The Group had originally suggested that the Preparatory Committee's session be held from 30 March to 17 April and that the June session be authorized to be extended by one week; however, the Assembly extended the March/April session by one week. By the Group's draft, the Assembly would have reiterated its request for technical assistance to developing countries, whereas the revised text stipulated using, inter alia, existing resources to the greatest extent possible and providing such aid in accordance with established procedures. The adopted text also called for brief summaries of national papers and their submission by States wishing to do so, rather than all States.

Instead of the synoptic table and report requested, the original draft contained a request to the Conference Secretary-General to prepare for submission to the Preparatory Committee, by 15 May 1981, or shortly thereafter, a comparative report containing conclusions and recommendations from various reports classified according to those common to all, to some and to specific regions, essentially following the indicative outline suggested by the Preparatory Committee for submission of such reports.

Explaining their position after approval of the text, the United Kingdom, speaking also on behalf of Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany and the United States, reiterated their opposition to the participation of the Council for Namibia at international conferences in the capacity indicated. Luxembourg, speaking on behalf of member countries of the European Economic Community, stated that financial provisions in paragraph 19 for travel expenses and subsistence allowances for certain participants should not constitute a precedent, a view shared by Sweden, speaking on behalf of the Nordic countries. Australia, Austria, Canada, Japan, New Zealand and the United States also opposed the financial provisions in that paragraph, and Israel said that had the paragraph been put to a vote it would have voted against it. The United States also reiterated its opposition to the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization in international conferences as representing the Palestinian people. New Zealand felt that account should have been taken of the view of the Department of Conference Services to the effect that the preparation of all the required Conference documentation would raise serious problems.

Czechoslovakia, speaking also on behalf of Bulgaria, the Byelorussian SSR, the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mongolia, Poland, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR, wished to point out that the strictest economy should be exercised and resources allocated rationally; the additional personnel and technical expertise to be provided should be absorbed within available resources. They saw no need to extend the next session of the Preparatory Committee, prolong the duration of the Conference or fix the deadline for submission of national papers at year's end. Moreover, they reserved their position on the resolution's financial implications.

Uses of the sea

In May 1980, the Secretary-General reported to the Economic and Social Council on uses of the sea, in accordance with a request of 30 July 1975.<sup>10</sup> The report addressed two developments of importance in the field of marine affairs: the trend towards extension of national marine-resource jurisdictions, generally to a 200-mile limit, which in many cases had taken the form of an exclusive economic zone, modelled after guidelines emerging from negotiations in the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea (see p. 136); and a growing emphasis on a regional approach in marine affairs. The report assessed these trends and, as they had important ramifications for the programmes and structures of several United Nations organizations—including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, WHO, the World Meteorological Organization, the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization—it dealt with how those organizations were responding and identified problem areas and desirable policy directions. The report concluded that the Council's views, particularly on the activities of the concerned United Nations bodies, would be useful.

At its May/June 1980 session, CPC noted that there was general support for selecting the area of marine activities as the subject for a cross-organizational programme analysis in 1983, but deferred final decision on the scope of the analysis until its 1981 session.

Oceans and regional seas, including marine pollution and living marine resources, were considered by the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) at its April 1980 session, at which it requested the UNEP Executive Director to consider convening in 1981 a governmental expert group to review the regional seas programme and to report to the Council's 1982 session. He was also requested to accelerate implementation of the eight UNEP-sponsored regional seas programmes, to make funds available to them and to report on ways in which these programmes might be strengthened and co-ordinated with other components of the environment programme. He was further requested to include the East African and South-West Atlantic regions within the regional seas programme with a view to initiating a management and conservation programme of the resources of those areas. (See also p. 718.)

On 25 July 1980, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1980/68 by which it took note with appreciation of the Secretary-General's activities aimed at introducing, within allocated budgetary resources, the marine dimension into the development process, and of the activities of the various United Nations organizations concerned with marine affairs. It requested the Secretary-General and the heads of those organizations to ensure that their activities regarding the scientific, economic and technical aspects of the development of the uses of the sea and its resources were consonant with and lent support to the successful conclusion of a treaty on the law of the sea, having particular regard to, the needs of developing countries. The Secretary-General was also requested to report to the Council's second regular 1983 session on economic and technical developments in marine affairs.

Resolution 1980/68 was adopted without vote. On 18 July, the text, sponsored by Malta, had been approved in like manner by the Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee after several suggested amendments were incorporated by the sponsor. Malta accepted a USSR oral amendment to paragraph 1 stipulating that the Secretary-General's activities aimed at introducing the marine dimension into the development process would be within allocated budgetary resources. Speaking after approval of the text, Chile observed that it regarded the phrase "the marine dimension" in that paragraph as without legal validity; Chile said it would have been better to keep to terminology used in the Law of the Sea Conference.

Brazil withdrew an oral draft decision- that Malta's text be transmitted to the General Assembly for consideration in the light of the outcome of the Conference on the Law of the Sea- and put forward oral amendments, accepted by Malta, to have the Council bear in mind, rather than welcome, CPC's initiative to make marine affairs the possible subject of a cross-organizational analysis, and to take note of, rather than endorse, the Secretary-General's activities in marine affairs.

On Bulgaria's oral proposal, Malta prefaced preambular references to the uses of the sea by the word "peaceful" and included international co-operation, in addition to national economic development, as the whole of which rational management of marine resources and peaceful uses of the sea was an essential component. Malta also combined and reworded two former paragraphs to become the first operative paragraph.

Natural resources reports

Multilateral assistance for exploration of natural resources

At its regular 1980 session, the General Assembly had before it a report of the Secretary-General on multilateral development assistance for the exploration of natural resources in developing countries, submitted in accordance with a 1979 resolution by which the Assembly had decided to provide financing, utilizing regular technical co-operation programme resources, for missions to assist in estimating requirements for location and exploration of natural resources in interested developing countries.<sup>11</sup>

The report examined the background and current status of the assessment missions. As at mid-August 1980, assessments had been completed on exploration requirements in Botswana, Ghana, Jamaica, Lesotho, Malawi, Mauritania, Mozambique, the Philippines and Swaziland. However, not all assessments covered both mineral and energy resources. An additional 12 countries had expressed interest in receiving assistance: Benin, China, Costa Rica, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Morocco, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Seychelles, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo.

The report stated that the data provided by the completed reports indicated that the investment flow required to develop energy and mineral resources might be much greater than had been originally envisaged and that it might be appropriate for the Assembly to consider accelerating investment flow and technical co-operation to those countries for which estimates of financial requirements had already been made.

The Assembly's action-taking note of the Secretary-General's report- was incorporated in decision 35/405 (see subsection above on the INTERNATIONAL DRINKING WATER SUPPLY AND SANITATION DECADE).

Co-ordination of aid in technology transfer

A report of the Secretary-General on co-ordination of ongoing activities of the United Nations system in the field of assistance in technology transfer to developing countries for the exploration and exploitation of natural resources, submitted pursuant to a 1979 Assembly resolution,<sup>12</sup> was considered by the Assembly at its regular 1980 session.

The report noted that at the global level of intersectoral co-ordination the new consultative committees of ACC, especially the Consultative Committee on Substantive Questions and its two components- dealing with programme and related policy matters, and operational activities -together with the new interagency Task Force on Science and Technology for Development (see p. 677), had the capacity to improve co-ordination of the activities of the United Nations system in technology transfer in the natural resources field. At the country level, effective intersectoral co-ordination could be furthered through the system of resident co-ordinators currently being established.

The report pointed out that, with respect to sectoral co-ordination in the fields of water resources, earth resources management, energy and mineral resources, new institutional arrangements on a system-wide basis were either currently being formulated or were to be submitted for consideration by various intergovernmental bodies, while working arrangements were in effect to carry forward specific aspects of joint programming and interagency co-operation.

The Assembly's action-taking note of the Secretary-General's report was incorporated in decision 35/405 (see subsection above on the INTERNATIONAL DRINKING WATER SUPPLY AND SANITATION DECADE).

United Nations Revolving Fund for Natural Resources Exploration

The United Nations Revolving Fund for Natural Resources Exploration, established in 1973<sup>13</sup> and administered by UNDP, provided risk capital for natural resources development. An increase in activities during 1980 brought the number of operational projects to nine by year's end.

Four new projects were approved in Guyana, Egypt, the Philippines and the Upper Volta and work began on others in Guyana, Kenya, Liberia, the Philippines, the Sudan and Suriname. A project in Ghana, approved in 1979, was cancelled because of legal difficulties and work in three other projects in Argentina, Cyprus and Panama neared the stage where a decision to terminate or extend the projects would have to be made.

The Fund assisted Ecuador to prepare a tender for international bidding in connexion with a discovery of silver, while project identification, evaluation and pre-project development accelerated, with requests from Brazil, Burundi, China, Haiti, Peru and Sri Lanka. Other missions were undertaken to Angola, Morocco, Portugal and the Republic of Korea.

On 26 June 1980, the Governing Council of UNDP took note of an April report on the Fund's activities by the UNDP Administrator, decided to delegate to him authority to approve Fund-financed projects on the understanding that each approval would be reported to the Governing Council's regular annual session; it recommended that he explore the possibility of co-financing projects and programmes with Governments and international financial, public and semi-public institutions of natural resources exploration and development, with the recipient country's agreement and on the understanding that repayment arrangements would remain unaffected. The Governing Council approved the financing of an expert group to be established, in accordance with a 1979 Economic and Social Council decision,<sup>14</sup> to review the Fund's functions, institutional arrangements, funding and repayment system including the possibility of activating the Fund's original mandate to cover energy resources; a maximum cost of $120,000 was to be met from the Fund's general resources.

On 25 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted decision 1980/176, by which it took note of the Administrator's report and the Governing Council's decision. The Third Committee had approved the text on 22 July, as orally proposed by its Chairman. On 5 December, the General Assembly took similar action in adopting decision 35/421; its Second Committee had approved the text, submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman, on 31 October. All these actions were taken without vote.

Voluntary contributions

Panama pledged $1,000 to the United Nations Revolving Fund for Natural Resources Exploration for 1981 at the 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, held at United Nations Headquarters on 6 and 7 November (see p. 600). As at 31 December 1980, contributions to the Fund totalling $3,485,423 had been received in 1980 from the Dominican Republic ($2,000) and the United States ($3,483,423).

Operational activities

During 1980, the Department of Technical Co-operation for Development, a principal arm of the Secretariat acting as executing agency for UNDP, continued its technical co-operation programme in the field of natural resources, which totalled some $47 million. Of this amount, $41 million came from UNDP, $2.1 million from the regular programme of technical assistance and $3.4 million from extrabudgetary sources. Activities were carried out in the following fields.

Energy. Nine regular programme-financed energy assessment missions were undertaken. The strong demand for these missions reflected the importance attached to the re-evaluation of geologic data and the need for developing countries to explore for hydrocarbons. The Department supported UNDP projects concerned with petroleum exploration and development in seven countries and continued support to 20 projects in electric-power generation, particularly in institution-building, electric systems planning, including generation and transmission, and training. Technical assistance for 73 projects was provided to: Albania, Angola, Bangladesh, Belize, Bulgaria, Burundi, Cape Verde, Cayman Islands, China, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Djibouti, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Madagascar, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Mozambique, Nepal, Pakistan, Peru, Republic of Korea, Romania, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sierra Leone, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zambia. There were 84 experts in the field and 190 fellowships were awarded.

Minerals. Support for 56 projects was provided in Africa, the Americas and Asia, most of which were concerned with mineral exploration and exploitation. The countries or territories receiving assistance were: Angola, Argentina, Benin, Bolivia, Burma, Burundi, China, Colombia, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Haiti, India, Lesotho, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Namibia, Nepal, Nigeria, Pakistan, Rwanda, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Singapore, Somalia, Turkey, United Republic of Cameroon, United Republic of Tanzania, Upper Volta, Zaire, Zambia. Field experts, including consultants, numbered 205, and 81 fellowships were granted. Eleven missions financed by the regular programme of technical assistance were undertaken to help assess mineral exploration, national exploration capabilities and input needed to strengthen financial institutions and exploration programmes.

Water resources. Several countries were assisted to establish or strengthen national groundwater services and governmental capacities to control saline intrusion and pollution, provide for artificial recharge of aquifers, develop and manage water resources and formulate integrated basin-development plans and related feasibility studies, including systems analysis.

Related decision of the General Assembly

On 5 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/110 dealing with permanent sovereignty over national resources in the occupied Arab territories. By this resolution, the Assembly emphasized the right of the Arab States and peoples whose territories were under Israeli occupation to full and effective permanent sovereignty and control over their natural and all other resources, wealth and economic activities, reaffirmed that measures by Israel to exploit this wealth were illegal, called on it to desist immediately from such measures, and reaffirmed the right of the occupied Arab States and peoples to restitution and compensation for such exploitation. Resolution 35/18, as recommended by Second Committee, A/35/592, adopted without vote by Assembly on 10 November 1980, meeting 55.

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned that a large part of the world's population does not have reasonable access to safe and ample water supplies and that an even larger part is without adequate sanitation facilities,

Concerned also that the plight of that population will not improve significantly unless there is a major commitment and effort on the part of Governments and of the international community to bring about the necessary changes,

Recalling that Habitat: United Nations Conference on Human Settlements called for Governments to adopt programmes to provide safe drinking water for all by 1990, if possible,

Recalling further that in the Mar del Plata Action Plan, the United Nations Water Conference called for the designation of the decade 1981-1990 as the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade,

Noting with satisfaction the growing efforts by Governments and by intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, in response to that Plan, to increase the flow of technical and financial co-operation to developing countries in water supply and sanitation,

Recalling also its resolution 34/191 of 18 December 1979, by which it decided to hold a special one-day meeting to launch formally the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade,

Bearing in mind resolution 25, entitled "International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade," adopted on 30 July 1980 by the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace,

1. Proclaims the period 1981-1990 as the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade, during which Member States will assume a commitment to bring about a substantial improvement in the standards and levels of services in drinking water supply and sanitation by the year 1990;

2. Calls upon Governments which have not yet done so to develop the necessary policies and set the targets to this end, to take all appropriate steps for their implementation, to set sufficiently high priorities for the activities concerned and to mobilize adequate resources to achieve their targets for the Decade;

3. Urges Governments to strengthen, as appropriate, their institutional frameworks for carrying out these activities, to mobilize the necessary technical expertise at all levels and, in general, to heighten popular awareness and support through education and public participation programmes;

4. Calls upon Governments, organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system and other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned to continue and, if possible, to increase their technical and financial co-operation with developing countries in order to enable them to attain the targets they have set, and to continue also their efforts to co-ordinate their activities so as to maximize the impact of their assistance to developing countries;

5. Calls upon the regional commissions to review periodically, on the basis of national reports, the progress being made by the Governments of their respective regions in establishing national targets and carrying out programmes to attain those targets;

6. Decides to review at its fortieth session the progress made towards the attainment of the Decade's national and international goals, as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General concerning the present situation and prospects relative to the Decade, and requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, to prepare a comprehensive analysis of the situation on the basis of progress reports by Governments and by the international organizations concerned and to submit it to the General Assembly at that session through the Economic and Social Council.

The General Assembly.

Recalling its resolutions 3201 (S-VI) and 3202 (S-VI) of 1 May 1974, containing the Declaration and the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, 3281 (XXIX) of 12 December 1974, containing the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States, and 3362 (S-VII) of 16 September 1975 on development and international economic co-operation, Recalling a/s/o its resolutions 33/148 of 20 December 1978 and 34/190 of 18 December 1979 and Economic and Social Council resolutions 2119(LXIII) of 4 August 1977, 1978/61 of 3 August 1978 and 1979/66 of 3 August 1979 regarding the convening of and preparation for the United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy.

Noting Economic and Social Council decision 1980/187 of 25 July 1980,

Mindful of the importance of developing new and renewable sources of energy in order to contribute to meeting requirements for continued economic and social development, particularly in the developing countries, through, inter alia, the transition to the increased use of new and renewable sources of energy,

Stressing the importance of intensive international co-operation in the field of new and renewable sources of energy,

Taking note of the report of the Preparatory Committee for the United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy on its first and second sessions,

Taking note a/s/o of the report of the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the report of the Secretary-General of the Conference on the progress made in the preparations for the Conference,

Bearing in mind paragraph 1 of its resolution 34/190, in which it decided that the Conference should be held at Nairobi in August 1981, as well as decision 1 (II) of 1 August 1980 of the Preparatory Committee concerning the dates of the Conference,

Concerned at the slow pace in the preparations for the Conference in light of the time constraints,

1. Strongly urges the Secretary-General of the United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy to take all the necessary measures to intensify and to accelerate the preparations for the Conference;

2. Urges all Member States to promote heightened awareness of the importance of the Conference and to intensify its preparation at the national, subregional and regional levels in order to ensure its success;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations adopted by the Preparatory Committee for the Conference at its second session;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that such additional personnel and technical expertise be drawn from the United Nations Secretariat as may be required and that it be made available to the Secretary-General of the Conference to facilitate the completion on time of the preparations for the Conference;

5. Urges all concerned organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, including the regional commissions, to strengthen their participation and to continue to extend their fullest contribution to the preparatory process for the Conference as well as co-operation and support to the Secretary-General of the Conference in this process;

6. Welcomes the co-operation provided by Member States and others to facilitate the preparations for the Conference and calls upon them to contribute further to the strengthening of the preparations for the Conference;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to take all steps necessary, consistent with the rules and regulations of the United Nations, to ensure the utilization of co-operation offered, taking fully into account the interests of all groups of countries;

8. Decides that the Conference shall be held at Nairobi from 10 to 21 August 1981 and be preceded by interregional meetings and pre-conference consultations at Nairobi, beginning on 1 August 1981;

9. Decides that the third session of the Preparatory Committee, scheduled to be held from 30 March to 10 April, shall be extended by one week and that the fourth session of the Committee shall be held from 8 to 26 June 1981;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the necessary arrangements, including the requisite financial provisions, are made for the continuation of regional preparations for the Conference;

11. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to provide, in co-operation with the organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, technical assistance to developing countries, using, inter alia, existing resources to the greatest extent possible, at the request of those countries and in accordance with established procedures in the preparations for the Conference, including the preparation of national papers;

12. Calls upon all States wishing to do so to submit national papers and brief summaries thereof by 31 December 1980, in conformity with decision 4(II) of 1 August 1980 of the Preparatory Committee, and requests that the summaries of the national papers should be distributed in all the working languages of the Conference;

13. Requests the Preparatory Committee, at its third session, to consider and finalize the draft agenda for the Conference and to submit it to the Conference;

14. Requests the Preparatory Committee to consider and finalize the draft rules of procedure of the Conference during its third session and to submit them to the Conference;

15. The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1970(LIX) of 30 July 1975 on the uses of the sea and coastal area development and 2099(LXIII) of 3 August 1977 on co-operation in coastal area development,

Reaffirming that the rational management of marine resources and the peaceful uses of the sea is an essential component of national economic development and international co-operation,

Taking into account the deliberations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea and bearing in mind that activities undertaken by components of the United Nations system relating to the uses of the sea and the development of coastal areas should not prejudice or prejudice the results to be obtained from that Conference,

Noting with satisfaction that the activities pursued in those areas by various organizations of the United Nations system, as presented in the report of the Secretary-General on uses of the sea, will help member States, particularly developing countries, to realize more fully the benefits to be derived by all mankind from the rational management of ocean resources and the peaceful uses of the sea,

Further noting that arrangements exist for the improved co-ordination of the activities of United Nations organizations involved in the marine field and that efforts are continuing to strengthen further such arrangements, including those at the regional level,

Bearing in mind the initiative taken by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at its twentieth session to make the activities of the United Nations system in the field of marine affairs the possible subject of a cross-organizational programme analysis,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the activities being implemented by the Secretary-General, which aim at introducing, within the allocated budgetary resources, the marine dimension into the development process, and of the activities being carried out by the various United Nations organizations concerned in the field of marine affairs within their respective spheres of competence, and requests the Secretary-General and the heads of the other United Nations organizations concerned to ensure that their activities regarding the scientific, economic and technical aspects of the development of the uses of the sea and its resources are consonant with and lend support to the successful conclusion of a treaty on the law of the sea, having particular regard to the needs of developing countries;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the economic and technical developments taking place in the field of marine affairs to the Council at its second regular session of 1983.

Chapter XI

Questions pertaining to the environment

The Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), at its April 1980 session, reviewed UNEP's work programme and adopted nineteen decisions on various aspects of that programme, including the Environment Fund and implementation of the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification adopted by the 1977 United Nations Conference on Desertification.'

The activities of UNEP were reviewed by the Economic and Social Council at its July session at Geneva and by the General Assembly at its 1980 regular session which opened in September. Based on their consideration of the report of the UNEP Governing Council, both bodies adopted resolutions aimed at strengthening international co-operation on environmental issues (resolutions 1980/49 of 23 July and 35/74 of 5 December). The Assembly, in addition, adopted resolutions supporting demands by States for compensation for damage caused by mines implanted during wars in certain developing countries (resolution 35/71 of 5 December), proclaiming the historical responsibility of States for the preservation of nature for current and future generations (resolution 35/8 of 30 October), asking for Member States' views on a proposed world charter for nature setting forth principles of conservation (resolution 35/7 of 30 October), seeking financing to implement the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification (resolution 35/73 of 5 December) and urging support for implementing the Plan in the Sudano-Sahelian region of Africa (resolution 35/72 of 5 December).

Details of these and other decisions pertaining to the environment are contained in this chapter.

United Nations Environment Programme

Activities in 1980

During 1980, the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) assigned 101 technical experts to projects in Canada (2), Colombia (4), the Congo (4), Czechoslovakia (4), France (5), Kenya (48), the Philip pines (1), Switzerland (31) and the United States (2).

During the year, UNEP held, participated in, sponsored or co-sponsored 79 seminars; subjects included pollution of mangrove ecosystems, biotic communities, conservation, oil pollution, carbon dioxide, climatic impact, environmental law, tropical forests, soils policy, potentially toxic chemicals, desertification control, technologies for sustainable satisfaction of basic human needs, river sedimentation, prevention and abatement of marine pollution, human ecology in development, post-harvest food losses, conservation of fish and animal genetic resources, the health of the oceans, applied microbiology, export and disposal of hazardous chemicals, expanded coal utilization, mercury in seafood, motor-vehicle air pollution control, the ozone layer, national parks, remote sensing, cost-benefit analysis, waste-water technology, oil spills, wetlands as waterfowl habitat and forest genetic resources.

Among the periodical publications issued were: Uniterra-a monthly newsletter on UNEP activities and environmental issues; The Ozone Layer-a half-yearly bulletin; Industry and Environment-a quarterly newsletter; the quarterly IRPTC (International Register of Potentially Toxic Chemicals) Bulletin; The Siren- a quarterly bulletin; and UNEP's annual review. Many individual studies were published; these and other UNEP publications were listed in An Environmental Bibliography: Publications Issued by UNEP or under Its Auspices 1973-1980.

International co-operation on the environment

The Governing Council of UNEP, at its eighth session, held at UNEP headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya, from 16 to 29 April 1980, expressed the hope that environmental considerations would be taken into account in the new International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s) and in the proposed global round of negotiations on international economic co-operation for development, scheduled to be launched at the General Assembly's eleventh special session in August/September. It requested the UNEP Executive Director to present the Council's views at that session.

By the same decision of 29 April, the Governing Council invited the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly to consider favourably implementation of proposals made by a group of experts on how work should proceed with respect to studies on the interrelationships between population, resources, environment and development. Based on conclusions by the experts, who were convened by the Executive Director in January, the Executive Director recommended the development of a conceptual framework for the studies, to result in guidelines for action by Governments and the United Nations system to protect and improve the environment. Advanced knowledge on interrelationships should be disseminated to Governments and organizations through a programme perspective document, and the conclusions should assist in framing the objectives for a system-wide medium-term environment programme.

The Council decided to hold a session of special character in 1982 to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment,* and it recommended to the Assembly that the session be open for participation as full members to all United Nations Member States and members of specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). To that end, the Council recommended for Assembly adoption a draft resolution to enlarge the Council's membership at that session to include all the participant members and to invite the Council to make recommendations concerning future work in the environment field.

The Council endorsed the structure of the Executive Director's 1980 state-of-the-environment report and decided on the topics for the 1981 report: environmental economics; use and management of renewable resources-ground water; and toxic chemicals and human food chains. Also, it urged Governments to respond urgently to appeals for contributions to the Environment Fund. In addition, it called for payments to the Fund to be made in the first quarter of each year, conversion of contributions to convertible currencies as much as possible, and a report on the impact on projects of non-convertible currencies. The Council increased the appropriation level for Fund programme activities in 1980-1981 to $67.9 million from $61.2 million approved at its 1979 session, apportioned these funds to various activities, reconfirmed a programme reserve of $1 million for each year of the biennium, approved a financial reserve level for 1980 of $3.7 million and for 1981 of $3.5 million, and approved commitments of $16 million for 1982-1983.

It supported a recommendation of a joint bureaux meeting at Nairobi on 7 December 1979 that the officers of the Governing Council and of the Commission on Human Settlements meet annually rather than biannually, and invited the Executive Director to study, with government experts, ways to ensure financing of action plans developed at the request of the Governing Council, the Economic and Social Council or the Assembly, and report in 1981.

On programme matters, the Governing Council on 29 April: endorsed proposals by the Executive Director for the development of an action plan for environmental assessment; requested him to undertake activities leading to a plan of action on carbon dioxide, including consideration of a permanent co-ordinating body for continuous scientific appraisal of the problem; authorized him to establish an advisory committee on development of an action plan on the World Climate Impact Studies Programme and to initiate a limited number of projects identified in the plan; and requested the Working Group of Experts on Environmental Law to submit its conclusions or guidelines to the Council in 1981. With regard to environmental law, the Council asked the Executive Director to convene an ad hoc meeting of experts in 1982 to assist in preparation of the environmental law section of the System-Wide Medium-Term Environment Programme, an interorganizational effort which was a major activity of UNEP as well as of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (see p. 994).

The Council also approved new or revised objectives and strategies in various programme areas, i.e. genetic resources, wildlife and protected areas, environmental training, technical assistance, environmental management and the working environment, and approved the revision of goals for 1982; it also called for encouragement of the creation and growth of non-governmental organizations and their environmental activities.

In another action, the Council called on United Nations organizations to take appropriate recommendations of the World Conservation Strategy into account when preparing their plans, and requested the UNEP Executive Director to urge Governments to endorse and take account of it in developing their policies and programmes. The Strategy was the result of five years of international work co-ordinated by UNEP, together with the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources (IUCN), the World Wildlife Fund, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and the international scientific community. It was launched on 5 March 1980 in over 30 capitals to help Governments manage their living resources.

The Governing Council urged States to ensure adequate protection measures for handling and disposing of hazardous chemical wastes and to exchange information on-and asked the Executive Director to develop guidelines for such disposal and transboundary transport (see p. 10311)

The Executive Director was asked to seek comments from Governments, assistance agencies and other organizations on an integrated conservation and use programme envisaged by an Expert Meeting on Tropical Forests (Nairobi, 25 February-1 March), including their activities and funds allocated and needed. He was also asked to consult with agencies about preparing recommendations on other types of forests.

The Executive Director was further asked to speed up consultations with UNESCO, the World Health Organization, the World Meteorological Organization (WMO), the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), IUCN and countries interested in the establishment of a Regional Centre for Information and Scientific Documentation on Tropical Ecology at Yaounde, United Republic of Cameroon. He was asked to consider convening in 1981 a governmental expert group to review the activities and planned development of the eight regional seas programmes for controlling pollution as well as comparable programmes by other bodies, to accelerate implementation of those regional programmes, make funds available, and examine and report on the relationship between them and regional environmental programmes, with a view to strengthening co-ordination. He was also asked to include the East African and South-West Atlantic regions within the programmes.

Noting the significance of UNEP support to the environmental activities of the regional commissions, the Council asked the Executive Director to co-operate closely with them in project implementation, mentioning specifically co-operation with the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) in implementing decisions of the high-level meeting held in 1979 on the protection of the environment,<sup>3</sup> and to consider favourably requests by ECE for project support during the initial phase, subject to Council review. The Council also asked the Executive Director, and invited UNDP, to assist Governments in the Asia-Pacific and West Asia regions in implementing regional environmental programmes, in collaboration with appropriate United Nations organizations.

