified and sustainable return of Afghan refugees and internally displaced persons, welcomes in this respect the initiation of the National Area-Based Development Programme and the National Solidarity Programme, and calls upon the international community to provide adequate funding to these programmes which, inter alia, assist in the resettlement of Afghan refugees and internally displaced persons;

20. Urges donors to fulfil promptly the funding commitments made in Tokyo at the International Conference on Reconstruction Assistance to Afghanistan and reiterated in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, on 21 September 2003, and invites them to provide additional resources beyond those pledged so far;

21. Urgently appeals to all States, the United Nations system and international and non-governmental organizations to continue to provide, in close collaboration with the Transitional Administration and Afghan civil society, all possible and necessary humanitarian, financial, technical and material assistance for the Afghan population, inter alia, a minimal degree of health care and health services in all parts of the country;

22. Calls upon the international community to continue and strengthen its coordination of humanitarian assistance to Afghanistan, bearing in mind the role of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan;

23. Also calls upon the international community to respond generously and without delay to the national development budget, as well as long-term interventions towards rehabilitation and reconstruction;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly every four months during its fifty-eighth session on the progress of the United Nations and the efforts of his Special Representative to promote peace in Afghanistan, and to report to the Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on progress made in the implementation of the present resolution;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the sub-item entitled "Emergency international assistance for peace, normalcy and reconstruction of war-stricken Afghanistan".

In resolution 58/27 A of the same date (see p. 304), the Assembly called on the international community to support the efforts of the Transitional Administration.

Democratic People's Republic of Korea

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), launched for a total of $229 million to cover assistance for 6.4 million beneficiaries, received 58.1 per cent ($133 million) of requirements.

The humanitarian situation in the DPRK was impacted by increasing security tension on the peninsula following the re-emergence of the nuclear issue. While most donors continued to separate politics from humanitarian aid, the serious deterioration in the external environment affected the level of assistance to the country. The situation was compounded by the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) epidemic. While no SARS was reported in the DPRK, national authorities took measures beyond the World Health Organization (WHO) technical measures to prevent the introduction of the disease into the country, which were seen as an overriding need to avoid a SARS outbreak.

Indonesia

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Indonesia, which sought $55 million to assist 3 million beneficiaries in 2003, received 55.3 per cent ($31 million) of the requirements.

Significant progress had been made in restoring relative social and political stability in most of the conflict-affected regions of Indonesia, enabling thousands of internally displaced persons to return to their villages of origin. Humanitarian and development assistance continued to be required to help the Government rehabilitate infrastructure, restore social services facilities and assist the communities affected by the conflict.

Iraq

A Flash Appeal for the Humanitarian Requirements of the Iraq Crisis sought $2,223 million to cover assistance from April to December 2003, of which the donor community committed 90.9 per cent ($2,020 million).

Although the conflict had not resulted in a major humanitarian crisis, the humanitarian situation in Iraq remained serious. The high levels of vulnerability and dependence on government services that existed before the conflict had increased further. The conflict and its aftermath resulted in a widespread breakdown of essential services, severely affecting the population. The lack of security and law and order remained the most serious obstacle to the restoration of basic services and the humanitarian community's ability to conduct assistance activities. It also had a severe impact on the lives of women and children in their ability to access basic services and live normal lives.

Palestine

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which sought $294 million to assist 1.5 million people in 2003, received 60.5 per cent ($178 million) of the requirements.

Israel's closure policy, involving checkpoints and roadblocks, had crippled the Palestinian economy. The situation was further compounded by continued expansion of settlements and bypass roads. The number of Palestinians unable to cope had increased, with 60 per cent living below the poverty line and 40 per cent of the workforce unemployed. Half the population was unable to access their usual health services due to closures and curfews. Children's school performance declined due to a disruption of school life. Assistance focused on recovery and infrastructure, food aid, health, education and psychosocial services.

Tajikistan

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Tajikistan, which sought $62 million to assist 1 million people in 2003, received 78.5 per cent ($49 million) of the requirements.

Despite positive economic growth indicators for Tajikistan, there was little change in the humanitarian context for the most vulnerable groups. Complex and deep-rooted poverty had left many families with few, if any, coping mechanisms for survival, triggering internal population movements and labour migration to neighbouring countries. Lack of access to food and productive resources, including land, seeds and water, remained the root of food insecurity. The weakened capacity of families to look after their children resulted in increasing numbers of street children and children in conflict with the law. Nearly 20 per cent of the country's schools were destroyed during the civil war, while about 80 per cent of the remaining schools were in need of major repair. With 43 per cent of the population not having access to safe drinking water, unprotected water reservoirs and irrigation canals were the main source of water for many households and public facilities. Outbreaks of water-borne diseases and epidemic levels of malaria and tuberculosis regularly overwhelmed national capacities.

Europe

North Caucasus (Russian Federation)

The UN Consolidated Inter-Agency Appeal for Chechnya and Neighbouring Republics (North Caucasus-Russian Federation), which sought $30 million to assist 1.2 million beneficiaries, received 91.1 per cent ($28 million) of the requirements.

The situation in Chechnya and neighbouring republics continued to be characterized by complexity, instability and unpredictability. Low-intensity hostilities continued in some regions, sometimes resulting in civilian casualties. Chechnya remained one of the world's areas most heavily affected by landmines and UXO. Insecurity remained the biggest hindrance to providing aid to the population and the largest obstacle to recovery and economic development. Pervasive unemployment gave rise to the need for food aid and access to social services, such as potable water, health care and education.

---

Special economic assistance

---

On 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on special economic assistance to individual countries or regions would remain on the agenda of its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

African economic recovery and development

New Partnership for Africa's Development

The General Assembly, by resolutions 57/2 [YUN 2002, p. 908] and 57/7 [ibid., p. 910], decided to bring the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s [YUN 1991, p. 402] to a close and endorsed the Secretary-General's recommendation [YUN 2002, p. 909] that the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD), adopted in 2001 by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity (African Union (AU)) [YUN 2001, p. 900], should be the framework within which the international community should concentrate its efforts for Africa's development.

Reports of Secretary-General. In February, the Commission for Social Development (see p. 1099) considered a report of the Secretary-General on national and international cooperation for social development [E/CN.5/2003/5 & Corr.1], which discussed NEPAD in the context of State to State partnerships.

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/7, the Secretary-General, in August, submitted the first consolidated report [A/58/254] on progress made to implement and support NEPAD. The report was compiled from information provided by the NEPAD secretariat and from information and data generated from responses to questionnaires sent to Member States and UN agencies and organizations. It also drew on ideas and suggestions from meetings with the private sector and civil society groups on NEPAD.

Regarding implementation activities by African countries, the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the AU (second ordinary session, Maputo, Mozambique, 10-12 July) [A/58/626] adopted a declaration on NEPAD's implementation. The African Peer Review Mechanism—a mutually agreed instrument voluntarily acceded to by AU members as an African self-monitoring, peer-review and peer-learning mechanism—was established and acceded to by 16 members as at July. The Mechanism, which was fundamental to the implementation of the NEPAD priorities of political, economic and corporate governance, had as its primary purpose to foster the adoption of policies, standards and practices that led to political stability and economic growth. Several African countries had taken steps to create a national focal point for NEPAD, and the work programmes of the regional economic communities were reoriented to reflect NEPAD priorities. At the sectoral level, a plan for comprehensive African agricultural development had been completed. NEPAD was also working with the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS to prepare a multisectoral AIDS strategy, and had developed a full programme on the environment, which was approved at the second ordinary session of the AU Assembly of Heads of State and Government. Constraints to implementation by African countries were a weak link between the Heads of State and Government Implementation Committee and the regional economic communities; weak institutional capacity to plan and implement the development programmes at the country and regional levels; a lack of sufficient effort in popularizing NEPAD at the country level; and inadequate funding.

Assistance to Africa by the international community through increases in official development assistance (ODA) had been directed to critical sectors, particularly health and education. Closely related to the increase in the volume of ODA was an effort at improving aid effectiveness, including steps by donor countries to untie their aid. It was expected that African countries would benefit from the Rome Declaration on Harmonization, adopted by the heads of multilateral and bilateral development institutions and representatives of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), other multilateral financial institutions and partner countries (Rome, 24-25 February) [A/57/763] to simplify and harmonize programming, reporting and disbursement procedures. Several donor countries made pledges to meet the estimated shortfall of $1 billion in the Trust Fund for the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative. In addition, some HIPC-eligible African countries had benefited from bilateral debt cancellations announced by several donor countries. In the area of trade, there had been a limited positive international policy response, mainly centring on the granting by some developed countries of duty-free and quota-free access to products of African least developed countries. A number of Africa's partner countries took steps to assist the promotion of foreign direct investment in Africa. The trend towards increased economic and technical cooperation between Africa and other developing regions, especially with countries in Asia and Latin America and the Caribbean, continued. Intergovernmental events offering impetus for cooperation between African and Asian countries were the Asian-African Subregional Organizations Conference (Bandung, Indonesia, 29-30 July), the third Tokyo International Conference on African Development (Tokyo, Japan, 29 September-2 October) and the Second Ministerial Conference of the China-Africa Cooperation Forum (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, December). Challenges to support to Africa included insufficient levels of ODA for Africa to meet the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51] and problems within the HIPC Initiative, such as the slow redemption of pledges to the HIPC Trust Fund and a combination of difficulties in preparing poverty reduction strategy papers (PRSPs) and implementing macroeconomic reforms.

Several UN agencies and organizations had aligned their activities with NEPAD priorities. The UN system had also developed an operational framework to support NEPAD at the national, regional and global levels and adopted the cluster approach for pooling its efforts in support of NEPAD. Various UN system entities were engaged in human and institutional development efforts to support NEPAD, and were working with African regional and subregional organizations on policy issues. The Secretary-General established the Office of the Under-Secretary-General and Special Adviser on Africa, effective 1 May, which served as the focal point for NEPAD at Headquarters and supported the promotion of a coordinated, system-wide response to assist Africa's development, particularly implementation of NEPAD, through CEB. The Secretary-General issued a report on the future engagement of the UN system with NEPAD (see p. 939).

The private sector had responded favourably to NEPAD. A NEPAD Business Group, formed to promote cooperation between NEPAD and the private companies that supported it, shared information on trade and investment opportunities in Africa and encouraged private sector involvement in NEPAD and other projects. The African Business Round Table, in collaboration with the United Nations Industrial Development Organization and other sponsors, organized the NEPAD-Economic Community of West African States Business Forum (Abuja, Nigeria, 3-5 March), which underlined the need for more forums modelled on the Abuja meeting, for business associations to disseminate information on NEPAD and for promoting the establishment of business consultative groups to monitor the recommendations of the Forum. The Africa Economic Summit 2003 of the World Economic Forum (Durban, South Africa, June) examined how business could play its part in NEPAD implementation and assist African Governments. Several factors continued to impede private sector development in Africa, including the poor policy environment in most countries; weak institutional mechanisms for policy dialogue and consultation between the corporate sector and the Government in some countries; poor infrastructure facilities; the lack of an enabling governance environment; and limited use of public-private partnerships to address NEPAD priorities. Major constraints for civil society included lack of communication between and among civil society organizations, Government and the private sector and between civil society organizations and the NEPAD secretariat; a lack of resources to implement NEPAD; poor coordination and synergy among civil society organizations in their engagement with NEPAD; and the tendency of African Governments to cooperate mainly with organizations that were created or financed by donors or government departments, while often neglecting others.

The Secretary-General proposed that African countries take measures to integrate NEPAD priorities into their development process; development partners strive to achieve coherence and complementarity in their trade and aid policies; and the private sector and civil society adopt a proactive orientation towards NEPAD.

UN future engagement with NEPAD

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, responding to a 2002 request of the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), submitted an April report [E/AC.51/2003/6] on the future engagement of the UN system with NEPAD, which described the UN system's role in support of NEPAD as mandated by the General Assembly in resolution 57/7 [YUN 2002, p. 910]. A three-tier operational framework was in place to help implement NEPAD. At the country level, the main framework for engaging with African Governments would be the United Nations Development Assistance Framework and the common country assessments, complemented by PRSPs. At the regional level, the framework for coordination and collaboration among UN entities would be the regional consultative meetings, chaired by the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA), working among the five clusters corresponding to the NEPAD priorities under the convenership of a UN agency: infrastructure development (ECA), governance, peace and security (UNDP), agriculture, trade and market access (Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations); environment, population and urbanization (UN Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat)); and human resources development, employment and HIV/AIDS (United Nations Children's Fund).

At the global level, CEB was providing oversight and policy guidance, while the new Office of the Special Adviser on Africa would assist the Secretary-General in the coordination of global advocacy and support to NEPAD.

The report concluded that NEPAD's implementation was a work in progress and the UN system had demonstrated a strong commitment to adopting a coherent framework. The active involvement of the NEPAD secretariat and the AU Commission at virtually every stage of the UN system's support to NEPAD augured well for the idea of partnership embodied in NEPAD.

CPC action. CPC, at its forty-third session (New York, 9 June-3 July and 9 July) [A/58/16], recommended that relevant UN system organizations assume the role of convener of the clusters, consistent with their fields of competence and capacity, while avoiding inter-agency rivalry, and strengthening coordination and collaboration so as to ensure their effective involvement in providing added value to NEPAD's implementation. CPC stressed that the coordination function should be carried out at the regional and subregional levels by ECA and coordinated by the Office of the Special Adviser on Africa. It stressed the need for CEB to keep under regular review the issue of inter-agency coordination on NEPAD. The Committee recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to report in 2004 on the further future engagement of the UN system with NEPAD and to submit an annual progress report on the implementation of NEPAD.

Following consideration of the proposed revisions to programme 8, UN support for NEPAD, of the medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005 [A/58/83], CPC recommended that the Assembly approve the revisions with modifications as set out in its report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 42], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2003/26], adopted resolution 2003/13 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

National and international cooperation for social development: implementation of the social objectives of the New Partnership for Africa's Development

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the World Summit for Social Development, held in Copenhagen from 6 to 12 March 1995, and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly entitled "World Summit for Social Development and beyond: achieving social development for all in a globalizing world", held in Geneva from 26 June to 1 July 2000,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 56/218 of 21 December 2001, by which the Assembly established the Ad Hoc Committee of the Whole of the General Assembly for the Final Review and Appraisal of the Implementation of the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s to conduct, during the fifty-seventh session of the Assembly, the final review and appraisal of the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s and related initiatives on the basis of the report of the Secretary-General on the independent high-level quality evaluation, as well as on the basis of proposals by the Secretary-General on the modalities of the future engagement of the United Nations with the New Partnership for Africa's Development, and Assembly resolution 56/508 of 27 June 2002,

Reaffirming the United Nations Millennium Declaration of 8 September 2000, the United Nations Declaration on the New Partnership for Africa's Development of 16 September 2002 and General Assembly resolution 57/7 of 4 November 2002 on the final review and appraisal of the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s and support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development,

Welcoming the adoption of the chapter VIII, entitled "Sustainable development for Africa", of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Cognizant of the link between the priorities of the New Partnership for Africa's Development and the Millennium Declaration, in which the international community committed itself to addressing the special needs of Africa, and of the need to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including those set out in the Millennium Declaration,

Bearing in mind the reports of the Secretary-General of 20 June 1995 and 12 June 2001, submitted to the Economic and Social Council at its high-level segments devoted to the consideration of the development of Africa,

Bearing in mind also that, while the primary responsibility for the development of Africa remains with African countries, the international community has a stake in that development and in supporting the efforts of those countries in that regard,

Underlining the fact that international cooperation based on a spirit of partnership and solidarity among all countries contributes to creating an enabling environment conducive to the achievement of the goals of social development,

Recognizing the urgent need to continue to assist African countries in their efforts to diversify their economies as well as enhance capacity-building and promote regional cooperation,

Recognizing also the serious challenges facing social development in Africa, in particular illiteracy, poverty and HIV/AIDS,

1. Emphasizes that economic development, social development and environmental protection are interdependent and mutually reinforcing components of sustainable development;

2. Recognizes that, while social development is primarily the responsibility of Governments, international cooperation and assistance are essential for the full achievement of that goal;

3. Reiterates the importance of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to development;

4. Reaffirms the need to strengthen, inter alia, in a spirit of partnership, international, regional and sub-regional cooperation for social development and implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly entitled "World Summit for Social Development and beyond: achieving social development for all in a globalizing world";

5. Also reaffirms the need for effective partnership and cooperation between Governments and the relevant actors of civil society for the achievement of social development;

6. Welcomes the New Partnership for Africa's Development as a programme of the African Union for peace and sustainable development that embodies the vision and commitment of all African Governments and peoples;

7. Stresses the need for renewed political will at the national, regional and international levels to invest in people and their well-being so as to achieve the objectives of social development;

8. Emphasizes that democracy, respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms, transparent and accountable governance and administration in all sectors of society, as well as effective participation by civil society, are among the indispensable foundations for the realization of social and people-centred sustainable development;

9. Also emphasizes the New Partnership objectives of eradicating poverty in Africa and placing African countries, both individually and collectively, on a path of sustainable growth and development and thus facilitating Africa's participation in the globalization process;

10. Underlines the need for effective partnership and cooperation between Governments and the relevant actors of civil society, including non-governmental organizations and the private sector, in the implementation of and follow-up to the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, and the need for ensuring, within the framework of the New Partnership, their involvement in the planning, elaboration, implementation and evaluation of social policies at the national, regional and international levels;

11. Welcomes with appreciation actions already under way at the regional level to organize the activities of the United Nations system around thematic clusters covering the priority areas of the New Partnership, and in this regard urges the strengthening of that process as a means of enhancing the coordinated response of the United Nations system in support of the New Partnership;

12. Stresses, in this context, the vital role of the United Nations in assisting Member States to achieve the development objectives and targets of the United Nations Millennium Declaration and to mainstream them in an integrated and coordinated manner in United Nations development activities;

13. Welcomes the commitment of African countries to peace, security, democracy, good governance, human rights and sound economic management, as well as their commitment to taking concrete measures to strengthen mechanisms for conflict prevention, management and resolution as embodied in the New Partnership, as an essential basis for sustainable development in Africa, and in this context welcomes the ongoing efforts of African countries to develop further the African peer review mechanism which is an important and innovative feature of the New Partnership;

14. Recognizes that illiteracy, poverty, HIV/AIDS and other major communicable diseases add challenges to Africa's development, and urges the international community to continue to increase its assistance to African countries in their efforts to address these challenges;

15. Urges the international community and the United Nations system to organize support for African countries in accordance with the principles, objectives and priorities of the New Partnership in the new spirit of partnership;

16. Invites the international financial institutions to ensure that their support for Africa is compatible with the principles, objectives and priorities of the New Partnership;

17. Urges the United Nations system, in coordinating its activities at the national, regional and global levels, to foster a coherent response, inter alia, through close collaboration with bilateral donors in the implementation of the New Partnership in response to the needs of individual countries within the larger framework of the New Partnership;

18. Welcomes the decision of the General Assembly to invite the Economic and Social Council, pursuant to its role in respect of system-wide coordination, to consider how to support the objectives of Assembly resolution 57/7;

19. Calls upon the Secretary-General, in his efforts to harmonize the current initiatives on Africa, to enhance coordination between the United Nations and the specialized agencies, programmes and funds of the United Nations system;

20. Acknowledges the reflection by the Secretary-General of the social dimensions of the New Partnership in his report on the priority theme for the forty-first session of the Commission for Social Development, "National and international cooperation for social development", and invites him to continue to reflect those dimensions in future reports submitted to the Commission on its priority themes;

21. Recommends that the Commission for Social Development continue to give due prominence to the social dimensions of the New Partnership in its future priority themes;

22. Decides to bring the present resolution to the attention of the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session during its consideration of the agenda item entitled "New Partnership for Africa's Development: progress in implementation and international support".

The Council, on 24 July, decided to consider, pursuant to its role in respect of system-wide coordination, how to support the objectives of General Assembly resolution 57/7 at its resumed session in 2003 (decision 2003/282).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/233 [draft: A/58/L.17/Rev.1 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 39 (a)].

New Partnership for Africa's Development: progress in implementation and international support

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/2 of 16 September 2002 on the United Nations Declaration on the New Partnership for Africa's Development,

Recalling also its resolution 57/7 of 4 November 2002 on the final review and appraisal of the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s and support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development,

Recalling further its resolution 57/297 of 20 December 2002 on the Second Industrial Development Decade for Africa,

Mindful of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, the Doha Ministerial Declaration, the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Noting with appreciation the commitment of the international community in its support of the New Partnership, and welcoming in this regard the outcome of the third Tokyo International Conference on African Development,

Noting with appreciation also that the Group of Eight summit in Evian, France, in June 2003 devoted a significant part of its deliberations to the New Partnership, welcoming in this regard the endorsement of the report on the implementation of the Group of Eight Africa Action Plan, and also welcoming the inaugural meeting, in Paris in November 2003, of the Africa Partnership Forum in support of the New Partnership,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled "The New Partnership for Africa's Development: first consolidated report on progress in implementation and international support",

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms its full support for the implementation of the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

3. Recognizes the progress made in the implementation of the New Partnership and regional and international support for the New Partnership;

4. Also recognizes that much needs to be done to achieve the objectives of the New Partnership, particularly with regard to economic growth and poverty reduction;

5. Reaffirms that the international community, Africa and its development partners should further cooperate with one another to achieve the objectives and priorities of the New Partnership, on the basis of the principles of ownership and partnership;

6. Calls upon Member States and the international community, and invites the United Nations system, to enhance their support for the implementation of the New Partnership, in accordance with its principles, objectives and priorities;

I

Action by African countries and organizations

7. Notes with satisfaction efforts made by the African countries in fulfilling their commitments, in implementation of the New Partnership for Africa's Development, to deepen democracy, human rights, good governance and sound economic management, and encourages African countries to continue to strengthen their efforts in this regard by developing and strengthening institutions for governance and the development of the region;

8. Welcomes the efforts of African countries in the management and resolution of conflicts in the region, in particular their determination to establish a Peace and Security Council within the African Union, African mediation in a number of conflicts and the efforts of the African Union and African regional organizations to develop their capabilities for peace-support operations;

9. Takes note of the adoption of the Memorandum of Understanding on the African Peer Review Mechanism, signed in Abuja on 9 March 2003, and welcomes in this regard the progress made with respect to the Mechanism, in particular the accession of a number of States members of the African Union and the appointment of the panel of eminent persons, and encourages other States members of the African Union to accede to the Mechanism as well;

10. Welcomes the priorities identified in the New Partnership and the progress made in the development of programmes in the areas of agricultural development, environment and infrastructure development, as well as the ongoing work in the areas of health and education and science and technology;

11. Also welcomes the efforts of African countries to fulfil their commitments to promote gender equality, the empowerment of women and the mainstreaming of gender perspectives in the implementation of the New Partnership;

12. Further welcomes the adoption by the African Union in Maputo, on 12 July 2003, of the Convention on the Prevention and Combating of Corruption;

13. Encourages African countries to take further concrete steps to deepen the process of integrating the priorities of the New Partnership into their national development plans and frameworks, including poverty reduction strategies, where they exist, to mobilize public and political support for the New Partnership, to develop sound programmes in the designated priority areas of the New Partnership and to mobilize resources for those priority areas;

14. Emphasizes the role of national focal points in monitoring the implementation of the New Partnership and the need to build and strengthen human and institutional capacities in order to effectively implement it in all its aspects;

15. Also emphasizes that regional economic communities are effective vehicles for the development and integration of the African continent, and in this regard calls for the strengthening of their role in the coordination and implementation of programmes and projects of the New Partnership at the subregional level;

16. Encourages the further integration of the priorities and objectives of the New Partnership into the programmes of the regional structures and organizations, as well as programmes for the African least developed countries;

17. Calls upon African countries to promote the development and strengthening of their domestic private sectors and to facilitate their effective involvement in the growth and development of, and economic integration among, the African economies;

18. Recognizes the efforts of African countries to raise awareness of the New Partnership and to involve all African stakeholders, namely, Governments, the private sector and civil society, including women's organizations and community-based organizations, in its implementation;

19. Welcomes the decision taken by the Executive Council of the African Union in Maputo to integrate the New Partnership into the African Union structures and processes;

II

Action by the international community

20. Welcomes the pledges of increased official development assistance made by many of the development partners, also welcomes the contributions that have been made, and urges that partners take steps to continue to disburse the assistance they have pledged;

21. Notes with satisfaction that some developed countries have untied their official development assistance, and encourages countries that have not yet done so to untie their aid, in accordance with the relevant recommendation of the Development Assistance Committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development;

22. Calls upon the international community, relevant multilateral institutions and developed countries to enhance coherence in their trade, investment and aid policies towards African countries;

23. Stresses the need to find a durable solution to the problem of external indebtedness of heavily indebted poor countries in Africa, including through debt cancellation and other arrangements, and the need to encourage innovative mechanisms to comprehensively address the debt problem of low- and middle-income African countries, bearing in mind that external debt relief can release resources that may be utilized in the successful implementation of the New Partnership for Africa's Development, taking into account initiatives that have been taken to reduce outstanding indebtedness and the need to pursue debt relief measures vigorously and expeditiously, including within the context of the Paris Club, the London Club and other relevant forums;

24. Welcomes the actions taken by creditor countries within the framework of the Paris Club and by some creditor countries through the cancellation of bilateral debts, urges all creditor countries to participate in efforts to remedy the external debt and debt-servicing problems of African countries, notes the Evian Approach of the Paris Club of October 2003, and also notes that debt relief does not replace alternative sources of financing;

25. Encourages developed countries and other partners to support the promotion of private investment in African countries from their countries, in particular in the key productive sectors of the economy, to provide investment guarantees for such investment and to support policies of African countries aimed at promoting a conducive environment to attract foreign investment;

26. Underlines the need to take concrete steps to implement existing frameworks and programmes of South-South cooperation, including through triangular cooperation in support of the New Partnership;

27. Acknowledges the activities in African countries of the Bretton Woods institutions and of the African Development Bank, and encourages them to continue their support for the implementation of the priorities and objectives of the New Partnership;

28. Notes the growing collaboration among the entities of the United Nations system in support of the New Partnership, and requests the Secretary-General to promote greater coherence in the work of the United Nations system in support of the New Partnership, on the basis of the agreed clusters;

29. Calls upon the United Nations funds, programmes and specialized agencies to strengthen further their existing coordination and programming mechanisms, as well as the simplification and harmonization of planning, disbursement and reporting procedures, as a means of enhancing support for African countries in the implementation of the New Partnership;

30. Notes that the entities of the United Nations system have been actively using the regional consultation mechanism as a vehicle for fostering collaboration and coordination at the regional level, and encourages them to intensify their efforts in developing and implementing joint programmes in support of the New Partnership at the regional level;

31. Requests the United Nations system to continue to provide assistance to the secretariat of the New Partnership and to African countries in developing projects and programmes within the scope of the priorities of the New Partnership;

32. Welcomes the cooperation and the support granted by the United Nations to the African regional and subregional organizations in conflict prevention and conflict management, takes note with appreciation of the work carried out by the Economic and Social Council ad hoc advisory groups on African countries emerging from conflict, while looking forward to the evaluation of their work during the substantive session of the Council in 2004, and encourages the pursuit of these activities in support of African efforts for conflict prevention and conflict management and in post-conflict situations;

33. Also welcomes the creation of the Office of the Special Adviser on Africa, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to take measures to strengthen the Office to enable it to effectively fulfil its mandate;

34. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the basis of inputs from Governments, organizations of the United Nations system and the other stakeholders in the New Partnership for Africa's Development, such as the private sector and civil society.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/146 [YUN 2002, p. 915], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/273], described economic recovery and reconstruction assistance provided by the UN system to the DRC.

A series of encouraging prospects for a peaceful resolution of the country's political crisis followed the signing of the Final Act of the inter-Congolese political negotiations in April (see p. 113). However, in May, after the withdrawal of Ugandan troops, the district of Ituri, particularly the city of Bunia, was the scene of violent clashes between ethnic Hema and Lendu militias, which triggered a major humanitarian crisis (for Security Council action, see p. 123). Those and other clashes weakened the ceasefire, continued to threaten the peace process and exacerbated the already precarious humanitarian situation. Despite significant macroeconomic advances, particularly in controlling inflation, the social situation remained precarious. The great majority of the population continued to live below the poverty line. Faced with the various challenges, UN system agencies provided technical, material and financial assistance to support the transition process, democratic governance and poverty reduction, and for emergency humanitarian assistance.

The Secretary-General encouraged all parties to the conflict in the DRC to pursue efforts to accelerate the establishment of the transitional institutions. He invited donors to stress their support for the efforts of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC) to ensure the disarmament, demobilization and repatriation of foreign armed groups and to encourage the Government of Rwanda and its allies to cooperate with MONUC for that purpose; the multinational financial institutions and DRC's principal creditors to speed up the country's admission to the HIPC Initiative in order to alleviate its debt service; and development partners to support the implementation of financial mechanisms designed to discharge the public debt, and to cover the funding shortfall of the Emergency Multisectoral Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Programme 2003-2005, approved by the Congolese parties, and support civil service reform and efforts to reunify the country.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/123 [draft: A/58/L.31/Rev.1 & Add.1] by recorded vote (169-1) [agenda item 40 (b)].

Special assistance for the economic recovery and reconstruction of the Democratic Republic of the Congo

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on special assistance for the economic recovery and reconstruction of the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Recalling also all resolutions of the Security Council and the statements by its President regarding the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Reaffirming the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and all States in the region,

Gravely concerned at the dire humanitarian, economic and social situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and at the effects on the inhabitants of the continued fighting in the eastern part, resulting in the continuing plight of the civilian population, and calling for its protection, taking into account the particular needs of women and girls,

Deeply concerned at the HIV/AIDS pandemic, and at its disproportionate effect on women and girls,

Expressing its deep concern at the dire consequences of the conflict for the humanitarian and human rights situations in the country, and at the continuing lack of sufficient access to vulnerable people,

Gravely concerned by the continued illegal exploitation of the natural resources of the Democratic Republic of the Congo as a source of further conflict, and reaffirming in this regard its commitment to respect the sovereignty of the Democratic Republic of the Congo over its natural resources,

Gravely concerned also at the negative impact of war on the promotion of sustainable development in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Great Lakes region,

Deeply concerned about the continued extensive destruction of life and property, as well as the severe damage to infrastructure and the environment suffered by the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Bearing in mind the fact that the Democratic Republic of the Congo hosts thousands of refugees from neighbouring countries, which places a great burden on its limited resources, and expressing the hope that conditions will be created that facilitate a safe and voluntary return of refugees,

Recalling that the Democratic Republic of the Congo is a least developed country with severe economic and social problems arising from its weak economic infrastructure and aggravated by the ongoing conflict,

Bearing in mind the close interrelationship between ensuring peace and security and the ability of the country to meet the humanitarian needs of its people and to take effective steps towards the rapid revitalization of the economy, and reaffirming the urgent need to assist the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the rehabilitation and reconstruction of its damaged economy and in its efforts to restore basic services and the infrastructure of the country,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes the conclusion of the Global and All-Inclusive Agreement on the Transition in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, signed in Pretoria on 17 December 2002 and the subsequent establishment of the Government of National Unity and Transition, and encourages the effective establishment of all transitional institutions;

3. Also welcomes the declaration of Principles on Good-Neighbourly Relations and Cooperation between the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Burundi, Rwanda and Uganda, which marked the successful conclusion of the high-level meeting held on 25 September 2003 under the auspices of the Secretary-General;

4. Further welcomes the efforts of the Republic of South Africa, the Republic of Angola, and all the Central African countries, as well as the important role of the Secretary-General, in facilitating the adoption of these agreements;

5. Urges all parties concerned in the region to cease military activities and to cease any support for armed groups, and rather to use their influence to support the transition and bring all within the dynamic of the transition;

6. Strongly condemns the acts of violence, including the latest massacres in Ituri, systematically perpetrated against civilians, including the massacres, as well as other atrocities and violations of international humanitarian law and human rights, in particular sexual violence against women and girls, stresses the need to bring to justice those responsible, including those at the command level, and urges all parties, including the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, to take all necessary steps to prevent further violations of human rights and international humanitarian law, in particular those committed against civilians;

7. Welcomes the work of the Interim Emergency Multinational Force in Bunia led by the European Union, and the subsequent efforts of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to help secure the Ituri region;

8. Recognizes the importance of an effective withdrawal of all foreign troops from the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

9. Urges all parties concerned in the region to cease any recruitment, training and use of child soldiers, which are contrary to international law, welcomes the initial steps taken by the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to demobilize and reintegrate child soldiers, in particular through education, and urges the Government and all parties to continue their efforts in this context, and to take into account the particular needs of girl ex-combatants;

10. Invites donors to strengthen their support for the efforts of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to demobilize and repatriate armed groups currently in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and to encourage the transitional Government and all parties to the conflict to cooperate with the Organization Mission in achieving a climate of security and trust, the support of neighbouring countries in this process being essential;

11. Emphasizes that the consolidation of peace and the resumption of economic activity in the Democratic Republic of the Congo are inextricably linked, and calls for further international economic assistance in this regard;

12. Encourages the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to pursue the implementation of economic reforms aimed at stabilizing the macro-economic framework so that conditions for sustainable growth can be created;

13. Urges all parties to fully respect international humanitarian law and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel to all affected populations throughout the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the safety of United Nations and humanitarian personnel;

14. Calls upon the international community to increase its support for humanitarian relief activities within the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

15. Urges all parties to permit free and unhindered movement of the population, which is essential, inter alia, to the resumption of economic activities;

16. Expresses its deep concern especially at the very serious, dire humanitarian situation in Ituri, and calls on all Congolese parties on the ground to cooperate fully, in general, with the institutions of the transition, and, in particular, with the Ituri Pacification Commission;

17. Also expresses its deep concern over the dire humanitarian situation throughout the country and the very high number of internally displaced persons in the eastern part and, in particular, in the Ituri region, and urges all parties to avoid further population displacement and to facilitate the safe and voluntary return of refugees and internally displaced persons to their places of origin;

18. Stresses the importance of the restoration of river traffic, welcomes in this regard the reopening of the Congo and Oubangui Rivers, and expresses its support for the establishment of a Congo River Basin Commission;

19. Calls for the reopening of the Kisangani-Kindu rail and river link to facilitate the delivery of humanitarian assistance, as well as the resupply access for humanitarian personnel;

20. Encourages the continued cooperation of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo with the United Nations, the specialized agencies, international financial institutions and other organizations, including non-governmental organizations, in addressing the need for rehabilitation and reconstruction, and welcomes in this regard their renewed dialogue and cooperation;

21. Renews its urgent appeal to the executive boards of the United Nations funds and programmes to continue to keep under consideration the special needs of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and stresses the need to mainstream an appropriate gender perspective within overall reconstruction efforts;

22. Welcomes the inclusion of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative;

23. Urges the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to implement national comprehensive strategies to monitor and manage external liabilities, embedded in the domestic preconditions for debt sustainability, including sound macroeconomic and public resource management;

24. Welcomes initiatives that have been undertaken to reduce outstanding indebtedness, and invites further national and international measures in that direction, including, as appropriate, debt cancellation and other arrangements;

25. Invites the development partners to cover the funding shortfall of the Emergency Multisectoral Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Programme and support civil service reform and efforts to reunify the country;

26. Invites Governments to continue providing support to the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

27. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To ensure through his Special Representative for the Democratic Republic of the Congo, who convenes the International Committee in Support of the Transition, the coordination of all the activities of the United Nations system in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the facilitation of the coordination with other national and international actors of activities in support of the transition, and welcomes to that effect the adoption of new coordination mechanisms aimed at ensuring a coherent and effective response to the multifaceted humanitarian crisis in the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

(b) To continue to consult with regional leaders, in coordination with the President of the African Union, about ways to bring about a peaceful and durable solution to the conflict;

(c) To continue to consult with regional leaders, in coordination with the President of the African Union, in order to prepare an international conference on peace, security and development in Central Africa and in the Great Lakes region, under the auspices of the United Nations and the African Union, to address the problems of the region in a comprehensive manner;

(d) To keep under review the humanitarian and economic situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo with a view to promoting participation in and support for a programme of financial and material assistance to the country to enable it to meet urgent needs in terms of economic recovery and reconstruction;

(e) To submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the actions taken pursuant to the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/123:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland,

Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.
Against: Rwanda.

Djibouti

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/108 [YUN 2001, p. 853], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/58/285] describing the political and socio-economic situation in Djibouti and progress made in providing assistance for reconstruction and development over the past four years to March 2003.

Djibouti's development challenges were related to the country's economic and financial crisis, which resulted from civil strife and changes in the international and subregional context. In addition, recurring emergency situations, including drought, flood and epidemics, combined with large-scale destruction of livestock, water points and health and educational facilities as a result of the internal conflict, led to the large-scale movement of displaced populations and considerably increased Djibouti's need for further emergency and humanitarian assistance. As drought had affected both the rural and urban populations, there was an urgent need to make better use of rainwater and to explore country-wide water resources. Djibouti needed to rebuild much of the rural infrastructure to enable people to return to their homelands. Most schools, roads, hospitals, water facilities and dispensaries had to be reconstructed. Microcredit programmes and highly labour-intensive projects and programmes were needed to encourage people to return to their villages. Also needed was the promotion of income-generating activities. It was estimated that at least $100 million was required to mitigate the socio-economic impact of the civil war. Further assistance was necessary for governance, administrative reform and economic management, and to train national officials to contribute to the rebuilding of a fragile economy.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/116 (draft: A/58/L.41 & Add.1) without vote [agenda item 10 (b)].

Economic assistance for the reconstruction and development of Djibouti

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/108 of 14 December 2001 and its previous resolutions on economic assistance to Djibouti,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recalling further the Brussels Declaration and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries on 20 May 2001, as well as the mutual commitments undertaken on that occasion and the importance attached to follow-up and the implementation of the Programme of Action,

Aware that Djibouti is included in the list of least developed countries and that it is ranked 153rd out of the 175 countries studied in the Human Development Report 2003,

Noting that the economic and social development efforts of Djibouti are constrained by the extremes of the local climate, in particular cyclical droughts, and that the implementation of reconstruction and development programmes requires the deployment of substantial resources which exceed the limited capacity of the country,

Noting also that the situation in Djibouti has been made worse by the disastrous drought situation prevailing in the Horn of Africa and by the absence of natural resources, which continues to place serious constraints on the fragile economic, budgetary, social and administrative infrastructure of the country,

Expressing its concern at the severe shortage of drinkable water and the dramatic projected figures for the year 2020 as reflected in the report of the Secretary-General,

Noting with satisfaction that the Government of Djibouti is pursuing the implementation of a reform programme and is about to finalize with the international financial institutions a poverty reduction strategy paper,

Noting with gratitude the support provided by various countries, as well as intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to meet the humanitarian needs of the country,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Declares its solidarity with the Government and the people of Djibouti, who continue to face critical developmental and humanitarian challenges owing, in particular, to the scarcity of natural resources, coupled with harsh climatic conditions and the acute issue of water supply impacting on the development aspirations of the country;
3. Encourages the Government of Djibouti, despite difficult economic and regional situations, to continue its serious efforts towards the consolidation of democracy;
4. Notes with satisfaction the implementation of a reform programme by Djibouti, and in that context appeals to all Governments, international financial institutions, the specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to respond adequately to the financial and material needs of the country in line with the poverty reduction strategy paper;
5. Expresses its gratitude to the intergovernmental organizations and the specialized agencies of the United Nations for their contributions to the national rehabilitation of Djibouti, and invites them to continue their efforts;
6. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his continued efforts to make the international community aware of the difficulties faced by Djibouti, and welcomes his initiative to appoint a special envoy for humanitarian affairs for the Horn of Africa, with the objective of mobilizing resources for relief support as well as sustainable development;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue, in close cooperation with the Government of Djibouti, his efforts to mobilize resources necessary for an effective programme of financial, technical and material assistance to Djibouti;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the humanitarian situation of Djibouti and on the progress made with regard to economic assistance to Djibouti and the implementation of the present resolution.

African countries emerging from conflict

The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2002/1 [YUN 2002, p. 919], created an ad hoc advisory group, at the request of any African country emerging from conflict, to assess humanitarian and economic needs and develop a programme of long-term support.

In 2003, an Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi was established, while the Group on Guinea-Bissau, mandated by Council decision 2002/304 [YUN 2002, p. 920], continued its activities (see below).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/50 [draft: E/2003/L.22] without vote [agenda item 7 (h)].

Ad hoc advisory groups on African countries emerging from conflict

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2002/1 of 15 July 2002 on the establishment of an ad hoc advisory group on African countries emerging from conflict,

1. Reiterates the need to undertake an assessment of lessons learned based on the initial experience of such ad hoc advisory groups, no later than at its substantive session of 2004;

2. Stresses the need to assess also progress made in the implementation of recommendations made by the ad hoc advisory groups;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on this subject to the Council at its substantive session of 2004.

Burundi

In 2003, the Economic and Social Council set up an Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi to study and monitor the country's economic and humanitarian situation with a view to post-conflict reconstruction, following Burundi's request [E/2002/86] to do so.

(For information on the Security Council mission to Burundi in June, see p. 149.)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/16 [draft: E/2003/L.34/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 7 (h)].

Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2002/1 of 15 July 2002 on the establishment of an ad hoc advisory group on African countries emerging from conflict, in which it decided to consider creating, at the request of any African country emerging from conflict, a limited but flexible and representative ad hoc advisory group at the ambassadorial level, in consultation with all regional groups and the national authorities of the country concerned, drawn from the membership of the Economic and Social Council and its observer States, including representation from the country concerned, and in so doing to take into account the need to include countries that could make a positive contribution to the objectives of such a group,

Recalling also its decision 2002/302 of 4 October 2002, in which it decided to entrust the President of the Economic and Social Council with the holding of consultations regarding the modalities for establishing an ad hoc advisory group on Guinea-Bissau, and its decision 2002/304 of 25 October 2002, in which it established that group,

Taking note of the letter dated 26 September 2002 from the Permanent Representative of Burundi to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Council, in which the authorities of Burundi requested the Council to set up an ad hoc advisory group on Burundi to study and assess the economic and humanitarian situation in that country, with a view to post-conflict reconstruction, in accordance with resolution 2002/1,

Taking note also of the report of the Security Council mission to Central Africa, which visited Burundi from 12 to 14 June 2003, in which the mission expressed its satisfaction as to the peaceful transfer of power in Burundi,

Conscious of the need for providing adequate budgetary and economic support to the transitional Government, given the risk that all gains achieved thus far could collapse if such assistance was not provided immediately,

Urging donor countries to fulfil the commitments that they made at the Paris and Geneva conferences on assistance to Burundi, and welcoming the convening of a donor round table organized by the Government of Burundi, in collaboration with the United Nations Development Programme, scheduled for September 2003,

1. Decides to establish the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi;

2. Also decides to entrust the President of the Economic and Social Council with the task of holding consultations and making recommendations, within the framework outlined in resolution 2002/1, on the composition, terms of reference and relevant modalities for the creation of the Advisory Group by the end of August 2003, so as to enable it to participate in the donor round table.

In August, the Council adopted decision 2003/311 [draft: E/2003/L.48] without vote [agenda item 7 (h)].

Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi

At its 50th plenary meeting, on 22 August 2003, the Economic and Social Council, recalling its resolution 2002/1 of 15 July 2002 on the establishment of an ad hoc advisory group on African countries emerging from conflict and resolution 2003/16 of 21 July 2003, by which it established the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi, decided:

(a) To appoint the Permanent Representatives to the United Nations of Belgium, Burundi, Ethiopia, France, Japan and South Africa to the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi and to appoint the Permanent Representative of South Africa to the United Nations as Chairperson of the Group;

(b) That the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi would invite the participation in its work of the Permanent Representative of Guatemala to the United Nations, in his capacity as President of the Economic and Social Council, and the Permanent Representative of Angola to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairperson of the Ad Hoc Working Group on Conflict Prevention and Resolution in Africa;

(c) That the Ad Hoc Advisory Group would examine the humanitarian and economic needs of Burundi and review relevant programmes of support and prepare recommendations for a long-term programme of support, based on Burundi's development priorities, through the integration of relief, rehabilitation, reconstruction and development into a comprehensive approach to peace and stability, as well as provide advice on how to ensure that the assistance of the international community was adequate, coherent, well-coordinated and effective and promoted synergy;

(d) To request the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi, taking into consideration the unique character and needs of the situation in Burundi, to submit a report on its recommendations to the Council by mid-January 2004.

On 25 August [S/2003/836], the Council President informed the Security Council of the establishment of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Burundi.

Advisory Group activities. Following its first meeting on 11 September, the Group held a series of briefing sessions and meetings in New York with major UN and international interlocutors to discuss various aspects of development assistance to Burundi [E/2004/11]. From 19 to 26 November, the Group undertook a mission to Burundi to meet with government authorities, major socio-economic interlocutors, UN entities active on the ground and other development partners. During its visit, the Group observed a strong UN involvement regarding political support, humanitarian assistance, rural development, health and education.

Guinea-Bissau

Advisory Group activities. A January report of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Guinea-Bissau [E/2003/8] described its visit to the country from 9 to 16 November 2002 and the role of the United Nations and of the international community in addressing post-conflict needs.

During its visit, the Group participated in tripartite consultations between the Government, the UN system and the donor community. It drafted a discussion document containing an outline of a possible compact between the Government and the donor community, which was transmitted to the country's President and annexed to the Group's report. On its return from Guinea-Bissau, the Group gave an account of its impressions and continued consultations with key stakeholders, including with high-level UN officials and with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and IMF).

The Group recommended a partnership between the Government and the international community, based on common objectives and on a long-term development strategy. For short-term assistance, the Group recommended to the Economic and Social Council that the partnership be in the form of a compact, which could be based on the discussion document (see above). The proposed compact would have a high-level national steering committee to provide political oversight and monitoring of its performance, and a supporting operational committee composed of government representatives, the UN system and principal donors. It could have, as a central instrument, a temporary trust fund to address urgent short-term needs, to which the donor community could contribute $12 million to $15 million. Trust fund management could be linked to a set of policy benchmarks critical to improving economic and political governance and could include election planning and preparations, a time line for Supreme Court elections, a time line, strategy and process to clarify and promulgate the Constitution, and stability and continuity of the ministerial team. Further short-term recommendations were addressed to the UN system, the Bretton Woods institutions and the donor and international communities. Long-term recommendations to the Government included the promotion of political stability, the development of an economic diversification strategy and improved conditions for private sector activity. Further long-term recommendations were made to the Bretton Woods institutions, the UN system and the donor community.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION (January)

On 31 January, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/1 [draft: E/2003/L.2] without vote [agenda item 2].

Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Guinea-Bissau

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2002/1 of 15 July 2002, in which it decided to consider creating, at the request of any African country emerging from conflict, an ad hoc advisory group at the ambassadorial level, inter alia, to examine the economic and humanitarian situation of the country concerned, prepare recommendations for a long-term programme of support and provide advice on how to ensure that the assistance of the international community was adequate, coherent, well-coordinated and effective.

Recalling also its decision 2002/304 of 25 October 2002, in which it decided to establish an Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Guinea-Bissau, appointed the members of the Advisory Group and requested the Advisory Group to submit a report on its recommendations to the Economic and Social Council by mid-January 2003.

Recognizing the importance of respecting the sovereignty of Guinea-Bissau and its full participation in the implementation of the mandate of the Advisory Group,

Taking into account the current and specific circumstances prevailing in Guinea-Bissau and the urgent need to address the critical situation that persists in the country,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Guinea-Bissau, welcomes the recommendations contained therein and endorses the partnership approach it sets out;

2. Invites the Government of Guinea-Bissau and, within their respective mandates, the United Nations system and the Bretton Woods institutions, the donor community and the international community as a whole, to give full consideration to the recommendations formulated by the Advisory Group and to take specific and concrete steps to give effect to the partnership approach, with a view to addressing the short-term needs and implementing a long-term programme of support;

3. Decides to extend the mandate of the Advisory Group until the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council to be held in July 2003;

4. Also decides that the Advisory Group shall invite the participation in its work of the Permanent Representative of Guatemala to the United Nations, in his capacity as President of the Economic and Social Council for 2003, the Permanent Representative of the Gambia to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairperson of the Group of Friends of Guinea-Bissau, and the Permanent Representative of Angola to the United Nations, in his capacity as Chairperson of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Security Council on Conflict Prevention and Resolution in Africa;

5. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations Development Group, as well as other relevant funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, to continue to assist the Advisory Group in accomplishing its mandate, and invites the Bretton Woods institutions to continue to cooperate to that end;

6. Recognizes that the present resolution is specific to the situation prevailing in Guinea-Bissau and that future decisions and resolutions will continue to take into account the specific circumstances of any other African country emerging from conflict that requests the establishment of an ad hoc advisory group.

Further Group activities. By a 1 July letter [E/2003/95], South Africa, in its capacity as Chairman of the Advisory Group, transmitted a supplementary report updating the Group's activities. The Group visited Guinea-Bissau from 26 to 28 June, jointly with the Security Council (see p. 226). The Group met with high-level government representatives, including the country's President, and members of political parties and civil society organizations and NGOs, the private sector and religious leaders. It learned that the political, economic and social situation had deteriorated; donors were willing to assist Guinea-Bissau; and the electoral process was deadlocked. The elections, scheduled for July, were postponed to October. The Group recommended that the Economic and Social Council further appeal to donors to consider funding the elections.

An 18 September statement by the Group [E/2003/105] called on donors to consider extending emergency assistance for Guinea-Bissau to enable it to return to democratic rule following the resignation of its President. It hoped that the emergency assistance would improve the socio-economic conditions in the country.

(For reports of the Secretary-General to the Security Council regarding developments in Guinea-Bissau and the activities of the United Nations Peace-building Support Office in Guinea-Bissau, see p. 223.)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION (July)

On 24 July [meeting 48], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/53 [draft: E/2003/L.23/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 7 (h)].

Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Guinea-Bissau

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2002/1 of 15 July 2002, in which the Council decided to consider creating, at the request of any African country emerging from conflict, an ad hoc advisory group, and its decision 2002/304 of 25 October 2002, in which the Council decided to establish such a group on Guinea-Bissau,

Recalling also its resolution 2003/1 of 31 January 2003, in which the Council took note with appreciation of the report of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Guinea-Bissau, welcomed its recommendations, endorsed the partnership approach it set out and decided to extend the mandate of the Advisory Group until the substantive session of the Council in July 2003,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the supplementary report of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Guinea-Bissau, and welcomes the interaction and cooperation that has taken place between the Economic and Social Council and the Security Council, within their respective mandates, on the situation in Guinea-Bissau;

2. Reiterates the need to foster a comprehensive approach to the problems faced by Guinea-Bissau in its post-conflict phase, in particular to prepare a long-term programme of support, based on its development priorities, through the integration of relief, rehabilitation, reconstruction and development needs;

3. Reiterates its invitation to the Government of Guinea-Bissau, and, within their respective mandates, to the organizations of the United Nations system, including the Bretton Woods institutions, the donor community and the international community as a whole to give full consideration to the recommendations formulated by the Advisory Group and to take specific and concrete steps to give effect to the partnership approach that it set out, with a view to addressing the short-term needs and implementing a long-term programme of support;

4. Welcomes the progress made with the creation by the United Nations Development Programme of the Emergency Economic Management Fund, following the recommendations made by the Advisory Group in its report and the trust fund set up for the elections, and appeals to donor countries to contribute to these funds;

5. Decides to extend the mandate of the Advisory Group until the organizational session of the Economic and Social Council in January 2004, with the current membership, including those invited members, with the purpose of monitoring the implementation of its recommendations, following closely the humanitarian situation and economic and social conditions prevailing in the country and providing an assessment of its work through a report to be submitted to the Council;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, the United Nations Development Group, as well as other relevant United Nations funds, programmes and the specialized agencies to continue to assist the Advisory Group in accomplishing its mandate, and invites the Bretton Woods institutions to continue to cooperate to that end.

Other economic assistance

Central America

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/105 [YUN 2001, p. 854], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/286], described the activities of UNDP and other UN system entities, during the period from August 2001 to December 2002, to implement a new sustainable development strategy in Central America. The region received support for consensus-building processes, the strengthening of democratic institutions, social vulnerability and poverty eradication, agricultural development, health and nutrition, public finance and economic growth, and the environment and sustainable development.

Non-reimbursable cooperation in the region had been reduced significantly over the past two years. Donor countries had targeted their work at the national level, focusing on some themes common to the region (see above). In order to cover their investment priorities, Central American countries were forced to increase their levels of debt. In addition, domestic resources for investment had declined considerably as a result of natural disasters and a crisis in the coffee sector.

That had taken place against the background of a competitive international context and as Central American economies went through a process of economic restructuring.

The Secretary-General urged the international community to offer concessional support to reintegrate Central America into the world economy, and for its political and economic integration. The region required continuity in bilateral and multilateral cooperation in the priority areas of strengthening democracy and its institutions, and support to the dialogue and consultation process; and overcoming poverty throughout the region. Other priority areas were food security, health care and the promotion of sustainable development and the environment.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/117 [draft: A/58/L.42 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (b)].

International assistance to and cooperation with the Alliance for the Sustainable Development of Central America

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming all relevant resolutions of the General Assembly that emphasize and acknowledge the importance of international, bilateral and multilateral economic, financial and technical support, cooperation and assistance given by the United Nations system, the international community and non-governmental organizations, which provide a framework for the provision of aid to the Alliance for the Sustainable Development of Central America, in support of national efforts to make the region a zone of peace, freedom, democracy and development,

Noting that the Central American countries have achieved significant progress towards the consolidation of democracy and good governance, the strengthening of civilian Governments and respect for human rights and the rule of law, all as a tool for promoting sustainable development and regional integration, reflecting the desire of the Central American peoples to live and prosper in a climate of peace, solidarity and social justice,

Stressing the importance of the commitments, and their implementation, as undertaken by the regional summits and ministerial meetings, in particular in those areas included in the programme initiatives of the Alliance for the Sustainable Development of Central America in the political, economic, social and ecological fields, which allow a progressive improvement in the quality of life of the people of the region,

Noting that the various natural phenomena which have affected the region are one of the factors that have put at risk the biodiversity of Central America,

Emphasizing that the progress made in complying with the commitments established in the programme of the Alliance for the Sustainable Development of Central America creates the necessary conditions for implementing the policies for reducing the vulnerability of the region to natural disasters,

Noting that the framework of the Puebla-Panama Plan includes the Mesoamerican Initiative for the Prevention and Mitigation of Natural Disasters, as well as others that promote the conservation and sustainable management of natural resources, and encompasses the strategy for the transformation and modernization of Central America in the twenty-first century, presented during the Regional Consultative Group meeting, held in Madrid on 8 and 9 March 2001, and the Strategy for the South-Southeast of Mexico,

Noting also the adoption in 2001 of the Regional Mechanism of Coordination of Mutual Assistance in Case of Disasters, as well as the successful work of the Coordination Centre for the Prevention of Natural Disasters in Central America and, in particular, its mandate to hold the Mitch +5 Regional Forum, and the Regional Programme for Risk Management in Central America of the Coordination Centre and the United Nations Development Programme,

Welcoming the adoption of the Political Dialogue and Cooperation Agreement between the European Union and Central America, which should result in the conclusion of future agreements strengthening the San José Dialogue process and expanding it to, inter alia, economic areas, migration and the campaign against international terrorism,

Recognizing the progress made in the elimination of anti-personnel mines from Central American territory, as well as the need to rehabilitate and reintegrate mine victims in their communities in order to restore normal conditions for the full development of the region,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Notes the significant reduction in the last two years of the non-reimbursable international assistance and cooperation extended to the Alliance for the Sustainable Development of Central America, as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General;

3. Supports the decision of the Central American Governments to promote in a harmonious and balanced way the sustained economic, social, cultural, environmental and political development of its member States and the development of the region as a whole through programmes which help to consolidate democracy and resolve social inequalities and extreme poverty;

4. Reiterates the importance of supporting and strengthening the efforts of the Central American countries in the implementation of the Regional Mechanism of Coordination of Mutual Assistance in Case of Disasters and the Regional Plan for Disaster Reduction as well as the implementation of the Strategic Framework for the Reduction of Vulnerability and Disasters in Central America and, in particular, of taking measures for the prevention and mitigation of damage, with special emphasis on the most vulnerable groups and sectors;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, the organs, organizations and programmes of the United Nations system and all States, international financial institutions and regional and subregional organizations, as appropriate, to continue providing the support needed to attain the objectives of the programme for the sustainable development of Central America, including those which are being pursued within the framework of the Quinquennium for the Reduction of Vulnerability to and the Impact of Natural Disasters in Central America;

6. Notes with appreciation the revision of the sub-regional cooperation programme in Central America of the United Nations Development Programme, launched in 1996, and of the national programmes of other United Nations agencies and other humanitarian agencies on the basis of the priorities established in the regional development strategy for the transformation and modernization of Central America, contained in the initiatives of the Puebla-Panama Plan;

7. Encourages the Governments and disaster-related organizations of Central America to continue implementing the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction in order to reduce the vulnerability to hazards, and urges the international community to contribute to these efforts, including, as appropriate, through cooperation and technical assistance;

8. Notes with satisfaction the renewal, in December 2002, of the commitment by the bilateral and the multi-lateral development organizations to the Meso-American Biological Corridor as one of the pillars for sustainable development comprising the conservation of natural resources, economic competitiveness and efforts to alleviate poverty, which is being developed with assistance from the United Nations Development Programme's own funds, the Global Environment Facility through the World Bank, the United Nations Environment Programme, the Inter-American Development Bank, the German Agency for Technical Cooperation and the United States Agency for International Development;

9. Recognizes the efforts and achievements relating to mine clearance in Central America, and calls upon the relevant organs of the United Nations system, the Organization of American States, as well as the international community, to continue providing the material, technical and financial support needed by the Central American Governments to complete mine-clearance, mine-awareness and victim assistance activities in the region, in conformity with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution as part of a consolidated report under the item entitled "The situation in Central America: progress in fashioning a region of peace, freedom, democracy and development".

Comoros

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/120 [draft: A/58/L.45 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (b)].

Special emergency economic assistance for the recovery and the development of the Comoros

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/30 F of 13 December 1996 and 53/1 F of 16 November 1998 on special emergency economic assistance to the Comoros,

Noting that since 1995, the Comoros has been subjected to several major events, including a secessionist conflict, which created serious political instability and caused economic and social trauma,

Considering that the unfavourable and insular situation of the Comoros, which is among the least developed countries, the decline in the gross domestic product of the country caused by the fall in the prices of its export products, the poverty of its soil, the scarcity of its natural resources and the diminutive size of its domestic market have adverse economic consequences and increase the impoverishment of the population,

Aware of the efforts made by the Government of the Comoros to assist the most affected and deprived sectors of the population and to reallocate to that end, as a matter of great urgency, the major part of the budget required for the functioning of the State,

1. Welcomes the signing of the Fomboni Agreement of February 2001, which created prospects for a peaceful resolution of the separatist crisis;

2. Reaffirms its support for South Africa, the African Union, the International Organization of la Francophonie and other countries of the region in the mediation efforts to resolve the Comorian crisis;

3. Welcomes the recommendations contained in the statement signed by the Friends of the Comoros in Paris on 29 October 2003 and the declaration of the Indian Ocean Commission issued in Moroni on 30 October 2003;

4. Urges the Government of the Comoros and the governments of the autonomous islands to pursue the efforts under way, to accelerate the organization of legislative elections and to establish the remaining national institutions as stipulated by the Constitution;

5. Reaffirms that the primary responsibility for the well-being of the people and the development of the economy rests firmly with the Government of the Comoros and the governments of the autonomous islands;

6. Expresses its appreciation to all States and to all the international organizations concerned, including United Nations bodies and specialized agencies, for the assistance they have provided for the relief of the Comoros;

7. Stresses that the financial resources available remain nonetheless insufficient vis-à-vis the most basic needs for ensuring the humanitarian, economic and political recovery of the country;

8. Requests Member States, international organizations and other relevant organizations of the United Nations system, in the event of an agreement between the Comoros and the authorities of the autonomous islands, and while awaiting the finalization of the Fomboni Agreement by early 2004, to direct their financial and technical assistance towards assisting the most affected sectors of the population during and after the transition period, achieving reconstruction and sustainable development and enabling the country to re-engage with the international financial institutions;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to make efforts to mobilize Member States, relevant United Nations specialized agencies and other organizations in order to provide the Comoros with necessary financial, economic and technical assistance, particularly in debt forgiveness, in order to enable it to fully implement the Fomboni Agreement, particularly to organize legislative elections;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, in collaboration with all relevant United Nations departments and specialized agencies, as well as international organizations already working in the Comoros, to gather relevant information and assess the needs of the country and the possible assistance from the international community;

11. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Haiti

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/22 [YUN 2002, p. 922], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [E/2003/54] on progress achieved in implementing a long-term programme of support for Haiti. A governance support programme, covering the period from 2003 to 2006, was drawn up and approved by the Government in January, which aimed at facilitating cooperation among all partners contributing to improving governance. Its main objective was to support Haiti's institutional normalization, build democratic institutions and strengthen governance. The programme also had a sustainable development component and dimensions relating to advocacy, public debates, the issue of parity and methods of drawing up strategies and policies. The UN system, together with bilateral and multilateral donors and NGOs, finalized an integrated humanitarian programme of assistance to vulnerable populations, which sought to strengthen medium- and long-term development efforts while supporting vulnerable populations to access essential services and vital commodities. The report also detailed progress made regarding Haiti's report on the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51], assistance by the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria (see p. 1248), UNDP activities in the area of justice, the compilation of social data, such as living conditions, relief operations and activities to manage risks and calamities resulting from natural disasters, and a national plan of action on education for all.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/46 [draft: E/2003/L.35] without vote [agenda item 7 (e)].

Long-term programme of support for Haiti

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1999/11 of 27 July 1999, 2001/25 of 26 July 2001 and 2002/22 of 24 July 2002, and its decision 2000/235 of 27 July 2000,

Taking note of the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the efforts of the Organization of American States, including its Special Mission to Strengthen Democracy in Haiti, and of the Caribbean Community to mediate dialogue and promote reconciliation in order to strengthen the political environment in Haiti necessary for the promotion of economic and social development and the alleviation of poverty,

Welcoming also the report of the United Nations independent expert on the situation of human rights in Haiti, noting the statement by the Chairperson of the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-ninth session, and further encouraging the work of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and the Commission on Human Rights in this regard,

Noting the launching of the Integrated Emergency Response Programme: Targeting Vulnerable Groups and Communities in Haiti by the United Nations country team for Haiti on 22 April 2003,

1. Requests that the Secretary-General, in coordination with the United Nations resident coordinator in Haiti, report on progress achieved in implementing the long-term programme of support for Haiti and that the report be prepared for the Economic and Social Council on the basis of developments in Haiti;

2. Decides to include the item entitled "Long-term programme of support for Haiti" in the provisional agenda of its substantive session of 2004.

(For information regarding the human rights situation in Haiti, see p. 683.)

Timor-Leste

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/105 [YUN 2002, p. 921], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/280], reported on the status of implementation of assistance for humanitarian relief, rehabilitation and development for Timor-Leste, covering the period from July 2002 to July 2003.

Recognizing that security and stability were a prerequisite for the rehabilitation and development of the country, the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor (see p. 370) and the UN system intensified efforts to address key institutional challenges of the National Police Force of Timor-Leste, while taking into account the national security and defence framework. Considerable progress was made in developing civil and criminal codes and a review of the justice system identified areas needing technical assistance and support from the international community in order to establish strategies to improve access to justice for Timorese citizens. On the civilian side, the administrative capacity of public servants was being strengthened through on-the-job training. A civil service act, targeting gender equality, was drafted. Progress was also made regarding rural and agricultural development, the delivery of health services and increasing access to primary and junior high school education, together with improving internal efficiency and reducing inequality. During the reporting period, much work was undertaken regarding gender-based violence, including domestic violence and sexual assault. Significant progress had been made in rehabilitating infrastructure, particularly in the power sector, water management and construction-related activities, and the telecommunications sector.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/121 [draft: A/58/L.46 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (b)].

Assistance for humanitarian relief, rehabilitation and development for Timor-Leste

The General Assembly,

Recalling all of its relevant resolutions on the situation in Timor-Leste,

Recalling also all of the relevant Security Council resolutions and decisions on the situation in Timor-Leste, in particular resolutions 1473(2003) of 4 April 2003 and 1480(2003) of 19 May 2003, acknowledging the ongoing crucial role of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor and the leadership of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General in assisting the people of Timor-Leste,

Recognizing the essential role played by the international community, including the United Nations, other intergovernmental organizations, Member States and non-governmental organizations, in supporting the nation-building process of Timor-Leste,

Acknowledging the progress made in the transition from relief and rehabilitation to development in Timor-Leste, while noting continuing vulnerabilities, including the need to strengthen the preparedness and response capacity of the Government of Timor-Leste for addressing humanitarian emergencies, and the significant challenges of rehabilitation, reconstruction and development, in particular in the initial years of independence,

Emphasizing the need for continued international assistance to support the development of Timor-Leste in, inter alia, the education, health, agriculture, infrastructure, judicial, public administration and law enforcement sectors,

Welcoming the efforts of the Government of Indonesia and relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in providing humanitarian assistance to the refugees of Timor-Leste in the Indonesian province of East Nusa Tenggara, in facilitating their return to and reintegration in Timor-Leste or in assisting with their local integration and resettlement, as appropriate, in Indonesia,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Also welcomes the commitment of the international community to meet the external requirements for rehabilitation, reconstruction and development activities for Timor-Leste;

3. Urges the United Nations, other intergovernmental organizations, Member States and non-governmental organizations to continue to support the Government and the people of Timor-Leste in their endeavours towards self-sustainable nation-building and in facing the remaining vulnerabilities and challenges, such as nationwide capacity-building in all sectors, national reconciliation and the voluntary return of the remaining refugees to Timor-Leste, and sustainable development;

4. Acknowledges that a transparent, effective and functioning democratic governmental administration is crucial to fostering a stable and secure social, economic and political environment in Timor-Leste, and in this regard urges the international community to continue to support efforts aimed at institution-building and the training of civil servants, in particular in the areas of public finances and senior management and in the development and maintenance of central and local administrative systems of government;

5. Also acknowledges the need to expedite the development of the justice sector of Timor-Leste, and in this regard urges further international support in the areas of law enforcement, the judiciary and the prison system;

6. Welcomes the continuing response of the international community to the need for food aid, and calls upon the United Nations, other intergovernmental organizations, Member States and non-governmental organizations to assist Timor-Leste in ensuring sustainable development in the areas of agriculture, livestock and fisheries;

7. Welcomes with appreciation the assistance provided by Member States, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, the World Food Programme and all other international and non-governmental organizations in response to the appeals by the Government of Timor-Leste during the floods and drought;

8. Takes note with appreciation of the progress made in rehabilitating infrastructure, and recommends that outstanding infrastructure needs remain a focus of international assistance in such areas as the reconstruction and rehabilitation of public buildings, educational facilities, roads and public services;

9. Commends the continuous international response in providing health services to the general population, including the early deployment of immunization and disease prevention programmes and reproductive health-care and child nutrition programmes, while recognizing the need for further assistance to rebuild hospitals, train health-care professionals and enhance capacity-building to meet the challenges to public health posed by such diseases as tuberculosis, malaria and HIV/AIDS;

10. Welcomes the progress made in the rehabilitation of schools, the supply and distribution of educational materials and teacher training, while emphasizing the need for capacity-building, particularly in the area of secondary and higher education, and for continued attention to the rehabilitation needs, including psychosocial support, of children affected by violence;

11. Also welcomes the growing participation of the women of Timor-Leste in all aspects of society, and encourages further efforts to address gender issues, including the needs for research, services and appropriate legislation in order to combat domestic violence and other gender-related crimes;

12. Further welcomes the continuing efforts made by the Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation to facilitate national reconciliation and the return of refugees to Timor-Leste;

13. Welcomes the commitment and contribution made by the Government of Indonesia and by the international community to the Special Fund established for former employees and pensioners of the Government of Indonesia in Timor-Leste and the progress made by the United Nations Development Programme in disbursing funds from the Special Fund, and encourages the international community to consider increasing its contributions;

14. Also welcomes the holding, in Dili in September 2003, of the second meeting of the Joint Ministerial Commission for Bilateral Cooperation between Indonesia and Timor-Leste, which emphasized the importance of good relations and of further enhancing and facilitating cooperation in all areas of common interest;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly for consideration at its sixtieth session.

Third States affected by sanctions

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/110 [YUN 2001, p. 857], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/58/358 & Corr.1] on economic problems confronting the Eastern European States affected by the developments in the Balkans, particularly their impact on regional trade and economic relations and on navigation along the Danube and the Adriatic Sea. The report summarized information received from 10 Governments, 8 specialized agencies and various relevant international organizations and concerned regional bodies.

Disaster relief

In 2003, 700 natural events resulted in 75,000 deaths and economic losses of more than $65 billion. One third of the deaths resulted from the Bam earthquake in Iran, which killed 26,000 people (see p. 962). Other types of disasters, such as floods, cyclones and droughts, occurred in vulnerable countries and regions.

In Africa, more than two thirds of the population of Eritrea were exposed to the risk of famine during 2003, following the severe drought of 2002. Successive climatic shocks and their cumulative effects had made some 13 million people in Ethiopia dependent on emergency food aid and on non-food assistance. During the year, Guinea was subjected to a substantial deficit in rainfall in the north-west, a flash flood along the Guinea-Bissau border and a series of bush fires in Forest Guinea and in the Sahel region bordering Mali.

The Southern Africa region was prone to a variety of natural disasters, including drought, floods and cyclones. A severe drought in 2002 and 2003 endangered the lives of 14.4 million people in Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Swaziland, Zambia and Zimbabwe. Severe drought and perennial flooding affected Somalia. Drought and floods in parts of the Sudan affected over 800,000 people.