Regarding Earthwatch, a global environment-assessment programme designed to give early warning of impending crises, the Governing Council recommended that States should co-operate in their weather modification activities, make relevant information available to WMO for periodic transmittal to the UNEP Executive Director, and ensure that such activities did not damage the environment or areas outside a State's national jurisdiction. The Council expressed concern at damage to the ozone layer and recommended measures aimed at limiting the production and use of the chlorofluorocarbons F-11 and F-12.

By another decision, the Council requested the Executive Director to collaborate with other international organizations to ensure the speedy preparation, adoption and implementation of a world soils policy. It decided that UNEP should co-operate fully in preparation of a "soil charter" incorporating principles suggested by a group of experts which met at Rome, Italy, in March 1980 to identify and define the elements of a soils policy.

Concerning the importance of education and training in environmental management, the Council by yet another decision requested financial support until the end of 1982 for the International Centre for Training and Education in Environmental Sciences and, on the basis of a co-operation agreement between Spain and the Latin American and Caribbean States, recommended urgent establishment of a network of high-level training institutions in environmental issues and an efficient mechanism for co-ordination of the network. The Executive Director was requested to convene an ad hoc meeting of representatives of the concerned States to draw up the agreement and decide on measures and modalities to be embodied in it; it was to become operational when signed by six States, including Spain.

By three decisions of 28 April, the Council called for cessation of all co-operation between UNEP and South Africa and for implementation of a 1979 Assembly resolution on assistance to the Palestinian people,<sup>4</sup> within UNEP's sphere of responsibility, and recommended to the Assembly that it consider favourably at its 1980 regular session the introduction of Arabic as an official and working language of the UNEP Governing Council. On 17 December, by resolution 35/219 A, the Assembly decided to include Arabic among the official and working languages of its subsidiary bodies by 1 January 1982 (seep. 1244).

A Governing Council decision of 29 April related to implementation of the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification (see following sub-chapter). In accordance with another decision of that date, informal consultations with Governments were held at Nairobi from 8 to 11 December to exchange views on the content and presentation of programme and policy questions.

Action by the Economic and Social Council

Having considered the report of the UNEP Governing Council, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote on 23 July 1980 resolution 1980/49. By this resolution, the Council recommended to the Assembly consideration of the Governing Council's decision on the inter-relationships between population, resources, environment and development; overall responsibility for co-ordination of the system-wide efforts should be assumed by the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation. The Council called on UNEP to elaborate proposals on energy and the environment, as an effective contribution to the 1981 United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy, and invited UNEP and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to intensify their co-operation. The Council invited the Assembly to consider favourably the recommendation for a 1982 session of a special nature to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment, expressed appreciation of UNEP's efforts at development of the System-Wide Medium-Term Environment Programme and appealed for increased contributions to the Environment Fund.

In adopting this resolution, the Council acted on the recommendation of its First (Economic) Committee, which approved without objection on 18 July a text submitted by a Vice-Chairman on the basis of informal consultations held on a draft resolution submitted by India on behalf of Council members belonging to the "Group of 77" developing countries; the Group's text was subsequently withdrawn.

There were several differences between the two drafts. By paragraph 2 of the approved text, the Council recommended, rather than invited, the Assembly to consider the UNEP Governing Council's decision on the interrelationships between resources, environment, people and development, models for the study of which should include the elaboration of a work programme on such interrelationships and should be placed under the Director-General's direction. In addition, two provisions of the Group's text did not appear in the resolution adopted: one welcomed UNEP's activities in co-operation with other organizations in respect of the ozone layer, climate, carbon dioxide, chlorofluorocarbons, weather modification and the export and disposal of hazardous chemical wastes; the other requested Governments to consider creation of a "development window" for additional contributions to the UNEP Fund to be used for measures dealing with serious environmental problems in the developing countries. Instead, the Council, by paragraph 9, invited Governments to consider proposals whereby additional contributions would be used for measures dealing with such problems, and asked for a report in 1981.

With respect to the activities on the interrelationships, the United States said, when the resolution was approved, that it would be for the Assembly, after considering financial implications, to decide how best to provide for them. Also, it considered that the financing of activities concerning a particular country should be ensured by UNDP and international financial institutions, not by UNEP, which should assume its traditional role of co-ordination.

Action by the General Assembly

On 5 December 1980, the General Assembly, having considered the report of the UNEP Governing Council, adopted without vote resolution 35/74 on international co-operation in the field of the environment.

The Assembly requested all appropriate United Nations bodies to co-operate with UNEP in preparing the System-Wide Medium-Term Environment Programme and the Perspective Document, requested the UNEP Governing Council to take into consideration in its programme activities the new International Development Strategy (see section below), continuing to promote the concept of sustainable ecological development, in particular through further elaboration of ways to integrate environmental concerns in development programmes.

The Assembly endorsed the recommendations of the Governing Council and the Economic and Social Council on the interrelationships between population, resources, environment and development and requested the Secretary-General to implement them; it called on UNEP to participate in preparations for the 1981 United Nations Energy Conference; it urged intensified co-operation between UNEP and Habitat through annual joint meetings of officers; it welcomed the Governing Council's decision to convene an ad hoc meeting of governmental experts in environmental law and an offer by Uruguay to host the meeting; and it urged Governments, international organizations and United Nations bodies to take into account the World Conservation Strategy in developing their policies and programmes. The Assembly appealed for increased contributions to the UNEP Fund, invited Governments to consider proposals whereby additional contributions to the Fund would be used for measures dealing with serious environmental problems in developing countries, and decided to convene in 1982 a session of a special character of the UNEP Governing Council, open to all States, to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment. That session should make programme recommendations for the following 10 - year period.

Resolution 35/74 was adopted on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, which approved it without vote on 20 November.

The text was submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman; it had been drawn up following informal consultations on a draft resolution sponsored by India, Kenya, the Netherlands, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Sweden and Yugoslavia, and on Mexican amendments to that draft.

In addition to drafting changes, orally introduced by the Vice-Chairman when submitting his draft, differences between the approved operative paragraphs and the original version included the following:

-paragraph 4 was reworded and a request that UNEP continue promoting ecological development through "elaboration and application of practical instruments" for the integration of environmental concerns in development programmes and projects was replaced by "elaboration of ways and means;"

-a reference was included in paragraph 8 to welcome an offer of Uruguay to serve as host for the meeting of experts in environmental law;

-in paragraph 11, the agreed target figure for the UNEP Fund for 1978-1981, $150 million, was deleted;

-in paragraph 12, a reference to the creation of a "special window" in the UNEP Fund for the development of developing countries' activities in dealing with major environmental problems was replaced by a reference to provisions relating to funding in the Assembly's 1979 resolution on environmental co-operation<sup>5</sup> and a request that the UNEP Governing Council report on this matter to the Economic and Social Council in 1981; and

-paragraph 13 was revised to open the 1982 UNEP special session to all States, rather than enlarging the Council for that session by conferring membership status on all United Nations Member States and members of the specialized agencies and IAEA. Also added was a clause that the special session was to be held at the same place and immediately prior to the Governing Council's 1982 session and inviting representation at a high political level.

The new text also had two additional provisions: paragraph 14, by which the Assembly decided that the special session should review the major achievements in the implementation of the 1972 Stockholm Action Plan for the Human Environment" and make recommendations with respect to the major environmental trends to be addressed by UNEP over the forthcoming 10 years; and paragraph 15, by which it invited the UNEP Executive Director to proceed, in consultation with Governments, with preparations for the special session, and report on all matters pertaining thereto, including proposals as to dates and venue of the two sessions.

The Mexican amendments, which would have changed the Governing Council's special commemorative session into a second United Nations conference on the human environment, were not incorporated into the approved version. These amendments and the seven-nation text were withdrawn.

Explaining its position on the resolution after approval, Canada said it trusted that the proposals whereby additional contributions to the UNEP Fund would be used for measures dealing with serious environmental problems in developing countries would not involve any cutback in UNEP's global programmes. Expressing the view of the seven original sponsors, Sweden said that adequate resources must be allocated for the establishment of a work programme on the interrelationship of development, environment, people and resources, a complex programme whose elaboration required a solid administrative infrastructure financed by regular, not extra-budgetary, resources. The USSR understood that additional resources would be used to combat ecological problems in developing countries and that the work programme on interrelationships and the special session would be financed from the voluntary Fund and would not entail any cutback in UNEP's interregional and regional activities. In the view of the United States, increasing criticism about UNEP's effectiveness could no longer be overlooked, and the matter should be discussed by the Governing Council at its 1981 session.

Environment conventions

In response to a 1975 General Assembly request to be regularly informed of the status of international conventions on the environment,<sup>6</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted the UNEP Executive Director's report on the matter in September 1980. One instrument had come into force as of 28 November 1979: the Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals. Information was also provided on existing and draft agreements, and the report brought up to date, to 28 November 1979, UNEP's list of international conventions adopted since 1933 in the field of the environment.

Subsequently, UNEP was informed of three additional international conventions adopted in 1979 and 1980: the Co-operation Agreement between the Hellenic Republic and the Italian Republic on the Protection of the Marine Environment of the Ionian Sea and Coastal Areas, adopted and entered into force on 6 March 1979; the Convention on Long-Range Transboundary Air Pollution, adopted on 13 November 1979; and the Convention on the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources, adopted on 20 May 1980.

On 26 April at its 1980 session, ECE stressed the desirability of early ratification of the Convention on Long-Range Transboundary Air Pollution and emphasized the importance of the environmental factor in its work programmes. (For further details on ECE activities, see p. 740.)

Environment and development

On 29 April 1980, the UNEP Governing Council called for practical action in the area of an integrated approach to environment and development. It urged the Executive Director to explore possibilities for establishing effective links between UNEP's knowledge and experience in this area and development planning, and called on him to prepare a programme for UNEP's participation in international efforts to implement the new International Development Strategy for the 1980s. By the Strategy, annexed to General Assembly resolution 35/56 of 5 December (see p. 499), the Assembly called for measures to promote the environmental and ecological soundness of developmental activities. Methods were to be devised to assist interested developing countries in environmental management and in evaluating costs and benefits of environment protection measures, taking into account and intensifying research on interrelationships between development, environment, population and resources. Developing countries' capacity to make appropriate scientific and technological choices was to be strengthened. Bilateral and multilateral donors were to consider meeting the costs of taking environmental aspects into account in projects in developing countries, and provide aid, including training, to develop endogenous capacities for environmental management. (For text of relevant provisions (section III L) of the Strategy, see p. 517.)

Problem of remnants of war

On 5 December 1980, the General Assembly, by resolution 35/71, recognized that most developing countries had been subjected to foreign occupation and exposed to wars waged by certain colonial powers and that the presence of material remnants of war, particularly mines, on the territories of certain developing countries seriously impeded their development efforts and entailed loss of life and property. Convinced that the removal of such remnants should be the responsibility of the countries that implanted them, it expressed regret that no real action had been taken to solve the problem.

The Assembly called on States which had taken part in the wars in question to make available to the affected States all information on the areas in which mines were placed, including maps, and information on the types of mines. It supported the demand of the affected States for compensation for the losses incurred from the States which had planted the mines and requested the Secretary-General to consult with the States concerned to find ways of solving the problem, including the possibility of convening a conference under United Nations auspices.

Resolution 35/71 was adopted by 119 votes to 0, with 29 abstentions, on the recommendation of the Second Committee.

In the Committee, the resolution was introduced by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya on behalf also of Algeria, Democratic Yemen, Jordan, Kuwait, Pakistan, Qatar and the Syrian Arab Republic. It was approved on 14 November by a recorded vote, requested by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, of 106 to 0, with 30 abstentions.

Explaining their abstentions, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and the United Kingdom said the problem of remnants of war was best dealt with on a bilateral basis, and they could not support a United Nations conference on the subject. They also did not accept any legal obligation for removal of remnants of war, a position shared by the United States.

Responsibility of States for the preservation of nature

Noting that continuation of the arms race, including the testing of various types of weapons, especially nuclear weapons, and the accumulation of toxic chemicals were adversely affecting the human environment and damaging the vegetable and animal world, the General Assembly on 30 October 1980 proclaimed the historical responsibility of States for the preservation of nature and called on States to take measures to preserve nature and to promote international co-operation in this field. It also requested preparation of a report on the pernicious effects of the arms race on nature and sought the views of States on possible international measures for the preservation of nature.

Resolution 35/8, containing this action, was submitted by the USSR and sponsored also by Afghanistan, the Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Democratic Yemen, the German Democratic Republic, India, Mauritius, Mongolia and Viet Nam; it was adopted without reference to a Main Committee by a recorded vote of 68 to 0, with 47 abstentions. Explaining their abstentions, six Latin American nations—Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador and Peru—said a distinction should have been drawn between the responsibility of the countries that produced weapons, primarily the major powers, and those that did not. Argentina, Brazil and Ecuador believed that the preservation of nature and the control of the arms race should receive separate treatment, and both Bolivia and Brazil regretted that the resolution did not mention the need to take into account the permanent sovereignty of States over their natural resources. In the view of Greece, limitation of armaments was a complex problem which should not be deliberated in a variety of extraneous contexts. Speaking for the European Community, Luxembourg said that, by limiting itself to the effects of the arms race and disregarding the other major causes of the destruction and deterioration of the environment, the Assembly ran the risk of adopting a simplistic attitude to environmental problems and consequently of making the exercise fragmentary. Sweden saw a lack of specificity and said the text did not appear capable of achieving any tangible results. The United States made a similar point, also stating that the report called for had already been prepared; it said UNEP could ill afford to expend scarce resources on repetitive studies.

China said that if the USSR was truly concerned with preserving nature it should, together with the other super-power, drastically reduce its own nuclear weapons and stop underground nuclear tests. Because it considered the resolution a propaganda exercise, China said it would not participate in the voting.

The item entitled "Historical responsibility of States for the preservation of nature for present and future generations" had been included in the agenda of the Assembly's regular 1980 session on the proposal of the USSR.

In a letter/explanatory memorandum of 15 August, to which was annexed a proposed draft resolution for Assembly action, the USSR said the task of protecting the environment could be accomplished successfully only through the efforts of all States. Aside from the disastrous consequences a new world war would have, nature was already being subjected to considerable, perhaps irreversible, damage because of military preparations and the arms race, including testing and diversion of material and intellectual resources. The USSR believed the United Nations should promote the development of international co-operation in this field.

World charter for nature

The General Assembly considered in 1980 a draft world charter for nature drawn up in 1979 at the proposal of the President of Zaire by Zairean experts and an ad hoc working group of IUCN. Based on the idea that all human conduct affecting nature must be guided and judged, the draft covered general principles of conservation, responsibilities and implementation. It called for among other things: recycling resources which were not consumed as they were used; maintaining or enhancing the productivity of soils; avoiding activities which might cause irreversible damage to nature; avoiding discharge of pollutants into natural systems; reflecting conservation principles in national legislation; incorporating conservation strategies into planning; increasing knowledge of nature; monitoring the status of habitats and species; and avoiding military activity damaging to nature.

The draft world charter for nature, along with an introductory note recounting the history of its development, were annexed to a letter/explanatory memorandum of 2 June from Zaire, by which it requested that an item on the charter be included in the agenda of the Assembly's 1980 regular session.

On 30 October, the Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/7 on the draft world charter for nature. It invited Member States, in the exercise of their permanent sovereignty over their natural resources, to conduct their activities in recognition of the supreme importance of protecting natural systems, maintaining the balance and quality of nature and conserving natural resources. The Assembly invited States' views on the draft charter, on the basis of which the Secretary-General was requested to formulate appropriate recommendations with a view to adoption of a world charter for nature. Sponsored by 48 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below), the resolution was adopted without reference to a Main Committee.

Brazil, speaking also for Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Guyana, Peru, Suriname and Venezuela, said their activities in matters related to the subjects addressed by the draft charter for nature would continue to be guided by commitments which they had formally accepted, including the 3 July 1978 Treaty for Amazonian Co-operation. These eight signatories of that Treaty, and of the Declaration of Belem (Brazil) issued on 24 October 1980 at the first Conference of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the signatory countries of the Treaty, transmitted these documents to the Assembly on 29 October.

2. Recommends to the General Assembly the consideration of the decision of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme on the interrelationships between resources, environment, people and development, and emphasizes that models for studying such interrelationships should take due account of the specific requirements of different regions and countries and include the elaboration of a programme of work on the interrelationships, which should be closely linked with the integrated system-wide interagency programming and planning and be placed under the direction of the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation, who should assume overall responsibility for the co-ordination of the system-wide efforts;

3. Calls upon the United Nations Environment Programme, in pursuance of General Assembly resolution 34/188, to elaborate concrete and specific proposals on energy and the environment, aimed at making an effective and meaningful contribution to the United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy, and to report thereon, through its Governing Council, to the Economic and Social Council at its second regular session of 1981;

4. Welcomes the growing co-operation between the United Nations Environment Programme and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), and invites them to intensify that co-operation;

6. Invites the General Assembly to give favourable consideration to the recommendation of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme, contained in its decision 8/2 of 29 April 1980, that the Governing Council should hold, in 1962, a session of a special nature to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment, which would be open to all States Members of the United Nations, members of the specialized agencies and of the International Atomic Energy Agency as full members of that session;

7. Strongly appeals to all Governments to make every effort to pledge, in 1980, substantial increases in their contributions for 1981 or, to those Governments that have not yet contributed to the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme, to pledge to do so, in 1980, in order that the agreed target for the Fund for the period 1978-1981 may be reached;

9. Invites Governments to consider proposals whereby additional contributions to the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme would be used for measures dealing with serious environmental problems in developing countries, taking into account the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolution 34/188, and requests the Governing Council of the Programme to report thereon to the Economic and Social Council at its second regular session of 1981.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2995(XXVII), 2996(XXVII) and 2997(XXVII) of 15 December 1972, pertaining to co-operation between States in the field of the environment, the international responsibility of States in protecting the environment and the establishment of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme,

Recalling also its resolution 3435(XXX) of 9 December 1975,

Recalling further its resolution 31/111 of 16 December 1976, in which it noted the interim report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Environment Programme on the study of the problem of material remnants of war, particularly mines, and their effect on the environment, and requested the Governing Council to ensure its completion,

Taking note of resolution 32 of 19 August 1976 of the Fifth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, regarding compensation for the material remnants of war,

Recalling also decisions 80(IV) of 9 April 1976 and 101 (V) of 25 May 1977 of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme,

Recognizing that most developing countries have been subjected to foreign occupation and exposed to wars waged by certain colonial Powers, thus incurring tremendous loss of life and property,

Convinced that the removal of those remnants of war should be the responsibility of the countries that implanted them and should be carried out at their expense,

2. Calls upon those States which took part in those wars to make available forthwith to the affected States all information on the areas in which such mines were placed, including maps indicating the position of those areas, and information concerning the types of mines;

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Historical responsibility of States for the preservation of nature for present and future generations,"

Conscious of the disastrous consequences which a war involving the use of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction would have on man and his environment,

Noting that the continuation of the arms race, including the testing of various types of weapons, especially nuclear weapons, and the accumulation of toxic chemicals are adversely affecting the human environment and damaging the vegetable and animal world,

Bearing in mind that the arms race is diverting material and intellectual resources from the solution of the urgent problems of preserving nature,

Attaching great importance to the development of planned, constructive international co-operation in solving the problems of preserving nature,

Recognizing that the prospects for solving problems so universal as the preservation of nature are closely linked to the strengthening and development of international detente and the creation of conditions which would banish war from the life of mankind,

Noting with satisfaction the drafting and signature in recent years of a number of international agreements designed to preserve the environment,

Determined to preserve nature as a prerequisite for the normal life of man,

1. Proclaims the historical responsibility of States for the preservation of nature for present and future generations;

2. Draws the attention of States to the fact that the continuing arms race has pernicious effects on the environment and reduces the prospects for the necessary international co-operation in preserving nature on our planet;

3. Calls upon States, in the interests of present and future generations, to demonstrate due concern and take the measures, including legislative measures, necessary for preserving nature, and also to promote international co-operation in this field;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, with the co-operation of the United Nations Environment Programme, to prepare a report on the pernicious effects of the arms race on nature and to seek the views of States on possible measures to be taken at the international level for the preservation of nature;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its thirty-sixth session an item entitled "Historical responsibility of States for the preservation of nature for present and future generations: report of the Secretary-General."

Resolution 35/7, as proposed by 48 powers, A/35/L.8/Rev.1 and Add.1, adopted without vote by Assembly on 30 October 1980, meeting 49.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the draft World Charter for Nature,

Conscious that life on earth is part of nature and depends on the uninterrupted functioning of natural systems,

Taking account of the fact that civilization has its roots in nature and that life in close contact with nature offers man the best opportunities for creativity, rest and recreation,

Persuaded that the benefits which can be obtained from nature depend on the maintenance of natural processes and on the diversity of life-forms and that those benefits are jeopardized by the excessive exploitation and the destruction of natural habitats,

Convinced that it is urgent to maintain the balance and quality of nature and to conserve natural resources,

Further convinced that the destruction of natural systems and the abuse of resources lead to the collapse of the economic, social and political structures of civilization,

Deploping the destruction or alteration of natural systems resulting, inter alia, from excessive consumption and abuse of natural resources, from conflicts and from wars,

Reaffirming that man can and should exist in harmony with nature, exercising stewardship over it in the interests of present and future generations,

Firmly resolved to safeguard the balance of natural systems and to ensure the protection and conservation of nature,

Taking note of the existing international instruments in the matter, in particular the World Conservation Strategy,

Recognising the need for appropriate measures at the national and international levels to protect nature and promote international co-operation in this field,

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of States over their natural resources,

1. Takes note with interest of the draft World Charter for Nature, which proposes principles of conservation arising out of the conviction that any act of man affecting nature must be guided and judged:

2. Solemnly invites Member States, in the exercise of their permanent sovereignty over their natural resources, to conduct their activities in recognition of the supreme importance of protecting natural systems, maintaining the balance and quality of nature and conserving natural resources, in the interests of present and future generations;

3. Invites Member States to communicate to the Secretary-General their views and observations on the draft World Charter for Nature and the efforts they are making in the conservation and protection of nature;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the views and observations of Member States to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session and to formulate on the basis of the replies received, in co-operation with the United Nations Environment Programme and the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, appropriate recommendations with a view to the adoption of a world charter for nature;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its thirty-sixth session an item entitled "Draft World Charter for Nature: report of the Secretary-General."

Implementation of the Plan of ## Action to Combat Desertification

The Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), on 29 April at its 1980 session, took note of actions taken by Governments, UNEP and members of the United Nations system to implement the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification<sup>8</sup> adopted in 1977 by the United Nations Conference on Desertification, as well as measures to implement the Plan of Action in the 15 countries of the Sudano-Sahelian region: Cape Verde, Chad, Gambia, Ethiopia, Kenya, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Somalia, Sudan, Uganda, United Republic of Cameroon, Upper Volta. It called on all concerned to assign a high priority to combating desertification and to strengthen efforts to implement the Plan.

The Council also: noted with appreciation the work of the Consultative Group for Desertification Control, which held its second session at Nairobi, Kenya, from 12 to 14 March 1980; called on the Group to intensify its efforts to assist the UNEP Executive Director in mobilizing resources needed to implement the Plan of Action; authorized the Executive Director to continue contributing to the United Nations Sudano-Sahelian Office (UNSO) during 1980-1981 for joint UNEP/UNDP (United Nations Development Programme) activities to implement the Plan of Action; strongly appealed to financial organizations and Governments for financial support for enhancing implementation of the Plan of Action; and approved the overall structure of the study on additional measures for financing the Plan of Action to be prepared by a group of high-level specialists in international financing, convened by the Executive Director in accordance with a 1979 General Assembly request."

The Council added Djibouti to the list of countries of the Sudano-Sahelian region, and included Guinea and Guinea-Bissau among the countries eligible to receive assistance through UNSO.

In adopting resolution 1980/49 on 23 July, the Economic and Social Council called on Governments, international financial institutions and multilateral financial organizations to give high priority to and allocate significant resources for implementation of the Plan of Action (for details of the resolution, see p. 718).

The group of high-level specialists met at Geneva from 21 to 25 July. Their study inventoried new means of financing involving automaticity, set forth a financial plan and analysis of the components and costs of a programme for combating desertification, identifying what was being financed and what additional resources might be required, and made recommendations for mobilizing those resources. The group's study on financing the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification was submitted to the General Assembly in September by the Secretary-General. He pointed out the clear and immediate need for the international community to increase substantially the level of assistance to developing countries suffering from desertification. Because the current system was based on fluctuating voluntary contributions, there was also a need to establish new means of financing involving automaticity. He recommended that the Assembly explore the different approaches described in the study for generating additional funds.

Another report by the Secretary-General to the Assembly annexed a report of the UNEP Governing Council describing overall progress in implementing the Plan of Action. The Desertification Unit of UNEP and UNSO had become fully operational; increasing co-ordination and follow-up were reflected in the activities of the Inter-Agency Working Group on Desertification -which met at Geneva from 24 to 26 March and on 1 September to review United Nations activities and prepare a report by the interagency Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) to the UNEP Governing Council-and the Consultative Group for Desertification Control. A number of proposals for major desertification control projects had been submitted and had received declarations of support.

In its report to the Governing Council, ACC had identified several major constraints on full implementation of the Plan: an inability of affected countries to assign sufficiently high priority to prevention and control; a need for strengthened co-operation within the United Nations system; knowledge gaps in interdisciplinary approaches and insufficient teaching efforts; and insufficient financing. Other obstacles, noted in the UNEP report, were lack of national plans, lack of follow-up action and shortage of manpower.

resolution 35/73 dealing with the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification. The Assembly noted with concern the findings of the analysis by ACC and the Governing Council of UNEP of the constraints on implementation of the Plan of Action, particularly the problem of insufficient financing and the increasing demands on the scarce resources of the countries suffering from desertification.

Further, the Assembly expressed satisfaction at UNEP initiatives to overcome the constraints through its co-ordinating and catalytic role in the United Nations system, as well as efforts by UNSO in combating desertification, invited Governments of countries affected by desertification to give priority to desertification-control projects in their development plans and requests for financial support, and strongly appealed to Governments and financial institutions for financial support for the Plan of Action. It urged the Consultative Group for Desertification Control to develop further its work in order to ensure availability of the financial resources necessary to implement Group-supported projects.

The Assembly noted the Secretary-General's report and the annexed study of the group of high-level specialists on additional measures for financing the Plan of Action, and requested him to draw the attention of donor Governments and international organizations to the continuous threat of desert encroachment and the meagre resources available for combating it.

The Assembly also requested him to prepare feasibility studies and recommendations for additional means of financing, detailed modalities of obtaining resources on a concessionary basis, and a feasibility study and working plan for establishment of an independent financial corporation for financing desertification projects. It asked UNEP to institute specific research and training programmes at the national, regional and international levels and to invite private foundations and other institutions to co-operate financially and technically in their implementation.

Resolution 35/73 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, having been similarly approved by that Committee on 20 November. It was submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman following consultations on a text introduced by Venezuela on behalf of United Nations Member States belonging to the "Group of 77" developing countries. The Group subsequently withdrew its draft.

In some respects, the two drafts differed. Added to the text adopted was a paragraph, not in the Group's draft, taking note with satisfaction of a Governing Council decision to include pilot projects for the Fouta-Djallon massif in antidesertification programmes (see following section); deleted was an expression of disappointment with the meagre resources which the Special Account for financing implementation of the Plan of Action had thus far accumulated - replaced by a provision strongly appealing to financial institutions and Governments for financial support and generous contributions to that Account.

Feasibility studies requested of the Secretary-General by the final text were to include recommendations for implementing additional means of financing he deemed practicable, including those providing for a predictable flow of funds, rather than, as in the first draft, recommendations for financing involving automaticity he and the group of high-level experts deemed practicable. Also deleted was a request that he update the inventory of additional means of financing involving automaticity. A request that he mobilize the international community with a view to speedily implementing relevant recommendations of the high-level group was changed to implementing speedily the Plan of Action.

Speaking in explanation of position, France, the Federal Republic of Germany and Japan considered that future action to combat desertification should be financed through existing channels, bilateral or multilateral. Canada held a similar view, adding that it felt UNDP, not UNEP, should have the responsibility for that programme. Czechoslovakia, on behalf of the group of Eastern European States, believed that further measures to implement the Plan of Action should be financed on a voluntary basis. Further, no provision of the resolution should affect the sovereign right of States to provide assistance and finance the projects concerned out of their own resources.

Proposals for action to combat desertification were included in the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade, adopted on 5 December. The international community, and developed countries in particular, were to increase substantially financial and technical support to drought-stricken countries suffering from desertification. Support for the Plan of Action was to be augmented. (For relevant provision (paragraph 158) of the Strategy, see p. 517.)

Restoration and improvement of the Fouta-Djallon massif

With the adoption of a decision on 29 April 1980 on implementation of the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification, the Governing Council of UNEP decided to include within UNEP's programme to combat desertification a pilot project for the improvement and restoration of the Fouta-Djallon massif in western Africa- the primary source of major rivers in the subregion. Reporting later in the year, the Secretary-General called this decision to the attention of the General Assembly, which had in 1979 invited UNEP to take this action.<sup>10</sup> Subsequently, UNSO participated with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the Organization of African Unity in a joint mission to the area from 15 May to 10 June 1980. The specific course of action to be taken was to be based on the findings and recommendations of this mission.

By resolution 35/73 of 5 December (see preceding section), the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report and noted the Governing Council's decision with satisfaction. It also noted the action in the context of resolution 35/72 it adopted in dealing with the implementation in the Sudano-Sahelian region of the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification (see following section).

Measures for the benefit of the Sudano-Sahelian region

At its April 1980 session, the Governing Council of UNEP noted a report of the Executive Director on implementation of the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification in the Sudano-Sahelian region and the measures taken by Governments, UNEP and other competent organs of the United Nations. The Council further noted the priority being given to efforts to combat desertification in the 15 countries of the Sudano-Sahelian region as well as in the least developed countries outside that region. It authorized the Executive Director, in consultation with UNDP, to continue for 1980-1981 to contribute to UNSO. Further, it decided to add Djibouti to the list of the region's countries and to include Guinea and Guinea-Bissau among the countries eligible to receive assistance through UNSO in implementing the Plan of Action.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, by resolution 1980/52, noted with satisfaction the progress made by UNSO on behalf of UNEP and UNDP and recommended that the General Assembly request the Governing Council of UNEP to report annually to the Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council, on implementation in the Sudano-Sahelian region of the Plan of Action.

Resolution 1980/52 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee, which approved the text without objection on 16 July. The text was sponsored by Djibouti, Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Senegal, Somalia, the Sudan, Uganda, the United Arab Emirates and Zambia. The sponsors accepted an oral amendment by the United States to mention UNDP as well as UNEP, and, in the Council, the placement of that reference was orally changed by the United Arab Emirates to speak of progress in assistance by UNSO on behalf of UNEP and UNDP, rather than by UNSO of UNDP.

The Governing Council of UNDP, on 30 June at its 1980 session, noted a report of the Administrator of UNDP on UNSO's activities with respect to the Plan of Action and endorsed the UNEP Governing Council's decisions concerning Djibouti, Guinea and Guinea-Bissau. It authorized the Administrator to increase UNDP's share of the costs of the UNDP/UNEP joint venture. It also asked him to grant the countries of the region additional assistance through UNSO, within available UNDP resources, and it approved budgetary proposals for the UNSO/UNEP programme in this area, authorizing an $816,000 expenditure in 1980-1981.

On 5 December, the General Assembly, in adopting resolution 35/72, also noted with satisfaction UNSO's progress, invited the Governing Council of UNEP to consider the inclusion of Benin in the list of countries receiving assistance through UNSO, invited it and the Governing Council of UNDP to continue their support to UNSO, urged Governments and organizations to respond favourably to requests for assistance from the region's Governments to combat desertification, and urged all Governments and donor organizations to consider contributing to the United Nations Trust Fund for Sudano-Sahelian Activities.

Resolution 35/72 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Second Committee, which had similarly approved it on 20 November. The text was submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman following consultations on a draft sponsored by 23 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below). The principal difference between the two texts was the addition of the paragraph containing the invitation to UNEP to examine the possibility of including Benin among the countries receiving assistance through UNSO. The sponsors withdrew their original draft.

Voluntary contributions

Voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for Sudano-Sahelian Activities paid in 1980 by Australia ($117,130) and the Netherlands ($5,512,965) amounted to $5,630,095. In addition, pledges to the Fund for 1981 were received from Italy ($549,451) and Yugoslavia ($10,000).

Pledges for 1981 totalling $564,550 for UNEP were announced at the 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, held at United Nations Headquarters, New York, on 6 and 7 November, or subsequently, as follows: Australia, $500,000; Bangladesh, $5,000; Botswana, $1,529; Czechoslovakia, $25,997; Hungary, $20,024; and Indonesia, $12,000.

Chapter XII

Questions concerning human settlements

Acting on recommendations of the Commission on Human Settlements, which held its third session at Mexico City from 6 to 15 May 1980, both the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly adopted resolutions seeking to strengthen international co-operation and programmes in the field of human settlements and urgently appealing for increased financial support for the work of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) (Council resolution 1980/47 and Assembly resolutions 35/76 and 35/77 D). The Assembly also sought participation for the Centre in the work of the interagency Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) (resolution 35/77 C), approved annual joint meetings of the bureaux of the Commission and of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) (35/77 B) and took note of the Commission's 1980 report (35/77 A) containing its decisions.

Details of these and other decisions of these bodies are presented in this chapter.

United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat)

Activities in 1980

During 1980, the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) continued to implement its work programme organized according to the six subject areas set out by Habitat: United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, 1976;<sup>1</sup> settlement policies and strategies; settlement planning; shelter, infrastructure and services; land-use policy; public participation; and institutions and management.

Although the total technical co-operation expenditure did not increase substantially over the previous year, the number of countries participating in human settlements projects rose from 83 in 1979 to 141 in 1980. Eighty-four of those projects were in Africa, 20 in the Americas, 23 in Asia and the Pacific, four in Europe and 10 in Western Asia; almost one fifth of them had budgets exceeding $500,000. Particular attention was paid to the least developed countries and to countries where special conditions justified urgent action. The highest priority was given to the development of shelter, infrastructure and services.

On policies and strategies, the Centre reviewed the role and contribution of the construction industry in human settlement programmes and national economic and social development, and the provision of infrastructure in slums, squatter areas and rural settlements, for the Commission on Human Settlements' 1981 session, as it had requested at its May 1980 session. Major theme papers contained suggestions for action by Governments to strengthen the building industry and implement programmes for upgrading infrastructure.

A memorandum of understanding by the Executive Directors of the Centre and UNEP, signed in January 1980, defined planning topics for joint activities in settlement planning. The Centre co-sponsored an International Conference on Planning and Management of Metropolitan Regions (Nagoya, Japan, 22-29 October), which adopted a declaration and a plan of action containing 24 recommendations covering the role of metropolitan regions in national development, physical planning, energy and the environment, and administration and finance.

Work relating to shelter, infrastructure and services was begun on a number of experimental and demonstration projects. Audio-visual material, developed as a result of demonstration projects in the Philippines and Indonesia, was widely distributed and used for training purposes by a number of institutions. The Centre also prepared studies on land use in relation to solar energy, rural energy and rural habitat, and on the role of passive heating and cooling systems in human settlements, for submission to the 1981 United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy.

On land-use policy, the Centre gathered information about current practices throughout the world and evaluated inputs with a view to producing a classification system for land-related measures. It also examined problems of land-use information systems to determine what kind of assistance it could most usefully provide.

With respect to public participation (generally an element of other subprogrammes), the Centre carried out work on housing co-operatives and on the development of local leadership skills for settlement organizations and community management.

The institutional and management aspects of the Centre's programme focused on promoting the role of financial institutions in mobilizing investment capital for shelter and infrastructure programmes. Attention was paid to the establishment of information networks through which data could be collected and documentary material disseminated.

Co-operation between the Centre and the United Nations Environment Programme

On 5 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/77 B, on co-operation between the Centre and UNEP, by which it approved the holding of joint meetings of the bureaux of the Commission on Human Settlements and of the UNEP Governing Council with the two organs' Executive Directors once a year rather than biannually. The resolution was based on recommendations of the Commission at its May session and the UNEP Governing Council at its April session.

Resolution 35/77 B was one of four resolutions (35/77 A-D) adopted jointly, without vote, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, where the texts were similarly approved on 20 November. The original text, one of four resolutions introduced together and sponsored jointly by Bangladesh, Burundi, Kenya, the Netherlands, Nigeria and the Philippines, was withdrawn, following informal consultations, in favour of a four-resolution text submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman, although the text that became resolution 35/77 B remained essentially unchanged.

Current co-operation between the Centre and UNEP was discussed at the third joint bureaux meeting, held on 4 and 5 December, where the need to provide Governments with periodic information on the status of ongoing projects was emphasized. The bureaux members noted that Mexico had begun implementing the proposed joint UNEP/Centre project on environmental impact assessment of urban development in the Valley of Mexico.

Resources for the Centre

On 5 December 1980, the Assembly adopted resolution 35/77 D, on financial contributions in support of the Centre's activities, by which it urgently appealed to all States and appropriate financial institutions to respond favourably to the Commission's appeal for increased financial support for the Centre's work programme by making or increasing voluntary contributions to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation (the financial arm of the Centre). A similar appeal was made by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 1980/47 of 23 July (see following section).

Resolution 35/77 D was adopted, without vote, as one of four resolutions on human settlements (see preceding subsection). Slight differences from the original six-power draft were the result of drafting changes.

On 17 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 35/217, by section VI of which it endorsed recommendations made by the Assembly's Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) on resources for the Centre's regional work programme. In its revised estimates of the programme budget for the biennium 1980-1981, ACABQ recommended an appropriation of $330,000 for 1981, a decrease from $386,500 requested by the Secretary-General, for the continuation of temporary assistance deployed to the four regional commissions in developing regions for implementing the Centre's work programme; staffing would be reviewed in 1981. The Commission had asked the Secretary-General to propose that the temporary assistance be converted to established posts.

Section VI of resolution 35/217 was adopted, without objection, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, following consideration of questions relating to the programme budget for 1980-1981. In that Committee, the ACABQ recommendations were approved, without vote, on an oral proposal of the Chairman, on 19 November.

Following approval of the text, the USSR said that, had it been put to a vote, it would have voted against it, and the United States said it would have abstained; both Members opposed such budget increases. The USSR said new requirements should be met from savings or through redeployment of existing resources.

International co-operation in human settlements

By a decision of 15 May 1980, the Commission on Human Settlements requested the Executive Director of the Centre to investigate methods of improving rural settlements, in collaboration with Governments, the regional commissions and relevant United Nations organizations, and to attach special priority to rural settlement matters in the Centre's work programme for 1980-1981 and medium-term plan for 1984-1989. The Commission also decided that the upgrading of urban slums and squatter settlements should continue in the Centre's work programmes with priority, and requested the Executive Director to develop approaches to designing appropriate physical standards for use in the upgrading process, to develop follow-up action based on the recommendations of the United Nations Seminar of Experts on Building Codes and Regulations in Developing Countries (Tallberg and Stockholm, Sweden, 17-24 March), to explore the feasibility of holding similar seminars in other regions and to assist countries in pilot demonstration projects for slum and squatter area improvement.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1980/47, on international co-operation in the field of human settlements, by which it took note of the Commission's report on the work of its May session and recommended its resolutions and decisions to the General Assembly for consideration and action. The Council urgently appealed to all States and appropriate financial institutions to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, invited the Centre and UNEP to intensify their co-operation, and called on the Centre to elaborate proposals as an effective contribution to the 1981 United Nations Energy Conference.

Resolution 1980/47 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the First (Economic) Committee, where the draft was approved by consensus on 16 July. The text was submitted and revised by a Committee Vice-Chairman on the basis of informal consultations held on a draft resolution earlier introduced by India on behalf of Council members belonging to the "Group of 77" developing States. The Group's draft was withdrawn.

The USSR-speaking after approval of the text, also on behalf of Bulgaria, the German Democratic Republic and Hungary and observers from the Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, Poland and the Ukrainian SSR- and Belgium noted that they had not opposed the consensus but did not agree with all the Commission's decisions; the USSR referred particularly to a decision concerning the establishment of joint units by the Centre and the regional commissions, and another calling for additional financing for staff.

The Group's original text had: stated the Council's endorsement of, as well as recommending to the General Assembly, the Commission's resolutions and decisions; expressed its disappointment, rather than concern, at the inadequacy of contributions to the Centre's activities; omitted an expression of appreciation to contributing Governments and an invitation to intensify Centre/ UNEP co-operation; and asked the Centre to elaborate concrete programmes rather than concrete and specific proposals aimed at making an effective and meaningful contribution to the 1981 Energy Conference.

On 5 December 1980, the Assembly adopted resolution 35/76, on strengthening human settlements activities, by which it urged Member States to undertake action-oriented programmes to implement the recommendations of the 1976 Habitat Conference, with special emphasis on the provision of adequate shelter, infrastructure and services to people living in urban and rural squatter settlements and slums. It called on the Commission and the Centre to support Member States in implementing those programmes. The Assembly expressed the view that an international year devoted to the problems of homeless people in the developing countries could focus world attention on those problems and asked the Executive Director of the Centre to consult with Governments and report on the implications of declaring such a year.

Resolution 35/76 was adopted without vote; it had been likewise approved by the Second Committee on 20 November. It was submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman on the basis of informal consultations held on a text sponsored by Argentina, Bangladesh, Ecuador, Egypt, India, Peru, Somalia, Sri Lanka, the Sudan and Yugoslavia, which was later withdrawn.

The adopted text differed from the lo-power proposal in that it asked the Executive Director, in reporting on the proposal for an international year, to consult with Governments and to take account of the guidelines for international years, adopted by the Council on 25 July and by the Assembly on 5 December (resolution 1980/67 and decision 35/424; see pp. 1028 and 1029), and the goals and objectives of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s) in the social field.

Also added was a clause in paragraph 1 to indicate that actions by Member States to strengthen their human settlement policies and programmes to implement Habitat Conference resolutions were to be within the framework of their national plans and priorities.

After approval of the resolution in Committee, Australia, Canada and Japan expressed concern at the growing number of international years, which, they felt, tended to lessen their impact.

Also on 5 December, the Assembly adopted, on the basis of a recommendation by the Commission at its third session, resolution 35/77 C by which it invited the Secretary-General, in consultation with the members of ACC, to arrange for the Centre to participate in all aspects of the work of ACC and its subsidiary machinery.

Resolution 35/77 C was one of four jointly adopted resolutions on human settlements (see subsection above on CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE CENTRE AND THE UNITED NATIONS ENVIRONMENT PROGRAMME). The six-sponsor text originally submitted, based on a Commission recommendation, had invited the Secretary-General to arrange for the Centre's Executive Director to become a member of ACC.

The Assembly also adopted, by resolution 35/56 of 5 December (see p. 499), the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade. With regard to human settlements, the Strategy called for improvement of the quality of life and the environment through, inter alia, the formulation and implementation of planning and development policies designed to ensure a better inter-regional balance between rural and urban development, as well as through the strengthening, in the context of human settlements planning, of measures to improve housing conditions for the most disadvantaged regions and communities and, in particular, through housing rehabilitation programmes. Developing countries were to formulate policies for the provision of basic shelter and infrastructure. To that end, countries would develop their construction industry, particularly for low-cost housing, support relevant financing institutions, stimulate research and disseminate findings on efficient methods of construction, low-cost design and technology for infrastructure, indigenous building materials and environmental protection.

(For relevant provisions (section III M) of the Strategy, see p. 517.)

Arabic as an official language of the Commission on Human Settlements

On 17 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Settlements, section XXI of resolution 35/217 by which it decided that the question of including Arabic as an official language of the Commission should be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 35/219 A of the same date on Arabic language services. By the last-mentioned resolution, the Assembly decided to include Arabic among the official and working languages of its subsidiary organs by 1 January 1982 and requested the Economic and Social Council to include Arabic among its official languages by 1 January 1983 (see p. 1244).

Section XXI of resolution 35/217 was adopted without vote. The Fifth Committee had approved the text without objection on 15 December, in dealing with questions relating to the programme budget for the biennium 1980-1981. The text was orally proposed by the Chairman.

Report of the Commission on Human Settlements

At its third session, held at Mexico City from 6 to 15 May 1980, the Commission on Human Settlements reviewed settlements policies and programmes in relation to the new international economic order and the new International Development Strategy, recommending that the General Assembly include human settlements development as a distinct and important framework of development efforts. It reviewed selected human settlements themes, in accordance with decisions of the Commission's previous session, and considered the reports of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) on United Nations activities for 1980-1981, as well as the Centre's co-operation and co-ordination with organizations outside the United Nations system; in dealing with administrative and budgetary matters, it approved fund allocations for 1980-1981.

In addition to taking the decisions mentioned previously in this chapter, the Commission adopted its rules of procedure and requested the Centre's Executive Director: to make every effort to assist the Palestinian people, within the Centre's competence (see also p. 390); to assist Zimbabwe in, inter alia, generating capital investment and obtaining technical support (see also p. 248); to assist in establishing information networks and systems at the national and regional levels; to convene a high-level ad hoc group of experts to study ways of mobilizing finances and establishing or strengthening financial institutions for settlement financing and investment; to contribute to the deliberations of the 1981 United Nations Energy Conference; to direct the Centre's 1984-1989 medium-term plan towards solving the problems and priorities of the developing countries; to establish priority areas of work within its 1980-1981 work programme, bearing in mind the views of the Commission at its 1979 and 1980 sessions; and to strengthen co-operation with the United Nations system, particularly the regional commissions, with emphasis on low-income rural and urban areas in developing countries. In particular, the Executive Director and the Executive Secretaries of the regional commissions were called on to set up joint units to enhance co-operative and effective use of resources for policies and programmes at the regional level.

On 5 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 35/77 A by which it took note of the report of the Commission on the work of its third session and reaffirmed the need to enhance the effectiveness and improve the co-ordination of the Centre. This resolution was adopted jointly with three others which had been approved by the Second Committee on 20 November (see subsection above on CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE CENTRE AND THE UNITED NATIONS ENVIRONMENT PROGRAMME).

Omitted from the original draft text after informal consultations was a preambular paragraph reaffirming the importance of consolidating the Centre's operations at Nairobi, Kenya, and welcoming steps taken by the Executive Director in this regard.

Voluntary contributions

At the 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, held at United Nations Headquarters, New York, on 6 and 7

November, contributions pledged by States for the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat): United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, for 1981, amounted to slightly more than $1.3 million; by 31 December, this figure had risen to $1.8 million. The status of contributions for 1980 and pledges for 1981 as at 31 December 1980 is given in the table below.

Recalling also General Assembly resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974 containing the Declaration and the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974 containing the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties Of States and 3362(S-VII) of 16 September 1975 on development and international economic co-operation,

Affirming that human settlements development should be viewed in the context of national plans and priorities and the development objectives of all countries, in particular the developing countries,

Recognizing that the Commission on Human Settlements has addressed itself meaningfully to substantive issues in the field of human settlements which are of priority concern to Member States, particularly to developing countries,

Expressing its appreciation of the initiative taken by the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) in providing direct technical assistance to a large number of developing countries,

Reaffirming the importance of consolidating the operations of the Centre at its headquarters at Nairobi and welcoming the steps taken by the Executive Director of the Centre in this regard,

2. Recommends to the General Assembly for its consideration those resolutions and decisions adopted by the Commission that require action by the Assembly;

3. Expresses its concern at the inadequacy of the voluntary contributions so far made available in support of the activities of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) and, while expressing appreciation to those Governments that have so far made financial contributions for the Centre's activities, urgently appeals to all States and appropriate financial institutions to respond favourably to the appeal of the Commission on Human Settlements for increased financial support for the work programme of the Centre, by making voluntary contributions to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, if possible at or before the United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, scheduled to be held in November 1980;

A/35/592/Add.4. Report of Second Committee (part V) (on development and international economic co-operation), draft resolution VI.

Resolution 35/76, as recommended by Second Committee, A/35/592/Add.4, adopted without vote by Assembly on 5 December 1980, meeting 83.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/118 of 14 December 1979 on the strengthening of human settlements activities,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolutions 1224(XLII) of 6 June 1967 and 1670(LII) of 1 June 1972 concerning the improvement and upgrading of living and environmental conditions in the squatter settlements and slums of urban and rural areas,

Recognizing that one of the most urgent needs in developing countries is to upgrade the living and working conditions of low-income and disadvantaged groups in both rural and urban areas,

Reaffirming that adequate shelter and services are a basic human right, as proclaimed in the Vancouver Declaration on Human Settlements, 1976, and that, in striving to uphold this right, priority must be given to the needs of the poor, the homeless and the most vulnerable groups of society,

Noting with concern that, in the years that have elapsed since the convening of Habitat: United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, the conditions of human settlements in developing countries have, by and large, worsened, particularly in the urban areas, where the growth of slums and squatter settlements has continued unabated, in the midst of poverty, squalor, overcrowding and human degradation,

Noting also that an increasing number of Governments are committed to upgrading low-income urban settlements and to improving the quality of life in rural areas and that, although some progress has been achieved in these directions, much remains to be accomplished,

Recognizing that it is necessary to translate the recommendations of Habitat: United Nations Conference on Human Settlements into action-oriented programmes and thereby renew the spirit and sense of purpose proclaimed at the Conference,

Recognizing also that the provision of housing, infrastructure and services can constitute a major instrument and thrust for combating poverty, improving the environmental conditions and quality of life, increasing productivity, generating employment and income and extending the fruits of economic progress to the poor and the needy,

Noting with satisfaction that the Commission on Human Settlements, at its third session, reviewed especially, as selected themes of importance, the upgrading of urban slums and squatter settlements and the development of rural settlements and growth centres, and requested the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to continue to give high priority to these two subjects within the work programme and the medium-term plan of the Centre and to assist developing countries in related practical programmes and pilot demonstration projects,

Considering that the international community should take concrete steps to support the efforts of the developing countries to improve living conditions in both their urban and their rural sectors, especially for the benefit of underprivileged groups,

1. Urges Member States, within the framework of their national plans and priorities, to strengthen their policies regarding human settlements and to undertake concrete action-oriented programmes to implement the recommendations adopted by Habitat: United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, with special emphasis on the provision of adequate shelter, infrastructure and services to the people living in squatter settlements and slums of urban and rural areas;

2. Calls upon the Commission on Human Settlements and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to provide all possible support to Member States in the implementation of the above-mentioned programmes;

3. Expresses the view that an international year devoted to the problems of homeless people in urban and rural areas in the developing countries could be an appropriate occasion to focus the attention of the international community on those problems;

4. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements to submit a report, after appropriate consultations with Governments, to the Economic and Social Council, through the Commission on Human Settlements at its fourth session, on the implications of declaring an international year, which would be committed to providing homes for the poor and the homeless and would focus worldwide attention on the rehabilitation of the shanty-dweller, taking into account the guidelines for future international years adopted by the Council in its resolution 1980/67 of 25 July 1980 and by the General Assembly in its decision 35/424 of 5 December 1980, and in accordance also with the goals and objectives of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade in the social field;

5. Requests the Commission on Human Settlements to review the report at its fourth session and to transmit it, with the Commission's comments, to the Economic and Social Council for consideration at its second regular session of 1981, taking into account the guide lines referred to in paragraph 4 above.

Recalling section II, paragraph 4 (b), of its resolution 32/162 of 19 December 1977, in which it called upon the Commission on Human Settlements to follow closely the activities of the organizations of the United Nations system and other international organizations in the field of human settlements and to propose, when appropriate, ways and means by which the overall policy objectives and goals in the field of human settlements within the United Nations system might best be achieved,

Recalling a/so section III, paragraphs 5 (a) and (b), of its resolution 32/162, in which it called upon the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to ensure the harmonization at the intersecretariat level of human settlements programmes planned and carried out by the United Nations system and to assist the Commission on Human Settlements in co-ordinating human settlements activities in the United Nations system, to keep them under review and to assess their effectiveness,

Noting with satisfaction that the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements is now a fully integrated organization with a programme of work, including technical assistance, research, training and the dissemination of information in the field of human settlements,

Chapter XIII

Regional economic and social activities

Economic Commission for Europe

During 1980, the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) emphasized activities relating to the environment and energy. It also sought to achieve progress in implementing the relevant provisions of the Final Act of the 1975 Helsinki (Finland) Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe. At the review meeting of the Conference, which convened at Madrid, Spain, on 11 November 1980, the Executive Secretary of ECE informed participants that substantial progress had been made, the ECE work programme having been adapted to reflect fully those provisions.

The thirty-fifth session of ECE, held at Geneva from 15 to 26 April 1980, adopted a resolution, covering all aspects of the Commission's work, and 14 decisions. Subjects related to energy and the environment were emphasized in the resolution, by which ECE approved its 1980-1981 work programme and endorsed in principle its 1980-1984 long-term programme.

Decisions dealt with energy, trade, scientific and technological co-operation, water pollution and other water problems, standardization, co-operation in coal mining and use, long-term economic trends, engineering industries and automation and, finally, concentration and integration of work programmes. By a decision of 23 April, ECE took note of a secretariat study of the economic role of women in the region, prepared as a contribution to the July 1980 World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women (see p. 8861, and asked its Executive Secretary to assess changes in that role. On 26 April, it asked the Executive Secretary to continue to co-operate with the Economic Commission for Western Asia, the Economic Commission for Africa, other United Nations bodies and concerned countries on subjects within ECE's competence of common interest to Mediterranean States, and recommended that its subsidiaries identify areas for economic co-operation in the area.

Protection of the environment

By its resolution adopted on 26 April 1980, ECE endorsed decisions of the Senior Advisers to ECE Governments on Environmental Problems, taken at their session held from 18 to 22 February, to implement the results of the 1979 High-level Meeting within the Framework of ECE on the Protection of the Environment,<sup>1</sup> as well as new ECE programme priorities to give new impetus to the Commission's work on environment problems. It also stressed the desirability of early ratification of the 1979 Convention on Long-Range Transboundary Air Pollution, and adopted a Declaration of Policy on Prevention and Control of Water Pollution, including Transboundary Pollution. The Declaration encompassed 14 principles on the subject, developing principles contained in an ECE declaration of policy on water pollution control it had adopted in 1966. The Commission recommended that member States consider applying the principles in formulating and carrying out their water policies, inviting them to report in depth triennially on their actions.

By a decision of 26 April, ECE asked the Senior Advisers to strengthen their efforts to review ECE activities annually, in close co-operation with other principal subsidiary bodies, which were invited to submit proposals and specific recommendations on ways to improve co-ordination and co-operation. It decided on economic projections as the next major topic for in-depth consideration from the point of view of integration and co-ordination.

On the same date, ECE asked its Committee on Water Problems to consider the implications of the adoption of the Declaration in order that the principles might receive further consideration. Inviting closer co-operation between the Senior Advisers and the Committee, ECE asked the latter to consider the feasibility of setting up a project in co-operation with the former for monitoring and evaluating transboundary water pollution.

An Interim Executive Body was established to implement the decisions on long-range transboundary air pollution adopted by the 1979 High-level Meeting and to undertake the provisional implementation of the 1979 Convention. Work began in priority areas such as the review of strategies and policies for abatement of air pollution caused by sulphur compounds, their effects on the environment, and strengthening of the programme for monitoring and evaluating long-range transmission of air pollutants in Europe. The need for all signatories to the Convention to join and participate fully in this programme was stressed by the Interim Body at its first session, held from 27 to 31 October. Progress was also made on work on low- and non-waste technology.

Two activities on the protection of flora, fauna and their habitats were initiated. The first was directed 'towards evaluating international measures, especially legal instruments, with a view to extending the application of existing instruments and programmes and, if necessary, considering new measures. The second dealt with the possible promotion of a network of representative ecological areas.

Energy

The Senior Advisers to ECE Governments on Energy at their second session, from 3 to 6 March, undertook an extensive exchange of information, views and experience between member States on general energy problems, concentrating on four work areas: programmes, policies and prospects; demand and supply; trade and co-operation; and conservation. The Commission on 26 April had requested the Advisers to continue their activities according to this 1979 mandate.