Natural disasters were a major cause of severe economic distress for the Pacific region. In 2003, OCHA responded to 24 natural disasters (13 floods/landslides, seven typhoons/storms, two earthquakes, two extremes of temperature). The year began with Cyclone Zoë in Solomon Islands, and Cyclone Ami, which caused far greater losses across Eastern Fiji. Two additional cyclones struck Solomon Islands and another hit New Caledonia. Heavy rain caused a series of landslides in Papua New Guinea, and American Samoa also suffered a disastrous landslide. Meanwhile, Timor-Leste experienced drought and floods through the wet and the dry seasons, respectively.

In Asia, torrential rains led to the most serious flooding and landslides in Sri Lanka since 1947. Severe and continual rainfall that began in late June led to flooding in several provinces of China, affecting 130 million people and resulting in the evacuation of more than 3 million people from their homes and the death of more than 800 persons. Viet Nam suffered serious floods in October for the fifth year in a row.

In May, earthquakes occurred in Algeria and Turkey.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, OCHA assisted the Dominican Republic to cope with floods in November; Mexico with an earthquake in January; and Peru with floods in January.

Excluding contributions in kind and services not costed, OCHA contributions for natural disaster assistance totalled $104.5 million.

International cooperation

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/152 [YUN 2002, p. 925], the Secretary-General, in an October report [A/58/434], highlighted key activities undertaken in response to natural disasters and described initiatives to strengthen disaster management at the national and regional levels. The report also provided information on the funding trends for natural disaster response.

The report concluded that it was crucial for the international community to collaborate with vulnerable countries and regions to ensure optimal use of available disaster management tools and initiatives. Member States in disaster-prone regions were encouraged to familiarize themselves with the guidelines of the International Search and Rescue Advisory Group to ensure a coordinated, rapid response of international urban search-and-rescue teams in the event of a sudden disaster. The United Nations Disaster Assessment and Coordination system continued to be a valuable tool through which disaster management expertise was made available by Member States to respond to sudden emergencies. The system was deploying an increasing number of personnel from disaster-prone regions, although its membership needed to be expanded to Africa. A more precise understanding was also needed of the impact of funding levels on natural disaster response, as it was not clear if adequate support was being provided to address capacity-building and post-disaster recovery needs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/25 [draft: A/58/L.34 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (a)].

International cooperation on humanitarian assistance in the field of natural disasters, from relief to development

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991, the annex to which contains the guiding principles for the strengthening of the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations system, as well as all its resolutions on international cooperation on humanitarian assistance in the field of natural disasters, from relief to development, and recalling the resolutions of the humanitarian segments of the substantive sessions of the Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing the importance of the principles of neutrality, humanity and impartiality for the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Emphasizing that the affected State has the primary responsibility in the initiation, organization, coordination and implementation of humanitarian assistance within its territory, and in the facilitation of the work of humanitarian organizations in mitigating the consequences of natural disasters,

Emphasizing also the importance of integrating risk reduction into development planning and post-disaster recovery,

Emphasizing further, in this context, the important role of development organizations in supporting national efforts to mitigate the consequences of natural disasters,

Emphasizing the responsibility of all States to undertake disaster preparedness, response and mitigation efforts in order to minimize the impact of natural disasters, while recognizing the importance of international cooperation in support of the efforts of affected countries which may have limited capacities to fulfil this requirement,

Welcoming the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction,

Stressing that national authorities need to enhance the resilience of populations to disasters through, inter alia, implementation of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction so as to reduce risks to people, their livelihoods, the social and economic infrastructure and environmental resources,

Taking into account the outcome of the Second International Conference on Early Warning, held in Bonn, Germany, from 16 to 18 October 2003, under the auspices of the United Nations,

Noting the critical role played by local resources, as well as by existing in-country capacities, in natural disaster response,

Recognizing the significant role played by national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies in disaster preparedness and risk reduction, disaster response, rehabilitation and development,

Emphasizing the importance of raising awareness among developing countries of the capacities existing at the national, regional and international levels that could be deployed to assist them,

Emphasizing also the importance of international cooperation in support of the efforts of the affected States in dealing with natural disasters in all their phases, including prevention, preparedness, mitigation and recovery and reconstruction, and of strengthening the response capacity of affected countries,

Welcoming the efforts of Member States, with facilitation by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, and in cooperation with the International Search and Rescue Advisory Group, to improve efficiency and effectiveness in the provision of international urban search and rescue assistance, and in this context noting its resolution 57/150 of 16 December 2002 entitled "Strengthening the effectiveness and coordination of international urban search and rescue assistance",

Encouraging, in this regard, efforts aiming at the strengthening of the International Search and Rescue Advisory Group and its regional groups, particularly through the participation in its activities of representatives of a larger number of countries,

Mindful of the effects that shortfalls in resources can have on the preparedness for and response to natural disasters, and underscoring, in this regard, the need to gain a more precise understanding of the impact of levels of funding on natural disaster response,

Underlining the need for further improvement in information and analyses available regarding needs, responses and funding related to natural disasters,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General entitled "International cooperation on humanitarian assistance in the field of natural disasters, from relief to development" and "Strengthening the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations";

2. Expresses its deep concern at the number and scale of natural disasters and their increasing impact, resulting in massive losses of life and property worldwide, in particular in vulnerable societies lacking adequate capacity to mitigate effectively the long-term negative social, economic and environmental consequences of natural disasters;

3. Calls upon all States to adopt, where required, and to continue to implement effectively necessary legislative and other appropriate measures to mitigate the effects of natural disasters, inter alia, by disaster prevention, including appropriate land use and building regulations, as well as disaster preparedness and capacity-building in disaster response and mitigation, and requests the international community to continue to assist developing countries in this regard;

4. Stresses, in this context, the importance of strengthening international cooperation, particularly through the effective use of multilateral mechanisms, in the provision of humanitarian assistance through all phases of a disaster, from relief and mitigation to development, including the provision of adequate resources;

5. Also stresses that humanitarian assistance for natural disasters should be provided in accordance with and with due respect for the guiding principles contained in the annex to resolution 46/182 and should be determined on the basis of the human dimension and needs arising out of the particular natural disasters;

6. Recognizes that economic growth and sustainable development contribute to improving the capacity of States to mitigate, respond to and prepare for natural disasters;

7. Reaffirms that disaster risk analysis and vulnerability reduction form an integral part of humanitarian assistance, poverty eradication and sustainable development strategies and need to be considered in the development plans of all vulnerable countries and communities, including, where appropriate, in plans relating to the transition from relief to development, and affirms that within such preventive strategies, disaster preparedness and early warning systems must be further strengthened at the country and regional levels, inter alia, through better coordination among relevant United Nations bodies and cooperation with Governments of affected countries and regional and other relevant organizations with the aim of maximizing the effectiveness of natural disaster response and reducing the impact of natural disasters, particularly in developing countries;

8. Emphasizes the importance of establishing or updating, as appropriate, national disaster preparedness plans, as agreed upon at the twenty-seventh International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, held in Geneva in 1999;

9. Also emphasizes the importance of enhanced international cooperation, including through the United Nations and regional organizations, to assist developing countries in their efforts to build capacities and to predict, prepare for and respond to natural disasters;

10. Stresses the need for partnerships among Governments, organizations of the United Nations system, relevant humanitarian organizations and specialized companies to promote training to strengthen preparedness for and response to natural disasters;

11. Also stresses the need to promote the access to and transfer of technology related to early warning systems and to mitigation programmes to developing countries affected by natural disasters;

12. Encourages the further use of space-based and ground-based remote-sensing technologies for the prevention, mitigation and management of natural disasters, where appropriate;

13. Also encourages in such operations the sharing of geographical data, including remotely sensed images and geographic information system and global positioning system data, among Governments, space agencies and relevant international humanitarian organizations, as appropriate, and also notes in that context initiatives such as those undertaken by the International Charter on Space and Major Disasters and the Global Disaster Information Network;

14. Stresses that particular international cooperation efforts should be undertaken to enhance and broaden further the utilization of national and local capacities and, where appropriate, regional and sub-regional capacities of developing countries for disaster preparedness and response, which may be made available in closer proximity to the site of a disaster, more efficiently and at lower cost;

15. Recognizes, in this regard, that the United Nations Disaster Assessment and Coordination system continues to be a valuable tool by which disaster management expertise is made available by Member States to respond to the sudden onset of emergencies;

16. Welcomes the role of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat as the focal point within the overall United Nations system for the promotion and coordination of disaster responses among United Nations humanitarian agencies and other humanitarian partners;

17. Takes note with interest of the initiatives taken by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and the United Nations Development Programme for the establishment of regional positions of disaster response advisers and disaster reduction advisers to assist developing countries in capacity-building for disaster prevention, preparedness, mitigation and response in a coordinated and complementary manner;

18. Encourages further cooperation between the United Nations system and regional organizations in order to increase the capacity of these organizations to respond to natural disasters;

19. Encourages States that have not acceded to or ratified the Tampere Convention on the Provision of Telecommunication Resources for Disaster Mitigation and Relief Operations, adopted at Tampere, Finland, on 18 June 1998, to consider doing so;

20. Requests the Secretary-General, in collaboration with relevant organizations and partners, to finalize establishment of, and then update periodically, the Directory of Advanced Technologies for Disaster Response as a new part of the Central Register of Disaster Management Capacities;

21. Encourages donors to consider the importance of ensuring that assistance in the case of higher-profile natural disasters does not come at the expense of those that may have a relatively lower profile, bearing in mind that the allocation of resources should be driven by needs, as well as the importance of making efforts to increase the level of assistance for disaster reduction and preparedness programmes and for disaster response and mitigation activities;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to examine ways to further improve the assessment of needs and responses and to enhance the availability of data regarding funding in response to natural disasters and to consider concrete recommendations to improve the international response to natural disasters, as necessary, based on his examination, keeping in mind also the need to address any geographical and sectoral imbalances and shortfalls in such responses, where they exist, as well as the more effective use of national emergency response agencies, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

International Strategy for Disaster Reduction

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/256 [YUN 2002, p. 928], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/277], described UN activities to implement the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction (ISDR), which was adopted by the programme forum of the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction (1990-2000) in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 859] and endorsed by the Assembly in resolution 54/219 [ibid, p. 861]. The Inter-Agency Task Force for Disaster Reduction and the ISDR secretariat served as the main mechanisms for the Strategy's implementation by the UN system.

The Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 822], adopted by the World Summit on Sustainable Development, included commitments relating to disaster and vulnerability reduction and improved early warning. Some of the partnerships launched at the Summit in the area of early warning and disaster preparedness, involving ISDR, led to the convening of the Second International Conference on Early Warning (Bonn, Germany, October), in order to consolidate a global programme to integrate early warning into public policies. The partnership for integrating prevention of, preparedness for and response to environmental emergencies in support of sustainable development, led by OCHA and the United Nations Environment Programme, used existing resources and distributed responsibilities and efforts among partners and key stakeholders. Other partnerships were led by the International Council for Local Environmental Initiatives, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the World Meteorological Organization and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific.

A review of the Inter-Agency Task Force for Disaster Reduction, which had met seven times since 2000, concluded that it represented an essential process for enabling the international community to develop a better understanding of and strategic direction on disaster reduction as a long-term undertaking. However, the review also identified a number of weaknesses and shortcomings. At its seventh meeting, in April, the Task Force discussed the nature and prospective role of its working groups, and the appropriate balance between its own role as an international forum for discussion and the need to produce tangible guidelines and results-oriented products. Its 2004 work programme included support for the development of a framework for guidance and monitoring of disaster risk reduction; urban risk and vulnerability; integration of disaster reduction in sustainable development; linking climate change adaptation and disaster reduction; and special attention to Africa.

The Task Force and the ISDR secretariat initiated the 10-year review of the Yokohama Strategy for a Safer World: Guidelines for Natural Disaster Prevention, Preparedness and Mitigation and its Plan of Action [YUN 1994, p. 851] to examine progress made to implement disaster reduction, identify gaps and prepare recommendations to guide Member States. The Task Force welcomed Japan's offer to host the 2005 Second World Conference on Disaster Reduction in Kobe, which was expected to discuss and adopt a set of principles and substantive activities for 2005-2015. A series of regional and thematic consultations regarding achievements and shortcomings in disaster reduction were held. The first regional consultation was convened in Asia and hosted by the Government of Japan (Hyogo Prefecture, January). The South Pacific island States discussed achievements, shortcomings and requirements for the future (Fiji, May), as did the Euro-Mediterranean Forum on Disaster Reduction (Madrid, Spain, October). Progress was made in engaging additional partner organizations to improve implementation of ISDR, including agreements reached on issues such as urban risk through UN-Habitat; study of the interface between natural and technological disasters with the European Commission Joint Research Centre; the impacts of climate variability and change with the International Research Institute for Climate Prediction; and support for public awareness, education and policy integration for disaster risk reduction with the Central American Centre for Coordination of Natural Disaster Prevention. The ISDR secretariat participated in the steering committee of the International Consortium on Landslides and continued to collaborate with the ProVention Consortium, a project-oriented global coalition and flexible network of Governments, international organizations, academic institutions, the private sector and civil society organizations. The Strategy's regional outreach programmes operated in Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean and the Pacific. Other activities that contributed to the implementation of ISDR focused on capacity-building, public awareness, advocacy and guidelines, urban risk, water-related disasters and solutions, and space applications and telecommunications.

The Secretary-General recommended that Member States and international organizations ensure that development plans and poverty reduction strategies included disaster risk assessment as an integral component, and increase their investments to reduce risk and vulnerability. He proposed strengthening the Strategy secretariat by providing it with a more stable and predictable financial base.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/58/484/Add.5], adopted resolution 58/214 without vote [agenda item 94 (e)].

International Strategy for Disaster Reduction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 44/236 of 22 December 1989, 49/22 A of 2 December 1994, 49/22 B of 20 December 1994, 53/185 of 15 December 1998, 54/219 of 22 December 1999, 56/195 of 21 December 2001 and 57/256 of 20 December 2002 and Economic and Social Council resolutions 1999/63 of 30 July 1999 and 2001/35 of 26 July 2001, and taking into due consideration its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Recalling also the inclusion of the item "disaster management and vulnerability" in the multi-year programme of work of the Commission on Sustainable Development,

Emphasizing that disaster reduction, including reducing vulnerability to natural disasters, is an important element that contributes to the achievement of sustainable development,

Noting the relevant provisions of the Ministerial Declaration of the Ministerial Conference of the Third World Water Forum, held in Kyoto, Japan, on 22 and 23 March 2003, on water-related disasters,

Reiterating that, although natural disasters damage the social and economic infrastructure of all countries, the long-term consequences of natural disasters are especially severe for developing countries and hamper the achievement of their sustainable development,

Recognizing the urgent need to further develop and make use of the existing scientific and technical knowledge to reduce vulnerability to natural disasters, and emphasizing the need for developing countries to have access to technology so as to tackle natural disasters effectively,

Expressing its deep concern at the number and scale of natural disasters and their increasing impact within recent years, which have resulted in massive loss of life and long-term negative social, economic and environmental consequences for vulnerable societies throughout the world, in particular in developing countries,

Recognizing the need to continue to develop an understanding of, and to address, socio-economic activities that exacerbate the vulnerability of societies to natural disasters and to build and further strengthen community capability to cope with disaster risks,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction;

2. Invites Governments and relevant international organizations to consider disaster risk assessment as an integral component of development plans and poverty eradication programmes;

3. Stresses that continued cooperation and coordination among Governments, the United Nations system, other international organizations, regional organizations, non-governmental organizations and other partners, as appropriate, are considered essential to address effectively the impact of natural disasters;

4. Recognizes the importance of linking disaster risk management to regional frameworks, as appropriate, such as with the New Partnership for Africa's Development, to address issues of poverty eradication and sustainable development;

5. Also recognizes the importance of integrating a gender perspective as well as of engaging women in the design and implementation of all phases of disaster management, particularly in the disaster reduction stage;

6. Further recognizes the importance of early warning as an essential element of disaster reduction, and recommends the implementation of the outcome of the Second International Conference on Early Warning, held in Bonn, Germany, from 16 to 18 October 2003, which highlighted the importance of strengthened coordination and cooperation to integrate activities and expertise of the various sectors involved in the early warning process and has contributed to the review of the Yokohama Strategy for a Safer World: Guidelines for Natural Disaster Prevention, Preparedness and Mitigation and its Plan of Action;

7. Decides to convene a World Conference on Disaster Reduction in 2005, at the senior-official level, designed to foster specialized discussions and produce concrete changes and results, with the following objectives:

(a) To conclude the review of the Yokohama Strategy and its Plan of Action, with a view to updating the guiding framework on disaster reduction for the twenty-first century;

(b) To identify specific activities aimed at ensuring the implementation of relevant provisions of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") on vulnerability, risk assessment and disaster management;

(c) To share best practices and lessons learned to further disaster reduction within the context of attaining sustainable development and identify gaps and challenges;

(d) To increase awareness of the importance of disaster reduction policies, thereby facilitating and promoting the implementation of those policies;

(e) To increase the reliability and availability of appropriate disaster-related information to the public and disaster management agencies in all regions, as set out in the relevant provisions of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

8. Accepts with deep appreciation the generous offer of the Government of Japan to host the Conference, and decides that the Conference will be held at Kobe, Hyogo, Japan, from 18 to 22 January 2005;

9. Decides to establish an open-ended intergovernmental preparatory committee for the Conference to review the organizational and substantive preparations for the Conference, approve the programme of work of the Conference and propose rules of procedure for adoption by the Conference, and also decides that the preparatory committee will meet at Geneva, following the 2004 semi-annual sessions of the Inter-Agency Task Force for Disaster Reduction, for up to two days each time, and that it will hold a one-day meeting at Kobe within the dates mentioned in paragraph 8 above, as necessary;

10. Also decides that the intergovernmental preparatory committee will have a bureau consisting of five representatives of Member States elected on the basis of equitable geographical representation;

11. Invites regional groups to nominate their candidates for the bureau of the preparatory committee by the end of January 2004, so that they can be involved in the preparations for the first meeting of the preparatory committee, and to notify the secretariat of the Conference of those nominations;

12. Requests the inter-agency secretariat for the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction to serve as the secretariat of the Conference and to coordinate preparatory activities, the costs of which will be funded extrabudgetarily through the Trust Fund for the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction and in close cooperation with the host country and the preparatory committee for the Conference, with the full support of the relevant departments of the Secretariat;

13. Understands that the activities set out in paragraph 12 above will not hinder the other existing work and priorities of the inter-agency secretariat for the Strategy;

14. Invites Member States, all United Nations bodies and specialized agencies and other relevant intergovernmental agencies and organizations, in particular the members of the Inter-Agency Task Force for Disaster Reduction, to participate actively in the Conference, as well as its preparatory process;

15. Welcomes contributions from all regions that could provide substantive inputs to the preparatory process and the Conference itself;

16. Encourages effective contributions from major groups, as identified in Agenda 21, invites them to seek accreditation to the Conference and its preparatory process, and decides that their accreditation and participation will be in accordance with the rules of procedure of the Commission on Sustainable Development, the rules of procedure of the World Summit on Sustainable Development and the established practice of the Commission on the participation and engagement of major groups;

17. Decides that the actual additional costs of the preparatory process and the Conference itself should be funded through extrabudgetary resources, without negatively affecting programmed activities, and through specific voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund for the Strategy;

18. Requests the Secretariat to provide conference services for the preparatory process and the Conference itself, the costs thereof to be borne by the host country, on the understanding that the Secretariat will ensure that its existing human resources are utilized to the maximum extent possible, without further charge to the host country;

19. Encourages the international community to provide the necessary financial resources to the Trust Fund for the Strategy and to provide the necessary scientific, technical, human and other resources to ensure adequate support for the activities of the inter-agency secretariat for the Strategy and the Inter-Agency Task Force for Disaster Reduction and its working groups, as well as to facilitate the preparations for the Conference;

20. Expresses its appreciation to those countries that have provided financial support for the activities of the Strategy by making voluntary contributions to its Trust Fund;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to allocate adequate financial and administrative resources, within existing resources, for the effective functioning of the inter-agency secretariat for the Strategy;

22. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution, in particular on the state of preparations for the World Conference on Disaster Reduction, under the item entitled "Environment and sustainable development".

On 23 December [meeting 78], the Assembly, also on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/484/Add.5], adopted resolution 58/215 without vote [agenda item 94 (e)].

Natural disasters and vulnerability

The General Assembly,

Recalling its decision 57/547 of 20 December 2002,

Taking into account the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Recognizing the need to continue to develop an understanding of, and to address, socio-economic activities that exacerbate the vulnerability of societies to natural disasters and to build and further strengthen community capacity to cope with disaster risks,

Noting that the global environment continues to suffer degradation, adding to economic and social vulnerabilities, in particular in developing countries,

Taking into account the various ways and forms in which all countries, in particular the more vulnerable developing countries, are affected by severe natural hazards, such as earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and extreme weather events such as heatwaves, severe droughts, floods and storms, and El Niño/La Niña events, which have global reach,

Expressing its deep concern at the frequency and intensity of extreme weather events and associated natural disasters,

Expressing its deep concern also at the enormous negative impact of severe natural hazards, including extreme weather events and associated natural disasters, which continues to hinder social and economic progress, in particular in developing countries,

Reiterating that, although natural disasters damage the social and economic infrastructure of all countries, the long-term consequences of natural disasters are especially severe in developing countries and hamper their achievement of sustainable development,

Stressing that national authorities need to undertake disaster preparedness and mitigation efforts, in particular through the implementation of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction, so as to enhance the resilience of populations to disasters and reduce the risks to them, their livelihoods, the social and economic infrastructure and environmental resources,

Recalling that the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction provides a framework for collaboration on the development of methodologies to systematically characterize, measure, assess and respond to natural disasters, including weather-related disasters, hazards and vulnerabilities,

Taking into account the fact that extreme weather events and associated natural disasters and their reduction must be dealt with in a coherent manner,

Noting the need for international cooperation to increase the capacity of countries to respond to the negative impacts of all natural hazards, including extreme weather events and associated natural disasters, particularly in developing countries,

Emphasizing the importance of raising awareness among developing countries of the capacities existing at the national, regional and international levels that could be deployed to assist them,

Taking note of the outcome of the Second International Conference on Early Warning, held in Bonn, Germany, from 16 to 18 October 2003,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction, in particular the section on the negative impacts of extreme weather events and associated natural disasters on vulnerable countries, in particular developing countries, as requested by the Assembly in its decision 57/547;

2. Urges the international community to continue to address ways and means, including through cooperation and technical assistance, to reduce the adverse effects of natural disasters, including those caused by extreme weather events, in particular in vulnerable developing countries, through the implementation of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction, and encourages the Inter-Agency Task Force for Disaster Reduction to continue its work in this regard;

3. Encourages Governments to establish effective national platforms or focal points for disaster reduction, and to strengthen them where they already exist;

4. Also encourages Governments, in cooperation with the United Nations system and other stakeholders, to strengthen capacity-building in the most vulnerable regions, to enable them to address the socio-economic factors that increase vulnerability, and encourages the international community to provide effective assistance to developing countries in this regard;

5. Encourages the Inter-Agency Task Force for Disaster Reduction to enhance the coordination on the promotion of disaster reduction as well as to make available to the relevant United Nations entities information on options for natural disaster reduction, including severe natural hazards and extreme weather-related disasters and vulnerabilities;

6. Encourages the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and the parties to the Kyoto Protocol to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change to continue to address the adverse effects of climate change, especially in those developing countries that are particularly vulnerable, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention, and also encourages the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change to continue to assess the adverse effects of climate change on the socio-economic and natural disaster reduction systems of developing countries;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution in a separate section of his report on the implementation of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction, and decides to consider the issue of natural disasters and vulnerability at that session, under the sub-item "International Strategy for Disaster Reduction" of the item entitled "Environment and sustainable development".

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the sub-item on ISDR would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session (decision 58/565).

El Niño

On 5 February [A/57/727], Ecuador transmitted to the Secretary-General the Constitution of the International Research Center on El Niño, which was signed at a meeting of the sponsors of and participants in the Center (Guayaquil, 9-10 January).

Disaster assistance

Ethiopia

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/149 [YUN 2002, p. 931], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/224], reviewed the political, economic and humanitarian situation in Ethiopia and the assistance provided by the United Nations and its partners.

The report said that Ethiopia was subject to drastic weather patterns, with cyclical periods of drought and heavy rain. The rains, combined with an already weakened population, were creating an environment conducive to the spread of infectious diseases, including water-borne diseases and malaria. Certain areas and large population segments were immediately affected by more severe poverty as soon as harvests were endangered by inadequate rainfall patterns. Despite high levels of emergency assistance, the number of people defined as chronically food-insecure was growing yearly, as a result of inadequate development assistance over the preceding decade. A new approach was required to separate chronic and acute food insecurity, and immediate and substantial action was needed to prevent further deterioration. Special emphasis should be placed on improving nutritional capacity to meet emerging needs, emergency water activities and vaccination campaigns. The outlook for 2004 was difficult to anticipate before the "belg" (cropping season) assessment in November/December, but it was expected that relief needs would continue to grow. A robust rehabilitation strategy for pastoral and agricultural areas and a greater focus on resettlement and policy issues affecting development were critical in alleviating the impact of future droughts.

The joint Government-UN appeal "Emergency Assistance Requirements and Implementation Options for 2003, a March update, referred to as the "Addendum", and the appeal update of August identified 11.3 million people in need of 1.4 million tons of food and an additional 3 million at risk. Against the total relief food requirements of 1.8 million tons, 94 per cent was covered by the end of October. Against $108 million required for non-food, about 70 per cent was covered. Revised non-food needs to the end of the year of some $40.4 million were largely unfunded by the end of October, with the exception of support for malaria control.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/24 [draft: A/58/L.22 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (b)].

Emergency humanitarian assistance to Ethiopia

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/149 of 16 December 2002 on emergency humanitarian assistance to Ethiopia,

Noting with concern the recurrent drought that affects Ethiopia, and its consequences,

Recalling the initiatives of the Secretary-General to improve food security, including the appointment of the Special Envoy for the Humanitarian Crisis in the Horn of Africa,

Gravely concerned at the magnitude of the recurrent drought, which affects millions owing to the serious crop failures in drought-prone parts of the country that have weak infrastructures and low development capacities,

Bearing in mind the joint 2004 appeal of the United Nations and the Government of Ethiopia for emergency assistance for Ethiopia, to respond to the food and non-food requirements of households in need so as to prevent the worsening of the current humanitarian crisis,

Noting with serious concern the significant and persistent humanitarian needs in such areas as health, water and acute malnutrition that still exist in parts of the country,

Noting also with serious concern the dire humanitarian situation and its long-term socio-economic and environmental impacts,

Emphasizing the need to address the crisis, bearing in mind the importance of the transition from relief to development, and acknowledging the underlying structural causes of recurrent drought in Ethiopia,

Recognizing that the main responsibility for improving the humanitarian situation and creating conditions for long-term development lies with the Government of Ethiopia, while bearing in mind the important role played by the international community,

Emphasizing the importance of establishing a strong early warning system in order to predict better and respond as early as possible to disasters and to minimize their consequences,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Welcomes the coordinated and collaborative efforts of the Government of Ethiopia, agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system, the donor community, non-governmental organizations and other entities to avert, through their timely and generous response, a major humanitarian crisis in Ethiopia in 2003;
3. Calls upon the international community to respond in a timely manner to the joint 2004 appeal of the United Nations and the Government of Ethiopia for emergency assistance for Ethiopia, covering food and non-food needs, as well as to the urgent needs of programme interventions for 2004, aimed at addressing the underlying causes of food insecurity, and issues of recovery, asset protection and the sustainable development of the affected areas;
4. Welcomes the programme prepared by the Coalition for Food Security in Ethiopia, and encourages the international community to support the Coalition in realizing its main objective, namely, breaking the cycle of food aid dependency within the next three to five years, thereby enabling fifteen million vulnerable people to engage in sustainable productive activities;
5. Also welcomes the efforts of the Government of Ethiopia, the international community and civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to strengthen mechanisms already in place to respond to such emergency situations, and appreciates their endeavours to increase the availability of food through domestic production and to ensure the access of households in need to food, health and water facilities;
6. Further welcomes the initiative taken by the Secretary-General in appointing a Special Envoy for the Humanitarian Crisis in the Horn of Africa, with the objective of mobilizing resources for relief support as well as the sustainable development of the affected areas;
7. Invites the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat to continue considering ways to enhance the mobilization of emergency relief assistance to cover the remaining humanitarian needs in Ethiopia;
8. Calls upon all development partners to integrate relief efforts with recovery, asset protection and long-term development and to address the underlying structural causes of recurrent drought in Ethiopia in a way that is, inter alia, in line with the poverty reduction strategy paper, including strategies that are aimed at preventing such crises in the future and that improve the resilience of the population;
9. Encourages the Government of Ethiopia to further strengthen its efforts to address the underlying structural causes of recurrent threats of drought as part of its overall economic development programme;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Iran

On 26 December, an earthquake measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale struck the city of Bam and its surrounding villages in Kerman province in south-eastern Iran, killing some 26,000 people and rendering 75,000 people homeless. It also severely damaged or destroyed about 85 per cent of the houses, commercial units, health facilities and administrative buildings in Bam and surrounding villages, including the 2,500 year-old historic citadel of Bam. The Iranian Red Crescent Society launched a massive rescue and relief operation, which was supported by the international community. Within hours of the disaster, the United Nations dispatched its Disaster Assessment and Coordination Team, which, with UN agencies, mobilized relief items and technical support. The UN resident coordinator initiated the preparation of a Flash Appeal in December, with the support of the UN country team and OCHA.

Chernobyl aftermath

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/109 [YUN 2001, p. 870], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/58/332], described international efforts to study, mitigate and minimize the consequences of the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear accident [YUN 1986, p. 584].

The report of the multidisciplinary international inter-agency mission [YUN 2001, p. 869], which studied the consequences of Chernobyl 15 years after the accident, was launched under the title "The Human Consequences of the Chernobyl Nuclear Accident: A Strategy for Recovery". The report made several recommendations for recovery and sustainable development. In order to promote the new strategy for recovery with government agencies and international donors, and to help initiate the implementation of its recommendations, the United Nations Coordinator of International Cooperation on Chernobyl visited the region. At the field level, concrete actions were taken by the UN country teams in the three most affected countries—Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine. The disbursement of seed money from the United Nations Chernobyl Trust Fund was authorized for three pilot projects, prepared by the country teams in the affected countries, which aimed to support socio-economic rehabilitation and to improve people's health. Another recommendation of the report was implemented with the launch, in June, of the International Chernobyl Research and Information Network, to support ongoing international, national and civil society efforts for the sustainable development of the affected regions by compiling, consolidating and coordinating scientific research, commissioning further research, and ensuring its effective dissemination to all stakeholders.

The United Nations saw the need to energize work with donors to secure more systematic support and focused on a number of modalities for approaching them. UN programmes aimed at addressing the consequences of the disaster had been chronically underfunded for many years, and because of the constraints felt by some donors, Chernobyl fell into a budgetary gap. Substantial resources were needed to sustain the international community's recent initiatives. Annexed to the report were accounts by the Governments of the three most affected States regarding their efforts to overcome the consequences of the catastrophe.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/119 [draft: A/58/L.44 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 40 (c)].

Strengthening of international cooperation and coordination of efforts to study, mitigate and minimize the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 45/190 of 21 December 1990, 46/150 of 18 December 1991, 47/165 of 18 December 1992, 48/206 of 21 December 1993, 50/134 of 20 December 1995, 52/172 of 16 December 1997, 54/97 of 8 December 1999 and 56/109 of 14 December 2001, as well as its resolution 55/171 of 14 December 2000 on closure of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, and taking note of the decisions adopted by the organs, organizations and programmes of the United Nations system in the implementation of those resolutions,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolutions 1990/50 of 13 July 1990, 1991/51 of 26 July 1991 and 1992/38 of 30 July 1992 and Council decision 1993/232 of 22 July 1993,

Conscious of the long-term nature of the consequences of the disaster at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, which was a major technological catastrophe in terms of its scope and complexity and created humanitarian, environmental, social, economic and health consequences and problems of common concern, requiring for their solution wide and active international cooperation and coordination of efforts in this field at the international and national levels,

Expressing profound concern at the ongoing effects of the consequences of the accident on the lives and health of people, in particular children, in the affected areas of Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine, as well as in other affected countries,

Acknowledging the importance of the national efforts being undertaken by the Governments of Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine to mitigate and minimize the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster,

Noting with appreciation the contribution made by States and by organizations of the United Nations system to the development of cooperation to mitigate and minimize the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, the activities of regional and other organizations and those of non-governmental organizations, as well as bilateral activities,

Recognizing the importance of continuing international support to the national efforts of the Governments and civil societies of Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine, as the most affected countries, to mitigate and minimize the persisting negative effects of the Chernobyl disaster on the sustainable development of the affected areas as a result of the radiological, health, socio-economic, psychological and environmental consequences of the disaster,

Welcoming the increased role played by the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations resident coordinators and the United Nations country teams in Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine in helping to address both the developmental and the humanitarian consequences of the catastrophe,

Taking note of the United Nations report entitled "The Human Consequences of the Chernobyl Nuclear Accident: A Strategy for Recovery", prepared on the basis of an international needs assessment undertaken in mid-2001 in the affected areas of Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine,

Emphasizing the importance of the new developmental approach to tackling the problems caused by the Chernobyl accident, aimed at normalizing the situation of the individuals and communities concerned in the medium and long term,

Stressing the continued need for a response to the exceptional Chernobyl-related needs, in particular in the areas of health, ecology and research, as the transition is made from the emergency to the recovery phase of mitigation of the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, as mentioned in the United Nations report entitled "The Human Consequences of the Chernobyl Nuclear Accident: A Strategy for Recovery",

Welcoming the launch of the International Chernobyl Research and Information Network, with the aim of supporting the ongoing international, national and civil society efforts towards the sustainable development of the affected territories by compiling, consolidating and coordinating relevant scientific research, commissioning further research where required, and making available and ensuring the effective dissemination of its findings, which should allow informed decision-making on the phases of long-term recovery and management with a view to improving the complex and diverse humanitarian, ecological, economic, social and medical situations in those territories,

Welcoming also the establishment of the Chernobyl Forum by the International Atomic Energy Agency, with the participation of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation, the World Health Organization, the World Bank and representatives of the three most affected States,

Welcoming further the coordination of the activities of the International Chernobyl Research and Information Network and the Chernobyl Forum, and efforts to ensure the substantial integration of the Forum's assessment of environmental and health consequences into the Network process,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General concerning the implementation of resolution 56/109,

1. Reaffirms that the United Nations plays an important catalytic and coordinating role in the strengthening of international cooperation to study, mitigate and minimize the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, and commends the contribution made by all other relevant multilateral mechanisms to this end;

2. Welcomes the further practical measures that have been taken by the Secretary-General and the United Nations Coordinator of International Cooperation on Chernobyl to strengthen coordination of the international efforts in that area, especially the launch of the International Chernobyl Research and Information Network;

3. Also welcomes the efforts undertaken by the agencies of the United Nations system and other international organizations members of the Inter-Agency Task Force on Chernobyl to implement a new developmental approach to studying, mitigating and minimizing the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, in particular through the development of specific projects, and requests the Inter-Agency Task Force to continue its activities to that end, including through coordinating efforts in the field of resource mobilization;

4. Acknowledges the difficulties faced by the most affected countries in minimizing the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, and invites States, in particular donor States and all relevant agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system, in particular the Bretton Woods institutions, as well as non-governmental organizations, to continue to provide support to the ongoing efforts of Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine to mitigate the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, including through the allocation of adequate funds to support medical, social, economic and ecological programmes related to the disaster;

5. Takes note with satisfaction of the recent development of the Cooperation for Rehabilitation Programme, aimed at promoting better living conditions in and the sustainable development of the affected territories;

6. Emphasizes the important role of the authorities of the affected countries in mitigating the humanitarian and other consequences of the Chernobyl catastrophe, and welcomes the continued efforts of the affected countries in this regard, including the measures taken with a view to facilitating the work of humanitarian organizations, including non-governmental organizations, to mitigate the humanitarian and other consequences of the Chernobyl catastrophe;

7. Stresses the need for coordinated international cooperation in studying the consequences of the Chernobyl catastrophe, in particular through effective work of the International Chernobyl Research and Information Network, the Chernobyl Forum, the International Chernobyl Centre for nuclear safety, radioactive waste and radioecology, and other research centres from the most affected countries, and invites Member States and all interested parties to take part in their activities;

8. Welcomes the decision of the Council of Heads of State of the Commonwealth of Independent States to proclaim 26 April the International Day Commemorating Victims of Radiation Accidents and Catastrophes in the States members of the Commonwealth;

9. Invites Member States to observe this Day and to conduct appropriate activities to commemorate victims of radiation accidents and catastrophes and to enhance public awareness of their consequences for human health and the environment throughout the world;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts in the implementation of the relevant General Assembly resolutions and, through existing coordination mechanisms, in particular the United Nations Coordinator of International Cooperation on Chernobyl, to continue to maintain close cooperation with the agencies of the United Nations system, as well as with regional and other relevant organizations, while implementing specific Chernobyl-related programmes and projects;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to consider possible ways to strengthen further the coordination, analytical, advocacy and technical capacities of the United Nations in the field, as well as at Headquarters, as described in the report of the Secretary-General, with due regard to the existing administrative and budgetary capacity of the Organization;

12. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, under a separate sub-item, a report containing a comprehensive assessment of the implementation of all aspects of the present resolution and proposals for innovative measures for optimizing the effectiveness of the response of the international community, including the United Nations, to the Chernobyl disaster, as well as to consider how better to focus international cooperation to achieve a long-term developmental approach for the affected areas, bearing in mind the exceptional Chernobyl-related needs.

Chapter IV

International trade, finance and transport

Growth in the volume of world merchandise trade in 2003 accelerated to an estimated 4.7 per cent, from 3 per cent in 2002. The improved performance was attributed mainly to increased import demand in developing countries, particularly in Asia, and in the transition economies. Most of the growth occurred during the second half of the year. Among the developed countries, exports of the United States rebounded in the third quarter and those of Japan recovered in the second half of the year. However, Western Europe experienced low growth in both import and export volumes, while the export performance of Central and Eastern Europe was mixed. On the other hand, the external trade of developing countries grew by 9 per cent, well over the world average. International commodity prices improved slightly in 2003, largely reflecting the weakening of the value of the United States dollar. The General Assembly convened an open-ended panel in October to consider the report of the Meeting of Eminent Persons on Commodity Issues, which made recommendations for improving the conditions in commodity markets and for alleviating the poverty of many commodity producers.

The net transfer of financial resources from developing countries in 2003 was similar in magnitude to that in 2002, when it reached a peak of $192 billion. There was also a net outward transfer from economies in transition. In Latin America, the increase in exports and deceleration in the decline in imports were not enough to reverse the large net outward transfers experienced in 2002. Likewise, the large net transfers from East Asia resulting from its strong export growth continued in 2003.

In September, the multilateral trading system suffered a major setback as the Fifth World Trade Organization (WTO) Ministerial Conference failed to advance the negotiations on key aspects of the Doha work programme adopted at the Fourth (2001) Ministerial Conference. In December, the General Assembly called on WTO members to engage in negotiations with a renewed sense of urgency and to redouble efforts to achieve a successful outcome.

In April, the high-level meeting between the Economic and Social Council and the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund) discussed co-ordination and cooperation in the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus adopted at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development and identified significant gaps in some key areas. In October, the Assembly held its first high-level Dialogue on Financing for Development, which called for a more precise mechanism for monitoring implementation of the Monterrey Consensus commitments and of related targets in the Millennium Development Goals, adopted by the Assembly in 2000.

The Trade and Development Board, the governing body of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), adopted agreed conclusions on Africa's trade performance. It also recommended that the secretariat implement its new strategy for technical cooperation and initiated preparations for the convening in 2004 of UNCTAD XI in Brazil.

The International Trade Centre, operated jointly by UNCTAD and WTO, increased its delivery of technical cooperation programmes for developing countries and economies in transition by some 20 per cent.

---

International trade

---

The Trade and Development Report, 2003 [Sales No. E.03.II.D.7] stated that world trade registered a modest recovery in 2002 following the marked deceleration of 2001. Import volumes rose by 1.6 per cent and export volumes by 2 per cent, having fallen by -0.1 and -0.9 per cent, respectively, in 2001. However, the trade volume growth rate exceeded world output by only a narrow margin. The recovery was due to the rise in United States imports, which increased by nearly 4 per cent in 2002, after a 3 per cent decline the previous year, and the recovery of Japan's imports, which rose by 1.6 per cent, and exports, which attained their 2000 levels. In Asia, China's export growth rate tripled in 2002, matched by the growth in imports following its accession to membership of the World Trade Organization (WTO). On the other hand, trade volume in the European Union (EU) was low due to slow growth in the region, and Latin America experienced one of the worst years since the debt crisis, with an 8 per cent drop in imports; in Argentina, imports fell to half their 2001 level. Exports from that region held up slightly, due to strong demand from the United States combined with currency declines against the dollar. In Africa, the volume of both imports and exports grew by 2.6 per cent despite weak demand from Western Europe. The terms of trade for the region as a whole deteriorated for the second consecutive year, with import growth exceeding export growth in value by a wide margin. Although sub-Saharan Africa's terms of trade recovered moderately in 2002, reflecting a price increase in exports of non-fuel commodities, that upturn was insufficient to make up for 2001 losses. In the transition economies, both imports and exports decelerated but still exceeded world averages by a wide margin. Many of the candidates for EU membership were integrating more closely into a single market, but weakening growth in the EU caused their exports to slow in late 2002. Export earnings increased for most Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) countries, notably the Russian Federation, due to rising prices and volume of oil exports.

The World Economic and Social Survey 2003 [Sales No. E.03.II.C.1] stated that the volume of world merchandise trade grew by 1.8 per cent in 2002, the second weakest performance in two decades. However, in dollar terms, world trade expanded by 4 per cent, reflecting modest increases in the prices of commodities and manufactured goods and a weaker dollar. International trade performance was uneven in 2002, with strong recovery in the first half of the year because of improved economic conditions in many countries and a revival in manufacturing. However, by the last quarter, the recovery of global trade decelerated, with new shocks to consumer and investor confidence, slower demand and loss of momentum in industrial production. That weakness intensified in early 2003 as conflict in Iraq loomed.

A joint report on the world economic situation and prospects [Sales No. E.04.II.C.2], issued by the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), stated that the volume of merchandise trade grew from 3 per cent in 2002 to an estimated 4.7 per cent in 2003, due to increased import demand in developing countries, particularly in Asia, and the transition economies. Most of the growth occurred in the second half of the year. In dollar terms, world trade grew by almost 13 per cent, reflecting not only increased volume but also a continuing weakening of the dollar. Among the developed economies, the merchandise exports of the United States rebounded in the third quarter of 2003, with exports of capital goods leading the recovery. United States real imports grew by almost 4 per cent. Japan's exports also recovered in the second half of the year, reaching an estimated 6 per cent, while imports were expected to continue their growth of around 5 per cent. In Western Europe, the growth of import and export volumes was low as the euro continued to appreciate in value, increasing competitive pressure on many EU exporters. However, growth in world demand partially offset the negative impact of the stronger euro on exports. Robust domestic demand and currency appreciation weakened exports and increased imports of both Australia and New Zealand, while increased international competition, trade disputes and the appreciation of its currency reduced Canada's share in the United States market. In the CIS countries, strong regional economic growth and higher oil prices drove rapid trade growth. However, export performance in Central and Eastern Europe was mixed, with exports stalling in some cases because of earlier currency appreciation, and increasing in other cases as competitiveness improved. Imports remained strong due to higher disposable income in most countries and strong investment in others.

In developing economies, external trade grew by 9 per cent in 2003, well above the world average, though imports grew more slowly than exports because of external financial constraints and weak domestic conditions in several economies. Africa recorded a modest trade growth in 2003 as high oil-import bills impacted negatively on the volume of imports of many countries. China continued to play a dominant role in the trade performance of East Asia, as its exports and imports grew by some 30 per cent in nominal terms. Export growth was robust in South Asia in 2003, particularly because Pakistan's preferential textile export quotas to the EU and the United States were expanded. Western Asia's trade performance was boosted by the rise in oil prices. Latin America and the Caribbean achieved a more balanced trade performance, with exports growing by only 1.4 per cent, due to Mexico's poor performance, lower oil exports by Venezuela and weak exports from Argentina. Brazil's exports benefited from both higher prices and greater external demand, resulting from a diversification of its trading partners, particularly China.

Africa's trade performance

At its fiftieth session (Geneva, 6-17 October), the UNCTAD Trade and Development Board

(TDB) had before it a July report by the UNCTAD secretariat on economic development in Africa: issues in Africa's trade performance [TD/B/50/6 & Corr.1]. The report examined the structure of trade and Africa's performance, price volatility and terms of trade losses, the beneficiaries, past policy responses and policy issues. It noted that Africa's share in world trade had been falling consistently since 1980. The continent remained heavily dependent on the export of a few primary commodities, most of which had suffered a decline in prices leading to large terms-of-trade losses. Its share in world exports fell from 6 per cent in 1980 to 2 per cent in 2002, and its share of world imports fell from 4.6 to 2.1 per cent during the same period. Unlike other developing regions, Africa had by and large not been able to diversify into manufactures or market-dynamic products and had even lost market shares for its traditional exports. Although the value of Africa's manufactures was increasing by 6.3 per cent annually, that rate was low compared with 14 and 12 per cent for Asia and Latin America, respectively. Market-oriented policies had not been able to reverse the situation. In addition to providing better market access and reductions in subsidies for products competing with African exports, external resources were required to compensate for losses and to fill the resource gap in order to ensure adequate investment in the development of human and physical infrastructure, institution-building and diversification.

In agreed conclusions adopted on 17 October [A/58/15 (agreed conclusions 477(L))], TDB noted with concern that Africa's share in international trade had fallen considerably in the past 20 years; its share in commodity exports, where it traditionally had had comparative advantage, had also decreased. It encouraged African countries to continue to promote peace and stability and strengthen their economic and legal framework, which were essential factors for strengthening economic and social development and enhancing their participation in international trade.

TDB agreed that the ability of African producers to retain and increase market share and move up the value chain should be enhanced through such measures as providing extension services and farm inputs, transportation, market information, quality control and assistance to farmers. TDB encouraged the design and delivery of technical assistance to realize those objectives. It called for support for efforts to develop and upgrade African countries' productive capacity, increase their export earnings and adjust to fluctuating commodity prices. TDB called for support and exchanges of experiences in the better promotion of commodities of export interest to Africa, including non-traditional exports. It requested UNCTAD, in collaboration with regional economic communities, to further study interregional trade in Africa, with a view to identifying the potential for its future expansion. The international community should complement the efforts of African countries in the context of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) [YUN 2002, p. 907], to improve the application of the Highly Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative and to supply additional public and private resources to bridge the investment gap. It agreed that UNCTAD should continue to support African countries to meet NEPAD's aims and objectives and to provide analysis and policy advice on African development.

The multilateral trading system

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/235 [YUN 2002, p. 934], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/58/414], prepared in collaboration with UNCTAD, on international trade and development, which discussed recent trends in international trade, developments in the multilateral trading system, particularly the results of the Fifth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization (WTO) (Cancún, Mexico, 10-14 September), regional arrangements and other trade measures, UNCTAD's role and development benchmarks.

The report said the Fifth WTO Ministerial Conference had been expected to ensure that political impetus was given to advancing negotiations on key aspects of the Doha (Qatar) work programme, adopted by WTO's Fourth Ministerial Conference in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1432], build greater confidence for the future of the trading system and provide fresh impetus to the world economy and global trade. Despite intensive negotiations since the Doha Conference, progress in advancing the work programme encountered a number of limitations, including the failure to reach agreement on issues of priority concern to developing countries. Those countries found it difficult to compromise in stalled negotiations on agricultural and non-agricultural products and on Singapore issues (trade and competition policy, transparency in government procurement and trade facilitation). On the eve of the Conference, agreement was reached on some issues, including trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights (TRIPS) and public health. Other steps forward included the conclusion of the accession process of Cambodia and Nepal and the adoption of modalities for special treatment of least developed countries (LDCs) in services negotiations. Consensus was not achieved on other key

Doha work programme issues, such as agriculture, non-agricultural market access, special and differential treatment, implementation-related issues and Singapore issues. A revised draft Cancún ministerial text (also known as the Derbez text) was submitted on 13 September, on the basis of which negotiations continued. The Conference Chairman, in a statement issued at the end of the Conference, indicated that the WTO General Council would convene no later than 15 December 2003 to work towards concluding the negotiations. There was concern, however, that the stalemate in the negotiations could lead to a more vigorous pursuit of bilateral and regional trade agreements, the number of which (over 200) had grown rapidly during the 1990s. The cause of trade liberalization could be affected and protectionist sentiment could gain ground.

The report concluded that all countries had shared interests in the success of the Doha work programme and the realization of its core development agenda, which, if effectively pursued and implemented, could put in place important elements for achieving the Millennium Development Goal (MDG) [YUN 2001, p. 51] of "an open, equitable, rule-based, predictable and non-discriminatory multilateral trading . . . system".

UNCTAD consideration. At its fiftieth session (Geneva, 6-17 October) [A/58/15], TDB reviewed an UNCTAD secretariat paper on developments and issues in the post-Doha work programme of practical concern to developing countries: outcome of the Fifth WTO Ministerial Conference (TD/B/50/8). Summarizing the Board's discussion, the President highlighted the importance, in the post-Cancún phase, of concentrating on the Doha mandate, addressing the legitimate concerns of developing countries on new and complicated issues on which no consensus existed for new WTO disciplines, and addressing coherence and consistency between trade, financial, monetary and technological policies in support of development. Future negotiations should take into account the considerable adjustment and social costs for developing countries of the negotiations and implementation of their results. The special needs of LDCs should be adequately addressed, including binding duty-free and quota-free access for LDC products, along with improvements in preferential schemes and rules, the removal of non-tariff barriers and avoidance of safeguards and contingency measures on their products.

UNCTAD could provide a forum for consensus-building in negotiating areas for further treatment in WTO, and so contribute to putting the Doha work programme back on track. Equally important was the support provided by UNCTAD to countries in the accession process. The international community was called on to provide greater resources to UNCTAD so that it could play fully its trade and development role.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/58/481/Add.1], adopted resolution 58/197 without vote [agenda item 91 (a)].

International trade and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/182 of 20 December 2000, 56/178 of 21 December 2001 and 57/235 of 20 December 2002 on international trade and development,

Recalling also the Plan of Action adopted at the tenth session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, held in Bangkok from 12 to 19 February 2000,

Reaffirming the role of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development as focal point within the United Nations for the integrated treatment of trade and development and the interrelated issues in the areas of finance, technology, investment and sustainable development,

Recalling the provisions of the United Nations Millennium Declaration pertaining to trade and related development issues, as well as the outcomes of the International Conference on Financing for Development, held in Monterrey, Mexico, from 18 to 22 March 2002, and the World Summit on Sustainable Development, held in Johannesburg, South Africa, from 26 August to 4 September 2002,

Recalling also its resolutions 57/250 of 20 December 2002 and 57/270 B of 23 June 2003, in which it invited the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, as well as the Trade and Development Board, to contribute, within its mandate, to the implementation and to the review of the progress made in the implementation of the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits and invited the President of the Trade and Development Board to present the outcomes of such reviews to the Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of the report of the Meeting of Eminent Persons on Commodity Issues, held in Geneva on 22 and 23 September 2003, and expressing appreciation for the work of the eminent persons,

Recalling that, to benefit fully from trade, which in many cases is the single most important external source of development financing, the establishment and the enhancement of appropriate institutions and policies in developing countries, as well as in countries with economics in transition, are needed and that, in this context, enhanced market access, balanced rules and well-targeted, sustainably financed technical assistance and capacity-building programmes for developing countries also play important roles,

Noting the significant contribution of the multilateral trading system to economic growth, development and employment and the importance of maintaining the process of reform and liberalization of trade policies, as well as the importance of rejecting the use of protectionism, so that the system plays its full part in promoting recovery, growth and development, in particular of developing countries, bearing in mind paragraph 10 of resolution 55/182,

Recognizing with concern that the benefits from global economic prosperity and trade liberalization have not fully accrued to all developing countries,

Recognizing that a number of developing countries have undertaken significant trade and investment liberalization unilaterally, regionally and/or multilaterally, both within and outside the context of structural adjustment programmes,

Reaffirming the urgency, subject to national legislation, of recognizing the rights of local and indigenous communities that are holders of traditional knowledge, innovations and practices and, with the approval and involvement of the holders of such knowledge, innovations and practices, of developing and implementing benefit-sharing mechanisms on mutually-agreed terms for the use of such knowledge, innovations and practices,

Recognizing that countries must take appropriate and necessary security measures, but also underlining the importance of taking these measures in the manner that is least disruptive of normal trade and related practices,

Taking note of the in-depth review undertaken by the Trade and Development Board at its fiftieth session with respect to developments and issues in the post-Doha work programme of particular concern to developing countries, including the outcome of the Fifth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held in Cancún, Mexico, from 10 to 14 September 2003, and its contribution to an understanding of the actions required to help developing countries secure beneficial and meaningful integration into the multilateral trading system and the global economy and to achieve a balanced, development-oriented and successful conclusion of the Doha negotiations,

Taking note also of the report of the Trade and Development Board and the report of the Secretary-General,

Noting the proposals made to implement the work programme of the World Trade Organization, including those to liberalize international agricultural and non-agricultural trade,

Underlining the development potential of a balanced outcome of the negotiations under the Doha work programme, which reflects the interests of all World Trade Organization members, particularly the developing countries,

1. Reaffirms the great importance of promoting the objectives set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration of ensuring an open, equitable, rule-based, predictable and non-discriminatory multilateral trading system in pursuit of economic growth and development, fairness and a level playing field as well as human development and poverty eradication goals, and reiterates its commitment to achieving those objectives;

2. Reiterates the commitment made at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held in Doha from 9 to 14 November 2001, to place development at the heart of the Doha work programme and to continue to make positive efforts to ensure that developing countries, especially the least developed among them, secure a share in the growth of world trade commensurate with the needs of their economic development;

3. Expresses its concern about the insufficient progress in the Doha negotiations, especially in areas of interest to developing countries, as manifested, inter alia, by missed deadlines in relation to special and differential treatment, implementation-related issues and concerns and modalities for agricultural negotiations;

4. Also expresses its concern about the setback at the Fifth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, and stresses the importance of redoubling efforts in working towards a successful, timely and development-oriented conclusion of the Doha negotiations no later than 1 January 2005 as set out in the Ministerial Declaration of the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization ("Doha Ministerial Declaration");

5. Further expresses its concern about the adverse consequences that the setback of the Fifth Ministerial Conference may have for the multilateral trading system, including a possible surge in protectionist measures;

6. Expresses its concern about the adoption of a number of unilateral actions that are not consistent with the rules of the World Trade Organization, harm the exports of all countries, in particular those of developing countries, and have a considerable bearing on the ongoing World Trade Organization negotiations and on the achievement and further enhancement of the development dimension of the trade negotiations;

7. Considers that the political will and commitment of World Trade Organization members to address the unresolved questions under the Doha work programme promptly and fully and to focus on the key development issues are essential for bringing the negotiations back on track;

8. Underscores the need for concerted political will and efforts to address the challenges of globalization, including by improving market access and market entry for the export products of particular interest to developing countries so that they can benefit more from the globalization process;

9. Recognizes that it is important for developing countries and countries with economies in transition to consider reducing trade barriers among themselves;

10. Stresses the importance of an open, transparent, inclusive and democratic process and of procedures for the effective functioning of the multilateral trading system that allow for internal transparency and the effective participation of members, including in the decision-making process, and that enable them to have their vital interests duly reflected in the outcome of trade negotiations;

11. Also stresses the need to place the interests and concerns of developing countries at the heart of the Doha work programme and to revive faith in it, and, in this regard, calls upon members of the World Trade Organization to engage in negotiations with a renewed sense of urgency and purpose and to redouble their efforts to achieve a successful outcome of the Doha work programme, including on the following issues of particular interest to the developing countries:

(a) The expeditious and appropriate resolution of outstanding implementation issues, consistent with paragraph 12 of the Doha Ministerial Declaration;

(b) The completion of the review of all provisions relating to special and differential treatment with a view to strengthening them and making them more precise, effective and operational, recognizing the importance of paragraph 12.1 (i) of the decision on implementation-related issues and concerns of 14 November 2001, adopted by the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization;

(c) Substantial improvements in market access, the reduction of, with a view to phasing out, all forms of export subsidies, substantial reductions in trade-distorting domestic support in agriculture and the expeditious adoption of appropriate modalities for reduction commitments in agriculture negotiations, with operationally effective special and differential treatment and non-trade concerns being taken into account, in accordance with paragraphs 13 and 14 of the Doha Ministerial Declaration;

(d) Abusive application of anti-dumping, sanitary and phytosanitary standards and other trade-distorting measures;

(e) The positive consideration of trade-related issues pertaining to the commodity sector in the multilateral trading system;

(f) An effective solution to address the problems reflected in the sectoral initiative in favour of cotton proposed by a group of African countries within the context of negotiations on agriculture under the Doha work programme;

(g) Negotiations on trade in services conducted with a view to promoting the economic growth of all trading partners and the development of developing countries and the least developed countries, without a priori exclusion of any service sector or mode of supply and with special attention given to sectors and modes of supply of export interest to developing countries, recognizing the work already undertaken in the negotiations and the large number of proposals submitted by members on a wide range of sectors and on several horizontal issues, as well as on the movement of natural persons;

(h) Appropriate modalities for reduction or elimination commitments in negotiations on market access for non-agricultural products, as provided for in paragraph 16 of the Doha Ministerial Declaration, in particular on products of export interest to developing countries, and taking into account the special needs and interests of developing and least developed country participants, including through less than full reciprocity in reduction commitments;

(i) The review of the Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights, taking fully into account its development dimension;

(j) In accordance with paragraph 16 of the Doha Ministerial Declaration, on market access for non-agricultural products, reduction or elimination of high tariffs, tariff peaks and tariff escalation, as well as non-tariff barriers, on those products, in particular on products of export interest to developing countries;

(k) The clarification and improvement of disciplines in the areas of anti-dumping, subsidies and countervailing measures, taking into account the needs of developing countries, including the least developed among them, while preserving the basic concepts, principles and effectiveness of those agreements and their instruments and objectives in non-agricultural market access;

(l) The examination, in the context of paragraphs 36 and 37 of the Doha Ministerial Declaration, of the relationship between trade, debt and finance and between trade and transfer of technology, and possible recommendations thereon, taking into account their development dimension;

(m) Making the World Trade Organization operations more transparent, including through more effective and prompt dissemination of information;

12. Recognizes the crucial role that the expeditious implementation of World Trade Organization agreements and improved World Trade Organization rules, reflective of the development dimension of the Doha Ministerial Declaration, can play with regard to the development opportunities of developing countries and their capacity to integrate into the global economy;

13. Takes note of the provisions of the Doha Ministerial Declaration with respect to the relationship between trade and investment, the interaction between trade and competition policy, transparency in government procurement and trade facilitation;

14. Reaffirms that agriculture remains a fundamental and key sector for the overwhelming majority of developing countries, and stresses the importance of a successful conclusion of the Doha work programme in this regard;

15. Also reaffirms the commitment to the full and faithful implementation of the Agreement on Textiles and Clothing, and calls for further progress in its implementation, which is a necessary and inherent condition of full implementation of the agreements arising from the Uruguay Round of Multilateral Trade Negotiations;

16. Further reaffirms that preferences granted to developing countries, pursuant to the "enabling clause", should be generalized, non-reciprocal and non-discriminatory;

17. Reaffirms the need for the implementation of paragraph 4 of the Marrakesh Ministerial Decision on Measures Concerning the Possible Negative Effects of the Reform Programme on Least Developed and Net Food-importing Developing Countries;

18. Welcomes the decision adopted by the General Council of the World Trade Organization on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Doha Declaration on the Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights and Public Health to address the problems faced by countries with insufficient or no manufacturing capacity in the pharmaceutical sector in accessing medicines at affordable prices when combating serious public health problems afflicting many developing and least developed countries, especially those resulting from HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis, malaria and other epidemics, and invites all members to work towards an expeditious and permanent solution to the issue by, inter alia, amending the Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights within the agreed time frame, to ensure that the solution will be simple to use, sustainable, predictable and legally secure;

19. Emphasizes that bilateral and regional trade arrangements should contribute to the multilateral trading system, and in this context stresses the importance of clarifying and improving disciplines and procedures under the existing provisions of the World Trade Organization applying to regional trade agreements in accordance with paragraph 29 of the Doha Ministerial Declaration, taking into account the implications of those agreements for development, and urges the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, in accordance with its mandate, to provide technical inputs in this respect;

20. Reaffirms the commitments made at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, and at the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, held in Brussels from 14 to 20 May 2001, in this regard calls upon developed countries that have not already done so to work towards the objective of duty-free, quota-free market access for all least developed country exports, and notes that the consideration of proposals for developing countries to contribute to improved market access for the least developed countries would also be helpful;

21. Welcomes the approval of the accession of Cambodia and Nepal to the World Trade Organization, stresses the importance of facilitating the accession of all developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, as well as countries with economies in transition, that apply for membership in the World Trade Organization, bearing in mind paragraph 21 of resolution 55/182 and subsequent developments, and calls for the effective and faithful application of the World Trade Organization guidelines on accession of the least developed countries;

22. Invites members of the international community to consider the interests of non-members of the World Trade Organization in the context of trade liberalization;

23. Reaffirms the commitment to actively pursue the work programme of the World Trade Organization with respect to addressing the trade-related issues and concerns affecting the fuller integration of countries with small, vulnerable economies into the multilateral trading system in a manner commensurate with their special circumstances and in support of their efforts towards sustainable development, in accordance with paragraph 35 of the Doha Ministerial Declaration;

24. Acknowledges the seriousness of the concerns expressed in the Almaty Programme of Action adopted at the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation, held in Almaty, Kazakhstan, on 28 and 29 August 2003, and stresses the need for the special problems and needs of landlocked developing countries, including those contained in paragraph 33 of the Programme of Action, as well as other relevant issues contained in the section on international trade and trade facilitation of the Programme of Action, to be effectively addressed by the relevant international organizations and donors in a multi-stakeholder approach;

25. Notes the health- and environment-related measures that have an impact on exports, stresses that the adoption or enforcement of any measures necessary to protect human, animal or plant life or health should not be applied in a manner that would constitute arbitrary or unjustified discrimination or a disguised restriction on international trade, and recognizes the importance of capacity-building support to enable developing countries to put in place measures that are appropriate and necessary for meeting standards consistent with those of the World Trade Organization;

26. Encourages the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the World Trade Organization, the World Bank, the United Nations Industrial Development Programme, the United Nations Development Programme and other relevant international organizations to continue to cooperate on trade-related capacity-building in developing countries, including, as appropriate, under the Integrated Framework for Trade-related Technical Assistance to Least Developed Countries and the Joint Integrated Technical Assistance Programme;

27. Requests the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to continue its work, within its mandate, on trade-related issues and policies, from the development perspective, including its contribution to the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), and notes its work on development benchmarks of the international trading system and trade negotiations;

28. Reiterates the importance of supporting United Nations Conference on Trade and Development programmes of technical cooperation and capacity-building that assist developing countries, especially the least developed countries, countries with economies in transition and countries with small and vulnerable economies, in particular those programmes that support their participation in the Doha work programme, in accordance with the technical cooperation strategy of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development;

29. Emphasizes the importance of and invites Member States to support the activities of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, and invites donors and other countries in a position to do so to continue to provide the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development with the resources necessary to effectively implement its technical cooperation activities by giving priority to longer-term sustainable activities, particularly through multi-year funding mechanisms and inter-divisional operations based on the thematic priorities set by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development in its work programme;

30. Takes note of the substantive item of the provisional agenda of the eleventh session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, to be held in São Paulo, Brazil, from 13 to 18 June 2004, entitled "Enhancing coherence between national development strategies and global economic processes towards economic growth and development, particularly of developing countries", and in this context stresses the importance of the role and mandate of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development;

31. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations, in collaboration with the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution and on developments in the multilateral trading system under the sub-item entitled "International trade and development".

Trade policy

Trade in goods and services, and commodities

The Commission on Trade in Goods and Services, and Commodities, at its seventh session (Geneva, 3-6 February) [TD/B/EX(31)/4], had before it the following documentation: a note by the UNCTAD secretariat on export diversification, market access and competitiveness [TD/B/COM.1/54]; the 2002 report of the Expert Meeting on the Diversification of Production and Exports in Commodity-dependent Developing Countries, Including Single-commodity Exporters, for Industrialization and Development, Taking into Account the Special Needs of LDCs [TD/B/COM.1/50] [YUN 2002, p. 939]; a note by the UNCTAD secretariat on trade in services and development implications [TD/B/COM.1/55]; the report of the Expert Meeting on Audiovisual Services: Improving Participation of Developing Countries [TD/B/COM.1/56] [YUN 2002, p. 939]; a note by the UNCTAD secretariat on trade, environment and development [TD/B/COM.1/52]; the report of the Expert Meeting on Environmental Requirements and International Trade [TD/B/COM.1/53] [YUN 2002, p. 939]; and a progress report on the implementation of agreed conclusions and recommendations, including the post-Doha follow-up [TD/B/COM.1/57].

In agreed recommendations of 6 February, the Commission called on UNCTAD to intensify its work and activities, particularly in the follow-up to the post-Doha work programme, taking into account the special needs of LDCs; to monitor the progress on the Doha work programme regularly from the point of view of development issues; and to provide substantive support to various WTO bodies.

The Commission recommended that UNCTAD continue its policy-oriented analysis and capacity-building activities and undertake work on: the impacts of multilateral negotiations and preferential arrangements, particularly with respect to the competitiveness of commodities produced and traded by developing countries; the distribution of value added along the supply chain for commodities of export interest to developing countries, and the opportunities for diversification of the commodity sector in developing countries; policy options for dealing with commodity market imbalances and their negative impact on development and disadvantaged groups; assistance to developing countries in formulating policies for diversifying their exports and increasing their competitiveness; assessing the service sectors in developing countries and improving statistics and data on services production and trade, identifying export opportunities in services sectors of interest to developing countries; identifying modalities to operationalize article IV in the context of the negotiations under the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS); analysing ways to facilitate exports of labour-intensive services through GATS mode 4 (temporary movement of natural persons), and assisting developing countries to strengthen their negotiating capacities, particularly in the GATS requests and offers process; exploring the possibility of creating a consultative group on environmental requirements and international trade; promoting the UNCTAD/Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)/IFOAM (International Federation of Organic Agriculture Movements) Task Force on Harmonization and Equivalence in Organic Agriculture; facilitating access to scientific and technical advice on environmental, sanitary and phytosanitary measures and the impact of new technologies, particularly in the context of the UNCTAD Science and Technology Diplomacy Initiative; strengthening the Capacity-Building Task Force of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP)/UNCTAD, particularly in the post-Doha context; strengthening work under the BIOTRADE programme, in particular in the follow-up to partnerships launched at the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821], to promote trade, export diversification and investment in support of the sustainable use of biodiversity; continuing work on standard-setting and harmonization of environmental and health regulations, considering the development dimension; and analysing the trade investment implications of multilateral environmental agreements.

The Commission encouraged Governments to support UNCTAD's work on commodities and its application in developing countries through the provision of extrabudgetary resources for expanded research, country-level activities and technical cooperation.

At its thirty-first executive session on 10 March [A/58/15], 1st DB took note of the Commission's report and endorsed its recommendations.

Subsidiary bodies. In 2003, a number of expert meetings took place, all in Geneva, on issues to be considered by the Commission in 2004.

The Expert Meeting on Definitions and Dimensions of Environmental Goods and Services in Trade and Development (9-11 July) [TD/B/COM.1/59] had before it an UNCTAD background note on the subject [TD/B/COM.1/EM.21/2], which discussed definitions; trade; the WTO Doha work programme; and potential benefits for developing countries.

The Meeting recommended action to be taken at the national level, including development of a list of environmental goods that reflected a country's sustainable development and trade interests; the implementation of measures that translated environmental, human health and resource management needs into demand for environmental goods and services; and policy coordination aimed at the development of the various related sectors and trade liberalization. It requested the international community to, among other things, develop a consensus on environmental services classification and greater policy coherence between provisions on environmental goods and services in the trading system. UNCTAD should continue to assist developing countries in organizing national policy dialogues, and undertake studies to clarify issues related to the liberalization of trade in environmental services. It should also assist those countries to promote exports of environmentally preferable products through appropriate capacity-building activities.

The Expert Meeting on the Market Access Issues in Mode 4 (Movement of Natural Persons to Supply Services) and Effective Implementation of Article IV on Increasing the Participation of Developing Countries (29-31 July) [TD/B/COM.1/64] had before it an UNCTAD secretariat note [TD/B/COM.1/EM.22/2] on the subject.

The Expert Meeting invited UNCTAD to continue working in trade-related areas of the movement of natural persons. In particular, it should continue the dialogue on conceptual, policy, legal, institutional and administrative frameworks facilitating movement of natural persons to supply services; explore mechanisms for granting GATS visas and for expediting administrative services; help improve mode 4 statistics and strengthen the capacities of Governments in managing the trade agenda surrounding mode 4 issues; analyse national and regional experiences; and undertake studies and organize ad hoc expert meetings to discuss specific issues.

The Expert Meeting on Market Entry Conditions Affecting Competitiveness and Exports of Goods and Services of Developing Countries: Large Distribution Networks, Taking into Account the Special Needs of LDCs (3-5 November) [TD/B/COM.1/66] had before it an UNCTAD secretariat note on the subject [TD/B/COM.1/EM.23/2]. The Expert Meeting concluded that negotiations on distribution services were related to those on the other service sectors, and with agriculture and industry. It highlighted a number of issues to be explored in informing developing countries' negotiations on distribution services, including the effect of the evolution of those services on small and medium-sized enterprises in developing countries; ways to enable developing countries to gain access to new distribution technologies; and how to help developing countries overcome the risks related to liberalization of distribution services through a safeguard mechanism. Participants agreed that UNCTAD would continue to investigate those questions and to provide developing countries with analytical inputs and technical assistance to enhance their ability to assess the challenges and opportunities in distribution services and participate effectively in WTO-related negotiations.

Interdependence and global economic issues

TDB, at its fiftieth session (Geneva, 6-17 October) [A/58/15], considered interdependence and global economic issues from a trade and development perspective: capital accumulation, economic growth and structural change. Participants agreed that short-term prospects for global growth, though more positive than suggested in the Trade and Development Report, 2003 [Sales No. E.03.II.D.7], continued to be troubled by uncertainties and imbalances, with negative consequences for developing countries. They underlined the need for firm action by developed countries to stimulate growth and ensure a smooth and orderly rebalancing of the world economy. While a more favourable global environment was required to accelerate development, developing countries should engage in market-oriented reforms and the formulation of proactive monetary, financial and industrial policies. They should open to the world economy gradually and reduce their dependence on primary commodities. There was agreement about the need to resume multilateral trade negotiations as soon as possible, as further progress in reforming the international trading system was desirable for the entire international community. Developing countries in particular stressed the urgency of strengthening the development dimension in the multilateral trading system if globalization was to generate benefits for all countries. To put the Doha round of trade negotiations back on track, the particular needs and interests of developing countries, particularly in agriculture, should be taken into account. Developed countries were called upon to liberalize their trade regimes further, while developing countries were encouraged to open their markets increasingly to each other's exports. Systematic efforts were also needed to achieve greater coherence between the international trading and financial systems. There was also a need for an integrated approach to global economic governance and for concrete and sufficiently funded programmes to protect developing countries against the impact of external shocks and to bridge the widening gap separating them from wealthier countries.

Trade promotion and facilitation

In 2003, UN bodies continued to assist developing countries and transition economies in promoting their exports and facilitating their integration into the multilateral trading system. The International Trade Centre was the main originator of technical cooperation projects in that area.

International Trade Centre

During 2003, the International Trade Centre (ITC), under the joint sponsorship of UNCTAD and WTO, increased its delivery of technical cooperation programmes by 19 per cent to $20.1 million from $16.9 million in 2002 [ITC/AG (XXXVII)/197].

ITC focused on positioning, performance and partnership. It consolidated its niche position in trade-related technical assistance by fostering and contributing specialized and business-oriented inputs to inter-agency consortiums, building field-level interventions around competitiveness enhancement tools and advocating the international competitiveness of the small and medium-sized enterprises sector in global initiatives. ITC's Competitive Tool Kit was packaged into customized bundles relevant to specific needs, and was actively promoted through Competitiveness Tools Fairs. ITC's Latin American and Caribbean programme expanded, while its Africa programme achieved modest growth. However, overall, the cooperation programme with LDCs declined, as did the programme covering Central and Eastern Europe and CIS countries.

Africa continued to be the region of focus, with the Joint ITC/UNCTAD/WTO Integrated Technical Assistance Programme in Selected Least-Developed and Other African Countries (JITAP) entering its second phase. JITAP's focus continued to be on capacity-building within the public sector for WTO compliance and negotiations, and enhancing the private sector's ability to respond competitively to the emerging multilateral trading system. However, ITC's component was adjusted to highlight local design and implementation, with ITC providing support tools and related guidance. In collaboration with the Trade Facilitation Office Canada (TFOC), ITC launched the pilot phase of the multi-year Programme for Building African Capacity for Trade, in Ghana, Senegal, South Africa and the United Republic of Tanzania, which sought to have an impact on trade performance through the joint application of customized tools from ITC, TFOC and other sources. A subregional economic integration project for Central African States also became operational, with UNDP funding. ITC implemented national-level projects in the Gambia, Mauritania, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania, and carried out project design work in Burundi, Ethiopia, Guinea, Lesotho, Madagascar and Senegal.

In the Arab region, technical cooperation in Algeria and Mauritania focused on trade information and institution-strengthening and on banking and financial sector reform in Algeria. It also supported the competitiveness of specific export-oriented companies in Morocco. Other countries benefiting from its support included Djibouti, the United Arab Emirates and Yemen.

In Asia, ITC collaborated with UNCTAD in implementing a multilateral trading system-related project in Bangladesh and undertook programme development activities for large-scale, integrated projects in Pakistan, Sri Lanka and Viet Nam. National projects were designed in Cambodia and the Lao People's Democratic Republic. The first phase of a regional trade promotion programme covering Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan was completed and follow-up national assistance projects approved. Export-led poverty reduction pilot projects became operational in Cambodia and in China's Shaanxi Province.

In Eastern Europe, comprehensive technical cooperation projects were designed in Bulgaria, the Republic of Moldova and Romania, and programme activities undertaken in Serbia and Montenegro and the Russian Federation. A regional executive forum was organized in Sofia, Bulgaria, with the participation of strategy teams from Albania, Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Moldova, Romania, Serbia and Montenegro and Ukraine, in conjunction with Bulgarian institutions, to review strategic approaches to competitiveness enhancement and export development, identify technical cooperation needs and broaden ITC partnerships.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, where its presence had been limited, ITC's priority objective in 2003 was to increase its involvement in the region. In its only large-scale national project, in Bolivia, emphasis was placed on upgrading the export support programmes of public and private sector trade support institutions and on developing the management competencies of participating enterprises. In Haiti, it completed a project covering the legal aspects of trade, institutional support to the Ministry of Trade and Industry and the assessment of export potential. Elsewhere in the region, assistance was provided to Cuba and El Salvador to prepare for changes in global trade in textiles and clothing, and to strategy teams in Jamaica and Saint Lucia piloting ITC's strategy process tool, the National Export Strategy Template. Technical cooperation in trade support network building was provided to Brazil, Panama and Venezuela, and in the development of information technology exports to Cuba. The TradeMap and ProductMap programmes were launched in Cuba and Guatemala, together with market analysis and associated capacity-building activities, while the E-Trade Bridge Programme supported Ecuador and El Salvador, which, with Bolivia and Brazil, launched initiatives under ITC's Export-led Poverty Reduction Programme.

JAG action. The ITC Joint Advisory Group (JAG) held its thirty-sixth session in Geneva from 28 April to 2 May [ITC/AG(XXXVI)/195]. It had before it reports on ITC activities in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 940] and technical cooperation projects in 2002 [ITC/AG(XXXVI)/193/Add.1,2] and the report of the ITC Global Trust Fund's Consultative Committee [ITC/AG(XXXVI)/194].

The Group endorsed ITC's planned strategy to maintain focus on areas where it had been successful and welcomed its readiness to venture into new areas. It also endorsed the ITC plan to increase support to the building of public-private sector partnerships and to strengthening business advocacy. It was suggested that ITC establish a special division devoted entirely to the development and management of technical cooperation for the economies in transition, in recognition of the growing importance of those activities in the ITC work programme. In terms of ITC's response to UN issues of common concern—poverty reduction, gender, the environment and technical cooperation among developing countries—the Group noted that ITC's Export-led Poverty Reduction Programme was well under way, and suggested that increased attention be paid to the other areas of concern. Noting the value of ITC's work in sectoral and national export strategy, representatives encouraged ITC to continue its work with a view to becoming the lead reference centre in strategy design and management. The Group recommended that ITC should take a medium-term approach to technical assistance, irrespective of the programme, and emphasized the importance of ITC ensuring that resources were available to maintain field-level support once initial interventions had been completed. It generally endorsed the ITC strategy for growth, based on the three principles outlined by the Executive Director: remaining focused on what it did best; continuing to innovate technical assistance approaches and programmes; and working towards greater field-level impact. The Group urged ITC to continue to measure its performance in terms of quality of contribution and impact, rather than in terms of number of activities.

The Group endorsed a proposal for an independent, external evaluation of ITC.

Pledges of trust fund contributions to ITC were announced by Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, India, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States.

TDB, at its thirty-first executive session on 10 March, adopted a decision [A/58/15 (dec. 475(LX-31))] in which it took the view that JAG documentation should be issued in all six official languages. It recommended that the General Assembly consider the proposal.

In resolution 57/312 of 18 June (see below), the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to provide for documentation services in Arabic and Chinese for JAG in the proposed programme budget for the 2004-2005 biennium.

ITC administrative arrangements

In accordance with arrangements approved by the General Assembly in resolution 53/411 B [YUN 1998, p. 888], the Secretary-General, in March, submitted an outline of the proposed programme budget for ITC for the 2004-2005 biennium [A/57/761], which contained the ITC budget for the first year of activities for the biennium and a projection of requirements for the second year. Requirements, expressed in Swiss francs (SwF) at 2004-2005 rates, were estimated at SwF 33,126,300 for 2004 and SwF 33,523,500 for 2005. Since SwF 347,500 from various sources would be available to ITC annually, the annual contribution of each organization (the United Nations and WTO) was estimated at SwF 16,389,400 for 2004 and SwF 16,588,000 for 2005.

Having considered the Secretary-General's report, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in May [A/57/7/Add.26], recommended that the Assembly take note of the resources proposed in the ITC budget outline.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/57/649/Add.2], adopted resolution 57/312 without vote [agenda item 112].

Outline of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005 for the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO

The General Assembly

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the outline of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005 for the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO, and concurs with the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions thereon;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to provide for documentation services in Arabic and Chinese for the Joint Advisory Group of the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO in the proposed programme budget of the Centre for the biennium 2004-2005;

3. Recalls its decision 57/572 of 20 December 2002, and requests the Secretary-General to initiate consultations with the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO and the World Trade Organization for a joint review of the administrative arrangements for the Centre and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session;

4. Reaffirms paragraph 30 of its resolution 56/253 of 24 December 2001.

ACABQ, having considered the proposed programme budget for 2004-2005 for ITC [A/58/6 (sect. 13)/Add.1], recommended, in its October report [A/58/7/Add.7], that the resources for ITC be reduced by SwF 26,000 to an amount of SwF 64,268,400 for the biennium.

The Assembly, in resolution 58/272, section XII of 23 December (see p. 1419), approved an amount of $23,472,200 for the 2004-2005 biennium.

Enterprise, business facilitation and development

The Commission on Enterprise, Business Facilitation and Development, at its seventh session (Geneva, 24-27 February) [TD/B/EX(31)/5], had before it an UNCTAD secretariat report on improving the competitiveness of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) through enhancing productive capacity [TD/B/COM.3/51 & Corr.1 & Add.1], a background paper on developments and main issues in e-commerce and information and communication technologies (ICT) [TD/B/COM.3/49], an UNCTAD secretariat note on efficient transport and trade facilitation to improve participation by developing countries in international trade [TD/B/COM.3/53] and a progress report on the implementation of the Commission's agreed conclusions and recommendations at its sixth session [YUN 2002, p. 942], including post-Doha follow-up [TD/B/COM.3/54]. It also had before it a number of reports of expert meetings held in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 943].

In agreed recommendations, the Commission requested UNCTAD, in order to improve coherence between macroeconomic and microeconomic policies, to disseminate as widely as possible its findings on the main components of proactive competitiveness policies, as contained in the issues paper on improving the competitiveness of SMEs through enhancing productive capacity [TD/B/COM.3/51/Add.1]. It should assess the competitiveness policies of developing countries that had widely improved their performance; assess the linkage between investment, trade and technology transfer; and explore measures that promoted access to technology by developing countries and built domestic capacities. UNCTAD should further investigate the coherence between competitiveness policies for micro-stimulation and multilateral commitments and requirements, taking into account national development strategies and objectives.

The Commission also requested UNCTAD to enhance efforts to help developing countries and transition economies to promote dynamic and competitive enterprises through the EMPRETEC programme, including through implementation of the recommendations arising from its evaluation. The programme should also be strengthened and expanded.

UNCTAD should monitor developments relating to efficient transport and trade facilitation, including multimodal transport and logistic services, and analyse their implications for developing countries, and continue to provide guidance and assistance to developing countries in the use of ICT for international transport services and trade facilitation. It should study, analyse and disseminate information on the impact of new security initiatives on the international trade and transport of developing countries, contribute to the work of intergovernmental organizations in developing uniform international legal instruments affecting international transport, and disseminate information on their implications for developing countries.

UNCTAD should continue to analyse developments in trade facilitation and assist developing countries in establishing their related needs and priorities and provide them with negotiating assistance in transport services in the context of GATS, and in identifying international best practices regarding policies promoting and facilitating the adoption of ICT and e-business practices, in coordination with other international organizations.

UNCTAD should continue to promote the elaboration of national and regional e-commerce strategies for development, including by organizing regional events. It should carry out research and analysis regarding e-commerce on issues relevant to the development dimension, including major trends in technology; industries and sectors of development and commercial relevance to developing countries; Internet regulation; and the implications of various legislative approaches to e-commerce, with a view to enhancing the ca-capacity of developing countries to formulate adequate strategies to promote the adoption of ICT, e-business and e-commerce practices by their enterprises and to participate in relevant international discussions. UNCTAD should analyse issues related to the measurement and benchmarking of e-commerce and of the use of ICT by enterprises, and help developing countries to develop indicators and data on e-commerce. As the UN focal point for trade and development, it should continue to make a substantive contribution to the outcome of and follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821].

At its thirty-first executive session in March [A/58/15], TDB took note of the Commission's report and endorsed its recommendations.

Subsidiary bodies. In 2003, a number of expert meetings took place, all in Geneva, on issues to be considered by the Commission in 2004.

The Expert Meeting on Measuring Electronic Commerce as an Instrument for the Development of the Digital Economy (8-10 September) [TD/B/COM.3/61] had before it an UNCTAD secretariat background paper on the subject [TD/B/COM.3/EM.19/2]. The meeting suggested that UNCTAD continue providing forums for experts to further develop conceptual and methodological work on information economy statistics and share best practices. A proposal was made on a set of core indicators for ICT measurement that could be collected by all countries; they would focus on e-readiness and usage indicators for businesses and households. Experts considered that working towards a basic set of core indicators would be the starting point for the creation of an international database on ICT and e-business statistics and would be a desirable objective for future work. They also considered that UNCTAD should assist developing countries to develop their national e-measurement strategies and share models of some specific national/regional surveys on ICT and e-commerce.

The Expert Meeting on the Development of Multimodal Transport and Logistic Services (24-26 September) [TD/B/COM.3/59 & Corr.1] had before it an UNCTAD secretariat paper on the subject [TD/B/COM.3/EM.20/2]. The experts agreed that access to logistics and multimodal transport services was crucial to competitiveness in a globalized economy and many developing countries, especially small island, landlocked and least developed ones, had limited access to those services. To prevent the persistent exclusion of those countries from global production processes, a concerted effort by national Governments and international organizations was needed. UNCTAD, in cooperation with other organizations and developing countries' regional and subregional organizations, was called on to put in place mechanisms to support developing countries' endeavours to participate in and fully benefit from opportunities offered by modern multimodal transport and logistic services. That was considered a crucial element of a coherent strategy for integrating developing countries into the world economy and enhancing a trade-based development process.

Commodities

A joint UNCTAD/DESA report on the world economic situation and prospects [Sales No. E.04.II.C.2] stated that commodity prices improved slightly in 2003, with non-fuel commodity prices increasing by 5.8 per cent in nominal dollar terms over the first 10 months of the year. Over the first three quarters of the year, the UNCTAD combined index for minerals and metals rose by 7.4 per cent and for agricultural raw materials by 11.4 per cent. In contrast, the food index fell by 10 per cent. The recovery largely reflected the weakening of the dollar. However, the economic upturn in major developed economies in the second half of the year and continued high growth of Chinese demand also influenced raw material prices.

Meeting of eminent persons on commodity issues. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/236 [YUN 2002, p. 945], the UNCTAD Secretary-General established a group of eminent persons to examine and report on commodity issues. The report of the group's meeting (Geneva, 22-23 September) [TD/B/50/11] contained recommendations for improving the conditions in commodity markets and for alleviating the poverty of many commodity producers.

TDB, at its fiftieth session (6-17 October) [A/58/15], took note of the group's report and transmitted it to the Assembly for consideration.

The report, which the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly by a 2 October note [A/58/401], stated that there was a wide range of actions for improving the conditions on the commodity markets and alleviating the poverty of many commodity producers, including through better crop management systems. The group made short-, medium- and long-term recommendations, drawing particular attention to those for enhanced, equitable and predictable market access for commodities of key importance to developing countries; addressing the problems of oversupply for many commodities; making compensatory financing schemes user-friendly and operational; strengthening capacity and institutions; and pursuing the possibilities for creating a new international diversification fund.

Open-ended panel on commodities

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 October [meeting 34], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/2 [draft: A/58/L.1] without vote [agenda item 12].

Open-ended panel of the General Assembly on commodities

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/236 of 20 December 2002,

1. Decides to convene an open-ended panel of the General Assembly on commodities, to be chaired by the President of the General Assembly, with a maximum of six panellists from among the independent eminent persons and lead discussants, on 27 October 2003, from 3 to 5 p.m.;

2. Also decides that the President of the General Assembly will present a summary of the discussions of the open-ended panel at the beginning of the debate in the Second Committee on the item dealing with commodities.

Summary of discussions. As requested in resolution 58/2, the Assembly President, in a 2 December note [A/58/615], presented a summary of the discussions of the Assembly's open-ended panel on commodities, which took place on 27 October. The panellists emphasized the long-standing dependence of numerous developing countries on a few commodities for a major part of their income and export earnings. For them, the performance of commodities markets had a major impact on their macroeconomic stability, capacity to meet foreign debt obligations, balance-of-payments performance, success in poverty reduction and overall sustainable development efforts.

Panellists and participants identified a number of macroeconomic patterns of central importance requiring renewed attention by the international community and raised a number of pertinent "new" matters, together with comments/issues raised during the discussions. They emphasized that developing countries alone could not solve the problems in commodities markets arising from defects in the global market. A viable and long-term solution required action by individual countries, as well as joint action by consumers and producers of commodities from developing and developed countries.

Suggestions for future action included calls for the resumption of the Doha negotiations, giving special attention to negotiations on cotton and other commodities; the International Monetary Fund (IMF) should consider the connection between structural adjustment programmes and commodities and the importance of well-functioning compensatory finance systems; UNCTAD, at its eleventh (2004) session, should consider the need to enhance capacity-building initiatives, establish new multi-stakeholder partnerships on commodities and examine the inter-relationship between national development and the global market in detail; commodity-dependency matters should be considered in the implementation of the MDGs; and the United Nations Global Compact [YUN 2000, p. 989] and individual commodity firms and their trade associations should incorporate a commodity focus into ongoing corporate social responsibility efforts.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/481/Add.6], adopted resolution 58/204 without vote [agenda item 91 (g)].

Commodities

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/236 of 20 December 2002, and stressing the urgent need to ensure its full implementation,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted by heads of State and Government on 8 September 2000,

Taking note of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010 and the Least Developed Countries Report, 2002,

Taking note also of the Ministerial Declaration of the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held at Doha from 9 to 11 November 2001,

Taking note further of the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development,

Taking note of the targets set out in the Rome Declaration on World Food Security and the Plan of Action of the World Food Summit and the outcome document of the World Food Summit: five years later, which reaffirms the pledge to end hunger,

Taking note also of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Taking note further of the report of the Trade and Development Board on its fiftieth session and the report of the Secretary-General of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on world commodity trends and prospects, containing recommendations for specific actions relating to the particular needs and problems of commodity-dependent developing countries,

Mindful of the opportunity that the eleventh session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, to be held in São Paulo, Brazil, from 13 to 18 June 2004, will offer for the further consideration of proposals to address commodity issues within the framework of the links among trade, investment and finance,

Mindful also that, in 2004, the International Monetary Fund will review its role in assisting low-income countries over the medium term,

Taking note of the summary by the President of the General Assembly of the open-ended panel of the Assembly on commodities,

1. Takes note of the report of the Meeting of Eminent Persons on Commodity Issues, held at Geneva on 22 and 23 September 2003, and expresses appreciation for the work of the eminent persons;

2. Emphasizes the need for efforts by the developing countries that are heavily dependent on primary commodities to continue to promote a domestic policy and an institutional environment that encourage diversification and liberalization of the trade and export sectors and enhance competitiveness;

3. Encourages donor Governments and organizations to increase their financial and technical support for activities aimed at addressing commodity issues, in particular the needs and problems of commodity-dependent developing countries;

4. Stresses the importance of a speedy resumption and successful conclusion of the work programme adopted at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, taking into account the needs of the commodity-dependent developing countries;

5. Invites the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and other relevant bodies and organs of the United Nations system to continue to mainstream and accord high priority to programmes on commodity-related issues within their respective mandates;

6. Welcomes regular consideration of commodity issues by the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development;

7. Invites non-governmental organizations, civil society and the private sector to initiate programmes of assistance and other innovative initiatives in support of commodity-dependent developing countries;

8. Notes the relevance to appropriate governing bodies in the United Nations system and to international commodity bodies of the report of the Meeting of Eminent Persons on Commodity Issues, as well as the summary of discussions in the Trade and Development Board and the Second Committee of the General Assembly, which highlight the importance of finding lasting solutions to the problems faced by commodity-dependent developing countries in their pursuit of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

9. Urges Governments and invites international financial institutions to continue to assess the effectiveness, including the operationalization and user-friendliness, of the systems for compensatory financing of export-earnings shortfalls, and in this regard stresses the importance of empowering developing-country commodity producers to insure themselves against risk, including natural disasters;

10. Invites donor countries and development partners to support the efforts of commodity-dependent developing countries to add value to their products, and reiterates the importance of making progress on the Doha work programme to ensure the sustainability of those efforts;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake further open and transparent discussions with all relevant stakeholders on enhancing the impact of the set of existing instruments to support commodity-dependent developing countries in their efforts to diversify their exports, overcome supply-side constraints, strengthen institutions and build knowledge and technical capacity;

12. Calls upon the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and invites other relevant bodies and organs of the United Nations system, as well as other relevant international organizations, to strengthen coherently and within their respective mandates their capacity-building and technical cooperation activities in the fields of policy design and implementation, institution-building, management and utilization of commodity revenues, management of price risk and improvement of supply capacities, including the ability to satisfy quality and other requirements for market entry, and to enhance activities aimed at South-South cooperation in the field of commodities, share experiences and identify best practices for dealing with oversupply situations;

13. Invites the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and all relevant international organizations to continue to analyse trends in commodities and their impact on the development of commodity-dependent developing countries, including on debt sustainability;

14. Invites the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the Common Fund for Commodities and all other relevant organizations to provide useful, timely, accurate, comprehensive and user-friendly information and analysis on commodities and to enable the use of this information by commodity-dependent developing countries;

15. Requests the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to undertake, within existing budgetary resources, initiatives and activities to raise awareness of the commodities issue and keep it a high priority of Governments, the international community, media, academia and all other relevant stakeholders;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution, taking into account the provisions of Assembly resolution 57/236.

Individual commodities

Olive oil and table olives. The International Olive Council (23-25 June) extended the International Agreement on Olive Oil and Table Olives, 1986, as amended and extended, 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 760], until 31 December 2004, with effect from 1 July 2003. It also extended until 31 December 2003 the time limit for the deposit of the instrument of accession by Iran. In 2003, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya acceded to the Agreement, bringing the number of parties to 15.

Coffee. As at 31 December, the International Coffee Agreement 2001 [YUN 2000, p. 905] had 35 signatories and 55 parties. During the year, Benin, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Guinea, Malawi, Portugal, Togo and Zambia became parties. On 21 May, the International Coffee Council extended to 31 May 2004 the time limit for the deposit of instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession and of instruments of ratification, acceptance or approval by States applying the Agreement provisionally.

Cocoa. As at 31 December, the International Cocoa Agreement, 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 880] had 11 signatories and 12 parties. During the year, the Dominican Republic and Papua New Guinea signed the Agreement, while Cameroon, Ecuador, Gabon, Ghana, Nigeria, Slovakia and Switzerland became parties. At meetings in March, June and September, the International Cocoa Council extended until 30 September 2010 the period for signing the Agreement, and the time limit for the deposit of instruments of ratification, acceptance or approval. It also agreed that the Agreement would enter into force provisionally on 1 October 2003.

Common Fund for Commodities

The 1980 Agreement establishing the Common Fund for Commodities [YUN 1980, p. 621], a mechanism intended to stabilize the commodities market by helping to finance buffer stocks of specific commodities, as well as commodity development activities such as research and marketing, had entered into force in 1989 and the Fund became operational later that year.

As at 31 December 2003, the number of parties to the Agreement stood at 110.

Finance

Financial policy

The World Economic and Social Survey 2003 [Sales No. E.03.II.C.1] stated that the immediate reaction to the economic slowdown in 2001 was substantial reductions in policy interest rates in developed countries. Inflation was not seen as a major threat in the majority of developed countries and low interest rates were maintained in most countries throughout the year and into early 2003. Some central banks, notably the Federal Reserve of the United States, brought interest rates to unusually low levels. The inflation-targeting rule followed by the European Central Bank until early 2003 delayed its cuts in policy interest rates until March. At the same time, it changed its inflation objective of 2 per cent from a ceiling to a target, allowing greater flexibility in its monetary policy. In several countries in Eastern Europe, interest rates were reduced in 2002, primarily to dampen any appreciation of the exchange rate so as to maintain competitiveness.

Most countries had less scope for expansionary fiscal policies because of the size of their fiscal deficits. The major exception was the United States, where increased central government expenditures and reduced taxation in 2002 produced a sizeable fiscal stimulus and a growing fiscal deficit. In Western Europe, fiscal policy was slightly expansionary in 2002, although some countries were under pressure to meet the 3 per cent deficit ceiling of the Stability and Growth Pact. Japan was in a difficult financial position and any further sizeable fiscal stimulus would risk damaging economic confidence. Many developing countries and some economies in transition improved their fiscal positions in the 1990s, but deficits remained a problem. China and most economies in East Asia were able to use monetary and fiscal instruments in the appropriate counter-cyclical manner during the period of slow growth. In contrast, most economies in Africa and Latin America had to give priority to addressing their macroeconomic imbalances, which usually required using their macroeconomic policy instruments in a restrictive, currently pro-cyclical manner, rather than as a means of offsetting sluggish conditions.

A joint DESA/UNCTAD report on the world economic situation and prospects [Sales No. E.04.II.C.2], based on information available as at 30 November, stated that, with economic recovery continuing, macroeconomic policy in many economies, particularly the largest, was accommodating or stimulatory, but was expected to shift to neutral. A three-year phase of global monetary easing was about to end, to be replaced by a phase of tightening. Since late 2000, the central banks in a majority of economies had been reducing interest rates to alleviate the adverse effects of the cyclical downturn, to stabilize financial markets amidst plummeting equity markets and exogenous shocks, and to stimulate demand. Interest rates were further reduced in 2003, particularly during the period of heightened uncertainties associated with the possibility of war in Iraq and the outbreak of the SARS virus. The central banks in a few developed economies had already started tightening monetary policy and, as the recovery strengthened further, central banks in other major developed countries were expected to raise interest rates, probably in the second half of 2004.

Fiscal policy actions were much less homogeneous across countries. Some economies, such as the United States and a number of Asian countries, adopted sizeable stimuli, but the policy stance in many other economies was only modestly stimulatory or neutral, while a third group of economies adhered to restrictive fiscal policies. It was suggested that policy makers might consider whether rule-based policies, such as the inflation-targeting mechanism adopted by a growing number of economies in recent years, were too rigid to respond effectively to shocks, particularly in an economic downturn.

Among developing countries, the key questions were whether the conditionalities associated with the programmes of the international financial institutions were pro-cyclical, leading to unnecessary losses in output and employment, and how to enhance macroeconomic management for those developing countries facing global economic integration.

Financial flows

The joint DESA/UNCTAD report on the world economic situation and prospects [Sales No. E.04.II.C.2] stated that the net transfer of financial resources from developing countries in 2003 was similar in magnitude to that in 2002, when it reached a peak of $192 billion. There was also a net outward financial transfer from economies in transition in 2003. Among the financial components of the net transfer were an increase in capital flows to some countries and an increase in foreign exchange reserves by others, particularly those with large trade surpluses. At the regional level, Latin America experienced an increase in exports and a deceleration in the decline in imports, but that was not enough to reverse the large net outward transfer. Likewise, the large net transfer from East Asia resulting from its strong export growth continued in 2003.

In terms of inflows, developing countries received an estimated $95 billion in net capital flows in 2003, a modest increase from 2002, in the form of foreign direct investment (FDI), official loans and grants. However, FDI in developing countries did not rebound from the decline of 2002. FDI flows to Latin America continued to decrease, while those to Africa rose. A small increase in FDI to Eastern and Southern Asia was largely due to record flows to China. FDI in transition economies remained strong. Official financial flows reflected a mix of reduced anti-crisis multilateral lending, especially by IMF, and increased aid flows. Major disbursements in 2003 were made to Argentina, Brazil and Turkey.

International financial system

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/241 [YUN 2002, p. 949], the Secretary-General submitted a 16 September report on the international financial system and development [A/58/369]. He highlighted recent developments in the international financial system that had special relevance to development, provided estimates of the mainly negative net transfer of financial resources of groups of developing countries in 2002 and updated developments in international financial reform. The issues highlighted in the report were among those discussed in the Secretary-General's report prepared for the High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development [A/58/216] (see p. 988). Specific conclusions and recommendations on relevant issues were addressed in that report.

IMF/World Bank Development Committee. The Joint IMF/World Bank Development Committee, in a communiqué issued following its meeting on 22 September (Dubai, United Arab Emirates), renewed its commitment to achieving the MDGs and to continuing its work on implementing the strategies, partnerships and actions agreed at the Fifth WTO Ministerial Meeting (see p. 1535), the International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953] and the World Summit on Sustainable Development [ibid., p. 821]. It agreed on the urgent need to intensify efforts if the MDGs were to be met, with enhanced concerted actions by developing and developed countries and international institutions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/481/Add.4], adopted resolution 58/202 without vote [agenda item 91 (d)].

International financial system and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/186 of 20 December 2000 and 56/181 of 21 December 2001, both entitled "Towards a strengthened and stable international financial architecture responsive to the priorities of growth and development, especially in developing countries, and to the promotion of economic and social equity", as well as its resolution 57/241 of 20 December 2002,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted by the heads of State and Government on 8 September 2000, its resolution 56/210 B of 9 July 2002, in which it endorsed the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), adopted on 4 September 2002,

Emphasizing that the international financial system should support sustainable development, sustained economic growth and poverty reduction while allowing for the coherent mobilization of all sources of financing for development, including the mobilization of domestic resources, international investment flows, official development assistance, external debt relief and an open, equitable, rule-based, predictable and non-discriminatory global trading system,

Reiterating that success in meeting the objectives of development and poverty eradication depends on good governance within each country and at the international level, and stressing that sound economic policies, solid democratic institutions responsive to the needs of the people and improved infrastructure are the basis for sustained economic growth, poverty eradication and employment creation,

Reiterating also the need to strengthen the leadership role of the United Nations in promoting development,

Welcoming the growing interaction between the United Nations and the international financial and trade institutions, consistent with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and in accordance with related agreements,

Encouraging further progress on the issue of participation of developing countries in international economic decision-making and norm-setting processes, including those of the Bretton Woods institutions and other economic and financial institutions and ad hoc groupings, while welcoming the steps that have been taken with a view to strengthening the capacity of developing countries to participate effectively in the international financial institutions,

Recognizing the urgent need to enhance the coherence, governance and consistency of the international monetary, financial and trading systems, and the importance of ensuring their openness, fairness and inclusiveness in order to complement national development efforts to ensure sustained economic growth and the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Recognizes the increasing initial signs that economic activity is gradually strengthening in many economies, while noting with concern the unevenness of the recovery of the global economy, which challenges efforts of developing countries to eradicate poverty and ensure sustained economic growth, and stresses the importance of cooperative efforts by all countries and institutions to cope with risks of financial instability and ensure a strong and steady recovery;
3. Invites developed countries, in particular major industrialized economies, to take into account the effect of their macroeconomic policies on international growth and development;
4. Recognizes the concern about the fact that in 2002 developing countries as a whole made net outward transfers of financial resources for the sixth consecutive year, and underscores the need for measures, as appropriate, at the national and international levels to address this issue, while taking note of the efforts that have been made thus far to this end and of the fact that for some developing countries those transfers, at the present time, indicate positive developments in the trade balance, which are required, inter alia, for debt repayment and which allow for the purchase of foreign assets;
5. Underlines the importance of adopting effective measures, including new financial mechanisms, as appropriate, to support the efforts of developing countries to achieve sustained economic growth, sustainable development, poverty reduction and the strengthening of their democratic systems, while reaffirming that each country has primary responsibility for its own economic and social development and that national policies have the leading role in the development process;

6. Stresses the importance of strong domestic institutions to promote business activities and financial stability for the achievement of growth and development, inter alia, through sound macroeconomic policies and policies aimed at strengthening the regulatory systems of the corporate, financial and banking sectors, and also stresses that international cooperation initiatives in those areas should encourage flows of capital to developing countries;

7. Underlines the importance of promoting international financial stability and sustainable growth, and welcomes the efforts undertaken to this end by the International Monetary Fund and the Financial Stability Forum, as well as the International Monetary and Financial Committee's consideration of ways to sharpen tools designed to promote international financial stability and enhance crisis prevention, including through an even-handed implementation of surveillance and a sharpening of surveillance on capital markets and systemically and regionally important countries, with a view, inter alia, to early identification of problems and risks and the fostering of appropriate policy responses; the provision of adequate precautionary support to deal with external crises; and further improvements in the transparency of macroeconomic data and statistical information on international capital flows;

8. Reiterates in this regard that measures to mitigate the impact of excessive volatility of short-term capital flows and to improve transparency of and information about financial flows are important and must be considered;

9. Notes the impact of financial crises and risks of contagion on developing countries and countries with economies in transition, regardless of their size, and underlines the need to ensure that the international financial institutions, including the International Monetary Fund, have a suitable array of financial facilities and resources to respond in a timely and appropriate way, in accordance with their policies, to such crises;

10. Notes also the importance of advancing current efforts to reform the international financial architecture, as envisaged in the Monterrey Consensus, emphasizes that those efforts need to include the effective participation of developing countries and countries with economies in transition, and in this regard encourages the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank to continue examining the issues of the voice and effective participation of those countries, as provided for in the communiqués of the International Monetary and Financial Committee and the Development Committee at their last meetings, held in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, on 21 and 22 September 2003, and looks forward to the consideration of a road map on the issue at their next meeting, in April 2004;

11. Welcomes the ongoing work of the International Monetary Fund on quotas, and notes the conclusion of the Fund's Twelfth General Review of Quotas, the report on which indicated the adequacy of the current level of Fund resources and the intention of the Executive Board, during the period of the Thirteenth General Review, to monitor closely and assess the adequacy of Fund resources, to consider measures to achieve a distribution of quotas that reflects developments in the world economy and to consider measures to strengthen the governance of the Fund;

12. Emphasizes that it is essential to ensure the effective and equitable participation of developing countries in the formulation of financial standards and codes, and underscores the need to ensure their implementation, on a voluntary and progressive basis, as a contribution to reducing vulnerability to financial crisis and contagion;

13. Invites the multilateral and regional development banks and development funds to continue to play a vital role in serving the development needs of developing countries and countries with economies in transition, including through coordinated action, as appropriate, and stresses that strengthened regional development banks and subregional financial institutions add flexible financial support to national and regional development efforts, enhancing their ownership and overall efficiency, and are an essential source of knowledge and expertise for their developing country members;

14. Calls upon multilateral financial institutions, in providing policy advice and financial support to member countries, to work on the basis of nationally owned reform and development strategies, to pay due regard to the special needs and implementing capacities of developing countries and countries with economies in transition and to minimize the negative impacts of the adjustment programmes on the vulnerable segments of society, while taking into account the importance of gender-sensitive employment and poverty eradication policies and strategies;

15. Reiterates the importance of the orderly resolution of sovereign debt crises, notes the increasing voluntary use of collective action clauses in international sovereign bonds, and takes note of the efforts led by sovereign debtors and private creditors to develop a voluntary code of conduct for the resolution of sovereign debt crises;

16. Encourages the efforts, including those of the Bretton Woods institutions, to improve the assessment of debt sustainability in low- and middle-income countries through, inter alia, the development of better tools to deal with exogenous shocks and the need to take country-specific factors into account;

17. Also encourages the consideration of proposals to generate innovative public and private mechanisms for financing development, without unduly burdening developing countries, and the study, in the appropriate forums, of the results of the analysis requested from the Secretary-General on possible innovative sources of finance, taking note of the proposal to use special drawing rights allocations for development purposes, bearing in mind that any assessment of special drawing rights allocations must respect the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund and the established rules of procedure of the Fund, which requires taking into account the global need for liquidity at the international level;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

19. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session, under the item entitled "Macroeconomic policy questions", the sub-item entitled "International financial system and development".

Debt problems of developing countries

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/240 [YUN 2002, p. 951], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/58/290] on the external debt crisis and development. It described recent trends in international debt indicators and capital flows; reserve accumulation and net transfer of resources; private capital flows to developing countries in a longer-term perspective; official debt, in particular issues related to the implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative and the Paris Club (a group of creditor countries) agreements; and sovereign debt restructuring. The report complemented the Secretary-General's report for the High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development (see p. 988), which recommended steps towards a more lasting solution to developing countries and transition economies' debt problems.

The Secretary-General stated that the total stock of external debt of developing countries and economies in transition increased by about $52 billion, or 2.2 per cent, in 2002, while both private debt and short-term debt declined. Debt-service payments fell by almost 10 per cent in 2002 because of lower international interest rates. The ratios of total debt and debt service to exports of goods and services continued to decline. Among developing regions, Latin America had the highest debt/export ratio with external debt equivalent to 173.6 per cent of exports. The unprecedented increase (some $163 billion) in the international reserves of developing countries and economies in transition led to a strong improvement in the ratio of short-term debt to international reserves in all regions, with the exception of Latin America. Despite some further improvement in 2002, that indicator continued to be the highest for sub-Saharan Africa, excluding South Africa, where short-term debt at the end of 2002 was equivalent to 76 per cent of international reserves.

Although the HIPC Initiative was recognized for addressing development constraints and poverty alleviation in many of the poorest countries, there had been doubts in recent years that the Initiative in its current form and scope could meet those objectives. HIPC ministers had suggested that the Initiative should be surrounded with a wider framework of measures to overcome shocks and stressed the need for cheap, automatic and rapidly available contingency financing by the international financial institutions, based on annual reassessments of debt sustainability.

Recent Paris Club activity continued to focus on HIPC Initiative implementation. In late 2002/early 2003, 10 countries (8 of them HIPCs) concluded new agreements on debt rescheduling or restructuring. The G-8 (major industrialized countries) Finance Ministers, at their meeting in Deauville, France, in May, made proposals for reforming the Paris Club, including measures to remove the artificial ceiling on debt rescheduling or cancellation, for debt reduction in exceptional cases for countries not qualifying for debt relief under the HIPC Initiative, and comparable treatment by both private and Paris Club creditors.

The Secretary-General concluded that although bilateral official creditors continued to provide relief to low-income countries, it was not sufficient to achieve long-term debt sustainability and significant poverty reduction. Given the continuing difficulties facing HIPCs and other heavily indebted countries in complying with debt relief conditionality, he suggested that donors and international financial institutions provide additional support in the design and implementation of their Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers, giving greater attention to poverty and social impact analysis and technical assistance to conduct such analyses on their own. The number of low- and middle-income developing countries and economies in transition with large debt burdens that were not eligible for debt relief under the HIPC Initiative raised the need for a greater safety margin to protect against unanticipated adverse developments, which, with effective contingency financing mechanisms, including grant financing, could help eliminate the need for repeated rescheduling. A framework was also needed to deal comprehensively with international sovereign debt of insolvent developing countries.

Other actions. The WTO Working Group on Trade, Debt and Finance, established by the Fourth WTO Ministerial Conference [YUN 2001, p. 1432] to examine the relationship between trade, debt and finance and to recommend steps for enhancing the capacity of the multilateral trading system to contribute to a durable solution to the problem of external indebtedness of developing and least developed countries, met on 28 March and 5 June. Its report, which described progress in examining its mandate, was submitted to the WTO General Council on 11 July [WT/WORKING GROUP/GTDF/2].

The Joint IMF/World Bank Development Committee (Dubai, 22 September) urged all official and commercial creditors that had not yet done so to participate in the HIPC Initiative. It looked forward to a report being prepared by the Bank and the Fund on a forward-looking framework for debt sustainability in low-income countries, for review at its next meeting. It also encouraged further work on ways to help reduce the vulnerability of those countries to exogenous shocks.

The joint DESA/UNCTAD report on the world economic situation and prospects 2004 [Sales No. E.04.II.C.2] reported that, in October, the Paris Club agreed to change the approach to its treatment of the external debt of debt-crisis countries not covered by the HIPC Initiative. The new policy, called the Evian Approach, which put into effect the May agreement of the G-8 Finance Ministers (see above), outlined more flexible procedures and established a set of exceptional circumstances when it might agree to reduce the debt of countries previously eligible only for postponement of debt-servicing payments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/481/Add.5], adopted resolution 58/203 without vote [agenda item 91(e)].

External debt crisis and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/164 of 16 December 1996, 52/185 of 18 December 1997, 53/175 of 15 December 1998, 54/202 of 22 December 1999, 55/184 of 20 December 2000, 56/184 of 21 December 2001 and 57/240 of 20 December 2002 on enhancing international cooperation towards a durable solution to the external debt problems of developing countries,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted by heads of State and Government on 8 September 2000,

Reaffirming the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, which recognizes sustainable debt financing as an important element for mobilizing resources for public and private investment,

Recalling its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Concerned that the current global economic recovery is uneven but determined to ensure that it leads to sustained world economic growth, to sustainable development and to a durable solution of the external debt problems of developing countries,

Noting in this regard that the total debt stock of the developing countries rose from 1,421.6 billion dollars in 1990 to 2,384.2 billion dollars in 2002,

Noting with great concern that the continuing debt and debt-servicing problems of the heavily indebted poor developing countries constitute one of the many elements that adversely affect their sustainable development efforts, and bearing in mind their impact on the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration,

Noting with concern the fact that some highly indebted, low- and middle-income developing countries continue to face serious difficulties in meeting their external debt-servicing obligations, which constitutes an element that seriously constrains their efforts to ensure sustained economic growth and sustainable development,

Noting that, in 2002, developing countries as a whole made net outward transfers of financial resources for the sixth consecutive year, and underscoring the need for measures, as appropriate, at the national and international levels to address this issue to enhance the prospects for debt sustainability, while noting also the fact that for some developing countries those transfers, at the present time, indicate positive developments in the trade balance, and were required, inter alia, for debt repayment,

Convinced that enhanced market access for goods and services of export interest to developing countries contributes significantly to debt sustainability in developing countries,

Welcoming the positive impact of the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, while recognizing that significant challenges remain, and inviting all developed bilateral creditors to forgive on a unilateral basis up to 100 per cent of all remaining claims after HIPC debt relief,

Welcoming also the actions taken by creditor countries within the framework of the Paris Club and by some creditor countries through the cancellation of bilateral debts, urging all creditor countries to participate in efforts to remedy the external debt and debt-servicing problems of developing countries, and noting the Evian Approach of the Paris Club of October 2003 and that debt relief does not replace alternative sources of financing,

Emphasizing the important role that private sector creditors play in debt relief and debt sustainability,

Welcoming the call in the communiqué issued by the joint International Monetary Fund/World Bank Development Committee on 22 September 2003 in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, urging all official and commercial creditors to participate in the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative,

Recognizing the current debate on sovereign debt restructuring, especially the efforts led by sovereign debtors and private creditors to develop a voluntary code of conduct, and stressing that modalities for sovereign debt restructuring should be voluntary, market-friendly and flexible, with due consideration of the specific circumstances of individual countries, and should result from the participation of all relevant stakeholders,

Noting the increasing voluntary use of collective action clauses in sovereign bond contracts by both developing and developed countries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Reaffirms the determination, as expressed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to deal comprehensively and effectively with the debt problems of low- and middle-income developing countries, through various national and international measures designed to make their debt sustainable in the long term;

3. Emphasizes that the international financial system, along with enhanced official and private external financing and foreign direct investment, are key elements for a durable solution to the external debt problems of developing countries;

4. Stresses that sustainable debt financing is an important element for mobilizing resources for public and private investment, and that national comprehensive strategies to monitor and manage the external liabilities embedded in the domestic preconditions for debt sustainability, including sound macroeconomic policies and public resource management, are a key element in reducing national vulnerabilities;

5. Welcomes the World Trade Organization Working Group on Trade, Debt and Finance and its mandate to examine the relationship between trade, debt and finance so as to enhance the capacity of the multilateral trading system to contribute to a durable solution to the problem of external indebtedness of the developing and least developed countries, and to strengthen the coherence of international trade and financial policies, with a view to safeguarding the multilateral trading system from the effects of financial and monetary instability, and takes note of its report of 11 July 2003 to the General Council of the World Trade Organization;

6. Recognizes that creditors and debtors must share the responsibility for preventing and resolving unsustainable debt situations and that debt relief can play a key role in liberating resources that should be directed towards activities consistent with attaining poverty eradication, sustainable economic growth and sustainable development and with the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and in this regard urges countries to direct those resources freed through debt relief, in particular through debt cancellation and reduction, towards these objectives;

7. Stresses that debt sustainability depends upon a confluence of many factors at the international and national levels, underscores that no single indicator should be used to make definitive judgements about debt sustainability, and emphasizes that country circumstances should be taken into account;

8. Recalls the call upon industrialized countries, as expressed in the Millennium Declaration, to implement the enhanced programme of debt relief for the heavily indebted poor countries without further delay and to agree to cancel all official bilateral debts of those countries in return for their making demonstrable commitments to poverty reduction, and in this regard welcomes the decision of those countries that have already taken action to do so, emphasizing that debt relief complementary to the framework should be treated as additional;

9. Calls upon those heavily indebted poor countries that have not already done so, to take, as soon as possible, the policy measures necessary to become eligible for the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative and to reach the decision point, inter alia, through the formulation of poverty reduction strategies, where they exist;

10. Stresses the need to pursue, where appropriate, debt relief measures vigorously and expeditiously, by all creditors, including within the Paris and London Clubs and other relevant forums, and welcomes other bilateral initiatives that have been undertaken to reduce outstanding indebtedness, so as to contribute to debt sustainability and facilitate sustainable development;

11. Calls upon the international community, including the United Nations system, and invites the Bretton Woods institutions as well as the private sector to take appropriate measures and actions for the implementation of the commitments, agreements and decisions of the major United Nations conferences and summits, in particular those relating to the question of the external debt problem of developing countries, and in this regard stresses the need:

(a) To implement speedily, effectively and fully the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, which should be fully financed through additional resources, while stressing the need for fair, equitable and transparent burden-sharing among the international public creditor community and other donor countries, and take into consideration, as appropriate, measures to address any fundamental changes in the economic circumstances of those developing countries that have an unsustainable debt burden, including those caused by natural catastrophes, severe terms-of-trade shocks or conflict, taking into account initiatives that have been undertaken to reduce outstanding indebtedness;

(b) To continue to bring about a sustained commitment on the part of the heavily indebted poor countries to improvements in domestic policies and economic management, to support capacity-building for the management of financial assets and liabilities, to ensure full participation and delivery of relief by all affected creditors, to ensure adequate and sufficiently concessional financing by international financing institutions and the donor community, and to further explore options to address the difficult issues of HIPC-to-HIPC debt relief and creditor litigation;

(c) To continue to bring together international debtors and creditors in relevant international forums to restructure unsustainable debt in a timely and efficient manner, taking into account the need to involve the private sector in the resolution of crises;

(d) To acknowledge the problems of the debt sustainability of some low-income countries that are not heavily indebted, in particular those facing exceptional circumstances, and in this regard to note the tailored treatment for non-HIPC developing debtor countries adopted by the Paris Club to ensure that debt restructuring provides non-HIPC debtor countries with a debt treatment that reflects their financial needs and the objective of ensuring long-lasting debt sustainability;

(e) To reduce the unsustainable debt burden of developing countries through such actions as debt relief and, as appropriate, debt cancellation and other innovative mechanisms geared to comprehensively addressing the debt problems of developing countries, in particular the poorest and most heavily indebted ones;

(f) To encourage exploring innovative mechanisms to comprehensively address the debt problems of developing countries, including middle-income countries, and countries with economies in transition; such mechanisms may include debt-for-sustainable-development swaps, or multi-creditor debt swap arrangements, as appropriate;

(g) To establish effective debt-tracking mechanisms in developing countries and strengthen technical assistance for external debt management and debt tracking, including through enhanced cooperation and coordination between organizations providing assistance in this regard;

(h) To take steps to ensure that resources provided for debt relief do not detract from official development assistance resources intended to be available for developing countries and that the debt-relief arrangements seek to avoid imposing any unfair burden on other developing countries;

(i) To welcome consideration by all relevant stakeholders of an international debt-work-out mechanism, in the appropriate forums, the adoption of which should not preclude emergency financing in times of crisis, to promote fair burden-sharing and minimize moral hazard, which will engage debtors and creditors to come together to restructure unsustainable debts in a timely and efficient manner;

(j) To establish a set of clear principles for the management and resolution of financial crises that provide for fair burden-sharing between the public and private sectors and among debtors, creditors and investors, while recognizing that a flexible mix of instruments is needed to respond appropriately to the varying economic circumstances and capacities of different countries;

12. Stresses the importance of continued flexibility with regard to the eligibility criteria for the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, in particular for countries in post-conflict situations, and the need to keep the computational procedures and assumptions underlying debt sustainability analysis under review;

13. Emphasizes the need to help bring about initial recovery in heavily indebted poor post-conflict countries, in coordination with the international financial institutions, to help clear, as appropriate, the arrears of those countries vis-à-vis international financial institutions;

14. Reaffirms that reviews of debt sustainability should also bear in mind the impact of debt relief on progress towards the achievement of the development goals set out in the Millennium Declaration and the fact that debt sustainability analysis at the completion point needs to take into account any change in the global growth prospects or in the terms of trade, especially for commodity export developing countries;

15. Notes that it is important for the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank to continue their efforts to strengthen the transparency and integrity of debt sustainability analysis and to consider any fundamental changes in countries' debt sustainability caused by natural catastrophes, severe terms-of-trade shocks or conflict when making policy recommendations, including for debt relief, as appropriate;

16. Stresses the need to strengthen the institutional capacity of developing countries in debt management, calls upon the international community to support the efforts made towards this end, and in this regard stresses the importance of such initiatives as the Debt Management and Financial Analysis System, the International Monetary Fund and World Bank guidelines for public debt management, and the debt-management capacity-building programme;

17. Invites the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, in cooperation with the regional banks, regional commissions and multilateral institutions, to study the possibility of creating a consultative group on external debt management aimed at developing best practices and strengthening the institutional capacity of developing countries in debt management, taking into account work that has already been done;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution and to include in that report a comprehensive and substantive analysis of the external debt and debt-servicing problems of developing countries, inter alia, those resulting from global financial instability;

19. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session, under the item entitled "Macroeconomic policy questions", the sub-item entitled "External debt crisis and development".

Financing for development

Follow-up to the International Conference on Financing for Development

High-level meeting of Economic and Social Council, Bretton Woods institutions and WTO.

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/227 [YUN 1996, p. 1249] and Economic and Social Council decision 2003/206 of 28 January, the sixth special high-level meeting of the Economic and Social Council, the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and IMF) and WTO took place in New York on 14 April. The theme "Increased coherence, coordination and cooperation for the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development at all levels one year after the Conference" was adopted by the Council in decision 2003/209 of 30 January. It had before it a note by the Secretary-General on the subject [E/2003/50].

The Council President, in his summary of the high-level meeting [A/58/77-E/2003/62 & Add.1,2], said that the discussions showed that, despite some progress in the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus [YUN 2002, p. 953], there were still significant gaps in implementation in some key areas. The Assembly's High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development (see p. 988) would be an important opportunity for taking stock more fully of progress made and for considering further steps.

In preparation for that Dialogue, the Council suggested that the Assembly address the following key issues: improved measurement of national and international efforts and outcomes in the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus, including aid flows and their impact; additional steps to be taken by the Assembly to increase the chances of completing on time the multilateral trade negotiations under the Doha Development Agenda; national and international measures to reduce the risks of external debt problems; further exploration of international approaches to orderly debt workouts; strengthened participation of developing countries in decision-making processes on international economic policy; and increased coherence in a number of policy areas.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/47 [draft: E/2003/L.39] without vote [agenda item 6 (a)].

International Conference on Financing for Development The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 56/210 B of 9 July 2002, in which the Assembly endorsed the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, adopted on 22 March 2002,

Recalling also its resolution 2002/34 of 26 July 2002, Recalling further General Assembly resolution 57/270 A of 20 December 2002 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Recognizing the crucial importance of proper follow-up to and implementation of the Monterrey Consensus and other agreements and commitments reached at the International Conference on Financing for Development,

Stressing the importance of staying fully engaged, nationally, regionally and internationally, in order both to ensure proper follow-up to the implementation of agreements and commitments reached at the International Conference on Financing for Development and to continue to build bridges between development, finance and trade organizations and initiatives, within the framework of the holistic agenda of the Conference,

Recognizing the link between financing for development and attaining internationally agreed development goals and objectives, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in measuring development progress and helping to guide development priorities, as well as achieving sustained economic growth and sustainable development, bearing in mind the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

1. Takes note with appreciation of the summary by the President of the Economic and Social Council of the special high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization, held in New York on 14 April 2003, which constitutes an important input provided by the Council to the high-level dialogue on financing for development, which is to be held by the General Assembly in October 2003;

2. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the follow-up efforts to the International Conference on Financing for Development;

3. Takes note also of the establishment of the Financing for Development Office in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/273 of 20 December 2002;

4. Reaffirms its commitment to contribute to the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, both in the context of its general mandate to follow up and support the implementation of commitments adopted at all major United Nations conferences, including the Millennium Summit, and as an important process in its own right, and in that regard attaches priority to four broad tasks related to follow-up activities:

(a) To promote coherence and an integrated approach within the United Nations;

(b) To intensify interactions with the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the World Trade Organization, as well as other institutional stakeholders;

(c) To continue involving other relevant stakeholders, including civil society organizations and the private sector; and

(d) To prepare inputs for consideration by the General Assembly;

5. Expresses its satisfaction with the interactive dialogue of the special high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization, which constituted an important and successful step in the follow-up process provided for in paragraph 69 of the Monterrey Consensus;

6. Decides to build on the experience accumulated during the high-level meeting of the Council in 2003 in convening and organizing the next high-level spring meeting to address issues of coherence, coordination and cooperation in the context of the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus, examining further specific steps that could be taken by each of the stakeholders to move the Monterrey process forward;

7. Decides also to include representatives of the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development in the high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization;

8. Decides further that the Department of Economic and Social Affairs, in collaboration with the secretariats of the Bretton Woods institutions, the World Trade Organization, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and other institutional stakeholders, will prepare the necessary documentation for the next high-level meeting of the Economic and Social Council, and decides to invite all institutional stakeholders to provide the Secretary-General with interim reports during the first quarter of 2004 on the work undertaken and planned in their respective areas of competence regarding implementation of the different components of the Monterrey Consensus, with the understanding that those reports will be essential inputs to the preparation of the meeting;

9. Welcomes the continued participation of non-governmental organizations and the business sector in the Monterrey process, expresses its readiness to continue its work in the innovative and participatory spirit that characterized the International Conference on Financing for Development, strengthening the role of the Council in its interaction with non-governmental organizations and the business sector at its annual spring meetings with the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization, and stresses that the specific modalities and formats to give concrete expression to that commitment should continue to be decided by the Council, in accordance with its rules of procedure and the accreditation procedures and modalities of participation utilized at the Conference and in its preparatory process.

High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development

The General Assembly's first High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development was held on 29 and 30 October in New York, under the theme "The Monterrey Consensus: status of implementation and tasks ahead". Organized in response to Assembly resolution 57/250 [YUN 2002, p. 961], the High-level Dialogue was attended by more than 190 Governments, 35 intergovernmental organizations and 50 civil society stakeholders from the business sector, academia and NGOs.

The Dialogue consisted of a series of plenary and informal meetings and eight ministerial interactive round tables, which were organized around the various themes to be discussed: regional dimensions of the implementation of the results of the International Conference on Financing for Development (round tables 1 and 2); coherence and consistency of the international monetary, financial and trading systems in support of development (round tables 3 and 4); the link between the progress in the implementation of the agreements and commitments reached at the International Conference and the achievement of internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] (round tables 5 and 6); and the link between the progress in the implementation of the agreements and commitments reached at the International Conference and the promotion of sustainable development, sustained economic growth and the eradication of poverty, with a view to achieving an equitable global economic system (round tables 7 and 8).

The Assembly President, in his summary of the proceedings [A/58/555 & Corr.1], said that participants welcomed progress where it had occurred, but insisted that much more was required. Participants noted that there had been slippage in some areas, manifested by disappointing developments in international trade and financial transfers, and called for a more precise mechanism for monitoring implementation of both the Monterrey commitments and the targets embodied in the MDGs. The main themes addressed during the Dialogue were: mobilizing domestic resources; private capital flows; international trade; official development assistance and other resources; external debt; systemic and institutional issues; and staying engaged in the Monterrey Consensus follow-up process.

The Assembly President also submitted summaries of the informal hearings of civil society [A/58/555/Add.1] and the business sector [A/58/555/Add.2], both held on 28 October.

Documentation. The High-level Dialogue had before it a note by the Secretary-General on organizational and procedural matters concerning the High-level Dialogue [A/58/436], documents transmitted by Italy on its contribution to the HIPC Initiative [A/58/437] and on the European Union's Barcelona Commitments for following up the Monterrey Consensus [A/58/529], and Denmark's first progress report on the MDG of developing a global partnership for development [A/58/542]. It also had before it the Secretary-General's report [A/58/216] on implementation of and follow-up to the commitments and agreements made at the International Conference on Financing for Development, prepared in collaboration with major institutional stakeholders. He highlighted the most important areas of progress, or lack thereof, in implementing the commitments, suggested guidelines for policies and processes and identified issues for further study in order to operationalize and build on the Monterrey Consensus.

Organizational matters. By decision 57/593 of 15 September, the General Assembly decided to accredit to the High-level Dialogue several intergovernmental organizations. By decisions 57/594 of 15 September and 58/509 of 27 October, it decided to accredit a number of business entities/organizations and NGOs to the Dialogue and to the earlier hearings of the business sector and civil society.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/494, as orally revised], adopted resolution 58/230 without vote [agenda item 104].

Follow-up to and implementation of the outcome of the International Conference on Financing for Development

The General Assembly.

Recalling the International Conference on Financing for Development, held in Monterrey, Mexico, from 18 to 22 March 2002, and its resolutions 56/210 B of 9 July 2002, 57/250 of 20 December 2002, 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 and 57/272 and 57/273 of 20 December 2002, as well as Economic and Social Council resolutions 2002/34 of 26 July 2002 and 2003/47 of 24 July 2003,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of and follow-up to commitments and agreements made at the International Conference on Financing for Development, prepared in collaboration with the major institutional stakeholders,

Having considered the summary presented by the President of the General Assembly of the High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development, held in New York on 29 and 30 October 2003,

Having also considered the summary presented by the President of the Economic and Social Council of the special high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization, held in New York on 14 April 2003,

Determined to continue to implement and build further on the commitments made and agreements reached at the International Conference on Financing for Development and to strengthen the coordinated and coherent engagement of all relevant stakeholders in the financing for development process,

1. Welcomes the holding of the first High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development;

2. Reiterates the call to fully implement and to build further on the commitments made and agreements reached at the International Conference on Financing for Development;

3. Notes the progress made in the implementation of these commitments and agreements and that much remains to be done in this context;

4. Emphasizes the link between financing for development and the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

5. Stresses, in order to complement national development efforts, the importance of full implementation of the commitment to enhance further the coherence and consistency of international monetary, financial and trading systems, and in this context requests the Secretary-General to keep actions under review;

6. Recognizes initiatives taken to enhance the voice, participation and representation of developing countries and countries with economies in transition in the work and decision-making processes of the intergovernmental bodies of institutional stakeholders, and invites them to continue and strengthen actions aimed at reaching decisions in this regard;

7. Invites the World Trade Organization to strengthen its institutional relationship with the United Nations, in particular through its active involvement in the meetings of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council devoted to financing for development, and through its participation in the preparation of the annual report on the implementation of and follow-up to the commitments made and agreements reached at the International Conference on Financing for Development;

8. Welcomes the decisions by the major institutional stakeholders of the International Conference on Financing for Development to include in the agendas of their intergovernmental bodies relevant items on the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, and invites all major institutional stakeholders to consider doing so, in accordance with paragraph 70 of the Monterrey Consensus, and to make a contribution to the assessment of progress made to the High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development of the General Assembly and to the spring meeting of the Economic and Social Council;

9. Requests the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, in cooperation with other relevant stakeholders, to continue to address in a comprehensive way commodities issues and their impact on financing for development;

10. Requests the Economic and Social Council, in its examination of the report of the Ad Hoc Group of Experts on International Cooperation in Tax Matters at its next substantive session to give consideration to the institutional framework for international cooperation in tax matters;

11. Recalls paragraph 69 of the Monterrey Consensus and building on the experience of the high-level spring meeting of the Economic and Social Council and the High-level Dialogue of the General Assembly in 2003, in the context of the integrated approach to the follow-up to and implementation of the commitments made and agreements reached at the International Conference on Financing for Development, requests:

(a) The President of the General Assembly, in coordination with the President of the Economic and Social Council, to strengthen the preparations, with all major institutional and other stakeholders, of matters relevant to the organization of the High-level Dialogue, in consultation with all Member States;

(b) The President of the Economic and Social Council, with support from the Vice-Presidents, to enhance the Council's interactions through regular exchanges with the Bretton Woods institutions, the World Trade Organization and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on organizational matters related to the follow-up to the International Conference on Financing for Development, within the context of the preparations for the high-level meeting with these institutions, bearing in mind General Assembly resolution 57/270 B and Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/47, and to report thereon to the Council;

(c) The President of the Economic and Social Council, in consultation with all major institutional stakeholders, to focus the annual special high-level meeting on specific issues, within the holistic integrated approach of the Monterrey Consensus, and to report thereon to the Council;

12. Invites the regional commissions, with the support of regional development banks, as appropriate, and in cooperation with United Nations funds and programmes, to use the opportunity of their regular inter-governmental sessions to hold special meetings within existing resources, as necessary, to address the regional and interregional aspects of the follow-up to the International Conference on Financing for Development and thus help to bridge any gaps between the national, regional and international dimensions of the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus and serve as inputs to the High-level Dialogue as well as to the spring meeting of the Economic and Social Council;

13. Welcomes the establishment of the Financing for Development Office in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, and in this regard reiterates the need to fully implement resolution 57/273 to enable the Office to provide effective support to the intergovernmental process entrusted with the follow-up to the International Conference on Financing for Development, and to facilitate the participation of all stakeholders in accordance with the rules of procedure of the United Nations, in particular the accreditation procedures and modalities of participation utilized at the Conference and in its preparatory process, as well as to continue within its mandate:

(a) To organize workshops and multi-stakeholder consultations, including experts from the official and private sectors, as well as academia and civil society, to examine issues related to the mobilization of resources for financing development and poverty eradication;

(b) To convene activities involving various stakeholders, including the private sector and civil society, as appropriate, to promote best practices and exchange information on the implementation of the commitments made and agreements reached at the International Conference for Financing for Development;

14. Decides to consider at its fifty-ninth session possible innovative sources of financing for development, and requests the Secretary-General to submit the result of the analysis on this issue as called for in paragraph 44 of the Monterrey Consensus;

15. Invites countries to report by 2005, inter alia, through existing reporting mechanisms, on their efforts to implement the Monterrey Consensus, bearing in mind the need to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration;

16. Decides to hold the 2005 High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development at the ministerial level; the time and modalities of the High-level Dialogue will be set by the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, taking into account other major events in the same year and the need for adequate provisions for an enhanced dialogue;

17. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Follow-up to and implementation of the outcome of the International Conference on Financing for Development", and requests the Secretary-General to submit an annual analytical assessment of the state of the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus, including the implementation of the present resolution, to be prepared in full collaboration with the major institutional stakeholders.

Investment, technology and related financial issues

The UNCTAD Commission on Investment, Technology and Related Financial Issues held its seventh session in Geneva from 20 to 24 January [TD/B/EX(81)/3].

At its thirty-first executive session in March [A/58/15], TDB took note of the Commission's report and endorsed its recommendations.

Investment and development. For its consideration of policy issues related to investment and development, the Commission had before it an UNCTAD secretariat note on the subject [TD/B/COM.2/44]; the report of the Expert Meeting on the Development Dimension of FDI: policies to enhance the role of FDI in support of the competitiveness of the enterprise sector and the eco-conomic performance of host economies, taking into account the trade/investment interface, in the national and international context [YUN 2002, p. 966]; and an UNCTAD secretariat note on the development dimension of FDI: policies to enhance the role of FDI in the international context—policy issues to consider [TD/B/COM.2/EM.12/2].

The Commission recommended that the secretariat continue its post-Doha technical assistance and capacity-building work, facilitate an ongoing exchange of information and experiences among investment negotiators, and continue its in-depth analysis of policies and measures to help developing countries attract and benefit more from FDI. The secretariat should also complement its analytical work with technical and capacity-building assistance, including helping countries to modernize relevant laws, and continue to assist in the development of inter-enterprise relations.

Investment arrangements. For its consideration of issues related to investment arrangements, the Commission had before it an UNCTAD secretariat note on the subject [TD/B/COM.2/45]; the report of the Expert Meeting on Experiences with Bilateral and Regional Approaches to Multilateral Cooperation in the Area of Long-term Cross-border Investment, particularly FDI [YUN 2002, p. 966]; and a related UNCTAD secretariat note [TD/B/COM.2/EM.11/2].

The Commission welcomed the interface between policy makers and investment promotion practitioners in the format of a joint session with the World Association of Investment Promotion Agencies, which it invited to contribute to the UNCTAD XI preparatory process (see p. 998).

Investment policy reviews. For its consideration of investment policy reviews: exchange of national experiences, the Commission had before it the summary of the deliberations of the Investment Policy Review of Botswana and Ghana [TD/B/COM.2/49].

The Commission encouraged the secretariat to devote sufficient time to investment policy reviews covering member States during the session, to enable their presentation and exchange of national experiences. It encouraged the UN regional commissions to participate in the Commission's work, thereby enhancing its role as a forum for exchange among member States and intergovernmental agencies on issues related to investment.

Subsidiary bodies. In 2003, two expert meetings took place, both in Geneva. The Expert Meeting on Effectiveness of FDI Policy Measures (25-27 June) [TD/B/COM.2/51] had before it an UNCTAD secretariat note on the subject [TD/B/

COM.2/EM.13/2]. The Expert Meeting focused on selected general policy measures (labour, business immigration and taxation) and proactive measures in selected industries important for developing countries (garments/textiles, agribusiness, tourism and information and communication technology). It also considered the investment policy review of Nepal.

In considering the general regulatory environment, the experts emphasized the need for effective policy measures in the areas of labour, business immigration and taxation, and in competition policy, exchange control, intellectual property protection, and sectoral and environmental regulation. In all areas, the effectiveness of measures depended on policy transparency, good governance, social consensus and economic and political stability. Home country measures, such as tax incentives and trade preferences, using ODA for capacity-building, infrastructure development, enterprise support and training and technological upgrading, could contribute to encouraging FDI inflows and to enhancing the benefits of FDI, particularly in LDCs and other structurally weak economies. Together with host country proactive measures, they could be a powerful stimulus to attracting FDI in developing countries.

The Expert Meeting on FDI and Development (29-31 October) [TB/B/COM.2/57] had before it an UNCTAD secretariat note on the subject [TD/B/COM.2/EM.14/2]. The Expert Meeting discussed the role of FDI in the development of services industries and related policy challenges, including FDI and competitiveness, the growth of export-oriented FDI in services, and the role and impact of FDI in the context of privatization of services. Experts noted that although services often represented the largest sector of the economy, the importance of FDI in services had not been adequately reflected in research and policy analysis. They suggested that policy formulation should go beyond the standard economic analysis and agreed that both analysis and policy formulation needed to reflect the wide diversity among different kinds of services.

Competition law and policy

The Intergovernmental Group of Experts on Competition Law and Policy, at its fifth session (Geneva, 2-4 July) [TD/B/COM.2/52], considered consultations on competition law and policy, including the model law and studies related to the provisions of the 1980 Set of Multilaterally Agreed Equitable Principles and Rules for the Control of Restrictive Business Practices (known as the Set) [YUN 1980, p. 626]; and the UNCTAD work programme, including technical assistance, and advisory and training programmes on competition law and policy. It had before it UNCTAD secretariat reports on: experiences gained so far on international cooperation in competition policy issues and the mechanisms used [TD/B/COM.2/CLP/21/Rev.2]; roles of possible dispute mediation mechanisms and alternative arrangements, including voluntary peer reviews, in competition law and policy [TD/B/COM.2/CLP/37]; a review of capacity-building and technical assistance in competition law and policy [TD/B/COM.2/CLP/36]; the proposed handbook on competition legislation [TD/B/COM.2/CLP/33]; the updated Directory of Competition Authorities [TD/B/COM.2/CLP/34]; and the revised Model Law on Competition [TD/B/RBP/CONF.5/7/Rev.2].