By its resolution of 26 April, ECE reiterated the importance of an extensive exchange of information on energy problems, including energy resources, and of national policies in these areas, as a basis for closer international co-operation and for discussion of problems related to a possible high-level meeting on energy organized within the ECE framework. It also asked for circulation of Governments' views on a USSR proposal for the holding of all-European congresses on transport and energy.

The Coal Committee, which met from 22 to 25 September, continued its work in coal gasification and liquefaction, with particular attention to enhancing co-operation. A summary report was prepared incorporating all available information on activities relating to and further development of coal gasification and liquefaction. By a 23 April decision, ECE asked the Coal Committee to continue consideration of the concept of creating an ECE co-ordinating centre on this technology.

Work continued on the interconnexion of electric power transmission systems in the Balkan countries, one of the four operational projects for which ECE was executing agency. This project aimed at demonstrating that, through interconnexions, the countries (Bulgaria, Greece, Romania, Turkey, Yugoslavia) could meet their electric power needs with a smaller reserve capacity, make seasonal exchanges of power, and generally facilitate trade in energy. The Commission's Committee on Electric Power met from 21 to 25 January.

The Committee on Gas, which met from 14 to 18 January, worked on various aspects of the gas industry, in particular natural gas resources, transport and storage, distribution and use, statistics and investments.

A Seminar on Energy Modelling Studies and Their Conclusions on Energy Conservation and Its Impact on the Economy took place at Washington, D. C. (United States) from 24 to 28 March. A Seminar on Improved Techniques for the Extraction of Primary Forms of Energy was held at Vienna from 10 to 14 November.

Science and technology

With regard to the transfer of technology, the Manual on Licensing Procedures in Member Countries of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe was published. In the energy field, the Senior Advisers to ECE Governments on Science and Technology, which met from 11 to 15 February, convened a Seminar on Technologies related to New Energy Sources (Jülich, Federal Republic of Germany, 8-12 December) which was to serve as a contribution to the 1981 United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy. Preparation began for a number of seminars scheduled for 1981 to deal with statistics, trends in different forms of technology transfer and their impact on the development of trade and economic co-operation, and evaluation of research and development.

On 26 April, the Commission asked its Executive Secretary to prepare proposals for consideration by the Senior Advisers on possible ECE contributions to follow-up activities to the 1979 United Nations Conference on Science and Technology for Development,<sup>2</sup> and meanwhile to implement the Conference's Vienna Programme of Action<sup>3</sup> by disseminating ECE study and meeting results to developing countries.

Trade

Studies and ad hoc meetings on industrial co-operation and on trade information, combined with work in trade facilitation and standardization, helped maintain the momentum of East-West trade and co-operation. Efforts were again directed simultaneously towards the removal of obstacles to the development of trade, and towards creating conditions favourable to the promotion and diversification of exports.

Long-term economic growth and trade prospects were the subject of an ad hoc meeting from 28 to 30 April, convened jointly by the Senior Economic Advisers to ECE Governments and the Committee on the Development of Trade. The Commission on 23 April expressed satisfaction with the steps the two bodies had taken to adopt their work programmes to improve their work on long-term growth prospects and international co-operation, and invited principal subsidiaries to co-operate in identifying long-term economic trends and co-operation possibilities. Particular attention was paid to the technological component in East-West exchanges and to the contribution which long-term industrial co-operation agreements, incorporating provisions for the transfer of technology, could make to redressing the imbalance of East-West trade. Attention was also devoted to the development of industrial co-operation at the third Ad Hoc Meeting on Industrial Co-operation (Plovdiv, Bulgaria, 10-12 June).

By a decision of 26 April, ECE invited member Governments to expand intraregional trade, to reduce or progressively eliminate obstacles to trade and further to improve economic information.

The secretariat undertook a series of new studies in East-West industrial co-operation, covering key sectors such as the chemicals and automotive industries. The Meeting of Government Officials Responsible for Standardization Policies, held from 6 to 8 May, adopted a recommendation on harmonization of standards. On 23 April, ECE had decided to convene in 1981 two sessions of the Group of Experts on Standardization Policies, which had last met from 29 to 31 January 1980, to consider matters referred to it by the Meeting of Government Officials. Work was also begun on the preparation of preliminary suggestions for generally agreed criteria on which to base an assessment of the competence of test laboratories and testing centres.

Projections and programming

Work in economic projections focused on key sectors such as energy, trade and technology. The Senior Economic Advisers to ECE Governments, undertaking a very specific approach to the major problems facing the region, considered, among other important problem areas, the interactions between economic growth, energy activity and international trade. They and the Committee on the Development of Trade jointly explored the future evolution and growing role of international trade over the coming decade in the economic development of the countries of the region. They also investigated the likely future orientations of trade flows within as well as outside the region. The Advisers and the Committee met, respectively, from 17 to 21 and from 24 to 28 November.

Industry

Increased attention was paid to energy use in the iron and steel industry and to the utilization of advanced computer systems and methods in the decision-making process in the chemical industry. The Steel Committee, which met from 5 to 7 November, conducted three major studies: on demand for and supply of metallurgical coke; on the strategy for energy use in the iron and steel industry; and on the evolution of the specific consumption of steel. It added a new project to its work: a seminar to be held in 1982 on changes in the quality requirements of steel demand. The seminar was to be part of a series on the use of steel in various sectors, one of which was a Symposium on Steel Use in Public Works, Infrastructure and Construction, held from 21 to 25 January 1980, and the latest of which was on the use of steel in shipbuilding (Katowice, Poland, 15-19 September).

The Chemical Industry Committee met from 8 to 10 October. A highlight of its work in 1980 was the Seminar on Management and Management Information Systems in the Chemical Industry (Varna, Bulgaria, 22-26 September). A number of studies were under way, including: examination of various methods of using coal as a raw material, especially a number of coal conversion processes yielding hydrocarbons particularly suitable for the chemical industry; an analysis of existing and promising areas for future compensation arrangements within that industry; and the influence of environmental protection measures on pesticide production and consumption.

Transport

The Inland Transport Committee, which met from 28 January to 1 February, continued to review transport problems and policies in the region and to develop international instruments and technical regulations affecting international transport. In the area of road transport, particular attention was given to energy questions in relation to the construction of vehicles, use of replacement fuels, traffic control, speed limits and fiscal provisions.

Road transport infrastructure received major attention. The first phase of the lo-nation Trans-European North-South Motorway project, launched in 1977, was to be completed at the end of 1981. The Steering Committee for this project met at Vienna from 28 to 30 April. In October, ECE became the sole executing agency responsible for technical and administrative aspects of the project.

The development of an international network of inland waterways was a subject of major concern to the Committee, as it had been for many years. A study concerning a navigable waterway between the Danube River and the Oder and Elbe Rivers was essentially completed in 1980. Also, the first phase of a study of a navigable waterway between the Danube and the Aegean Sea, carried out by Greece and Yugoslavia, was completed; ECE was the executing agency for this project.

A Seminar on Problems of Coupling in Pushing Navigation on Inland Waterways was held at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, from 23 to 26 September.

Human settlements

The impact of energy considerations on human settlements policies and urban renewal and modernization policies received priority attention within the Committee on Housing, Building and Planning, which met from 15 to 19 September. Progress was made in the study on long-term prospects for energy use in human settlements in the ECE region and in the establishment of a register of pilot and demonstration projects aimed at achieving energy efficiency in human settlements. The Working Party on Building continued, at its meeting from 23 to 27 June, studies on policies for energy conservation in buildings and launched a full-scale inquiry on regulatory and standardization aspects of such energy conservation. The Working Party on Urban and Regional Planning, which met from 16 to 19 June, initiated a study on energy issues in physical planning.

Studies were prepared on urban renewal and the quality of life and on the improvement of housing and its immediate surroundings. Improvement of the existing urban fabric was one of the main themes of the Fourth ECE Conference on Urban and Regional Research (Paris, 2-7 June). A Seminar on Citizen Participation in the Planning, Implementation and Management of Human Settlements was held (Split, Yugoslavia, 6-10 October). The Group of Experts on Housing, Building and Planning Problems and Policies in the Countries of Southern Europe (Torremolinos, Spain, 2-8 November) considered substandard housing in towns. A study on the role of construction in the national economy was carried out in co-operation with the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat).

Water

The Committee on Water Problems convened a meeting on international river commissions from 1 to 3 September which marked a major step in the common effort to strengthen co-operation among countries bordering transboundary rivers and international lakes. The importance of problems related to accidental pollution and floods in rivers crossing or forming international boundaries was emphasized and the need for evaluation of possible damage was stressed.

The Committee, which met from 10 to 14 November, gave increased attention to the question of more efficient use of water. A Seminar on Economic Instruments for Rational Utilization of Water Resources (Veldhoven, Netherlands, 13-17 October) examined in detail the economic aspects of water conservation. It focused, in particular, on methods of allocation and optimization of investments for water resources development, the evaluation of the effectiveness of economic incentives and the influence of water prices on water utilization and discharge of pollution.

A study on long-term perspectives for water use and supply was completed.

Statistics

The Conference of European Statisticians continued its work on international comparisons of main economic aggregates among the countries of the region, including comparisons between countries with different economic and social systems. This project compared simultaneously the volume of the countries' gross domestic products and the purchasing-power parities of their currencies. In addition, several bilateral comparisons undertaken by pairs of European countries were completed.

The Conference, which met from 23 to 27 June, agreed on the format of overall energy balances, and the definitions accompanying such balances were developed in detail. It continued to give high priority to work in environmental statistics. The Conference decided to develop a draft standard international classification of land use. A meeting on land-use statistics was convened from 17 to 20 March, and subsequent work focused on the detailed elaboration of the definitions of land-use categories. Methodological questions were discussed in detail at a Seminar on Environmental Statistics (Warsaw, Poland, 16-19 September).

A joint intercountry project of ECE and the United Nations Development Programme was launched on the use of computers for statistical purposes and the design and development of automated statistical information systems. Resources from different national statistical offices were to be combined for work on problems of general interest. The Steering Committee for this project held its first meeting from 1 to 5 December.

Agriculture and timber

The Committee on Agricultural Problems, which met from 10 to 14 March, devoted increased attention to the economic, technological and scientific aspects of agricultural production and the efficient management of farms. Marketing problems and standardization figured prominently in its work. Meetings included a symposium on the role of co-operation, through co-operatives and other forms, in agricultural and food marketing, held from 16 to 20 June, and the Symposium on Production, Processing and Utilization of Maize (Belgrade, 15-19 September).

The elaboration and review of quality standards and general conditions of international sale remained important activities, as were those relating to energy, environmental problems, and land and water resources.

The work of the Timber Committee, which met from 13 to 17 October, included energy questions, exchange of technical information and forest sector problems in southern Europe. Projects of special interest to this region were introduced, e.g.

development of methods and equipment for silvicultural operations and multiple-use forestry under Mediterranean conditions. A Seminar on Afforestation and Reforestation Machines and Techniques (Madrid, 2-5 May) also devoted special attention to machines and techniques suitable for Mediterranean conditions.

A Seminar on Vocational Training and Extension Services for Small-scale Forest Owners and Farmers was held from 10 to 14 March at Honne, Biri (Norway).

A Symposium on Wood-based Panels in the 1980s (Helsinki, 12-16 May) examined economic and technical perspectives in this sector. A Seminar on the Production, Marketing and Use of Finger-jointed Sawnwood (Hamar, Norway, 15-19 September) focused on quality control and strongly endorsed international standardization in this field.

Automation and engineering

The Commission on 23 April approved the future work programme of its Working Party on Automation, drawn up at the Party's session from 3 to 5 March. The same day, it adopted the work programme for 1980-1981 of the Ad Hoc Meeting of Experts on Engineering Industries and decided to hold a number of specific engineering industry seminars, study tours and meetings for engineering studies in 1981 and 1982.

On 26 April, ECE dissolved the Working Party and created a new permanent body, the Working Party on Engineering Industries and Automation, recommending that it include in its work programme the activities covered by the Working Party on Automation as well as the Ad Hoc Meeting of Experts.

A Seminar on Innovation in Engineering Industries (Turin, Italy, 9-13 June) discussed techno-economic aspects of fabrication processes and quality control, and a Seminar on Automation of Welding was held at Kiev, Ukrainian SSR, from 13 to 17 October.

Decision by the Economic and Social Council

On 24 July 1980, by decision 1980/164, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of ECE for the period 28 April 1979 to 26 April 1980, of the views expressed during the discussions in the Commission, of the resolution and other decisions it adopted and of its programme of work. This decision was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the First (Economic) Committee, which on 18 July had approved without objection a text proposed by ECE.

Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific

The thirty-sixth session of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) was held at Bangkok, Thailand, from 18 to 29 March 1980. The main focus of the session was on regional input into the formulation of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s).

Among the substantive activities of ESCAP in 1980 were the establishment of a Special Project on Energy in the secretariat, the integration of four research and training institutions into a "think tank" for development of the region, the inauguration of a Liaison Office for the Pacific at Nauru on 3 October, the opening for underwriting business of the Asian Reinsurance Corporation, which grossed over $4 million in its first year of operation, and the streamlining of the conference structure of the Commission.

The principal purpose of the Special Project was to identify short-term policy options and suggest innovative measures for reducing the dependence of ESCAP countries on imported petroleum for energy supply and developing new and renewable sources of energy.

The Asian and Pacific Development Centre was set up on 1 July at Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. The Centre resulted from the integration of the Asian and Pacific Development Institute, the Asian and Pacific Development Administration Centre, the Social Welfare and Development Centre for Asia and the Pacific and the Asian and Pacific Centre for Women and Development. The Centre chose four areas for its long-term programme: energy planning and management, food security, human resources mobilization and integration of women in development.

In accordance with an ESCAP resolution of 27 March, an intergovernmental meeting of ESCAP members was convened at Bangkok from 13 to 15 October to review the Centre's draft charter that was to replace its Statute, which served as an interim basis for the Centre's operations. The Centre's Management Board, established under the Statute to review its operations and adopt its work programmes, held its first session in December.

As a result of streamlining the Commission's conference structure on 29 March, an annual meeting of ESCAP was set at the ministerial level, and a schedule of meeting-intervals was established for the legislative committees, either annually or biennially. New terms of reference were set out for the Advisory Committee of Permanent Representatives and Other Representatives Designated by Members of the Commission and for the Special Body on Land-locked Countries.

The Commission, for the first time, joined with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) in the formulation of intercountry programmes for 1982-1986 for Asia and the Pacific. The increased extrabudgetary assistance made available raised the total value of the technical co-operation programme administered by ESCAP to more than $22.4 million. Forty-four missions were undertaken by 11 regional advisers and experts.

Other activities of the year included the Second Asian and Pacific Ministerial Conference on Social Welfare and Social Development, held in October, and the ESCAP/Regional Centre for Technology Transfer Symposium on Solar Science and Technology, held in November/December, both at Bangkok. The Ministerial Conference made recommendations relating to perspectives, priorities and strategies in social welfare and social development.

As a follow-up to the July 1980 Copenhagen (Denmark) World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women (see p. 885), a subregional meeting for Pacific women, held at Suva, Fiji, in October/November, adopted a plan of action containing policy guidelines for adoption by Governments and the United Nations system in developing programmes for women's participation in development.

By one of five resolutions it adopted on 27 March, ESCAP urged implementation of, and requested an evaluation of progress on, the Comprehensive New Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries,<sup>4</sup> of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development. It also called for support, co-operation and contributions to the preparatory work for the 1981 United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries.

By another resolution, it invited member States to improve training and increase the number of qualified national personnel for the economic and social development of developing countries.

The Executive Secretary of the Commission was commended for his continuing efforts to increase ESCAP's role in the development of the developing Pacific island countries, and he was asked to continue efforts and find further ways to assist them in participating in ESCAP's activities.

Agriculture

Because the national economies of ESCAP member countries depended on the food and agriculture sector for domestic and export earnings as well as employment, attention was focused in 1980 mainly on improving food production and distribution, especially at the small-farmer level. The programme of work was aimed at overcoming policy and other constraints on food production, diversifying food crops, increasing the supply of more productive agricultural inputs and promoting various rural development strategies. Diversification concentrated on the development of low-cost coarse grains, pulses, roots and tuber crops.

Workshops were held promoting safe pest-management programmes and effective agro-pesticide marketing practices, and a fertilizer advisory, development and information network was in operation. In promoting rural development projects, attention was given to small farmers, rural women, fisherfolk and other disadvantaged groups.

Development planning

The 1979 Economic and Social Survey of Asia and the Pacific, after consideration by ESCAP in March

1980, was readied for publication, and the semi-annual 1979 issues of the Economic Bulletin for Asia and the Pacific were completed.

A regional input to the International Development Strategy for the 1980s was prepared and a project on growth, equity and structural change in the ESCAP region was completed. The findings of this project were utilized in formulating a regional development strategy.

Progress was made in project work in the area of macro-economic modelling and projection with the objective of helping ESCAP member Governments to make short- and medium-term forecasts of the development of their respective economies and to link these models, together with a world forecasting modelling system, to allow each national model to take into account global trade and capital flow developments. Several reports on country models were completed and a trade matrix of the ESCAP region was prepared.

Industry, human settlements and technology

The major activity in 1980 was a comprehensive survey of agriculture/industry linkages undertaken in respect of six selected countries. These studies were designed to cover policy aspects pertaining to development of public sector industries and their relation to large- and small-scale industries. Two regional studies based on the country studies were completed.

The Committee on Industry, Technology, Human Settlements and the Environment, which met from 23 to 29 September, focused on preparations for the second Ad Hoc Group of Ministers of Industry meeting, scheduled for July 1981. The need to draw specific and urgent attention to building up national industrial capacities was stressed and it was recommended that, in view of the importance of energy to industrialization, specific programmes for developments in the energy field should be taken up during the coming years. In 1980, the secretariat developed several programmes in this field particularly related to the use of biomass as an alternative renewable source of energy.

Two regional meetings were held to work out specific programmes concerning science and technology for development. The Regional Centre for Technology Transfer and the Regional Network for Agricultural Machinery continued to work closely with Governments in selected areas; training programmes were organized and workshops and seminars held. Programmes in this sector also placed a high degree of concentration on energy; solar energy and energy from biomass received special attention.

In 1980, problems in the field of human settlements received increasing attention, as did the planning of settlements, with emphasis on regional development. Special attention was also paid to problems of urban development. Here again, energy, as related to the needs of settlements, received consideration.

International trade

The programme in the international trade sector focused on trade expansion and co-operation. The Trade Co-operation Group, with seven subgroups to deal with the various components of the programme, by the end of the year consisted of 21 developed and developing countries, 16 of which were in the region. It held its third session at Bangkok in November.

Preparations were made for a 1981 round of negotiations on the 1975 Bangkok Agreement.<sup>5</sup> Steps were also taken to expand the membership of the Agreement, currently composed of Bangladesh, India, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the Republic of Korea and Sri Lanka.

The work of the Asian Reinsurance Corporation included preparatory work for setting up a multinational export credit insurance system. Assistance was provided to member countries concerning technical problems involved in international trade practices and procedures, such as customs, documentation and trade and international trade law.

The ESCAP Trade Promotion Centre continued to assist developing countries through its four services: advisory, trade information, professional development, and market and product development.

Special efforts were made to deal with trade problems of the least developed, land-locked and island developing countries, including organizing meetings of least developed countries in 1981 to consider regional input for the 1981 United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries.

Natural resources and mineral prospecting

A working group meeting on energy in the South Pacific, held at Apia, Samoa, in June, resulted in the formulation of a Pacific regional energy programme. Preparations for the 1981 United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy included the holding of two meetings, one on geothermal energy and the other on fuel wood and charcoal, as well as a regional preparatory meeting in December.

Mineral resources activities in 1980 resulted in publication of the Regional Mineral Distribution Map of Asia and the Pacific (second edition), and preparation of the ESCAP Atlas of Stratigraphy

(second and third parts) and the triennial review of the mineral resources development programme in the region (1976-1978).

Technical and administrative support was given to the four regional/subregional projects for which ESCAP acted as the executing agency: the Regional Mineral Resources Development Centre (RMRDC), the Southeast Asia Tin Research and Development Centre and the committees for co-ordination of joint prospecting for mineral resources in offshore areas of East Asia and the South Pacific. A three-year multidisciplinary programme to advance regional co-operation in remote sensing was recommended and was assured funding from UNDP. Fifty-one technical advisory missions to 16 countries were carried out by RMRDC, based in Bandung, Indonesia, which also organized in December a workshop on decision variables in mining.

The Committee for Co-ordination of Joint Prospecting for Mineral Resources in Asian Offshore Areas (CCOP), which met in November, established a standing working group on petroleum data to standardize terminology and formats of well data, for oil- and gas-pool data files, and prepare a thesaurus of geographic, physiographic and stratigraphic terms. Also in 1980, CCOP assisted Indonesia and Thailand in the exploration of offshore tin-placer deposits, Singapore in offshore engineering studies and Malaysia in a marine geophysical survey. A brief course on marine seismic techniques was given at the annual group training course on offshore prospecting in Japan, and in Shanghai and Guangzhou, China, for the technical staff of the Bureau of Marine Geology and the Marine Geology Headquarters, respectively. The training programme for technical staff of member countries was continued.

Quaternary geology projects were under way in Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand with the assistance of experts provided by the Netherlands.

In 1980 Vanuatu joined the Committee for Co-ordination of Joint Prospecting for Mineral Resources in South Pacific Offshore Areas, which met at Tarawa, Kiribati, in October.

Population

Monographs on the population situation in Nepal and the Philippines were published and distributed during the year; monographs for Australia, Bangladesh, India, Malaysia, New Zealand and Papua New Guinea were in preparation.

A joint ESCAP/World Health Organization expert group meeting on mortality in Asia, which included a review of changing trends and patterns between 1950 and 1975, was held at Manila, Philippines, in December. Comparative studies on the impact of family planning programmes on fertility as well as on the relation between fertility behaviour and family size, structure and function were organized. Two volumes of the continuing inventory on selected local family-planning-programme experiences in countries of the ESCAP region were published.

Assistance was provided to Maldives and Nepal in census matters, to Indonesia in demographic sample surveys, and to Brunei, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Thailand and island countries of the Pacific in demographic analysis. Fifteen fellowships were awarded to candidates from 11 member countries for training at the International Institute for Population Studies, Bombay, India. Technical assistance was provided to China, Sri Lanka and Viet Nam in preparing project proposals for establishing national population clearing-houses and documentation centres. A workshop for population correspondents in relation to the national population information centres was held in Sri Lanka.

Social development

Social development activities in 1980 centred on the questions of the integration of women in development, the mobilization of youth for national development, and social welfare and development.

To this end, a meeting was convened at Suva in February on income-generating activities for rural women, a seminar/workshop was held at Singapore in May on the role of young women in social progress and development, especially in industries, and an expert group meeting at Bangkok in June discussed women in relation to forest industries. The October/November follow-up meeting at Suva to the July World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women also addressed these issues.

Also, research was carried out on the social and occupational situation of young females in the urban sector and on methods of collecting information on youth development.

National training workshops for rural youth leaders were conducted in Thailand (June/July), Nepal (August/September) and Papua New Guinea (November/December).

In March, the Commission recommended the establishment of a separate Committee for Social Development in ESCAP, and adopted two resolutions on social development. By the first, it urged member countries to accelerate preparatory work for the International Year of Disabled Persons (1981), to exchange experiences and to consider effective contributions, implementation and follow-up actions. It also urged strengthening of ESCAP's work in the field of disability prevention and rehabilitation of the disabled. By the second resolution, it asked Governments to allocate more resources to national mechanisms for integrating women in development and to review restrictive laws and regulations, urged the Secretary-General to augment programme support to assist ESCAP members in implementing the recommendations of the Commission's preparations for the World Conference on women, asked for greater support to the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women, and called for assistance from UNDP and other United Nations bodies.

A technical meeting and regional seminar was held in September in connexion with the International Year of Disabled Persons. The Second Asian and Pacific Ministerial Conference on Social Welfare and Social Development, in October, was attended by representatives of 30 countries.

Shipping, ports and inland waterways

The ESCAP Committee on Shipping, and Transport and Communications met in January/February and December, the latter session (to consider shipping questions in particular. Secretariat efforts were concentrated during the year on helping developing member countries in the transfer of technical know-how and the promotion of regional economic co-operation. Five regional and country-level workshops, three regional seminars and one study tour were organized.

A regional meeting for representatives of Governments, shippers and commodity organizations, held at Jakarta, Indonesia, in March, was designed to promote co-operation among those groups; seven regional meetings were held for the chief executives of national shippers' organizations, national shipowners' organizations and national port authorities, separately as well as jointly, for the promotion of shipping and trade.

A joint ESCAP/Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization meeting of experts was held in April/May dealing with the development of maritime training and certification of seafaring personnel in the region.

Statistics

During 1980, the statistical activities of ESCAP were directed towards the promotion of methodologies and techniques of data collection and analysis through advisory services and technical meetings. Statistical training was also a major activity.

Among areas receiving particular attention were the conduct of the 1980 round of population and housing censuses, the promotion of methodologies for collecting energy statistics, particularly on non-conventional sources of energy, environment statistics and preparations for a 1983 round of industrial censuses and surveys.

Transport, communications and tourism

Activities in 1980 included the introduction of electric traction in railways of the region which, in view of the global energy crisis, was considered important in providing opportunities to reduce operating costs and fuel consumption and to improve services. Research and studies on the application of modern materials for railway-track, bridge and rolling-stock construction, introduction of micro-computers in railway operations, and improvement of railway signalling and telecommunication systems were also under way.

In road transport, emphasis was given to the adoption of energy conservation measures, improvement of road maintenance and traffic safety, promotion of international road transport and utilization of the Asian Highway, harmonization of border-crossing formalities, including formulation of a draft convention of technical standards of vehicles, and consideration of the environmental impact of traffic operations and road design.

Other activities related to improvement of urban traffic-planning capabilities and development of public transport, economic aspects of air cargo transport and facilitation of international traffic through simplification and modernization of documents and procedures.

Special emphasis was given to the implementation of the Asian Telecommunication Network, development of rural telecommunication, and systematic planning of broadcasting and television networks. Attention was also focused on development of postal services in rural and isolated areas, planning of postal services, technical studies and training aspects.

Tourism activities included technical studies and surveys of tourism potential and facilities in member countries. A seminar/workshop on investment and financing of tourism development was organized in February in Thailand (see p. 1024).

Integrated rural development

Under the integrated programme on rural development, activities included: commissioning of studies (to be analysed in 1981) in Bangladesh, India, Indonesia, Nepal, Pakistan, the Philippines and Sri Lanka to collect information as to the specific disabilities faced by low-income groups in rural areas and methods by which they could be overcome; completion of work on an integrated atoll-development project in Maldives; completion of field work on an integrated development of Pangasinan province in the Philippines; and completion of an intercountry project for reviewing existing systems for monitoring and evaluating rural development programmes with reference to their impact on the rural poor.

Economic and technical co-operation among developing countries

As its contribution to a regional information system, ESCAP initiated a series of studies on renewable sources of energy, publishing the first volume on solar energy; subsequent volumes were to deal with biogas, wind energy and mini-hydroelectric plants. Each volume was to carry, for the sector concerned, an overall survey of the state of the art in member countries, illustrations of appropriate technology and of the scope for technical co-operation among developing countries (TCDC), details on experts and institutions, and a select bibliography.

By a resolution of 29 March, ESCAP approved and called for speedy implementation of an arrangement among its developing countries and other interested parties to co-operate in carrying out a scheme for TCDC in respect of disadvantaged ESCAP countries. It urged developing member countries to establish and strengthen technical co-operation programmes on the basis of the arrangement and urged developed members, multilateral financing agencies and United Nations organizations to provide funds and other support, on request. The arrangement, annexed to the resolution, set forth the objectives of the scheme, procedures to be followed, the parties expected to participate, and the procedures for review and administration; it also noted regional complementary developments for promoting technical and economic co-operation for development, such as the emerging regional information system, guidelines for the employment of experts, and designation of official TCDC focal points for co-ordination.

Environment

At its 1980 session, ESCAP adopted a resolution calling for regional co-operation in environmental policy, management and law.

As part of a regional project on protection of the marine environment and related ecosystems, implemented with technical and financial assistance from the Swedish Environmental Protection Service, national seminars were convened in China, Singapore and Sri Lanka. A subsequent regional meeting on the subject in Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, 4-8 August) was followed by a study tour in Sweden.