In agreed conclusions, the Group of Experts recommended to UNCTAD XI, to be held in 2004, the continuation and strengthening of the work programme on competition law and policy within UNCTAD's secretariat and the Group. It invited the secretariat to continue its efforts related to the implementation of the Doha Declaration [YUN 2001, p. 1432] in technical assistance and capacity-building. The secretariat was asked to revise/ update the documents before the Group, for submission to its 2004 session. It was also asked to prepare for that session, which would act as the preparatory meeting for the Fifth UN Conference to Review All Aspects of the Set in 2005, a number of studies on the implications of closer multilateral cooperation in competition policy for the development objectives of developing and least developed countries.

The Group recommended that for better implementation of the Set, it would consider in 2004 the strengths and weaknesses of peer review related to competition policy, cooperation and dispute mediation mechanisms in regional integration agreements related to competition law and policy, evidence gathering and cooperation issues in hard-core cartel investigations, and advocacy in promoting awareness of competition policy and law in developing countries.

The secretariat should expand its capacity-building and technical cooperation activities in all regions and prepare for consideration at its next session an updated review of capacity-building and technical assistance, a further revised and updated version of the Model Law on Competition, and an information note on recent important cases, with special reference to cases involving more than one country.

The Commission, at its seventh session [TD/B/EX(31)/3], took note of the report of the fourth (2002) session of the Intergovernmental Group of Experts [YUN 2002, p. 967] and endorsed its agreed conclusions.

International standards of accounting and reporting

The Intergovernmental Working Group of Experts on International Standards of Accounting and Reporting, at its twentieth session (Geneva, 29 September-1 October) [TD/B/COM.2/58], had before it UNCTAD secretariat reports on: major issues on implementation of corporate disclosure requirements [TD/B/COM.2/ISAR/19 & Add.1-5 & Add.2/Corr.1]; disclosures of the impact of corporations on society: current trends and issues [TD/B/COM.2/ISAR/20]; and a revised model accounting curriculum [TD/B/COM.2/ISAR/21].

In its agreed conclusions, the Working Group requested the UNCTAD secretariat to publish and disseminate a paper on transparency and disclosure requirements for corporate governance. The secretariat should continue to assist countries in developing and implementing their own guidelines and benchmarking systems, and form partnerships with private and public intergovernmental organizations promoting corporate governance. The Working Group, noting the work being done by various groups, including the Global Reporting Initiative, to develop different indicators, agreed to begin examining existing indicators so that corporate social responsibility reports would be comparable and not impose unreasonable burdens on enterprises in developing countries. In terms of the draft guidance relating to accounting by small and medium-sized enterprises, the Working Group agreed that small groups be established to monitor changes made to existing and new standards issued by the International Accounting Standards Board and the results obtained through field testing. It requested the secretariat to continue its efforts on national and international requirements for the qualification of professional accountants and to finalize and widely disseminate the Model Curriculum. It recommended that the work on environmental accounting and eco-efficiency indicators be brought to the notice of the International Federation of Accountants and that UNCTAD conduct additional field testing of the guideline on eco-efficiency indicators in developing countries and across industry sectors.

The Commission, at its seventh session [TD/B/EX(31)/3], endorsed the report of the nineteenth (2002) session of the Intergovernmental Working Group of Experts on International Standards of Accounting and Reporting [YUN 2002, p. 967].

Taxation

On 5 March (decision 2003/214), the Economic and Social Council endorsed the decision of the Ad Hoc Group of Experts on International Cooperation in Tax Matters to change the dates and venue of its eleventh meeting from 7 to 11 April in New York to 10 to 14 November in Geneva. On 31 October (decision 2003/313), the Council endorsed the Ad Hoc Group's decision to change the date of that meeting to 15 to 19 December.

The eleventh meeting of the Ad Hoc Group of Experts on International Cooperation in Tax Matters (Geneva, 15-19 December) [E/2004/51] discussed mutual assistance in the collection of tax debts and a protocol for mutual assistance procedures; treaty shopping and treaty abuses; interaction of tax, trade and investment; financial taxation and equity market development; transfer pricing; cross-border interest income and capital flight; e-commerce and developing countries; revision of the United Nations Model Double Taxation Convention and the Manual for the Negotiation of Bilateral Tax Treaties; and the institutional framework for strengthening international cooperation in tax matters.

---

Transport

---

Maritime transport

The Review of Maritime Transport 2003 [Sales No. E.03.II.D.10] stated that world seaborne trade rebounded slightly in 2002, reaching 5.88 billion tons after a 2001 contraction. The annual growth rate was 0.8 per cent compared to a negative 1 per cent in 2001.

The world merchant fleet expanded to 844.2 million deadweight tons (dwt) at the end of 2002, an increase of 2.3 per cent. New building deliveries were up by an impressive 8.4 per cent to 49 million dwt, and tonnage broken up and lost increased by 9.7 per cent to 30.5 million dwt, leaving a net gain of 18.5 million dwt. The fleets of oil tankers and dry bulk carriers together made up 71.6 per cent of the total world fleet. The fleet of oil tankers increased by 6.6 per cent, while that of dry bulk carriers increased by 1.9 per cent. There was a 7.4 per cent increase to 82.8 million dwt in the container fleet and a 2.1 per cent increase to 19.5 million dwt in the liquefied gas carriers fleet. Registration of ships by developed market-economy countries and major open-registry countries accounted for 25.7 and 47.2 per cent, respectively, of the world fleet. Open registries saw their tonnage contract by almost 1 per cent and two thirds of that beneficial fleet was owned by market economies and developing countries. Developing countries' share of the world fleet was 20.3 per cent, or 171.3 million dwt, of which 126.9 million dwt was registered in Asia.

Transport of dangerous goods

In response to Economic and Social Council resolutions 2001/34 [YUN 2001, p. 893] and 2001/44 [ibid.], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2003/46] on the work during 2001-2002 of the Committee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods and on the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals.

The report stated that the Committee had adopted amendments to the twelfth revised edition of the Recommendations on the Transport of Dangerous Goods: Model Regulations and to the Recommendations on the Transport of Dangerous Goods: Manual of Tests and Criteria. Both revisions had been published by the secretariat.

Following the events of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60], the Committee had developed and adopted new security provisions for inclusion in the Model Regulations that were intended to minimize theft and misuse of dangerous goods, especially "high-consequence" dangerous goods. The Committee also adopted the final version of the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals, which would become operational by 2008, in accordance with the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, adopted by the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821].

The Committee adopted a programme of work for the 2003-2004 biennium and recommended a draft resolution on its work for adoption by the Council (see below).

The Committee's two subsidiary bodies held two sessions each, in Geneva: the Subcommittee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods held its twenty-third (30 June-4 July) [ST/SG/AC.10/C.3/46 & Add.1] and twenty-fourth (3-10 December) [ST/SG/AC.10/C.3/48 & Add.1] sessions; and the Subcommittee of Experts on the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals held its fifth (7-9 July) [ST/SG/AC.10/C.4/10] and sixth (10-12 December) [ST/SG/AC.10/C.4/12] sessions.

By decision 2003/309 of 25 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's report on the work of the Committee of Experts.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 July [meeting 49], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/64 [draft: E/2003/46] without vote [agenda item 13 (d)].

Work of the Committee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods and on the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1999/65 of 26 October 1999, 2001/34 of 26 July 2001 and 2001/44 of 20 December 2001,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Committee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods and on the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals during the biennium 2001-2002,

A. Work of the Committee regarding the transport of dangerous goods

Recognizing the importance of the work of the Committee for the harmonization of codes and regulations relating to the transport of dangerous goods,

Bearing in mind the need to maintain safety standards at all times and to facilitate trade, as well as the importance of this to the various organizations responsible for modal regulations, while meeting the growing concern for the protection of life, property and the environment through the safe transport of dangerous goods, including their security in transport,

Noting the increasing volume of dangerous goods being introduced into worldwide commerce and the rapid expansion of technology and innovation,

1. Expresses its appreciation for the work of the Committee with respect to matters relating to the transport of dangerous goods, including their security in transport;

2. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To circulate the new and amended recommendations on the transport of dangerous goods to the Governments of Member States, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency and other international organizations concerned;

(b) To publish the thirteenth revised edition of the Recommendations on the Transport of Dangerous Goods: Model Regulations and the fourth revised edition of the Recommendations on the Transport of Dangerous Goods: Manual of Tests and Criteria in all the official languages of the United Nations, in the most cost-effective manner, not later than the end of 2003;

(c) To make these publications available on the web site of the Economic Commission for Europe, which also provides secretariat services to the Committee, and to make them available also on CD-ROM;

3. Invites all Governments, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency and the other international organizations concerned to transmit to the secretariat of the Committee their views on the work of the Committee, together with any comments that they may wish to make on the amended recommendations;

4. Invites all interested Governments, the regional commissions, the specialized agencies and the international organizations concerned, when developing or updating appropriate codes and regulations, to consider taking into account the recommendations of the Committee;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the status of the effective implementation of the Model Regulations on the Transport of Dangerous

Goods by Member States and international organizations on a worldwide level;

B. Work of the Committee regarding the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals

Bearing in mind that, pursuant to paragraph 19.27 of Agenda 21, the Inter-Organization Programme for the Sound Management of Chemicals has cooperated for a decade with the International Labour Organization, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development and the Subcommittee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods to develop a globally harmonized hazard classification and compatible labelling system for chemicals,

Bearing in mind also that the Subcommittee of Experts on the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals was created pursuant to resolution 1999/65 to make the Globally Harmonized System available worldwide, to keep it up to date and to promote and monitor its implementation,

Noting with satisfaction that the Committee could reach consensus on the Globally Harmonized System after consideration of a draft consolidated by the Inter-Organization Programme for the Sound Management of Chemicals on the basis of input from the Subcommittee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods, the International Labour Organization and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development,

Aware that, in paragraph 23 (c) of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), the World Summit encouraged countries to implement the Globally Harmonized System as soon as possible with a view to having the System fully operational by 2008,

Also aware that the General Assembly, in its resolution 57/253 of 20 December 2002, endorsed the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and requested the Economic and Social Council to implement the provisions of the Plan relevant to its mandate and, in particular, to promote the implementation of Agenda 21 by strengthening system-wide coordination,

Aware of and recognizing the significance of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research/International Labour Organization/Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development Global Partnership for Capacity-building to Implement the Globally Harmonized System for building capacities at all levels to achieve the 2008 target,

1. Expresses its deep appreciation to the Committee and other organizations concerned for their fruitful cooperation;

2. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To publish the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labelling of Chemicals in all the official languages of the United Nations, in the most cost-effective manner, and to circulate it to the Governments of Member States, the specialized agencies and the other international organizations concerned as soon as possible and no later than 2004;

(b) To consider disseminating the Globally Harmonized System as a CD-ROM;

(c) To make the Globally Harmonized System available on the web site of the secretariat of the Economic Commission for Europe, which also provides secretariat services to the Committee;

3. Invites all Governments to take the necessary steps, through appropriate national procedures and/or legislation, to implement the Globally Harmonized System, as soon as possible and no later than 2008;

4. Reiterates the call for support to developing countries in strengthening their capacity of the sound management of chemicals by providing technical and financial assistance;

5. Invites the regional commissions, United Nations programmes, the specialized agencies and other organizations concerned to promote the implementation of the Globally Harmonized System and, where relevant, to amend their respective legal international instruments addressing transport safety, work safety, consumer protection or the protection of the environment so as to give effect to the Globally Harmonized System through such instruments;

6. Invites Governments, the regional commissions, United Nations programmes, the specialized agencies and the other organizations concerned to provide feedback to the Subcommittee of Experts on the Globally Harmonized System of Classification and Labeling of Chemicals;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the status of implementation of the Globally Harmonized System;

8. Encourages Governments, the regional commissions, United Nations programmes, the specialized agencies and other relevant international organizations and non-governmental organizations, in particular industry, to support implementation of the Globally Harmonized System and capacity-building activities in developing countries and countries in transition by providing financial contributions and/or technical assistance;

C. Programme of work of the Committee

Taking note of the programme of work of the Committee for the biennium 2003-2004 as contained in paragraphs 29 to 31 of the report of the Secretary-General,

Noting the relatively poor representation of experts from developing countries and countries with economies in transition in the work of the Committee and the need to ensure their wider participation in its work,

1. Decides to approve the programme of work of the Committee;

2. Stresses the importance of the participation of experts from developing countries as well as countries with economies in transition in the work of the Committee, calls, in this regard, for voluntary contributions to facilitate their participation, including through support for travel and daily subsistence allowance, and invites Member States and international organizations in a position to do so to contribute;

3. Notes the recommendations of the Committee regarding staff resources and invites the General Assembly to consider this issue in the context of its review of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the Economic and Social Council in 2005 on the implementation of the present resolution.

UNCTAD institutional and organizational questions

In 2003, the Trade and Development Board (TDB)—the executive body of UNCTAD—held its twentieth (27 January) special session, its thirty-first (10 March) and thirty-second (28 July) executive sessions, and its fiftieth (6-17 October) session [A/58/15], and the first part of its thirty-third (23 September) executive session [A/59/15]. All sessions took place in Geneva.

In January, at its twentieth special session, the Board adopted a decision [dec. 474(S-XX)] on the financing of the participation of experts from developing countries and countries with economies in transition in UNCTAD expert meetings (see p. 997). In March, it adopted a decision on the preparations for UNCTAD XI, to be held in 2004 [dec. 475(EX-31)], and took note of the reports of its subsidiary bodies (see above).

In March, TDB adopted a decision on the languages for official documentation of the ITC Joint Advisory Group [dec. 475(EX-31)]. It also considered preparations for UNCTAD XI and reports of its subsidiary bodies.

In July, TDB considered activities undertaken by UNCTAD in favour of Africa and in support of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 937), preparations for UNCTAD XI and reports on the activities of its subsidiary bodies.

In September, it continued consideration of the financing of the participation of experts from developing countries and countries with economies in transition.

In October, TDB adopted agreed conclusions on the review of progress in the implementation of the Programme of Action for LDCs for the Decade 2001-2010 [agreed conclusions 476(L)] (see p. 870); and on economic developments in Africa: issues of Africa's trade performance [agreed conclusions 477(L)] (see p. 966). It adopted a decision on review of technical cooperation activities of UNCTAD [dec. 478(L)] (see below). It also considered UNCTAD's assistance to the Palestinian people (see p. 504), the preparatory process for UNCTAD XI, the law on international trade (see p. 1374) and the report of the Meeting of Eminent Persons on Commodity Issues (see p. 977).

Technical cooperation

In a July report [TD/B/50/2 & Add.1.2], the UNCTAD Secretary-General provided an overview of technical cooperation activities in 2002, which continued to emphasize capacity-building. Major programmes in order of expenditure were the Automated System for Customs Data (ASYCUDA), investment policies and capacity-building, the Debt Management and Financial Analysis System (DMFAS), trade negotiations and commercial diplomacy, trade logistics, technology and enterprise, and trade and environment. Expenditures totalled $21.8 million, a 5.9 per cent decrease in delivery compared to 2001, due to a drop in expenditures on UNDP-supported projects and projects financed by trust funds. Of the total, $3.4 million was financed by UNDP, $15.3 million from trust fund contributions and $3.1 million from the programme budget.

By region, approximately $3.02 million went to Africa, $3.9 million to Asia and the Pacific, $2.01 million to Latin America and the Caribbean, $1.01 million to Europe and $11.87 million to interregional projects. LDCs' share of technical cooperation expenditures decreased to 29 per cent compared to 43 per cent in 2001.

By programme, services infrastructure for development and trade efficiency accounted for 36.7 per cent of total expenditures; international trade in goods and services, and commodities, 20.1 per cent; investment, technology and enterprise development, 19.5 per cent; and globalization and development strategies, 12.9 per cent. The balance (8.8 per cent) was represented by cross-divisional advisory services (4.8 per cent), the Office of the Special Coordinator for Least Developed, Landlocked and Island Developing Countries (1.7 per cent), and executive direction and management (4.3 per cent).

Technical cooperation strategy

In May [TD/B/WP/161], the UNCTAD secretariat reported on consultations with member States, in response to requests of the Working Party on the Medium-term Plan and the Programme Budget at its thirty-ninth session [YUN 2002, p. 970] and TDB, in decision 472(XI.IX) [ibid., p. 969], on integrating into UNCTAD's technical cooperation strategy elements of the thematic evaluation on capacity-building [ibid., p. 970]. The consultations resulted in an understanding that the issues emanating from the evaluation should be dealt with in the context of a new strategy for technical cooperation. It was agreed that the 1997 technical cooperation strategy [YUN 1997, p. 959] should be updated and reinforced by incorporating elements from the recommendations of the thematic evaluation of capacity-building. It was proposed that a draft of a new strategy of UNCTAD technical cooperation be prepared and submitted to the September session of the Working Party for consideration.

The Working Party, at its forty-first session (15-19 September) [TD/B/50/12], had before it the draft technical cooperation strategy of UNCTAD [TD/B/50/7], which set out UNCTAD's operational activities to address the problems of trade and development in an era of globalization and liberalization, emphasizing the development of human, institutional, productive and export capacities of developing countries and economies in transition, particularly LDCs, with a view to supporting poverty reduction policies and the achievement of the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51]. It also had before it an UNCTAD secretariat note on capacity development [TD/B/50/9], submitted in response to TDB decision 472(XLIX), which discussed definitions of capacity-building/development; elements relevant for UNCTAD's conceptual framework for capacity development; the goals and instruments of UNCTAD's capacity development; and the specific capacity development needs of LDCs.

The Working Party adopted a draft decision for consideration by TDB.

On 10 October [A/58/15 (dec. 478(L))], TDB recommended that the secretariat implement the strategy for UNCTAD's technical cooperation activities, the text of which was attached to its decision, taking into account the ideas contained in the secretariat note on capacity development (see above). It invited the secretariat to further strengthen coordination among its different entities with a view to integrated approaches and through dissemination of the strategy among its staff, particularly project managers. TDB also invited the secretariat to report on the strategy and its implementation to UNCTAD XI in 2004 and promote it among donors and beneficiary countries.

Evaluation

In August, an independent team submitted an evaluation of UNCTAD's trade, environment and development programme [TD/B/WP/165], which aimed to build capacity to handle WTO negotiation issues, and trade and environment issues of importance to developing countries. While the programme's activities, such as workshops and seminars, were considered to be good, the link with the immediate work of participant countries and follow-up were weak, outreach was not as good as intended and both beneficiaries and donors had difficulty in obtaining information about the programme and had experienced varying standards of service. It was recommended that the programme create a vision and a strategy for its work, develop a communication strategy, work out measurable performance indicators, undertake internal staff training, improve follow-up, pay attention to the value chain, improve outreach and plan how to withdraw after completion of activities.

At its forty-first session [TD/B/50/12], the Working Party on the Medium-term Plan and the Programme Budget endorsed the recommendations contained in the evaluation report and encouraged the secretariat to make further improvements. It should submit a progress report to the Working Party's forty-third session in 2004.

TDB, in October [A/58/15], endorsed the conclusions of the Working Party.

Participation in expert meetings

TDB, at its twentieth special session (Geneva, 27 January) [A/58/15], continued its 2002 consideration [YUN 2002, p. 971] of the financing of the participation of experts from developing countries and countries with economies in transition in UNCTAD expert meetings. In a decision [A/58/15 (dec. 474(S-XX))], the Board, noting that funding would cover the participation of 10 experts at each of eight expert meetings per annum, selected according to geographical distribution, beneficiary needs and expertise, agreed, on an experimental basis, to finance the participation of experts in UNCTAD expert meetings from extrabudgetary contributions and from a reserve fund in the event such contributions were insufficient. It decided that funds currently available to finance participation in expert meetings should constitute the reserve fund; the process of obtaining extrabudgetary contributions should begin immediately; funding for each expert meeting should be secured not later than three months prior to the meeting; if sufficient funding was not available, use should be made of the reserve fund; and it would discuss the working of the scheme, including its replenishment, in September, and regularly thereafter, based on an evaluation by the UNCTAD Secretary-General, in the light of criteria established by TDB at its nineteenth (2002) special session [YUN 2002, p. 971].

At the first part of its thirty-third executive session (23 September) [A/59/15], the UNCTAD secretariat, in a 17 September note [TD/B/EX(33)/2], stated that by the end of September the participation of 58 experts in six expert meetings would have been financed. Since only one pledge of an extrabudgetary contribution ($10,000) had been received so far, all six expert meetings had been financed from the reserve fund. The balance in the fund, which totalled $219,000 at the beginning of 2003, stood at $45,822 (including the pledge). The reserve fund was likely to be depleted by the end of the year, the first year of the scheme, and financing to fund the participation of experts in 2004 was uncertain. The experimental scheme based on extrabudgetary contributions, agreed to by TDB in January, did not seem to meet the requirement of providing a long-term solution for predictable and regular financing of participation in expert meetings. TDB would therefore have to consider other means of replenishing the reserve fund and ensuring extrabudgetary contributions for 2004 if it wished to continue the experimental scheme.

The UNCTAD Deputy Secretary-General informed the Board that the secretariat's note had omitted to mention a pledge of 100,000 euros made in 2002, before the introduction of the scheme for financing the participation of LDC experts, and which would finance those experts for 2004 and beyond. However, there were no funds to finance the 70 per cent of experts who did not come from LDCs. He suggested the use of regular budget resources as one option to fund the scheme, since previous options proposed, such as using unspent project balances, would not produce enough resources to sustain it.

TDB decided to suspend its session and requested the President to hold informal consultations with interested delegations on the matter.

Medium-term plan and programme budget

The UNCTAD Working Party on the Medium-term Plan and the Programme Budget held two sessions in 2003, both in Geneva.

At the first part of its fortieth session (13-17 January) [TD/B/EX(31)/2], the Working Party reviewed proposals for the draft programme budget on trade and development for the 2004-2005 biennium [UNCTAD/EDM/Misc.241/Rev.1]. In agreed conclusions, it concurred with the revised text and considered that the work programme should take into account the outcome of the Fifth WTO Ministerial Conference (see p. 1535), the results of UNCTAD XI (2004) and other relevant UN meetings. It encouraged the UNCTAD secretariat to further develop its cooperation with other related UN organizations, WTO and the Bretton Woods institutions. It stressed that, as a cross-cutting issue, the question of LDCs should be further integrated in all UNCTAD sub-programmes. The Working Party requested the secretariat to consider compiling internally, on a specific web site, the main country and regional data on UNCTAD technical assistance programmes to complement the UNCTAD database on bilateral technical assistance, including through a link with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development/WTO database on trade-related capacity-building, and report to the Working Party at its forty-first session. It supported the efforts of African countries in the framework of the implementation of the objectives of NEPAD [YUN 2002, p. 907]. It invited member States to contribute to a better definition of indicators, particularly qualitative indicators, and encouraged further interaction between the secretariat and member States.

In March [A/58/15], TDB took note of the Working Party's report on the first part of its fortieth session and endorsed the agreed conclusions.

At the second part of its fortieth session (21-22 May) [TD/B/EX(32)/3], the Working Party reviewed the draft programme budget on trade and development for the 2004-2005 biennium [A/56/6 (Sect. 12)] and concurred with the programmatic content. In agreed conclusions, the Working Party emphasized the importance of UNCTAD's role in implementing the outcomes of major international conferences and of its assistance to member States in implementing the WTO post-Doha work programme and NEPAD. It also emphasized the importance of the Least Developed Countries Report and requested TDB to consider publishing that report annually.

In July [A/58/15], TDB took note of the Working Party's report on the second part of its fortieth session and endorsed the agreed conclusions.

At its forty-first session [TD/B/50/12], the Working Party approved a draft decision for adoption by TDB on technical cooperation (see p. 995); a decision on the in-depth evaluation of the technical assistance programme on trade, environment and development (see p. 996); and agreed conclusions on the progress report on the implementation of the second phase of UNCTAD's web site (see below).

UNCTAD web site

At its forty-first session [TD/B/50/12], the Working Party on the Medium-term Plan and the Programme Budget welcomed the new functionalities of UNCTAD's web site. It requested the secretariat to develop the Newsroom facility for sessional documents and to make documents available to missions in a secure manner. It should also develop a web information diffusion policy, particularly with regard to embargoed and restricted documents, to ensure immediate and full access to all documents by member States. The secretariat should enhance the search facility of its web site and consider organizing a briefing session for delegates on the best use of the web site.

Preparations for UNCTAD XI

At its thirty-first executive session (10 March) [A/58/15], TDB asked its President to conduct consultations, with a view to reaching agreement on the substantive agenda item for UNCTAD XI, to be held in 2004, specific themes to be taken up within the framework of the agenda item, and the arrangements for the preparatory process. It requested the UNCTAD Secretary-General, for the purpose of those consultations, to present proposals in that regard. TDB set the end of April as the deadline for reaching agreement.

At the Board's thirty-second executive session (28 July) [A/58/15], the UNCTAD Deputy Secretary-General reported that both substantive and logistic preparations for UNCTAD XI were proceeding apace. Efforts were currently concentrated on the secretariat's submission, the first part of which would provide a historical perspective and assess global developments since UNCTAD X [YUN 2000, p. 890], while the second part, intended to serve as a basis for negotiations, would outline the issues involved, provide policy options and suggest how UNCTAD could contribute in its future work.

At its fiftieth session (6-17 October) [A/58/15], TDB approved the draft provisional agenda for UNCTAD XI. The substantive agenda item was established as: enhancing coherence between national development strategies and global economic processes towards economic growth and development, particularly of developing countries. The Board also established an open-ended Preparatory Committee for UNCTAD XI, under the chairmanship of the Board's President.

The Preparatory Committee, at its first session (Geneva, 15-16 November) [TD(XXI)/PC/2], considered a submission by the UNCTAD Secretary-General entitled "Preparations for UNCTAD XI" [TD(XI)/PC/1], in which he gave a historical perspective of trade and development and presented the pre-conference text, which discussed the sub-themes: development strategies in a globalizing world economy; building productive capacity and international competitiveness; assuring development gains from the international trading system and trade negotiations; and partnerships for development. Annexed to the document were proposed arrangements for collaboration between UNCTAD and civil society organizations prior to and during the conference. The Preparatory Committee decided to discuss the sub-themes in a committee of the whole from 17 to 21 November and 4 to 5 December.

UNCTAD Secretary-General

By decision 57/417 of 6 June, the General Assembly, on the proposal of the Secretary-General [A/57/109], confirmed the extension of the appointment of Rubens Ricupero as Secretary-General of UNCTAD for a period of one year, from 15 September 2003 to 14 September 2004.

Chapter V

Regional economic and social activities

The five regional commissions continued in 2003 to provide technical cooperation, including advisory services, to their member States, promote programmes and projects and provide training to enhance national capacity-building in various sectors. Four of them held regular sessions during the year—the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA), the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE), the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA). The Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) did not meet in 2003 but was scheduled to meet in 2004. The executive secretaries of the commissions continued to hold periodic meetings to exchange views and coordinate activities and positions on major development issues and preparations for and follow-up to UN conferences.

During the year, ECA placed particular emphasis on development issues related to social policy and poverty, and issues related to trade, in the context of the priorities set by the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and the New Partnership for Africa's Development. In July, the Economic and Social Council welcomed the cooperation between ECA and ECE on the project for the link through the Strait of Gibraltar and in deep-sea drilling work. ESCAP, in the review of its programmes, focused on the impact of HIV/AIDS on development, poverty reduction, the effects of globalization and implementation of the MDGs. It also considered issues related to landlocked developing countries and called for cooperation in transit transport in the ESCAP region, in accordance with the Almaty Programme of Action on the special transport needs of landlocked developing countries in Central Asia and their neighbours. In July, the Economic and Social Council admitted Timor-Leste as a full member of ESCAP.

The Council decided to establish within ESCWA a committee on women to identify, among other things, women-related priorities of its programme of work and medium-term plan, and to prepare and implement field projects for their advancement and empowerment. It called on the ESCWA secretariat to consider establishing a UN Arabic language centre to raise the technical and linguistic level of Arabic terminology used in UN documents. Other ESCWA activities concerned transport and trade, sustainable development and economic analysis and statistics. Among its activities, ECE focused on trade cooperation and industrial standards, particularly for transition economies. ECLAC continued activities in numerous areas, especially sustainable development and poverty reduction.

---

Regional cooperation

---

In 2003, the United Nations continued to strengthen cooperation among its regional commissions, between them and other UN entities, and with regional and international organizations.

On 28 January (decision 2003/205), the Economic and Social Council decided that the theme for the regional cooperation item of its 2003 substantive session would be "Development dimensions of trade negotiations: a regional perspective".

Meetings of executive secretaries. The executive secretaries of the five regional commissions met on 12 February (New York), 17 July (Geneva), 29 October (New York) and 9 December (Geneva) [E/2003/15, E/2004/15].

At their February meeting and meetings held in the latter half of 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 973], the executive secretaries exchanged views on, among other topics, the commissions' preparations for the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857); the Secretary-General's second set of major reforms contained in his report "Strengthening the United Nations: An Agenda for Further Change" [ibid., p. 1352]; global development issues as they related to their respective regions; and areas of cooperation among the commissions and the relationship between them and their UN system partners. They also exchanged views on the commissions' main strategic tasks in assisting their member States to implement the Millennium Declaration commitments [YUN 2000, p. 49] and those arising from other UN conferences, and on how to reflect those tasks in setting priorities for preparing their 2004-2005 programme budgets.

The executive secretaries agreed that the commissions provided an important regional forum for exchanging policies and best practices among member States and other stakeholders, bringing global concerns to their regions and regional concerns to global forums, and assisting member countries in peer reviews and the exchange of information, including on lessons learned. They also agreed to continue to highlight the role of the commissions in forging common regional positions as well as special concerns that were unique to the regions.

The executive secretaries concurred that, although the dual role of the regional commissions as regional outposts of the United Nations and as its regional expression had been reaffirmed by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 1998/46 [YUN 1998, p. 1262], the Secretary-General's proposals for further reform, including results-based budgeting [YUN 2002, p. 1368], should bring greater convergence of the commissions' activities with the priorities of the Millennium Declaration and the outcomes of major world conferences. For that purpose, through the 2004-2005 budget preparation process, the commissions had further strengthened their priority setting and strategic planning. They had also streamlined their organizational structures and the functioning of their subsidiary governmental forums and reinforced their outreach activities, including through improved dissemination of information about their activities.

Regarding the Secretary-General's proposals for reforming technical cooperation and his intention to clarify roles so as to achieve greater coherence and complementarity in providing those services (see p. 879), the executive secretaries affirmed that the commissions should play the overall leadership role in facilitating cooperation and coordination of technical cooperation activities provided by UN entities to regional and sub-regional processes, and that the regional coordination meetings mandated by the Council should be utilized for that purpose.

The executive secretaries found the regional coordination meetings useful for information exchange, and agreed to make them more strategic in their approach to coordination and more effective for coordination of follow-up to world conferences and other global intergovernmental commitments, in particular for regional monitoring of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51]. The meetings should encourage collaboration among UN entities and linkages of their activities to ensure a more coherent UN system response to agreed priorities for their respective regions. They noted that the ECA mandate for coordinating and monitoring

UN activities in support of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 937), and its endorsement by the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, had ensured a stronger direction for the regional coordination meetings while maintaining their simple structure and lack of bureaucratic layers.

The executive secretaries reviewed the Secretary-General's proposals for strengthening the role of the Executive Committee on Economic and Social Affairs for strategic planning and policy coherence, and noted that the Committee's work had led to improved interaction between the regional commissions and other relevant UN entities working at the global level. They agreed to involve the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) more actively in the Executive Committee's work and in the regional coordination meetings to ensure improved coordination of regional programmes and activities, and in the preparation of the Human Development Report.

The executive secretaries noted the importance of the timely and successful conclusion of the Doha Development Agenda [YUN 2001, p. 1432], and reviewed the regional commissions' role in extending technical assistance to developing countries in preparing for the multilateral trade negotiations. They exchanged views on cooperation between the commissions and sub-regional organizations and integration groupings in their respective regions. They were of the view that the two projects submitted by the commissions for funding under the UN Development Account (see p. 905)—capacity-building in trade and environment, and interregional partnership for promoting trade as an engine of growth through knowledge management and information and communication technology—should strengthen interregional cooperation and cooperation among the commissions.

Review and reform of the regional commissions

In a May report [E/2003/15], the Secretary-General updated action taken by the regional commissions to implement the guidance given by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 1998/46 [YUN 1998, p. 1262] on restructuring and revitalizing the United Nations. In particular, the report described the commissions' dual role as UN outposts and as the regional expression of the Organization, discussed the theme for the Council's substantive session on regional cooperation (development dimensions of trade negotiations) and cooperation among the regional commissions in given areas, and reported on the meetings of the executive secretaries (see above).

In addenda to the report, the Secretary-General submitted resolutions and decisions adopted at recent meetings of the regional commissions calling for action by the Council [E/2003/15/Add.1] and a summary of resolution 59/1 (see p. 1013), adopted at ESCAP's fifty-ninth session [E/2003/15/Add.2], on regional follow-up to the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, adopted at the twenty-sixth special session of the General Assembly by resolution S-26/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1126].

By decision 2003/274 of 24 July, the Council took note of the Secretary-General's reports on regional cooperation (above) and the summaries of the economic and social situation in Africa, 2002 [E/2003/17]; the economic and social survey of Asia and the Pacific, 2003 [E/2003/18]; the economic survey of Europe, 2002 [E/2003/16]; the economic survey of Latin America and the Caribbean, 2002 [E/2003/19]; and the survey of economic and social developments in the ESCWA region, 2002-2003 [E/2003/20].

The Council adopted resolutions on the admission of Timor-Leste as a full member of ESCAP (resolution 2003/7); the establishment within ESCWA of a committee on women (resolution 2003/9) and of a UN Arabic language centre (resolution 2003/8); and the project for a Europe-Africa link through the Strait of Gibraltar (resolution 2003/52). It adopted a decision on the date and venue of ESCAP's sixtieth (2004) session (decision 2003/228).

(Summaries of the surveys and the texts of the resolutions are found in the relevant sections of this chapter.)

The General Assembly, in resolution 58/272 of 23 December (see p. 1447), took note of the Secretary-General's report on the proportion of General Service staff to Professional staff in the regional commissions [A/58/403] and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions [A/58/7/Add.5] (see p. 1447).

Review of regional commission subprogrammes

In April [E/AC.51/2003/4], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the triennial review of the implementation of the recommendations made by CPC on the in-depth evaluation of global development trends, issues and policies, global approaches to social and microeconomic issues and policies, and the corresponding subprogrammes in the regional commissions. The review, submitted in accordance with General Assembly resolution 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], concluded that the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) and the regional commissions had improved the quality and presentation of those reports to ensure that their findings and proposals could more easily reach government officials and the specialized public. The programmes concerned had applied good practices that were increasing the dissemination of analyses, such as the timely release of publications, more targeted distribution and special briefings to government officials and the press. Greater efforts were needed to ensure that economic analyses served as a source for understanding long-term trends, thereby contributing to the achievement of the MDGs. The exchange of information between DESA and the regional commissions would benefit from a more focused and institutionalized approach; for example, standard procedures should be followed during the planning stage of global and regional economic surveys.

At its forty-third session (New York, 9 June-3 July and 9 July) [A/58/16], CPC stressed the need for regional commissions to redouble their efforts in establishing strong linkages with regional and national institutions that were end-users of the outputs of the commissions' work on regional socio-economic analysis, in order to ensure that the findings of such studies could be taken into account at the country and regional levels.

---

Africa

---

The Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) held its thirty-sixth session/Conference of African Ministers of Finance, Planning and Economic Development (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 29 May-1 June) [E/ECA/CM.36/4] under the theme "Towards greater coherence and mutual accountability for development effectiveness". It considered the modalities and terms of reference for an external review of ECA's work since 1996, the proposed programme of work and priorities for 2004-2005 and the Commission's annual report for the 12-month period beginning 1 June 2002.

The Conference of African Ministers adopted a ministerial statement in which Ministers recognized the emerging consensus in the international community on the importance to development effectiveness of mutual accountability, harmonization and policy coherence. They considered their deliberations as a critical African effort to operationalize mutual accountability, promote policy coherence, contribute to making the International Monetary Fund (IMF) work better for Africa, and overcome the macroeconomic challenges of HIV/AIDS and thereby contribute to meeting the MDGs.

The Conference was preceded by the twenty-second meeting of the Committee of Experts of the Conference of African Ministers of Finance, Planning and Economic Development (Addis Ababa, 29-30 May), which discussed the items on the Commission's agenda.

The third Tokyo International Conference on African Development (TICAD III) (Tokyo, 29 September-1 October) reviewed the achievements of the 10-year TICAD process and discussed its future direction. The Conference adopted the TICAD Tenth Anniversary Declaration, affirming the ideal of partnership based on mutual trust and respect between Africa and the international community. The Chairman issued a summary of the proceedings.

The Second Ministerial Conference of the China-Africa Cooperation Forum (Addis Ababa, December) adopted the Addis Ababa Action Plan (2004-2006), which would serve as a guideline for cooperation between Africa and China.

Economic trends

In 2003, Africa's gross domestic product (GDP) grew by 3.6 per cent, compared to 3.2 per cent in 2002, making it the second fastest growing region in the developing world, behind Eastern and Southern Asia, according to the "Economic report on Africa 2004: unlocking Africa's potential in the global economy" [E/2004/17]. That performance was due largely to higher oil prices and production, rising commodity prices, increased foreign direct investment and good macroeconomic fundamentals, backed by good weather conditions. North Africa showed the strongest performance with a 4.7 per cent growth in GDP, followed by Central Africa at 3.7 per cent and West Africa at 3.6 per cent. East and Southern Africa both registered a paltry growth of 2.5 per cent. At the country level, there was a greater disparity in growth, with seven countries experiencing negative rates.

Fiscal deficits were largely kept under control, despite the challenge faced by many African countries in balancing spending on poverty reduction and preserving macroeconomic stability. Inflation rose slightly to 10.6 per cent, compared to 9.3 per cent in 2002, reflecting higher food and oil-import prices and currency depreciation in several countries. The regional current account deficit fell from 1.6 per cent of GDP in 2002 to 0.7 per cent in 2003, driven by robust oil and commodity prices and high worker remittances.

There was a slight deterioration in aggregate economic performance for sub-Saharan Africa, down from 3.5 per cent in 2002 to 2.9 per cent in 2003 and, in terms of per capita growth rates, North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa, with the highest rates of demographic expansion in the world, registered rates of 2.7 per cent and 1.7 per cent, respectively, which were clearly inadequate to achieve the MDGs for poverty reduction.

Activities in 2003

ECA activities in 2003 were undertaken through the following subprogrammes: facilitating economic and social policy analysis; fostering sustainable development; strengthening development management; harnessing information for development; promoting trade and regional integration; promoting the advancement of women; and supporting subregional activities for development [E/ECA/CM.36/4, E/ECA/CM.37/4].

Development policy and regional economic development

African recovery and development

ECA continued in 2003 to strengthen the capacity of member States to design and implement appropriate economic and social policies and strategies to achieve sustained economic growth for poverty reduction, in line with the priorities of the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] and the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) [YUN 2001, p. 899]. Particular emphasis was placed on economic policy analysis, development issues related to social policy and poverty analysis, trade and finance, and statistical development.

In the area of economic policy analysis, ECA published the 2003 edition of the Economic Report on Africa under the theme "Accelerating the pace of development". ECA's work in social policy and poverty analysis focused on support for member States in achieving the goals of NEPAD and the Millennium Declaration, including the preparation of analytical studies and other research activities, to help them understand the structural causes of poverty in order to design and implement effective pro-poor policies and strategies. Several other studies examined the policy and methodological issues involved in poverty measurement in Africa. The secretariat organized an ad hoc expert group meeting (Kampala, Uganda, June) to analyse the impact of pro-poor growth strategies on such sectors as education, labour, health, tourism and agriculture. It also convened the third meeting of the African Learning Group on the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (PRSP) (Addis Ababa, 3-5 December), which examined the PRSP process, the extent to which African countries were using the framework to focus on poverty reduction, and how it was influencing Africa's major development partners and shaping the new aid relationship. Two workshops were held on capital markets development in October (Johannesburg, South Africa, and Cairo, Egypt), and an ad hoc expert group meeting (Addis Ababa) was held on fiscal policy and growth in Africa to examine the challenges of decentralization, fiscal federalism and taxation and their implications for growth and poverty reduction.

As a follow-up to ECA's discussion on mutual accountability and policy coherence, the secretariat convened a special session of the ECA Big Table (Washington, D.C., October) to review how policies and practices of the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and IMF) could contribute to Africa's realization of the MDGs.

New Partnership for Africa's Development

ECA continued to chair the regional consultative meetings of UN agencies working in Africa, which constituted the framework for coordination of UN system support for NEPAD [E/AC.51/2003/6]—a programme for the continent's development, initiated by African leaders in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 899]. Under the infrastructure development cluster, one of the five clusters around which the UN system organized support for NEPAD [YUN 2002, p. 977], ECA and the World Bank, in collaboration with other partners, developed a long-term plan for the Sub-Saharan Africa Transport Programme, which was to be adopted by the Programme's General Meeting (Kigali, Rwanda, May). ECA and the African Development Bank carried out a study on the Trans African Highways, which was reviewed by stakeholders (Addis Ababa, 30-31 January). With regard to air transport, ECA and the World Bank helped the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) and the Economic and Monetary Community of Central Africa (CEMAC) to organize a ministerial meeting for West and Central Africa (25-28 February) to consider economic regulatory and safety oversight programmes. To that end, a plan was adopted, and ECA and the World Bank agreed to evaluate the Bank-supported capacity-building programmes for air transport at ECOWAS and CEMAC. Under the human resources development, employment and HIV/AIDS cluster, ECA supported the new commission on HIV/AIDS in Africa and the regional programme for HIV/AIDS.

In resolution 58/233 of 23 December (see p. 941), the General Assembly, noting the growing collaboration among UN system entities in support of NEPAD, requested the Secretary-General to promote greater coherence in the work of the UN system in support of NEPAD, on the basis of the agreed clusters.

(For more on NEPAD, see p. 937.)

Information technology

ECA activities under the subprogramme on harnessing information for development focused on promoting the growth of an information society in Africa through harnessing information and communication technologies (ICTs). The Commission assisted African countries in preparing for the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857), including through follow-up activities to the African Regional Preparatory Conference [YUN 2002, p. 978], such as the African media practitioners' forum (Addis Ababa, May) and the African Engineers' Day (Tunis, Tunisia, October). ECA continued to provide support to its member States in preparing for the second phase of the World Summit, scheduled to be held in Tunis in 2005. It participated in the launch of several initiatives and projects at the Summit, including the Global e-Policy Resource Network, thereby setting up the African regional node to coordinate demand from African institutions seeking guidance on e-strategies. ECA successfully completed the task of ensuring that information fed into the Spatial Data Infrastructures Africa: An Implementation Guide, launched in 2003 to provide guidelines on such national and regional infrastructures, was compatible and complementary. It worked closely with UNDP in the formulation of national information and communications infrastructure policies and plans for Cameroon, Malawi, Mozambique, Rwanda and Swaziland. Collaboration was also strengthened with other UN agencies within the context of the activities of the African Stakeholders Network of the UN ICT Task Force, which ECA coordinated. ECA and the World Intellectual Property Organization organized a subregional workshop (Addis Ababa, November) to address issues related to strategies for the acquisition, management and dissemination of intellectual property information.

The third meeting of the Committee on Development Information (CODI III) (Addis Ababa, 10-16 May), held under the theme "Information and governance", underscored the importance of information and good governance in Africa and made recommendations on strategies for harnessing information to enhance good governance practices. As part of CODI III activities, the Global Knowledge Partnership Africa Day was held on 13 May, focusing on, among other things, ICT and governance experiences in African countries, strategies for promoting e-governance, progress on ICT policies, and information and knowledge developments.

Transport and communications

Europe-Africa permanent link

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/37 [YUN 1999, p. 918], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2003/45] by the executive secretaries of ECA and ECE on the work done in connection with the project to establish a Europe-Africa permanent link through the Strait of Gibraltar. The report described the work carried out by two research companies in the areas of topographic mapping and related activities, geological mapping, oceanography, geotechnical tests and traffic monitoring. The information gathered so far seemed to indicate that the temporarily suspended studies and activities, particularly offshore deep drilling activities, should be restarted. That, together with the possible construction of a submarine exploration tunnel, should clear up remaining doubts as to the technical feasibility of a bored rail tunnel.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/52 [draft: E/2003/L.16] without vote [agenda item 10].

Europe-Africa permanent link through the Strait of Gibraltar

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1982/57 of 30 July 1982, 1983/62 of 29 July 1983, 1984/75 of 27 July 1984, 1985/70 of 26 July 1985, 1987/69 of 8 July 1987, 1989/119 of 28 July 1989, 1991/74 of 26 July 1991, 1993/60 of 30 July 1993, 1995/48 of 27 July 1995, 1997/48 of 22 July 1997, 1999/37 of 28 July 1999 and 2001/29 of 26 July 2001,

Referring to resolution 912(1989) adopted on 1 February 1989 by the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe regarding measures to encourage the construction of a major traffic artery in southwestern Europe and to study thoroughly the possibility of a permanent link through the Strait of Gibraltar,

Referring also to the Barcelona Declaration adopted at the Euro-Mediterranean Conference, held at Barcelona, Spain, in November 1995, and to the work programme annexed thereto, aimed at connecting the Mediterranean transport networks to the trans-European transport network so as to ensure their interoperability, Referring further to the Lisbon Declaration adopted at the Conference on Transport in the Mediterranean, held at Lisbon in January 1997, and to the conclusions of the Pan-European Transport Conference, held at Helsinki in June 1997, on corridors in the Mediterranean incorporating the permanent link,

Taking note of the conclusions of the second and third meetings of the Western Mediterranean Transport Group, held at Rabat in September 1995 and at Madrid in January 1997, and of the conclusions of the meeting held at Brussels in 2000 by the Euro-Mediterranean Forum on Transport, which constitutes a framework for coordination among the countries of the Mediterranean basin, for the development of integrated transport networks,

Taking note also of the conclusions of the study on transport infrastructure in the six countries of the western Mediterranean, carried out by the Western Mediterranean Transport Group in 1998, which is currently being updated with funding by the European Commission, for the establishment of an integrated network in the Mediterranean basin,

Taking note further of the follow-up report prepared jointly by the Economic Commission for Africa and the Economic Commission for Europe in accordance with resolution 2001/29, which refers to further project studies, with the aim, in particular, of supplementing the related geological and geotechnical research,

1. Welcomes the cooperation on the project for the link through the Strait of Gibraltar between the Economic Commission for Africa, the Economic Commission for Europe, the Governments of Morocco and Spain and specialized international organizations;

2. Also welcomes the efforts made to date in deep-sea drilling work, which have provided a decisive impetus to geological and geotechnical knowledge of undersea formations, and invites the two sponsoring countries and the organizations concerned to intensify their cooperation in order to finalize the project studies;

3. Commends the Economic Commission for Africa and the Economic Commission for Europe on the work done in preparing the project follow-up report requested by the Council in its resolution 2001/29;

4. Renews its invitation to the competent organizations of the United Nations system and to specialized governmental and non-governmental organizations to participate in the studies and operations on the permanent link through the Strait of Gibraltar;

5. Requests the Executive Secretaries of the Economic Commission for Africa and the Economic Commission for Europe to continue to take an active part in the follow-up to the project and to report to the Council at its substantive session of 2005;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide formal support and, to the extent that priorities permit, the resources necessary, within the regular budget, to the Economic Commission for Africa and the Economic Commission for Europe, to enable them to carry out the activities mentioned above.

Industrial development

The sixteenth meeting of the Conference of African Ministers of Industry (Vienna, 28 November), convened in cooperation with the African Union (AU) and the NEPAD secretariat, requested the Director-General of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization to support African industrialization under the framework of NEPAD, in line with General Assembly resolution 57/297 [YUN 2002, p. 979] on the Second Industrial Development Decade for Africa (1993-2002). The Conference adopted the African Productive Capacity Initiative (APCI), with the objective of providing further impetus to structural change in Africa, encouraging economic growth and sustainable development, promoting intra-trade and regional production processes, removing constraints and reducing transaction costs. It established the African Productive Capacity Facility to finance implementation of APCI.

Food security and sustainable development

ECA activities under the subprogramme on food security and sustainable development were aimed at enhancing the awareness and understanding of policy makers of the environmental foundations of sustainable development, with particular focus on strengthening their capacities for better integrating the nexus of food security, population growth, environmental sustainability and sustainable natural resources management into national development plans and poverty reduction strategies. ECA also helped to create awareness of the potential contribution of science and technology, including biotechnology, to achieving food security and sustainable development. The secretariat assisted member States in defining their environmental challenges and priorities and identifying strategies for addressing them.

ECA organized the third meeting of the Committee on Sustainable Development (Addis Ababa, 7-10 October), under the theme "Making technology work for the poor". The Committee adopted recommendations on harmonizing its work with that of the Commission on Sustainable Development (see p. 838) and making the Committee serve as a regional review forum for the Commission. Six ad hoc expert group meetings were organized to address land tenure policies and their implications for food security and sustainable development, indicators for measuring food security in Africa, assessment of power pooling arrangements, the green revolution in Africa, the regional 10-year review of the International Conference on Population and Development [YUN 1994, p. 956], and minerals cluster development. ECA also undertook research and prepared studies on a variety of related subjects. As a follow-up to the ad hoc expert group meeting that helped develop the road map to a green revolution in Africa, the secretariat organized an advocacy ministerial round table on the topic at the high-level segment of the Economic and Social Council (Geneva, July) (see p. 853). It also implemented a field project in Kampala, Uganda, in December, bringing together key African researchers to identify indicators and contribute to designing a strategy for agricultural modernization.

The secretariat supported implementation of the NEPAD mining chapter, providing, in collaboration with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, technical assistance for revamping African science and technology, including commissioning working papers for an experts' preparatory meeting (Nairobi, Kenya, October). It participated in the ministerial meeting in Johannesburg, which adopted an action plan and established a Ministerial Council for Managing Science and Technology in Africa.

Development management

The issue of governance in Africa was centred on the "capable State"—one in which the public service, legislature, judiciary and statutory bodies could provide an enabling environment for all sectors of society to play their respective roles in improving governance and consolidating the foundations for sustainable development. Activities under the subprogramme of strengthening development management focused on promoting good governance and enhancing broad-based stakeholder participation in the development process. In that regard, ECA continued its project on "Measuring and monitoring progress towards good governance in Africa", in order to prepare for the first edition of the African Governance Report, to be launched in 2004. Activities under that project included extensive fieldwork and country-level research, in collaboration with several national institutions, to develop 83 core indicators assessing three broad areas of governance: political representation, institutional effectiveness and economic management, and corporate governance. In preparation for the Fourth African Development Forum, to be held in 2004, ECA organized three subregional workshops in 2003—for Eastern and Southern Africa (Lusaka, Zambia, November); Central and West Africa (Accra, Ghana, December); and North Africa, including the Horn of Africa (Cairo, Egypt, December). A meeting of the Forum's Steering Committee was held in July in Addis Ababa to agree on the issues paper and the overall approach to the Forum's work.

The second meeting of the Committee on Human Development and Civil Society (Addis Ababa, 26-27 May), organized in collaboration with the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, deliberated on the theme of participation and partnership in Africa's development. Some of the Committee's recommendations served as the basis for the regional input to the high-level panel discussion on HIV/AIDS, organized as part of the General Assembly's fifty-eighth (2003) session (see p. 1243). The meeting developed a framework for promoting the creation of modalities for the dissemination of "best practices", institutional reforms and capacity-building initiatives needed to meet the MDGs by 2015. A list of indicators for monitoring the effectiveness of that framework was also developed.

Promoting trade and regional integration

ECA's Trade and Regional Integration Division continued to promote the integration and participation of African countries in the global economy and to strengthen the regional integration process, focusing on policy issues and infrastructure development. To realize that objective, the Division undertook activities in the areas of trade promotion and multilateral trade negotiations; facilitating the process of regional economic integration; and transportation infrastructure development. It initiated or participated in analytical studies in support of trade promotion and multilateral trade negotiations, including the Economic Report, 2004, on the theme "Unlocking Africa's trade potential in the global economy".

At the request of member States, ECA undertook several initiatives and activities to strengthen their capacities for effective participation in the new multilateral trade arrangements; for example, it collaborated with the AU Commission and other organizations to organize the second high-level brainstorming meeting of African trade negotiators (Grand Baie, Mauritius, June), which formed the basis for the African common position for the fifth World Trade Organization (WTO) ministerial meeting (Cancún, Mexico, September) (see p. 1535). As a follow-up to the WTO meeting, the secretariat, in collaboration with the AU Commission and Ghana, organized an expert group meeting (Accra, 28-29 November) to evaluate the implications of the Cancún meeting for African countries, assist countries to develop strategies for further negotiations, and identify research needs for those negotiations. Other trade-related activities included the convening of an expert group meeting (Addis Ababa, October) on the impact of trade liberalization on the fiscal revenue base of African countries. To support the NEPAD goal of mobilizing resources for poverty reduction and development, progress was made in establishing the African Trade Policy Centre, with the objective of strengthening Africa's trading capacity through research, training and capacity-building.

The third session of the Committee on Regional Cooperation and Integration (Addis Ababa, 30-31 October) brought together representatives of member States, the AU, the World Bank and other regional and international organizations dealing with air transport issues to consider matters pertaining to ECA's activities in support of the African economic integration process. The meeting reviewed reports on the status of regional integration in Africa, the implementation of the 1988 Yamoussoukro Declaration on air transport [YUN 1988, p. 273] and air transport liberalization in Africa. In the area of transport infrastructure development, a study was undertaken on multimodal transport development in Africa, which was reviewed by an ad hoc expert group meeting (Addis Ababa, October). The meeting recommended the establishment of a regional dispute settlement mechanism to arbitrate disputes between and among member States and that a study be conducted on the impact of liberalization in America and Europe.

Integration of women in development

In 2003, ECA continued to develop instruments for measuring progress in attaining the priorities identified in the Dakar [YUN 1994, p. 696] and Beijing [YUN 1995, p. 1170] Platforms for Action on the advancement of women. It developed an Africa-specific guidebook on mainstreaming gender into national planning instruments, including national accounts and national budgetary instruments. The guidebook contained a set of methodologies and tools as an easy reference for mainstreaming gender and provided guidelines in such areas as the collection of gender-disaggregated data through time-use studies, and evaluation of policy impacts on poverty reduction and welfare. The guidebook, reviewed by an ad hoc expert group meeting in December, was intended to inform decision makers about the importance of women's contribution to the national product and enhance their capacity for mainstreaming that contribution into national budgetary processes. The African Gender and Development Index, launched in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 980], moved into a second phase with trials in Benin, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Ethiopia, Ghana, South Africa, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania. The process of compiling country gender profiles for all 53 African countries was completed. The secretariat finalized a programme for the Africa Decade Review of the implementation of the Dakar and Beijing Platforms for Action, which was endorsed in September by the Bureau of the Committee on Women and Development.

ECA continued to support the economic empowerment of women through assistance for subregional enterprise development facilities. In May, it launched the facility for the East Africa subregion, based in Kampala.

Subregional Offices

The Subregional Offices (formerly called Subregional Development Centres), located in Central, East, North, Southern and West Africa, continued to promote policy dialogue and support development initiatives through collaborative arrangements with member States or through regional economic communities and intergovernmental bodies. They also provided technical assistance and promoted regional integration initiatives among the constituencies they served.

Construction of office facilities at ECA

In July [A/58/154], the Secretary-General, in response to resolution 56/270 [YUN 2002, p. 1459], reported on progress in the construction of additional office facilities at ECA headquarters in Addis Ababa (see p. 1500), including a revised project schedule of design consultancy and construction activities and a proposed site plan.

---

Asia and the Pacific

---

The Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) held its fifty-ninth session in Bangkok, Thailand, in two phases: the first on 24 and 25 April [E/2003/39]; and the second from 1 to 4 September [E/2003/39/Add.1], under the theme "Integrating economic and social concerns, especially HIV/AIDS, in meeting the needs of the region". The Commission also held a two-part ministerial round table: one part on HIV/AIDS and the other on the first regional report on the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51].

The Commission reviewed programme planning and evaluation, resource mobilization, including technical cooperation, transit transport issues in landlocked and transit developing countries, policy and management questions, emerging regional issues and developments, least developed, landlocked and island developing countries, and reports of regional intergovernmental bodies.

The Commission agreed that the theme of its sixtieth session would be "Meeting the challenges in an era of globalization by strengthening regional development cooperation".

Economic trends

According to the summary of the economic and social survey of Asia and the Pacific, 2004 [E/2004/18], the developing economies of the region continued to show strong growth in 2003, achieving a real GDP growth rate of 6 per cent. ESCAP developing countries' GDP grew faster than the global economy and other groups of developing countries as a result of forces within the region, such as intraregional trade and strong domestic demand. China's performance in just three years (2001-2003) was central in sustaining the momentum of growth in the region as a whole. Regional developed countries achieved a GDP growth rate of 2.7 per cent, due to a strong revival of growth in Japan, for the first time in 10 years, and continued dynamism in Australia and New Zealand.

In the North and Central Asia subregion, GDP growth accelerated by an impressive 2.3 percentage points to reach 7.7 per cent. The already high rates of growth in economies such as Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, Tajikistan and Turkmenistan increased further, while the economy of the Russian Federation exceeded expectations and reached 7.3 per cent. The latter's performance was driven by the strong energy and other natural resource sectors, aided by the continued diversification of the economy. The collective GDP rate in South and South-West Asia showed marked improvement, reaching 6.6 per cent. That growth was almost exclusively accounted for by India, although Bangladesh, Pakistan and Sri Lanka also experienced better growth rates to varying degrees. The growth in India (7.5 per cent) and Pakistan (5.1 per cent) was facilitated by more favourable weather, which aided a stronger output in agriculture. The GDP growth rate of the South-East Asian countries reached 4.5 per cent, a slight improvement over the previous year's performance, but nowhere near the momentum of growth in the 1980s and 1990s. East and North-East Asia was the only subregion not to experience a more rapid GDP growth rate in 2003 (6 per cent), as the rapid growth of the Chinese economy failed to offset the slowdown in the Republic of Korea and weaker growth in the Taiwan Province of China. The Pacific island countries emerged from two years of recession to achieve a GDP growth rate of 2.8 per cent, stimulated by higher agricultural commodity prices. However, inflationary pressures intensified, especially in the larger economies of Papua New Guinea and Fiji, due to higher energy prices.

The developed economies of the region saw a strong revival of growth, with Japan showing signs of durable growth (2.7 per cent compared to negative growth in 2002) for the first time in 10 years and Australia (2.8 per cent) and New Zealand (2.7 per cent) continuing to show dynamism.

Policy issues

Even with relatively buoyant economic growth, some problematic policy issues faced the region, such as the unwinding of global imbalances and the weakening of the dollar, from which individual economics needed to shield themselves, and the appreciation of regional exchange rates, which required flexibility of response buttressed by stronger regional cooperation. Another policy issue was the possible emergence of asset bubbles in stock markets and in real estate and whether pre-emptive action was the appropriate response. Other regional issues included the outbreak of avian influenza, requiring strong cooperation in containing the spread of the disease, and the need for Governments to place short-term issues within their longer-term commitments, such as those in the MDGs.

The need for fiscal consolidation was becoming paramount. Governments had to adopt strict debt-to-GDP ratios and annual budgetary deficits as the European Union (EU) had done in its Stability and Growth Pact, aimed at introducing an element of predictability in their public finances, and providing a more secure and informed basis for investment decisions. The consolidation of public debt should be approached within a long-term programme of fiscal reform. All national tax systems in the region needed to be more equitable and efficient. One problematic element in national tax systems was the discretionary powers given to tax officials, which tended to erode accountability, open up opportunities for corrupt practices and lower efficiency. Corporate and financial sector reform had made significant progress in the region as a whole, but needed to be accelerated.

The key to steady development in the medium term was maintaining and enhancing competitiveness, and investment in human resources development was a critically important element in that regard. Many regional countries were not doing enough in that area and risked falling behind in competitiveness.

Financial market infrastructure was poorly developed to assist small and medium-sized enterprises, a major source of employment, in growing to an efficient size. Many of them found it difficult to access financing in order to expand. Governments should reinforce training, technology transfer, information dissemination and the formation of networks to improve the performance of small and medium-sized enterprises.

Governance remained a policy challenge throughout the region, despite some progress in private and public sector governance. The lack of, or differential access to, administrative or legal redress reduced productivity. Governments should correct shortcomings, such as counter-productive State bureaucracy and delays in the legal process. Corporate malfeasance and corruption by public officials also needed to be tackled vigorously.

At its 2003 session, ESCAP considered reports on the current economic situation in the region and related policy issues [E/ESCAP/1266/Rev.1 & Corr.1] and the economic and social survey of Asia and the Pacific in 2003 (see p. 1007). The Commission noted that, in 2003, the region had to face further difficulties, such as the war in Iraq (see p. 315), the outbreak of severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) and new terrorist attacks. Although those developments had adversely affected the economic outlook for the region, economic performance remained satisfactory. However, Governments would have to improve public and private sector governance and transparency. In the medium to long term, poverty was the major policy challenge facing the region's developing countries. To attain the MDGs and improve the people's well-being, national economic and social policies had to be integrated. The Commission suggested that the secretariat evaluate the interaction between economic and social policies and examine the mechanisms by which social expenditures acted as productive factors in the development process.

The Commission urged that special attention be given to the integration of least developed countries into the multilateral trading system on fair terms, including duty-free and quota-free access for their products and a guaranteed increase in the market share of unskilled and semi-skilled providers of goods and services in world trade. It agreed that the problem of HIV/AIDS (see p. 1013) was no longer simply a health problem, but a serious threat to development, security and stability, and had to be dealt with in a holistic manner.

Activities in 2003

Poverty reduction

For its discussion of poverty reduction, the Commission had before it a document on related developments, issues and strategies [E/ESCAP/1268/Rev.1] and the report of the Committee on Statistics on its thirteenth (November 2002) session [E/ESCAP/1269].

The Commission supported the secretariat's plan to assist members in reducing poverty in a strategy comprising research on economic development prospects and policies that influenced poverty reduction, disseminating good practices in poverty reduction, and adopting and replicating those practices in trade and entrepreneurial development, environment, information, communication and space technology, and social development. It recommended that the secretariat explore financial frameworks to ensure equal access of the poor to credit facilities and promote domestic financial institutions working for the poor. The Commission agreed that poverty should be tackled through the enhancement of agricultural productivity, health care, educational standards, affordable access to information, communication and space technology, advancement of the status of women and weaker sections of society and the promotion of wider political participation. Noting the linkages between poverty and environmental degradation, the Commission requested the secretariat to propose poverty reduction programmes and activities to assist countries in promoting sustainable development practices and in implementing the Monterrey Consensus, adopted at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953], and the Johannesburg Declaration and Plan of Implementation, adopted at the World Summit on Sustainable Development [ibid., p. 821]. The Commission stressed the importance of human security within the framework of poverty reduction and development, based on the empowerment of individuals, and underlined the importance of indicators in illuminating policy matters with regard to poverty.

The Committee on Poverty Reduction, at its first session (Bangkok, 8-10 October) [E/ESCAP/1306], discussed financial and other key resource mobilization issues in implementing the MDGs, and issues related to poverty statistics and measurement, the transfer of good and innovative practices, and information and communication technology for poverty reduction. The Committee recommended that stakeholders coordinate their efforts to achieve the MDGs, with UN assistance. It noted the need to strengthen national statistical infrastructure and improve the quality of statistics, and encouraged the secretariat to provide more coherence in the identification and replication of poverty reduction interventions and to place emphasis on the capacity-building of the agencies involved in poverty reduction programmes.

The Commission also endorsed the report of the Steering Group of the Committee on Regional Economic Cooperation on its fourteenth meeting (2-4 December 2002) [E/ESCAP/1276], and urged that the recommendations contained therein be implemented. It requested the secretariat to continue its assistance in capacity-building in trade and investment, paying particular attention to sustained investment liberalization, strengthening the legal framework, institutional capacity-building, development of infrastructure for trade and investment, human resources development and private sector development, with special attention to the development of small and medium-sized enterprises and micro-enterprises.

Statistics

The Commission endorsed the report of the Committee on Statistics on its thirteenth (2002) session [E/ESCAP/1269] and supported its recommendations, including initiatives on statistical capacity-building. It recommended the sharing of good practices on poverty statistics and urged the secretariat to contribute to the preparation of a handbook on concepts, methods and practices in poverty statistics being developed by the United Nations Statistics Division.

Noting the inadequacy of economic statistics in many countries, resulting in a lack of basic data on such subjects as capital stocks, the Commission requested the secretariat to provide assistance in that regard. It also noted the Committee's efforts to improve the measurement of economic activity, including of the informal sector and the informal economy. The Commission considered it important that countries be informed of new data collection techniques and methods to capture and estimate the full production of the informal economy. It further noted the progress made on preparations for the 2004 round of the International Comparison Programme, but expressed concern about the adequacy of the funding. It requested the secretariat to provide assistance and capacity-building in statistics related to the measurement of the information society and knowledge-based economy, which had become a priority in the region.

The Commission also considered the report of the Governing Board of the Statistical Institute for Asia and the Pacific [E/ESCAP/1270], which gave an overview of training activities implemented in 2002/03 and highlighted issues for the Commission's attention, including the Institute's 2003/04 programme of work.

Managing globalization

The Commission considered a secretariat note [E/ESCAP/1297] on progress in the implementation of Commission resolutions relating to the theme of managing globalization. Those resolutions dealt with transport infrastructure development, space applications for sustainable development, environment and sustainable development, information and communication technologies for development, the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] and establishment of the Asian and Pacific Centre for Agricultural Engineering and Machinery [ibid., p. 990].

The Commission noted that, although the region had benefited from globalization, the impact had been uneven. It underscored the need for concerted efforts among countries at different development levels and for creating a conducive environment for regional cooperation that would encourage the forces of globalization to promote economic and social development in the region.

The first session of the Committee on Managing Globalization (Bangkok, 19-21 November) [E/ESCAP/1307] reviewed selected cross-cutting issues (trade and transport facilitation, sustainable consumption and production, regional cooperation for bridging the digital divide) and sectoral developments, and provided guidance on the future work of its subcommittees on international trade and investment, transport infrastructure and facilitation and tourism, environment and sustainable development, and information, communications and space technology. It recommended an integrated approach to addressing trade and transport facilitation issues and requested the secretariat to assist countries in applying the Trade Facilitation Framework and the time and cost-distance model. It recognized the secretariat's lead role in the shift towards sustainable consumption and production. The Committee commended the secretariat's work in the area of trade and investment, with a focus on the Doha Development Agenda [YUN 2001, p. 1432]. It requested the secretariat to give priority to a study on current regional trade arrangements and bilateral trade initiatives, and to issues relating to the importance of foreign direct investment in the development process.

The Committee endorsed the ESCAP strategy on infrastructure development and transport facilitation and supported a revised plan for the Asian land transport infrastructure project (see p. 1011). It recommended that a ministerial conference on transport be organized in 2006 and an intergovernmental meeting on sustainable tourism development in 2005. It urged member countries to sign or accede to the Intergovernmental Agreement on the Asian Highway Network, adopted by the Intergovernmental Meeting to Develop an Intergovernmental Agreement on the Asian Highway Network (Bangkok, 17-18 November) [E/ESCAP/TTD/AHN/Rep].

The Committee endorsed the use of the regional road map towards an information society in Asia and the Pacific for the formulation of an action plan. It urged the convening of an inter-governmental meeting to analyse the outcome of the World Summit on Sustainable Development and requested the secretariat to continue its efforts in the areas of the environment, energy and water and water-related disaster mitigation and preparedness.

Least developed, landlocked and island developing countries

Special Body on Least Developed and Landlocked Developing Countries

The Commission considered the report of the Special Body on Least Developed and Landlocked Developing Countries on its sixth session (Bangkok, 1-2 September) [E/ESCAP/1303 & Corr.1], which reviewed the outcome of the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation (Almaty, Kazakhstan, 28-29 August) [E/ESCAP/1309]. The Conference adopted the Almaty Programme of Action: Addressing the Special Needs of Landlocked Developing Countries within a New Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation for Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries (see p. 875), which set out measures for establishing efficient transit transport systems in five areas—transit policy issues, infrastructure development and maintenance, international trade and trade facilitation, international support measures and implementation and review. The Commission urged all stakeholders to implement the Programme of Action.

Landlocked States in Central Asia

In August [A/58/209], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the Secretary-General of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) on the transit environment in landlocked States in Central Asia and their transit developing neighbours, in response to General Assembly resolution 55/181 [YUN 2000, p. 933]. The report discussed the transit environment in Central Asia and current measures to improve that environment and reduce non-physical barriers to transit transport through national laws and increased regional and international cooperation. The report also discussed complementary new actions to improve the transit environment, such as harmonization and simplification of transit procedures and documentation, increased use of information technology to speed up border-crossing procedures, efforts to reduce trade and transit transport barriers, measures to strengthen regional cooperation and policies to promote the private sector.

By decision 58/547 of 23 December, the Assembly took note of the UNCTAD report.

Least developed countries

The Commission, on 4 September [E/2003/39/Add.1 (res. 59/4)], adopted a resolution on the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries (LDCs) for the Decade 2001-2010 [YUN 2001, p. 770], in which it requested the Executive Secretary, in line with the Programme of Action, to review, analyse and disseminate annually information on economic and social developments in LDCs, assist them in formulating sectoral development strategies, paying due regard to the diverse development circumstances and constraints facing them, and conduct, in 2005, a regional midterm review of the implementation of the Programme of Action.

The Commission agreed that the eighth session of the Special Body on Pacific Island Developing Countries, scheduled for Shanghai, China, in 2004, would consider as its theme "Experiences and challenges in urban management issues in Pacific island countries".

Economic and technical cooperation

In 2003, ESCAP received $13.6 million for technical cooperation activities [E/ESCAP/1321], a slight decrease from the $14 million for 2002. Of that amount, $5.3 million was received from the UN system and $7.6 million from individual States, including developing countries, and $0.7 million from intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations (NGOs). Contributions from four developed countries (Australia, Finland, Japan, United States) provided just under 50 per cent of the total bilateral assistance, with Japan contributing the most. Among the developing country members and associate members, China, India and the Republic of Korea were the largest contributors. In addition to cash contributions, donor countries provided some 126 work-months of experts on a non-reimbursable loan basis. Twenty-four new projects were launched during the year.

As part of its revitalization process, ESCAP launched a new technical cooperation strategy, focusing on three priority thematic areas—poverty reduction, managing globalization and emerging social issues—in order to assist countries to attain internationally agreed development goals.

Transport, communications, tourism and infrastructure development

The Commission had before it the report of the Committee on Transport, Communications, Tourism and Infrastructure Development on its fourth session (Bangkok, 13-15 November 2002) [E/ESCAP/1274] and a report on progress in the implementation of resolutions relating to the theme of managing globalization [E/ESCAP/1297], including implementation of the New Delhi Action Plan on Infrastructure Development in Asia and the Pacific [YUN 1995, p. 1012]. The Commission endorsed the Committee's recommendations and reiterated its commitment to and support for the Seoul Declaration on Infrastructure Development in Asia and the Pacific, including phase II of the Regional Action Programme (2002-2006) of the New Delhi Action Plan [YUN 2001, p. 910]. Recognizing the importance of private sector investment in the development of transport infrastructure, the Commission requested the secretariat to study approaches to promote such investment and prepare models of funding in the framework of private sector partnerships. It also endorsed the plan of action for phase VI (2004-2005) of the Asian land transport infrastructure development project, and requested the secretariat to update the route alignment of the Trans-Asian Railway prior to the establishment of a Trans-Asian Railway Working Group. Noting the two ESCAP projects relating to the development of an integrated shipping and port system in the North-East Asian subregion and an integrated international transport and logistics system for North-East Asia, the Commission requested the secretariat to undertake a study on best practices in the subregion and disseminate the results.

In the area of tourism, the Commission reaffirmed its commitment to implementing the Plan of Action for Sustainable Tourism Development in the Asian and Pacific Region [YUN 1999, p. 929]. It noted the capacity-building seminars related to sustainable tourism development held in 2003 for specific countries and those planned for 2004 and the seminar on poverty alleviation (Kathmandu, Nepal, August), which discussed measures to alleviate poverty through tourism. It asked the secretariat to further strengthen activities to enhance the contribution of tourism to poverty alleviation.

Science and technology

The Commission considered the February report [E/ESCAP/1278] of the Asian and Pacific Centre for Transfer of Technology (APCTT) on its activities, including the report of the APCTT Governing Board (seventeenth session, Hanoi, Viet Nam, 31 October and 1 November 2002). The Commission, noting the APCTT review, advised that, to improve its effectiveness, the Centre should conduct a more thorough needs assessment of its members, with emphasis on technology commercialization, high-technology transfer, technology parks and business incubator development, tech-entrepreneurship development, the building of information technology-powered regional and cross-regional technology transfer networks, transfer of environmentally sound technologies, e-commerce and private sector involvement in the Centre's activities. APCTT should promote the sharing of experiences and best practices with regard to the transfer and adoption of relevant technologies in rural areas, set up working groups on its key areas and establish comprehensive programme planning to ensure allocation of reasonable financial resources. The Commission requested APCTT to finalize a strategy for establishing an endowment fund.

Environment and sustainable development

The Commission, having considered the report of the Committee on Environment and Natural Resources Development on its fourth session (Bangkok, 19-21 November 2002) [E/ESCAP/1275] and a report on regional follow-up [E/ESCAP/1302] to the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 822], endorsed the latter, including its conclusions and recommendations. The Commission recommended that ESCAP play a substantive role in implementing the Johannesburg Plan. Noting that several regional initiatives in the Phnom Penh Regional Platform on Sustainable Development for Asia and the Pacific [YUN 2001, p. 911] were echoed in the outcome of the World Summit, the Commission decided to implement programmes in conformity with the decisions of the Johannesburg Plan and of the Commission on Sustainable Development at its eleventh session (see p. 838). It urged the secretariat to mobilize additional resources for implementing the outcome of the World Summit, supported the regional meeting (October) to review implementation of the Plan in relation to the first cluster areas of water, sanitation and human settlements, and asked it to report to the Commission on Sustainable Development in 2004.

The Commission supported the secretariat's capacity-building programmes in strategic planning and management for integrated water resources management to meet the MDG targets in a holistic approach. The secretariat should promote, among other things, public awareness of water conservation, water-use efficiency and groundwater contamination and increase cooperation to commemorate the International Year of Freshwater 2003 (see p. 1033). The secretariat was also called on to assist ESCAP members in assessing water resources and monitoring the freshwater situation.

The Commission noted the Asia-Pacific Expert Meeting on Promoting Sustainable Production and Consumption Patterns (Yogyakarta, Indonesia, 21-23 May), which identified priorities for regional and subregional frameworks and initiatives, and the international expert group meeting, organized by the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (Marrakech, Morocco, June), which adopted a 10-year framework of programmes for sustainable production and consumption patterns.

Agriculture and development

The Commission had before it a July report [E/ESCAP/1277/Rev.1] on the Asian and Pacific Centre for Agricultural Engineering and Machinery (APCAEM), which detailed the activities related to the establishment of the Centre and the recommendations of its Governing Board (Beijing, 26-27 November 2002). The Commission requested the Centre to develop a medium- to long-term road map by prioritizing its work programme, and recommended that activities in agro-electronics, rural energy and other poverty alleviation activities be accorded priority, with a view to making APCAEM a centre of excellence. It recommended that the Centre disseminate information on technologies for promoting the involvement of rural women in agro-processing activities, strengthen activities in farm machinery and agro-engineering that were beneficial to the poor and engage in new technologies, especially in biotechnology. The Centre was urged to mobilize additional resources, with a view to becoming self-supporting.

A later report [E/ESCAP/1320] indicated that the Host Country Headquarters Agreement and its Supplementary Agreement on Administrative and Financial Arrangements were signed between China and ESCAP in November, making the Centre operational. The second session of the APCAEM Governing Board (Beijing, 26-27 November) adopted a number of conclusions and recommendations, and the 2004-2005 APCAEM work programme and financial resources plan and its 2004-2008 medium- and long-term strategy.

The Commission also considered the report of the Regional Coordination Centre for Research and Development of Coarse Grains, Pulses, Roots and Tuber Crops in the Humid Tropics of Asia and the Pacific [E/ESCAP/1272], including the report of its Governing Board on its twenty-first session (Bogor, Indonesia, 14-15 January). The Executive Secretary summarized the report of the Governing Board on its extraordinary session (20-21 August), at which the findings and recommendations of an external evaluation of the Centre were reviewed. The Board agreed that the work of the Centre should be aligned with the ESCAP programme of work, medium-term plan and thematic priorities, particularly poverty reduction issues. The Commission accepted the findings and recommendations of the Board at its extraordinary session, emphasized the importance of the Centre's activities for the development of sustainable agriculture, and suggested that another review be conducted in 2006.

Social development

The Commission endorsed the report of the Fifth Asian and Pacific Population Conference (Bangkok, 11-17 December 2002) [E/ESCAP/1271 & Corr.1], including the Plan of Action on Population and Poverty. It stressed that demographic and population factors should be fully integrated into national, sectoral and local planning. The Commission recommended that efforts to provide access to basic needs and services be strengthened and integrated into the planning process at all levels, and that a pro-poor macro-economic model be accompanied by a people-centred development approach, based on good governance at the local and international levels.

The Commission, in a September resolution [E/2003/39/Add.1 (res. 59/1)] on regional action to follow up the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS contained in General Assembly resolution S-26/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1126], called on members and associate members to implement the Declaration, respond to the HIV/AIDS pandemic with high-level political commitment, maintain high levels of investment to prevent the epidemic's spread, promote policies that prevented the spread of HIV/AIDS, including interventions among drug users, address the gender-specific dimensions of the epidemic, support action to reduce infection among young people aged 15 to 24, and strengthen support for children living with HIV/AIDS. The Executive Secretary was requested to strengthen UN regional coordination to promote accelerated action in addressing issues of stigma and discrimination relevant to HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment, cooperate with subregional groupings to strengthen the subregional capability to deal with HIV/AIDS, mainstream HIV/AIDS prevention, treatment, care and support in the ESCAP programme of work, and initiate measures to build national capacity to meet the HIV/AIDS challenge.

The Commission stressed the importance of gender mainstreaming in education and of eliminating barriers to women's and girls' access to education, in order to promote gender equality. It called for increasing women's access to paid employment and for strengthening their social protection and security coverage.

In a September resolution on strengthening social safety in Asia and the Pacific [res. 59/2], the Commission called on members and associate members to increase resources for education, vocational and management training, occupational safety and health by strengthening technical cooperation with the private sector; improve methods for collecting and analysing basic employment data; assess mechanisms to measure unremunerated work; devise arrangements to meet the needs of the poor and vulnerable groups; and strengthen partnerships with the public and private sectors and other stakeholders concerned with social welfare and social safety. The Executive Secretary was requested to design an action-oriented programme of work and assist members and associate members in developing social safety policies, including employment data collection and analysis. He was urged to promote experience-sharing and best-practice learning on social integration within the ESCAP region, paying attention to disadvantaged, marginalized and unskilled groups in formulating the 2004 programme of work.

The Committee on Emerging Social Issues, at its first session (Bangkok, 4-6 September) [E/ESCAP/1310], reviewed issues concerning socially vulnerable groups, health and development, programme planning and the evaluation of two flagship projects in the area of emerging social issues. It also reviewed the regional situation concerning HIV/AIDS and SARS and the proposed 2006-2009 medium-term plan. It requested the secretariat to support capacity-building on emerging social issues through technical assistance, training, expert group meetings and the sharing of good practices and experiences.

The Commission endorsed the Shanghai Regional Implementation Strategy [E/ESCAP/1280] for the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1194] and the 1998 Macao Plan of Action on Ageing for Asia and the Pacific [YUN 1998, p. 942]. The Strategy recommended major areas for action—older persons and development; advancing health and well-being into old age; ensuring enabling and supportive environments; and implementation and follow-up.

The Commission noted the February report [E/ESCAP/1281] of the High-level Intergovernmental Meeting to Conclude the Asian and Pacific Decade of Disabled Persons, 1993-2002 [YUN

2002, p. 991], and supported the rights-based approach to the social integration of persons with disabilities, as specified in the Biwako Millennium Framework for Action towards an Inclusive, Barrier-free and Rights-based Society for Persons with Disabilities in Asia and the Pacific, adopted at the meeting. The Framework, which incorporated the MDCs and their targets, would act as a guide for the next Decade (2003-2012).

The Commission, in a September resolution [res. 59/3], took note of the Biwako Millennium Framework for Action and requested members and associate members to support its implementation nationally and internationally. It invited donors and the private sector to contribute to the technical assistance trust fund for the next Decade to ensure implementation of the Framework, and invited relevant UN organizations, the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank, in cooperation with ESCAP, to strengthen support for developing national capabilities to implement the Framework. It requested the Executive Secretary to collaborate with UN agencies and civil society to develop regional activities for implementing the Framework; to support Governments in fulfilling the Framework's targets; and to provide them with technical support in formulating a regional approach for an international convention on the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities (see p. 1107) by organizing regional meetings and training workshops.

Natural disasters

The Commission, having considered the report of the Mekong River Commission on its 2002 activities [E/ESCAP/1292], noted achievements in consolidating core, support and sector programmes, by adopting a comprehensive programme approach to support basin-wide strategies of member countries. Further efforts were made in the flood management and mitigation programme and other aspects of water management in the Mekong River basin, such as fisheries, watershed management, hydrology, navigation and capacity-building programmes.

The Commission also considered the report of the Typhoon Committee [E/ESCAP/1293], noting achievements in 2002 in the meteorological component, including observations, forecasts and warnings of typhoons, in the hydrological component, including flood forecasts and warning, and on natural disaster reduction. It noted the improvement in meteorological satellite facilities and observations and the increase in subregional activities in meteorology, hydrology, training and research and disaster prevention and preparedness. The Committee decided to adopt the strategic approach in implementing the 2002 Regional Cooperation Programme Implementation Plan [YUN 2002, p. 992] to ensure effective achievement of the Committee's priority objectives.

Also before the Commission was the report of the Panel on Tropical Cyclones [E/ESCAP/1294]. The Commission noted the improvement in monitoring facilities and data exchange among member countries to enhance the effectiveness of flood forecasting in international river basins, and the comprehensive review aimed at strengthening cooperation among the members on cyclone-related disaster reduction, carried out with ESCAP secretariat assistance, in cooperation with the World Meteorological Organization and the Panel's Technical Support Unit. The Commission urged donor countries and institutions to support the Panel's work.

Programme and organizational questions

The Commission endorsed the realignment of ESCAP's 2002-2003 programme of work [E/ESCAP/1285 & Corr.1 & Add.1] based on the new programme structure, as reflected in the revised 2002-2005 medium-term plan, and the implementation status of the 2002-2003 programme of work. Noting that a detailed report on the implementation of the programme of work would be submitted in 2004, it requested the secretariat to report on the new methodologies for monitoring and evaluating the programme of work that were being developed by UN Headquarters. The Commission endorsed the proposed changes for 2003 [E/ESCAP/1296 & Corr.1,2] as a result of the realignment of the 2002-2003 work programme, and the draft 2004-2005 programme of work [E/ESCAP/1284 & Corr.1,2].

The Commission also had before it the tentative calendar of meetings and training programmes for the period April 2003 to March 2004 [E/ESCAP/1287].

ESCAP reform

The Commission considered a report [E/ESCAP/1283] by the Executive Secretary on the implementation of Commission resolution 58/1 [YUN 2002, p. 993] on the restructuring of its conference structure. Among his recommendations for improving Commission sessions, the Executive Secretary called for focusing a session's theme more on current and emerging economic and social issues, making the agenda more issue-related, and periodically holding sessions outside Bangkok on the initiative of individual host countries. The secretariat proposed changes to the organization of the ministerial segment, including occasional presentations by eminent persons on particular issues, informal meetings among ministers, and side events involving NGOs, the business sector, civil society organizations and the media. Another proposal was for the Commission to adopt declarations on issues of particular interest to the region.

The Commission noted the progress made with the restructuring process and requested the secretariat, in consultation with members and associate members, to further prioritize that focus, discontinue obsolete activities and promote the sharing of best practices among regional countries. While noting the secretariat's efforts to improve the Commission's format, the Commission raised a number of concerns for examination by the Advisory Committee of Permanent Representatives and Other Representatives Designated by Members of the Commission (ACPR), especially the financial implications of holding sessions outside Bangkok, the risk of diluting the focus on important issues owing to the large number of proposed activities, the delegations' capacity to attend the sessions organized around the thematic clusters, and time constraints of ministers with regard to the organization of events. The Commission emphasized the importance of a midterm review of the new ESCAP conference structure to monitor its effectiveness and to make any necessary adjustments.

The Commission endorsed the report [E/ESCAP/1286] on the evaluation of ESCAP publications conducted in 2002, including the plan of action to improve their planning, production, processing and dissemination. It noted the 47 per cent reduction in the number of publications, and requested the secretariat to reduce that number further. The Commission supported the secretariat's proposals for enhancing the quality and impact of ESCAP publications. It felt that cooperation between the secretariat and national focal points would contribute to improving the quality of the publications. The secretariat was requested to explore additional means of disseminating its publications to maximize their impact and readership.

The Commission, noting the report on the activities of ACPR and its open-ended informal working group [E/ESCAP/1288 & Add.1,2], requested that ACPR's guiding and monitoring role be strengthened. ACPR should discuss significant programme activities during the implementation stage to ensure their implementation, and focus on issues related to Commission resolutions and decisions, including resolution 58/1 [YUN 2002, p. 993].

Evaluations

The Commission considered reports on the outcome of the evaluation of its regional institutions [E/ESCAP/1299] and of the ESCAP Pacific Operations Centre (EPOC) [E/ESCAP/1300]. The EPOC evaluation reviewed the relevance, performance and sustainability of its activities, while that of the other three institutions (the Statistical Institute for Asia and the Pacific, the Regional Coordination Centre for Research and Development of Coarse Grains, Pulses, Roots and Tuber Crops in the Humid Tropics of Asia and the Pacific and the Asian and Pacific Centre for Transfer of Technology) reviewed their operational, institutional and programming needs to ascertain how they could best serve members and associate members. The Commission expressed satisfaction with the findings of the evaluation reports, the implementation of which should increase efficiency and effectiveness. It noted that the forthcoming review of the Pacific Islands Forum secretariat would take into account the institutional implications of the relocation of EPOC from Port Vila, Vanuatu, to Suva, Fiji, expected to be completed in 2004.

Admission of Timor-Leste

The Commission welcomed the application of Timor-Leste for admission to membership in ESCAP [E/ESCAP/1265] and recommended to the Economic and Social Council a draft resolution for adoption (see below).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 18 July [meeting 41], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of ESCAP [E/2003/15/Add.1], adopted resolution 2003/7 without vote [agenda item 10].

Admission of the Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste as a full member of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific: amendment of the terms of reference of the Commission

The Economic and Social Council,

Noting that the Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste became a Member of the United Nations on 27 September 2002,

Noting also that, in accordance with paragraph 3 of the terms of reference of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, the Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste shall thereupon be admitted as a member of the Commission,

Decides to amend paragraphs 2 and 3 of the terms of reference of the Commission accordingly.

Venue of ESCAP sixtieth session

By decision 2003/228 of 18 July, the Economic and Social Council approved the ESCAP decision to hold its sixtieth session in Shanghai in April 2004 and expressed its gratitude to the Government of China for its offer to host the meeting.

Europe

The Economic Commission for Europe (ECE), at its fifty-eighth session (Geneva, 4-6 March) [E/2003/37], considered economic developments in the region and sustainable development, particularly national sustainable development strategies (main problems, lessons and implications for ECE work), and regional perspectives on sustainable development, notably ECE follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]. The Commission agreed in general with ECE's role in follow-up to the World Summit on the understanding that the format and modalities would be decided following the debate by the Commission on Sustainable Development (see p. 838) and at an ad hoc informal meeting of the Commission (see below).

The Commission also considered a paper on ECE reform [E/ECE/1399], which was a follow-up to the paper on strengthening the organization presented in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1003]. The paper provided information on the state of the UN reform process and that of ECE, focusing on adjustments to the intergovernmental structure, strengthening of the secretariat and technical cooperation. The Commission affirmed that the Group of Experts on the Programme of Work would continue deliberations on ECE reform, including the points made by delegations at the Commission's session, and make recommendations. The Commission expressed general agreement with the concept of the paper on major policy directions of ECE's work [E/ECE/1400], and supported the ECE approach of mainstreaming the three dimensions of sustainable development into all ECE areas of work as a way to further integrate sustainable development concerns into its activities, in response to the World Summit's Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 822].

Having considered a report by the Executive Secretary on ECE achievements and constraints during 2002 and perspectives for 2003 [E/ECE/1401], the Commission expressed satisfaction with the work of the Principal Subsidiary Bodies (PSBs) but underlined that some future streamlining and restructuring of those bodies and related groups should be considered to ensure their relevance and effectiveness. Decision-making by the Commission would be assisted by evaluations of the effectiveness and impact of ECE's work, and gender issues needed to be further incorporated into the work of all subprogrammes. The Commission underlined the role of the PSB Bureaux in overall programme coordination with other organizations involved in the same areas to avoid duplication and strengthen complementarity.

The Commission also considered reports on preparations for and follow-up to world and regional conferences, including preparations for the World Summit on the Information Society in December 2003 (see p. 857) [E/ECE/1402], on technical cooperation activities [E/ECE/1403] and on cooperation and coordination with other organizations [E/ECE/1404 & Add.1], and the report of the Group of Experts on the Programme of Work [E/ECE/1405].

The Commission held two ad hoc informal meetings, on 26 June [E/ECE/1407] and 2 September [E/ECE/1408]. In June, the Commission endorsed the recommendations on reform of the Group of Experts in regard to monitoring and evaluation of technical cooperation, and adopted guidelines for the operations of specialist teams of ECE working parties, on the understanding that PSBs would set the procedure for establishing the teams. In September, the Commission decided to hold the first regional implementation meeting on the World Summit on Sustainable Development in January 2004 in order to contribute to the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development.

Economic trends

According to ECE's summary of the economic survey of Europe, 2003 [E/2004/16], a global economic recovery took hold in the second half of 2003, led by the United States, and was supported by expansionary economic policies. By contrast, the euro area remained the principal weak spot in the global economy due to sluggish activity in the three largest economies (France, Germany and Italy), while economic activity in Eastern Europe as a whole strengthened, particularly in the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS). In the United States, GDP growth accelerated to 3.1 per cent, while in the euro area GDP rose by only 0.5 per cent. In the EU, real GDP grew by 0.8 per cent, because of the resilience of the United Kingdom economy.

In Eastern Europe, GDP growth accelerated to 3.8 per cent, led by strong domestic demand, improved financial intermediation and a booming credit market: a consequence of successful banking reforms. However, economic performance among regional States varied considerably, with GDP growth in Poland, the largest Eastern European economy, rising by 3.7 per cent, while Hungary and Slovenia experienced a slowdown. Latvia and Lithuania were the fastest-growing East European economies, with GDP increasing by 7 and 8.9 per cent, respectively. Growth also remained relatively strong (above 4 per cent) in Albania, Bulgaria, Croatia, Estonia, Romania and Slovakia. In parts of South-East Europe, economic activity remained weak, particularly in Serbia and Montenegro, where it was almost stagnant, reflecting the difficulty in opening up the economy and starting major reforms, and in Bosnia and Herzegovina, where it slowed down for the fourth consecutive year.

In the CIS region, economic activity surged with aggregate GDP growing by 7.6 per cent, making it one of the fastest-growing regions in the world. The strong performance of the three largest CIS economies—the Russian Federation, Ukraine and Kazakhstan, where GDP grew by 7.3 per cent, 8.5 per cent and 9.1 per cent, respectively—contributed to the robust performance. The upturn in the Russian Federation was underpinned by an expansionary monetary policy and signs of a deeper restructuring of the Russian enterprise sector, partly in response to growing competitive pressure. Kazakhstan's economic growth was mostly due to the rapid expansion of fuel-related exports, while in Ukraine it resulted from a sharp export-driven upturn in the manufacturing sector. Although the other CIS economies were unusually buoyant, a sign of the general strength of growth was the fact that in Uzbekistan, the slowest-growing economy in the CIS region, GDP still increased by some 5 per cent.

Activities in 2003

Trade, industry and enterprise development

The Committee for Trade, Industry and Enterprise Development, at its seventh session (Geneva, 13 and 16 May) [ECE/TRADE/306], approved: the expansion of its Multiplier Point Network to include the entire region and to better serve large transition economies, such as Ukraine and the Russian Federation; the change of the name of the Working Party on Standardization of Perishable Produce and Quality Development to the Working Party on Agricultural Quality Standards; a new ad hoc team of experts on market surveillance to assist in developing controls for the conformance of products in the marketplace to standards and regulations; a proposal for revising the work programme format and related procedures; its 2003-2005 work programme; and new procedures for approval of its reports and the organization of its sessions. It endorsed a pilot project for implementing the International Model for Regulatory Harmonization in earth-moving equipment and the decision to issue a joint publication with the Inland Transport Committee on "Trade and Transport Facilitation Instruments and Recommendations". The Committee agreed to hold a forum, in conjunction with its 2004 session, on the challenges the region would face in trade, industry and enterprise following the enlargement of the EU, and especially those challenges facing the "new neighbours".

The Regional Forum on Social Aspects and Financing of Industrial Restructuring (Moscow, Russian Federation, 26-27 November) [TRADE/WP.8/AC.1/SEM.22/2003/3], co-sponsored by ECE and the International Labour Organization, discussed ways to resolve the social issues arising during the restructuring of uncompetitive industries, measures required by the European Commission from enterprises to mitigate the adverse consequences of restructuring on employment and workers' incomes, support to start-up companies and industries, and the scope of industrial and territorial clustering as a means of economic revitalization of underdeveloped and depressed regions.

The Working Party on Agricultural Quality Standards continued to update and create internationally harmonized quality standards, and to work on internationally harmonized trade descriptions for fruit and vegetables, to be used in electronic commerce, and internal quality and maturity requirements.

Timber

The Timber Committee, at its sixty-first session (Geneva, 7-10 October) [ECE/TIM/2003/2], held a policy forum on wood and energy, in cooperation with the Committee on Sustainable Energy. The forum reviewed energy policies, especially those concerning renewable energies and interactions between energy policies and those for forests and timber, and sector market developments. The Committee also reviewed markets for forest products, including the consequences of illegal logging, and approved a statement. It discussed the policy conclusions and recommendations of the European Forest Sector Outlook Study and the ECE/Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) contribution to global and regional forest dialogues. The Committee adopted its work programme and launched a process of strategic review of the integrated ECE/FAO 2003/04 programme.

The ECE secretariat presented information on the state of Europe's forests to the Fourth Ministerial Conference on the Protection of Forests in Europe (Vienna, 28-30 April). The data were based on a set of indicators of sustainable forest management.

Transport

The Inland Transport Committee, at its sixty-fifth session (Geneva, 18-20 February) [ECE/TRANS/152 & Corr.1], reviewed, among other things, its draft strategic objectives, the transport situation in ECE member countries and emerging development trends, transport and security, assistance to countries with economies in transition, and the status of application of ECE transport agreements and conventions. The Committee also considered transport trends and economics, road transport, road traffic safety, safety in tunnels, harmonization of vehicle regulations, rail transport, inland water transport, combined transport, border crossing facilitation, transport of dangerous goods and perishable foodstuffs, and transport statistics.

The Committee adopted a resolution on the Fourth Road Safety Week in the ECE region and requested the secretariat to publicize the campaign and to seek partnerships to give it maximum impact. It also adopted a resolution on the implementation of the European Agreement on Main Inland Waterways of International Importance, and endorsed resolutions of the Working Party on Inland Water Transport on the inventory of bottlenecks and missing links in the European waterway network, and on technical requirements for preventing pollution from vessels.

The Committee also endorsed proposals for requiring digital tachographs (an on-board device in commercial vehicles designed to measure the driver's working hours and rest periods) on new vehicles assigned to international road transport under the European Agreement concerning the Work of Crews of Vehicles Engaged in International Road Transport (AETR). They would become mandatory for AETR contracting parties four years after the entry into force of the proposed amendments.

Energy

The Committee on Sustainable Energy, at its thirteenth session (Geneva, 19-21 November) [ECE/ENERGY/53], having considered renewable energy sources and sustainable energy development in the ECE region, expressed appreciation to the secretariat for a discussion paper and draft terms of reference on renewable energy sources, decided that technical assistance should be developed for ECE economies in transition, and requested the Steering Committee of the Energy Efficiency 21 Project to consider a draft work programme for technical assistance on renewable sources of energy to those countries. The Committee concluded that energy security was a key element of sustainable energy policy, deserving the attention of the Energy Security Forum launched by the Committee during its 2003 session. It noted the statement signed by all Forum participants, which was annexed to the Committee's report, and requested the secretariat to convene the first meeting of the Forum's Executive Board.

Noting that the Guidelines on Reforming Energy Prices and Subsidies had been endorsed by the Fifth Ministerial Conference on the Environment for Europe (see below), the Committee recommended that the ECE transition economies implement them in accordance with the declaration adopted by the Conference, and requested the task force on the Guidelines to assess their implementation in 2005 and 2006. The Committee noted the successful implementation of the Energy Efficiency 21 Project, in accordance with the 2000-2003 project plan, and requested the Bureau and the secretariat to complete a project plan for a second phase (2003-2006), including a financing mechanism, and to explore extra-budgetary support with interested Governments and institutions.

The Committee considered the documentation of the Working Party on Gas, and of the Ad Hoc Group of Experts on the Supply and Use of Gas, and the Gas Centre, and renewed the mandate of the Group of Experts for two years. It also renewed the mandate of the Ad Hoc Group of Experts on Coal in Sustainable Development and that of the Ad Hoc Group of Experts on Electric Power and approved its terms of reference. The Committee endorsed the Regional Strategy for the Efficient Use of Energy and Water Resources in Central Asia.

Environment

The Fifth Ministerial Conference "Environment for Europe" (Kiev, Ukraine, 21-23 May) adopted three new protocols to ECE conventions: the Protocol on Strategic Environmental Assessment to the 1991 Convention on Environmental Impact Assessment in a Transboundary Context (Espoo Convention); the Protocol on Pollutant Release and Transfer Registers to the 1998 Convention on Access to Information, Public Participation in Decision-making and Access to Justice in Environmental Matters (Aarhus Convention) [YUN 1998, p. 952]; and the Protocol on Civil Liability and Compensation for Damage Caused by the Transboundary Effects of Industrial Accidents on Transboundary Waters to the 1992 Convention on the Protection and Use of Transboundary Watercourses and International Lakes and to the 1992 Convention on the Transboundary Effects of Industrial Accidents [YUN 1992, p. 501]. The Conference also adopted Guidelines for Strengthening Compliance with and Implementation of Multilateral Environmental Agreements in the ECE region and a regional Convention on the Carpathians (Mountains), and launched the Environment Strategy for Countries of Eastern Europe, the Caucasus and Central Asia and preparations for the environment, water and security partnership in Central Asia. Other decisions related to energy and water for sustainable development, biodiversity and education.

The Committee on Environmental Policy held a special session (Geneva, 18-19 February) [ECE/CEP/91] and its tenth session (20-22 October) [ECE/CEP/116 & Add.1]. The special session discussed future ECE strategic directions in environmental policy around the themes of pan-European harmonization and governance, programmes and strategies, and cross-sectoral cooperation and integration. The Committee reviewed the environmental performance of Georgia and discussed policy issues emerging from the review. At a joint session with the Working Group of Senior Officials, the Committee approved the Group's recommendations for a second round of environmental performance reviews.

At its tenth session, the Committee hosted a round-table discussion on the theme "The environment in a changing region", which assessed the implications of EU enlargement for the environment and highlighted future challenges. It adopted the strategic goals contained in the document on future ECE strategic directions for the environment, and reviewed the environmental performance of Azerbaijan and adopted related recommendations. It also considered the outcome of the Kiev Ministerial Conference (see p. 1018) and how it should best reflect the relevant commitments of the Kiev Ministerial Declaration in its work programme. It adopted a work programme for environmental monitoring and updated the terms of reference of the Working Group on Environmental Monitoring and Assessment, and agreed to work on education for sustainable development, implementation of the Environment Strategy for Eastern Europe, the Caucasus and Central Asia, and the development of a communication strategy.

The first meeting of the Steering Committee for Transport, Health and Environment Pan-European Programme (PEP), organized jointly with the Regional Office of the World Health Organization, was held in April. The PEP Steering Committee endorsed its 2003-2005 programme of work.

Human settlements

The Committee on Human Settlements, at its sixty-fourth session (Geneva, 15-17 September)

[ECE/HBP/129], held in-depth discussions on reforms and social equity in human settlements and decided to integrate the results of those discussions into its contribution to the Regional Implementation Forum on Sustainable Development, to be held in January 2004, as a follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]. It acknowledged that policy reforms on social stability and equity should become a critical element of the national, regional and local strategies for sustainable human settlements. It stressed the importance of linking the priorities of the Habitat Agenda [YUN 1996, p. 994], the World Summit on Sustainable Development Plan of Implementation and the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] with its programme of work. The Committee adopted its 2003-2005 programme of work, and confirmed the priority of the country profile programme for the housing sector and land administration activities. It agreed to start preparation of a regional profile of the housing sector in South-East European countries, based on the decisions of the High-level Conference on Housing Reforms in South-East Europe (Paris, April). It commended the Guidelines on Condominium Ownership of Housing. It agreed on the outline for and composition of the task force for guidelines on social housing development and to prepare guidelines on spatial planning systems. The Committee also agreed to cooperate with the Conference of European Statisticians on the preparation of a new set of ECE recommendations for housing censuses.

Statistics

The Conference of European Statisticians (fifty-first session, Geneva, 10-12 June) [ECE/CES/64] considered the implications of the meetings of its parent bodies—the March session of ECE (see p. 1016) and the March session of the UN Statistical Commission (see p. 1289). The Conference asked the Bureau to continue to review how the Conference could further incorporate cross-sectoral concerns into the work of all its sub-programmes, such as sustainable development, gender, security, and information and communication technology. It agreed that the ECE Statistical Division should be closely involved in operational activities addressing economies in transition through the Regional Adviser Programme. The Conference agreed to review the Integrated Presentation of International Statistics by examining two topics in great depth and the remaining programme elements on the basis of recommendations by the Bureau. The two topics chosen for the current session were "families and households", and "crime and criminal justice statistics".

Operational activities

Operational activities in 2002, as described in a note by the Executive Secretary [E/ECE/1403], were carried out in the areas of capacity-building, assistance with attracting partners/investors for local projects at countries' request, project elaboration/implementation, resource mobilization, building up institutions and policy formulation. Most of ECE's operational activities, with a total value of $1,527,501, were funded from the regular budget, of which 48 per cent went to activities related to trade, followed by transport (21 per cent), environment (12 per cent), energy (11 per cent) and statistics (8 per cent). It also received $693,232 from the UN Development Account. Total extrabudgetary expenditure under the 11 ECE general trust funds totalled $2,642,066, and $2,132,825 under the 22 local technical cooperation trust funds.

The Commission welcomed the formation of a new Technical Cooperation Unit in the secretariat and supported the setting up of a joint committee in the secretariat to improve the overall coordination of technical cooperation activities.

---

Latin America and the Caribbean

---

The Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) did not meet in 2003. The Commission's thirtieth session was to be held in 2004.

Economic trends

In 2003, the economies of Latin America and the Caribbean grew by 1.7 per cent, contrasting favourably with the 0.6 per cent reduction in GDP recorded for 2002, according to the summary of the economic survey of Latin America and the Caribbean, 2003 [E/2004/19]. However, the recovery was not strong enough to offset the economic stagnation of recent years, and per capita GDP was still 1.2 per cent lower than in 1997. The region's stronger performance was linked to the situation in the international economy, which brightened with the recovery in the United States and Japan and the continuing rapid expansion of the Asian economies, led by China. The combined effect of those factors was a 15.4 per cent increase in the price of export commodities, which, however, was reduced to 7.2 per cent when oil was excluded. The upswing in export prices, although partially offset by a 1.5 per cent rise in import prices, was sufficient to halt the 3.3 per cent deterioration in the terms of trade between 1998 and 2002. The buoyancy of exports was widespread, as growth rates for the year were 5.9 per cent for Central America and the Caribbean, 7.8 per cent for the Andean Community and Chile, 18.9 per cent for the Southern Cone Common Market (MERCOSUR) and 8.3 per cent for the regional average. Increased volumes and higher prices turned 2003 into a record year in terms of the region's trade surplus ($41.8 billion), which contributed to a $5.6 billion surplus on the balance-of-payments current account, the first time in 50 years.

Capital flows to the region were also positive, reaching $4.4 billion net, as compared with an outflow of $14.4 billion the previous year. Financial flows were negative, but direct investment more than offset that outflow. Foreign direct investment, which amounted to $30.1 billion, was 23 per cent lower than the 2002 figure. Despite the significant level of financing, the net transfer of resources continued to be negative ($33.3 billion), equivalent to 7.9 per cent of exports. Most countries consolidated their use of flexible exchange-rate regimes and were phasing out restrictions on foreign exchange operations, except Venezuela. In addition, various countries maintained a high degree of dollarization in their economies or had simply adopted the dollar as legal tender. The region returned to single digit levels of inflation as a result of the implementation of various fiscal and monetary instruments. In 2003, prices increased by 8.5 per cent, four percentage points less than the previous year.

The positive economic outlook led to a slight increase in the employment rate. However, at 10.7 per cent, unemployment remained high and was expected to rise during the year. Poverty and indigence in the region increased, with 227 million people (44 per cent of the population) living below the poverty line.

Activities in 2003

Development policy and regional economic cooperation

The ECLAC Economic Development Division continued to report on the macroeconomic performance of the region as a whole and individual countries in its publications Economic Survey of Latin America and the Caribbean and Preliminary Overview of the Economies of Latin America and the Caribbean. It provided technical assistance to Bolivia, Colombia, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Mexico and Paraguay, particularly on issues of fiscal reform, and organized the fourteenth regional seminar on fiscal policy (Santiago, Chile, 27-29 January). It secured funding for two new projects: e-fiscal concepts and issues in Latin America and Euro-Latin American research of macroeconomic coordination experts. As to the macroeconomic dimension of regional integration, ECLAC consolidated its coordination position through a network of macroeconomists from national and regional institutions. Its macroeconomic dialogue network, implemented with EU financial support, provided a forum for discussion and an exchange of experiences among government officials on macroeconomic issues linked to integration. The Division, at the request of Governments, focused on the analysis of short-term issues related to external and internal macroeconomic imbalances, mainly through technical assistance missions and relevant policy research. It continued to address emerging key structural issues in the region, mainly through its publications on issues of interest to Governments, particularly economic growth, employment, the development challenges faced by landlocked countries and the coordination of macroeconomic policies. It organized an international seminar on "Latin American growth: Why so slow?" (Santiago, Chile, December).

The Latin American and Caribbean Institute for Economic and Social Planning (ILPES) continued to enhance the capacity of member States to apply the basic principles of efficient public administration planning and State regulation by organizing 25 expert meetings, seminars and workshops, reaching some 1,750 participants. It updated its capacity to respond to member countries' growing demand for new information, studies and technical support regarding such public planning issues as decentralization and administration of public decisions, local development, regulation of public services and non-competitive sectors. ILPES provided technical assistance to governmental bodies in regional countries and was confirmed as the ECLAC training hub for standardizing all procedural matters regarding the design, implementation and evaluation of training activities carried out by ECLAC substantive divisions.

Noteworthy events during 2002-2003 were the eleventh Conference of Ministers and Heads of Planning of Latin America and the Caribbean and the twelfth meeting of the ILPES Regional Council for Planning (Madrid, Spain, 6 November 2002). ECLAC also convened the Regional Preparatory Ministerial Conference of Latin America and the Caribbean for the World Summit on the Information Society (Bávaro, Dominican Republic, 29-31 January 2003).

International trade and integration

The activities of ECLAC's Division of International Trade and Integration were aimed at strengthening the decision-making capacity of institutions in member countries to generate progress in subregional, regional and hemispheric integration, including the provision of technical assistance to member States in building their capacity for negotiating the Free Trade Area of the Americas initiative and during the Fifth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization (WTO) (see p. 1535). To help countries in the region better understand the domestic implications of the international commitments undertaken in bilateral, regional and multilateral trade negotiations, ECLAC prepared numerous documents containing policy recommendations to strengthen the international competitiveness of Latin American and Caribbean countries in areas relating to trade promotion, product diversification and export markets. The Division paid close attention to improving the analysis of the impact of trade on selected groups, placing emphasis on the need to incorporate developing countries' small and medium-sized enterprises into the area of e-commerce.

Social development and equity

In 2003, the efforts of the ECLAC Social Development Division were focused on strengthening countries' capacity to design and implement policies targeting the most underprivileged social sectors, so as to increase the quality of human and social capital, foster social equity and reduce poverty, with a focus on overcoming gender inequity. The Division published its 2001-2002 and 2002-2003 editions of the Social Panorama of Latin America, which included an evaluation of progress and difficulties in regional efforts to achieve the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51] in the areas of poverty reduction, education and health. It conducted substantial research within the context of the regional project "Policy strategies for sustainable development in Latin America and the Caribbean: promotion of a socially sustainable policy (Equity II)", and continued its collaboration with the Integrated Project Formulation, Evaluation and Monitoring System, providing regional Governments with a methodological tool for use as a guide in designing, implementing and following up social policy. The Division also started developing an Internet directory of social institutions in Latin America and the Caribbean (DISALC), which was currently being used for social policy coordination and the sharing of experiences by more than 700 institutions and officials.

With regard to drug abuse prevention policies, ECLAC continued to develop a comprehensive vision by incorporating socio-economic and cultural aspects into its analyses, including the way in which the drug problem impacted on the more vulnerable sectors of society. The Division also supported Chile in implementing a comprehensive system of specialized information for its National Drug Control Council.

Environment and human settlements

The ECLAC Sustainable Development and Human Settlements Division focused its work on international environmental agreements, environmental management, sustainable development trends, and urban management and property. Countries in the region gave priority to implementing the 2002 Latin American and Caribbean Initiative for Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 1012]. The Division was particularly active in launching an innovative approach to the interrelationship between trade and environment by integrating issues such as intellectual property rights, investment, services and environment, leading to the publication of the study "Latin America and the Caribbean: from a strategy on trade and environment towards a strategy on trade for sustainable development". The Division offered several training courses and seminars as part of the training programme on sustainable development and environmental management. It provided technical assistance to Argentina, Colombia, the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico in the systematization and application of sustainable development indicators, resulting in a reduction of gaps in the availability of empirical information. It also provided technical assistance to Argentina, Bolivia, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador and Mexico in urban management practices and policies, and conducted a number of courses and workshops on urban management. With respect to urban poverty, the Division organized in January a meeting of experts in the framework of a project entitled "Urban poverty: an action-oriented strategy for urban governments and institutions in Latin America and the Caribbean".

Population and development

The ECLAC Population Division continued to incorporate sociodemographic elements into gender and social programming by supporting countries of the region in strengthening their capacity to produce updated and reliable sociodemographic information. Among other methods, it developed new or improved methodologies for population estimates and projections on such topics as social vulnerability, fertility, housing deficits, residential segregation and internal migration. It organized (Santiago, 19-21 November) the Regional Intergovernmental Conference on Ageing: Towards a regional strategy for the implementation in Latin America and the Caribbean of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing [YUN 2002, p. 1194], and published a document entitled "Older persons in Latin America and the Caribbean: situation and policies".

The Division's activities in technical cooperation and regional training in population and development were conducted to foster the exchange of experiences and lessons learned in relation to implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) [YUN 1994, p. 956]. Together with the United Nations Population Fund, it provided support to the Caribbean subregional meeting to assess implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action 10 years after its adoption (Port of Spain, Trinidad and Tobago, 11-12 November), and hosted an open-ended meeting of the Presiding Officers of the ECLAC Ad Hoc Committee on Population and Development (Santiago, December). To help countries devise and update appropriate indicators for national and regional follow-up to ICPD, the Division developed and updated the regional system of indicators and, with the support of the Women and Development Unit, developed indicators for monitoring the Beijing Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170]. Two subregional training workshops (one for South America and the other for Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean) were conducted to discuss the most appropriate indicators and to train technicians from national statistical offices in the design, development and implementation of national indicator systems.

Integration of women in development

The work of ECLAC's Women and Development Unit centred on the follow-up to the Regional Programme of Action for the Women of Latin America and the Caribbean, 1995-2001 [YUN 1994, p. 739] and the Beijing Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170], and organization of the thirty-fifth (Havana, Cuba, 28-29 April) meeting of the Presiding Officers of the Regional Conference on Women in Latin America and the Caribbean. By agreements adopted at that meeting and at the thirty-fourth meeting (Santiago, 5-6 September 2002), the countries welcomed the methodology and modality of technical assistance being implemented in the region by the Women and Development Unit. At the 2003 meeting, the Presiding Officers commended ECLAC for developing a system of gender indicators to facilitate regional comparability and requested technical assistance from the Commission for the definition of national systems of gender indicators for use in carrying out comparative analyses within countries.

As follow-up to the recommendations of the eighth session of the Regional Conference on Women in Latin America and the Caribbean [YUN 2000, p. 950], particularly those concerning impediments to an evaluation of the objectives of the Beijing Platform for Action, ECLAC developed a strategy for collaboration with UN system agencies. As a result, seven countries (Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Ecuador, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama) had developed gender indicator subsystems, some of which incorporated systems for follow-up to international commitments (Mexico, Panama). The other regional countries had basic information disaggregated by sex, and all used the regional system of gender indicators. Eleven countries had prepared civil society reports using the ECLAC indicators, and nine had national reports on progress towards meeting the MDGs.

An international meeting (September) of producers and users of the ECLAC indicators of violence and poverty from a gender perspective was held as part of the work of the Statistical Conference of the Americas, in collaboration with national women's offices.

Economic statistics and technical cooperation

The ECLAC Statistics and Economic Projections Division strengthened the regional framework of statistical information with respect to databanks of statistics on current economic trends, household surveys, foreign trade and national accounts. To improve the dissemination of statistics, it created a web page providing online access to the Division's databases, which offered, in 2003, three new online products: the Statistical Yearbook, a database on international trade and an information system on social statistics and indicators. The Division created a database on microdata from household surveys for the use of specialized research and policy-making institutions. New dimensions related to environment and gender indicators were added to its databanks. Those improvements were recognized in the conclusions of the second meeting of the Statistical Conference of the Americas (Santiago, 18-20 June).

The Division carried out a large number of technical cooperation missions and there was a strong demand for meetings, seminars and training workshops in relation to national accounts, international classifications and household surveys. Activities were aimed at improving countries' technical capacity to produce statistics and forecasts as inputs for economic and social programmes, with emphasis on harmonizing methodologies and concepts at the regional level, in order to enhance the comparability of national statistics and adherence to international standards. The Division continued to prepare manuals and transfer methodological and technological advances, especially with respect to the full implementation of the new System of National Accounts in the region.

Natural resources and infrastructure

The ECLAC Natural Resources and Infrastructure Division provided technical expertise to member countries in designing policies for the sustainable development of natural resources and infrastructure. It played a leading role in promoting a regional dialogue on renewable sources of energy at the Regional Conference for Latin America and the Caribbean on Renewable Energies (Brasília, Brazil, October), which, in its Brasília Platform, requested ECLAC to prepare the regional document to be submitted to the 2004 International Conference on Renewable Energies. ECLAC presented the region's vision on water and governance and indigenous rights at the Third World Water Forum (Japan, March). Among its efforts to increase the capacity of countries to manage natural resources, energy, infrastructure and transport at the decentralized regional and local levels, ECLAC and ILPES trained 57 professionals from 12 countries at the fourth (Santiago, 2-6 September 2002) and fifth (8-12 September 2003) courses on public utilities regulation. The Division strengthened the negotiating capacity of regional countries in international and regional mechanisms dealing with sustainable development of natural resources and infrastructure.

ECLAC hosted the fifth ministerial meeting of the Executive Steering Committee of the Initiative for Regional Infrastructure Integration in South America (Santiago, 4-5 December) and convened a meeting of regional energy institutions, with a view to coordinating their activities (Santiago, 2 December). It organized the regional preparatory meeting (Asunción, Paraguay, 12-13 March) for the International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation (see p. 875). As part of those preparations, it conducted a study on the economic costs of being landlocked, which was taken into account in the Almaty Programme of Action adopted at the Conference.

Subregional activities

Caribbean

The ECLAC subregional headquarters for the Caribbean—the secretariat of the Caribbean Development and Cooperation Committee (CDCC) in Port of Spain, Trinidad and Tobago—worked towards improving policies, programmes and projects to facilitate Caribbean societies' adjustment to rapid change on the international scene, particularly globalization; boost the subregional integration process; alleviate poverty and reduce gender inequalities; strengthen member States' capacity to develop and apply indicators to measure the catalytic effect of science and technology on economic and social development; and strengthen national capacities to implement the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States [YUN 1994, p. 783]. It convened the eleventh meeting of the CDCC Monitoring Committee and a joint meeting with the Inter-Agency Collaborative Group (Puerto Rico, 10-11 April); the Caribbean subregional meeting to assess the implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action [YUN 1994, p. 956] (Trinidad and Tobago, 11-12 November); and the Caribbean preparatory meeting (Trinidad and Tobago, 6-10 October) at the technical level for the 2004 international meeting to undertake a comprehensive review of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States.

Technical assistance and training workshops were held in such areas as trade and social statistics, information technology, disaster assessment, human and social development, environmental sustainability, water resources and trade. Activities undertaken through extrabudgetary projects included the completion of an assessment of the social impact of the closure of the sugar industry in Saint Kitts and Nevis, a marine-based tourism project focusing on the yachting sector in the eastern Caribbean, the development and establishment of databases for trade and social statistics and the development of a draft national human development agenda for Belize.

Mexico and Central America

In 2003, the ECLAC subregional headquarters in Mexico provided analyses and training and expanded its technical assistance to build capacity in the countries of the subregion to adjust to rapid changes in the international scene, maximizing the benefits and mitigating the adverse effects of globalization; improve policies and mechanisms for reducing poverty and gender inequality; and harmonize energy policies and boost the efficiency of energy management. Activities included work on economic, industrial and agricultural development, trade negotiations, the environment and natural disasters, subregional integration and cooperation processes. That support helped to increase the capacity to negotiate trade agreements for 34 member States in the case of the Free Trade Area of the Americas and for five States in the case of the United States-Central American Free Trade Agreement, including the preparation of national strategies to strengthen trade-related capacities in another four member States.

The subregional headquarters continued to act as the ECLAC focal point for natural disaster issues and to evaluate disasters on request. On poverty reduction and gender inequality, work performed by ECLAC contributed to a new law on responsible fatherhood in one case and an implementation policy in another; improvements in three poverty reduction strategies/national action plans for children; incorporation of the subject into two public training programmes; preparation of a training manual; and a proposal for related indicators. The subregional headquarters began to process and analyse microdata from household surveys in the Central American countries, and provided comparative analyses on unmet needs, poverty levels, social vulnerability, public social expenditures and the relationship between gender and poverty. It provided technical assistance and analyses to public institutions, NGOs and regional forums on the relationship between gender and poverty/economic development to support policy-making. In the field of energy, support was provided for the harmonization of energy policies and for increasing the efficiency of energy management. Emphasis was placed on sustainable energy development, particularly environmental externality guidelines and options for biofuels.

The General Assembly, on 17 December, adopted resolution 58/117 on international assistance to and cooperation with the Alliance for the Sustainable Development of Central America (see p. 950).

Western Asia

The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) held its twenty-second session in Beirut, Lebanon, from 14 to 17 April [E/2003/41/Rev.1]. The Commission adopted two resolutions for action by the Economic and Social Council, on the establishment within ESCWA of a UN Arabic language centre and of a committee on women.

Economic and social trends

Economic trends

For the ESCWA region, 2003 was a good year in terms of overall economic growth, notwithstanding the negative consequences of the war in Iraq (see p. 333), according to the survey of economic and social developments in the region [E/2004/20]. The survey estimated that GDP, excluding Iraq and the West Bank and Gaza Strip, grew by 5 per cent compared to the meagre 1.25 per cent growth of the previous year. With a regional population growth rate of 2.4 per cent, overall GDP per capita increased by 2.5 per cent, as compared with the contraction of 1.2 per cent in 2002. However, economic performance was very distinct for the two subgroups: the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) States (Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates) and the more diversified economies (Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Palestine, Syrian Arab Republic, Yemen). The GCC States enjoyed an upturn in GDP real growth, which increased from 0.4 per cent in 2002 to 5.8 per cent in 2003, resulting in a per capita GDP growth of 2.8 per cent, up from a negative 2.5 per cent in 2002. All GCC economies improved as a result of increased oil production and revenues, but the non-oil sectors also performed well, boosted by restored confidence and better economic prospects after the war in Iraq. Strong public expenditure, high domestic liquidity and low interest rates, which enhanced domestic consumption and investment, also contributed. Qatar achieved the highest GDP growth rate (5.44 per cent), while Oman recorded a negative 0.80 per cent. In the more diversified economies, political instability remained the most influential factor determining growth. The combined GDP growth of that subgroup remained almost constant at 3.14 per cent in 2003 and 3.15 per cent in 2002, with overall GDP per capita growth stagnating at a low 0.8 per cent. The most negatively affected countries were Jordan and Syria. In the conflict zones in the ESCWA region, the Occupied Palestinian Territories showed signs of a marginal recovery from a very low base, while in Iraq, the war, occupation and the subsequent difficult political and security situation restrained an upturn in economic activity, despite the lifting of UN sanctions and the termination of the oil-for-food programme (see p. 338).

Inflation rates remained relatively moderate, despite the depreciation of the United States dollar against the euro (to which the national currencies of the GCC countries were pegged), and the increase in the price of imports from the euro zone. Consumer price inflation increased modestly in most countries, ranging from 0.6 per cent in Oman to 4.4 per cent in the Occupied Palestinian Territories, except Yemen and Iraq, where inflation soared to a double-digit rate and an estimated 33 per cent, respectively.

Oil

In 2003, the basket price of crude oil of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was $28.10 a barrel, the highest nominal average since 1984. The 6.3 per cent increase in oil output over 2002 allowed most ESCWA oil-producing countries to reap the benefits of high prices, with total oil export revenues for the region estimated at $161 billion in 2003, up by 22 per cent from the previous year. Iraq and the Syrian Arab Republic were the only exceptions, as their oil exports plunged due to the war and ensuing political and security conditions.

Trade

The total gross value of merchandise exports of ESCWA member countries was estimated at $228 billion, while that of merchandise imports was estimated at $143 billion. The GCC countries accounted for 88 per cent of those exports and 72 per cent of all imports. Gross total exports from the ESCWA region increased by 17.2 per cent in 2003, and by 21.2 per cent from the GCC countries, owing to their increased energy exports, while in the more diversified economies, gross total exports decreased by 4.7 per cent. Gross total imports increased by 9.3 per cent. The value of total imports of the GCC countries went up by 15.4 per cent, due to the expansion of domestic demand, while total imports of the more diversified economies dropped by 3.8 per cent, owing to a substantial decrease in the imports of Egypt and Iraq.

Social trends

Social conditions declined in Iraq and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. In Iraq, with more than 40 per cent of the labour force unemployed, the extent to which poverty rose was significant, while in the Occupied Palestinian Territories, where 28 per cent of the labour force was unemployed, conditions were also bleak; however, the real catastrophe was the human toll of the conflict. In terms of unemployment data, real wages in the ESCWA region had declined, while the labour supply continued to outgrow demand. In the absence of adequate official social safety nets to protect the unemployed and the marginalized, informal social nets and sector activities proliferated, particularly the cultural principle of al-takaful (mutual support), which mitigated the effects of abject poverty and hunger. There were, however, certain bright spots in terms of a marked increase in life expectancy and the educational attainment of women.

Activities in 2003

Economic development and cooperation

The third session of the Technical Committee on the Liberalization of Foreign Trade and Economic Globalization in the Countries of the ESCWA Region (Muscat, Oman, 24-25 February) [E/ESCWA/GRID/2003/IG.1/7] reviewed action taken in trade liberalization and economic globalization and considered proposals regarding its 2004-2005 programme of work and priorities.

The Committee proposed, among other recommendations, that ESCWA include in its 2004-2005 programme of work training on WTO-related issues for media officials as well as judges, their assistants and lawyers, in order to prepare the judicial sector to work with WTO-related issues. ESCWA should also monitor and keep member countries updated on the progress of current WTO negotiations and should publish studies and reports on the Internet. Other recommendations called for documents to be translated into Arabic and Committee sessions to be held annually instead of biennially.

In the area of technology, the Commission, on 17 April [E/2003/41/Rev.1 (res. 245(XXII))], adopted the recommendations of the Forum on Technology, Employment and Poverty Alleviation in the Arab Countries [YUN 2002, p. 1018] and of the first meeting of the ESCWA Consultative Committee on Scientific and Technological Development and Technological Innovation [ibid.], particularly with respect to a new vision for the future of science, technology and technological innovation and related national policies; the establishment of a new institutional framework in ESCWA member countries; the strengthening and coordination of research and development; and the development of national education and vocational training systems.

The Commission requested the secretariat to prepare a study on countries' positions on vital technology in agriculture, food and medicines production; formulate priorities for the region in those fields; and propose initiatives to assist countries in confronting international trends in the sector. The secretariat should follow up those recommendations through a regional initiative to achieve specific goals within an appropriate time frame. The Executive Secretary was asked to report to the Commission in 2005.

Transportation

The Committee on Transport, at its fourth session (Beirut, 14-16 January) [E/ESCWA/TRANS/2003/IG.1/6], urged member States to complete measures for the ratification of the Agreement on International Roads in the Arab Mashreq [YUN 2001, p. 928], with a view to ensuring that it entered into force as soon as possible. It also urged Saudi Arabia's Ministry of Communications to complete the specifications for the sign for international roads and to inform ESCWA thereof by the end of March.

The Committee recommended that the proposals by the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs on the Agreement on International Railways in the Arab Mashreq [YUN 2002, p. 1019], which were included in the amended text of the Agreement, should be approved. The Agreement, having been finalized, was opened for signature during ESCWA's April 2003 session (see p. 1024) and thereafter at UN Headquarters until 31 December 2004 [E/ESCWA/22/5].

The Committee also recommended that the national committees for the facilitation of trade and transport be renamed national committees "for the facilitation of transport and trade". The Commission should follow up with member countries on the steps adopted to establish national committees and report in 2004 to the Committee on Transport. The amended draft memorandum of understanding (MOU) concerning cooperation in the field of maritime transport in the Arab Mashreq should be adopted and a working group of maritime transport experts should be established to study member countries' comments and proposals. The group should meet on 2 April and its outcome submitted to ESCWA's April 2003 session. Member countries should be urged to add, through ESCWA, ports and harbours to the network of maritime routes contained in the draft MOU. The Committee further recommended that the tables of the international roads in the Arab Mashreq should be amended in the schedule distributed to member countries, to be completed no later than 15 April. It recommended a 2004-2005 draft programme of work and priorities for approval and that the Commission include air transport and transport safety in future work programmes.

The Commission, on 17 April [E/2003/41/Rev.1 (res. 243(XXI))], adopted the Agreement on International Railways in the Arab Mashreq and urged member countries to make the necessary arrangements for its signature and ratification so that it might enter into force as soon as possible.

Statistics

The Commission, on 17 April [res. 247(XXII)], noting the regional countries' need to develop national statistical bodies and update mechanisms and methods for preparing and analysing their economic and social data and indicators, requested the secretariat to assist those countries in adopting and applying the international standards for amassing, analysing and disseminating statistics so that they could formulate economic and social policies and monitor progress towards national development objectives. The secretariat was requested to provide technical support to enable them to become parties to the Special Data Dissemination Standard applied by IMF. The Commission urged member countries to participate in the project for the development of national gender statistics.

On the same date [res. 248(XXII)], the Commission urged member countries that had not done so to join the International Comparison Programme, cooperate with those responsible for it and provide it with financial support. It recommended that the secretariat include activities related to the Programme in its work.

Natural resources, energy and environment

On 17 April [res. 244(XXII)], the Commission urged member countries to complete the procedures for officially approving MOUs relating to bilateral shared water resource cooperation projects and to support the technical task forces carrying out such projects. It adopted the recommendation of the Committee on Water Resources at its fifth session [YUN 2002, p. 1019] for the establishment of an Arab network for integrated management of water resources and the activation of its role, in coordination with the ESCWA secretariat. The Commission urged specialist water training and research centres and institutes in Arab countries to become members of that network, and member countries, international organizations and donors to provide the funding necessary to activate the network. The Executive Secretary was asked to promote projects and activities relating to shared water resources and the Arab network for the integrated management of water resources and to follow up their implementation, with a view to supporting national and regional capacity-building in the integrated management of water resources.

Information

The Commission, on 17 April [res. 246(XXII)], noted the work of the Western Asia Preparatory Conference (Beirut, 4-6 February) for the forthcoming World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 857), and affirmed ESCWA's intention to play a role, in consultation with regional and international organizations working in Arab countries, with a view to formulating a single regional plan of action for the Arab region, given that those countries were culturally and historically related. The Commission called on the secretariat to propose a regional plan of action for building the information society that respected the particularities and linguistic and cultural priorities of the region, and to coordinate in that regard with the League of Arab States. It also requested the secretariat to amend the 2002-2003 work programme to take into consideration the preparatory work, to review the 2004-2005 work programme in order to ensure that it contained activities relating to the regional plan, and to continue participating in the preparations for the World Summit.

Quality of life

The Commission, on 17 April [res. 241(XXII)], noting with concern the impact of the lack of stability in the Arab region on the economic, social and environmental situation and on the development process in general, requested the secretariat to study the impact of war on economic and social development and the environment in Iraq, ensuring that its related activities were coordinated with those of other UN bodies and relevant regional organizations, and to provide the necessary assistance. The secretariat was asked to identify activities that ESCWA should undertake as part of the post-war reconstruction and rehabilitation process and to incorporate them into its programme of work and specializations. It was also asked to establish a mechanism for monitoring the effects of crises, with a view to identifying and analysing their impact on economic and social development in the region, and to assist countries in dealing with them. The Commission requested the Executive Secretary to report in 2005.

In another resolution of the same date [res. 252(XXII)], the Commission requested the secretariat to exert efforts to increase Arab participation in reconstruction and rehabilitation in Palestine and to link such participation to relevant international programmes. It affirmed the role of the Palestinian Authority (PA) and Palestinian civil society institutions in formulating the reconstruction and rehabilitation plan, and the need for the secretariat to assist the PA by delegating experts to evaluate economic and social losses and assisting in finding a relevant mechanism, through international organizations, for compensating such losses. The Commission requested the Executive Secretary to follow up implementation of the resolution and submit a progress report in 2005.

Programme and organizational questions

On 17 April [res. 242(XXII)], the Commission approved the amendments to the revised 2002-2003 programme of work and requested the secretariat to follow up its implementation and assume responsibility for activities that addressed any changes in the ESCWA region. It asked the Executive Secretary to inform member countries of any further modifications to the 2002-2003 work programme and to include that information in the progress report to be submitted to member countries in the years between Commission sessions.

By other resolutions of the same date, the Commission: approved the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget [res. 251(XXII)]; affirmed the importance of extrabudgetary resources in enabling the secretariat to expand its activities and deal with unforeseen developments in the ESCWA region, and urged member countries to increase their donations to other UN regional commissions [res. 253(XXII)]; called on the secretariat to strengthen consultancy services and technical cooperation activities, and requested it to better coordinate its research and analysis activities with its technical cooperation activities and consultancy services; urged member countries and donors to increase financial support for the Commission's consultancy services and technical cooperation activities [res. 249(XXII)]; and adopted the recommendations contained in the reports of its subsidiary bodies and requested member countries to cooperate with ESCWA in measures to promote their implementation [res. 250(XXII)].

Establishment of UN Arabic language centre

On 17 April [res. 239(XXII)], the Commission decided to submit to the Economic and Social Council for adoption a resolution on the establishment within ESCWA of a UN Arabic language centre.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 18 July [meeting 41], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of ESCWA [E/2003/15/Add.1], adopted resolution 2003/8 without vote [agenda item 10].

Consideration of the establishment within the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia of a United Nations Arabic language centre

The Economic and Social Council,

Referring to General Assembly resolution 54/248 of 23 December 1999 concerning the pattern of conferences,

Referring also to the requests and suggestions put forward to the Secretariat of the United Nations by the delegations of Arab States Members of the United Nations concerning Arabic language services and, in particular, to the proposal of the delegation of Egypt that is set forth in annex II to the report of the Committee on Conferences and the letter dated 31 July 2001 from the Permanent Representative of Qatar to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General, written in his capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group for the month of July 2001, concerning multilingualism,

Recognizing the importance of the coordinating role that could be played by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, given that it is located in the Arab region, with respect to strengthening Arabic language services in the United Nations system in close cooperation with United Nations Headquarters Arabic translation and editorial services and benefiting from the high level of expertise in the region,

1. Calls upon the secretariat of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia to consider the establishment of a United Nations Arabic language centre, based at the Commission, of which the objective, in cooperation with the Secretariat of the United Nations, and taking into consideration the requisite technical, financial and administrative needs, shall be to raise the technical and linguistic level of the Arabic terminology used in United Nations documents, in order to facilitate the use of the Arabic language in such documents;

2. Also calls upon the secretariat of the Commission, in cooperation with the Secretariat of the United Nations, to undertake the establishment of a committee responsible for determining the competencies of the aforementioned centre;

3. Requests the Executive Secretary of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia to follow up implementation of the present resolution and to submit a report on the progress achieved in that regard to the Commission at its twenty-third session.

Establishment of a committee on women

On 17 April [res. 240(XXII)], the Commission decided to submit to the Economic and Social Council for adoption a resolution on the establishment within ESCWA of a committee on women.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 18 July [meeting 41], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of ESCWA [E/2003/15/Add.1], adopted resolution 2003/9 without vote [agenda item 10].

Establishment within the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia of a committee on women

The Economic and Social Council,

Aware of the importance of action relating to the empowerment of women and the improvement of their status, and of making available equal opportunities for their empowerment and increased participation at all levels of the development process,

Aware also of the importance of coordination with regard to the empowerment of women and of respect for the particularities, customs and culture of each Arab country in order to harmonize Arab positions at global conferences and in the follow-up to global conferences organized by the United Nations, with a view to incorporating the regional dimension in international documents,

Affirming the importance of the involvement of the interested parties in member countries of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia in the planning, development and follow-up to implementation of secretariat programmes relating to the empowerment of women and of mainstreaming the gender perspective in activities and policies,

Guided by the action taken by the other United Nations regional commissions that have established special committees on women,

Taking into consideration the recommendation made by the Committee on Social Development of the Commission at its fourth session, held in Beirut from 3 to 5 July 2002, concerning the establishment within the Commission of a committee on women,

1. Decides to establish within the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia a committee on women comprising representatives of member countries who are specialists in women's issues, to be responsible for the following:

(a) Identifying the women-related priorities of the programmes of work and medium-term plans of the Commission;

(b) Monitoring developments with respect to the status of women and evaluating indicators and statistics with a view to formulating an integrated policy for the advancement and empowerment of women;

(c) Monitoring the progress made in women-related activities of the Commission secretariat;

(d) Following up global and regional conferences and the participation of member countries therein and coordinating the endeavours of member countries and regional organizations with regard to implementation of the resolutions and recommendations adopted at such conferences;

(e) Coordinating action at the regional level towards the adoption of unified positions on the issue at international gatherings and in follow-up to the performance by member countries of the undertakings to which they made a commitment in human rights instruments concerning women;

(f) Preparing and implementing field projects for the advancement and empowerment of women in member countries of the Commission and finding the necessary funding for such projects;

(g) According the requisite importance to women in the regions in which wars and conflicts are prevalent, and in particular to Palestinian women, who are suffering in the conditions in which the Palestinian people is living under continuing Israeli occupation;

2. Decides also that the Committee on Women shall hold its sessions biennially, with effect from 2004, and that an inaugural session should be held before the end of 2003;

3. Requests the Executive Secretary of the Commission to establish a women's centre within the secretariat of the Commission with responsibility for acting as the secretariat of the Committee on Women;

4. Also requests the Executive Secretary to follow up implementation of the present resolution and to submit a report on the matter to the Commission at its twenty-third session.

Chapter VI

Energy, natural resources and cartography

The conservation, development and use of natural resources and energy were considered by several UN bodies in 2003, including the Commission on Sustainable Development, which recommended the theme of water for the Commission's first two-year work cycle (2004-2005) and energy for its second (2006-2007).

During 2003, action was taken to promote new and renewable sources of energy, including the effective implementation of, and mobilization of resources for, the World Solar Programme 1996-2005. In December, the General Assembly encouraged national and regional initiatives on renewable sources of energy to promote access to energy for the poorest and to improve energy efficiency and conservation.

Amid significant challenges and achievements, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) in 2003 marked the fiftieth anniversary of its dedication to the achievement and promotion of "Atoms for Peace"—the prevention of nuclear weapons proliferation, which had led to the establishment of the Agency. Speaking before the Assembly in November, the IAEA Director General stated that nuclear power continued to contribute to the world's electricity supply, and was the only source of large-scale electricity provision with comparatively minimal environmental impact.

The United Nations observed the International Year of Freshwater, 2003, with activities supported system-wide and at the national and international levels. On the World Day for Water (22 October), the Secretary-General launched the first edition of the World Water Development Report. In December, the Assembly proclaimed the International Decade for Action "Water for Life" (2005-2015), to commence on World Water Day in 2005.

The Sixteenth United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for Asia and the Pacific adopted resolutions on the Asia-Pacific spatial data infrastructure; regional geodesy; policies for sharing fundamental data and developing regional fundamental data sets; cadastre and spatial data infrastructure; and capacity-building.

The recommendations of the Eighth (2002) United Nations Conference on the Standardization of Geographical Names were endorsed by the Council in July.

Energy and natural resources

The Commission on Sustainable Development (CSD), which assumed the work of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources for Development following its termination by Economic and Social Council decision 2002/303 [YUN 2002, p. 1022], held its eleventh session (New York, 27 January and 28 April-9 May) [E/2003/29] (see p. 838).

CSD's high-level segment (28-30 April; 5 and 9 May) discussed a February report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.17/2003/2] on follow-up to the World Summit on Sustainable Development, held in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 821], and the Commission's future role in sustainable development. The report proposed a matrix of issues on which the Commission might focus, among them, natural resources, water and sanitation, and energy. The Chairperson's summary of the high-level segment [E/2003/29] stated that the segment's participants had agreed on the concept of a two-year work cycle, and recommended the overarching theme of water for the first two-year cycle (2004-2005) and energy for the second (2006-2007). He noted that those focus areas underpinned poverty eradication, sustainable production and consumption of natural resources, which, if dealt with successfully, would send a positive message to Governments and the world's poor that the World Summit was delivering real results.