Another regional seminar on the application of systems analysis techniques to environmental problems (Bangkok, 25-28 November) - aimed at helping environmental engineers to plan and implement development projects under conditions of scarcity of resources without impairing the quality of the environment.

The Typhoon Committee, meeting in December, reviewed preparations for the Typhoon Operational Experiment, which aimed at improved forecasting and warning capability.

Transnational corporations

The activities of the ESCAP/United Nations Centre on Transnational Corporations Joint Unit on Transnational Corporations during the year aimed to further understanding of the economic, social, legal and political impact of transnational corporations, to establish effective international arrangements for their operations so as to promote their contribution to national and world economic development while eliminating their negative effects, and to strengthen the negotiating capacities of host countries, in particular developing countries, in their dealings with those corporations. This last objective received particular emphasis.

The Joint Unit completed eight case studies, two of which were published. Also completed were country case studies on copper, tropical hardwoods and bananas.

Mekong project

The 1980 work programme approved by the Interim Committee for Co-ordination of Investigations of the Lower Mekong Basin conformed to the general framework of the indicative basin plan. It was composed of 32 projects in the following sectoral groups: hydrology and meteorology (3), basin planning (8), projects relating to the mainstream (2), tributary projects (9), navigation improvement (6), agriculture and fisheries (3) and social planning (1).

At the end of December, the operational resources contributed or pledged to the Mekong Committee and the Interim Mekong Committee, or for projects sponsored by these bodies, stood at approximately $427.7 million, an increase of some $12.4 million during the year.

The contribution of UNDP in 1980 was $1,543,400, being part of a total of $4,498,000 approved for the three-year period 1 May 1979 to 30 April 1982 (phase V).

Considerable progress was made on almost all the operational projects in the Lao People's Democratic Republic. The hydrologic and meteorologic network in that country and in Thailand underwent further expansion and improvement. Fishery projects in the Lao People's Democratic Republic made good progress; the completed part of a pilot farm was producing fish for the market. The hatchery and nursery sections of the farm, operating at full capacity, produced a record 4.5 million fry of Asiatic carp. Sixty boat engines were distributed in the reservoir area to enhance fishing activity.

With the aid of a grant from the Netherlands, construction started on a pilot fish farm in Thailand near the Lam Pao reservoir.

In Viet Nam, the Government continued construction work on a number of projects in the Mekong delta for flood control, drainage, salinity control and irrigation. Hydrologic activities in the delta and the central highlands proceeded satisfactorily.

Economic Commission for Latin America

In 1980, the Economic Commission for Latin America (ECLA), also known by its Spanish acronym CEPAL, carried out a number of tasks directly relating to the analysis of, and research on, primary problems in the field of Latin American socio-economic development. The Commission also undertook a variety of technical consultancy and training activities, in close association with the Latin American Institute for Economic and Social Planning, the Latin American Demographic Centre and the Latin American Centre for Economic and Social Documentation.

The fourteenth extraordinary session of the Committee of the Whole of ECLA was convened in New York on 20 November 1980 to consider, among other topics, the rationalization of the institutional structure and pattern of meetings of the ECLA system, financing of the activities of the Latin American Demographic Centre at Santiago, Chile, and the activities of the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee (CDCC). Among other things, the Committee of the Whole decided to request the ECLA Executive Secretary to intensify his efforts vis-à-vis the appropriate United Nations authorities with a view to ensuring that the necessary staffing and budgetary provisions were made. The Committee also endorsed the objectives of the ECLA regional population programme and called on ECLA to bring its pattern of conferences in line with the two-year budget programming cycle of the United Nations.

The fifth session of CDCC-a co-ordinating body and consultative organ of ECLA-was held at Kingston, Jamaica, from 4 to 10 June and the Third Conference of Ministers and Heads of Planning of Latin America and the Caribbean was held at Guatemala City, Guatemala, from 26 to 29 November.

The Commission sponsored or co-sponsored approximately 25 conferences, meetings and seminars during the year, at which various development problems of the region were considered.

Development

With regard to development questions and policies, the research carried out on economic policies in countries of the region and the publication of the Economic Survey of Latin America, 1979 were major activities.

In the course of 1980, the secretariat carried out intensive activities relating to the preparation of the new International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s), preparing, among other things, a document on Latin American development in the 1980s. Further, a meeting of experts of CDCC countries was held (Bridgetown, Barbados, 19-21 May) to evaluate the chief trends and characteristics of the social and economic development of the Caribbean that were of importance for a broad development strategy in the 1980s.

In the field of international trade, studies on specific problems concerning relationships between Latin America and other countries or areas of the world were emphasized. A Technical Seminar on Integration and Co-operation in Latin America (Santiago, 10-12 March) was held, and assistance was provided to the Latin American Free Trade Association in the restructuring process that led to the new framework treaty, which established, as a replacement, the Latin American Integration Association.

In the industrial sector, a project on capital goods was started to determine in physical terms the regional demand for such goods in the production sectors of greatest importance. At the same time, an endeavour was made to evaluate the region's capacity to produce goods of this type.

A study on various policies adopted by the Mexican Government to promote the agricultural sector during the period 1947-1979 and their impact on the economic and social development of the rural sector was completed.

The incorporation of the environmental dimension in styles of development was another topic to which particular attention was devoted.

Energy

A study was prepared on the impact of increases in the price of oil on Latin American countries that imported energy resources, and another on regional preparatory activities conducted in connexion with the 1981 United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy.

Water resources

With regard to the question of water resources, ECLA continued support and follow-up activities relating to implementation of the Mar del Plata Action Plan<sup>6</sup> of the 1977 United Nations Water Conference, among which those relating to the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990) were of particular significance.

Human settlements

The Commission held a seminar on appropriate technologies for human settlements (Managua, Nicaragua, 3-15 November), in co-operation with the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Environment Programme, to train 35 professionals specializing in the preparation and implementation of human settlements policies, programmes and projects.

Social development

In the social field, the secretariat continued its activities relating to modes of development and social change in Latin America, the integration of women into the development process, and education and social development. It also continued to devote special attention to the problem of critical poverty and the quest for policies to eradicate it. A regional technical meeting and regional seminar (Santiago, 5-11 November) was held to promote the exchange of national experience and to consider the most effective way of implementing and achieving the goals of the International Year of Disabled Persons (1981) at the level of each country's institutions.

Transport

A meeting of experts on trade and international transport facilitation from the Central American countries, Mexico and Panama was held at Guatemala City from 5 to 8 August. Seminars and other activities relating to the Customs Convention on the International Transport of Goods under Cover of TIR Carnets (1975 TIR Convention) and its adoption by the seven countries of the southern cone of South America were continued. Further, an analysis of the potential of the various means of transport in the Asunción-River Plate corridor and the identification of the institutional barriers that hindered realization of that potential were started. Publication of the FAL Bulletin (on trade and transport facilitation) continued, and the preparation of a shipping documentation manual was completed.

Statistics

The Statistical Yearbook for Latin America, 1979 was published and the secretariat carried out research and consultancy tasks in a number of areas. These tasks included: the establishment and maintenance of special data files; the establishment of a Latin American data bank of economic and social statistics; the measurement and analysis of income distribution; price comparisons to estimate the purchasing power of currencies and the real product in common currencies; the measurement and analysis of social development; and technical assistance in household surveys and population censuses.

Technical co-operation

The secretariat carried out a number of activities relating to technical co-operation among developing countries and regions. A demonstration course on information systems for the operational management of rail cargo terminals was organized in Mexico from 16 to 24 June, in view of the interest shown by a number of Latin American railway authorities in establishing such systems, which were developed by the Mexican national railway.

The Latin American Centre for Economic and Social Documentation continued to implement a project for an information system that would make possible the exchange of experience and co-operation in the field of planning.

As a result of a consultative meeting (New Delhi, 5-7 June 1979) held by the Government of India in co-operation with ECLA and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific to promote and establish conditions that would facilitate understandings and agreements between India and Latin American countries in selected areas of common interest, a meeting between representatives of the Latin American and Indian engineering industries took place at Santiago from 4 to 6 August 1980.

Decision by the Economic and Social Council

On 24 July 1980, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/56 which dealt with the work of ECLA and its CDCC. The Council thereby noted the issues brought to its attention by ECLA, commended to ECLA the conclusions of CDCC, whose priorities it noted, and then noted CDCC's resolution on the strengthening of its secretariat. It asked the Secretary-General to make appropriate provision in his 1981 supplementary budget estimates for strengthening the secretariat and for implementing CDCC's priority projects, for consideration by the appropriate bodies of the General Assembly.

This resolution was sponsored by the Bahamas, Barbados, Cuba, Jamaica, Mexico, and Trinidad and Tobago and orally amended by the United States. It was adopted on the recommendation of the First (Economic) Committee, which approved the text without objection on 18 July.

In a statement on the budgetary implications of the draft resolution, the Secretary-General noted that the necessary examination of the relationship between the programme proposals and budgetary resources could not be completed within the time constraints of the current Council session. He would, therefore, undertake the necessary review before the Assembly's regular session.

A number of Council members-among them Belgium (on behalf of Council members which were members of the European Economic Community), the USSR and the United Kingdom-reserved their position on the financial aspects of the resolution. On behalf of the sponsors, Barbados accepted a United States oral amendment to the effect that provision for implementation of priority projects and strengthening CDCC's secretariat would be requested to be included in 1981 supplementary estimates "within the overall United Nations budget."

Addressing the Council on 11 July, the Executive Secretary of ECLA observed that the Commission was carrying out intensive work in the Caribbean pursuant to a mandate received from the Caribbean Economic Community, was seeking to promote co-operation between the Caribbean countries and the rest of Latin America, and was associated with other regional commissions in developing horizontal economic co-operation with other countries. Adopting a pragmatic approach to development, ECLA countries had recognized the need for financial policies to increase the national capacity to save, and policies to enhance export capacity; stress was also placed on import substitution in many countries and on inflation reduction. The required changes, he said, would call for political will and the firm conviction that the international community could do much to help bring about the needed structural adjustments.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing that the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee was created in 1975 by the Economic Commission for Latin America to act as a co-ordinating body for activities relating to development and co-operation and as a consultative organ of the Commission,

Noting that the Committee drew up a work programme, which was endorsed by the Commission at its seventeenth and eighteenth sessions, held at Guatemala City from 25 April to 5 May 1977 and at La Paz, Bolivia, from 18 to 26 April 1979, respectively,

Considering that the Committee, at its fifth session, held at Kingston, Jamaica, from 4 to 10 June 1980, approved a series of urgent projects within the framework of that work programme,

Noting that the States members of the Committee, at its fifth session, considered that the implementation of those priority projects constituted an urgent need requiring supplementary resources for implementation in 1981 which could not have been foreseen at the time of the adoption of the programme budget for the biennium 1980-1981,

Considering the statement made by the Executive Secretary of the Economic Commission for Latin America to the Economic and Social Council on the results of the fifth session of the Committee, and the statements made by some of the States members of the Committee,

1. Takes note of the issues that require attention or are brought to its attention by the Economic Commission for Latin America;

2. Notes with appreciation the results of the fifth session of the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee, and commends to the Commission, for consideration at its nineteenth session, the conclusions reached by that Committee;

3. Notes also that the Committee, at its fifth session, selected, within the framework of the work programme adopted at its first session and endorsed by the Commission at its seventeenth and eighteenth sessions, a limited number of areas and projects to be accorded the highest priority and to be implemented urgently;

4. Further notes that the Committee, at its fifth session, also adopted resolution 2(V) Strengthening its secretariat in order to meet the requirements of development and co-operation in the Subregion in accordance with the spirit and objectives of the Committee;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to make appropriate provision for the implementation of the priority projects and for the strengthening of the secretariat of the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee in his supplementary budget estimates for 1981 within the overall United Nations budget, for consideration by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly in the course of the thirty-fifth session of the Assembly, bearing in mind the view of the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee that the implementation of such projects constitutes an urgent need which could not have been foreseen at the time of the adoption of the programme budget for 1980-1981.

Economic Commission for Africa

The fifteenth session of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) (sixth meeting of the Conference of Ministers), held at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, from 9 to 12 April 1980, adopted on the final day of the session 28 resolutions covering a wide range of matters concerning the economic and social development of Africa. The subjects dealt with included a review and appraisal of the socio-economic situation in the region in the 1970s and prospects for the 1980s, an appraisal of international economic relations as a factor in African development and an African development strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (1981-1990). The Conference called on member States to participate fully in the 1980 special session of the General Assembly in August/September to consider the new International Development Strategy for that Decade. The economic and social implications of the increasing refugee population in Africa were also considered.

The Conference was preceded by a five-day meeting of the Technical Preparatory Committee of the Whole of ECA. The main preoccupation at the Conference session was elaboration of a draft plan of action for the implementation of the Monrovia Strategy for the Economic Development of Africa, which was submitted to a special meeting of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) Assembly of Heads of State and Government (Lagos, Nigeria, 28 and 29 April). The ECA draft was adopted as the Lagos Plan of Action. Its central feature was an integrated approach to economic and social development. (See also p. 548.) The OAU Assembly also called for the achievement of an African Economic Community by the year 2000.

The Conference of Ministers, by resolutions adopted at its April session, expressed appreciation to the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) for its aid to Africa, agreed to the priority areas proposed in the UNDP regional programme for Africa for 1982-1986, and asked for an increase in resources allocated during that period. Noting progress in ECA/UNDP co-operation, it supported a series of evaluation missions for 1980 and 1981 to assess means of implementing the co-operative programme and enabling UNDP to estimate the magnitude of future regional activities to be executed by ECA.

By another resolution, ECA urged imperialist countries to stop their support of South Africa's economic system based on apartheid and withdraw their investments in that country, advised that the use of the veto in the Security Council to frustrate African actions towards South Africa's policy was not in the permanent members' best interests, and called on African countries to intensify their efforts to impose mandatory sanctions.

Further, it appealed to organizations and the international community for contributions to meet the reconstruction, rehabilitation and development needs of Uganda, and asked the ECA Executive Secretary, in collaboration with the OAU Secretary-General, to mobilize an international programme of assistance to that country (see also p. 275). It also recommended that ECA should have the means to assist rural and urban refugees, if requested, in employment, training and education, and called on countries of asylum to find, as far as feasible, job placement for qualified refugees.

Agriculture

A major concern of ECA in 1980 was the need to expand the production and marketing of food to meet Africa's growing food challenge and to make the region self-sufficient in food by the turn of the century. To assist in implementing the 1978 Regional Food Plan for Africa, ECA prepared sub-regional components to permit more effective execution by the Multinational Programming and Operational Centres (MULPOCs) -the field arm of ECA. Projects of some 40 intergovernmental organizations were evaluated in order to assess their capacity for, and identify constraints to, implementing the Food Plan. Proposals were developed in co-operation with OAU, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, the African Development Bank and the World Food Council for agricultural development from 1980 to 1985. These later formed the agriculture section of the Lagos Plan of Action.

Reports of studies on intraregional co-operation and trade in food, livestock, fishery and forestry products for the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) were completed, and 13 projects proposed for implementation.

Several studies relating to the improvement of agricultural statistics were completed. One examined constraints on statistical institutions in four countries of the eastern Africa subregion -Burundi, Rwanda, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Zambia-and recommended appropriate measures.

Assistance was provided to the MULPOC based in Yaoundé (United Republic of Cameroon) for a study on improving agricultural research and training institutions in the central Africa subregion and to the Lusaka-based MULPOC in Zambia in preparing a project for developing a subregional maize research centre for eastern and southern Africa. A country inventory for agriculture in Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia and Madagascar was compiled. A study was also completed identifying basic constraints facing small farmers in Africa, in order to formulate strategies for their economic and social development.

In April, ECA endorsed the decisions of the 1979 World Conference on Agrarian Reform and Rural Development' and called on all African States to implement its Programme of Action.

Economic and technical co-operation

The Lusaka-based MULPOC held a Council of Ministers meeting to discuss its work programme, including a proposed Preferential Trade Area (PTA) for eastern and southern African countries. An intergovernmental negotiating team on 7 June approved the PTA draft treaty and its protocols.

On the recommendation of a meeting of the Labour Ministers of Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland, the Southern Africa Labour Commission, consisting of the Ministers of Labour of those countries, Mozambique and Zimbabwe, was established.

The Gisenyi (Rwanda) MULPOC saw modest progress towards the achievement of closer co-operation among the countries of the Economic Community of the Great Lakes (Burundi, Rwanda, Zaire). It was involved in projects relating to the exploitation of methane gas from Lake Kivu and of peat fuel in Burundi. It completed studies on the promotion of economic integration through harmonization of industrial policies.

On the recommendations of the Council of Ministers of the MULPOC for western Africa in Niamey (Niger), two main activities were completed: a comprehensive directory of intergovernmental organizations in western Africa for the purpose of identifying suitable areas for co-operation between two or more organizations; and publication of a periodic bulletin highlighting the major activities and programmes of western African intergovernmental organizations.

The Yaoundé-based MULPOC carried out sectoral studies for central Africa on industry, trade, agriculture and transport, and created a subregional clearing and payments system.

In the North Africa subregion, an interdisciplinary trade mission completed reports and recommendations on the identification of multi-country projects for economic co-operation.

During the biennium which ended in 1980, ECA almost doubled the volume of activities of its regional programme of technical co-operation over the previous two-year period. This was the result of a significant increase in extrabudgetary funds from the technical assistance programmes of the United Nations system, the United Nations Trust Fund for African Development and other multilateral and bilateral donors. The totals, of this assistance are shown in the table below (in United States dollars).

Economic research and planning

The Survey of Economic and Social Conditions in Africa, 1978- 1979 was completed. Part I covered the international economic situation and progress towards the establishment of a new international economic order, the development strategy for Africa for the Third United Nations Development Decade, and economic developments in the ECA region, including a special study on economic growth, employment, income distribution and mass poverty in the African developing countries. Part II analysed socio-economic developments in the independent developing African countries.

Two perspective studies were completed: one analysed problems and perspectives of least developed countries; the other, perspectives and policy implications of the region as a whole and of groups of African countries in the 1980s. A Conference on the Problems and Prospects of the African Least Developed Countries (Addis Ababa, 17-22 March), convened in co-operation with the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), recommended the establishment of a Conference of Ministers of African Least Developed Countries as an ECA subsidiary organ. The ECA Conference of Ministers endorsed the March Conference's report on 12 April, and decided to institute such a Conference of Ministers to meet annually immediately before the ECA Conference of Ministers. It would co-ordinate efforts, establish priorities and monitor and evaluate progress under UNCTAD's Comprehensive New Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries* in the African countries in that category.

The Governing Council of the African Institute for Economic Development and Planning, which met at Addis Ababa from 21 to 23 March, noted that contributions collected for 1979 amounted to less than a third of States' $1 million commitment, with arrears at 31 December 1979 amounting to $1.7 million. In April, the Conference of Ministers appealed to member States to pay their assessed contributions to the Institute by the end of 1980 and asked them to consider awarding scholarships for study at the Institute financed from their national indicative planning figures.

Industrial development

The Lagos Plan of Action set goals for the continent based on proposals of the Follow-up Committee on Industrialization in Africa, which met at Addis Ababa from 10 to 15 March and called for attaining 14 per cent of world industrial production and self-sufficiency in food, building materials, clothing and energy.

Missions carried out included those on: iron and steel, specific engineering industries, a potash project and engineering in-plant training at Cairo, Egypt. Reports on iron and steel, engineering and small-scale industries, and project profiles on chemicals were prepared. A workshop on metals and engineering was organized at Lusaka, with visits to industrial establishments in Zimbabwe.

International trade and finance

Studies conducted included: identification of raw material inputs for basic industries; existing and potential products to be traded among African countries; and the possible establishment of an African regional organization of producers/exporters and importers/distributors of selected commodities. Other studies aimed at strengthening and expanding trade among countries covered by the various MULPOCS. A seminar for heads of trade promotion institutions in Africa was conducted and an intra-African trade symposium was organized in conjunction with the OAU third All-African Trade Fair held at Khartoum, Sudan, in November.

Studies were undertaken on existing and potential trade among African and Asian countries, as well as with countries in Latin America. An African regional project on the development of trade between socialist countries of Eastern Europe and developing countries was established with the objective of assisting member States to diversify their trading and production patterns. A number of studies aimed at increasing the awareness of the positive as well as negative role of the activities of transnational corporations in Africa. These included areas such as balance of payments, the proposed United Nations code of conduct on transnational corporations, the pharmaceutical sector, profile studies on major corporations, and taxation. Training programmes and workshops were also conducted on aspects of the activities of such corporations in Africa. Technical assistance was provided to the West African Clearing-House, the Association of African Central Banks, the African Centre for Monetary Studies, the Clearing-House of Central Africa, and the Co-ordination Committee on Multilateral Payments Arrangements and Monetary Co-operation among Developing Countries.

The Conference of African Ministers of Trade held its sixth session at Addis Ababa from 17 to 20 March.

Human settlements

In 1980, ECA enlarged the mandate of the Intergovernmental Regional Committee on Human Settlements to accommodate environmental issues; the terms of reference of the joint body remained to be worked out by the Executive Secretary. The Committee held its second session at Addis Ababa from 28 July to 1 August. Advisory assistance was given in the development of housing co-operatives and in setting up institutional frameworks to promote the development of human settlements, incorporating new planning techniques and methodologies and developing an innovative approach to housing finance. Deliberations of a meeting of directors of African building research institutes held at Bujumbura, Burundi, in April/May led to further work on the establishment of joint sub-regional building research centres in western Africa and in the Great Lakes countries.

Addressing the need for an integrated regional training, research and advisory programme for the conservation and management of African wildlife, a subject discussed at a meeting of the Council of Ministers of the MULPOC for eastern and southern Africa (Gaborone, Botswana, 28 and 29 January), the ECA Conference of Ministers in April endorsed a Council recommendation for negotiations with the United Republic of Tanzania on converting the College of African Wildlife Management at Mweka into a regional institution for English-speaking African countries, and decided that a similar approach be made to the United Republic of Cameroon to broaden the status of the Ecole de Faune at Garoua, for French-speaking countries.

Human resources development

A major effort was made during 1980 to strengthen training institutions. National and regional workshops were held for training staff, and an assessment mission on the effectiveness of manpower planning in selected African States was initiated. Under the expanded training and fellowship programme for Africa, the demand for training continued to outpace resources. Fellowships awarded totalled 270.

In April, ECA urged that consultations be initiated with appropriate United Nations organizations and OAU to evolve institutional machinery for regional co-ordination in human resources planning and development, which should provide for a technical preparatory committee of officials and a conference of ministers responsible for education, labour and related programmes.

Population

Activities of ECA continued to focus on the creation of awareness of the long- and short-term implications of population trends for social and economic development. Studies prepared included: population growth, i.e. fertility differentials in Africa; the demographic situation in the southern African subregion; demographic trends in African least developed countries; population trends and policies in Africa as assessed in 1970; volume trends and characteristics of international migration in Africa; population interrelationships in development planning in Africa; and Zimbabwe demographic profiles. A case study of population and socio-economic development in Rwanda was also completed.

Assistance in different aspects of population, particularly in demographic analysis, was given to the Comoros, Djibouti, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi and Somalia. The fourth edition of the African Directory of Demographers was completed, adding information on the languages spoken and working languages of persons listed. National seminars on population and development planning were organized in Guinea and the United Republic of Tanzania in conjunction with the International Labour Organisation.

In April, ECA's Conference of Ministers endorsed, for approval by the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly, new statutes for the Regional Institute for Population Studies at Accra, Ghana, and the Institut de formation et de recherche démographiques at Yaoundé. Their management was decentralized from United Nations Headquarters to ECA in 1980, and action was initiated to regionalize the two institutes, i.e. to involve all the countries served by each institute in its financing and management. The Conference also invited member States to make more effective use of these facilities, and requested financial support for them.

Four reports prepared to assist the Nigerian Government in the planning of a new capital were completed. These dealt with: a demographic survey of federal public servants in Lagos; a demographic survey of households, housing and living conditions in Lagos; a survey of industrial, commercial and other non-public service establishments in metropolitan Lagos; and a survey of departmental space requirements.

By an April decision, ECA invited its Executive Director to undertake an in-depth study of the integration of population variables in development planning in Africa, and asked him to assist States in census data analysis, mount a programme of studies to evolve socio-economic indicators for monitoring development and undertake other studies on particular concerns, including infertility, mortality, child deaths and migration.

Social development

Among the meetings, workshops, seminars and conferences organized during the year was the third Conference of African Ministers of Social Affairs (Addis Ababa, 8-10 October), preceded by an expert group meeting, both jointly sponsored by OAU. The Conference considered the general principles and policies of the African Centre for Applied Research and Training in Social Development, inaugurated at Tripoli, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, on 17 January, approved its programme of activities and budget for the biennium 1981-1982, and analysed and elaborated on the social implications of the Lagos Plan of Action.

A technical meeting and regional seminar, organized at Addis Ababa in October in co-operation with OAU and the International Year of Disabled Persons secretariat, considered methods of attaining the objectives of the Year (1981). A long-term plan of action was drafted by the seminar whose report, findings and resolutions were approved by the above-mentioned Conference.

The Conference of Ministers of ECA in April had urged acceleration of the preparatory work towards implementing the Year's objectives, including establishment of national machinery for planning and co-ordination, with special emphasis on the needs of rural populations.

Advisory services were given to member States in the planning, organization and integration of family and child welfare programmes with overall national development policy, and development of national welfare institutions.

Youth policies, programmes and training requirements in Africa were surveyed and follow-up action taken. Patterns of family and child welfare policies, organization and administration in Africa were studied with a view to updating the 1966 edition of Family and Child Welfare Services in Africa.

In April, the ECA Conference of Ministers endorsed the resolutions, action proposals and strategies for 1980-1985 adopted by the 1979 second Regional Conference on the Integration of Women in Development, and recommended that all Governments establish machinery for the fuller integration of women in development and to provide, as a priority, resources to implement the Conference's recommendations.

Meetings of the subregional committees for the integration of women in development for the Gisenyi and Yaoundé MULPOCs were held in September and November 1980, respectively. They defined priority programmes for the period 1981 to 1983.

In April the Conference of Ministers invited the Administrator of UNDP to provide the ECA Executive Secretary with funds to initiate establishment of a United Nations Regional Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders for Africa south of the Sahara.

Statistics

To promote the development of national statistical services, ECA concentrated efforts on the African Household Survey Capability Programme, which involved creation of ongoing statistical survey capabilities in the countries of the region, and the Statistical Training Programme for Africa. Advisory services were given to member countries in national accounts, demographic statistics and data processing. Work continued towards developing a regional statistical service.

The first meeting of the new Joint Conference of African Planners, Statisticians and Demographers was convened (Addis Ababa, 24 March-2 April). It looked particularly at economic prospects for the 1980s, data requirements in support of the African development strategy and the relationship between population trends and economic and social development.

In April, the ECA Conference of Ministers called on the international community to support the immediate implementation and development of a Pan-African Documentation and Information System.

Transport and communications

The work programme of the Trans-African Highway (Lagos, Nigeria-Mombasa, Kenya) Authority was approved at a meeting in Bangui, Central African Republic, in July 1980. At a meeting of the Trans-East African Highway (Cairo-Gaborone) Co-ordinating Committee (Addis Ababa, 16-30 December), it was decided to establish in early 1982 an Authority similar to that of the Lagos-Mombasa Trans-African Highway, with headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya.

The Commission and ECOWAS agreed to hold a joint meeting in 1981 to determine the status, structure and authority of the Trans-West African Highway as well as the future course of action.

A full-scale study of the African Highway Master Plan began. It was to form the basis of developing a viable continental highway network and to elaborate and finalize an African highway code for adoption by all African countries.

In the maritime area, efforts were concentrated on the development of training facilities for maritime professionals. Technical assistance was provided to Cape Verde for training in port planning, organization and operations.

In the field of communications, ECA activities centred on the programme for the first phase of the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa (1978-1988) (see following section), which included the Pan-African Telecommunication Network (PANAFTEL) project. Elements of the programme were manpower training and infrastructural development in the three principal subsectors of communication: common-carrier communication or telephone, telex, data or facsimile communication; broadcasting (both radio and television); and postal services. The objective for the Decade of the PANAFTEL project was to complete the first 20,000 kilometres of route, assist in mobilizing funds for implementing another 5,000 kilometres of already surveyed routes and undertake surveys of 10,000 more kilometres requested by member countries.

Other studies on which ECA worked related to: the feasibility of a regional satellite communications system and of a multinational field experiment on educational broadcasting by satellite; the feasibility of a low-cost sound broadcasting system for rural communities; and the development of effective mass media.

Water resources

The outcome of a regional meeting on problems and needs of Africa in community water supply and sanitation (Addis Ababa, 4-8 August) served as an input for the meeting of the General Assembly on 10 November 1980 to launch the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990) (see p. 704).

An interregional seminar on rural water supply (Uppsala, Sweden, in October) reviewed the African situation and tried to place in perspective the technical, social and economic, planning, institutional and educational issues. A six-month study on a land and water resources survey for irrigation in Africa was completed in June. Its objectives were to assist African countries in the identification, planning, improvement and rationalization of irrigation projects, to assist in strengthening national irrigation services and to promote exchange of information and experiences. The objectives of this project were closely linked with the Regional Food Plan for Africa for self-sufficiency and the targets fixed therein. Another 1980 study, by the World Health Organization, UNDP and ECA on the planning and development of hydrometeorological networks and related services in Africa, was to promote the assessment of hydrometeorological data which formed the basis for water resources development. Visits were made in this connexion to Botswana, Lesotho, Mozambique, Swaziland, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Science and technology

Comprehensive proposals for an African programme of action on science and technology for development were formulated by ECA; these subsequently constituted the science and technology chapter of the Lagos Plan of Action, adopted in April 1980 by the OAU Assembly of Heads of State and Government.

Assistance was provided during the year to the African Regional Centre for Technology, the Industrial Property Organization for English-speaking Africa and the African Regional Organization for Standardization.

In collaboration with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, ECA organized a working group meeting of marine experts in May which reviewed the state of marine science and technology in Africa and prepared terms of reference for missions to coastal States in western, southern and eastern Africa. The missions evaluated the current state of marine science and technology and the needs and priorities in these areas.

On 12 April, ECA decided that its Intergovernmental Committee of Experts for Science and Technology Development, which met at Addis Ababa from 10 to 16 March, should continue to operate, with its full membership open to all African States. It would meet annually, submitting its reports to the Conference of Ministers through the Technical Preparatory Committee of the Whole. The Conference also gave the Committee its terms of reference.

Continuing efforts to strengthen ECA in science and technology, the Conference urged Governments to adopt by 1983 national and regional policies, laws and regulations on technology acquisition, promote indigenous technology, participate in United Nations activities in this field and take other actions to improve African science and technology capability.

Convinced that, because of special considerations, Africa deserved at least 40 per cent of the resources of the Interim Fund for Science and Technology for Development, ECA urged the United Nations Intergovernmental Committee for Science and Technology for Development to give due consideration to Africa's special needs when establishing guidelines for allocation and distribution of the Fund's resources.

Cartography and remote sensing

In 1980, responsibilities in remote sensing were added to the duties of the secretariat's Cartography and Remote Sensing Unit. Activities centred on the strengthening of existing institutions set up under the aegis of ECA, including the Regional Centre for Training in Aerial Survey, at He-Ife, Nigeria, the Regional Centre for Services in Surveying and Mapping at Nairobi, and the African Remote Sensing Programme. Other activities included the organization of a seminar on remote sensing application to highway engineering, at Nairobi in December, and participation in technical studies and meetings aimed at the establishment of the Ouagadougou (Upper Volta) regional ground receiving station.

The cartographic inventory project completed work on six atlases.

Mineral and energy resources

Preparations for the first Regional Conference on the Development and Utilization of Mineral Resources in Africa, scheduled for February 1981, were a main concern during 1980. In addition, ECA continued to assist Governments in establishing and operating subregional mineral resources development centres. In particular, administrative and technical assistance was given to the Eastern and Southern African Mineral Resources Development Centre. Countries participating in the Centre included the Comoros, Ethiopia, Kenya, Mozambique, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania.

Preparation of regional geological, oil and gas, and mineral distribution maps and related studies was in progress by USSR institutions, financed by UNDP, with ECA acting as executing agency. The maps and studies were to assist member States in planning and executing mineral exploration and development in the African region.

A joint OAU/ECA Meeting of African Experts on Energy (Addis Ababa, 25-28 March) prepared a strategy and practical short-, medium- and long-term plans to promote and expedite the progressive and rational exploitation of Africa's natural energy resources. In April ECA endorsed the establishment of an African Energy Commission and asked OAU and ECA to set up the Commission's structures.

A study on organizational and operational aspects of electricity development in Mozambique, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Zambia was completed in April. Twelve fellowships, financed by France, were awarded for training in solar energy. In addition, a regional adviser visited several African countries to assess their potential in new and renewable sources of energy and proposed recommendations for their selective development. The Constitution of the African Solar Energy Centre was opened for signature.

Transport and Communications
Decade in Africa (1978-1988)

The ECA Conference of Ministers took a series of decisions concerning the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa (1978-1988) with the adoption of a resolution on 12 April. The Ministers called for continued co-operation by all concerned, national priority for transport and communications projects, an initiative by African States to obtain financing, and consideration by funding agencies of ways to finance regional and multinational projects. It invited the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to provide resources for the programme of the Decade, asked the ECA Executive Secretary to organize meetings to find additional funds and asked the United Nations Secretary-General to provide ECA with the resources to make the Decade successful.

At its June 1980 session, the UNDP Governing Council authorized the UNDP Administrator to approve commitments for technical co-operation projects for the Decade up to $20 million between 1982-1986 (the third programming cycle). Disbursements were to be made within a maximum of $12.5 million in that period and the balance in 1987-1991. Regional and interregional funds were to be the source of $10 million, the Programme Reserve the source for the $10 million balance. These arrangements were to be reviewed in 1986.

Reports on the Decade were submitted through the Economic and Social Council to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General. An August progress report summarized activities undertaken in the past year, for example the preparation of data sheets for projects to be carried out from 1980 to 1983 (first phase). It described the programme for those years, comprising 550 general studies, technical assistance and training projects, at a cost of $8.5 billion, and 221 specific viability and implementation studies, at a cost of $351.4 million. Twelve sectors covered were: roads and road transport; railways and rail transport; maritime transport; maritime ports; air transport; inland water transport; multimodal transport; telecommunications; communication by satellite; broadcasting; postal services; and training in communications.

The Secretary-General also reported, by a note in April and in the August report, on pledges made at the United Nations Pledging Conference for the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa held in November 1979.<sup>9</sup> Firm unconditional commitments to the Decade by African countries, as of April 1980, were $155,588. Potential contributions pledged by various funding agencies and industrialized countries totalled $6.3 billion.

The August report also stressed that the projects could be carried out fully only with the active and unfailing co-operation of African countries.

On 23 July, by decision 1980/159 adopted without vote, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of the Secretary-General on the Decade and of his note on the contributions paid or pledged at the Pledging Conference. The decision was adopted on the recommendation of the First (Economic) Committee, which approved the text, without vote on 21 July, as orally proposed by its Chairman.

On 5 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of its Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, adopted without vote resolution 35/108, by which it took a number of decisions concerning the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa. It noted with appreciation the UNDP Governing Council's approval of a $20 million allocation, reiterated its appeal to African States to give the highest priority to Decade projects, asked them to submit financing requests, appealed to funding agencies to finance regional and multinational projects, proposed various means to solicit additional financing, and asked the Secretary-General to provide ECA with the necessary resources to make the Decade successful.

The text before the Second Committee had been recommended by the Economic and Social Council, as set forth in Council resolution 1980/46, adopted without vote on 23 July. It had been approved without objection by the First Committee on 18 July, having been submitted by a Vice-Chairman following informal consultations on a draft submitted by Nigeria. The text was orally amended by the United Republic of Tanzania; those amendments added two paragraphs to the text recommended for Assembly adoption: one to note with appreciation the UNDP Governing Council's June decision; and the other to note with satisfaction that the High-level Meeting on the Review of Technical Co-operation among Developing Countries in May/June (see p. 589) had considered possibilities of interregional activities in such co-operation in support of the Decade's objectives.

A Vice-Chairman of the Second Committee of the General Assembly, following informal consultations, also orally proposed an amendment to the Council-approved draft resolution whereby a new preambular paragraph would be added to note with satisfaction the progress report submitted by the Secretary-General in August. The Committee on 7 October approved without vote the Council's text as thus amended.

Industrial Development Decade for Africa

On 5 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/66 B, by which it proclaimed the 1980s as the Industrial Development Decade for Africa. It also called on the United Nations Industrial Development Organization and ECA, in co-operation with OAU, to formulate proposals to implement the programme for the Decade and monitor its progress. (For further details, see p. 658.)

Training courses for

ECA translators/précis-writers

On 17 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted without objection resolution 35/217 on questions relating to the programme budget for the biennium 1980-1981, section IV -of which dealt with the programme for training English and French translators/précis-writers to fill posts at ECA. The Assembly took note of a progress report of the Secretary-General in which he reviewed the second (1979-1980) training programme, comprising nine trainees, and authorized him to incur the necessary expenses for the third (1980- 1981) programme which opened in November. It also called for an evaluation of the training programmes of the two previous bienniums.

The Assembly acted on the recommendation of its Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, which approved without vote on 28 October a text orally proposed by its Chairman. A recommendation to that effect had been made by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions.

Report of the Commission

On 24 July 1980, by decision 1980/165, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of ECA for the period 29 March 1979 to 12 April 1980 and of the recommendations and resolutions contained therein. Acting on a recommendation by ECA's Conference of Ministers, the Council decided to amend the Commission's terms of reference- paragraph 18 was accordingly to read: "The Commission shall submit to the Economic and Social Council once a year a full report on its activities and plans, including those of any subsidiary bodies." The decision was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the First Committee, which had approved the text without objection on 18 July. Deleted from the paragraph was a sentence relating to reports for years in which the Commission did not hold a session; ECA had decided in 1979 that meetings of the Conference of Ministers would be held annually instead of biennially.

Related decisions

The Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly adopted resolutions in 1980 by which the Council proposed and the Assembly endorsed the designation of 1983 as World Communications Year. The financing for the Year was to be on the basis of voluntary contributions and the programme was to focus on communications infrastructures. The International Telecommunication Union was to be the lead agency. Due account was to be taken, in making preparations for the Year, that this event was near the mid-point of the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa.

These actions were embodied in Council resolution 1980/69 and Assembly resolution 35/109 of 25 July and 5 December, respectively (see p.1022).

Resolution 35/108, as recommended by Second Committee, A/35/545, adopted without vote by Assembly on 5 December 1980, meeting 84.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/15 of 9 November 1979 on the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolution 1979/61 of 3 August 1979 on the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa,

Recalling further resolution 341 (XIV), adopted on 27 March 1979 by the Conference of Ministers of the Economic Commission for Africa, in which the Conference urged member States to give high priority to the development of transport and communications,

Noting resolution CM/Res.738(XXXIII), adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-third ordinary session, held at Monrovia from 6 to 20 July 1979,

Further noting the results of the Conference of African Ministers of Transport, Communications and Planning, held at Addis Ababa from 9 to 12 May 1979, in particular the adoption of the global strategy for the implementation of the programme for the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa and the programme of action for the first phase (1980-1983) of the Decade,

Considering that the programme for the Transport and

Communications Decade in Africa forms a whole and includes national, regional and subregional projects, which should be fully implemented within the period envisaged, so as to enable an integrated transport and communications network to be established in Africa, and that the proposed World Communications Year could provide further impetus to activities in the communications sector,

Taking into account the difficult problems faced by the land-locked African countries and the need to respond more effectively to their financial requirements in the field of transport and communications,

Further taking into account the encouraging results of the United Nations Pledging Conference for the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa, convened on 20 November 1979 by the Secretary-General, during which a general consensus emerged among funding agencies on the financing, essentially on a bilateral basis, of the projects included in the programme for the first phase of the Decade,

Noting with satisfaction the progress report of the Secretary-General submitted in accordance with General Assembly resolution 32/160 of 19 December 1977,

1. Expresses its thanks to the Secretary-General for having organized the United Nations Pledging Conference for the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa for the purpose of mobilizing additional resources for the implementation of the programme for the Decade:

2. Notes with appreciation that the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme, at its twenty-seventh session, authorized the Administrator of the Programme to approve commitments for technical co-operation projects up to the amount of $20 million in respect of the Decade during the third programming cycle, 1982-1986;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Economic Commission for Africa for the work accomplished since March 1977 and for the positive and effective co-operation of the Organization of African Unity, the specialized agencies and African intergovernmental organizations in their collaboration with the Commission in the preparation of the programme for the first phase of the Decade:

4. Reiterates its appeal to States members of the Economic Commission for Africa to give the highest priority to the transport and communications projects adopted for and included in the programme for the first phase of the Decade and therefore to include these projects in their development plans;

5. Requests African States to take the initiative of submitting to the various sources of finance requests for the financing of the projects adopted for the first phase and to use the required resources for that purpose;

6. Also requests African States both to allocate from their own national resources a part of the budget for the implementation of the programme for the Decade and to assign a part of the resources derived from outside aid to the implementation of the specific studies contained in the programme for the first phase:

7. Notes with satisfaction that the High-level Meeting on the Review of Technical Co-operation among Developing Countries, held at Geneva from 26 May to 2 June 1980, considered possibilities of interregional activities in technical co-operation among developing countries in support of the objectives of the Decade:

8. Appeals to African States to provide the Economic Commission for Africa, in a manner which it shall determine, with the necessary information on the progress made in implementing the projects in the programme for the Decade, so that the Commission will be able to perform effectively the role assigned to it in the global strategy for the implementation of the programme for the Decade;

9. Also appeals to the funding agencies and the various financing institutions to consider, with the Economic Commission for Africa, the possible ways of financing those projects of the Decade which are not national in character:

10. Calls upon the African States, the funding agencies and the various sources of finance for this purpose to involve, as appropriate, the Economic Commission for Africa in the different phases of the negotiations on the financing of the projects;

11. Expresses its appreciation to the Governments, international financial institutions and United Nations agencies that have contributed financial and technical assistance for the implementation of the programme for the Decade and invites them to continue to provide such assistance;

12. Invites all Governments in a position to do so to provide financial and technical resources for the implementation of the programme for the Decade;

13. Requests the Executive Secretary of the Economic Commission for Africa to continue his efforts for the successful implementation of the programme for the first phase of the Decade by ensuring the necessary co-ordination between funding agencies and African countries for the programme, particularly for regional and subregional projects, and national projects with a regional or subregional impact;

14. Also requests the Executive Secretary of the Economic Commission for Africa to organize as quickly as possible, with groups of donor countries and the financing institutions and with the participation of Governments, United Nations institutions and African intergovernmental organizations, either consultative technical meetings based on the various types of programmes for the Decade or consultative technical meetings based on groups of African countries or African subregions, for the purpose of finding the additional financial resources necessary to implement those projects for the Decade that are regional and multinational in character and of carrying out urgently the specific studies contained in the programme for the first phase that must be followed by concrete action not later than during the second phase;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Economic Commission for Africa with the financial means and resources necessary to enable it effectively to fulfil its role as the lead agency for the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa and to submit to the Economic and Social Council, at its second regular session of 1981, a progress report on the implementation of the programme for the Decade;

16. Requests the Executive Secretary of the Economic Commission for Africa to continue to submit progress reports on the implementation of the programme for the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa and to participate actively in the proposed World Communications Year, with a view to providing special impetus to development in Africa.

Economic Commission for Western Asia

During 1980, the Economic Commission for Western Asia (ECWA) was able to implement the greater part of its work programme and to meet requests for assistance by member countries.

The seventh session of ECWA was held at Baghdad, Iraq, from 19 to 23 April. At that session, ECWA approved its revised programme of work and priorities for 1980-1981 which was later endorsed by the Economic and Social Council. The Commission, by a resolution, requested its Executive Secretary to co-operate with the United Nations Co-ordinator of Assistance for the Reconstruction and Development of Lebanon and with the Development and Reconstruction Council in Lebanon in studying and implementing projects for the reconstruction of Lebanon, and recommended that a programme be established to cover this co-operation.

By other resolutions, the Commission: urged member States to strengthen the financial contributions account of ECWA; requested the Executive Secretary to establish an environment programme starting in 1984; called on him to seek funds for and identify the activities to be carried out by ECWA because of its increased responsibilities in the light of the General Assembly's restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations system; endorsed the Programme of Action for the ECWA region adopted at the 1979 World Conference on Agrarian Reform and Rural Development;<sup>10</sup> decided that a regional water resources council be established; decided to establish an ad hoc intergovernmental expert committee to advise ECWA on the establishment of programme priorities for the period 1984-1989 and on the formulation of a medium-term plan for that period; requested the Executive Secretary to pursue completion of a census of the Palestinian Arab people and to continue efforts to secure the remaining necessary funds so that a study on their economic and social situation and potential could be completed as designed; and urged member States to mobilize their resources to accelerate preparatory work towards implementing the objectives of the International Year of Disabled Persons (1981).

Development planning

A limited version of the economic survey of the ECWA region was published under the title Survey of Economic and Social Developments in the ECWA Region, 1980. A long-term macro-econometric model of the Syrian Arab Republic's economy was completed and was to be published in Studies on Development Problems in Countries of Western Asia, 1980.

Another report on development problems and prospects of the ECWA region in the 1980s was prepared at the request of the Committee for Development Planning. The report, based on the regional development strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s), examined a limited number of key sectors, issues and problems of particular relevance to the region. It examined major sectoral preoccupations, including such critical issues as technology and manpower, as well as institutional and managerial capabilities for development at the national and regional levels.

In preparation for the 1981 United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, assistance was given to ECWA's least developed member countries in the preparation of their presentations. In this connexion, advisory services in development planning were given to Yemen and in external sector planning and policies to Democratic Yemen.

A report reviewing external co-operation and integration in international trade and development was completed, to provide background material for policy-makers. Within the context of review and appraisal in the labour, management and employment sector, two reports were completed: one reviewed developments in the labour and employment situation during 1978 and 1979; the other dealt with employment, interregional labour mobility and manpower planning. Other studies and reports included: case studies on Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic in relation to "brain drain" problems and prospects; an analytical report on trends and policies in development finance in the ECWA region (including guidelines for improving management of the economy and strengthening co-operation among member countries); a report on the role of the public sector in promoting economic development in countries of Western Asia; and a provisional report on various aspects of financial planning and management in selected ECWA countries.

Information on laws, regulations and policies pertaining to transnational corporations in ECWA member countries was compiled for a global study on the subject by the United Nations Centre on Transnational Corporations, and work progressed on a study on the operations of transnational banks in Lebanon and Bahrain. Other activities included the completion of two studies, on transnational corporations and mineral development in the ECWA region, and on the operations of transnational corporations in shipping in the region.

Food and agriculture

The 1980 (third) issue of the annual publication Agriculture and Development was published in both English and Arabic. In addition to the standard features, the bulletin examined the practical dimensions of accelerating agricultural development in the region.

In following up studies previously undertaken on food security in Western Asian countries, a joint ECWA/Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations mission was sent to Democratic Yemen and Yemen, to identify technical assistance projects aimed at strengthening their food security position. In addition, a study was undertaken of the status of food, diets and bread in those countries. A further study, relating to crop-sharing and land-tenancy practices in Yemen, was completed.

Industrial development

Two studies on the content and development of national plans for regional co-operation in the industrial field were completed. One reviewed various measures and instruments of industrial policy adopted in the countries of the region to stimulate and guide manufacturing activities. The other assessed various economic co-operation arrangements among Arab States during the past three decades; it advocated the development of new industries, identified as "packages," leading to balanced benefit for States participating in such arrangements. Such industries would include the manufacture of capital goods, heavy engineering and basic metal industries.

Preparations for a 1981 meeting on identification of projects for regional co-operation in capital goods and heavy engineering industries included the completion of studies on the feasibility of establishing in the ECWA region a telecommunication industry, an electric-power equipment industry, a telephone cables industry, a power-cables manufacturing industry, manufacturing capacities for fabricated static equipment for the chemical and petrochemical industries, and manufacturing capacities for construction equipment.

A study on a strategy for the development of petrochemical industries was made; it analysed, among other things, the world situation regarding petrochemical industry development, production and marketing trends in petrochemical products, financial and feedstock constraints facing future development, the effect of energy issues, technological aspects-including integration and links with petroleum and gas resources and processes -and trading and co-operation programmes among different countries and regions.

Natural resources, science and technology

A report on the implications of the economics of oil refining for the future utilization of crude-oil production in the ECWA region was issued in April and sent to member countries for comments. Its recommendations were: additional refinery capacity should be built to keep pace with the expected growth of regional demand for refined products; additional capacity should be considered on a regional basis; and decisions on building export refineries should be based solely on considerations of the extra cost of transporting products rather than crude oil.

A report on the medium- and long-term projections of the demand for and supply of energy in the ECWA region was revised. Discussions at the first Arab Energy Conference (Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, March 1979) and the events that took place in connexion with oil in 1979 had indicated the need for a revision of the projections to cover the whole Arab world (21 countries) up to the end of the century. This revised study was entitled "Arab energy: prospects to the year 2000."

A report on the improvement of national mining codes in the ECWA region was completed; it included a comparative analysis of national mining codes, emphasizing the issue of the full sovereignty of member countries over their mineral resources. The report traced the history of mining legislation in ECWA countries and provided a country-by-country assessment of such legislation. A continuing study pertained to the analysis of technical documentation and the collection and processing of mineral economic information with regard to current and future supply and demand.

A study assessing the water resources situation in the ECWA region was issued in 1980. The study included a regional review and appraisal of the main aspects having relevance to the water resources assessment process, the regional outlook for water resources, and proposed action and recommendations at the national, regional and subregional levels. The prevailing hydrological conditions in each country were also reviewed, with special reference to aspects having subregional and/or regional dimensions.

In preparation for the launching by the General Assembly at its 1980 regular session of the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990) (see p. 704), ECWA reviewed the region's current status in this field, national plans and programmes for the Decade, financial and manpower requirements, the need for mobilizing internal and external resources, and constraints hindering progress.

Activities relating to science and technology included: preparations for a 1981 seminar on technology policies in the Arab States, initiation of a research project to identify factors determining the choice of technology and explore alternative patterns for technological decision-making, and organization of a seminar on the reverse transfer of technology (Beirut, Lebanon, 4-8 February). The seminar was attended by 75 experts from the region and elsewhere; discussions focused on: the causes of the Arab brain drain, in particular those related to the cultural, social, economic, technological, educational and professional institutions in the Arab countries; its social and psychological dimensions; and its developmental impact on labour-exporting and -importing countries.

Population

To assist member States with national censuses during the 1980s, studies were prepared on census questionnaires and the tabulation of censuses. A census training workshop was held at Damascus, Syrian Arab Republic. Work was initiated on the programmed output for the census of the Palestinian people, a project financed by the United Nations Fund for Population Activities and executed by ECWA.

The first population country profiles (Bahrain, Jordan, Yemen) having been published in November 1979, the profiles for 10 additional countries of the region were published in English and Arabic during 1980. The profiles provided information about the major demographic and related socio-economic characteristics and trends in each country, reviewed national population policies and provided an up-to-date list of references and national statistical documents such as censuses, abstracts and surveys. A study on the legal framework of migration policies in Arab countries was also completed.

Transport, communications and tourism

Work on transport harmonization and standardization, including application of international and regional conventions, was initiated with the identification of international conventions most relevant to the region and to which the majority of the countries had not acceded.

A questionnaire- to serve as the basis of a regional study- was circulated on the activities and performance of national merchant marines, multinational shipping enterprises, coastal shipping and short-sea services, inland water-ways and the fleets operating on water-ways in the region. Another questionnaire sought information and member States' views on rural and desert road development.

Human settlements and social development

An assessment was completed of the role and contribution of the construction industry in human settlements programmes and national economic and social development. It surveyed the structure of the construction industry and its position in the economies of the region's countries. At the request of Lebanon, an evaluation of the housing sector was also undertaken.

In connexion with the question of environmental indicators for human settlements planning, ECWA began a study of building rules and regulations in ECWA countries and a general survey of the housing situation in five of them: Bahrain, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Qatar.

Preparations for a 1981 seminar on rural development planning in the ECWA region included research on rural settlement aspects of nomadic populations, and on the development of rural settlements and their growth in the region.

A report comprising a survey of the social situation in the ECWA region was issued, a survey of existing social services in the region's countries was completed and a review of the development of human resources in the Arab world was submitted to the League of Arab States as a supporting document for a strategy for joint Arab economic action for the 1980s.

Also completed in 1980 were research papers on community and rural development, dealing with: social factors affecting the co-operative movement in selected countries of the ECWA region; the concept of integrated rural development and basic requirements for the successful implementation of such projects in the region; the role of the social and extension worker in the development of rural communities; the current situation and prospects in integrated rural development in selected countries; and identification of the immediate needs and projects in rural development for southern Lebanon.

Also, ECWA prepared a study on the social and economic conditions of Palestinian women inside and outside the Israeli-occupied territories, for submission to the July 1980 World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women (see p. 885).

A Regional Seminar on Alternative Patterns of Development and Life Styles in Western Asia (Beirut, 21-25 January) adopted recommendations on an economic development strategy, land and water management, industrial development, oil and the conduct of future studies.

Statistics

The third (1980) issue of the Statistical Abstract of the Region of the Economic Commission for Western Asia, 1968- 1977 was published, as was the 1980 issue of Statistical Indicators of the Arab World for the Period 1970-1978. The latter was published jointly with the League of Arab States.

During the year, ECWA completed three case studies on data collection methods for foreign trade and industrial statistics, covering Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic.

Technical and substantive support was given to the Arab Institute for Training and Research in Statistics at Baghdad and assistance in statistical development was given to Yemen. Democratic Yemen received assistance in estimating national accounts for the period 1968-1978.

The third bulletin in the series National Accounts Studies entitled "Gross domestic product: national disposable income and consolidated accounts statistics of the ECWA countries" was published.

Technical co-operation

The value of regional technical co-operation projects administered by ECWA reached $2,231,487 at the end of 1980.

Advisory services were provided for: development planning; industrial project identification; public finance; financial management; human resources; national accounts; household survey services; transport and communications; customs administration; and external trade.

Decisions of the Economic and Social Council

On 24 July 1980, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/57 by which it requested the Secretary-General to give special consideration to all issues and matters that might affect the competence and efficiency of the staff of ECWA-whose headquarters it had been decided in 1979 were to be relocated from Beirut to Baghdad"-in order to provide its secretariat with the means and favourable working conditions which would enable it to avail itself of the highest standards of competence in rendering its services to ECWA member States.

The Council acted on the recommendation of the First (Economic) Committee, which had approved, without objection on 18 July, a text proposed by ECWA.

Also on 24 July, on the First Committee's recommendation, the Council, by decision 1980/166 adopted without vote, took note of the report of ECWA and of its recommendations and resolutions, and endorsed the Commission's revised programme of work and priorities for 1980-1981. The First Committee approved this decision without objection on 18 July; the text had been proposed by ECWA.

Realizing fully that the ability of the staff members and experts of the Commission to discharge their responsibilities with the required competence is intimately related to the working and living conditions provided for them by the United Nations.

Recognizing with appreciation the valuable efforts expended by the Executive Secretary of the Commission, his staff and his experts in the discharge of their responsibilities to the Commission,

Expressing its grateful appreciation to the Government of Iraq for all the moral and material support it has provided and continues to provide to the Commission in order to facilitate its work at the permanent headquarters at Baghdad,

Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations to give special consideration to all issues and matters that may affect the competence and efficiency of the staff members of the Economic Commission for Western Asia, in order to provide the secretariat of the Commission with the appropriate means and favourable working conditions which will enable it to avail itself of the highest standards of competence in rendering its services to the member States of the Commission.

Regional co-operation and development

Report of the Secretary-General

A report of the Secretary-General on regional co-operation, submitted to the Economic and Social Council on 4 June 1980, described major economic and social developments within the regions covered by the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE), the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP), the Economic Commission for Latin America (ECLA), the Economic Commission for Africa and the Economic Commission for Western Asia (ECWA) and summarized their activities, as well as decisions and recommendations for action by the Council.