On 9 May [E/2003/29], the Commission adopted a draft resolution on the future programme, organization and methods of work of the Commission, in which it decided to include the themes of water and energy in its multi-year programme of work for the years 2004-2005 and 2006-2007, respectively. On 25 July (resolution 2003/61), the Council adopted the draft (see p. 842).

Energy*World Solar Programme (1996-2005)

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/200 [YUN 2001, p. 934], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/58/164] on action taken to promote new and renewable sources of energy, including the effective implementation of, and mobilization of resources for, the World Solar Programme 1996-2005. The report described efforts to promote new and renewable sources of energy carried out at the international level by the United Nations and its member organizations, the World Bank, the Global Environment Facility (see p. 1045), other international organizations, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and partnerships. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), as initiator of the World Solar Programme 1996-2005, continued to pursue its twofold strategy of stimulating advocacy and investment mobilization, and promoting education, training and information efforts; and encouraging regional co-operation. It also played an advocacy role in promoting renewable energy technologies for sustainable development, and continued to implement the Global Renewable Energy Education and Training programme, with particular emphasis on Africa. Other activities included regional forums for renewable energy sources; an international symposium on wind energy (Nouakchott, Mauritania, January); and the launching of an international network for sustainable energy. UNESCO continued to assist the task force established to restructure the World Solar Commission, which had finalized statutes that specified the adoption of a new name, the "World Commission on Renewable Energy", and the re-establishment of that Commission as an autonomous organization. Notable developments included the establishment of the Johannesburg Renewable Energy Coalition (see below), which involved 82 member States, and the decision by Germany to host the International Conference for Renewable Energy in June 2004. The Secretary-General concluded that, while challenges and obstacles to the promotion of new and renewable sources of energy remained, there was justification for guarded optimism. The twin concerns of poverty elimination and climate change had produced an unprecedented level of interest in new and renewable sources of energy.

Communication. On 16 October [A/C.2/58/10], Italy, on behalf of the European Union (EU), transmitted a joint declaration entitled "The way forward on renewable energy", launched at the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] by the EU and like-minded countries, known as the Johannesburg Renewable Energy Coalition.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second

(Economic and Financial) Committee [A/58/484/Add.1 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 58/210 without vote [agenda item 94 (a)].

Promotion of new and renewable sources of energy, including the implementation of the World Solar Programme 1996-2005

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/7 of 16 October 1998, 54/215 of 22 December 1999, 55/205 of 20 December 2000 and 56/200 of 21 December 2001 on the World Solar Programme 1996-2005,

Recalling also the recommendations and conclusions contained in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") concerning energy for sustainable development,

Welcoming initiatives that aim to improve access to reliable, affordable, economically viable, socially acceptable and environmentally sound energy services for sustainable development in order to contribute to the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Emphasizing that the World Solar Programme 1996-2005 is aimed at encompassing all forms of new and renewable energy, including solar, thermal, photovoltaic, biomass, wind, hydro, tidal, ocean and geothermal forms,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Reaffirms that the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation is the intergovernmental framework for energy for sustainable development agreed to at the World Summit on Sustainable Development, and calls for its full implementation;
3. Notes the role that the World Solar Commission continues to play in the mobilization of international support and assistance for the implementation of many of the national high-priority projects on renewable sources of energy included in the World Solar Programme 1996-2005, many of which are being executed with national funding;
4. Notes also that although significant financial support has been provided by some developed countries that are Members of the United Nations and by some intergovernmental organizations, both within and outside the United Nations system, in the implementation of the World Solar Programme 1996-2005, more action still needs to be taken in this regard;
5. Recognizes that rural energy services, including their financing, should be designed to maximize local ownership, as appropriate;
6. Encourages the United Nations system to continue to raise awareness of the importance of energy for sustainable development, including the need for the promotion of new and renewable sources of energy and the implementation of the World Solar Programme 1996-2005, particularly in the context of sustainable development and poverty eradication;
7. Emphasizes the need to intensify research and development in support of energy for sustainable development, which will require increased commitment on the part of all stakeholders, including Governments and the private sector, to deploy financial and human resources for accelerating research efforts;

8. Stresses that the wider use of available renewable sources of energy requires technology transfer and diffusion on a global scale, including through North-South and South-South cooperation;

9. Calls upon Governments, as well as relevant regional and international organizations and other relevant stakeholders, to combine, as appropriate, the increased use of renewable energy resources, more efficient use of energy, greater reliance on advanced energy technologies, including advanced and cleaner fossil fuel technologies, and the sustainable use of traditional energy resources, which could meet the growing need for energy services in the longer term to achieve sustainable development;

10. Encourages national and regional initiatives on renewable energies to promote access to energy, including renewable energy, for the poorest and to improve energy efficiency and conservation by resorting to a mix of available technologies, taking into full account the provisions of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation concerning energy for sustainable development;

11. Welcomes the initiative by the Government of Germany to host the International Conference for Renewable Energies, in Bonn, from 1 to 4 June 2004;

12. Invites the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to continue to make effective the implementation of the Global Renewable Energy Education and Training Programme 1996-2005 in the various regions;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session, under the item entitled "Environment and sustainable development", the sub-item entitled "Promotion of new and renewable sources of energy, including the implementation of the World Solar Programme 1996-2005".

Nuclear energy

By an August note [A/58/312], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the 2002 report of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). Presenting and updating the report in the Assembly on 3 November [A/58/PV.52], the IAEA Director General said that nuclear power continued to contribute to the world's electricity supply, and was the only source that could provide electricity on a large scale with comparatively minimal environmental impact. In 2002, nuclear power supplied 16 per cent of the world's electricity, down from 16.2 per cent in 2001. Asia remained the largest centre of expansion, accounting for 20 of the 33 power reactors under construction.

The safety and security of nuclear activities worldwide remained a key factor and continued to improve at nuclear power plants during 2002. The development, adoption and implementation of legally binding norms had proved to be a powerful mechanism for enhancing safety. Conventions continued to be implemented on early notification of a nuclear accident and assistance in the case of a nuclear accident or radiological emergency; nuclear safety; and the safety of spent-fuel management and on the safety of radioactive waste management (see p. 553). Work progressed to amend and broaden the scope of the 1979 Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material [YUN 1979, p. 1239], and in the Agency's continued revision and updating of international nuclear safety standards. In services to member States, IAEA undertook more than 60 safety missions, conducted nearly 40 advisory and evaluation missions and convened more than 50 training courses. Despite increased attention to the security of radioactive sources since the 11 September 2001 terrorist attacks in the United States [YUN 2001, p. 60], deficiencies remained and a market continued to exist for such sources for malevolent purposes.

The Director General reported that the situation in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) continued to pose a serious and immediate challenge to the nuclear non-proliferation regime. Since December 2002, no verification activities were performed in the DPRK and the Agency could not provide any level of assurance about the non-diversion of nuclear material. As a result of Security Council resolution 1441 (2002) [YUN 2002, p. 292], the Agency had resumed verification activities in Iraq (November 2002-March 2003), and reported that it had found no evidence of the revival of nuclear activities. However, in the light of the Agency's four-year absence, the renewed inspection period was not sufficient for it to complete its overall review and assessment. In May, the Security Council adopted resolution 1483 (2003) (see p. 338), in which it expressed the intention to revisit the mandates of IAEA and the United Nations Monitoring, Verification and Inspection Commission. No progress had resulted from consultations with the States of the Middle East region on the application of full-scope safeguards to all nuclear activities (see p. 550) and on the development of model agreements relevant to the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in that region (see p. 556). Regarding the implementation of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) safeguards agreements in Iran, the IAEA Board of Governors adopted a resolution urging Iran to show proactive and accelerated cooperation and to demonstrate full transparency by providing the Agency with a declaration of all its nuclear activities. IAEA was in the process of verifying a declaration received from Iran, and a status report on safeguards implementation would be given at a later date (see p. 550). The Agency con-continued its technical cooperation programme, providing about $80 million annually. Within the programme, nuclear applications were gaining increasing importance as tools for economic and social development, including such areas as human health, water resources management and mutation breeding of major food crops.

IAEA marked the fiftieth anniversary of its dedication to the achievement and promotion of "Atoms for Peace"—the prevention of nuclear weapons proliferation, which had led to the establishment of the Agency.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 November [meeting 55], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/8 [draft: A/58/L.10 & Add.1] by recorded vote (129-1) [agenda item 14].

Report of the International Atomic Energy Agency

The General Assembly,

Having received the report of the International Atomic Energy Agency for 2002,

Taking note of the statement of the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency, in which he provided additional information on the main developments in the activities of the Agency during 2003,

Recognizing the importance of the work of the Agency,

Recognizing also the cooperation between the United Nations and the Agency and the Agreement governing the relationship between the United Nations and the Agency as approved by the General Conference of the Agency on 23 October 1957 and by the General Assembly in the annex to its resolution 1145(XII) of 14 November 1957,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the International Atomic Energy Agency;

2. Takes note of resolutions GC(47)/RES/7 A on measures to strengthen international cooperation in nuclear, radiation and transport safety and waste management, GC(47)/RES/7 B on the code of conduct on the safety and security of radioactive sources, GC(47)/RES/7 C on transport safety, GC(47)/RES/8 on nuclear and radiological security—progress on measures to protect against nuclear and radiological terrorism, GC(47)/RES/9 on strengthening of the Agency's technical cooperation activities, GC(47)/RES/10 A on strengthening the Agency's activities related to nuclear science, technology and applications, GC(47)/RES/10 B on nuclear knowledge, GC(47)/RES/10 C on Agency activities in the development of innovative nuclear technology, GC(47)/RES/10 D on the use of isotope hydrology for water resources management, GC(47)/RES/10 E on a plan for producing potable water economically using small and medium-sized nuclear reactors, GC(47)/RES/11 on strengthening the effectiveness and improving the efficiency of the safeguards system and application of the Model Additional Protocol, GC(47)/RES/12 on implementation of the Agreement between the Agency and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea for the application of safeguards in connection with the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, GC(47)/RES/13 on the application of Agency safeguards in the Middle East, GC(47)/RES/14 A on staffing of the Agency's secretariat and GC(47)/RES/14 B on women in the secretariat, and decisions GC(47)/DEC/12 on implementation of United Nations Security Council resolutions relating to Iraq, GC(47)/DEC/13 on Israeli nuclear capabilities and threat and GC(47)/DEC/14 on the amendment to article VI of the statute, adopted on 19 September 2003 by the General Conference of the Agency at its forty-seventh regular session;

3. Affirms its support for the indispensable role of the Agency in encouraging and assisting the development and practical application of atomic energy for peaceful uses, in technology transfer to developing countries and in nuclear safety, verification and security;

4. Appeals to Member States to continue to support the activities of the Agency;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Director General of the Agency the records of the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly relating to the activities of the Agency.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/8:

In favour: Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, San Marino, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo, Tonga, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Natural resources

Water resources

International Year of Freshwater (2003)

A report of the Secretary-General [A/59/167] described activities taken during the International Year of Freshwater, 2003, proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 55/196 [YUN 2001, p. 963]; the year was launched on 12 December 2002 in parallel events at UN Headquarters and at UNESCO (Paris). The report covered institutional arrangements and inter-agency coordination, international and national activities, public outreach and educational projects, and UN partnerships with NGOs, the private sector and other members of civil society.

Activities supported by UN agencies and launched during the Year were as follows: UNESCO and the World Water Council established a new Water Cooperation Facility; the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the Water Supply and Sanitation Collaborative Council launched the Water, Sanitation and Hygiene for All in Schools campaign in a number of countries; the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) launched its Community Water Initiative and its Gender and Water Resource Guide (with the Gender and Water Alliance); and the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) signed a memorandum of understanding with the Asian Development Bank to create the Water for Asian Cities programme. Also, the Secretary-General launched the first edition of the World Water Development Report on World Day for Water (22 March); and CSD selected water, sanitation and human settlements as the main themes for its first two-year cycle (2004-2005) (see p. 847). In further international activities, the Third World Water Forum (Kyoto, Osaka and Shiga, Japan, 16-23 March), which adopted a Ministerial Declaration "Message from the Lake Biwa and Yodo River Basin" [A/57/785], led to specific commitments by international organizations, Governments and major stakeholders; the International Freshwater Forum (Dushanbe, Tajikistan, 29 August-1 September) adopted the Dushanbe Water Appeal [A/58/362], which called for an International Decade for Action: "Water for Life" (2005-2015) (see below for General Assembly action); the International Conference on Water for the Poorest: Responding to the Millennium Development Goals (Stavanger, Norway, 4-5 November), held under the aegis of the International Water Academy in cooperation with NGOs, focused on how to implement the Millennium Development Goals for water [YUN 2000, p. 52]; the Pan-African Implementation and Partnership Conference on Water (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 8-13 December), held under the aegis of the African Ministerial Council on Water, the New Partnership for Africa's Development and the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa [E/AC.5/2004/6], discussed water sector development in Africa; and the international symposium "Basis of Civilization: Water Sciences" (Rome, Italy, 3-6 December) contributed to the advancement of the issue of water. At the national level, Governments created and implemented water policies and agreements.

The Secretary-General noted that it would be useful to have guidelines for national focal points on how to approach the private sector for funding and partnerships, as well as a person to work with the private sector and negotiate and secure partnerships to provide microcredit, scholarships and grants to groups working at the local and national levels; that might be explored for the Water for Life Decade (below). He also proposed setting up UN agency and national focal points, providing materials appropriate for youth groups and updating relevant web sites.

International Decade for Action, "Water for Life", 2005-2015

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/485], adopted resolution 58/217 without vote [agenda item 95].

International Decade for Action, "Water for Life", 2005-2015

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/196 of 20 December 2000, by which it proclaimed the year 2003 the International Year of Freshwater,

Emphasizing that water is critical for sustainable development, including environmental integrity and the eradication of poverty and hunger, and is indispensable for human health and well-being,

Recalling the provisions of Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21 adopted at its nineteenth special session, the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") and the decisions of the Economic and Social Council and of the Commission on Sustainable Development at its sixth session relating to freshwater,

Reaffirming the internationally agreed development goals on water and sanitation, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and determined to achieve the goal to halve, by the year 2015, the proportion of people who are unable to reach or to afford safe drinking water, and a similar goal set out in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation to halve the proportion of people without access to basic sanitation,

Taking note of the contents of the United Nations World Water Development Report: Water for People, Water for Life, a joint project of twenty-three specialized agencies and other United Nations entities, and other water-related collaborative mechanisms and initiatives,

Taking note also of the Ministerial Declaration entitled "Message from the Lake Biwa and Yodo River Basin", adopted on 23 March 2003, at the Ministerial Conference on the occasion of the Third World Water Forum, held in Kyoto, Japan, and the Dushanbe Water Appeal, proclaimed on 1 September 2003 at the International Freshwater Forum, held in Dushanbe from 29 August to 1 September 2003,

1. Proclaims the period from 2005 to 2015 the International Decade for Action, "Water for Life", to commence on World Water Day, 22 March 2005;

2. Decides that the goals of the Decade should be a greater focus on water-related issues at all levels and on the implementation of water-related programmes and projects, while striving to ensure the participation and involvement of women in water-related development efforts, and the furtherance of cooperation at all levels, in order to help to achieve internationally agreed water-related goals contained in Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda

21, the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and, as appropriate, those identified during the twelfth and thirteenth sessions of the Commission on Sustainable Development;

3. Welcomes the decision of the Commission on Sustainable Development at its eleventh session, as reflected in its multi-year programme of work, to consider water, sanitation and human settlements as the thematic cluster in the first cycle, 2004-2005, and invites the Commission to work within existing resources to identify possible activities and programmes in connection with the Decade within the framework of its consideration of the thematic cluster of issues on water, sanitation and human settlements at its twelfth and thirteenth sessions, as provided for by its multi-year programme of work;

4. Invites the Secretary-General to take the appropriate steps to organize the activities of the Decade, taking into account the results of the International Year of Freshwater and the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development at its twelfth and thirteenth sessions;

5. Calls upon the relevant United Nations bodies, specialized agencies, regional commissions and other organizations of the United Nations system to deliver a coordinated response, utilizing existing resources and voluntary funds, to make "Water for Life" a decade for action.

JIU report

A 2 May note [A/57/497/Add.1] of the Secretary-General transmitted his comments and those of the UN System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) on the JIU report on the extension of water-related technical cooperation projects to end-beneficiaries: bridging the gap between the normative and the operational in the United Nations system (case studies in two African countries (Madagascar, Zambia)) [YUN 2002, p. 1027]. Among other things, the report questioned the need to enforce some JIU recommendations such as the setting up of joint and comprehensive guidelines for the implementation of water-related projects. The need to establish a database and a web site was not convincing, in view of duplication with already established web sites and the issue of the cost factor. On operational issues, CEB stated that irrespective of inter-agency coordination for intervention, the most effective form of coordination was at the country level.

On 11 July (decision 2003/225), the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's notes transmitting the JIU report and his comments and those of CEB thereon.

Cartography

UN Regional Cartographic Conference for Asia and the Pacific

In accordance with Economic and Social Council decisions 2000/229 [YUN 2000, p. 964] and 2002/229 [YUN 2002, p. 1028], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the Sixteenth United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for Asia and the Pacific (Okinawa, Japan, 14-18 July) [E/2004/57 & Corr.1]. The work of the Conference was organized around three technical committees on development needs and institutional capacity-building, fundamental data and spatial data infrastructures and their development in Asia and the Pacific.

The Conference adopted resolutions regarding the Asia-Pacific spatial data infrastructure; regional geodesy; policies for sharing fundamental data and developing regional fundamental data sets; cadastre and spatial data infrastructure; and capacity-building. A further resolution called for the Seventeenth United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for Asia and the Pacific to be convened for five working days in 2006, with a primary focus on the continued and strengthened contribution of cartography and geographic information in support of the implementation of Agenda 21 [YUN 1992, p. 672].

The Conference recommended that the Council endorse its recommendation regarding the Seventeenth Regional Conference, to be held in 2006 (see above), and requested the Secretary-General to implement its other recommendations.

Standardization of geographical names

In a report [E/2003/4] to the Economic and Social Council, the Secretary-General presented information on the Eighth (2002) United Nations Conference on the Standardization of Geographical Names, and on the Conference's recommendations [YUN 2002, p. 1029].

On 24 July, the Council took note of the report (decision 2003/309) and endorsed the Conference's recommendations (decision 2003/294).

Chapter VII

Environment and human settlements

In 2003, the United Nations and the international community continued efforts to protect the environment through legally binding instruments and the activities of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP).

The UNEP Governing Council/fourth Global Ministerial Environment Forum adopted a programme for international action to deal with mercury contamination. Further decisions concerned early warning assessment and monitoring, water, climate and atmosphere, chemicals, forest-related issues, support for Africa and small island developing States, and long-term strategies for sport and the environment and for the engagement of young people in environmental issues.

UNEP continued efforts to implement the environment-related elements of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development, including regional implementation.

The Conference of the Parties to the 1992 United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change adopted new emissions-reporting guidelines based on good-practice guidance on land use, land-use change and forestry. The 2000 Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety to the 1992 Convention on Biodiversity entered into force on 11 September. Heads of State and Government participating in a special session of the Conference of the Parties to the 1994 United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, particularly in Africa, adopted the Havana Declaration, which invited all affected parties to integrate the Convention into national strategies for sustainable development. In December, the General Assembly declared 2006 the International Year of Deserts and Desertification.

The Governing Council of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) held its first session, which was designated as its nineteenth session to signify continuity between the former Commission on Human Settlements and the Governing Council. The Council took action in support of the implementation of the 1996 Habitat Agenda; the 2000 UN Millennium Declaration; the 2001 Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium; and the human settlements-related elements of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation. UN-Habitat established a Water and Sanitation Trust Fund to facilitate the achievement of the Millennium Development Goal to reduce by half by 2015 the proportion of people without sustainable access to safe water and sanitation. The Governing Council endorsed the establishment of the Special Human Settlements Programme for the Palestinian People and a Technical Cooperation Fund of $5 million for an initial period of two years.

Environment*UN Environment Programme*Governing Council/Ministerial Forum

The fourth Global Ministerial Environment Forum (GMEF), also serving as the twenty-second session of the Governing Council (GC) of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), was held at UNEP headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya, from 3 to 7 February [A/58/25]. On 7 February [dec. 22/24], the Governing Council decided to hold its eighth special session in Seoul, Republic of Korea, from 29 to 31 March 2004 and its twenty-third session in Nairobi from 21 to 25 February 2005; it also approved the provisional agenda for those sessions.

Ministerial consultations (5-6 February) [UNEP/GC.22/11] discussed the implementation of the outcome of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development (Johannesburg Plan of Implementation) [YUN 2002, p. 821], with a focus on the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 937), the implications of regional implementation of the Summit's outcomes for UNEP's work and the promotion of sustainable consumption and production patterns. UNEP's Executive Director presented papers on UNEP's regional efforts (see p. 1043); Africa and NEPAD (see p. 1040); the living natural resource base to fight poverty: UNEP's contribution to the biodiversity commitments of the World Summit (see p. 1042); and promoting sustainable consumption and production patterns [YUN 2002, p. 1065].

The Committee of the Whole (3-7 February) [UNEP/GC.22/11] considered the state of the environment; coordination and cooperation issues (see p. 1044); the role of civil society (see p. 1046); international environmental governance (see p. 1038); follow-up to General Assembly resolutions (see p. 1047); UNEP's contribution to future sessions of the Commission on Sustainable Development; UNEP's 2004-2005 programme of work; the Environment Fund (see p. 1047); and administrative and other budgetary matters (see p. 1047).

On 10 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Governing Council's report on its twenty-second session (decision 2003/309).

Subsidiary body

In 2003, the Committee of Permanent Representatives, which was open to representatives of all UN Member States and members of specialized agencies, met in Nairobi on 17 March [UNEP/CPR/83/2], 17 June [UNEP/CPR/84/2], 17 September [UNEP/CPR/85/2] and 9 December [UNEP/CPR/86/2]; an extraordinary meeting was held on 22 January [UNEP/CPR/82/3]. The Committee discussed, among other matters, the implementation of the programme of work and the relevant decisions of the Governing Council's twenty-first [YUN 2001, p. 943] and twenty-second (2003) sessions and seventh special session [YUN 2002, p. 1030]; UNEP relations with the United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON); and the status of the Environment Fund.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December (meeting 78), the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/58/484/Add.8], adopted resolution 58/209 without vote (agenda item 94).

Report of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme on its twenty-second session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2997(XXVII) of 15 December 1972, by which it established the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme,

Recalling also its resolutions 53/242 of 28 July 1999, 56/193 of 21 December 2001 and 57/251 of 20 December 2002 on the report of the Governing Council,

Taking note of the report of the Governing Council on its seventh special session,

Reaffirming the role of the United Nations Environment Programme as the principal body within the United Nations system in the field of environment, which should take into account, within its mandate, the sustainable development needs of developing countries as well as countries with economies in transition,

Taking into account the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Recalling the need to enhance the provisions of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation concerning support for capacity-building in developing countries and countries with economies in transition,

1. Takes note of the report of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme on its twenty-second session and the decisions contained therein;

2. Emphasizes the need for the United Nations Environment Programme, within its mandate, to further contribute to sustainable development programmes, the implementation of Agenda 21 and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation at all levels, bearing in mind the mandate of the Commission on Sustainable Development;

3. Reiterates the need to ensure that capacity-building and technical assistance to developing countries remain important components of the work of the United Nations Environment Programme, and in this regard emphasizes the need for full and effective implementation of relevant decisions of the Governing Council/Global Ministerial Environment Forum;

4. Calls upon the United Nations Environment Programme to contribute, within its mandate, to the preparations for the twelfth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development, while avoiding duplication and overlap in the work of the two bodies;

5. Also calls upon the United Nations Environment Programme to contribute, within its mandate and as a member of the Inter-Agency Task Force, to the preparations for the international meeting to review the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, to be held in Mauritius from 30 August to 3 September 2004, including its preparatory process;

6. Encourages Member States, the Governing Council and the relevant bodies of the United Nations system to submit their comments, in a timely manner, on the important but complex issue of establishing universal membership of the Governing Council/Global Ministerial Environment Forum, including its legal, political, institutional, financial and system-wide implications, in order to contribute to the report of the Secretary-General to be submitted to the General Assembly for consideration before its sixtieth session, in accordance with resolution 57/251;

7. Encourages Member States to participate in the ongoing intergovernmental consultation process on the strengthening of the scientific base of the United Nations Environment Programme;

8. Notes, in regard to strengthening the overall financial situation of the United Nations Environment Programme, the various available options and the efforts being undertaken to enhance predictability in financing its programme of work and broadening its base of contributions;

9. Invites the Governing Council/Global Ministerial Environment Forum to review its methods, agenda and programme of work, in view of the mandate of the United Nations Environment Programme, with the aim of enhancing manageability and the effective participation of States Members of the United Nations in its sessions, and taking into account recent work thereon by the Committee of Permanent Representatives of the United Nations Environment Programme;

10. Emphasizes the need to further enhance coordination and cooperation among the relevant United Nations organizations in the promotion of the environmental dimension of sustainable development, and in this respect welcomes the participation of the United Nations Environment Programme in the United Nations Development Group;

11. Requests that the reports on the work of the Environmental Management Group be made available to the General Assembly at its next session through the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme;

12. Reiterates the need for stable, adequate and predictable financial resources for the United Nations Environment Programme, and in accordance with resolution 2997(XXVII) underlines the need to consider adequate reflection of all administrative and management costs of the Programme in the context of the United Nations regular budget;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the resource needs of the United Nations Environment Programme and the United Nations Office at Nairobi under review so as to permit the delivery, in an effective manner, of necessary services to the Programme and to the other United Nations organs and organizations in Nairobi.

International environmental governance

In a decision on follow-up to General Assembly resolution 57/251 [YUN 2002, p. 1031], the Governing Council, on 7 February [A/58/25 (dec. 22/17 D)], requested the Executive Director to invite Governments to submit written comments by 31 October regarding the establishment of universal membership of GC/GMEF [YUN 2002, p. 1033] and to submit a report incorporating the comments to the eighth (2004) special session of GC/GMEF. He was asked, in collaboration with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the Global Environment Facility (GEF) (see p. 1045) and other organizations, in compliance with a 2002 Governing Council decision [ibid.], to develop an intergovernmental strategic plan for technology support and capacity-building and to submit a draft strategic plan and a report in 2004.

A June issue paper on the universal membership of GC/GMEF [UNEP/GCSS.VIII/INF/11] was circulated to all Governments together with a letter from the Executive Director seeking their views on the matter.

Environmental Management Group

The Environmental Management Group (EMG), an inter-agency advisory group set up in 1999 to coordinate UN system activities in addressing the major challenges in the UNEP work programme [YUN 1999, p. 974], was reinvigorated and made fully operational in 2003 with the establishment of its permanent secretariat in Geneva; it met several times to develop its programme of work for the short and medium term. Taking into account developments in international cooperation, particularly the outcomes of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821], recent GC/GMEF sessions, the eleventh session of the Commission on Sustainable Development (see p. 842), and the first session of the Governing Council of UN-Habitat (see p. 1078), EMG, in July, considered how it could best contribute to implementing the sustainable development agenda in the areas of environment and human settlements. In line with a call in the World Summit's Johannesburg Plan of Implementation for coordination among international and intergovernmental bodies and processes working on water-related issues, EMG members, in September, provided their views on environmental aspects of water, sanitation and human settlements. The outcomes of that discussion were to be incorporated in a background paper for ministerial-level consultations at the eighth (2004) special session of the Governing Council on that topic.

UNEP activities

UNEP's proposed 2004-2005 programme of work included activities in the five areas of concentration as defined by the Governing Council in a 1998 decision [YUN 1998, p. 982]: environmental assessment and early warning; enhanced coordination of environmental conventions and development of environmental policy instruments; freshwater; technology transfer and industry; and support to Africa. UNEP strengthened coherence and integration in its 2004-2005 work programme by linking programme priorities with environmental monitoring, assessment and early warning; the water and sanitation, energy, health, agriculture and biodiversity (WEHAB) initiative, proposed by the Secretary-General in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1036]; and the promotion of policy integration.

Monitoring and assessment

A January note by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/INF/15] discussed a 2002 proposal to strengthen UNEP's scientific base through the establishment of an intergovernmental panel on global environmental change [YUN 2002, p. 1034]. It stated that the design of the proposed intergovernmental panel as a multidisciplinary advisory organ of GC/GMEF with open-ended membership should be considered in the light of several closely interrelated needs, among them the need to implement fully the 2002 GC/GMEF decision on international environmental governance [ibid., p. 1033]. The panel's mandate would be to provide scientific and technical advice to GC/GMEF regarding implementation of the responsibilities assigned to it by the General Assembly. It would play a key role in keeping under review the world environment situation and in mobilizing the scientific community towards that end. It would act upon requests from GC/GMEF and advise on global and regional issues. The panel would also analyse gaps in the assessment process and consider initiating assessments to cover the gaps.

Governing Council action. On 7 February [A/58/25 (dec. 22/1 I A)], the Governing Council invited Governments, intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and scientific institutions to submit to the Executive Director their views on the likely gaps and types of assessment needs with respect to the environment; how UNEP and other organizations were meeting those needs; and existing options for meeting any needs within UNEP's mandate. They were invited to address scientific credibility, saliency, legitimacy and relevance in the assessment process; interaction between science and policy development; the role of existing institutions; strengthening existing institutions and mechanisms and establishing an intergovernmental panel on global environmental change; links and sectoral integrations; duplication, cooperation, complementarity and added value to the work of other assessment processes, international agencies and multilateral environmental agreements (MEAs); cost-effectiveness and efficiency; and developing country participation and capacity-building. The Executive Director was asked to make submissions publicly available and to prepare a synthesis report in 2004. He was also asked to facilitate an intergovernmental consultation taking into account available funding, transparency, regional balance and developing country participation.

On the same date [dec. 22/1 I B], the Council requested the Executive Director to keep the world environmental situation under review, and provide early warning on emerging environmental issues of international significance by producing annual global environment outlook statements; preparing the comprehensive Global Environment Outlook report series every five years, with the next report for 2007; supporting sub-global integrated environmental assessment processes; supporting thematic assessments on emerging or cross-cutting issues; cooperating with Governments and organizations to develop up-to-date and integrated databases and indicators that provided for early warning, monitoring and assessment; and promoting networking with relevant institutions to enhance the exchange and dissemination of environmental data and information. Governments were urged to provide additional funding to strengthen targeted capacity-building by UNEP in integrated environmental assessment and related data, information and knowledge management, and the identification of emerging issues.

Post-conflict assessments

The Governing Council, on 7 February [dec. 22/1 IV], requested the Executive Director to strengthen UNEP's ability to assess environmental impacts in post-conflict situations and called on Governments to support countries or regions in need of assessments. It invited Governments and other concerned parties to provide UNEP with assistance for conducting post-conflict environmental assessments. The Executive Director was asked to enable UNEP to conduct post-conflict environmental assessments at the request of States and to report to the relevant UN bodies for follow-up; inform Governments of current post-conflict environmental assessment activities; and report to the Governing Council in 2005.

A December report by the Executive Director [UNEP/GCSS.VIII/2] summarized the state of the environment relating to UNEP's activities in environmental assessment and early warning, thematic assessments, assessing the environmental contribution to development, and the state of the environment in various regions. It emphasized activities related to water, sanitation and human settlements, and addressed areas of special geographic focus, taking into account the region where the Council's eighth (2004) special session was to be held (Jeju, Republic of Korea).

UNEP's post-conflict environmental activities included the clean-up of environmental hot spots in Kosovo; an environmental assessment of Afghanistan; a study of the state of the environment in the Occupied Palestinian Territories (see p. 1073); a study on the environmental impacts of the use of depleted uranium in Bosnia and Herzegovina; and the development of an environmental database and analysis service for the United Nations Compensation Commission (see p. 369) to assess claims for environmental damages from the 1990 hostilities in the Gulf region [YUN 1990, p. 189]. In response to requests from several African countries, UNEP was preparing an assessment to be carried out in Africa during 2003-2004. UNEP published a desk study outlining the environmental vulnerabilities in Iraq resulting from years of conflict, the low priority attached to environment by the previous regime and the unintended effects of sanctions imposed in the 1990s (see p. 361); a final report on the environmental assessment in Iraq was envisaged for 2004.

Support to Africa

A January discussion paper of the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/8/Add.1/Rev.1] provided information on: UNEP's support to Africa, including assistance for implementing the NEPAD environment initiative [YUN 2002, p. 1035], which targeted desertification, wetland conservation, invasive alien species, coastal management, global warming, transboundary conservation areas, environmental governance and financing; its work in Africa in the light of the 2002 Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821]; its regional programmes in Africa; and its partnerships for implementation.

UNEP supported the African Ministerial Conference on the Environment (AMCEN) establishing the African Environmental Information Network (AEIN) (see below), and assisted the steering committee in finalizing an action plan for NEPAD's environment initiative. It would organize thematic workshops on the finalization of the action plan until its adoption by the second special session of AMCEN (Maputo, Mozambique, 9-10 June) [UNEP/AMCEN/SS/II/16], prior to the endorsement by the second ordinary session of the African Union (AU) Assembly (Maputo, 10-12 July) [Assembly/AU/dec.6-31(II)]. UNEP would also assist in strengthening the African Ministerial Conference on Water (AMCOW), established as part of the NEPAD initiative, regional institutions and civil society organizations, and AMCEN's operational mechanisms.

In the area of assessment, UNEP launched AEIN, which was aimed at strengthening the capacities of the UNEP Collaborating Centres and some key national institutions, as well as establishing a collaborative institutional framework to support the overall production process for the Africa Environment Outlook report and sub-regional State of the Environment reports, which in turn would provide input into the Global Environment Outlook report.

Regarding shared freshwater resources, UNEP would support the development and implementation of AMCOW's programme of work, the strengthening of river and lake basin authorities, and the promotion of energy self-sufficiency. Other industry and trade-related activities would receive special attention.

In 2003, 35 UNEP/GEF projects devoted exclusively to Africa were approved, with total funding of $60.9 million, including $28.9 million in GEF resources. UNEP supported African countries in the development of the Action Plan for implementation of the NEPAD environment initiative (see above) through a GEF-funded medium-sized project.

Governing Council action. On 7 February [dec. 22/9], the Governing Council requested the Executive Director to: establish working relationships with AU specialized technical committees to facilitate the integration of environmental issues in the work of the institutional dispensation of the AU and NEPAD; work closely with UN and African partners in implementing the 2002 United Nations Declaration on NEPAD, adopted by General Assembly resolution 57/2 [YUN 2002, p. 908]; and continue to assist in developing NEPAD's environment initiative and to support African countries in implementing it. He was asked to support the production of the Africa Environment Outlook report and the establishment of AEIN, as called for by AMCEN in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1035]; the annual celebrations of African Environment Day on 3 March; and AMCOW. The Governing Council also requested the Executive Director, in collaboration with EMG, to support the work of any Economic and Social Council ad hoc advisory group, established in accordance with Council resolution 2002/1 [YUN 2002, p. 919], on the advisory group's request; to develop and promote in Africa understanding of the linkages between poverty, health, trade and the environment; and to mobilize resources to assist African countries, in collaboration with Governments, in the preparations for the conferences of the parties to MEAs. The Governing Council called on African Governments to take primary action and responsibility for the sustainable development of their countries. Governments and the donor community were called on to enhance their support for the implementation of NEPAD and AMCEN priority programmes through, among other things, contributions to the General Trust Fund for AMCEN. The Executive Director was called on to strengthen UNEP collaboration with UN organizations working in Africa and with the United Nations Human Settlements Programme. The Governing Council took note of the progress made by the Executive Director in the revitalization of the 1981 Abidjan Convention for Cooperation in the Protection and Development of the Marine and Coastal Environment of the West and Central African Region [YUN 1981, p. 833] and the 1985 Nairobi Convention for the Protection, Management and Development of the Marine and Coastal Environment of the East African Region [YUN 1985, p. 816] by the successful launch of the African Process on the development and management of the coastal and marine environment, and requested him to strengthen the two conventions. The Executive Director was asked to report to the Committee of Permanent Representatives and the next session of GC/GMEF.

On 7 February [dec. 22/10], the Governing Council called on all Governments, international organizations, donor organizations and major groups to work towards poverty eradication, as committed to in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and towards operationalizing the World Solidarity Fund, which was endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 57/265 [YUN 2002, p. 831]. The Executive Director was requested to develop a strategy to implement those actions within UNEP's mandate and, in collaboration with UNDP and other organizations, particularly NEPAD and AMCEN, to explore opportunities for greater cooperation with the AU on the NEPAD initiative and to provide input on the linkages between poverty and the environment. The Executive Director and AMCEN were asked to continue UNEP's work in promoting greater understanding of those linkages and to assist Governments to integrate environmental decision-making into social and economic policy towards poverty eradication, using the note by the Executive Director on the conceptual framework on poverty and ecosystems [UNEP/GC.22/INF/30/Rev.1] (see p. 1044) as a guide. The Executive Director was also asked, in collaboration with UNDP and other organizations, to operationalize the conceptual framework on poverty and ecosystems, using the Executive Director's note as a guide; to test the approach through country studies with a focus on Africa, working through NEPAD, towards the development of country-specific poverty-environment strategies; and to report to the next GC/GMEF session.

Water policy and strategy

A January discussion paper by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/10/Add.3/Rev.1] on the implementation of the water-related outcomes of the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] outlined current challenges regarding access to safe drinking water and sanitation, the links between the freshwater, coastal and marine environments, the management of coasts, seas and oceans, the special issues facing small island developing States and the response of international forums. It laid out the targets and goals of the water-related outcomes of the World Summit and UNEP's response, and presented questions related to water to be discussed during the ministerial segment of the twenty-second (2003) GC/GMEF session. The report recommended that steps be taken to: enhance implementation of UNEP's water policy and strategy; consolidate UNEP's progress in water assessment by building on achievements; support implementation of the Montreal Declaration on the Protection of the Marine Environment [YUN 2001, p. 965], taking into account the related outcomes of the World Summit; and strengthen UNEP's role in freshwater management.

On 7 February [dec. 22/2 1], the Governing Council decided that UNEP should play an active role in the follow-up to the water-related outcomes of the World Summit, particularly the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821]. It requested the Executive Director to implement UNEP's water policy and strategy and urged him to assist regional bodies and Governments to develop and implement strategies, plans and programmes with regard to integrated river basin, watershed and groundwater management. He was asked to strengthen the freshwater component of the policy and strategy with respect to: the transfer of environmentally sound technologies for water management; integrated river basin, watershed and groundwater management; regional and global assessments of water resources; international and regional cooperation on the environmental aspects of water (freshwater, coastal and marine environment); integrated freshwater-coastal area management; groundwater vulnerability assessment and sustainable groundwater resource management; and ongoing collaboration between UNEP and UN-Habitat in the area of water, including projects on water for cities and industrial waste-water management (see p. 1082). He was further requested to strengthen: the implementation of the Global International Waters Assessment project (see p. 1065); in consultation with Governments, support for the regional implementation of the UNEP water policy and strategy; cooperation with other UN agencies and international and regional organizations; and support for the efforts of MEAs and national Governments when undertaking UNEP activities on the environmental aspects of water. The Executive Director was asked to play an active role in the observance of World Day for Water, 2003 (22 March); the International Year of Freshwater, 2003 (see p. 1033); and the Third World Water Forum and ministerial conference (Kyoto, Osaka and Shiga, Japan, 16-23 March 2003). He was also asked to participate in the follow-up to the 2002 WEHAB initiative [YUN 2002, p. 1036] and the activities of the Millennium Task Force on Water and Sanitation.

The Governing Council decided to review the UNEP water policy and strategy at the twenty-third (2005) GC/GMEF session; for that purpose, the Executive Director should prepare an updated version of the water policy and strategy.

The Executive Director was asked to report in 2005.

The atmosphere

To help reduce greenhouse gas emissions, UNEP promoted sustainable energy through such initiatives as the Sustainable Energy Finance Initiative, a joint venture of UNEP and the Basel Agency for Sustainable Energy launched in October and aimed at encouraging investment in renewable energy and energy efficiency, and the Mediterranean Renewable Energy Programme, a new UNEP initiative supported by Italy, which sought to increase financing for clean energy in the Mediterranean, with an initial focus on Egypt, Morocco and Tunisia.

In response to the 2002 UNEP-sponsored report on the vast haze cloud that appeared seasonally over much of Asia as a result of biomass burning and industrial emissions [YUN 2002, p. 1035], UNEP brought together a team of international scientists to study the impacts of aerosol pollution. The Atmospheric Brown Cloud Project was establishing a network of ground-based monitoring stations to assess the phenomenon; initial results suggested that the amount of sunlight reaching the Earth's surface could be reduced by as much as 15 per cent, affecting monsoon patterns and triggering unseasonal drought and floods across Asia.

Environment and sustainable development

A January policy statement of the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/9] regarding the development of policies on the environment and sustainable development presented information on UNEP's proposed 2004-2005 programme of work. The report stated that the proposed work programme represented UNEP's contribution towards international consensus for action on sustainable development, and that UNEP was committed to enhancing the understanding that sustainable development and environmental security were essential pillars of peace.

By decision 58/550 of 23 December, the General Assembly took note of the report of the Second Committee on environment and sustainable development [A/58/484].

Governing Council action. On 7 February, the Governing Council adopted decisions on UNEP's activities related to the Arctic, least developed countries (LDCs) and small island developing States (SIDS).

The Council, noting the inclusion of concerns relevant to the Arctic in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821], especially those dealing with ocean issues, sustainable use of natural resources, the eradication of poverty among indigenous communities, the impact of climate change, persistent organic pollutants and heavy metals, requested the Executive Director to provide assessments and early warning on emerging issues related to the Arctic environment, in particular its impact on the global environment [dec. 22/11].

Regarding LDCs [dec. 22/12], the Council invited the Executive Director to take steps to ensure that implementation of the Brussels Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, adopted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 770], was fully included in UNEP's programme activities and in its intergovernmental processes within its mandate and resources.

In a decision on SIDS [dec. 22/13], the Governing Council decided to strengthen the institutional capacity of SIDS to achieve the sustainable development goals outlined in the 1994 Barbados Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States [YUN 1994, p. 783] by providing technical and financial support, and to provide support for partnership initiatives within the context of implementation of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821]. The Executive Director was asked to identify appropriate modalities for implementing those objectives and to report in 2004 and to increase funding for UNEP activities related to SIDS during the 2004-2005 biennium, particularly those concerning the preparations for and the implementation of the outcomes of the international review meeting on SIDS, to be held in Mauritius in 2004 (see p. 871). He was also asked to identify appropriate modalities for the effective implementation of the decision's recommendations and to report in 2004.

Follow-up to World Summit on Sustainable Development (2002)

In response to a 2002 Governing Council decision [YUN 2002, p. 1036], the Council had before it a report of the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/5] on UNEP's actions to implement the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, adopted at the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]. UNEP held consultations with UN bodies and agencies and other organizations to provide a coherent contribution from the UN system; environmental policy dialogues were held with civil society organizations. A number of Type II voluntary initiatives—those jointly implemented by Governments, the private sector, civil society and international organizations—involving UNEP constituted the concrete outcome of the coordination and dialogue process. In response to the Secretary-General's WEHAB initiative [YUN 2002, p. 1036], UNEP was tasked to take the lead on biodiversity issues and actively contributed to all other WEHAB areas. UNEP's 2002-2003 programme of work addressed a broad range of activities identified in the Plan of Implementation; following the Summit, further adjustments were made to the work programme to match the Plan's requirements. The proposed 2004-2005 programme of work fully integrated the relevant elements of the Plan with UNEP's main activities and thematic focus (see p. 1038). The Executive Director's report also covered the emerging issue of the interlinkages between the environment and cultural diversity and proposed Governing Council action on that subject as well as on other issues.

On 7 February [dec. 22/16], the Governing Council requested the Executive Director, subject to the availability of voluntary funds, to examine the issue of environment and cultural diversity by, among other measures, conducting a survey, in cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and relevant stakeholders, on the state of current work and relevant developments, with particular attention to human well-being, and to report in 2005.

In a discussion paper [UNEP/GC.22/8 & Corr.1] on regional implementation of the outcomes of the World Summit, the Executive Director said that UNEP was working towards an increased policy dialogue and cooperation at the regional level. The role of regional and subregional ministerial forums and the work of the regional offices with those forums were providing a crucial link between UNEP's policy and programme development and the actual concerns in the regions. To enhance that connection, the involvement of civil society organizations in UNEP's work at the regional level would be strengthened.

The proposed UNEP 2004-2005 programme of work included activities that stemmed from work with regional ministerial forums and aimed to strengthen UNEP's participation in the development and implementation of regional initiatives. It included involvement in NEPAD's environment initiative (see p. 1040); the Latin American and Caribbean Initiative on Sustainable Development; the Arab Initiative for Sustainable Development; the Environment for Europe Conference (Kiev, Ukraine, 21-23 May) (see p. 1018), which addressed strengthening environmental governance structures in the region; and participation in and support for relevant ministerial forums in Asia and the Pacific, including those of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN), the South Asia Cooperative Environment Programme, the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation and the South Pacific Regional Environment Programme.

The Governing Council had before it a note by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/INF/34] containing extracts from the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation that were relevant to regionalization.

On 7 February [dec. 22/21], the Governing Council endorsed the priorities for attention and action in the regions, as contained in the regional annexes to the Executive Director's discussion paper, and requested him to promote and support the work, activities and initiatives of regional and subregional environmental forums, with a view to maximizing their involvement in preparing and implementing GC/GMEF decisions. The Executive Director was asked to ensure the adequate capacity of the regional offices for the UNEP work programme and to respond adequately to the World Summit's call to strengthen and support regional and subregional initiatives and actions, and the interregional aspects of the 1994 Barbados Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States [YUN 1994, p. 783]. He was asked to include in the programme of work, beginning with the 2006-2007 biennium, regional annexes identifying the percentage of the Environment Fund budget from each of the divisions that would be implemented at the regional level, to be presented for a decision at the twenty-third (2005) GC/GMEF session, with preliminary data to be presented to the eighth GC/GMEF special session (2004). The Council requested the Executive Director to establish and strengthen partnerships at the regional and subregional levels with other UN bodies, development banks and other institutions, including civil society groups; it also called on member States to support UNEP's work in the regions.

Also on 7 February [dec. 22/14], the Governing Council welcomed the outcome of the first Environmental Ministerial Meeting of the Economic Cooperation Organization (ECO) (Tehran, Iran, 15 December 2002) and requested the Executive Director to support the subregional environmental initiatives of the ECO region (Western and Central Asia). He was also asked to promote the work of the regional offices and increase their financial capacities for fulfilling the goals of capacity-building and technology transfer to ECO member countries; establish and reinforce linkages and partnerships among other UN bodies, development banks and the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund (IMF)) to enable the regional offices and ECO member countries to deliver the regional UNEP programme of work; and report to the next GC/GMEF meeting. Governments were called on to contribute to UNEP's work concerning regional offices in the ECO region.

A discussion paper presented by the Executive Director described UNEP's activities to contribute to the UN system-wide efforts to eradicate the environmental causes of poverty [UNEP/GC.22/8/Add.3]. It stated that the living resource base provided many of the renewable goods and services that underpinned sustainable development, and the abundance or scarcity of those goods and services was an important factor in poverty eradication. As the living natural resource base was degraded, and options for change were diminished, communities and society became more vulnerable. The paper outlined poverty-related commitments, targets and time frames agreed to at the 2002 World Summit; discussed UNEP's response to those outcomes; presented questions and issues related to poverty and the environment for discussion at the current GC/GMEF session; and recommended action by the Governing Council.

In keeping with a 2001 Governing Council decision [YUN 2001, p. 946], the Executive Director, in a January note [UNEP/GC.22/INF/30/Rev.1], outlined linkages between poverty and the environment and provided a synopsis of "Poverty and Ecosystems: A Conceptual Framework". UNEP envisioned operationalizing the Framework and testing the approach in several country studies, focusing on Africa. The plan called for the initiation of a national dialogue on the poverty-environment links with five countries in Africa. National workshops would be convened, followed by a detailed country assessment exercise, and task forces would carry out assessments and document opportunities to be strengthened and barriers to be overcome. A final report would address specific poverty-environment linkages and discuss possible trade-off issues. The work was scheduled to take three years.

Policy and advisory services

Economics, trade and sustainable development

A January discussion paper on economics, trade and sustainable development [UNEP/GC.22/10/Add.2/Rev.1] outlined the current international debate on the environmental impacts of trade and trade liberalization; the use of economic instruments to achieve environmental objectives in other areas; the role of subsidies in the agriculture, fisheries and energy sectors in contributing to overconsumption and environmentally damaging production and consumption patterns; the relationship between MEAs and the World Trade Organization (WTO); the relationship between the 1994 WTO Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement) [YUN 1994, p. 1475], the environment and the 1992 Convention on Biological Diversity [YUN 1992, p. 683] (see p. 1051); the role of environmental goods and services, including environmentally sustainable technologies, in trade and in achieving environmental objectives and supporting sustainable development; and capacity-building and the provision of technical assistance. The report described UNEP activities relating to economics, trade, investment and finance, as called for by the Governing Council most recently in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 948]. The paper suggested issues for discussion at the Council's 2003 session.

Institution-building

On 7 February [dec. 22/17 B], the Governing Council requested the Executive Director to intensify the provision of policy and advisory services in the areas of capacity- and institution-building, in response to requests and in cooperation with other organizations, for assistance in applying principle 10 of the 1992 Rio Declaration on Environment and Development [YUN 1992, p. 670], which related to public awareness and access to information held by public authorities, public participation in decision-making and access to justice in environmental matters. He was also asked to assess the possibility of promoting, at the national and international levels, the application of principle 10 to determine, among other things, if there was value in initiating an intergovernmental process to prepare global guidelines on the application, and to report in 2005 on progress made in preparing the guidelines. The Governing Council invited Governments and intergovernmental and civil society organizations to participate in the process and to provide financial or other contributions.

Coordination and cooperation

Business and industry

On 7 February [dec. 22/7], the Governing Council, having considered the Executive Director's 2002 report on UNEP's policy responses to tackle emerging environmental problems, in particular those engaging business and industry [YUN 2002, p. 1038], requested member States to submit to the Executive Director elements for guidelines for cooperation between UNEP and business and industry, in order for UNEP to begin developing consistent guidelines. The Executive Director was asked to further develop UNEP's work in that regard and to inform Governments on progress made.

Environmental emergencies

On 7 February [dec. 22/8], the Governing Council invited Governments and relevant UN agencies and bodies, other international organizations and NGOs to cooperate with UNEP in providing assistance to countries, particularly developing countries and countries with economies in transition, to prevent, prepare for and respond to environmental emergencies. It recommended that Governments develop and improve prevention, preparedness and response arrangements to deal with environmental emergencies, and urged them to develop joint contingency arrangements on a regional, subregional or bilateral basis. Governments and international organizations were urged to contribute to the General Trust Fund for Environmental Emergencies, and States were invited to become parties to relevant legal instruments and to implement and enforce them. The Executive Director was requested to: establish a process, with government participation, for regular review of the 2001 Strategic Framework on Emergency Prevention, Preparedness, Assessment, Mitigation and Response [YUN 2001, p. 950] and to facilitate the implementation of its Agenda for Action; develop and pursue, in cooperation with other agencies, programmes on capacity-building with respect to improving the ability of developing countries and countries with economies in transition to prevent, prepare for and respond to environmental emergencies; provide support to refugee-hosting countries in making assessments and rehabilitating environments, including ecosystems and habitats, that had been damaged while receiving and resettling refugees; and report to GC/GMEF in 2005. The Governing Council urged the Executive Director to support the regional offices in developing and implementing capacity-building programmes for dealing with environmental emergencies. It decided that work on capacity-building should focus on those regions most in need of assistance, consistent with the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821].

In 2003, the Joint UNEP/Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) Environmental Unit coordinated responses to the environmental aspects of emergencies resulting from a phenol spill into a river system in Serbia and Montenegro and in its province of Kosovo, a tropical storm in Seychelles, an inland oil spill in Morocco and an oil spill in the port of Karachi, Pakistan. The fifth meeting of the Advisory Group on Environmental Emergencies (AGEE) (Geneva, 14 May) reviewed the work of the Joint Unit and provided guidance on areas for development and future activities. A joint meeting of AGEF and the UNEP Awareness and Preparedness for Emergencies at Local Level (APEL) programme (15 May) was dedicated to the implementation of the Partnership on an Integrated Approach to Prevention, Preparedness for and Response to Environmental Emergencies, launched in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1039] during the World Summit. On 16 May, the APELL Senior-level Expert Advisory Group discussed implementation of its programme and improvement of coordination with partners.

Global Environment Facility

The Global Environment Facility (GEF), a joint programme of UNDP, UNEP and the World Bank established in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 505] to help solve global environmental problems, was the designated financial mechanism for the 1992 Convention on Biological Diversity [YUN 1992, p. 683] (see p. 1051), the 1992 United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change [ibid., p. 681] (see p. 1049), and the 1994 United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, particularly in Africa [YUN 1994, p. 944], and served as the interim financial mechanism for the 2001 Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants (POPs) in those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, particularly in Africa [YUN 2001, p. 971] (see p. 1072), pending the Convention's entry into force.

At year's end, the cumulative UNEP/GEF work programme was financed to $710 million, including $381 million in GEF resources, involving activities in more than 150 countries. Through GEF enabling activities related to biodiversity, climate change, POPs and capacity-building needs assessment for global environmental management, UNEP assisted 138 countries to meet their obligations to the global environmental conventions and build capacity to implement them.

Ninety-seven new UNEP/GEF initiatives were approved in 2003, with funding of $183 million, including $90 million in GEF grant financing.

UNDP action. The UNDP/United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) Executive Board, following a briefing on GEF held during its first regular session (New York, 20-23 January), decided, on 23 January [E/2003/35 (dec. 2003/6)], that delegations needed more time to review with their capitals the Beijing Declaration adopted by the Second (2002) GEF Assembly [YUN 2002, p. 1039], and proposed that the item be taken up at its annual session (New York, 6-9 June).

At that session, the Board considered a March note by the UNDP Administrator [DP/2003/23], which set forth amendments to the Instrument for the Establishment of the Restructured Global Environment Facility, approved by the 2002 GEF Assembly, consequent upon its decision, as contained in the Beijing Declaration, to add two new GEF focal areas (land degradation and POPs). The note also outlined the implications for UNDP of those two new focal areas.

On 19 June [dec. 2003/20], the Executive Board adopted the amendments and requested the UNDP Administrator to transmit the decision to the Chief GEF Executive Officer/Chairperson.

Governing Council action. On 7 February [dec. 22/19], the UNEP Governing Council adopted the amendments to the Instrument for the Establishment of the Restructured Global Environment Facility. The Executive Director was requested to transmit the decision to the GEF Chief Executive Officer/Chairperson.

Memorandums of understanding

In 2003, UNEP signed memorandums of understanding with the South Asia Cooperative Environment Programme (February), under which UNEP would assist in capacity-building activities and in the implementation of MEAs through regional cooperation and promote public awareness; with the Foundation for Environmental Education (March), to provide a framework for long-term cooperation on education, training and public awareness for sustainable development globally; with the Philippine Institute of Industrial Engineers (August), to foster cleaner/sustainable production practices as a main strategy for industry; and with the World Conservation Union (September), to provide a framework for the work of the World Database on Protected Areas Consortium.

Participation of civil society

The UNEP Tunza children and youth strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1040], a six-year plan to create a global movement in which children and youth would participate in activities and be given a voice in policy-making to help improve the global environment, was endorsed by the Governing Council (see below) and launched during the year. The Tunza quarterly magazine was also launched. UNEP published Tunza: Acting for a Better World, a book containing information on environmental issues, tips on how to carry out community-based environmental projects and advice from young people. The first Tunza International Youth Conference (Dubna, Russian Federation, 25-27 August) resulted in a series of regional action plans, 10 commitments on sustainable development and the compilation of a how-to-do online database and action kit. Delegates discussed the long-term strategy and elected members of the Tunza Youth Advisory Council to advise UNEP on better ways of engaging young people in UNEP's work. A further Tunza event was Eco-Innovate (Sydney, Australia, 14-18 July), a regional conference for young entrepreneurs in the Asia-Pacific region.

In a January report [UNEP/GC.22/3/Add.3/Rev.1], the Executive Director presented UNEP's long-term strategy for sport and the environment, aimed at integrating environmental ethics and values at all levels of sport, including recreational sport. The core objectives of the strategy, which complemented the Tunza strategy, under an overall concept called "Michezo" (meaning "sports" and "play" in Kishwahili, a subregional language in Eastern Africa), were to promote the integration of environmental considerations of sports; to use the popularity of sports to promote environmental awareness and respect for the environment among the public, especially young people; and to promote the development of environmentally friendly sports facilities and the manufacturing of environmentally friendly sporting goods.

Governing Council action. On 7 February, the Governing Council decided that the Committee of Permanent Representatives (see p. 1037) should continue, as mandated [YUN 2002, p. 1039], to enhance the engagement of civil society in UNEP's work in considering the amendment of rule 69 of the Council's rules of procedure and any consequential amendments of the Rules, taking into account the evolving relationship between civil society and the UN system and the ongoing UN reform process [dec. 22/18 I].

The Council endorsed the Tunza strategy and decided to implement it [dec. 22/18 II]. The Executive Director was invited to seek additional private sector funding to ensure implementation as well as extrabudgetary resources to implement the strategy, with support to developing countries for local training programmes, and to present a midterm progress report on the implementation of the strategy to GC/GMEF in 2006 and a final report in 2009. Governments were invited to develop programmes to sensitize and educate youth in sustainable development, particularly in environmental matters.

Noting the links between the Tunza and Michezo programmes and the fact that the Executive Director had consolidated them, the Governing Council endorsed the activities contained in UNEP's sport and environment programme strategy [dec. 22/18 III]. It requested the Executive Director to explore ways to expand UNEP's efforts in sport and the environment and to increase resources from the Environment Fund (see below) to the programme and to seek extrabudgetary resources. Governments were asked to inform UNEP of any sport and environment activities being undertaken in their countries so that UNEP could share the information through its sport and environment web site.

General Assembly issues

The Executive Director provided information on issues arising from resolutions adopted by the General Assembly in 2002 that called for action by, or were of relevance to, UNEP [UNEP/GC.22/INF/7].

Global Environment Outlook Year Book

In response to Governing Council decision 22/1 I B (see p. 1039), UNEP published the Global Environment Outlook (GEO) GEO Year Book 2003. An overall objective of the Year Book was to present an analytical overview of issues which had most influenced the environment and might continue to be major factors.

UNEP secretariat

OIOS audit and inspection services

In September, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the ninth annual Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) report [A/58/364], covering activities from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003, including an audit of UNEP's publication function. The audit showed that UNEP did not have a viable approach to managing its publications and did not know whether the $10 million reported as expenditures on publications for 2000-2001 was an accurate figure or whether that level of effort met its needs and those of its clients. To address those issues, UNEP was analysing and revising its publication planning, monitoring and budgeting mechanisms to assess the relevance, usefulness, value and affordability of UNEP publications.

Regarding the audit of the UNEP World Conservation Monitoring Centre, OIOS was concerned that the Centre had not been established in compliance with UN regulations and rules, as UNEP staff had not adequately consulted relevant UN and UNEP regulations and rules and responsible offices, including the UN Office of Legal Affairs. Action was under way to implement the audit recommendations.

Administrative and budgetary matters

Environment Fund

Following consideration of the Executive Director's report on the proposed 2004-2005 biennial programme and support budget [UNEP/GC.22/6] and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [UNEP/GC.22/6/Add.1], the Governing Council, on 7 February [dec. 22/20], approved appropriations for the Environment Fund in the amounts of: $110 million for the programme of work; $15 million for the biennial budget; and $5 million for the Fund programme reserve. It noted that an increase in funding from the UN regular budget for the United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON) and/or UNEP in 2004-2005 would decrease the requirement under the Environment Fund biennial support budget, and the released resources would be reallocated for programme activities and/or the Environment Fund financial reserve. The Council requested the Executive Director to ensure that all Fund programme activities were provided with resources from the Fund. It reconfirmed the Executive Director's authority to reallocate resources between programmes up to 20 per cent of the appropriation to which the resources were reallocated, and urged him to increase the financial reserve to $20 million as and when carry-over resources became available. While welcoming the recent increase in the number of contributors, the Council expressed concern over the fluctuation in the overall contributions to the Fund and in the number of countries that had contributed during 1999-2002. It requested the Executive Director to broaden the donor base, and the Committee of Permanent Representatives to consult with him on ways to provide the Council and the Committee with information on the distribution of work programme activities at the regional level. The Council noted the launching of a pilot phase for a voluntary indicative scale of contributions aimed at enhancing predictability in financing and at broadening the base of contributions. It requested the Executive Director to include in a report on UNEP's overall financial situation, as called for by GC/GMEF [YUN 2002, p. 1033], an analysis of the 2003 pilot phase.

The Executive Director was requested to provide financial details of work programmes to Governments and to make available to Governments, twice yearly, information on implementation of the work programme. He was also asked to ensure that earmarked contributions to UNEP, apart from those for which UNEP acted as treasurer, funded activities that were in line with the work programme. The Council authorized him to enter into commitments not exceeding $20 million for 2006-2007 Fund programme activities. It requested him to prepare a programme of work consisting of Fund programme activities amounting to $120 million and to adapt that amount, if necessary and in consultation with the Committee of Permanent Representatives; to submit a finalized draft budget and work programme for 2006-2007 for approval by GC/GMEF in 2005; and to include in the work programme, beginning with the 2006-2007 biennium, regional annexes identifying the percentage of the Environment Fund budget from each division that would be implemented at the regional level, and to present that information for a decision in 2005, and preliminary data in 2004.

Trust funds

A note by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/INF/8] contained programmatic descriptions and expenditures of UNEP trust funds for the 2000-2001, 2002-2003 and 2004-2005 bienniums.

On 7 February [dec. 22/23 I], the Governing Council approved the establishment of 11 trust funds and the extension of 32 others.

For the 98 active UNEP trust funds (as at 15 November 2002), revised projections of income and expenditures for 2002 and 2003 totalled $557.99 million and $499.68 million, respectively.

Financial reserve loan

On 7 February [dec. 22/23 II], the Governing Council noted a report of the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/7 & Corr.1,2], which, in accordance with a 2001 Council decision [YUN 2001, p. 953], provided information on the loan from the Environment Fund financial reserve and the progress achieved in the first phase of the construction of additional office accommodation at UNON [YUN 2002, p. 1041]. It requested the Executive Director to report to the Committee of Permanent Representatives on further progress of loan drawdowns and the status of the construction project, and to report to GC/GMEF in 2005.

Board of Auditors report

At its twenty-second session, GC/GMEF had before it the report of the Board of Auditors, which included the financial report and audited financial statements of the UNEP Fund for the 2000-2001 biennium [A/57/5/Add.6 & Corr.1]. UNEP's financial statements covered the major funds, including the Environment Fund, general trust funds, the Multilateral Fund for the Implementation of the Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer (see p. 1050), technical cooperation trust funds and other trust funds. The Environment Fund reported a total income of $95.1 million against expenditures of $106.33 million, showing a net shortfall of $11.23 million (12 per cent), as compared with a net excess of income over expenditures of $14.59 million in 1998-1999. The Multilateral Fund reported a shortfall of income relative to expenditures of $32.24 million, compared with an excess of income over expenditures of $102.95 million in 1998-1999.

The Board made recommendations to improve investment procedures, update the recording of bank reconciling items, ensure agreement of databases and assess the efficiency and effectiveness of administrative arrangements with the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean.

Financial rules

On 7 February [dec. 22/22], the Governing Council, having considered the Executive Director's report containing proposals for a revision of the Financial Rules of the UNEP Fund, the General Procedures governing the Operations of the Fund, the general guidelines for the execution of projects and the institutional and financial arrangements for international environment co-operation [UNEP/GC.22/7 & Corr.1,2], approved the proposed revisions.

Indicative scale of contributions

A January note by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/INF/20/Rev.1] contained information on the proposed indicative scale of contributions for a pilot phase. The pilot phase using the indicative scale would give UNEP experience in further financing its programme and broadening the base of donors, as well as in preparing a detailed report for 2004. The note discussed UNEP's financial situation in 2000-2001 and 2002-2003 and provided a comparative analysis of systems for assessing contributions used by UN organizations and the environmental conventions under UNEP and the first comments by countries on the pilot phase.

International conventions and mechanisms

Implementation of environment conventions

The Governing Council, on 7 February [dec. 22/17 II C], authorized the Executive Director to transmit a chapter of his report on the status of international environment conventions and pro-TOCOLS [UNEP/GC.22/3/Add.2] and his note on changes to the status of ratification of and/or accession to those treaties [UNEP/GC.22/INF/12], together with comments by delegations, to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth (2003) session. The chapter mentioned listed relevant instruments that entered into force during the period from 1 January 2001 to 20 October 2002 and new conventions and protocols concluded during that period.

Climate change convention

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), which opened for signature in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 681] and entered into force in 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 938], stood at 187 States and the European Community (EC).

At year's end, 119 States and the EC were parties to the Kyoto Protocol to the Convention [YUN 1997, p. 1048]. During the year, six States ratified the Protocol and 13 acceded to it.

Conference of Parties

The ninth session of the Conference of the Parties to UNFCCC (Milan, Italy, 1-12 December) [FCCC/CP/2003/6 & Add.1.2] adopted new emission reporting guidelines based on the good-practice guidance for land use, land-use change and forestry provided by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (see p. 1056); the emission reports were due in 2005. The Conference also adopted modalities and procedures for afforestation and reforestation project activities under the Kyoto Protocol's clean development mechanism (CDM) (see below). Other decisions related to: GEF's report to the Conference; an extension of the mandate of the Least Developed Countries Expert Group; guidelines for the preparation of national adaptation programmes of action; capacity-building; various aspects of the impacts of, and vulnerability and adaptation to, climate change, and of mitigation; global climate observing systems; and issues relating to the technical review of greenhouse gas inventories from UNFCCC parties included in annex I (industrialized countries). In decisions on national communications from UNFCCC parties, the Conference welcomed information from parties included in annex I on policies and measures to mitigate climate change and requested the secretariat to propose the information contained in all initial national communications submitted before 1 April 2005 for consideration at its eleventh (2005) session. Regarding the Kyoto Protocol, the Conference adopted decisions on technical guidance on methodologies for adjustments under the Proto-col's article 5, issues relating to the implementation of article 8 and forest management activities in Croatia under article 3. Further decisions dealt with the Convention's financial mechanism, the operation of its Special Climate Change and Least Developed Countries Funds [YUN 2001, p. 954], and other administrative and budgetary questions.

In September, the Executive Board of CDM issued its second annual report [FCCC/CP/2003/2 & Add.1], covering the period from November 2002 to July 2003. At its ninth session, the Conference of the Parties adopted a decision providing guidance to the Board.

The Subsidiary Body for Scientific and Technological Advice (SBSTA) [FCCC/SBSTA/2003/10 & Add.1-3] and the Subsidiary Body for Implementation (SBI) [FCCC/SBI/2003/8] held their eighteenth sessions (Bonn, Germany, 4-13 June). The nineteenth sessions of SBSTA (1-9 December) [FCCC/SBSTA/2003/15] and SBI (1-10 December) [FCCC/SBI/2003/19] were held in Milan.

Note by Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/257 [YUN 2002, p. 1043], the Secretary-General, in August [A/58/308], transmitted the report of the UNFCCC Executive Secretary on the work of the eighth (2002) session of the Conference of the Parties [YUN 2002, p. 1042].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/484/Add.6], adopted resolution 58/243 without vote [agenda item 94 (f)].

Protection of global climate for present and future generations of mankind

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/222 of 22 December 1999, its decision 55/443 of 20 December 2000 and its resolutions 56/199 of 21 December 2001 and 57/257 of 20 December 2002 and other resolutions relating to the protection of the global climate for present and future generations of mankind,

Recalling also the provisions of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, including the acknowledgement that the global nature of climate change calls for the widest possible cooperation by all countries and their participation in an effective and appropriate international response, in accordance with their common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capabilities and their social and economic conditions,

Recalling further the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development, the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") and the Delhi Ministerial Declaration on Climate Change and Sustainable Development, adopted by the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change at its eighth session, held in New Delhi from 23 October to 1 November 2002,

Noting that one hundred and eighty-eight States and one regional economic integration organization have ratified the Convention,

Remaining deeply concerned that all countries, in particular developing countries, including the least developed countries and small island developing States, face increased risks from the negative impacts of climate change,

Noting the work of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change and the need to build and enhance scientific and technological capabilities, inter alia, through continuing support to the Panel for the exchange of scientific data and information, especially in developing countries,

Noting also that, to date, the Kyoto Protocol to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change has attracted one hundred and nineteen ratifications, including from parties mentioned in annex I to the Convention, who account for 44.2 per cent of emissions,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which heads of State and Government resolved to make every effort to ensure the entry into force of the Kyoto Protocol, preferably by the tenth anniversary of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in 2002, and to embark on the required reduction in emissions of greenhouse gases,

Taking note of the report of the Executive Secretary of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change on the work of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention,

1. Calls upon States to work cooperatively towards achieving the ultimate objective of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change;

2. Notes that States that have ratified the Kyoto Protocol to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change strongly urge States that have not already done so to ratify it in a timely manner;

3. Notes with interest the preparations undertaken for the implementation of the flexible mechanisms established by the Kyoto Protocol;

4. Notes the ongoing work of the liaison group of the secretariats and officers of the relevant subsidiary bodies of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa, and the Convention on Biological Diversity, and encourages cooperation to promote complementarities among the three secretariats while respecting their independent legal status;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to make provisions for the sessions of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and its subsidiary bodies in his proposal for the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005;

6. Invites the Executive Secretary of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the work of the Conference of the Parties;

7. Invites the conferences of the parties to the multilateral environmental conventions, when setting the dates of their meetings, to take into consideration the schedule of meetings of the General Assembly and the Commission on Sustainable Development so as to ensure the adequate representation of developing countries at those meetings;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the sub-item entitled "Protection of global climate for present and future generations of mankind".