The report observed that ECE had demonstrated that it was the major forum for East-West multilateral co-operation in economic and related fields within the region. A major challenge was the energy situation.

Major tasks in the ESCAP region were: to attain or sustain increasing levels of agriculture and industrial output for complementary and balanced growth of all sectors; to mobilize and use effectively all human and financial resources; to pursue a higher level of self-reliance in food, energy, technology and finance; and to ensure a more equitable distribution of incomes and assets, as well as greater participation by all in the development process.

The report noted that ECLA had assessed the socio-economic performance of the region in 1979 as contrasted with 1978 and also in terms of the overall performance for the decade of the 1970s. In 1979, the region as a whole had attained an economic growth of approximately 6.5 per cent as compared to 4.7 per cent in 1978. For the decade, the region attained an average economic growth of approximately 6 per cent annually, close to the minimum target established for the Second United Nations Development Decade. However, the population growth rate remained relatively high (an average of 2.7 per cent), so that per capita product rose by 3.2 per cent annually, falling short of the Decade's 3.5 per cent target.

It had been pointed out, the report related, that the 1980s were crucial for Africa, in that during that decade it would be determined whether African States were equipped for genuine independence. The African region was not a significant exporter of manufactures, even with petroleum and natural gas included, nor had it much future as an exporter of primary products. In return for its exports, Africa received only a small percentage of the final price. After 20 years of aid, technical assistance and debt accumulation, African countries seemed to be worse off than ever before.

The factors that circumscribed the development efforts of the ECWA region had been reviewed, the report noted, and the major challenges of the current decade identified. The region's interdependence with the world economy and its interaction with prevailing world economic trends had grown considerably. The blame for the current economic crisis and difficulties could not be placed on the oil-producing countries. The cultural and historical circumstances in which the industrialized countries achieved their development differed from those of the ECWA region; it would therefore be harmful and indeed dangerous to try to imitate their patterns of development.

For summaries of the activities of the regional commissions and Economic and Social Council action thereon, see the subchapters above.

On 24 July 1980, on the recommendation of the First (Economic) Committee, the Council, by decision 1980/168 adopted without vote, took note of the Secretary-General's report on regional co-operation. The text was approved by the First Committee, without objection on 18 July, on an oral proposal of the Chairman.

By its decision 35/440 of 16 December, the General Assembly decided to endorse the immediate programme priorities for 1981 which the regional commissions had approved and invited the commissions to consider and report on the implications for their role and functions of two Assembly decisions on restructuring the economic and social sectors of the United Nations system.<sup>12</sup> The commissions were also to take account of observations and recommendations of the Secretary-General set forth in a report he had submitted on the implications of restructuring decisions for the commissions (see p. 569).

Meetings of Executive Secretaries

Meetings of the Executive Secretaries of the regional commissions were held in 1980 at ECLA headquarters in Santiago, Chile, on 23 and 24 February, in Geneva on 10 July, and in New York from 15 to 17 September.

Special attention was given at the meetings to developments concerning preparations for the August/September 1980 special session of the General Assembly on international economic co-operation for development, particularly to the contribution of the regional commissions to the formulation and implementation of the new International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s).

Also discussed were preparations for United Nations conferences of special interest to the commissions and follow-up action on previously held special conferences.

Measures required to strengthen the role of the regional commissions in United Nations Development Programme intercountry activities were also reviewed. The Executive Secretaries welcomed the increasing attention given by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination

(CPC) to enhancing the decentralization process and CPC's approaches in reviewing policy and programme issues concerning distribution of tasks and responsibilities among regional commissions and other United Nations entities (see p. 569).

A report on the February and July meetings was submitted by the Secretary-General to the Economic and Social Council on 11 July.

Statistical developments

Activities in 1980

During 1980, a revised version of the 1975 Directory of International Statistics was published, containing a list of the statistical series compiled by organizations of the United Nations system and others active in international statistics as well as an inventory of the machine-readable bases of economic and social statistics maintained by some international organizations.

Draft recommendations for the 1983 World Programme of Industrial Statistics and a draft revision of the 1970 publication International Trade Statistics: Concepts and Definitions were prepared for consideration by the Statistical Commission at its January 1981 session.

A study on country practices in the compilation of distributive-trade and services statistics was initiated; the fifth revision of the Bibliography of Industrial and Distributive-Trade Statistics, covering some 160 countries, was issued; and a revision of the 1968 recommendations on industrial statistics was prepared in draft form.

The second revision of the Commodity Indexes for the Standard International Trade Classification was published, bringing up to date the 1963 indices, and work began on the third revision.

With financial assistance from Norway, statistics were compiled and prepared for a maritime transport study covering the years 1969-1975 which was published in two volumes during the year; the study gave the pattern of goods flow on the major sea lanes of the world for the years 1969-1972 and 1972-1975.

International Principles and Recommendations for Population and Housing Censuses, adopted by the Statistical Commission in 1979, were published to guide countries in planning and carrying out future censuses; these superseded the 1970 recommendations.

An interim version of a revision of the 1964 Handbook of Household Surveys was prepared in collaboration with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Labour Organisation, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Health Organization.

Recommendations on Statistics of International Migration, adopted by the Statistical Commission in 1976 and superseding recommendations issued in 1953, were also published, and a report was issued concerning the Improvement of Statistics on the Outflow of Trained Personnel from Developing to Developed Countries- the so-called "brain drain."

A survey of National Accounting Practices in Seventy Countries supplemented the Yearbook of National Accounts Statistics and a survey of national practices in collecting and compiling income-distribution statistics in 60 countries, including information on sources of data, was published. Further publications included: a Classification of the Functions of Government, forming an integral part of the United Nations System of National Accounts (SNA); and the second part of a study comparing SNA and the System of Balances of the National Economy (MPS), used in countries with centrally planned economies, and showing the conversion of various 'aggregates of SNA to MPS and vice versa.

The Statistical Office of the United Nations

Secretariat also played an active role in direct technical co-operation in the developing countries and, by year's end, was involved in about 300 such projects with a total value of $30 million.

Two long-term statistical training centres continued to operate under United Nations auspices in Iraq (the Arab Institute for Training and Research in Statistics, Baghdad) and Japan (the Statistical Institute for Asia and the Pacific, Tokyo). Work on the National Household Survey Capability Programme included 15 country missions and preparation of 10 project formulation proposals.

During 1980, the Statistical Office continued to collect and publish statistics showing major global, regional and national economic and social characteristics, including data on external trade, industrial production, prices, construction, distributive trade, transport, energy, national economic accounts, population, migration and vital events. The annual publication previously entitled World Energy Supplies was greatly expanded and issued as the Yearbook of World Energy Statistics.

Chapter XV

Social questions

Continuing its efforts during 1980 to co-ordinate social policy and development questions, the Economic and Social Council made recommendations aimed at improving the effectiveness of the United Nations system to deal with social aspects of development issues (resolution 1980/27). The Council also studied urban-rural imbalances in the distribution of income and reviewed data collection and indicators used in preparing social reports.

Preparations by United Nations bodies continued towards commemoration in 1981 of the International Year of Disabled Persons (General Assembly resolution 35/133), and a report containing comments on a draft declaration on social and legal principles relating to adoption and foster placement of children was received.

The Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders was held in August/September at Caracas, Venezuela. The Declaration adopted by the Congress, affirming principles relating to the development of criminal policies and criminal justice, was later endorsed by the Assembly (resolution 35/171). The Congress also adopted a number of resolutions on international co-operation in this field.

The Economic and Social Council received a report on capital punishment, which it transmitted to the Sixth Congress. This was a subject which the Assembly also took up in 1980; although it did not adopt a substantive resolution on the subject, it decided to consider aspects of the question again in 1981. Also, alarmed at the incidence of arbitrary or summary executions, the Assembly adopted resolution 35/172, asking for guarantees of the greatest possible safeguards for accused persons in capital cases.

Seeking wider application of the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials adopted in 1979, the Assembly called on States to consider favourably the use of the Code (resolution 35/170).

Details of these and other United Nations actions on social questions during the year are described in this chapter.

Social policy and development planning

Social aspects of United Nations development activities

The capacity of the United Nations to deal with social development issues, rural-urban imbalances in the distribution of national income and ways to improve the collection of social data were among the concerns addressed in 1980.

The Economic and Social Council considered during its April/May session a report of the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Social Aspects of the Development Activities of the United Nations, established by the Council in 1979<sup>1</sup> to examine the effectiveness of General Assembly resolutions pertaining to this field and to make recommendations for improvements. The Group, composed of 10 experts, held its first and second sessions from 14 to 25 January 1980 at Vienna and from 24 March to 4 April at United Nations Headquarters, New York.

In addition to general recommendations and suggestions concerning co-ordination within the United Nations, the Group's recommendations concerned proposed improvements in legislative and other deliberating bodies and the Secretariat for dealing with social aspects of development. The Group also proposed action relating to United Nations personnel policy, new initiatives in the area of social development and the role of non-governmental organizations. It suggested increased efforts to review and appraise social progress and to develop tools of social analysis.

On 2 May, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/27, authorizing the Group to hold a third session to enable it to conclude its work. The Council decided to consider the Group's final report at its first regular 1981 session, together with comments of Member States thereon, and a Secretariat statement on programme budget, administrative and other implications of the Group's recommendations.

The Council acted on the recommendation of its Second (Social) Committee, which considered and approved without vote on 30 April a text sponsored by Algeria, India, Italy, the Netherlands, Romania, the United States and Yugoslavia. At the Council's plenary meeting, an oral amendment by Finland was accepted; this provided that an analytical summary of comments received from Member States and specialized agencies be submitted to the Council in 1981 through the Commission for Social Development.

The Working Group held its third session at Geneva from 26 to 30 May 1980 and made its final recommendations in a July report on how to improve United Nations capacity to deal with social development issues.

Its recommendations, based on its first report, focused on co-ordination, legislative and other deliberating bodies, the Secretariat, personnel policy, new initiatives, the role and functions of non-governmental organizations, and review and appraisal.

The Group called for a more unified, cross-sectoral approach to development issues, integrating economic and social aspects of development and giving social issues greater attention in recognition that improvement of the conditions of the population and fostering of popular participation in development efforts were fundamental.

Noting that co-ordination in the United Nations was not only a means of exchanging information or avoiding overlap but also a means for elaborating general strategies and priorities and engaging in joint planning and implementation, the Group called for institutional and substantive co-ordination and an evaluation of the agreements between the United Nations and the specialized agencies with a view to promoting genuine co-ordination in the economic and social fields. It also recommended that the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) should further strengthen its work in social areas, especially the preparation and follow-up of international conferences in the social field, and that better co-ordination should be ensured between United Nations central organs and the regional commissions, as well as among the various commissions and committees of the legislative bodies.

With regard more specifically to legislative and other deliberative bodies, the Group considered that the General Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee should regain its primary responsibility for social development, that the Economic and Social Council should be strengthened in the social field and that the effectiveness of the Commission for Social Development and the Commission on the Status of Women should be improved.

Specific recommendations were also made concerning the United Nations Secretariat and United Nations personnel policy. For instance, the Group advocated rotation of staff between research and operational activities to reduce compartmentalization and ensure that United Nations research and policy planning remained geared to the reality of problems existing at the grass-roots level.

Among other recommendations were the convening of a second international conference of ministers responsible for social development and a greater role for non-governmental organizations at the international, regional and country levels. The Secretary-General submitted to the Economic and Social Council in January 1981 an analytical summary of comments on the Group's report on its third session, containing a statement of ACC on the Group's recommendations and the views of United Nations offices and programmes on some specific recommendations.

The ACC statement noted that the specialized agencies concerned had been following an integrated and "people-oriented" approach to development for many years and it called for continued efforts to ensure that social development issues were dealt with fully in the context of overall development strategies.

The International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s), adopted by the General Assembly on 5 December by resolution 35/56 (see p. 499), called for renewed efforts for achieving social progress. The Strategy provided that the United Nations should play an important role in promoting social development and that countries should increase their efforts to make full use of their human resources and to ensure a better life for their people through better education, health, employment opportunities, housing, population policies, and integration of both men and women in the development process. (For text of relevant provisions (section III O) of the Strategy, see p. 517.)

Social policy and income distribution

The Economic and Social Council had before it at its July 1980 session a report of the Secretary-General on distribution of income in the nation, focusing on rural-urban income differentials and imbalances in developing countries in the context of a wider discussion of the distribution of income and of opportunities in development. The report took as its starting-point the fact that the distribution of income and welfare between urban and rural populations generated strong feelings and that debate on the issue had recently been dominated by assertions of the inequitable treatment of rural peoples and rural areas. Reviewing statistical evidence in this regard; it found that rural-urban disparities differed widely from country to country and that the evidence overall was inconclusive.

The report touched briefly on the main mechanisms by which resources were transferred from country to town and from town to country. One finding was that the drain of resources away from rural areas seemed to have greater political and social than economic significance. Nearly everywhere public spending, even when small, tended to outweigh the tax burden imposed on the countryside, it stated.

The report concluded that rural-urban imbalances were often overstated, and that poverty and inequalities among social groups, whether in urban or rural areas, appeared to be more significant problems in many countries. The challenge for development policy was not so much to devise measures that would maintain a static balance in levels of income between rural and urban areas but more to generate a pattern of change in which there was a close integration of urban growth and rural modernization.

On 24 July, on an oral proposal by its President, the Council adopted, without objection, decision 1980/162 by which it took note of the report and transmitted it to the General Assembly.

Methodology for monitoring social trends

The General Assembly had before it in 1980 a report of the Secretary-General on improvement of the methodology for monitoring social trends, reviewing the data and indicators currently used in preparing reports on the world social situation and on the implementation of the Declaration on Social Progress and Development.* These data were drawn from a variety of sources, including Member States, the regional commissions and various United Nations agencies. Universities and private research organizations were also a source of information for the global monitoring of social trends and policies.

The scope, coverage and limitations of available data were summarized in the report. Data on demographic trends and on education were relatively well developed, it said. For other crucial issues of social development—such as poverty, income distribution, unemployment and underemployment, and participation in decision-making—the conceptual and technical problems attached to data collection and, above all, to the international comparability of these data were severe. The report pointed out, for instance, that the quality of income distribution statistics did not justify intercountry comparisons. The timeliness of data was another significant problem.

The report also summarized current national and international efforts to improve data collection and integrate social data and indicators into coherent frameworks. While social reporting and data dissemination were greatly expanding, the report noted, global monitoring of social trends at the international level would continue to rely heavily on qualitative information supported whenever possible by numerical data.

Technical co-operation

United Nations technical co-operation activities in 1980 in fields as diverse as development planning, population, rural development, statistics, public administration and natural resources incorporated elements for social progress and development. Community-level self-reliance, with emphasis on institution-building and training, was promoted through support provided to the Centre for Research and Training for Community Development in Saudi Arabia, which in turn provided advisory services and opportunities for research and training in other Gulf States. Field missions related to projects' with implications for youth were undertaken, as were efforts towards the advancement of women.

Some 70 rural development projects were implemented in the broad areas of policy and planning, community development, institution-building and natural resources, many in collaboration with United Nations agencies and other international organizations. The Department of Technical Co-operation for Development spent $515,000, or 2.5 per cent of its total expenditure for the year, in the field of social development.

Nine experts provided technical assistance in the fields of popular participation and institutional development to community development and research projects in Oman and Saudi Arabia.

United Nations Research Institute for Social Development

Two major projects of the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) came to a close with the publication in 1980 of a final report on a unified approach to development analysis and planning and an overview report on the social and economic implications of a large-scale introduction of new varieties of foodgrain. The results of the studies confirmed UNRISD's decision to focus on two principal themes—livelihood and participation—and to orient its work to examining the problems of the neediest social groups.

Research on food systems continued in India and Mexico and partially in China, Grenada, Nicaragua and the Upper Volta. In Mexico, UNRISD joined a university to develop a $2.5 million research programme aimed at identifying the structural causes of the country's increasing dependence on food imports and malnutrition among large groups of the population. The Institute continued work on people's participation in the development process; a Latin American workshop was held in September to initiate specific projects in Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Grenada, Guyana and Nicaragua. Field work started in Senegal on the impact of agricultural modernization on the role and status of women and a study was begun in the Upper Volta on the impact of male migration on the status of women. Other research projects undertaken or continued concerned environment and development, improvement of development statistics, regional development and refugee settlements.

An account by the Board of Directors of UNRISD on its activities from 1 November 1978 to 31 October 1980 was submitted to the Commission for Social Development in January 1981.

Technical co-operation

Many of the technical co-operation activities of the United Nations in 1980 incorporated elements for social progress and development.

Those specifically identified as social development were implemented with support from the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs. For example, technical support was given to activities of the European Centre for Social Welfare Training and Research, which organized four regional meetings: a seminar on social welfare delivery in rural areas, a symposium on community work in deprived urban areas and two expert group meetings, one on volunteer support for the elderly and the other on social aspects of mental-emotional disablement of children.

Technical assistance continued through the interregional advisory services programme. A United Nations interregional technical adviser on rehabilitation of disabled persons undertook missions in Argentina, Bahrain, Brazil, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru, the United Arab Emirates and Uruguay.

International Year of Disabled Persons (1981)

The General Assembly in 1980 considered a report of the Advisory Committee for the International Year of Disabled Persons which held its second session from 20 to 29 August at Vienna and adopted a series of recommendations relating to the Year, to be observed in 1981. The Committee called for a concerted effort by States to involve the disabled and their organizations in the activities of the Year and asked the Secretary-General to explore the possibility of holding a world conference of disabled persons. It recommended that consideration be given to the possibility of launching an international institute for rehabilitation in developing countries, as a nucleus of similar regional institutes to assist in integrating disabled persons into the development process; it recommended that the Assembly invite the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and other funding organizations to consider favourably any requests for funding such institutes.

With respect to funding activities for the Year, the Committee urged Member States to give higher priority to requests to UNDP and other financing organizations for technical assistance in connexion with rehabilitation services and training in the developing countries. Regarding use of the Fund for the International Year, the Committee recommended that priority be given to projects directly benefiting the disabled and to projects in developing countries, particularly those in rural areas.

The Committee's recommendations to United Nations organizations included: emphasizing activities aimed at preventing disability among children, the provision of direct services to disabled children and projects with potential for a long-term impact; providing gestural interpretation at United Nations meetings when required, and reproduction in Braille and on cassette of United Nations documents of wide general interest; conference-services support for a planned meeting of non-governmental organizations at Vienna in support of the Year's activities; and development of information guidelines to aid national committees and the media to project an image of disabled persons active in their community life and directly involved in the organization of Year-related activities.

The Committee also adopted a basic outline for a long-term world plan of action which it felt should be completed and adopted by the General Assembly in 1982. Recommending that the long-term plan be studied during the Committee's next session, it also recommended that the Assembly consider the advisability of appointing a special representative of the Secretary-General for the Year.

As requested by the Assembly, the Secretary-General reported in 1980 on implementation of the 1979 resolution by which the Assembly adopted the Plan of Action for the International Year of Disabled Persons.<sup>3</sup>

The Assembly had requested the Secretary-General to explore the possibilities of continuing the activities of the International Institute for the Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons in Developing Countries, which began in 1976 as a project document signed between Iran and UNDP and was ended in April 1979. The Institute was envisioned as an autonomous body jointly supported by Iran, other Governments, the United Nations, UNDP, some specialized agencies and Rehabilitation International, a non-governmental organization. The report indicated that diverse opinions were expressed in the Advisory Committee and at an interagency meeting on preparations for the Year, held at Geneva from 9 to 11 June on the advisability of having one international institute or regional institute attached to the regional commissions. Thus, the Secretary-General would await the guidance of the Assembly on further steps that might be taken concerning such an institute.

Responding to other provisions of the 1979 resolution, the Secretary-General reported that, as at 15 August 1980, 30 national committees and 22 liaison offices had been established. Several interagency consultations on implementation of the Plan of Action had been held. Preparations were undertaken for an action-oriented Assembly-approved symposium of experts on technical assistance in the field of disability and technical co-operation among developing countries.<sup>4</sup> The regional commissions were holding seminars to formulate their contributions to the activities of the Year.

Also before the Assembly was an offer from Argentina to act as host for the international symposium on technical assistance in the disability field, a note verbale from India informing the Assembly of the establishment of a national committee for the Year, and letters from Viet Nam on the establishment of such a national committee and its programme of action. The Assembly also considered a resolution of the 1980 World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women, appealing for support for the Year and for improving the situation of disabled women, and asking that account be taken of their special needs in drafting the long-term programme (see p. 896).

Previously, the Commission on the Status of Women, at its February/March 1980 session, had adopted a resolution requesting the Secretary-General to convey to the Conference the concerns of the Commission over the situation of disabled women, and its views that special disability-prevention measures should be envisaged through parental education; it had asked the Secretary-General, in implementing the Plan of Action for the Year, to ensure that special attention was given to the situation of women.

The General Assembly on 11 December adopted without vote resolution 35/133, by which it noted with satisfaction the steps taken to implement the Plan of Action, called for the participation of disabled persons and their organizations in the activities of the Year and invited Member States which had not done so to establish national committees for the Year.

The Assembly urged higher priority for development assistance projects related to disability in developing countries, appealed for further voluntary contributions to the Year, accepted the offer of Argentina to act as host in 1981 to the international symposium of experts, and requested the regional commissions to formulate programmes for implementing the Plan of Action.

The Secretary-General was asked to examine the question of access to United Nations buildings, documents and information for persons with sensorial disabilities, to strengthen information activities, to provide the secretariat of the Year with the needed resources, and to convene a session of the Advisory Committee in 1981. The Assembly approved the procedure proposed by the Advisory Committee for the adoption of a long-term world plan of action and requested the Committee to examine the possibilities of continuing the activities of the International Institute for the Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons in Developing Countries. It invited all heads of State or Government, the Secretary-General and the Assembly's current President to issue special messages at the beginning of the Year.

In adopting the resolution, the Assembly acted on the recommendation of its Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, which approved the text without vote on 7 November. The resolution was sponsored by 49 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

The sponsors amended their text before approval by requesting examination of the question of access to United Nations buildings, as well as documents and information, for persons with sensorial disabilities, and by deleting a specific reference to information activities from the resources requested as necessary for the Year's secretariat.

Adoption and foster placement of children

The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly in September 1980 a report on a draft declaration on social and legal principles relating to adoption and foster placement of children nationally and internationally, prepared in 1978 by a group of experts.<sup>5</sup> Prepared at the request of the Economic and Social Council,<sup>6</sup> the report analysed the views of 28 Member States on the various draft articles of the draft declaration: Argentina, Austria, Barbados, Canada, Chile, Cyprus, Denmark, Dominica, Ethiopia, Finland, Germany, Federal Republic of, Guyana, Indonesia, Jamaica, Japan, Kuwait, Netherlands, Norway, Peru, Poland, Romania, Singapore, Spain, Sweden, Tunisia, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Almost all Governments expressed support for the draft declaration and greeted it as a welcome step in developing generally accepted guidelines, which would permit application of principle 6 of the 1959 Declaration of the Rights of the Child,<sup>7</sup> and promote the legal protection of the child and child welfare and a happy family life. One Member State, however, expressed reservations regarding the draft declaration in its entirety.

The first two sections-general family and child welfare, and foster placement-elicited many favourable comments and expressions of support. There was also general support for the third section, on adoption, although one State

Taking into account the comments made by the Member States as well as the deliberations of the expert group meeting on adoption and foster placement of children which had produced the draft declaration, the Secretary-General proposed amendments to and reformulations of several articles for the Assembly's consideration, although the Assembly did not consider the draft declaration in 1980.

International Year of Disabled Persons, 33/170 of 20 December 1978 and 34/154 of 17 December 1979,

Recalling further resolution 2, entitled 'Improving the situation of disabled women of all ages,' adopted on 30 July 1980 by the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women,

Recognizing that the International Year of Disabled Persons should promote the realization of the right of disabled persons to participate fully in the social life and development of their societies and to enjoy living conditions equal to those of other citizens, as well as an equal share in the improvements in living conditions resulting from social and economic development,

Bearing in mind the importance of co-ordination at the national, regional and international levels in the programming for the prevention of disability and the rehabilitation of disabled persons,

Convinced that the International Year of Disabled Persons should give the impulse for the establishment of a long-term world plan of action to follow up the activities of the Year,

Having considered the offer of the Government of Argentina to act as host to the action-oriented international symposium of experts on technical assistance in the field of disability and technical co-operation among developing countries, to be convened during the International Year of Disabled Persons,

Concerned about the need to provide the secretariat of the International Year of Disabled Persons with the resources necessary for the implementation of the Plan of Action for the Year and its follow-up,

1. Notes with satisfaction the steps already taken in the implementation of the Plan of Action for the International Year of Disabled Persons by Member States, organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations, and encourages them to intensify their action and co-ordination during the Year;

2. Recommends that, in their efforts to promote the full participation of disabled persons in all aspects of life, Member States and organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system should pay particular attention to the participation of disabled persons themselves and of their organizations in the activities undertaken in connexion with the International Year of Disabled Persons and its follow-up;

Crime prevention and criminal justice

Technical co-operation

United Nations technical co-operation activities in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice focused in 1980 on the development of indigenous capabilities for solving the problems related to crime prevention and the treatment of offenders, especially in the developing countries.

The United Nations continued to provide technical support, directly and through the United Nations Social Defence Research Institute (Rome, Italy), to the regional institutes serving Asia and the Far East (Fuchu, Japan), North Africa and the Middle East (Cairo, Egypt) and Latin America (San José, Costa Rica). Preparations continued for the establishment of an institute to serve Africa.

Under the auspices of the regional institutes, activities included research, regional and sub-regional training courses, seminars and workshops.

The United Nations also continued to provide technical support to Governments at their request. Interregional advisory services in crime prevention and criminal justice were established. Expert advisory services were provided to Namibia and Papua New Guinea.

Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders

The Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, held from 25 August to 5 September 1980 at Caracas, Venezuela-the theme of which was crime prevention and the quality of life-adopted the Caracas Declaration and recommendations and resolutions on various aspects of crime prevention, criminal justice and offender treatment, with a major focus on new perspectives in the context of development.

Preparatory arrangements

On 6 February, by decision 1980/106 adopted without objection, the Economic and Social Council approved the provisional agenda, documentation and organization of work for the Sixth Congress. It also took note of Secretariat activities to be undertaken in connexion with the Congress: ancillary meetings of non-governmental organizations and interest groups, lectures and visits to local institutions.

Five of the six substantive topics on the provisional agenda-crime trends and crime prevention strategies, juvenile justice, crime and the abuse of power, deinstitutionalization of corrections and its implications for the residual prisoner, and United Nations norms and guidelines in criminal justice-had been recommended in 1978 by the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control;<sup>8</sup> the remaining topic- new perspectives in crime prevention and criminal justice and development-was proposed by the Secretary-General.

In approving the provisional agenda, the Council accepted a USSR oral amendment that ancillary meetings of non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council would be undertaken by the Secretary-General in conjunction with the Congress "in accordance with existing legislative authority." It also accepted a Yugoslav proposal that the Congress's report would be submitted to the Assembly "through the Economic and Social Council." The USSR expressed its understanding that the final decision on the provisional agenda would be taken by the Sixth Congress itself, in accordance with established practice.

The provisional rules of procedure for United Nations congresses on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders, approved in 1979 by the Economic and Social Council,<sup>9</sup> provided for the establishment of subsidiary bodies known as sections of the whole, subsections and working groups. With a view to bringing these rules into conformity with those of other United Nations bodies, the Council, by decision 1980/105 adopted without objection on 6 February, revised the rules for congresses by substituting the words "committee" and "sub-committee" for "section" and "subsection" wherever they appeared. The Council acted on a proposal of the Secretary-General.

On 2 May, by decision 1980/142, the Council requested that a report of the Secretary-General on capital punishment be transmitted to the Sixth Congress (see section below).

Proceedings of the Congress

In addition to the 101 States which participated in the Sixth Congress, several United Nations bodies and programmes were represented by observers, including the United Nations Council for Namibia and two specialized agencies.

In addition, six intergovernmental organizations were represented by observers, as were the Palestine Liberation Organizations, the South West Africa People's Organization, the African National Congress of South Africa and the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania.

About 220 individual experts and 30 United Nations experts participated in the work of the Congress, at the invitation of the Secretary-General.