Vienna Convention and Montreal Protocol

As at 31 December, 186 States and the EC were parties to the 1985 Vienna Convention for the Protection of the Ozone Layer [YUN 1985, p. 804], which entered into force in 1988 [YUN 1988, p. 810]. In 2003, the Cook Islands and Niue acceded to the Convention and to the Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer.

Parties to the Montreal Protocol, which was adopted in 1987 [YUN 1987, p. 686], numbered 185 States and the EC; to the 1990 Amendment to the Protocol, 169 and the EC; to the 1992 Amendment, 157 and the EC; to the 1997 Amendment, 111 and the EC; and to the 1999 Amendment, 62 and the EC.

The Fifteenth Meeting of the Parties to the Montreal Protocol (Nairobi, Kenya, 10-14 November) [UNEP/OzL.Pro.15/9] adopted decisions on: the production of ozone-depleting substances (ODS) for basic domestic needs; obligations of parties to the 1999 Amendment to the Protocol [YUN 1999, p. 986] with respect to hydrochlorofluorocarbons; promotion of the closure of essential-use nominations for metered-dose inhalers; the use of controlled substances as process agents; the status of destruction technologies for ODS and the "Code of Good Housekeeping", a set of measures on reducing ODS releases, which was annexed to the Meeting's report; the handling and destruction of foams containing ODS; a plan of action to modify regulations mandating the use of halons on new airframes; the use of methyl bromide for treating high-moisture dates; the report of the Executive Committee of the Multilateral Fund for the Implementation of the Montreal Protocol [UNEP/OzL.Pro.15/8]; South Africa's application for GEF technical and financial assistance; GEF assistance to countries with economies in transition; terms of reference for a study of the Protocol's financial mechanism (the Multilateral Fund) and for the Scientific Assessment Panel, the Environmental Effects Panel and the Technology and Economic Assessment Panel; and compliance issues.

Convention on air pollution

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the 1979 Convention on Long-range Transboundary Air Pollution [YUN 1979, p. 710], which entered into force in 1983 [YUN 1983, p. 645], remained at 48 States and the EC. Eight protocols to the Convention dealt with the programme for monitoring and evaluation of the pollutants in Europe (1984), the reduction of sulphur emissions or their transboundary fluxes by at least 30 per cent (1985), the control of emissions of nitrogen oxides or their transboundary fluxes (1988), the control of volatile organic compounds or their transboundary fluxes (1991), further reduction of sulphur emissions (1984), heavy metals (1998), persistent organic pollutants (POPs) (1998) and the abatement of acidification, eutrophication and ground-level ozone (1999).

The twenty-first session of the Executive Body for the Convention (Geneva, 15-18 December) [ECE/EB.AIR/79 & Add.1,2] established a task force on POPs to address the technical needs of the reviews required by the 1998 Protocol on POPs, which entered into force in October. It adopted decisions on compliance and the facilitation of participation in the Convention of countries with economies in transition, and its 2004 work plan.

Convention on Biological Diversity

As at 31 December, 187 States and the EC were parties to the 1992 Convention on Biological Diversity [YUN 1992, p. 638], which entered into force in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 210]. During 2003, Thailand ratified the Convention.

At year's end, 78 States and the EC were parties to the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety, which was adopted in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 973]. During the year, 27 States ratified the Protocol, 12 States acceded to it and France approved it. The Protocol entered into force on 11 September, 90 days after the deposit of the fiftieth instrument of ratification. The first meeting of the Conference of the Parties serving as the Meeting of the Parties to the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety was scheduled to take place in February 2004.

The eighth (10-14 March) [UNEP/CBD/COP/7/3] and ninth (10-14 November) [UNEP/CBD/COP/7/4] meetings of the Subsidiary Body on Scientific, Technical and Technological Advice, both held in Montreal, adopted recommendations for consideration by the seventh (2004) meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention. Recommendations on mountain biodiversity were among those adopted by the meetings.

The second meeting of the Working Group on Access and Benefit-Sharing (Montreal, 1-5 December) [UNEP/CBD/COP/7/6] adopted recommendations for consideration by the seventh (2004) Conference of the Parties on terms of reference for negotiations regarding an international regime on access and benefit-sharing and measures to support compliance. The Open-ended Intersessional Meeting on the Multi-year Programme of Work of the Conference of the Parties up to 2010 (Montreal, 17-20 March) [UNEP/CBD/COP/7/5] adopted recommendations on the outcome of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] as it related to the Convention process; the Convention's contribution to the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51]; the Commission on Sustainable Development process (see p. 838); and other issues. The meeting "2010—The Global Biodiversity Challenge" (London, 21-23 May) [UNEP/CBD/COP/7/INF/22], organized by the Convention secretariat in partnership with the UNEP World Conservation Monitoring Centre and UNDP, considered approaches for measuring biodiversity loss; reviewed the 2010 target for a significant reduction in the rate of biodiversity loss, adopted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1045]; and identified initiatives in addressing the loss.

Note by Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/260 [YUN 2002, p. 1046], the Secretary-General transmitted, in July [A/58/191], a report of the Executive Secretary of the Convention on principal activities undertaken within the framework of the Convention and ongoing work and cooperation with the Assembly and other UN institutions.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/18 [YUN 2002, p. 1062], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [E/CN.15/2003/8 & Corr.1 & Add.1] to supplement the 2002 progress report [YUN 2002, p. 1045] on implementation of Council resolution 2001/12 [YUN 2001, p. 968] regarding illicit trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna (see p. 1069) and illicit access to genetic resources. With regard to the latter, the report discussed the legal framework dealing with illicit access to genetic material and the possible involvement of organized criminal groups. The Secretary-General concluded that, while organized crime did not yet seem to be involved in that area, such involvement might not be reported; greater detection and reporting efforts were desirable to provide the basis for the establishment of a repository of information and the creation of a database. Biotechnology and pharmaceutical companies carried some responsibility for ensuring that organized crime was not able to infiltrate and influence their industries; a key component would be the creation of a compliance system to ensure that the companies had no links to organized crime or with other individuals or groups engaged in biopiracy.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/484/Add.3], adopted resolution 58/212 without vote [agenda item 94 (c)].

Convention on Biological Diversity

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/201 of 20 December 2000, 56/197 of 21 December 2001 and 57/253 and 57/260 of 20 December 2002,

Reiterating that the Convention on Biological Diversity is the key international instrument for the conservation and sustainable use of biological resources and the fair and equitable sharing of benefits arising from the use of genetic resources,

Recalling the World Summit on Sustainable Development commitments to pursue a more efficient and coherent implementation of the three objectives of the Convention and the achievement by 2010 of a significant reduction in the current rate of loss of biological diversity, which will require action at all levels, including the implementation of national biodiversity strategies and action plans and the provision of new and additional financial and technical resources to developing countries,

Reaffirming the urgency to recognize, subject to national legislation, the rights of local and indigenous communities that are holders of traditional knowledge, innovations and practices, and, with the approval and involvement of the holders of such knowledge, innovations and practices, to develop and implement benefit-sharing mechanisms, on mutually agreed terms, for the use of such knowledge, innovations and practices,

Expressing its deep appreciation for the generous offer of the Government of Malaysia to host the seventh meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity and the first meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention serving as the meeting of the Parties to the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety, to be held at Kuala Lumpur, respectively, from 9 to 20 February and from 23 to 27 February 2004,

1. Takes note of the report of the Executive Secretary of the Convention on Biological Diversity, submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session;

2. Notes the outcome of the open-ended inter-session meeting on the multi-year programme of work of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity up to 2010, held at Montreal, Canada, from 17 to 20 March 2003;

3. Notes also the outcomes of the eighth and ninth meetings of the Subsidiary Body on Scientific, Technical and Technological Advice of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, held at Montreal, Canada, from 10 to 14 March and from 10 to 14 November 2003;

4. Reiterates the World Summit on Sustainable Development commitment to negotiate within the framework of the Convention on Biological Diversity, bearing in mind the Bonn Guidelines on Access to Genetic Resources and Fair and Equitable Sharing of the Benefits Arising out of their Utilization, an international regime to promote and safeguard the fair and equitable sharing of benefits arising out of the utilization of genetic resources;

5. Reiterates also the World Summit on Sustainable Development commitment to promote the wide implementation of and continued work on the Bonn Guidelines, as an input to assist the parties when developing and drafting legislative, administrative or policy measures on access and benefit-sharing as well as contract and other arrangements under mutually-agreed terms for access and benefit-sharing;

6. Invites the countries that have not yet done so to ratify the Convention on Biological Diversity;

7. Welcomes the entry into force of the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety to the Convention on Biological Diversity, on 11 September 2003, and the convening of the first meeting of the Conference of the Parties serving as the meeting of the Parties to the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety, and invites the parties to the Convention that have not yet ratified or acceded to the Protocol to consider doing so;

8. Emphasizes that the effective implementation of the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety will require full support from parties and relevant international organizations, and further urges parties to facilitate capacity-building in biosafety in developing countries as well as countries with economies in transition, including to develop and strengthen national capacities for making the required information available to and interacting with the Biosafety Clearing House;

9. Invites countries to consider ratifying or acceding to the International Treaty on Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture;

10. Encourages developed countries parties to the Convention to contribute to the relevant trust funds of the Convention, in particular so as to enhance the full participation of the developing countries parties in all its activities;

11. Urges parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity to facilitate the transfer of technology for the effective implementation of the Convention in accordance with its provisions;

12. Underlines the need for increased financial and technical resources for the implementation of the Convention on Biological Diversity and the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety by developing countries as well as countries with economies in transition, and in this regard welcomes the successful and substantial third replenishment of the Global Environment Facility;

13. Takes note of the ongoing work of the liaison group of the secretariats and offices of the relevant subsidiary bodies of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa, and the Convention on Biological Diversity, and further encourages continuing cooperation in order to promote complementarities among the secretariats, while respecting their independent legal status;

14. Stresses the importance of harmonizing the reporting requirements of the biodiversity-related conventions while respecting their independent legal status;

15. Invites the Executive Secretary of the Convention on Biological Diversity to continue reporting to the General Assembly on the ongoing work regarding the Convention, including its Cartagena Protocol;

16. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the sub-item entitled "Convention on Biological Diversity".

Convention to combat desertification

In 2003, Bhutan, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Lithuania, the Russian Federation and Timor-Leste acceded to the 1994 United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, particularly in Africa [YUN 1994, p. 944], which entered into force in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 958], bringing the total number of parties to 191.

The Conference of the Parties, at its sixth session (Havana, Cuba, 25 August–5 September) [ICCD/COP(6)/11 & Corr.1 & Add.1], decided to accept GEF as a financial mechanism of the Convention. It resolved to strengthen implementation of the Convention in line with the outcome of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] through action to: mobilize adequate and predictable financial resources; formulate national action programmes (NAPs) as priority tools; encourage the secretariats of UNFCCC (see p. 1049), the 1992 Convention on Biological Diversity [ibid., p. 683] (see p. 1051) and the Convention to Combat Desertification to enhance synergies; integrate measures to prevent and combat desertification and mitigate the effects of drought; provide affordable access to information to improve monitoring and early warning; and improve the sustainability of grassland resources. Other decisions related to the secretariat's activities and implementation by affected country parties; the Global Mechanism, which mobilized resources to combat land degradation and poverty; implementation of the 2000 Declaration on commitments to enhance the Convention's implementation [YUN 2000, p. 976]; strengthening of relationships with other conventions, international organizations, institutions and agencies; traditional knowledge; benchmarks and indicators; early warning systems; the Land Degradation Assessment in Drylands and the Millennium Ecosystem Assessment (see p. 1055); and administrative issues. The seventh session was scheduled for October 2005 in Bonn. The Conference adopted the Havana Declaration on the Implementation of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification, which, among other things, invited all affected parties to the Convention to integrate the Convention in national strategies for sustainable development and include programmes to combat desertification in policies on land, water, rural development, forests, energy, education and culture.

The second session of the Committee for the Review of the Implementation of the Convention (Havana, 26–29 August) had before it a summary of the reports submitted by States parties up until 2002 [ICCD/CRIC(2)/3]; a note on developments regarding the operational programme on sustainable land management, approved by the GEF Council in May [ICCD/CRIC(2)/6]; a note describing progress by affected country parties to implement the Convention [ICCD/CRIC(2)/2]; and further notes on the Global Mechanism [ICCD/CRIC(2)/4 & 5]. The Conference of the Parties adopted the programme of work for the Committee's third session, to be held in Bonn in 2004.

The Committee on Science and Technology (Havana, 26–29 August), a Conference subsidiary body, considered a preliminary report of the 19-member group of experts (Bonn, 2–7 June) [ICCD/COP(6)/CST/3], which reviewed desertification activities from November 2002 to May 2003, and reports on traditional knowledge [ICCD/COP(6)/CST/4], benchmarks and indicators [ICCD/COP(6)/CST/5], early warning systems [ICCD/COP(6)/CST/6] and other issues. The Committee submitted recommendations to the Conference.

Report of Secretary-General. As requested in General Assembly resolution 57/259 [YUN 2002, p. 1048], the Secretary-General, in July [A/58/158], reported on the implementation of the Convention, including the work of the Committee for the Review of the Implementation of the Convention in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1047] and measures called for in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821] to strengthen the prevention and/or reduction of land degradation, rehabilitation of partly degraded land and reclamation of desertified land in semi-arid and dry sub-humid areas.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/484/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/242 without vote [agenda item 94 (b)].

Implementation of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 56/196 of 21 December 2001 and 57/259 of 20 December 2002 and other resolutions relating to the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa,

Recognizing the strong commitment of the international community, demonstrated at the World Summit on Sustainable Development and the Second Assembly of the Global Environment Facility, to make the Faciity available as a financial mechanism of the Convention, pursuant to article 21 of the Convention,

Recognizing also the role of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention, as the highest decision-making body, in providing guidance on matters regarding the implementation of the Convention and in encouraging financial mechanisms to seek to maximize the availability of resources for affected developing countries, while respecting the respective mandates of the mechanisms,

Reaffirming that the Convention is an important tool for poverty eradication, particularly in Africa, and recognizing the importance of the implementation of the Convention for meeting the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Reaffirming also the universal membership of the Convention, and acknowledging that desertification and drought are problems of a global dimension, in that they affect all regions of the world,

Expressing its deep appreciation and gratitude to the Government of Cuba for hosting the sixth session of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention in Havana from 25 August to 5 September 2003,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes the decision of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa, at its sixth session, to accept the Global Environment Facility as a financial mechanism of the Convention, pursuant to article 21 of the Convention;

3. Also welcomes the decision of the Council of the Global Environment Facility at its meeting, held in Washington, D.C., from 14 to 16 May 2003, to establish a new operational programme on sustainable land management, and, in that regard, urges the Executive Secretary, in collaboration with the Managing Director of the Global Mechanism, to consult with the Chief Executive Officer and Chairman of the Global Environment Facility, with a view to preparing and agreeing upon a memorandum of understanding, as mandated by the Conference of the Parties, for the consideration of and adoption by the Conference of Parties and the Council of the Global Environment Facility;

4. Further welcomes the outcome of the Second Assembly of the Global Environment Facility, held in Beijing from 16 to 18 October 2002, in particular the decision to designate land degradation as a new focal area of the Facility, which will, inter alia, support the implementation of the Convention;

5. Notes with appreciation the increased number of affected developing country parties that have adopted their national, subregional and regional action programmes, and urges affected developing countries that have not yet done so to accelerate the process of elaboration and adoption of their action programmes, with a view to finalizing them as soon as possible;

6. Invites affected developing countries to place the implementation of their action programmes to combat desertification high among their priorities in their dialogue with their development partners;

7. Calls upon affected parties, with the collaboration of relevant multilateral organizations, including the Global Environment Facility implementation agencies, to integrate desertification into their strategies for sustainable development;

8. Urges the international community to take effective measures for the implementation of the Convention through bilateral and multilateral cooperation programmes;

9. Urges the United Nations funds and programmes, the Bretton Woods institutions, the donor countries and other development agencies to integrate actions in support of the Convention in their strategies to support the achievement of internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

10. Welcomes the strengthened cooperation between the secretariat of the Convention and the Global Mechanism through the elaboration and implementation of a joint work plan aimed at maximizing the impact of resources and actions, avoiding duplication and overlap and tapping into the expertise, added value and network of each organization in a collaborative manner as action programmes are implemented;

11. Invites all parties to pay promptly and in full the contributions required for the core budget of the Convention for the biennium 2002-2003, and urges all parties that have not yet paid their contributions for the year 1999 and/or the biennium 2000-2001 to do so as soon as possible in order to ensure continuity in the cash flow required to finance the ongoing work of the Conference of the Parties, the secretariat and the Global Mechanism;

12. Calls upon Governments, and invites multilateral financial institutions, regional development banks, regional economic integration organizations and all other interested organizations, as well as non-governmental organizations and the private sector, to contribute generously to the General Fund, the Supplementary Fund and the Special Fund, in accordance with the relevant paragraphs of the financial rules of the Conference of the Parties, and welcomes the financial support already provided by some countries;

13. Takes note of Conference of the Parties decision 23/COP.6 of 5 September 2003 on the programme and budget for the biennium 2004-2005, as an ongoing process of the Conference of the Parties to undertake a comprehensive review of the activities of the secretariat, as defined in article 23, paragraph 2, of the Convention;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to make provision for the sessions of the Conference of the Parties and its subsidiary bodies, including the seventh ordinary session of the Conference and the meetings of its subsidiary bodies, in his proposal for the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

16. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the sub-item entitled "Implementation of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa".

International Year of Deserts and Desertification

On 7 February [dec. 22/15], the Governing Council, concerned by the exacerbation of desertification, particularly in Africa, and its far-reaching implications for the implementation of the MDG on poverty alleviation [YUN 2000, p. 5], invited the General Assembly to consider declaring an international year of deserts and desertification as soon as possible and designating UNEP as focal point of the international year, in conjunction with the Convention to Combat Desertification (see p. 1053) and UNDP. It requested the Secretary-General to designate a special representative for the international year, in the event it was declared; invited concerned countries to establish national committees and to celebrate the year with appropriate activities; and called on relevant international organizations and developed countries to support activities organized by affected countries, in particular African countries and LDCs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/484/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/211 without vote [agenda item 94 (b)].

International Year of Deserts and Desertification, 2006

The General Assembly,

Recalling chapter 12 of Agenda 21 adopted by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development,

Recalling also the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa,

Recalling further the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") and the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development,

Having considered decision 22/15 of 7 February 2003 of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme on an international year of deserts and desertification,

Deeply concerned by the exacerbation of desertification, particularly in Africa, and its far-reaching implications for the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, in particular on poverty eradication,

Recalling the environment initiative of the New Partnership for Africa's Development,

Conscious of the need to raise public awareness and to protect the biological diversity of deserts as well as indigenous and local communities and the traditional knowledge of those affected by this phenomenon,

1. Decides to declare 2006 the International Year of Deserts and Desertification;

2. Designates the Executive Secretary of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/

or Desertification, Particularly in Africa, as focal point of the Year, in conjunction with the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Development Programme, the International Fund for Agricultural Development and other relevant bodies of the United Nations;

3. Invites all countries to establish national committees or focal points and to celebrate the Year by arranging appropriate activities;

4. Calls upon all relevant international organizations and Member States to support the activities related to desertification, including land degradation, to be organized by affected countries, in particular African countries and the least developed countries;

5. Encourages countries to contribute, as they are able, to the Convention and to undertake special initiatives in observance of the Year with the goal of enhancing the implementation of the Convention;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the status of preparations for the Year.

Environmental activities

Follow-up to the Millennium Summit

In September [A/58/323], the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49], including progress towards the MDG of ensuring environmental sustainability. He stated that the 1987 Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer [YUN 1987, p. 686] to the 1985 Vienna Convention for the Protection of the Ozone Layer [YUN 1985, p. 804] (see p. 1050) had demonstrated the effectiveness of concerted multilateral action, resulting in a large decrease in global consumption of chlorofluorocarbons, primarily in developed countries, and a decrease in developing countries by about half since 1995. Progress in other areas had been less encouraging and included a decline in the proportion of land covered by forests in developing regions. The Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821] committed signatories to responsible and equitable management of the Earth's resources and highlighted the critical role of the private sector and public-private partnerships in addressing key environmental challenges ranging from biodiversity protection to renewable energy.

Millennium Ecosystem Assessment

A December report of the Executive Director [UNEP/GCSS.VIII/2] provided information on the Millennium Ecosystem Assessment, a four-year international assessment launched in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 961] to evaluate the state of major ecosystems and their links with human well-being.

UNEP coordinated the Assessment's secretariat and was one of the implementing agencies, together with the World Fish Center and the World Resources Institute. The Assessment's first report, Ecosystems and Human Well-being—A Framework for Assessment, was released in 2003. The report offered decision makers a mechanism to identify options to achieve core human development and sustainability goals and understand the trade-offs in decisions regarding development and environment. A Caribbean Sea assessment was implemented with technical and financial assistance from UNEP, and other joint ventures were under negotiation. Approved sub-global assessments were under way in Canada, India, Norway, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines, Southern Africa, Sweden and western China, and at tropical benchmark sites around the world.

The Assessment's Sub-Global, Condition, Scenarios and Responses Working Groups all met in 2003, and a combined working group meeting was held (Prague, Czech Republic, 13-17 October). The 2003 meeting of the Millennium Assessment Board (Gland, Switzerland, 11-12 February) reviewed and approved the Assessment's first report.

The atmosphere

Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), at its twentieth session (Paris, 19-21 February), adopted a framework and criteria for establishing priorities for special reports, methodological reports and technical papers for the fourth assessment period (2004-2007). It decided to hold two meetings to develop submissions to the Panel's twenty-first session (see below), to conduct stakeholder consultations with business and NGO communities, to conduct a climate sensitivity workshop in 2004, and that water would be a cross-cutting theme in the fourth assessment. The Panel decided to hold a scientific meeting to survey the current understanding of the processes affecting carbon stocks and human influences thereon. It decided to produce a report entitled "Safeguarding the ozone layer and the global climate system: issues related to hydrofluorocarbons and perfluorocarbons", and that its Working Group III should prepare a report on carbon dioxide capture and storage. Other decisions related to procedural and budgetary matters.

At its twenty-first session (Vienna, 3 and 6-7 November), IPCC further discussed criteria for reports and adopted decisions on its 2004-2007 work programme and budget.

Governing Council action. On 7 February [dec. 22/3 I], the Governing Council decided that UNEP should strengthen its role in supporting regional and national actions and programmes, in cooperation with the secretariat of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) and other relevant bodies, to ensure that UNEP activities were complementary to and not duplicative of work carried out by other agencies. It asked the Executive Director to assist, upon request by developing countries, in undertaking activities related to adaptation and the transfer of technology, to meet the specific needs arising from the adverse effects of climate change without duplicating UNFCCC activities. He was asked to strengthen cooperation between UNEP and scientific organizations to advance policy and know-how for reducing vulnerability to climate change in various sectors, in particular water resources, biodiversity, agriculture, coastal zone management and health, in the context of sustainable development, and to seek contributions from Governments for those activities. It invited States that had not signed, ratified or acceded to UNFCCC [YUN 1992, p. 681] and the 1997 Kyoto Protocol to the Convention [YUN 1997, p. 1048] (see p. 1049) to do so and invited the Executive Director to raise public awareness of IPCC's findings.

Regarding IPCC, the Governing Council requested the Executive Director, in cooperation with the Secretary-General of the World Meteorological Organization (WMO), to continue arrangements to carry on IPCC's work, ensuring a wide and effective participation of developing country experts in the process [dec. 22/3 II]. He was asked to disseminate IPCC's findings widely, complementing the efforts undertaken in the context of UNFCCC on implementing its article 6 on education, training and public awareness. Governments were urged to provide financial, technical and scientific support to the IPCC process. IPCC was requested to report on progress to GC/GMEF in 2005.

World Climate Change Conference

The World Climate Change Conference (Moscow, 29 September-3 October), an initiative of the Russian Federation, discussed climate change, including natural and anthropogenic factors driving the climate; approaches to reducing anthropogenic emissions; and impacts and adaptation measures. During the Conference, detailed scientific reports were presented on the science of climate change; ecological, social and economic impacts of climate change; mitigation of and adaptation to climate change and the role of technology; and stakeholders' dialogue.

Terrestrial ecosystems

In 2003, drylands supported 1 billion rural poor across 110 countries. UNEP increased its support for the implementation of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, particularly in Africa (see p. 1053), through the development of an ecosystem approach to dryland environmental management. In partnership with the Consultative Group for International Agricultural Research (CGIAR), UNEP developed a renewed collaborative thrust on sustainable dryland management and the environment and worked on a new CGIAR Challenge Programme on Desertification, Drought, Poverty and Agriculture and on improved science-policy linkages. Norway agreed to support the three-year UNEP project on an ecosystem approach to restoring West African drylands and improving rural livelihoods through agroforestry-based land management interventions.

Deforestation and forest degradation

United Nations Forum on Forests

The Governing Council, on 7 February [dec. 22/5], took action on enhancing UNEP's role in forest-related issues. It requested the Executive Director, in collaboration with the Coordinator and secretariat of the United Nations Forum on Forests (UNFF), to cooperate with other organizations, in response to a 2002 UNFF decision on rehabilitation and conservation strategies for countries with low forest cover [YUN 2002, p. 1051] and other decisions, and to support the Tehran Process, established in 1999 to bring together low-forest-cover countries and provide a forum for addressing the specific needs of developing countries with low forest cover, in order to strengthen the capacity of those countries.

UNFF, at its third session (Geneva, 26 May-6 June) [E/2003/42], adopted five resolutions and three decisions, which were brought to the Economic and Social Council's attention. The Forum adopted resolutions on the economic aspects of forests [res. 3/1], forest health and productivity [res. 3/2], maintaining forest cover to meet present and future needs [res. 3/3], enhancing cooperation and policy and programme coordination with the support of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests [YUN 2001, p. 964] and other organizations [res. 3/4], and strengthening the UNFF secretariat [res. 3/5]. The Forum accorded observer status to three intergovernmental organizations [dec. 3/1]; requested its secretariat to develop, at its fourth (2004) session, a suggested format for countries to use in reporting on implementation of the Intergovernmental Panel on Forests [YUN 1995, p. 1080] and the Intergovernmental Forum on Forests [YUN 1997, p. 1057] (IPF/IFF) proposals for action [dec. 3/2]; and took note of documents before the Forum [dec. 3/3] (see below).

The Forum recommended a draft resolution for adoption by the Council on the Trust Fund for UNFF and a draft decision on the establishment of ad hoc expert groups on approaches and mechanisms for monitoring, assessment and reporting, on finance and transfer of environmentally sound technologies (ESTs), and on the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests. (See pp. 1058 and 1062 for Economic and Social Council action.) Other draft decisions dealt with the date, venue and agenda for UNFF's fourth (2004) session and the report on the Forum's third session.

The Forum had before it reports of the Secretary-General on progress in implementing the IPF/IFF proposals on forest health and productivity [E/CN.18/2003/5]; economic aspects of forests [E/CN.18/2003/7]; and maintaining forest cover to meet current and future needs [E/CN.18/2003/8]. The Secretary-General also provided information on the Forum's second stakeholder dialogue [E/CN.18/2003/2 & Add.1-6], which took place during UNFF's third session, and on enhanced cooperation and policy and programme coordination in and outside the forest sector in the management of forests and other natural resources [E/CN.18/2003/6]. Secretariat notes contained the draft negotiating text on the titles, composition, terms of reference, scheduling and reporting of the ad hoc expert groups [E/CN.18/2003/3], and guidelines for the preparation of voluntary national reports to UNFF at its third session [E/CN.18/2003/4]. A further Secretariat note [E/CN.18/2003/12] listed three intergovernmental organizations requesting UNFF accreditation, and recommended that they be granted observer status. Also before the Forum was the Collaborative Partnership on Forests Framework 2003 [E/CN.18/2003/INF/1] outlining the Partnership's work plan and progress report; the report of the UNFF Intersessional Experts Meeting (Wellington, New Zealand, 25-27 March) on the role of planted forests in sustainable forest management [E/CN.18/2003/10]; a report on the Regional Initiative for the Transfer of Environmentally Sound Technologies for the Sustainable Management of Mangrove Ecosystems in Latin America and the Wider Caribbean: a regional approach initiated by the Government of Nicaragua [E/CN.18/2003/11]; and a report on lessons learned in monitoring, assessment and reporting on the implementation of IPF/IFF proposals for action, reflecting the results of a UNFF country-led initiative (Viterbo, Italy, 17-20 March) [E/CN.18/2003/9 & Corr.1].

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 July (meeting 49), the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the United Nations Forum on Forests [E/2003/42, orally amended], adopted decision 2003/299 [agenda item 13 (i)].

Intersessional work by ad hoc expert groups

At its 49th plenary meeting, on 25 July 2003, the Economic and Social Council, bearing in mind paragraph 4 (k) of its resolution 2000/35 of 18 October 2000, and recalling the multi-year programme of work of the United Nations Forum on Forests, adopted by the Forum in its resolution 1/1, in particular its paragraphs 23 and 24:

(a) Decided to establish three ad hoc expert groups to support the work of the Forum, as set out in the annex to the present decision;

(b) Decided that the meetings of the ad hoc expert groups on approaches and mechanisms for monitoring, assessment and reporting, and on finance and transfer of environmentally sound technologies should be convened in Geneva from 8 to 19 December 2003. The Council also decided that the date of the meeting in New York of the ad hoc expert group on "consideration, with a view to recommending the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests" should be decided at the resumed session of the Council of 2003;

(c) Invited each of the five United Nations regional groups to nominate to the Secretariat six country experts for the ad hoc expert group on approaches and mechanisms for monitoring, assessment and reporting, and six country experts for the ad hoc expert group on finance and transfer of environmentally sound technologies, by 15 September 2003;

(d) Invited States members of the United Nations Forum on Forests to nominate to the Secretariat a country expert for the ad hoc expert group on consideration, with a view to recommending the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests, by 31 March 2004;

(e) Decided that, to ensure efficiency, transparency and balanced reflection of the range of views, the following preparations should be performed for the meeting of the ad hoc expert group meeting on consideration, with a view to recommending the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests:

- (i) Presentation of factual and technical information, including updated information on existing regional and international binding and non-binding instruments and processes relevant to forests and that of other relevant organizations and agreements, including multilateral environmental agreements and regional conventions and processes;
- (ii) Compilation of the progress made and catalysts and obstacles encountered by States members and member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests in implementing the proposals for action of the Intergovernmental Panel on Forests/Intergovernmental Forum on Forests and the decisions and resolutions of sessions of the United Nations Forum on Forests;

- (iii) Presentation and detailed description of a range of options, including their legal, financial and institutional modalities;

The States members of the United Nations Forum on Forests were invited to submit their views on (i), (ii) and (iii) above. The member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests were invited to provide information on (i) and (ii) above. These views and information should be provided to the Forum secretariat by 31 January 2004.

Accordingly, the United Nations Forum on Forests secretariat should compile the views submitted by the States members and the information provided by the member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests in preparation for the ad hoc expert group meeting.

For its fourth session, the Bureau of the United Nations Forum on Forests should keep States members apprised of the progress made in the preparation of documentation for the ad hoc expert group. The Bureau would undertake consultations with the member States by convening a one-day informal meeting in New York immediately after a meeting of the Bureau prior to the fourth session of the Forum.

The United Nations Forum on Forests would receive an information note at its fourth session on progress in the preparation of documentation for the ad hoc expert group meeting. This note was subject to neither discussion nor negotiation in the Forum.

The official documentation for the consideration of the ad hoc expert group should be made available to countries sixty days in advance of the meeting of the ad hoc expert group.

Annex

A. Ad hoc expert group on approaches and mechanisms for monitoring, assessment and reporting

Scope and work programme

1. The ad hoc expert group shall provide scientific and technical advice to the United Nations Forum on Forests on approaches and mechanisms for the work of the Forum on monitoring, assessment and reporting. Its work should be undertaken within the context of Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/35 and relevant resolutions adopted by the Forum at its sessions, and should also consider, inter alia, related proposals for action of the Intergovernmental Panel on Forests (IPF)/Intergovernmental Forum on Forests (IFF) and the outcomes of Forum sessions, including its reports.

Tasks

2. For monitoring, assessment and reporting on progress in implementing IPF/IFF proposals for action and progress towards sustainable forest management, the ad hoc expert group shall:

- (a) Assess existing reporting requirements under relevant international conventions, processes, instruments and organizations in order to identify strengths, weaknesses and duplication in reporting processes, taking into account the relevant work undertaken by member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests;

(b) Assess existing monitoring and assessment procedures in international conventions, processes, instruments and organizations related to forests in order to identify strengths, weaknesses and duplications, taking into account the relevant work undertaken by member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests;

(c) Propose ways for the Forum to monitor and assess progress, based on:

- (i) Voluntary reporting by countries on implementing the IPF/IFF proposals for action;
- (ii) Voluntary reporting by member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests and other relevant organizations and international and regional processes on implementing the IPF/IFF proposals for action;
- (iii) Ongoing work on criteria and indicators for sustainable forest management being undertaken at the national, regional and international levels;
- (iv) Existing data and information, as well as reporting systems and structures;

(d) Propose an outline for voluntary reporting to the Forum;

(e) Recommend options for drawing upon the reports provided to Forum sessions to identify trends and lessons learned;

(f) Develop recommendations on how to build capacity in countries, including the increase of resources for that goal, for monitoring, assessment and reporting, taking into account the special needs of developing countries.

3. In carrying out these tasks, the ad hoc expert group should take into account the results of inter-sessional activities related to monitoring, assessment and reporting led by countries, organizations and international and regional processes. Its reports should be made available as a contribution to the discussions at country- and organization-led initiatives of the Forum that are related to the present terms of reference. As relevant, the ad hoc expert group should also take into account the results of the work undertaken by member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests on forest-related concepts, terminology and definitions.

Composition and participation

4. The ad hoc expert group shall be composed of thirty experts in accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2003/299, to which the present annex is attached, six from each of the five United Nations regional groups.

5. The experts shall have well-recognized scientific and technical expertise in monitoring, assessment and reporting, and knowledge of the intergovernmental forest policy deliberations of IPF, IFF and the Forum.

6. Representatives of the States members of the United Nations Forum on Forests shall be allowed to participate in the first two days of the meeting of the ad hoc expert group and remain as observers for the last three days of the meeting.

7. The Collaborative Partnership on Forests shall be invited to make scientific and technical contributions to the work of the ad hoc expert group to support the work of the ad hoc expert group in a resource capacity.

8. Intergovernmental organizations and representatives of major groups with relevant expertise may participate in the meeting, in accordance with the rules of procedure of the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council, as well as practices established by the Commission on Sustainable Development, IPF and IFF. They may be invited to make scientific and technical contributions.

Travel assistance

9. Travel support and a daily subsistence allowance at established United Nations rates will be provided to each of the experts, if the budget allows, with priority to developing countries, particularly least developed countries, as well as countries with economies in transition.

Officers

10. The chairman of the ad hoc expert group shall be elected from among the experts at its meeting.

Duration of work

11. The ad hoc expert group shall initiate its work after the third session of the Forum and complete its work at least three months in advance of the fourth session of the Forum.

Meeting

12. The ad hoc expert group shall hold one meeting for up to five days before the end of 2003. It shall also use electronic means of communication to the greatest extent possible. The ad hoc expert group meeting shall be organized at a United Nations venue where meeting facilities are available, preferably in New York, taking into account cost-effectiveness. To the extent possible, the ad hoc expert group shall hold its meeting back to back with the meeting of the ad hoc expert group on finance and transfer of environmentally sound technologies.

Proposals and recommendations for consideration by the Forum

13. The proposals and recommendations of the ad hoc expert group should be provided by consensus. In the absence of consensus, the report of the ad hoc expert group shall fully reflect the diversity of views expressed.

Reports

14. The ad hoc expert group shall prepare its report, taking into consideration the views of all participants and contributions received, and shall submit its report to the Forum at its fourth session for consideration. The report shall specify the major outcomes of the ad hoc expert group's work, including proposals and recommendations for further consideration by the Forum.

Secretariat

15. The Forum secretariat shall serve as the secretariat for the ad hoc expert group, supported by the Collaborative Partnership on Forests.

B. Ad hoc expert group on finance and transfer of environmentally sound technologies

Scope and work programme

16. The ad hoc expert group shall provide scientific and technical advice to the Forum for its work on finance and transfer of environmentally sound technologies. The work of the ad hoc expert group should be undertaken within the context of Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/35 and relevant resolutions adopted by the Forum at its sessions, and should also consider, inter alia, related IPF/IFF proposals for action and outcomes of Forum sessions, including its reports.

Tasks

17. The ad hoc expert group shall undertake the following specific tasks on finance:

Finance

(a) Consider previous initiatives on finance, including recommendations from the Croydon, Oslo and Pretoria workshops, as well as the relevant IPF/IFF proposals for action, background papers and strategy documents of member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests;

(b) Assess the role and status of official development assistance directed towards sustainable forest management and consider ways for enhancing its availability and effectiveness; in this regard, identify possible means to enhance the efforts of developed countries to fulfil their commitments on official development assistance;

(c) Review the effectiveness of existing international financing for sustainable forest management, including methods and mechanisms; analyse opportunities, country-level gaps, limitations and donor and recipient priorities, as well as the contribution of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests towards financing sustainable forest management; propose measures to improve the effectiveness of that financing for enhancing the enabling environment at both the national and international levels and to attract increased financing from all sources;

(d) Explore the potential of new and innovative approaches to attract increased financing for sustainable forest management; discuss and make suggestions for expanded use of those approaches to address the need for financial resources for financing sustainable forest management, including through national forest programmes or equivalent processes;

(e) Assess country experiences in the mobilization of financial resources to support sustainable forest management; in this regard, identify gaps in, and the potential and limitations of, current financing sources and financial mechanisms in implementing sustainable forest management; propose approaches to enhance and more effectively use and mobilize national and international financial resources;

(f) Assess and consider the role of the private sector in financing sustainable forest management; in this regard, recommend measures to improve the enabling environment for private investment in sustainable forest management, at both the national and international levels; and encourage increased private resource flows to the forest sector, in particular in developing countries and countries with economies in transition.

18. The ad hoc expert group shall undertake the following specific tasks on the transfer of environmentally sound technologies:

Transfer of environmentally sound technologies

(a) Review and assess existing initiatives on the transfer of environmentally sound technologies and knowledge diffusion for the promotion of sustainable forest management among countries and sectors and stakeholders, including through North-South, North-North and South-South cooperation and programmes of member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests. This should include an analysis of incentives that promote, and obstacles that inhibit, the transfer of forest-related environmentally sound technologies between and/or within countries, in particular to developing countries and countries with economies in transition, in both the private and public sectors;

(b) Recommend approaches to improve transfer of forest-related environmentally sound technologies. The recommendation may include the role of various policy instruments, such as concessional and preferential terms, public/private partnerships and research cooperation, as well as capacity-building in the use and application of current and emerging environmentally sound technologies, including remote sensing.

Composition and participation

19. The ad hoc expert group shall consist of thirty experts, six from each of the five regional groups.

20. The experts shall have well-recognized scientific and technical expertise in finance and transfer of environmentally sound technologies and knowledge of the intergovernmental forest policy deliberations of IPF, IFF and the Forum.

21. Representatives of the States members of the United Nations Forum on Forests shall be allowed to participate in the first two days of the meetings of the ad hoc expert group and remain as observers for the last three days of the meeting.

22. The Collaborative Partnership on Forests shall be invited to make scientific and technical contributions to the work of the ad hoc expert group to support the work of the ad hoc expert group in a resource capacity.

23. Intergovernmental organizations and representatives of major groups with relevant expertise may participate in the meeting, in accordance with the rules of procedure of the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council, as well as practices established by the Commission on Sustainable Development, IPF and IFF. They may be invited to make scientific and technical contributions.

Travel assistance

24. Travel support and a daily subsistence allowance at established United Nations rates shall be provided to each of the experts, if the budget allows, with priority to developing countries, particularly least developed countries, as well as countries with economies in transition.

Officers

25. The chairman of the ad hoc expert group shall be elected from among the experts at its meeting.

Duration of work

26. The ad hoc expert group shall initiate its work after the third session of the Forum and complete its work at least three months in advance of the fourth session of the Forum.

Meeting

27. The ad hoc expert group shall hold one meeting for up to five days before the end of 2003. It shall also use electronic means of communication to the greatest extent possible. The ad hoc expert group meeting shall be organized at a United Nations venue where meeting facilities are available, preferably in New York, taking into account cost-effectiveness. To the extent possible, the ad hoc expert group will hold its meeting back to back with the meeting of the ad hoc expert group on approaches and mechanisms for monitoring, assessment and reporting.

Proposals and recommendations for consideration by the Forum

28. The proposals and recommendations of the ad hoc expert group should be provided by consensus. In the absence of consensus, the reports of the ad hoc expert group shall fully reflect the diversity of views expressed.

Reports

29. The ad hoc expert group shall prepare its report, taking into consideration the views of all participants and contributions received, and shall submit its report to the Forum at its fourth session for consideration. The report shall specify major outcomes of the ad hoc expert group's work, including proposals and recommendations for further consideration by the Forum.

Secretariat

30. The Forum secretariat shall serve as the secretariat for the ad hoc expert group, supported by the Collaborative Partnership on Forests.

C. Ad hoc expert group on consideration, with a view to recommending the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests

Scope and work programme

31. The ad hoc expert group shall provide scientific and technical advice to the Forum for its work on consideration, with a view to recommending the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests. The work of the ad hoc expert group should be undertaken within the context of Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/35 and resolutions adopted by the Forum at its sessions, in particular those referring to the creation and scope of the ad hoc expert groups.

Tasks

32. The reports of the ad hoc expert groups on approaches and mechanisms for monitoring, assessment and reporting and on finance and transfer of environmentally sound technologies shall serve as inputs to the work of this ad hoc expert group.

33. The ad hoc expert group shall undertake the following specific tasks on consideration, with a view to recommending the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests:

(a) Assess existing regional and international binding and non-binding instruments and processes relevant to forests; the assessment should include, inter alia, analysis of complementarities, gaps and duplications, and should take into account Forum resolution 2/3 on specific criteria for the review of the effectiveness of the international arrangement on forests;

(b) Consider reports prepared by countries, as referred to in decision 2003/299 to which the present annex is attached, the member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests and the Forum secretariat, as well as outcomes of Forum sessions;

(c) Consider other outcomes of the international arrangement on forests, inter alia, the efforts of countries to implement the IPF/IFF proposals for action, other expert groups, country- and organization-led initiatives of the Forum and previous relevant initiatives, and forest-related work undertaken by the member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests;

(d) Review the relevant experiences of existing forest-related and other relevant organizations and agreements, including multilateral environmental agreements and regional conventions and processes, focusing on complementarities, gaps and duplications;

(e) Provide for the consideration of the Forum at its fifth session, a balanced range of options with respect to "consideration, with a view to recommending the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests".

Composition and participation

34. The ad hoc expert group shall be composed of experts of the States members of the Forum.

35. The experts shall have well-recognized scientific and technical expertise on the forest regime and the Rio conventions and knowledge of the intergovernmental forest policy deliberations of IPF, IFF and the Forum.

36. The Collaborative Partnership on Forests shall be invited to make scientific and technical contributions to the work of the ad hoc expert group to support the work of the ad hoc expert group in a resource capacity.

37. Intergovernmental organizations and representatives of major groups with relevant expertise may participate in the meeting, in accordance with the rules of procedure of the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council, as well as practices established by the Commission on Sustainable Development, IPF and IFF. They may be invited to make scientific and technical contributions.

Travel assistance

38. Travel support and a daily subsistence allowance at the established United Nations rates shall be provided to one country expert from each developing country, as well as to one country expert from countries with economies in transition, to the maximum extent from the budget, supplemented by voluntary extrabudgetary contributions.

Officers

39. Two co-chairpersons of the ad hoc expert group shall be elected from among experts at its meeting, one from a developing country and one from a developed country.

Duration of work

40. The ad hoc expert group shall initiate its work immediately after the fourth session of the Forum and complete its work at least three months in advance of the fifth session of the Forum.

Meeting

41. The ad hoc expert group shall hold one meeting for up to five days. It shall also use electronic means of communication to the greatest extent possible. The ad hoc expert group meeting shall be organized at a United Nations venue where meeting facilities are available, preferably in New York, taking into account cost-effectiveness.

Proposals and recommendations for consideration by the Forum

42. The proposals and recommendations of the ad hoc expert group should be provided by consensus. In the absence of consensus, the reports of the ad hoc expert group shall fully reflect the diversity of views expressed.

Reports

43. The ad hoc expert group shall adopt a report at its meeting, for submission to the Forum at its fifth session. The report shall specify major outcomes of the ad hoc expert group's work, including proposals and recommendations for further consideration by the Forum.

Secretariat

44. The Forum secretariat shall serve as the secretariat for the ad hoc expert group, supported by the Collaborative Partnership on Forests.

(For information on expert group meetings in 2003, see below.)

On 25 July, [meeting 49], the Council, on the recommendation of the United Nations Forum on Forests [E/2003/42, orally amended], adopted resolution 2003/63 without vote [agenda item 13 (i)].

Trust Fund for the United Nations Forum on Forests

The Economic and Social Council

Recalling its resolution 2000/35 of 18 October 2000, in particular paragraph 4, by which it established the United Nations Forum on Forests as a subsidiary body of the Council composed of all States Members of the United Nations and States members of the specialized agencies with full and equal participation,

Recalling also paragraph 6 of the same resolution, in which it invited voluntary extrabudgetary contributions in support of the participation of representatives of developing countries that are not members of the Commission on Sustainable Development in sessions of the Forum and its subsidiary bodies,

Recalling further paragraph 16 of the same resolution, in which it called upon interested donor Governments, financial institutions and other organizations to make voluntary financial contributions to a trust fund in order to facilitate the continuing work of the Forum and its secretariat,

Taking note of the oral report on the status of the secretariat presented by the secretariat to the Forum at its third session, and the views expressed by many countries on the need for enhanced participation of Member States that are developing countries, least developed countries or countries with economies in transition in the sessions of the Forum,

Noting that the Trust Fund is an important resource for carrying out activities to support the work of the Forum and to ensure the increased participation of representatives of developing countries, least developed countries and countries with economies in transition, as well as experts from those countries, in the sessions of the Forum, and other meetings aimed at supporting the work of the Forum, and ad hoc expert groups,

Acknowledging with appreciation the voluntary extra-budgetary contributions made by a number of donor Governments to the Trust Fund to support the Forum and its secretariat, and recognizing the need for additional resources,

1. Invites donor Governments, institutions and other organizations to provide contributions to the Trust Fund;

2. Recommends that the General Assembly decide that support to participants from developing countries, with priority to the least developed countries, as well as from countries with economies in transition may be provided from the Trust Fund for travel and daily subsistence from funds designated for that purpose.

On the same date, the Council decided that UNFF's fourth session would be held in Geneva from 3 to 14 May 2004 (decision 2003/297) and took note of the Forum's report on its third session and approved the provisional agenda for the fourth session (decision 2003/298).

Note by Secretariat. An October Secretariat note [A/C.2/58/6] stated that, by its resolution 2003/63 (see above), the Economic and Social Council recommended that the General Assembly decide that support to participants from developing countries, with priority to LDCs, and from countries with economies in transition could be provided from the Trust Fund for travel and daily subsistence from funds designated for that purpose. The Assembly so decided on 23 December (decision 58/554).

Expert group meetings. The Ad Hoc Expert Group on Approaches and Mechanisms for Monitoring, Assessment and Reporting (Geneva, 8-12 December) [E/CN.18/2004/2] transmitted to the fourth (2004) UNFF session conclusions and recommendations covering its tasks as envisaged in Economic and Social Council decision 2003/299 (see p. 1058), including on existing monitoring, assessment and reporting procedures under relevant international conventions, processes, instruments and organizations; ways for UNFF to monitor and assess progress towards sustainable forest management and implementation of the IPF/IFF proposals for action [YUN 1997, p. 1057]; an outline for voluntary reporting to UNFF; the use of reports provided to UNFF to identify trends and lessons learned; and building national capacity for monitoring, assessment and reporting. The Group considered an October Secretariat note [E/CN.18/AC.1/2003/2], which provided background information to assist it in carrying out its tasks.

The meeting of the Ad Hoc Expert Group on the Finance and Transfer of Environmentally Sound Technologies (Geneva, 15-19 December) [E/CN.18/2004/5] considered previous initiatives on finance and transfer of ESTs for sustainable forest management, with particular attention given to lessons learned from existing initiatives and constraints affecting the effectiveness and efficiency of financing and transfer of ESTs. It made recommendations for improving the transfer of such technologies for UNFF's consideration at its 2004 session; the recommendations were divided into those directed at Member States, members of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests and the Forum itself. Recommendations on improving forest management financing were directed at the national and international levels, both within and outside the forest sector. The Expert Group considered October Secretariat notes on challenges in the current financial environment for financing sustainable forest management [E/CN.18/AC.2/2003/2] and an overview of the transfer of ESTs for such management [E/CN.18/AC.2/2003/3].

On 19 December, the Economic and Social Council decided that the UNFF ad hoc expert group on consideration, with a view to recommending the parameters of a mandate for developing a legal framework on all types of forests, would meet in New York from 6 to 10 September 2004 (decision 2003/315).

International Year of Mountains (2002)

Note by Executive Director. A January note by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/INF/37] summarized UNEP's contribution to the International Year of Mountains, 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1052], including awareness-raising and an outreach campaign to promote the Year; efforts to build coalitions and organize events; environmental assessments and preparation of the first report on the global status of mountain ecosystems (Mountain Watch); and technical assistance for negotiating legal instruments for transboundary cooperation. Under the International Partnership for Sustainable Development in Mountain Regions, launched in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1053], UNEP was requested to lead efforts on networking and regional agreements; transboundary cooperation in the Carpathian, Central Asia, Caucasus, Altai, African and Latin American mountain ranges; and public-private partnerships. UNEP began work on addressing the environmental aspects of sustainable development of mountain regions under the auspices of an interim secretariat for the International Partnership, with support from Italy and Switzerland.

Note by Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/245 [YUN 2002, p. 1053], the Secretary-General transmitted, in July [A/58/134], a report on activities related to the International Year of Mountains, prepared by the Director-General of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the Year's lead agency. It described achievements made at the national, regional and international levels in 2002, emphasizing activities that would lead to long-term, concrete action for sustainable mountain development. The Year stimulated the establishment of 78 national committees or similar mechanisms to develop plans and policies to achieve such development. Reports from countries suggested that many of those committees would become permanent bodies. Long-term action was needed to implement chapter 13 of Agenda 21 [YUN 1992, p. 672] on sustainable mountain development and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821], requiring national involvement in and support for follow-up to the Year. The report recommended, for the Assembly's consideration, action by Governments to build on results achieved so far.

Communication. In October, Italy transmitted the conclusions of the First Global Meeting of Members of the International Partnership for Sustainable Development in Mountain Regions (Merano, Italy, 5-6 October) [A/C.2/58/8].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/484/Add.7], adopted resolution 58/216 without vote [agenda item 94 (g)].

Sustainable development in mountain regions

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/24 of 10 November 1998, by which it proclaimed 2002 the International Year of Mountains,

Recalling also its resolutions 55/189 of 20 December 2000 and 57/245 of 20 December 2002,

Recognizing chapter 13 of Agenda 21 and all relevant paragraphs of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), in particular paragraph 42 thereof, as the overall policy frameworks for sustainable development in mountain regions,

Noting the International Partnership for Sustainable Development in Mountain Regions ("Mountain Partnership"), launched during the World Summit on Sustainable Development with the committed support of thirty-eight countries, fifteen intergovernmental organizations and thirty-eight organizations from major groups, as an important approach to addressing the various interrelated dimensions of sustainable development in mountain regions,

Taking note of the Bishkek Mountain Platform, the outcome document of the Bishkek Global Mountain Summit, held in Bishkek from 28 October to 1 November 2002, which was the concluding event of the International Year of Mountains,

1. Takes note of the report transmitted by the Secretary-General on the International Year of Mountains, 2002;

2. Welcomes the significant results achieved during the Year, which substantially increased awareness of and strengthened interest in sustainable development and poverty eradication in mountain regions, as well as acting as a catalyst for long-term effective action to implement chapter 13 of Agenda 21 and paragraph 42 of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

3. Notes with appreciation that a growing network of Governments, organizations, major groups and individuals around the world know that mountains are globally important as the source of most of the Earth's freshwater, as repositories of rich biological diversity, as popular destinations for recreation and tourism and as areas of important cultural diversity, knowledge and heritage;

4. Also notes with appreciation the effective role played by Governments, as well as major groups, academic institutions and international organizations and agencies, in the activities related to the Year, including the establishment of seventy-eight national committees or similar mechanisms;

5. Appreciates the work undertaken by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations as the lead agency for the Year, as well as the valuable contributions made by the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations University, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Children's Fund;

6. Underlines the fact that there remain key challenges to implementing sustainable development and eradicating poverty in mountain regions as well as challenges in the areas of national involvement, international cooperation, support for partnerships and mobilization of financial resources, and against this background:

(a) Encourages the United Nations system to enhance efforts to strengthen inter-agency collaboration to achieve more effective implementation of chapter 13 of Agenda 21 and paragraph 42 of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

(b) Also encourages the continued establishment and development of mountain-related national committees, focal points and other multi-stakeholder mechanisms at the national level for sustainable development in mountain regions;

(c) Supports national efforts, within the framework of national development plans, to develop goals and strategic plans for the sustainable development of mountains, as well as enabling policies and laws, programmes and projects;

(d) Encourages transboundary approaches, where the States concerned agree, to the sustainable development of mountain ranges and information-sharing in this regard;

(e) Also encourages Member States to collect and produce information and to establish databases devoted to mountains so as to capitalize on knowledge to support interdisciplinary research, programmes and projects and to improve decision-making and planning;

(f) Supports the development and implementation of global, regional and national communication programmes to build on the awareness and momentum for change established by the Year;

(g) Stresses the importance of capacity-building and educational programmes to enhance awareness of good practices in sustainable development in mountain regions and the nature of relationships between highland and lowland areas;

(h) Calls for the improvement of mountain women's access to resources and the strengthening of their role in their communities and cultures, and in this context takes note of the recommendations of the Thimpu Declaration adopted at the Celebrating Mountain Women conference, held at Thimpu from 1 to 4 October 2002;

7. Notes the entry into force of the nine Protocols to the Convention on the Protection of the Alps as a contribution to regional cooperation for sustainable development in that mountain region;

8. Notes also the adoption and signing of the Framework Convention on the Protection and Sustainable Development of the Carpathians by the countries of the region;

9. Notes further that a consultative process has been conducted with all Mountain Partnership stakeholders, in particular donor countries, with a view to determining the best options for further assisting all stakeholders in the implementation of the Partnership;

10. Takes note of the conclusions of the first global meeting of the members of the Mountain Partnership, held in Merano, Italy, on 5 and 6 October 2003, at the invitation of the Government of Italy;

11. Notes that the next global meeting of the members of the Mountain Partnership will be organized during the second half of 2004, and welcomes in this context the offer of the Government of Peru to host the meeting;

12. Notes also, in this context, that the Mountain Partnership is a cooperation mechanism that is dynamic, transparent, flexible and participatory in nature and that it is open to all Governments, including local and regional authorities, as well as to intergovernmental, non-governmental and other organizations whose objectives and activities are consistent with the vision and mission of the Partnership;

13. Notes further that Mountain Partnership members committed themselves to implement the Partnership in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/61 of 25 July 2003, and calls upon them to comply with the criteria and guidelines agreed in the decision taken by the Commission on Sustainable Development at its eleventh session;

14. Invites the international community and other relevant partners to consider joining the Mountain Partnership;

15. Encourages all relevant entities of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, to continue their constructive collaboration in the context of the follow-up to the Year, taking into account the inter-agency group on mountains and the need for the further involvement of the United Nations system, in particular the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations University, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, international financial institutions and other relevant international organizations, taking into account the recommendations formulated in the Bishkek Mountain Platform;

16. Encourages Governments, the United Nations system, the international financial institutions, the Global Environment Facility and other relevant United Nations funding mechanisms, such as the Global Mechanism of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa, as well as all relevant stakeholders from civil society organizations and the private sector, to provide support, including through voluntary financial contributions, to local, national and international programmes and projects for sustainable development in mountain regions;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the status of sustainable development in mountain regions, including an overall analysis of the challenges that lie ahead and appropriate policy recommendations, under a sub-item entitled "Sustainable development in mountain regions" of the item entitled "Environment and sustainable development".

Marine ecosystems

Oceans and seas

In preparation for World Water Day (22 March), UNEP launched Vital Water Graphics, a publication providing a visual guide to the problems of deteriorating freshwater and marine resources. In October, UNEP published the World Atlas of Seagrasses, which described the status of seagrass, a fragile coastal ecosystem, and indicated that it had declined by 15 per cent worldwide in the previous decade.

Among issues suggested by the fourth meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (New York, 2-6 June) [A/58/95] (see p. 1355), for consideration by the General Assembly, was the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems.

On 3 November, Azerbaijan, Iran, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation and Turkmenistan signed the Framework Convention for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the Caspian Sea, which would coordinate regional efforts to address the environmental crisis resulting from habitat destruction, pollution and the over-exploitation of fish and other marine life.

Global waters assessment

The Global International Waters Assessment (GIWA), inaugurated in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 982] to assess international waters and causes of environmental problems in 66 water regions, focusing on the aquatic environment in transboundary waters, released results for the Amazon Basin, the Caspian Sea and the Indian Ocean islands at the thirteenth Stockholm water symposium (11-14 August).

Governing Council action. On 7 February [dec. 22/1 II], the Governing Council, having considered the 2002 report of the Executive Director on the global assessment of the marine environment [YUN 2002, p. 1054], requested him to make arrangements for UNEP's participation in preparations for establishing a regular global reporting process and assessment of the state of the marine environment, as called for in General Assembly resolution 57/141 [YUN 2002, p. 1322]. It called on the Executive Director to identify existing UNEP resources that could be applied to the process, and urged regional seas programmes (see p. 1067) to participate and contribute as appropriate. The Executive Director was asked to report to the Secretary-General in 2003 and to GC/GMEF in 2004 on UNEP's contribution to the process, and was authorized to seek extrabudgetary resources, including through the establishment of a trust fund, to support the participation of developing countries. Governments were urged to contribute to the trust fund, once established, and were called on to focus on coastal areas, in collaboration with regional institutions.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/141 [YUN 2002, p. 1322], the Secretary-General, in October [A/58/423], reported on proposals to establish a regular process for the assessment of the state of the marine environment, drawing on, among other things, UNEP's work pursuant to a 2001 Governing Council decision on the subject [YUN 2001, p. 964], and taking into account a review by the Joint Group of Experts on the Scientific Aspects of Marine Environmental Protection (GESAMP). The report also described existing global and regional assessment programmes and how they differed from the envisaged global marine assessment (GMA) process, and summarized replies to the request contained in resolution 57/141 for proposals on the process. It concluded that GMA would be a global, comprehensive assessment of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, and would take into consideration all activities affecting the oceans and the interrelationship of all the elements of the ocean environment, including biodiversity (the ecosystem approach). It was to be regular, with general assessments to be completed possibly every five years. It should operate under the authority of the Assembly, with substantive discussions by all interested parties on the process and its results taking place either at the Informal Consultative Process or at associated meetings. Capacity-building would be an essential element of GMA and would require special arrangements. Due to its step-by-step structure, its clear separation of science and policy and its provision for consultations among all interested parties at the outset, the organizational model for the global assessment process proposed by GESAMP, which was annexed to the report, appeared to be the most compelling.

For Assembly action regarding the establishment of GMA, see resolution 58/240 (p. 1355).

Report of Executive Director. A December report of the Executive Director [UNEP/GCSS.VIII/6] outlined progress made in response to Governing Council decision 22/1 II on GMA (see p. 1065). In March, the UNEP secretariat held internal consultations to identify existing programmatic and budgetary resources that could contribute to the GMA process. In support of the Governing Council's decision, UNEP, on 9 April, established a trust fund and requested contributions from Governments. UNEP organized an informal consultative meeting (The Hague, Netherlands, 26-27 May), which concluded that UNEP's competency lay in its expertise and experience in environmental assessment; its extensive global and regional networks of institutions and scientists; its interaction and collaboration with relevant global and regional programmes; and a strong capability-building component targeting developing countries. It recommended convening an inter-agency consultation meeting between UN agencies, and a meeting to explore the scope and methodology of GMA, including links between UNEP's science-based activities and other endeavours, such as the 1992 Convention on Biological Diversity [YUN 1992, p. 683] (see p. 1051), the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities (see below) and regional seas programmes (see p. 1067). UNEP conveyed the findings of that meeting to the fourth meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (see p. 1355), which agreed on the date and venue of the recommended inter-agency meeting, to be organized by the UN Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea (see p. 1362).

The inter-agency consultative meeting on the establishment of GMA (Paris, 8-9 September) discussed general modalities of GMA in terms of a coordinating mechanism, secretariat, involvement of existing assessments, funds, new resources and capacity-building. UNEP presented "A Survey of Global and Regional Marine Environmental Assessments and Related Scientific Activities", together with a proposal on the modular partnership approach as a possible modality for GMA, whereby each UN agency would take responsibility in the assessment according to its mandate.

UNEP organized a planning meeting (Nairobi, 19-21 November) to develop a multi-purpose module for assessing the coastal and marine environment that would address the needs of relevant policy instruments, including the Convention on Biological Diversity (see p. 1051), GPA (see below) and the regional seas programmes (see p. 1067). The meeting discussed how current UNEP assessments could contribute to the module and identified areas of cooperation with key partners.

Global Programme of Action

On 7 February (dec. 22/2 II), the Governing Council requested the Executive Director to address, in the implementation of the Global Programme of Action (GPA) for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities [YUN 1995, p. 1081], the 2001 Montreal Declaration on the implementation of GPA [YUN 2001, p. 965], the Monterrey Consensus, adopted at the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953], and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation (ibid., p. 821) as they related to GPA objectives. He was asked to continue to contribute to the work of the Informal Coordinating Group on Oceans, Coasts and Islands formed for the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development, with a view to providing input to the Commission on Sustainable Development when considering the Summit's results and creating synergies among the Type II partnerships relating to coastal and marine issues; to promote the concept of integrated coastal area and river basin management, and to facilitate scientific, management and institutional links between freshwater and coastal/marine management, taking into consideration existing national and regional experience; to develop a strategy paper on the environmental dimensions of water supply and sanitation in the context of integrated water resource and waste-water management, and cooperate with relevant UN bodies in developing indicators to assess the impact of improved sanitation on the environment; and to further develop the principles of guidance on municipal waste-water management [YUN 2002, p. 1055] for submission to the Governing Council in 2005. The Executive Director was further requested to assess the feasibility of organizing regional consultations on the development of waste-water emission targets at the national and subnational levels, including reference to ecological benefits. The Council urged Governments to adopt, and the Executive Director to integrate into UNEP's work, a holistic environmental approach to sanitation and the implementation of the World Summit sanitation target [YUN 2002, p. 822], incorporating the provision of household sanitation services and all other components of the water management process. He was asked to submit to the Governing Council in 2005 a report on action taken by the UNEP secretariat to implement the decision, including on preparations for the second Intergovernmental Review Meeting of the Global Programme of Action in 2006.

In resolution 58/240 of 23 December (see p. 1355), the General Assembly called on States to advance the implementation of GPA and the 2001 Montreal Declaration.

Coral reefs

On 7 February [dec. 22/2 IV], the Governing Council extended the scope of its 2001 decision [YUN 2001, p. 965] on the International Coral Reef Initiative (ICRI) [YUN 1995, p. 1084] to cover the period 2003-2004. It requested the Executive Director to continue to support ICRI to enhance its development and impact, and to support the International Coral Reef Action Network (ICRAN), set up in 2001 to address the state of the declining coral reefs by facilitating implementation of the priorities identified by ICRI [YUN 2001, p. 966]. The Council noted that, at the World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821], ICRI had been expanded to include three additional tropical seas containing coral communities. The Executive Director was asked to promote the participation of industries in the Network; to continue giving effect to the 2001 Governing Council decision as it related to collaborative efforts between UNEP's coral-related activities and multilateral environmental conventions, and collaborative approaches with UN agencies; and to submit a progress report on the conservation and sustainable use of coral reefs to the Governing Council in 2005.

Regional Seas Programme

On 7 February, the Governing Council adopted a series of decisions regarding the Regional Seas Programme. A decision on regional seas strategies for sustainable development [dec. 22/2 III A] requested the Executive Director to support regional seas conventions and action plans to incorporate a series of strategic elements, as specified in the decision, in their programmes of work and to bring those elements to the attention of the conventions' member States. He was asked to develop activities aimed at securing long-term sustainability, taking into account the outcome of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]. The Governing Council also asked him to facilitate the establishment of mechanisms and instruments to protect inland waters, mainly through UNEP regional offices, and to support the establishment of new regional seas conventions and action plans. The Governing Council called on littoral States of shared inland waters to establish collectively legal instruments to protect the environment of those areas as soon as possible, and called on the Executive Director and countries of regional seas programmes to mobilize resources for implementing the programmes' plans of action. Governments were invited to: take a more proactive role in implementing the programme of work of their respective regional seas conventions and action plans and strengthen and develop "ownership" over them; broaden governmental participation through the involvement of all relevant national ministries; and broaden monitoring, assessment and training activities.

Regarding the Action Plan for the Protection, Management and Development of the Marine Coastal Environment of the North-West Pacific Region (NOWPAP), established in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 966], the Governing Council [dec. 22/2 III B] requested the Executive Director to facilitate the finalization of the host country agreements for the co-hosted regional coordinating unit with Japan and the Republic of Korea and to facilitate the recruitment process for the unit's staff; to continue to serve as NOWPAP's interim secretariat until the unit was established and operational, and support the unit's activities; and to facilitate the development and implementation of a Global Environment Facility (GEF) project on land-based activities in the NOWPAP region.

The Governing Council [dec. 22/2 III C] invited countries that had not become party to the Convention for Cooperation in the Protection and Sustainable Development of the Marine and Coastal Environment of the North-East Pacific, initially signed by six States in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1055], to do so and to take steps to implement the Convention; recommended that the Governments of the region convene a second intergovernmental meeting of the Convention's Plan of Action and requested the Executive Director to assist in that task (see p. 1068); and called on Governments of the region to establish a regional coordinating unit (RCU) for the Action Plan following offers made by countries.

In a decision on the 1981 Abidjan Convention for Cooperation in the Protection and Development of the Marine and Coastal Environment of the West and Central African Region [YUN 1981, p. 840] and the 1985 Nairobi Convention for the Protection, Management and Development of the Marine and Coastal Environment of the Eastern African Region [YUN 1985, p. 816] [dec. 22/2 III D], the Governing Council requested the Executive Director to provide technical and financial support to ensure coordination of the programmes of work for the two conventions through UNEP's Regional Seas Programme and to focus on activities that made the conventions effective instruments for sustainable development. He was also asked to provide support and delegate additional responsibilities to RCUs to ensure their coordination of regional consensus-building, intergovernmental dialogue and resource mobilization, and to undertake coordination activities for implementing the outcomes of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 937). Countries within the Nairobi and Abidjan Convention areas that had not ratified or acceded to the conventions were invited to do so and to implement them; the Executive Director was asked to provide technical and legal assistance to facilitate ratifications. Parties to the conventions were invited to make contributions to their trust funds.

With regard to the South-East Pacific Action Plan, created in 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 833], the Governing Council [dec. 22/2 III E] asked the Executive Director to strengthen horizontal cooperation and twinning arrangements established by the Permanent Commission for the South Pacific and the South Pacific Regional Environment Programme, and to support the organization of an interregional conference between those two regions, in addition to a conference between the regional seas programmes of the Pacific basin in 2004.

Recalling its 2001 decision in which it called for the establishment of a joint International Maritime Organization (IMO)/UNEP forum on emergency response to marine pollution [YUN 2001, p. 967], the Governing Council [dec. 22/2 V] invited IMO to review international regulations regarding single-hull tankers, especially those transporting heavy fuel oil, and to consider their more timely phasing out, with a view to reducing serious risk to the environment. IMO was invited to consider establishing a supplementary compensation fund for oil pollution victims, and for remediation of environmental damage through a protocol that could be considered for adoption during a diplomatic conference to be convened by IMO in London during May (see p. 1529). Coastal and flag States that had not done so were invited to ratify the 1990 International Convention on Oil Pollution Preparedness, Response and Cooperation [YUN 1990, p. 1108] and the 2000 Protocol on Preparedness, Response and Cooperation on Pollution Incidents by Hazardous and Noxious Substances [YUN 2000, p. 1438], and to implement the commitments of those instruments. UNEP and IMO were invited to strengthen their cooperation for implementation at the regional level of the global rules and regulations on preventing and combating pollution from ships. The Executive Director was requested to support, in the framework of the Regional Seas Programme, regional implementation of the Governing Council decision, in cooperation with IMO.

The second Intergovernmental Meeting of the Plan of Action for the Protection and Sustainable Development of the Marine and Coastal Environment of the North-East Pacific was held in Managua, Nicaragua, on 6 and 7 March. The first Intergovernmental Meeting was held in 2002 (Guatemala City, 19-22 February 2002).

In keeping with the Governing Council's 2003 decision on regional seas strategies for sustainable development (see p. 1067), the Fifth Global Meeting of Regional Seas Conventions and Action Plans (Nairobi, 26-28 November) agreed on the Strategic Guidelines for the Regional Seas Programme for 2004-2007.

Conservation of wildlife

As at 31 December, the 1994 Lusaka Agreement on Cooperative Enforcement Operations Directed at Illegal Trade in Wild Fauna and Flora [YUN 1994, p. 951], which entered into force in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 970], had been ratified or acceded to by six States (Congo, Kenya, Lesotho, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia). The Agreement aimed to reduce, and ultimately eliminate, illegal trafficking in African wildlife.

The sixth meeting of the Governing Council of the Parties to the Lusaka Agreement (Nairobi, 21-22 July) adopted decisions on the development and harmonization of wildlife laws and regulations, institutional capacity-building, cooperation with partners, an evaluation of the Agreement, and administrative and budgetary matters.

Governing Council action. In a 7 February decision on the UNEP World Conservation Monitoring Centre (WCMC) [dec. 22/1 III], the Governing Council requested the Executive Director to support the Centre's development, establish a network of collaborating centres in developing countries to cooperate with WCMC and assist them in undertaking their work programmes. In collaboration with UNESCO and FAO, he was asked to seek a renewed mandate from the Economic and Social Council/General Assembly for the United Nations List of National Parks and Protected Places, compiled by WCMC, reflecting UNEP's role and its agreement with the World Conservation Union on new partnership arrangements for the World Database on Protected Areas. The Governing Council endorsed the strengthening of the Database, including linking it with other databases on biodiversity and ecology; the establishment of a global consortium; and the strengthening of the relationship between UNEP and the World Conservation Union on global protected area issues.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/18 [YUN 2002, p. 1062], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [E/CN.15/2003/8 & Corr.1 & Add.1] on illicit trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna and illicit access to genetic resources (see p. 1051). The report, which was aimed at completing the 2002 progress report [YUN 2002, p. 1045] on the implementation of Council resolution 2001/12 [YUN 2001, p. 968], summarized replies received from 21 Member States in response to a 2002 request by the Secretary-General for comments on the progress report and for information on relevant national legislation, practical experience, statistics and measures taken. It discussed the involvement of organized criminal groups in such trafficking.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2003/30], adopted resolution 2003/27 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Illicit trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna

The Economic and Social Council,

Aware that the conservation of wild flora and fauna is essential for the maintenance of biological diversity, preservation of the environment and sustainable development,

Recalling the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora and the Convention on Biological Diversity and action taken to implement those conventions,

Aware of the existence of organized criminal groups operating transnationally that specialize in trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna, and concerned at the adverse environmental, economic and social repercussions of their activities,

Convinced that international cooperation and mutual legal assistance are both essential to prevent, combat and eradicate trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna,

Recalling its resolution 2001/12 of 24 July 2001, in which it urged States to adopt the legislative or other measures necessary for establishing trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna as a criminal offence in their domestic legislation,

Recalling also its resolution 2002/18 of 24 July 2002, in which it urged all Member States to cooperate with the Secretary-General and other competent entities of the United Nations system so that the report of the Secretary-General on progress made in the implementation of resolution 2001/12 might be finalized,

Taking note of the replies received from Member States concerning their national legislation and practical experience in the area of trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna, contained in the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Welcomes with satisfaction the report of the Secretary-General on trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna and illicit access to genetic resources;

2. Urges all Member States to cooperate, as appropriate, with the Secretary-General and competent entities of the United Nations system, in particular the Centre for International Crime Prevention of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the secretariat of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora and the secretariat of the Convention on Biological Diversity, with a view to preventing, combating and eradicating trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna;

3. Urges Member States to adopt preventive measures, where necessary, as well as to review their criminal legislation with a view to ensuring that offences relating to trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna are punishable by appropriate penalties that take into account the serious nature of those offences;

4. Encourages Member States to undertake awareness-raising activities to improve understanding of the serious impact of trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna;

5. Calls upon Member States to promote international cooperation as well as the conclusion of mutual legal assistance agreements, as appropriate, with a view to preventing, combating and eradicating trafficking in protected species of wild flora and fauna;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fourteenth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Protection against harmful products and waste

Chemical safety

As at 31 December, 72 States and the EC had signed and 53 States and the EC were parties to the 1998 Rotterdam Convention on the Prior Informed Consent (PIC) Procedure for Certain Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides in International Trade [YUN 1998, p. 997]. During the year, 10 States ratified the Convention and seven acceded to it. The Convention was to enter into force on 24 February 2004, 90 days following the deposit of the fiftieth instrument of ratification.

Pending the entry into force of the Convention, the PIC procedure, which promoted a shared responsibility between exporting and importing countries in protecting human health and the environment from the harmful effects of certain hazardous chemicals that were traded internationally, was applied voluntarily by Governments.

The 29-member Interim Chemical Review Committee, a subsidiary body of the Intergovernmental Negotiating Committee (INC) for an International Legally Binding Instrument for the Application of the PIC Procedure, established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 997] to make recommendations on specific chemicals or hazardous pesticide formulations for inclusion in the PIC procedure, held its fourth session (Rome, 3-7 March) [UNEP/FAO/PIC/ICRC.4/18], at which it made recommendations on chemicals that were subsequently banned by INC.

The tenth session of INC (Geneva, 17-21 November) [UNEP/FAO/PIC/INC.10/24] resumed consideration of issues associated with the implementation of the interim PIC procedure and preparations for the first Conference of the Parties, scheduled for September 2004. Drafts of rules of procedure, financial rules, rules on arbitration and conciliation, and compliance mechanisms and procedures were prepared for that meeting, as was a draft decision on cooperation between the interim secretariat and the World Trade Organization (WTO). Following recommendations made by the Interim Chemical Review Committee in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1063] and 2003 (see below), INC made four forms of asbestos (actinolite, anthophyllite, amosite, tremolite) subject to the interim PIC procedure, along with the chemical pesticide dinitro-ortho-cresol (DNOC)—an insecticide, weedkiller and fungicide—and its salts, such as ammonium, potassium and sodium salts. It also made severely hazardous pesticide formulations of a dustable powder containing a combination of benomyl at or above 7 per cent, carbofuran at or above 10 per cent, and thiram at or above 15 per cent subject to the interim procedure. Other INC action dealt with inconsistencies within the Convention and between the Convention and decision guidance documents, and a strategic approach to technical assistance to parties to the Convention. INC decided to hold its eleventh session, as a conference of plenipotentiaries, immediately before the first meeting of the Conference of the Parties, to decide whether to include in the voluntary PIC procedure chrysotile (a form of asbestos), tetraethyl lead and tetramethyl lead (gasoline additives), and the chemical pesticide parathion.

Notes by Executive Director. A note by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/INF/22] outlined progress in implementing a 2002 Governing Council decision on a strategic approach to international chemicals management [YUN 2002, p. 1063]. An initial steering committee, comprising the participating organizations of the Inter-Organization Programme for the Sound Management of Chemicals (IOMC) (FAO, the International Labour Organization, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, UNEP, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the World Health Organization (WHO)), together with the Intergovernmental Forum on Chemical Safety (IFCS), UNDP and the World Bank, was formed to deal with the practical aspects of developing a strategic approach. The committee proposed that the strategic approach development process should culminate in a high-level, multisectoral conference in late 2005.

A discussion paper by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/10/Add.1] provided an overview of UNEP activities in the area of chemicals, including its provision of secretariats for the Rotterdam Convention (see above) and the 2001 Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants [YUN 2001, p. 971] (see p. 1072); its chemical safety capacity-building programme; assessment projects; policy development efforts, including the development of the strategic approach to international chemicals management (see below); and coordination with other international organizations in chemical safety.

In response to Governing Council decisions of 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 969] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1063], the Executive Director, in a January note [UNEP/GC.22/INF/38], described UNEP's contribution to the implementation of IFCS's Bahia Declaration and Priorities for Action beyond 2000 [YUN 2001, p. 969].

A February note by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.22/INF/39] provided an overview of the Partnership for Clean Fuels and Vehicles, launched during the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] as a Type II project—projects jointly implemented by Governments, the private sector, civil society and international organizations—aimed at supporting the introduction of clean fuels and vehicles in developing countries for improved air quality. The Partnership held its first meeting in New York in November 2002.

A February addendum to a 2002 note by the Executive Director on progress in phasing out lead in gasoline [YUN 2002, p. 1063] updated information on the use of leaded gasoline in Africa [UNEP/GC.22/INF/23/Add.1].

Governing Council action. In February, the Governing Council adopted a series of decisions relating to chemical safety.

The Council invited States and regional economic integration organizations to ratify, accept, approve or accede to the Rotterdam Convention on the PIC procedure, make contributions to the trust fund which supported the interim arrangements and operation of the Conference of the Parties, and ensure the participation of developing countries and countries with economies in transition in INC's work. The Executive Director was requested, in consultation with the FAO Director-General, to promote cooperation between the Convention's interim secretariat and the secretariats of other relevant conventions [dec. 22/4 I].

Regarding chemicals management [dec. 22/4 IV], the Council: decided to proceed with the development of a strategic approach as it envisioned in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1063]; underlined that the scope of the approach should be defined and take into account economic, social and environmental aspects of chemicals management, with a view to contributing to sustainable development; and decided that the approach should be regularly reviewed to assess progress on chemical safety, in the light of the targets set at the 2002 World Summit. It requested the Executive Director to compile draft elements of a strategic approach for consideration by the first preparatory meeting (see below), and invited contributions from Governments, relevant international organizations and others. It endorsed the concept of an open-ended consultative process involving representatives of all stakeholder groups, at preparatory meetings and an international conference. It asked the Executive Director to propose that the international conference be held in conjunction with the ninth GC/GMEF special session in 2006, with a view to the latter serving as a high-level segment of the conference that would consider adopting the completed strategic approach document on UNEP's behalf and inviting the other relevant organizations to endorse it. The Council invited major agencies responsible for international development cooperation, and other relevant organizations and stakeholders, to collaborate in the further development of the strategic approach, and called on Governments and other stakeholders to contribute the required extra-budgetary resources. The Executive Director was requested to: report in 2004 on progress to develop the strategic approach; report in 2005 on progress and the outcomes of the preparatory meetings; and provide additional resources to cover core infrastructure costs.

In a decision on lead [dec. 22/4 III], the Governing Council called on Governments to act urgently to eliminate the use of lead in gasoline and on the commitment of the 2002 World Summit [YUN 2002, p. 821] to phase out lead-based paint and other sources of human exposure, to prevent exposure, in particular children's exposure, and to strengthen monitoring and treatment of lead poisoning. The Executive Director, in cooperation with other IOMC members, was asked to assist Governments in their efforts to phase out sources of human exposure and to strengthen monitoring, surveillance and treatment. He was also asked to provide additional resources to cover its core infrastructure costs, estimated at $500,000 for the 2004-2005 biennium.

IFCS session. The fourth session of IFCS (Bangkok, Thailand, 1-7 November) [IFCS/FORUM IV/16w] focused on topics relating to children and chemical safety; occupational safety and health; hazard data generation and availability; acutely toxic pesticides; and capacity-building. It adopted decisions on the globally harmonized system for the classification and labelling of chemicals and illegal international traffic in toxic and dangerous products.

Preparatory Committee meeting. Participants in the first session of the Preparatory Committee for the Development of a Strategic Approach to International Chemicals Management (SAICM) (Bangkok, Thailand, 9-13 November) [SAICM/PREPCOM.1/7] discussed potential issues to be addressed during the development of the strategy, examined ways to structure discussions and considered possible outcomes of the process.

Mercury assessment

In response to a 2001 Governing Council decision [YUN 2001, p. 969], the Executive Director submitted a note containing the global mercury assessment report [UNEP/GC.22/INF/3], which was produced within the IOMC framework and issued by UNEP. The key findings of the assessment had been presented in a 2002 report to the Governing Council [YUN 2002, p. 1064].

On 7 February [dec. 22/4 V], the Governing Council accepted the key findings of the mercury assessment and found that there was sufficient evidence of significant global adverse impacts from mercury and its compounds to warrant further international action to reduce the risks to human health and the environment. It decided that national, regional and global actions should be initiated as soon as possible, and urged all countries to take action to identify exposed populations and ecosystems and to reduce anthropogenic mercury releases. The Governing Council requested the Executive Director to facilitate and conduct technical assistance and capacity-building activities to support countries' efforts regarding mercury pollution, with the objectives outlined in the decision, in the light of the options for immediate action mentioned in the global mercury assessment. He was asked to cooperate with other international organizations that addressed mercury-related issues. The Governing Council invited the Executive Director to seek partnerships with NGOs and the private sector to support the implementation of actions on mercury. He was also asked to report on progress in 2005 and to compile a synthesis of views and options, including on the possibility of developing a legally binding instrument, a non-legally binding instrument or other measures. The Council decided to consider, in 2005, any further action that might be taken with regard to other heavy metals, for example, lead and cadmium.

Persistent organic pollutants

As at 31 December, 42 States were parties to the 2001 Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants (POPs) [YUN 2001, p. 971]. During the year, 15 States ratified the Convention and three acceded to it. The Convention would enter into force 90 days after the deposit of the fiftieth instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession.

The seventh session of the Intergovernmental Negotiating Committee for an International Legally Binding Instrument for Implementing International Action on Certain POPs (Geneva, 14-18 July) [UNEP/POPS/INC.7/28] reviewed ongoing international activities relating to the Committee's work and considered secretariat activities, preparation for the Conference of the Parties to the Convention and administrative matters. It adopted decisions on reporting DDT use; a register for specific exemptions; exempted use of POPs; identification and quantification of releases of the toxic chemicals dioxin and furan; technical guidelines on the environmentally sound management of POP wastes; national implementation plans; technical assistance; a draft memorandum of understanding with GEF; reporting; and effectiveness evaluation.

The Expert Group on Best Available Techniques/Best Environmental Practices, established by the Committee in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1064], held its first (Triangle Research Park, North Carolina, United States, 10-14 March) [UNEP/POPS/INC.7/6] and second (Villarrica, Chile, 8-12 December) [UNEP/POPS/EGB.2/3] sessions.

Governing Council action. On 7 February [dec. 22/4 II], the Governing Council invited States and regional economic integration organizations to ratify, accept, approve or accede to the Stockholm Convention, with a view to its entry into force by 2004, and authorized the continued participation of UNEP's secretariat in an interim secretariat of the Convention, as requested by the 2001 Conference of Plenipotentiaries [YUN 2001, p. 971]. The Executive Director was requested to promote cooperation between the interim secretariat and the secretariats of other conventions and to take actions regarding reduction of POPs as requested by the Governing Council in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1065].

He was urged to assist in implementing relevant resolutions of the Conference of Plenipotentiaries and the 2002 decisions of the Intergovernmental Negotiating Committee [YUN 2002, p. 1064]. The Executive Director was invited to facilitate voluntary implementation of the Convention prior to its entry into force. The Council appealed to Governments, intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and the private sector to provide financial resources for implementing interim arrangements prior to the first session of the Convention's Conference of the Parties.

Hazardous wastes

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the 1989 Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and their Disposal [YUN 1989, p. 420], which entered into force in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 685], rose to 158, with the accession of Equatorial Guinea, Ghana, Jamaica, Kazakhstan and the Marshall Islands. The 1995 amendment to the Convention [YUN 1995, p. 1333], not yet in force, had been ratified, accepted or approved by 43 parties. The 1999 Basel Protocol on Liability and Compensation for Damage Resulting from Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and their Disposal [YUN 1999, p. 998] had 13 signatories and one party (Ethiopia) at year's end.

The first session of the Open-ended Working Group of the Convention (Geneva, 28 April-2 May) [UNEP/CIW/OEWG/1/16] selected project proposals under the strategic plan for the implementation of the Convention to 2010, adopted by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1065], and approved project funding of up to $880,000 for 2003-2004. Other decisions related to annexes II and IX to the Convention; management of end-of-life mobile phones; partnership with NGOs, industry and the business sector; hazardous characteristics listed in annex III to the Convention; identification of hazardous wastes; disposal of polyvinyl chloride (PVC); guidelines on management of waste POPs and on wastes from metals and plastics; and recycling/reclamation of metals.

The second session of the Working Group (Geneva, 20-24 October) [UNEP/CIW/OEWG/2/12] selected further project proposals and adopted an interim work plan for partnership with NGOs and the industry and business sectors. Other decisions concerned implementing the Basel Protocol on Liability and Compensation [YUN 1999, p. 998]; legal aspects of dismantling ships; national definitions of hazardous wastes; annexes II, VII and IX to the Convention; and guidelines on the management of wastes with POPs.

(For information on the human rights aspects of the illicit movement and dumping of toxic and dangerous products and wastes, see p. 771.)

Cleaner production and sustainable consumption patterns

On 7 February [dec. 22/6], the Governing Council requested the Executive Director to strengthen UNEP's sustainable consumption and production activities, and existing eco-efficiency and cleaner production activities. He was further asked to support initiatives and activities to enhance corporate responsibility and accountability, and develop and facilitate consumer awareness campaigns; develop training, awareness-raising and capacity-building programmes in support of Governments, business and others, particularly in developing countries and countries with economies in transition, on sustainable production and consumption; take into account gender issues and differing circumstances in regions and countries; and take an active role in developing a 10-year framework of programmes to support regional and national initiatives on sustainable consumption and production, as set out in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821]. The Executive Director was asked to report regularly to GC/GMEF and to the Commission on Sustainable Development.

International Expert Meeting. A December report of the Executive Director [UNEP/GCSS.VIII/6] provided information on activities to accelerate the shift to sustainable consumption and production patterns, including the outcome of the International Expert Meeting on the 10-Year Framework of Programmes for Sustainable Consumption and Production (Marrakech, Morocco, 16-19 June) (see p. 840).

Other matters

Environmental law

On 7 February [dec. 22/17 A], the Governing Council, taking note of the Executive Director's report on the 2002 Global Judges' Symposium on the Role of Law and Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 1065], called on him to support, within the framework of the Programme for the Development and Periodic Review of Environmental Law for the First Decade of the Twenty-first Century (Montevideo Programme III), adopted by the Governing Council in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 972], the improvement of the capacity of those involved in promoting, implementing, developing and enforcing environmental law at the national and local levels to carry out their functions with the necessary skills, information and material.

The Executive Director was asked to report on progress in 2005.

In a further decision [dec. 22/17 D], the Executive Director was asked to report to the Council in 2005 on the implementation of Montevideo Programme III.

Occupied Palestinian and other Arab territories

In accordance with a 2002 Governing Council decision [YUN 2002, p. 1066], the Executive Director submitted a January note containing the Desk Study on the Environment in the Occupied Palestinian Territories [UNEP/GC.22/INF/31]. The Study, conducted by a team of environmental experts that visited the region in October 2002, contained recommendations on increasing transboundary and international cooperation concerning the environment in the region; developing a work plan from the Palestinian Authority's (PA) National Environment Action Plan and strengthening its Environmental Quality Authority, which was responsible for environmental administration in the Occupied Palestinian Territories; improving land-use planning; encouraging NGO cooperation between Palestinians and Israelis; increasing the private sector's involvement in environmental issues; and strengthening freshwater and wastewater management. The Study put forth short-, medium- and long-term recommendations to deal with solid wastes and hazardous wastes, and measures aimed at conservation and the protection of biodiversity.

Governing Council action. The Governing Council, on 7 February [dec. 22/1 V], requested the Executive Director to implement the Desk Study's recommendations. It asked him to make UNEP available to act as a facilitator and impartial moderator to assist in solving urgent environmental problems. It further requested him to facilitate the identification of technical and financial solutions to implement the recommendations; promote capacity-building programmes; encourage technology transfer; and promote the PA's participation in meetings and processes of multilateral environmental agreements. The Council called on Governments and international organizations to support the rehabilitation of the environment and reconstruction of damaged environmental infrastructure. The Executive Director was asked to report in 2005.

Follow-up to the International Year of Ecotourism (2002)

In accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1998/40 [YUN 1998, p. 999], the Secretary-General transmitted, in June, a report [A/58/96] prepared by the Secretary-General of the World Tourism Organization (WTO/OMT) on results of the International Year of Ecotourism, 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1066], proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 53/200 [YUN 1998, p. 1000]. The report outlined activities undertaken by WTO/OMT, UNEP and other international organizations, and by Governments, in preparation for and during the Year. It also provided information on follow-up activities and recommendations for further action by UNEP and WTO/OMT, including guidelines for ecotourism and sustainable tourism policies, training in the public use of parks and nature interpretation, and fostering public-private partnerships.

---

Human settlements

---

Follow-up to the 1996 UN Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and the 2001 General Assembly special session

Report of Executive Director. In January [HSP/GC/19/4], the Executive Director of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) reported on follow-up to the General Assembly's twenty-fifth (2001) special session [YUN 2001, p. 973] to review implementation of the Habitat Agenda [YUN 1996, p. 994], adopted by the 1996 United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) [ibid., p. 992]. The report summarized highlights from the special session, the implementation process of the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium, adopted by the special session in resolution S-25/2 [YUN 2001, p. 974], and the transformation of the UN Centre for Human Settlements into UN-Habitat, and of the Commission on Human Settlements into UN-Habitat's Governing Council (see p. 1078). It also described the reorganization and upgrading of UN-Habitat and its enhanced focus on both process and substance.

Report of Secretary-General. In July [A/58/178], the Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 57/275 [YUN 2002, p. 1070], reported on follow-up to the special session. As requested by the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [ibid., p. 953] and Assembly resolution 56/206 [YUN 2001, p. 987], Governments worked with UN-Habitat to explore ways to mobilize domestic financial resources for sustainable urbanization, especially in developing countries and countries with economies in transition. Following a review of the UN Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation (see p. 1084), UN-Habitat proposed a global shelter facility or similar mechanism to fight urban poverty. Governments reiterated the need for increased financial support for UN-Habitat, resulting in a predicted 28 per cent rise in general-purpose contributions, from $6 million in 2002 to $7.7 million by July 2003. UN-Habitat collaborated with international financial institutions to encourage implementation of the Habitat Agenda and the MDG target of significantly improving the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020 [YUN 2000, p. 52]. The Cities Alliance partnership between the World Bank and UN-Habitat continued to provide a forum for policy coordination and support for pro-poor city development strategies and slum-upgrading programmes. UN-Habitat established a Water and Sanitation Trust Fund within the Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation to facilitate the achievement of the MDG and the related targets of reducing by half the proportion of people without sustainable access to safe water and sanitation (see below).

The Fourth Global Forum of Parliamentarians on Habitat (Berlin, 12-14 May) adopted the Berlin Declaration, which called on Governments to increase financial support for the realization of the MDG on slums and ensure predictable financial resources for UN-Habitat to strengthen its work on poverty alleviation. Follow-up activities to the UN-Habitat campaigns on secure tenure and urban governance, launched in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 995], were supported by the Cities Alliance, with a view to preparing participatory pro-poor strategies. Seven city development strategy exercises were completed and a synthesis was prepared through the Urban Management Programme, an effort by UN-Habitat, UNDP and other support agencies.

In the light of water- and infrastructure-related activities of NEPAD (see p. 937), UN-Habitat was formulating a second phase of the Managing Water for African Cities Programme, the first activity to be funded from the Water and Sanitation Trust Fund (see above), to promote increased investment in the seven cities already involved (Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire; Accra, Ghana; Addis Ababa, Ethiopia; Dakar, Senegal; Johannesburg, South Africa; Lusaka, Zambia; and Nairobi) and to promote improved sanitation and pro-poor governance structures.

Following the decision of the eleventh (2003) session of the Commission on Sustainable Development to focus on water, sanitation and human settlements at its 2004 and 2005 sessions (see p. 842), UN-Habitat was designated the task manager for drafting a scoping paper on human settlements. It entered a partnership with the United Nations Statistics Division for monitoring the implementation of the MDG target on slums; created 11 partnerships in the Coalition for Sustainable Urbanization aimed at implementing the 2002 Johannesburg Declaration and Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 821]; entered into the Partnership for Local Capacity Development, designed to promote cohesion and collective efficiency in making international support available for the development of local capacities for sustainable urbanization; and monitored relevant partnerships.

The Secretary-General encouraged Governments to increase their contributions in order to ensure the viability of the UN Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation in its enhanced role [YUN 2002, p. 1068] (see p. 1084); to review UN-Habitat's Partnership Agreement to determine how it might fit into countries' development assistance programmes; to facilitate partnerships at the national and local levels, in implementing the Habitat Agenda and the relevant MDGs; to facilitate the participation of representatives of the poor and vulnerable in the second (2004) World Urban Forum; and to establish national urban observatories and urge local urban observatories to collect, analyse and report information on urban conditions and trends in order to formulate urban development policies. They were called on to incorporate the question of human settlements in their national development policy plans, their United Nations Development Assistance Frameworks (UNDAFs), poverty reduction strategy papers and other relevant development plans.

Coordinated implementation of Habitat Agenda

In May [E/2003/76], the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/38 [YUN 2002, p. 1069] regarding the coordinated implementation of the Habitat Agenda. The report discussed the recent increase in contributions to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation (see p. 1084) and collaboration with international financial institutions and regional development banks. It outlined UN-Habitat's cooperation with local authorities, relations with NGOs, partnership with civil society organizations, and relations with the private sector and with youth organizations and women's groups. It described the establishment of the Habitat Agenda Task Manager System, which was supported by the Assembly in the 2001 Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements [YUN 2001, p. 974], and collaboration between UN-Habitat and other UN system entities.

The Secretary-General encouraged Governments to increase their contributions for implementation of the Habitat Agenda, the 2001 Declaration and the MDGs, and facilitate partnerships at the national and local levels with civil society organizations, local authorities and the business sector. They were called on to support UN-Habitat's youth programme, especially in Africa, in the areas of youth employment and crime prevention. Members of UN country teams working on the common country assessment (CCA) and UNDAF, together with national partners, were urged to call on UN-Habitat to include the issues of shelter, sustainable human settlements and urban poverty in preparing the CCA and UNDAF.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 July [meeting 49], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2003/62 [draft: E/2003/L.12] without vote [agenda item 13 (d)].

Coordinated implementation of the Habitat Agenda

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2002/38 of 26 July 2002 and General Assembly resolutions 3327(XXIX) of 16 December 1974, 32/162 of 19 December 1977, 56/206 of 26 December 2001 and 57/275 of 20 December 2002,

Recalling also the Istanbul Declaration on Human Settlements, the Habitat Agenda and the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium, which focused on adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements,

Recalling further the goal contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration of achieving a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020, and the relevant decisions contained in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Social Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), to halve, by 2015, the proportion of people who are unable to reach or to afford safe drinking water, as outlined in the Millennium Declaration, and the proportion of people who do not have access to basic sanitation,

Recalling that Governments have the primary responsibility for the sound and effective implementation of the Habitat Agenda and the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium, and stressing that the international community should fully implement its commitments to support Governments of developing countries and countries with economies in transition in their efforts, through the provision of requisite resources, capacity-building, transfer of technology and the creation of an international enabling environment,

Welcoming the progress made in the revitalization of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) and the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation,

Commending those countries which have contributed to the Foundation, as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General,

Expressing concern at the relatively low level of non-earmarked contributions, leading to the continuing and growing imbalance between earmarked and non-earmarked contributions to the Foundation,

Recognizing the need for increased and predictable financial contributions to the Foundation in the new millennium to ensure timely, effective and concrete results in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda, the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium and the relevant internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, particularly in developing countries,

Taking note of efforts by UN-Habitat to implement the Habitat Agenda and the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium,

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Underlines the commitments made by Governments to implement the Habitat Agenda, the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium, and the development goal contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration of achieving a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020;

2. Invites Governments in a position to do so to increase their financial contributions to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, and invites international financial institutions, as appropriate, to assist developing countries in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda, the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium and the goal contained in the Millennium Declaration of achieving a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020, while giving due consideration to marginalized groups;

3. Welcomes decision 19/18 of 9 May 2003 of the Governing Council of UN-Habitat endorsing the establishment of the Special Human Settlements Programme for the Palestinian people and the Technical Cooperation Trust Fund of 5 million United States dollars for an initial period of two years, and urges the international donor community and all financial institutions to support UN-Habitat in the immediate mobilization of financial resources for the establishment and operation of the Programme and the Fund;

4. Invites Governments to facilitate furthering of partnerships at the national and local levels, as appropriate, with civil society organizations, local authorities, women's groups, the business sector and other Habitat Agenda partners in implementing the Habitat Agenda and the relevant targets of the Millennium Declaration;

5. Encourages Governments to support and enable the participation of youth in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda through social, cultural and economic activities at the city level and in other national and local activities;

6. Encourages UN-Habitat to continue to implement the Habitat Agenda and the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium, including by promoting partnerships with local authorities, non-governmental organizations and private sector and other Habitat Agenda partners;

7. Requests the Executive Director of UN-Habitat to strengthen the implementation of the Habitat Agenda Task Manager System to allow better monitoring and mutual enforcement of actions taken in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda;

8. Calls for increased cooperation between UN-Habitat and other members of the United Nations Development Group through existing coordination mechanisms such as the common country assessment and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework processes;

9. Encourages Governments to include issues pertaining to shelter and sustainable human settlements and urban poverty in their national development strategies, including poverty reduction strategy papers, where they exist;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the Council at its substantive session of 2004 on the implementation of the present resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/491], adopted resolution 58/226 without vote [agenda item 101].

Implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and the strengthening of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat)

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3327(XXIX) of 16 December 1974, 32/162 of 19 December 1977, 34/115 of 14 December 1979, 56/205 and 56/206 of 21 December 2001 and 57/275 of 20 December 2002,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolutions 2002/38 of 26 July 2002 and 2003/62 of 25 July 2003,

Recalling the Habitat Agenda and the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium,

Recalling also the goal contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration of achieving a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020, as proposed in the Cities Without Slums Initiative, and recalling further the goal contained in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") to halve, by the year 2015, the proportion of people who are unable to reach or afford safe drinking water and the proportion of people who do not have access to basic sanitation,

Taking into account the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, as well as the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development,

Recognizing that the overall thrust of the new strategic vision of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) and its emphasis on the two global campaigns on secure tenure and urban governance are strategic points of entry for the effective implementation of the Habitat Agenda, especially for guiding international cooperation in respect of adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements development,

Conscious of the need to achieve greater coherence and effectiveness in the implementation of the Habitat

Agenda, the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium and the relevant internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration.

Recognizing the need for increased and predictable financial contributions to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation in the new millennium to ensure timely, effective and concrete results in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda, the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium and the relevant internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration and the Johannesburg Declaration and Plan of Implementation, particularly in developing countries,

Welcoming the establishment by the Executive Director of UN-Habitat of a Water and Sanitation Trust Fund as a financing mechanism to support the creation of enabling environments for pro-poor investment in water and sanitation in developing-country cities,

Commending those countries that have contributed to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General to the Economic and Social Council,

Reiterating the call to the Executive Director of UN-Habitat to increase her efforts to strengthen the Foundation in order to achieve its primary operative objective, as set out in resolution 3327(XXIX), of supporting the implementation of the Habitat Agenda, including supporting shelter, related infrastructure-development programmes and housing-finance institutions and mechanisms, particularly in developing countries,

Recalling the decision of the Commission on Sustainable Development at its eleventh session to address the themes of water, sanitation and human settlements in its next review and policy sessions,

Noting the efforts by UN-Habitat to forge partnerships with Habitat Agenda partners, other United Nations funds and programmes and international financial institutions, such as the World Bank,

Recognizing that shelter and human settlements planning and administration are important sectors in humanitarian efforts,

Expressing its appreciation to the Government of Spain and the city of Barcelona for their willingness to host the second session of the World Urban Forum in 2004 and to the Government of Canada and the city of Vancouver for their willingness to host the third session of the World Urban Forum in 2006,

1. Takes note of the report of the Governing Council of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) on the work of its nineteenth session and the report of the Secretary-General on the special session of the General Assembly for an overall review and appraisal of the implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and the strengthening of UN-Habitat;

2. Recognizes that Governments have the primary responsibility for the sound and effective implementation of the Habitat Agenda and the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium, and stresses that the international community should fully implement its commitments to support the Governments of developing countries and countries with economies in transition in their efforts, through the provision of the requisite resources, capacity-building, the transfer of technology and the creation of an international enabling environment;

3. Encourages Governments to include issues pertaining to shelter and sustainable human settlements and urban poverty in their national development strategies, including poverty reduction strategy papers, where they exist;

4. Urges Governments to promote pro-poor investments in services and infrastructure, in particular water and sanitation, in order to improve living environments, in particular in slums and informal settlements;

5. Encourages Governments to establish local, national and regional urban observatories and to provide financial and substantive support to UN-Habitat for the further development of methodologies for data collection, analysis and dissemination;

6. Also encourages Governments to support and enable the participation of youth in the implementation of the Habitat Agenda through social, cultural and economic activities at the city level and other national- and local-level activities;

7. Encourages Governments and UN-Habitat to continue to promote partnerships with local authorities, non-governmental organizations, the private sector and other Habitat Agenda partners, including women's groups and academic and professional groups, in order to empower them, within the legal framework and conditions of each country, to play a more effective role in the provision of adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements development in an urbanizing world;

8. Encourages UN-Habitat to continue to work closely with other relevant agencies within the United Nations system, in particular members and observers of the United Nations Development Group and the members of the Inter-Agency Standing Committee;

9. Requests UN-Habitat to strengthen further its efforts to make the Cities Alliance initiative an effective means for the implementation of the twin goals of the Habitat Agenda, namely, adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements development in an urbanizing world;

10. Takes note with appreciation of the efforts by the Cities Alliance partnership between the World Bank and UN-Habitat, and other donor countries, to continue to provide an important forum for policy coordination and development, as well as to provide support for the preparation of pro-poor city development strategies and slum-upgrading programmes within the legal framework and conditions of each country;

11. Invites the Secretary-General to incorporate the assessment of the progress towards the target of achieving a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020 in his report on the review in 2005 of the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

12. Welcomes the fund-raising efforts of the Executive Director of UN-Habitat, which realized an increase in the general-purpose contributions of the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation for the year 2003;

13. Calls for continued financial support to UN-Habitat through increased voluntary contributions to the Foundation, and invites Governments to provide multi-year funding to support programme implementation;

14. Requests UN-Habitat to collaborate with the Division for Sustainable Development of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat in the preparations for the twelfth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development to promote a fruitful discussion on the thematic cluster of issues on water, sanitation and human settlements;

15. Requests the Executive Director of UN-Habitat to inform the Governing Council of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme of the results of the discussions on the topics of water, sanitation and human settlements at the twelfth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development;

16. Notes that the upcoming sessions of the World Urban Forum, a non-legislative technical forum, which will be held in Barcelona in 2004 and in Vancouver in 2006, will offer an opportunity to experts to exchange experiences, best practices and lessons learned in the field of human settlements;

17. Invites donor countries to support the participation of representatives of the developing countries in the second and future sessions of the World Urban Forum;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the resource needs of UN-Habitat and the United Nations Office at Nairobi under review so as to permit the delivery, in an effective manner, of necessary services to UN-Habitat and the other United Nations organs and organizations in Nairobi;

19. Requests UN-Habitat, as the focal point for human settlements development and for coordination of human settlements activities within the United Nations system, to work towards coordination of human settlements issues as inputs to the overall coordination of humanitarian efforts, including through its participation in the consideration by the Economic and Social Council, in the near future, of the issue of the transition from relief to development;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Special session of the General Assembly for an overall review and appraisal of the implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and the strengthening of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat)".

UN Human Settlements Programme

Governing Council

The Governing Council of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), which was transformed from the former Commission on Human Settlements in 2001 by the General Assembly in resolution 56/206 [YUN 2001, p. 987], held its first session in 2003. To signify the continuity and relationship between the former Commission and the Governing Council, the session was designated as the nineteenth session (Nairobi, 5-9 May) [A/58/8]. The Council adopted 18 resolutions, one of which recommended the adoption of its draft rules of procedure by the General Assembly [res. 19/1] (see p. 1079). In a resolution on countries with economies in transition [res. 19/15], the Council asked the Executive Director to assist in mobilizing additional funding from sources indicated in the 2001 Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements, adopted by the twenty-fifth special session of the General Assembly in resolution S-25/2 [YUN 2001, p. 974], and from other sources; invited her to incorporate countries with economies in transition in UN-Habitat's global programmes and campaigns; and requested her to report in 2005. A further resolution [res. 19/17] requested UN-Habitat to continue to give special attention to LDCs in its programme activities; the Council asked the Executive Director to mainstream the implementation of the 2001 Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010, adopted by General Assembly resolution 55/279 [YUN 2001, p. 771], in UN-Habitat activities and intergovernmental processes, and called on her to cooperate with the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States to ensure implementation of the 2001 Brussels Declaration on LDCs [ibid., p. 770] and the Programme of Action for the Decade.

The Executive Director was asked to advance UN-Habitat's work programme in the engagement of youth in urban governance and in addressing the problem of youth at risk; ensure UN-Habitat's participation in the Secretary-General's initiative on youth employment [YUN 2002, p. 1192]; develop a Global Partnership Initiative on Urban Youth Development in Africa; establish an interim youth consultative mechanism and initiate a draft strategy on enhancing youth engagement in UN-Habitat's work; and report in 2005 [res. 19/13].

Having considered a report of the Executive Director on decentralization [HSP/GC/19/14], the Council decided that the special themes of its twentieth (2005) session would be involvement of civil society in improving local governance, and post-conflict and natural and human-made disaster assessment and reconstruction [res. 19/9]. Taking note of the secretariat report on the rural dimension of sustainable urban development [HS/GC/19/6], the Council requested the Executive Director to raise awareness regarding positive urban-rural development linkages and sustainable urbanization, disseminate good practices and policies, and report in 2005 [res. 19/10]. The Council endorsed a proposal made in the Executive Director's report on dialogues on effective decentralization and strengthening of local authorities [HSP/GC/19/7] to establish a multi-disciplinary ad hoc advisory panel on decentralization. She was asked to intensify dialogue on decentralization and strengthening local authorities among Governments, local authorities and other Habitat Agenda partners, and report in 2005 [res. 19/12]. In another resolution [res. 19/8], the Council decided on arrangements for the accreditation of local authorities and other Habitat Agenda partners. Regarding the second (2004) session of the World Urban Forum [res. 19/14], the Council requested the Executive Director to take into account the work of the Council's current session in preparing the Forum's provisional agenda and documentation, and report in 2005.

Regarding UN-Habitat's global campaigns on secure tenure and urban governance, launched in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 995], the Executive Director was asked to expand the campaigns; further mainstream the campaigns' principles through UN-Habitat regional offices, regional anchor institutions, urban observatories, national and local institutions, and other networks; enhance synergy with UN organizations; and report in 2005 [res. 19/3].

On 9 May [res. 19/2], the Council approved the 2004-2005 draft work programme [HSP/GC/19/8 & Add.1 & Add.1/Corr.1] and budget of $44.4 million for 2004-2005 [HSP/GC/19/9/Add.3], as presented by the Executive Director, following the submission of an earlier budget proposal [HSP/GC/19/9], a review by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [HSP/GC/19/9/Add.1] and supplementary information [HSP/GC/19/9/Add.2]. It authorized the Executive Director to make commitments up to $50.5 million and approved an increase in the 2004-2005 general-purpose statutory reserve from $1 million to $2.4 million. The Executive Director was asked to submit in 2005 the 2006-2007 budget and work programme and to report regularly on the work programme.

Resolutions on implementing the MDG on slum-dwellers [res. 19/5], cooperation between UN-Habitat and UNEP [res. 19/4], water and sanitation in cities [res. 19/6], regional and technical cooperation [res. 19/7], strengthening the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation [res. 19/11], women's role and rights in human settlements development and slum upgrading [res. 19/16], and human settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory [res. 19/8] are covered below.

The Commission considered a theme paper on urban development and shelter strategies in favour of the urban poor [HSP/GC/19/5]; and reports on cooperation with UN system agencies and organizations, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs [HSP/GC/19/12] and on matters arising from the resolutions adopted by UN bodies [HSP/GC/19/13]. It also considered a note by the Executive Director [HSP/GC/19/10] on the proposed UN-Habitat 2006-2009 medium-term plan.

On 10 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Governing Council's report [A/58/8] (decision 2003/309).

Rules of procedure

Annexed to the Governing Council's report was the report of the Working Group on the Rules of Procedure of the Governing Council, established by the Council on 5 May to consider the draft rules of procedure set forth by the Executive Director [HSP/GC/19/3/Add.2]. The draft rules were prepared by the Committee of Permanent Representatives to UN-Habitat and adopted by the Working Group. Also annexed to the Working Group's report was the statement by the Chairman of the Group giving a legal interpretation of the phrase "recognized by the United Nations" in draft rule 64. On 9 May [res. 19/1], the Governing Council recommended to the General Assembly the adoption of the Council's draft rules of procedure, which were attached to the resolution. The draft rules dealt with the duration and place of Council sessions; provisional agendas; representation and credentials; Bureau officers and their functions; subsidiary organs; duties of the Executive Director and the secretariat; official and working languages; public meetings; the conduct of Council business; the decision-making process; participation of non-members; and changes to the rules of procedure.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/58/491], adopted resolution 58/227 without vote [agenda item 101].

Rules of procedure of the Governing Council of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat)

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 32/162 of 19 December 1977, in which it established the Commission on Human Settlements and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat),

Recalling also its resolution 56/206 of 21 December 2001, in which it decided to transform the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) into the secretariat of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), and the Commission on Human Settlements into the Governing Council of UN-Habitat, a subsidiary organ of the General Assembly,

Having considered the recommendation of the Governing Council, in its resolution 19/1 of 9 May 2003, that the General Assembly adopt its draft rules of procedure as contained in the annex to that resolution, and the oral statement by the Chairman of the Working Group on Rules of Procedure of the Governing Council,

Adopts the draft rules of procedure of the Governing Council of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) as contained in the annex to Governing Council resolution 19/1.

UN-Habitat activities

UN-Habitat's operational activities in 2003 helped Governments create policies and strategies aimed at strengthening a self-reliant management capacity at the national and local levels, and focused on promoting shelter for all, improving urban governance, reducing urban poverty, improving the environment, and managing disaster mitigation and post-conflict rehabilitation.

Under the Safer Cities Programme, UN-Habitat organized the International Safer Cities Conference "Sustainable Safety: Municipalities at the Crossroads" (Durban, South Africa, 25-28 November) and the Africities Summit (Yaoundé, Cameroon, 2-6 December). A safer cities training manual for local authorities was developed. UN-Habitat had some 154 technical projects in 61 countries, most of them in LDCs, including projects in the post-war societies of Afghanistan, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Iraq, Kosovo, Rwanda and Somalia.

UN-Habitat's Global Campaign for Urban Governance, which supported sustainable human settlements development in urban areas through improved governance [YUN 2000, p. 995], and its Global Campaign for Secure Tenure, an advocacy instrument (ibid.), were helping to transform institutional structures, initiate policy and legislative changes, and enhance organizational capacities in 27 countries. In 2003, governance and secure tenure campaigns were launched at the national level in Brazil; an expert group meeting was organized in Egypt as part of the regional campaigns on those issues in the Arab States; preparations for campaign launches were initiated in Cuba, Ghana, Indonesia, Mexico, Nepal, Peru and Uganda, and preparations were advanced in Burkina Faso, Morocco and Senegal; and follow-up activities were held in Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Cambodia, India, Jamaica, the Philippines and South Africa.

The fourth phase (2001-2005) of the Urban Management Programme (UMP), a joint technical assistance project of UN-Habitat and UNDP, focused on achieving maximum impact at the city level through consolidating and enhancing the city consultation process. UMP also provided a platform for its partners—19 anchor institutions and over 40 local and national institutions—to work on emerging urban management themes. The Sustainable Cities Programme focused on environmental planning and management capacities in the Gambia, Nigeria, Sri Lanka and other countries, and management tools were locally adapted and translated in Cuba, Morocco, the Russian Federation and Sri Lanka.

UN-Habitat continued in-country activities to achieve the MDG on slums [YUN 2000, p. 52]. Activities related to the Three Cities Project (Durban, South Africa; Mumbai, India; and Manila, Philippines) and to the cities without slums sub-regional programme for Eastern and Southern Africa [YUN 2002, p. 1072], which were initiated in Lesotho, Mozambique, South Africa, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania. UN-Habitat published Guidelines for National Implementation of the Global Campaign for Secure Tenure and a revised concept paper on the campaign. The Housing Rights Programme, a joint initiative of UN-Habitat and the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, developed indicators to monitor realization of the human right to adequate housing. To monitor achievement of the MDG on slums, UN-Habitat implemented its first survey for monitoring urban inequities in Addis Ababa; five other such surveys were implemented as a part of demographic and health surveys of Bangladesh, Bolivia, Egypt, Ghana, the Philippines and Turkey. Ten urban observatories and local indicators facilities were set up in Africa, the Far East and Latin America. UN-Habitat's flagship report, The Challenge of Slums: Global Report on Human Settlements 2003, provided a baseline for the global monitoring of progress towards the realization of the MDG on slums by assessing globally the number of slum-dwellers and the physical extent and characteristics of slums; determining the forces underlying the emergence and development of slums; assessing their social, spatial and economic characteristics; assessing policy responses to slums, including those of the private sector, international organizations and civil society; and exploring future policy directions.

UN-Habitat expanded its training and capacity-building programmes in Africa and the Arab States, providing technical and methodological support through training of trainers and ongoing technical cooperation projects. It also produced training publications, implemented subregional and national training of trainers workshops, and conducted six major training workshops.

In 2003, UN-Habitat organized an expert group meeting on gender and women's issues in human settlements, which recommended priority areas for action at the local, national, regional and international levels, and led to the adoption by the Governing Council of a resolution on women's roles and rights in human settlements development and slum upgrading (see p. 1083). Other outcomes included adoption of a women's development code, in collaboration with governmental and women's organizations, and initiation of the Akshara Visakha literacy programme in India, in which 11,000 women from 208 slums were enrolled. UN-Habitat published its Gender Evaluation Report, June 2003.

Throughout 2003, UN-Habitat continued to implement the settlements rehabilitation programme in Iraq, addressing the needs of over 800,000 internally displaced persons and other vulnerable groups. The handover of the programme to the Coalition Provisional Authority on 21 November included 2,854 completed projects valued at $234 million, 185 ongoing projects valued at $94.5 million, assets amounting to $39.8 million and international purchase orders of $61.7 million. UN-Habitat formed a High-level Advisory Panel for the Reconstruction of Iraq to engage with Iraqi professionals and Ministers of Planning and Development Cooperation and to place a new UN-Habitat programme under Iraqi ownership. It also produced two publications: UN-Habitat in Iraq, April 2003 and Rebuilding Iraq—Iraq Reconstruction Plan for Shelter and Urban Development, October 2003.

A new governance and development planning programme was formulated in Kosovo, and the disaster management programme continued its activities there in collaboration with the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK).

In 2003, 63 projects and programmes were under way in 30 countries in the Africa and Arab States region, including a regional urban profile study, to be completed in 2004. In collaboration with UNDP, UN-Habitat programme manager offices were set up in Burundi, Cameroon, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Egypt, Ethiopia, Nigeria, South Africa and the United Republic of Tanzania. UN-Habitat was producing profiles of the cities of Bamako (Mali), Douala (Cameroon), Durban (South Africa), Lagos (Nigeria), Lusaka (Zambia), Nairobi (Kenya) and Rabat (Morocco) as a basis for development plans and investment project identification. In Asia and the Pacific, 40 projects were under way in 2003. Projects in the Latin America and the Caribbean region included the Central American programme on vulnerability reduction and the programme on urban security. Reports were issued covering gender, participatory monitoring of programmes, upgrading policies in Central America, urban water and sanitation, and a review of best practices in the region.

Strategic vision

An April secretariat note [HSP/GC/19/INF/10] updated information on UN-Habitat's strategic vision, which was adopted by the Governing Council in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1003]. The strategic vision comprised: knowledge management and reporting, expanding the global understanding of urban development, shelter and poverty, and tracking progress in implementing the Habitat Agenda; advocacy of norms for sustainable urbanization and urban poverty reduction, through two global campaigns (see p. 1080) and a number of global programmes; technical cooperation in linking norms and campaign/programme goals to urban poverty reduction activities; innovative financing for urbanization and specific shelter needs of the urban poor; and strategic partnerships to leverage resources and coordinate international programme activities. The note also discussed the urbanization of poverty and the need to strengthen local authorities to address that challenge; the UN response to urbanization; and the programmatic framework for the strategic vision.

Cooperation with UNEP

On 9 May [res. 19/4], the Governing Council, having considered a joint progress report of the Executive Directors of UN-Habitat and of UNEP on cooperation between the two programmes [HSP/GC/19/11], requested the UN-Habitat Executive Director to continue to implement General Assembly resolution 53/242 [YUN 1999, p. 975] and to expand cooperation between UN-Habitat and UNEP. She was asked to intensify joint work in the sustainable cities, managing water for African cities, and disaster management programmes and similar joint programmes, and establish a mechanism for coordinated oversight; make effective the Habitat Agenda task manager system (see p. 1075) to promote efficiency among Habitat Agenda partners in relation to the biennial session of the World Urban Forum, taking into account UN system-wide coordination mechanisms; and report in 2005.

MDG implementation

With a view to achieving the MDG of significantly improving the lives of 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020 [YUN 2000, p. 52], the Governing Council [res. 19/5] requested the Executive Director to present a strategy paper to the Committee of Permanent Representatives for its approval; explore options to increase financial resources to support the Goal, taking into account the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953]; further develop and strengthen UN-Habitat's collaboration with the Cities Alliance, all relevant stakeholders and other UN agencies, including the Bretton Woods institutions; assist Governments in developing policy guidelines and action plans, in particular through implementing the Global Campaigns for Secure Tenure and for Urban Governance; establish an advisory group to monitor, identify and promote alternatives to unlawful evictions; strengthen the Global Urban Observatory; and report in 2005. Governments and local authorities were invited to allocate the necessary resources to meet the human settlements Goals of the 2000 United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], and to develop and implement national and local action plans for upgrading slums. Member States and Habitat Agenda partners were invited to support UN-Habitat in developing methodologies for data collection and dissemination and to evaluate concepts and sources of city and intra-city statistics.

Water and sanitation

An April secretariat note [HSP/GC/19/INF/6] discussed the report Water and Sanitation in the World's Cities: Local Action for Global Goals, a UN-Habitat contribution to the International Year of Freshwater, 2003 (see p. 1033). The report called for local and national action to achieve the MDG to reduce by half the proportion of people without sustainable access to safe drinking water by 2015 [YUN 2000, p. 52] and the MDG on slums [ibid.]. It focused on knowledge and information gaps in vital areas that affected decision-making, analysed the causes of deficiencies in services and suggested priority actions.

On 9 May [res. 19/6], the Governing Council requested the Executive Director to strengthen and promote UN-Habitat's work in urban drinking water and sanitation. She was asked to develop a programme for water and sanitation in human settlements in countries with economies in transition; to consult with Governments in other regions on the possibility of establishing or strengthening water and sanitation programmes in cities; and to publish Water and Sanitation in the World's Cities as a recurrent publication every three years.

Regional and technical cooperation

The Governing Council, on 9 May [res. 19/7], urged the Executive Director to strengthen efforts to make the Cities Alliance initiative an effective means for implementing the goals of the Habitat Agenda—adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements in an urbanizing world—as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/275 [YUN 2002, p. 1070], and invited host countries to support the placement of locally recruited UN-Habitat programme managers in selected UNDP offices. Noting the emerging co-operation between UN-Habitat and regional development banks to promote sustainable urbanization in developing countries, it called on the Executive Director to pursue such initiatives in other regions. The Executive Director was asked, in the context of the update of the UN-Habitat regionalization strategy [HSP/GC/19/INF/9], to strengthen UN-Habitat's regional presence, including by strengthening the existing regional offices, and to study the establishment of new offices. The Council recommended that UN-Habitat operational activities be associated with the Global Campaigns for Secure Tenure and for Urban Governance, and focus on the MDGs and the Plan of Implementation of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] related to water, sanitation, waste management, integrated transportation systems and slum upgrading, and on capacity-building in support of sustainable urbanization policies at the country and city levels. It also recommended that UN-Habitat devote specific attention to human settlements needs in the reconstruction of countries and territories affected by armed conflicts or by other disasters, in close coordination with multilateral and bilateral agencies, and that it ensure links and continuity between the humanitarian and developmental requirements of the human settlements sector.

Occupied Palestinian Territory

Pursuant to a 2001 Commission on Human Settlements resolution [YUN 2001, p. 984], the Executive Director submitted a March report on the housing situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and establishment of a human settlements fund for Palestinians living in that Territory [HSP/GC/19/2/Add.3]. It found that the key housing challenge was the lack of control over the limited land available to Palestinians. Among the negative impacts on land were the expansion of Israeli settlements and the building of bypass roads; closures for military and other purposes; confiscation of Palestinian land; limitations on granting building permits; house demolition by Israel; deterioration of access to basic services, especially water; and environmental degradation.

The report recommended that UN-Habitat provide long-term technical assistance for shelter delivery; support land titling and registration of apartments; assist in preparing regional and local master plans and granting building permits; support the Palestinian Authority (PA) in formulating a social housing strategy for vulnerable groups; review laws and regulations governing financial institutions to expand financing for housing; and assess institutional capacities. It contained a proposal for a special human settlements programme for the Territory, to be financed by a technical cooperation trust fund that would be used for reconstruction once peace was attained. The report recommended that UN-Habitat formulate the programme, with an initial funding of $5 million, in cooperation with the PA and others, focusing on building capacity for good governance at the central and municipal levels; promoting tenure security including legal rights; and mobilizing resources to support shelter for poor people. UN-Habitat should establish the technical cooperation fund and launch a campaign to raise financial contributions.

On 9 May [res. 19/18], the Governing Council endorsed the establishment of the Special Human Settlements Programme for the Palestinian People and the Technical Cooperation Fund of $5 million for an initial period of two years. It urged the international community and financial institutions to support the mobilization of financial resources for the Programme and Fund. The Executive Director was requested to report in 2005.

Role of women

On 9 May [res. 19/16], the Governing Council requested the Executive Director to promote the integration of gender perspectives in all activities, especially in the Global Campaigns for Secure Tenure and for Urban Governance, and in slum-upgrading projects. She was asked to develop mechanisms to monitor the impact of human settlements policies and programmes on women in cities, especially those in low-income areas, or to strengthen such mechanisms where they already existed. Governments were invited to increase assistance to UN-Habitat for mainstreaming gender issues and the work of the Gender Coordinating Unit, in particular for gender-specific slum-upgrading projects. They were requested to promote and protect women's equal access to adequate housing, property and land, including rights to inheritance, and access to credit. Governments were urged to address forced relocation and forced evictions, to promote participation of women in human settlements planning and development to ensure gender-sensitive implementation of slum-upgrading programmes, and to promote credit schemes for shelter and income-generating activities that were affordable to poor women, particularly those affected by HIV/AIDS. The Executive Director was asked to report on the implementation of the resolution in her progress reports to the Governing Council beginning in 2005.

OIOS audit

In September, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the ninth annual Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) report [A/58/364], which covered UN-Habitat activities from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003. During that period, OIOS issued 17 critical recommendations, of which two were implemented, and satisfactory progress was under way to implement the remaining 15.

A follow-up audit of the settlement rehabilitation programme in northern Iraq found that UN-Habitat had not implemented audit recommendations made by OIOS and the Board of Auditors in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1074], even though the OIOS recommendations had been accepted by UN-Habitat's senior management. UN-Habitat's failure to mitigate the high risks relating to the inclusion of a currency fluctuation clause in construction contracts, as recommended by OIOS, resulted in losses to the United Nations of more than $2 million and could result in significant additional losses if the exchange rate for the Iraqi dinar remained the same or appreciated further against the United States dollar. The bidding process for construction contracts had serious internal control weaknesses. There was no assurance that management had exercised due diligence and that the Organization was receiving best value for its money; nor was there an established project management reporting and approval structure, a lack which prevented senior management from monitoring project activities and taking timely corrective action. UN-Habitat accepted most of the recommendations and took measures to implement them.

An audit of the UN-Habitat publication function showed that useful work had been done to achieve an integrated, coordinated operation, but a publication initiative launched in 2001 had not fully achieved its goals. UN-Habitat agreed to re-examine its organizational structure, policies and planning mechanisms to ensure that publication activities were cost-effective.

UN Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation

Report by Executive Director. In response to General Assembly resolution 56/206 [YUN 2001, p. 987], the Executive Director reported in March on progress made in strengthening the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation [HSP/GC/19/2/Add.4]. The report summarized the results of two studies—one finalized in March 2002, the other begun in September 2002—on options to strengthen the Foundation and its contribution to the implementation of the Habitat Agenda [YUN 1996, p. 992] and the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51], particularly the MDG on slums. It provided information on two suggested financial instruments. One was a domestic currency loan guarantee facility (Global Shelter Facility) with a proposed initial capitalization of $200 million, to play a catalytic role in mobilizing public and private sector domestic resources to meet the housing and infrastructure needs of the urban poor; the other was a complementary fund (Shelter Assistance Fund), with a funding target of $100 million over five years, to finance technical assistance and provide seed capital, capacity-building grants and challenge funds to help put in place the preconditions for slum upgrading and other interventions.

The report recommended that UN-Habitat's Governing Council endorse the establishment of a loan guarantee facility. It proposed that the Executive Director act to strengthen the Foundation to provide financial support for: UN-Habitat's core staff and programmes; seed capital, challenge funds and grants to encourage the mobilization of domestic resources for shelter and infrastructure; technical support services in developing countries; and local currency guarantees. It recommended that the Council endorse the suggested financing targets for the proposed Global Shelter Facility and the Shelter Assistance Fund. It also recommended that the Council establish an Executive Board for the Foundation to oversee its operations, particularly financial instruments and facilities, and approval of loans and grants. The appointment of Board members and the rules of procedure would be subject to the approval of the Governing Council, or, during the intersessional period, of the Committee of Permanent Representatives.

Governing Council action. On 9 May [res. 19/11], the Governing Council urged the international community to extend financial support so that the Foundation could mobilize domestic resources, from both the private and public sectors, for shelter and infrastructure in developing countries, focusing on slum-dwellers and low-income people. It requested the Executive Director to strengthen the Foundation so as to provide finance for UN-Habitat core staff and programmes; mobilization of seed capital, domestic and other financial resources for shelter and infrastructure with priority to the needs of low-income households; and technical support services to developing countries and countries with economies in transition for mobilizing and utilizing domestic resources to improve human settlements and to assist countries in preparing and implementing projects. It also requested the Executive Director to work with the World Bank Group and other development banks, the private sector and other partners to field test approaches through pilot projects and to develop longer-term programmes to mobilize resources for increased affordable credit for pro-poor human settlements development in developing countries and countries with economies in transition. She was asked to report in 2005. The Governing Council deferred decisions on setting funding targets for Foundation activities, as set out above, to the 2005 Governing Council session, pending review.

Chapter VIII

Population

In 2003, the world's population reached 6.3 billion. The population activities of the United Nations continued to be guided by the Programme of Action adopted at the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) and the key actions for its further implementation adopted at the twenty-first special session of the General Assembly in 1999. In December, the Assembly decided to devote one day during its fifty-ninth (2004) session to the commemoration of ICPD's tenth anniversary. It also decided to devote a high-level dialogic to international migration and development in 2006.

The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the largest internationally funded source of population assistance, was the lead UN organization for advancing the ICPD Programme of Action. It continued its work in reproductive health, HIV/AIDS, adolescent and youth needs, humanitarian assistance and partnership brokering. In 2003, UNFPA's donor base grew to 151, comprising 149 donor Governments, the Mars Trust and the grass-roots campaign, the "34 Million Friends". The Fund's income from all sources increased to $397.9 million from $373.2 million in 2002 and programme expenditure decreased to $380 million from $410.1 million in 2002.

The Commission on Population and Development, at its thirty-sixth session, considered the central theme of population, education and development, and adopted a resolution on the subject. Other matters discussed by the Commission included financial resources to implement the ICPD Programme of Action, world population monitoring and the activities of the UN Population Division.

New publications of the Population Division included the World Fertility Report 2003 and World Population Prospects: The 2002 Revision.

---

Follow-up to 1994 Conference on Population and Development

---

On 17 December, the General Assembly decided to devote one day during its fifty-ninth (2004) session to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) (decision 58/529).

Implementation of the Programme of Action

Commission on Population and Development action. In follow-up to the recommendations of ICPD [YUN 1994, p. 955], the Commission on Population and Development, at its thirty-sixth session (New York, 31 March–4 April) [E/2003/25], considered the central theme of population, education and development. That subject was one of the key actions for the further implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action, contained in resolution S-21/2 [YUN 1999, p. 1006], which was adopted in 1999 at the twenty-first special session of the General Assembly (ICPD+5) [ibid., p. 1005]. The Commission also discussed the flow of financial resources for assisting in the implementation of the Programme of Action.

Population, education and development

As decided at its 2000 session [YUN 2000, p. 1007], the central theme for the Commission's 2003 session was "Population, education and development". For the Commission's discussion of the theme, the Secretary-General submitted a concise report on world population monitoring, 2003 [E/CN.9/2003/2], which summarized recent information on selected aspects of population, education and development, examining the topics of: trends in population, education and development; education and entry into reproductive life; interrelationships between education and fertility; education, health and mortality; and education and international migration.

The report found that education played a key role in national development, besides being a prime component of individual well-being. Through education, individuals were enabled to have choices and empowered to make decisions in such areas as work, place of residence, family size, health and lifestyles, and personal development. The Secretary-General's conclusions were summarized under the broad headings of interrelationships among population, education and development; expected changes in the school-age population and the achievement of internationally recognized goals; the impact of education on patterns of marriage, onset of sexual activity, fertility and contraceptive use; relationships among education, health and mortality; and the role of education in international migration.

The Commission also considered the Secretary-General's report on the monitoring of population programmes focusing on population, education and development [E/CN.9/2003/3]. The report highlighted progress towards implementing the ICPD Programme of Action as it related to education, population and reproductive health. It emphasized education as a human right and as a key factor in sustainable development, noting that reductions in fertility, morbidity and mortality rates and the empowerment of women were largely assisted by progress in education. Particular attention was paid to the education of young people, especially girls. Major challenges outlined in the report included illiteracy, eliminating gender disparities and reducing gaps in financing, in information and in the capacity to deliver quality education for all.

The Secretary-General concluded that education was the common denominator for managing such world challenges as globalization of production and trade, conflicts and increased ethnic rivalries, the widening digital divide and persistent problems of famine, pandemics and unequal resource distribution. Currently, about 1 billion young people between the ages of 15 and 24 needed to learn how to keep themselves healthy, provide for their families and find new jobs or remain employed. Using the vehicles of public statements and policy guidelines, the UN family and its partners should advocate the formulation of national education policies and programmes that maximized female enrolment and continuation at school, promoted the value of girl children to their families and society, and mobilized community participation in support of education for all.

The Commission, by a 4 April resolution [E/2003/25 (res. 2003/1)], which it brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Council, requested the UN Population Division to continue its research and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) to continue its programming on the linkages between population, education and development, including the relationships between population factors and the attainment of the goals of the 1990 World Conference on Education for All [YUN 1990, p. 763]. The Population Division was also asked to contribute its research findings to the implementation of the outcomes relevant to population, education and development of the UN conferences and summits. The Commission encouraged the Population Division to disseminate the results of its research, as a contribution to the greater understanding and awareness of the interrelationships among population, education and development. UNFPA was encouraged to continue its support for population, education and development programmes so as to accelerate the implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action.

Financial resources

In accordance with General Assembly resolutions 49/128 [YUN 1994, p. 963] and 50/124 [YUN 1995, p. 1094], the Secretary-General submitted to the Commission a report on the flow of financial resources for assisting in the implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action [E/CN.9/2003/4]. The report examined trends in bilateral, multi-lateral and foundation/non-governmental assistance to population activities in developing countries for 2000 and provisional figures for 2001, and provided estimates of domestic expenditures reported by developing countries for 2001. International population assistance and domestic expenditures declined in 2001, according to preliminary figures. External assistance for population was estimated at $2.3 billion in 2001, compared with $2.6 billion in 2000. Domestic governmental and non-governmental expenditures in developing countries were estimated at $7.1 billion in 2001, compared with $8.6 billion in 2000. Together, external assistance and domestic expenditures for population activities yielded a global estimate of $9.4 billion in 2001, compared with a target figure of $17 billion for 2000, as estimated in the Programme of Action.

International migration and development

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/203 [YUN 2001, p. 993], the Secretary-General submitted a July report on international migration and development [A/58/98]. The report summarized activities relating to international migration undertaken by organizations within and outside the UN system, taking account of lessons learned and best practices on migration management and policies. Also discussed were the actual and potential UN system mechanisms to address related issues, including the possibility of convening a conference on international migration and development.

The report described activities of UN departments, programmes, funds, specialized agencies and other bodies in respect of international migration. It also gave an overview of activities undertaken by several intergovernmental organizations on migration issues, particularly in providing assistance to migrants.

The Secretary-General noted that the lessons learned and best practices regarding international migration management, as well as policy guidance emanating from them, had helped to address some of the consequences of international migration for development and to clarify aspects of the migration and development nexus that provided insights into ways of maximizing the development benefits of international migration.

In accordance with Assembly resolution 56/203, the Secretary-General again solicited the views of Member States on the possibility of convening a UN conference on international migration and development. Governments had been asked for their views on the issue in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1096], 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1072] and 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1020]. Of the 46 Member States and one non-member State that had responded, 25 were in favour of convening a conference and 22 expressed reservations.

A majority of the Governments in favour of a conference considered that it should be of a technical and analytical nature. It was envisaged that the proposed conference would debate major issues and deepen theoretical and empirical knowledge of the trends, causes and consequences of international migration on development. A few countries suggested that the conference could provide a forum for dialogue among concerned Governments, strengthen cooperation between countries of origin and of destination, and establish a system of collaboration to maximize the benefits of international migration. It was frequently suggested that the conference outcome could be the adoption of recommendations or principles, especially relative to migration policies in origin and destination countries or with respect to the establishment of an institutional framework to foster cooperation. Several Governments mentioned that the conference could be held in 2004 or 2005 and last from 2 to 10 days.

Most of the 22 Governments not in favour of a conference did, however, underscore the importance of international migration and development. Many considered that existing mechanisms, such as the Commission on Population and Development or a General Assembly special session, could provide appropriate forums for discussion of the issue. Some countries felt that the Organization's financial constraints should be considered and one country stressed that a regional approach was more appropriate.

The Secretary-General stated that while the possibility of convening a UN conference on international migration and development remained uncertain, the international community's expectation that the United Nations should address that global challenge in a comprehensive manner had grown. Areas in which the Organization was expected to play a key role included data collection, research, coordination of activities among concerned organizations, provision of advisory services and technical assistance, advocacy, and promotion of the ratification of international instruments related to international migration.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/58/483/Add.3], adopted resolution 58/208 without vote [agenda item 93 (c)].

International migration and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development adopted at Cairo, in particular chapter X on international migration, and the key actions for the further implementation of the Programme of Action, set out in the annex to General Assembly resolution S-21/2 of 2 July 1999, in particular section II.C on international migration, as well as the relevant provisions contained in the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development, the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development, the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women and the outcome documents of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth special sessions of the General Assembly,

Recalling also its resolutions 49/127 of 19 December 1994, 50/123 of 20 December 1995, 52/189 of 18 December 1997, 54/212 of 22 December 1999 and 56/203 of 21 December 2001 on international migration and development, as well as Economic and Social Council decision 1995/313 of 27 July 1995,

Recalling further its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Reaffirming the obligations of all States to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms, reaffirming also the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and recalling the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Recalling the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, which entered into force in July 2003,

Recalling also that heads of State and Government at the United Nations Millennium Summit resolved to take measures, inter alia, to ensure respect for and protection of the human rights of migrants, migrant workers and their families, to eliminate the increasing acts of racism and xenophobia in many societies and to promote greater harmony and tolerance in all societies,

Reaffirming that the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council should carry out their respective responsibilities as entrusted to them in the Charter of the United Nations, and that Member States should strive to achieve the goals set at the relevant United Nations conferences in the formulation of policies and the provision of guidance to and coordination of United Nations activities in the field of population and development, including activities on international migration,

Reaffirming also the need for the relevant United Nations organizations and other international organizations to enhance their financial and technical support to developing countries, as well as countries with economies in transition, to foster migration that contributes to development,

Taking note of the views of Member States on the question of convening a United Nations conference on international migration, its scope, form and agenda, and noting the low number of respondents to the survey of the Secretariat, and in this context inviting the Secretary-General to continue considering the issue,

Noting the work undertaken under the International Migration Policy Programme by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the International Organization for Migration and the United Nations Population Fund, in partnership with the International Labour Office, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and other relevant international and regional institutions, with a view to strengthening the capacity of Governments to manage migration flows at the national and regional levels and thus foster greater cooperation among States towards orderly migration,

Aware that, among other important factors, both domestic and international, the widening economic and social gap between and among many countries and the marginalization of some countries in the global economy, due in part to the uneven impact of the benefits of globalization and liberalization, have contributed to large flows of people between and among countries and to the intensification of the complex phenomenon of international migration,

Aware also that, in spite of the existence of an already established body of principles, there is a need to enhance international cooperation on migration issues and make further efforts, including through appropriate mechanisms, to ensure that the human rights and dignity of all migrants and their families, in particular of women migrant workers, are respected and protected,

Taking note of the rights of all migrants and their obligation to respect national legislation, including legislation on migration,

Noting that an overall commitment to multiculturalism helps to provide a context for the effective integration of migrants, preventing and combating discrimination and promoting solidarity and tolerance in receiving societies,

Recognizing the need for further studies and analyses of the effects of the movements of highly skilled migrant workers and those with advanced education on economic and social development in developing countries, and emphasizing the need for further studies and analysis of the effects of those movements on development in the context of globalization,