The Congress elected José Guillermo Andueza (Venezuela) as its President; the First Vice-President was elected from the Ethiopian delegation, and representatives of 23 States were elected Vice-Presidents. Representatives of Belgium, Yugoslavia and Japan were elected as Rapporteur-General and as Chairmen of the two main committees, respectively.

For list of participants and officers, see APPENDIX III.

The Congress set up two main committees (Committees I and II) and established a Working Group of Committee I and a Sub-Committee of Committee II. Committee I dealt with crime trends and crime prevention strategies, and United Nations norms and guidelines, from standard-setting to implementation, and capital punishment. Its Working Group considered the item on new perspectives in crime prevention and criminal justice and development. Items considered by Committee II were juvenile justice, and crime and the abuse of power. Its Sub-Committee dealt with deinstitutionalization of corrections and its implications for residual prisoners, and the implementation of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners approved by the Economic and Social Council in 1957.<sup>10</sup>

Decisions of the Congress

CARACAS DECLARATION

The Sixth United Nations Congress unanimously adopted on 5 September the Caracas Declaration, as an affirmation of principles relating to the development of criminal policies and criminal justice.

Expressing the view that the phenomenon of crime, through its impact on society, impaired the overall development of nations, undermined spiritual and material well-being, compromised human dignity and created a climate of fear and violence that eroded the quality of life, the Congress declared it essential to review crime prevention strategies which were based exclusively on legal criteria. Crime prevention and criminal justice, it stated, should be considered in the context of economic development, political systems, social and cultural values and social change, as well as in the context of the new international economic order. Programmes should be based on the circumstances of each country and all crime prevention policies should be co-ordinated with development strategies.

The Congress saw a need at the national level for scientific research, qualified and independent personnel and systems based on principles that would guarantee non-discrimination, the effective right of defence and speedy and fair judicial organs. It called for continuous efforts to seek new approaches and develop better techniques for crime prevention and offender treatment. The family, the school and work should be considered in the development of social policy and national planning.

Referring to the vital role played by the United Nations in encouraging international co-operation in the field of criminal policy, the Congress said it was important that the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council strengthen, as necessary, United Nations activities concerned with crime prevention and offender treatment, especially activities at the regional and subregional levels. It invited the Assembly to take appropriate action at the earliest opportunity.

The Caracas Declaration was later endorsed by the Assembly and annexed to its resolution 35/171 of 15 December (see subsection below).

OTHER CONGRESS DECISIONS

The Congress adopted 19 resolutions, a decision approving the report of the Credentials Committee, and a number of recommendations agreed on in the two Committees.

On the topics of crime trends and crime prevention strategies, the development of statistics, and measures to prevent crime (resolutions 1-3), the Congress invited all States to ensure, while implementing measures of economic development, the simultaneous realization of adequate social and cultural measures. It recommended promotion of broader public participation in implementing those measures, proposed the continuation of studies aimed at improving crime data collection, requested the Secretary-General to intensify efforts to co-ordinate the development of comparable cross-national statistics on crime and justice, and recommended that he provide technical assistance to Member States to encourage their participation in world crime surveys. Member States should improve education, culture and information to strengthen man's will and conscience to avert the commission of crime.

The Congress recommended development of standard minimum rules for the administration of juvenile justice which could serve as a model for United Nations Member States (resolution 4). Further, it set forth basic principles that should be reflected in the rules.

The Congress called on Governments to take effective measures to prevent extra-legal executions and the torture and ill-treatment of detained persons (resolutions 5 and 6). It condemned the practice of executing political opponents or suspected offenders carried out by armed forces, law enforcement or other governmental agencies or by paramilitary or political groups acting with the tacit or other support of such forces or agencies.

The Congress recommended that the public be made aware of the harmful consequences of the abuse of economic and political power, including abuses committed or generated by transnational corporations, and that more effective strategies be developed to prevent and control such abuses (resolution 7).

The resolutions on extra-legal executions and prevention of abuse of power were adopted by roll-call votes of 74 to 0, with 7 abstentions, and 45 to 20, with 16 abstentions, respectively.

The Congress made a number of recommendations encouraging the use of alternatives to imprisonment and also recommended that alternatives be made available to female and male offenders on an equal basis (resolutions 8 and 9). It called for further efforts to ensure that women offenders were treated fairly and equally. It urged Governments to consider setting up procedures for the transfer of alien prisoners to their own countries (resolution 13) and called for the preparation of guidelines to ensure the independence of judges and improve the selection and training of judges and prosecutors (resolution 16). By other resolutions, the Congress urged Governments to ensure observance by all law enforcement officials of the principles contained in the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials<sup>11</sup> and called on the General Assembly to stimulate further development, as far as such officials were concerned, in the protection of human rights (resolutions 11 and 12).

By still other resolutions, the Congress called for specific measures for the imprisoned, which it detailed, and for their social resettlement after release (resolution 10), asked the Assembly to include an item on the implementation of human rights for prisoners in the agenda of the next Congress (resolution 14), called for a broader study of the fundamental principles of law (resolution 15), urged financial and other support to the Latin American Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, in Costa Rica (resolution 18) and recommended that the Secretary-General view favourably the establishment in Africa of a United Nations regional body for social defence studies (resolution 19).

Setting forth conclusions on the item on new perspectives in crime prevention and criminal justice and development, the Congress recommended that an analysis be made of the interrelations between crime and such issues as employment, migration, urbanization, industrialization and the role of the family and schools in education. It called for a study on the emergence of new types of criminal activity and an in-depth study on crime prevention and offender treatment within the framework of the establishment of the new international economic order, particularly bearing on the needs of the developing countries. It also recommended the systematic exchange of information as an important component of international co-operation for crime prevention and control and called for strengthening United Nations capacities in this field.

A draft resolution sponsored by Austria, Ecuador, the Federal Republic of Germany and Sweden, calling for the restriction and eventual abolition of the death penalty, and amendments thereto by Egypt, were withdrawn by the sponsors for lack of time. The Congress took note of the texts and agreed they should be further considered by United Nations legislative bodies. An Egyptian draft resolution concerning the need for a new international order for the prevention of crime and treatment of offenders was also withdrawn on the understanding that it could be submitted to the Seventh Congress.

The Congress also examined a report of the Secretary-General on the implementation by Member States of the conclusions of the Fifth Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders in 1975,<sup>12</sup> based on the replies of 46 States. It decided that the processes initiated by the General Assembly in calling for this report should be continued in relation to subsequent Congresses (resolution 17).

Decisions of the Economic and Social Council and General Assembly

On 7 November 1980, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders and transmitted it to the General Assembly for consideration at its regular, 1980 session. Decision 1980/189, containing this action, was orally proposed by the Council President and adopted without objection.

In a report on the Congress, submitted to the Assembly in November, the Secretary-General said that efforts had been begun by population and statistics programmes to respond to the recommendations of the Congress and that a meeting had been called at Freetown, Sierra Leone, to determine the structure, operation and location of the proposed African regional institute for social defence. Suggestions for initial implementation of the recommendations included initiation of regional activities in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice and strengthening the United Nations capacity in this area, particularly the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs.

On 15 December, by resolution 35/171, the Assembly took note with satisfaction of the report of the Sixth Congress, endorsed the Caracas Declaration which it annexed to the resolution and affirmed that crime prevention and criminal justice should be considered in the context of economic development, political, social and cultural systems and social values and changes, as well as in the context of a new international economic order.

The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to provide sufficient resources to ensure that the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch was able to discharge its responsibilities, and to strengthen activities, especially at the regional and subregional levels-including the establishment or strengthening of institutes for research, training and technical assistance-in order to facilitate international co-operation in crime prevention. He was urged to implement the Congress's conclusions concerning the new perspectives for such co-operation. Governments were invited to make continuous efforts to implement the principles of the Caracas Declaration and other Congress recommendations. All relevant United Nations organizations were called on to ensure a concerted and sustained effort to implement the Declaration's principles.

Resolution 35/171 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee. It was introduced in that Committee by Venezuela on behalf of the United Nations Member States belonging to the "Group of 77" developing countries, where it was approved without vote on 28 November. Oral drafting changes were made by the sponsors to indicate that the Caracas Declaration was annexed to the resolution and to delete from the request for sufficient resources to ensure that the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch was able to discharge its responsibilities- the adverb "faithfully" modifying discharge.

Also on 15 December, the Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/173, expressing its deep appreciation to Venezuela for acting as host to the Congress. The resolution was sponsored by Burma (on behalf of the Asian group of Member States at the United Nations), Colombia (Latin American group), Czechoslovakia (Eastern European group), the Netherlands (Western European and other States group) and Senegal (African group). The Third Committee approved it by acclamation on 5 December.

Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials

A United Nations regional Symposium on the Role of the Police in the Protection of Human Rights was held at The Hague, Netherlands, from 14 to 25 April 1980. Among the recommendations of the experts, acting in their personal capacity, were the following: the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials<sup>13</sup> should be favourably considered for incorporation into the domestic laws or regulations governing law enforcement agencies and the text should be made available to all officials; law enforcement officials should be instructed in the Code's provisions and other basic texts on human rights; and the police should not make use of an agent Provocateur, inducing others to commit a crime which would otherwise not have occurred.

With the adoption of resolution 35/170 on 15 December, the Assembly called on all States to consider favourably the use of the Code within the framework of national legislation and practice or directives governing law enforcement agencies, to make the text available to all law enforcement officials in their own language and to instruct those officials in the provisions of national legislation connected with the Code and other human rights texts. Governments were invited to consider measures to promote the Code's application, including the organization of symposia, and the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control was invited to study its application on the basis of information received from Member States, taking into account the recommendations of national symposia, and to report to the Economic and Social Council.

The Assembly adopted resolution 35/170 without vote. The resolution was sponsored in the Third Committee by Australia, Belgium, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Kenya, the Netherlands, Nigeria, Panama, the Philippines, Spain, Sweden and the United States; it was approved in Committee without vote on 5 December.

The sponsors orally amended their previously revised text to invite Governments to consider, rather than take, measures to promote the Code's application, and to invite the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control to study its application on the basis of information received from Members, rather than review its application.

Capital punishment

The second five-year report of the Secretary-General on capital punishment reflected information received from 74 United Nations Member States for the period 1974-1978. The report indicated that 43 of the respondent States were classified as "retentionist" with respect to the death penalty: Afghanistan, Algeria, Argentina, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Chile, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Guatemala, Guyana, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Japan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Madagascar, Morocco, Mozambique, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Rwanda, Samoa, Singapore, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Yugoslavia, Zambia-although in several of these countries no executions had taken place during the reporting period. Sixteen were "abolitionist" (Austria, Cape Verde, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Luxembourg, Norway, Panama, Portugal, Sweden, Uruguay, Venezuela) and 13 were abolitionist for ordinary crimes only (Brazil, Canada, Fiji, Israel, Italy, Malta, Mexico, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Seychelles, Spain, United Kingdom). Belgium was abolitionist by custom and Australia was a federal State divided on the issue.

While there was a small increase in the number of countries which did not impose the death penalty, several retentionist countries had reintroduced extended use of the penalty. The majority of retentionist States provided a variety of legal means whereby the death penalty might be delayed, commuted or ruled out altogether, for example on grounds of age, pregnancy or mental or physical illness. Nearly all the responding retentionist States had legal provisions which governed the right of the condemned to petition for review, pardon, commutation or reprieve. There existed in some countries a mandatory waiting period during which an execution might not be carried out pending the decision of the pardoning authority.

The Secretary-General noted, in his conclusions, that official information was not available from the majority of retentionist countries and that no pretence could be made of providing a complete regional or global view of the situation.

The report was transmitted by the Economic and Social Council to the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, which considered but did not act on a draft resolution on the restriction and eventual abolition of the death penalty (see section above).

The Council's transmittal action was embodied in decision 1980/142, adopted without vote on 2 May 1980; the Second (Social) Committee had approved the text, without vote on 30 April, on a proposal by Denmark, Finland, Italy, Norway and Sweden.

On 15 December, on the recommendation of its Third Committee, the General Assembly adopted, without vote, decision 35/437 by which it took note of a seven-power draft resolution submitted in that Committee on measures aiming at the ultimate abolition of capital punishment; it decided to consider at its regular 1981 session the idea of elaborating a draft of a second optional protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>14</sup> aiming at the abolition of the death penalty. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to transmit the draft resolution to Governments for their comments and to report in 1981. By that draft resolution, sponsored by Austria, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Portugal and Sweden, the Assembly would have taken note of a draft second optional protocol to the Covenant- the nine articles of which were annexed to the resolution-aiming at the abolition of the death penalty. The Assembly would have requested the Secretary-General to invite comments of Governments and decided to consider the draft protocol and a report of the Secretary-General thereon at its regular 1981 session.

Decision 35/437, submitted in the Third Committee by Austria, Costa Rica, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Portugal and Sweden, following consultations, on the understanding that the sponsors would not insist on putting the seven-power draft resolution to a vote, was approved without vote in Committee on 5 December.

Speaking after approval of the decision, the Philippines said that, if the decision had been put to a vote, it would have voted against it because of Philippine legislation, while Papua New Guinea said it would have voted for it. Yemen said the decision was contrary to Islamic law, and Bangladesh, Benin, Jordan, Oman, Pakistan, Uganda and the United Arab Emirates said they would have abstained if the decision had been put to the vote. Japan said its participation in the consensus should not be interpreted as a change in its position, which was in favour of maintaining the death penalty. Morocco said the consensus was not binding on United Nations Member States. The United Kingdom said it would be unable to support the elaboration of a second optional protocol because it considered that abolishment of capital punishment was a matter for the conscience of the members of its Parliament.

The Third Committee also had before it another draft resolution aimed at the restriction and eventual abolition of capital punishment. By this text, sponsored by Austria, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Norway, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Venezuela, the Assembly would have recommended a moratorium in the application of capital punishment and invited States to apply certain generally accepted international human rights standards.

On 5 December, the Third Committee adopted a decision orally proposed by India whereby it decided not to act on this draft resolution, as orally amended by Morocco to add the phrase "while awaiting the conclusions of the Sixth [Legal] Committee on the subject." The decision as a whole was adopted by a recorded vote of 76 to 33, with 24 abstentions, after the Committee first accepted the Moroccan amendment by a recorded vote, requested by Sweden, of 49 to 42, with 35 abstentions.

Explaining their votes, Algeria, Benin, Jamaica and Sweden said they could not support the decision, considering that it would have been more logical to establish whether the question dealt with in the draft resolution was in fact on the Sixth Committee's agenda. Colombia, Honduras, Israel and Uruguay, which said there was no capital punishment under their laws, opposed the decision, as did Austria and Denmark. Brazil and the Dominican Republic said they would have supported the draft resolution but, respectively, abstained on and opposed the decision; France and Greece which abstained on, Japan and Liberia which voted in favour of, and Tunisia which opposed the decision, said they would have abstained in a vote on the resolution.

The United Kingdom opposed the decision, since it favoured a discussion of the subject, while Colombia, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Portugal and Spain regretted resort to procedural devices in order to avoid taking decisions on substantive matters.

The Syrian Arab Republic said it had abstained in the vote because it did not wish the Sixth Committee to consider the question; if the final phrase had not been adopted, it would have voted in favour.

Statements in support of the decision were made by Ethiopia, Guinea-Bissau, Kuwait, Oman, Pakistan, Uganda, the United Republic of Tanzania, Yemen and Zaire.

Arbitrary or summary executions

The Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders called on all Governments to take effective measures to prevent extra-legal executions and urged all concerned United Nations organs to take all possible action to bring such acts to an end (see section above).

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/172, on arbitrary or summary executions, by which the Member States concerned were urged: to review their legal rules and practices, where necessary, so as to guarantee the greatest possible safeguards for the accused in capital cases; to examine the possibility of making automatic the appeal procedure, where it existed, in cases of death sentences, as well as the consideration of amnesty, pardon or commutation in these cases; and to provide that no death sentence would be carried out until appeal and pardon procedures had been terminated.

The resolution was sponsored in the Third Committee by Belgium, Denmark, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States. Oral drafting amendments and revisions were made by the sponsors: in a preambular paragraph expressing alarm at the incidence of summary executions in the world, the phrase "as well as of death sentences for which the relevant provisions of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights have not been respected" was replaced by "as well as of arbitrary executions;" operative paragraph 3, requesting the Secretary-General to seek views and observations concerning the problem of arbitrary and summary executions and to report to the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control, was recast from its original wording requesting him to obtain from Member States and other sources information about death sentences imposed or carried out in different countries on the basis of which to monitor world-wide developments relating to the legal provisions as well as the actual imposition and execution of the death penalty and to report regularly to the Economic and Social Council.

The Third Committee approved the text as revised on 5 December, without vote. Japan, while supporting its purposes and spirit, entered reservations with regard to provisions on automatic appeal procedure and amnesty, pardon, commutation and sentencing in death sentence cases.

Human rights in the administration of justice

By decision 1980/124 and resolution 1980/28 of 2 May, the Economic and Social Council authorized the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities of the Commission on Human Rights to entrust Special Rapporteurs with preparing a report on the independence and impartiality of judiciary jurors and assessors and the independence of lawyers (see p. 844), and a study on the discriminatory treatment of persons at the various levels in the administration of criminal justice proceedings, such as police, military, administrative and judicial investigations, arrest, detention, trial and execution of sentences (see p. 798).

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/179 by which it requested the Secretary-General to renew his request to United Nations Member States and organizations for comments on a draft Code of Medical Ethics, requested the Council to consider the draft Code in 1981, and invited Member States to take an active part in the deliberations (see p. 846).

Work of the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control

On 16 May 1980, the Government of Venezuela invited the United Nations to hold the sixth session of the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control at Caracas, immediately after the conclusion of the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (see section above). By decision 1980/152 of 11 July, the Economic and Social Council accepted Venezuela's offer to hold the session from 8 to 12 September, and approved a provisional agenda.

The Council adopted the decision, without objection, as orally proposed by its President on a recommendation by the Secretariat.

At its sixth session, the Committee took note of a Secretariat report on United Nations activities in crime prevention and control and recommended that an analysis of crime trends and prevention strategies, as well as of violence, should constitute a permanent activity of the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch and that future attention should be given to the problems of victims. The Committee felt vigorous efforts should be made to mobilize financial resources from Member States in the furtherance of United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice activities. It strongly recommended implementation as soon as possible of a 1979 Council recommendation requesting the Secretary-General to restore to Member States, at their request, the services of advisers in this area.<sup>15</sup>

The Committee recommended a draft resolution for adoption by the Council, requesting resources and other support to enable it to fulfil its tasks in the matter of co-ordination of activities of United Nations bodies. By four draft decisions for Council consideration, dealing with the Seventh Congress scheduled for 1985, the Council would: decide to convene the Committee's seventh session for two weeks in 1981 to enable it to fulfil its mandate as the preparatory committee for such United Nations congresses and to assist the Council in co-ordinating United Nations activities concerned with crime prevention and control; request the Committee to finalize in 1981 the provisional agenda of the Seventh Congress; request several measures (meetings, consultants, documentation, participation, public information activities) to ensure proper preparation of that Congress; and invite the Secretary-General to appoint the Executive Secretary for the Congress. Other decisions proposed acceptance of the Committee's report and approval of the agenda for its seventh session.

which contains the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

1977, in which it noted the importance of the United Nations congresses on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders,

Caracas Declaration

The Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, Bearing in mind the importance to all nations of making rapid progress in the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders, in view of the significant increase in crime, including new forms of crime, in various parts of the world,

Considering that the phenomenon of crime, through its impact on society, impairs the overall development of nations, undermines people's spiritual and material well-being, compromises human dignity and creates a climate of fear and violence that erodes the quality of life,

Considering that the international community should make concerted, systematic efforts to co-ordinate and stimulate technical and scientific co-operation and policies directed towards crime prevention in the context of social, cultural, political and economic development,

Acknowledging the role played by the United Nations through its efforts at the international level in the field of crime prevention and the treatment of offenders,

Considering that this role should, by common accord, be strengthened at the international level, and especially at the regional level, in order to make the agreements concluded in this field truly effective and to ensure that the functioning of the technical advisory and co-ordination services is more systematic and efficient,

We/coming the spirit of co-operation and the progress achieved in the field of crime prevention and the treatment of offenders during the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders,

1. Declares the following:

1. The success of criminal justice systems and strategies for crime prevention, especially in the light of the growth of new and sophisticated forms of crime and the difficulties encountered in the administration of criminal justice, depends above all on the progress achieved throughout the world in improving social conditions and enhancing the quality of life; it is thus essential to review traditional crime prevention strategies based exclusively on legal criteria.

2. Crime prevention and criminal justice should be considered in the context of economic development, political systems, social and cultural values and social change, as well as in the context of the new international economic order.

3. It is a matter of great importance and priority that programmes for crime prevention and the treatment of offenders should be based on the social, cultural, political and economic circumstances of each country, in a climate of freedom and respect for human rights, that Member States should develop an effective capacity for the formulation and planning of criminal policy, and that all crime prevention policies should be co-ordinated with strategies for social, economic, political and cultural development.

4. There is a need to promote scientific research, taking into account the particular circumstances and priorities of each country or region.

5. Member States should ensure that those responsible for the functioning of the criminal justice system at all levels should be properly qualified for their tasks and should perform them in a manner which is independent of personal or group interest.

6. Criminal policy and the administration of justice should be based on principles that will guarantee the equality of everyone before the law without any discrimination, as well as the effective right of defence and the existence of judicial organs that are equal to the task of providing speedy and fair justice and of ensuring greater security and protection of the rights and freedoms of all people.

7. Continuous efforts should be made to seek new approaches and to develop better techniques for crime prevention and the treatment of offenders, and to that end criminal law should be developed in such a way as to play an effective and important role in creating stable social conditions free from oppression and manipulation.

8. The family, school and work have a vital part to play in encouraging the development of social policy and of positive attitudes that will assist in preventing crime, and these factors should be taken into consideration in national planning and in the development of criminal policy and crime prevention programmes.

9. Having regard to the vital role played by the United Nations in encouraging international co-operation and the development of norms and guidelines in the field of criminal policy, it is important that the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council should ensure that appropriate measures are taken to strengthen, as necessary, the activities of the competent United Nations organs concerned with crime prevention and the treatment of offenders, especially activities at the regional and subregional levels, taking into account the specific needs of each region, including the establishment of institutes for research, training and technical assistance in those regions which lack such bodies, and the strengthening of existing institutes, and, further to give effect to the conclusions of the Sixth United Nations Congress, including those relating to new perspectives for international co-operation in crime prevention, and to ensure that all United Nations organs co-operate effectively with the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control in pursuance of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly.

2. Invites the General Assembly, in the light of the importance attached to the terms of the present Declaration by the States participating in the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, to take appropriate action at the earliest opportunity in accordance with the Declaration.

A/armed at the incidence in different parts of the world of summary executions as well as of arbitrary executions,

Concerned at the occurrence of executions which are widely regarded as being politically motivated,

1. Urges Member States concerned:

(a) To respect as a minimum standard the content of the provisions of articles 6, 14 and 15 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and, where necessary, to review their legal rules and practices so as to guarantee the most careful legal procedures and the greatest possible safeguards for the accused in capital cases;

Population questions

Population activities of the United Nations

Research and analysis

During 1980, the research work programme of the United Nations relating to population issues centred on the third round of the monitoring of world population trends and policies and the continuing work on review and appraisal of the World Population Plan of Action.<sup>1</sup> Work also continued on population trends and structure, population and development, demographic estimates and projections, fertility and family planning, and population policy.

A study on the levels and trends of mortality since 1950 was completed, as was a revised set of

United Nations model life tables. A set of stable age distributions implied by the model life tables was also prepared. A new project was launched, jointly with the World Health Organization and with the financial support of the United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA), to intensify work on the determinants and consequences of mortality levels, trends and differentials in developing countries. A comprehensive study on sex differences in mortality was also started. Two studies were completed on urbanization, one on age/sex distribution in rural and urban areas and the other on urban, rural and city populations, from 1950 to 2000, as assessed in 1978. A project on the components of population growth and changes in occupation structures by sex in 25 large cities in developing countries was begun. Work also started on patterns and levels of internal migration in relation to social and economic conditions in developing countries.

Demographic estimates and projections were completed, as was a global projection of the number of households and families by countries and regions, covering the period from 1975 to 2000. Work resumed on demographic models for projections to improve the methodology used. Such models would reflect possible effects on demographic variables of government interventions through social and economic planning and population policy implementation. The tenth session of the Interagency Working Group on Demographic Estimates and Projections was convened at Bangkok, Thailand, from 12 to 14 November to discuss continuing co-ordination among United Nations bodies of the periodical revision of the demographic estimates and projections.

Studies conducted of factors affecting reproduction patterns included: work on world levels and trends of fertility; factors affecting acceptance of family planning programmes; relation of development factors to marriage patterns; and enhancement of the effectiveness of family planning programmes. In addition, ongoing work on comparative analysis of World Fertility Survey data was continued.

A major portion of the work on population and development was devoted to providing quantitative assessments of the interrelations between demographic, economic and social factors. Work continued on a study, based on data from more than 100 countries, on the interrelations between population trends and intercountry income disparities, and on intercountry comparisons of consumption and associated economic and demographic factors. Research continued on synthesizing, integrating and advancing knowledge on interrelations of population, resources, environment and development and on population and development modelling.

Problems relating to the distribution of population, excess mortality among certain groups, international migrations and imbalanced age structures were also under study.

Research on population policy included country studies on: national experience in the formulation and implementation of population policy; analysing specific aspects of population policy within the context of development; and status of women and population policies in developing countries. In collaboration with the regional commissions, research was begun on institutional arrangements for the formulation and implementation of population policies. Information gathered continued to be incorporated into the data bank.

Interagency activities were continued in the United Nations Working Group on Comparative Analysis of World Fertility Survey Data, which met in November, and the fourth meeting, in May, of the Ad Hoc Interagency Task Force on Interrelationships between Population and Development. Consultations with the regional commissions and concerned specialized agencies were held on various aspects of the population programme, particularly with reference to the third round of the monitoring of world population trends and policies.

Meetings organized in 1980 included a training workshop on demographic estimates and projections, conducted jointly with Hungary and with the financial assistance of UNFPA, and the Beijing International Round Table Conference, organized jointly with UNFPA and China in October as part of the overall programme of United Nations support for demographic training and research in China.

The main thrust of technical co-operation activities was to help developing countries to achieve self-sufficiency in population training, in the conduct of demographic analyses, and in formulating and executing population policies related to national development planning, by promoting the establishment of and strengthening national institutions to deal with these issues. During 1980, substantive services were provided in these fields in the form of expert advice, fellowships, meetings, equipment and project development and assessment missions to 95 countries. A total of 71 country and interregional experts provided assistance in population in 44 countries, with the substantive backstopping of the Department of Technical Co-operation for Development (DTCO), and 328 United Nations fellowships were awarded to persons from developing countries for study at seven United Nations interregional and regional population training and research centres and programmes and other institutions.

Approximately 125 country projects were supported by DTCO during the year. In Africa and West Asia, more than half were in demographic analysis, with the remainder divided between training and population and development. Again, in Asia and the Pacific, more than half the projects were in demographic analysis and most of the rest in training. In Latin America and the Caribbean, slightly more than half the projects were in population and development, most of the rest in demographic analysis, and a few in training. During the year, DTCD focused increasingly on projects responding to the themes of women's participation, technical co-operation among developing countries and the integration of demographic factors in rural development activities. Efforts were under way to train demographers through increased use of computer technology.

United Nations Fund for Population Activities

Operational activities

In 1980, pledges to UNFPA from donor countries reached almost $125.4 million, an increase of $13.4 million over 1979.

The Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), serving as the governing body of UNFPA, at its Geneva session from 2 to 30 June approved total allocations of $150.5 million to UNFPA, including funds for projects, overhead payable to the United Nations and administrative expenses. The total allocated by UNFPA for projects during the year was $150.5 million.

Family planning continued to receive the major share of project allocations—over 40 per cent, more than twice the allocation to basic data collection, which was followed in descending order by communication and education, population dynamics, multisectoral activities, formulation and evaluation of population policies, special programmes and implementation of policies.

During 1980, fewer allocations were made to intercountry projects as the emphasis continued to shift to country programmes and activities which emphasized human resource development in developing countries through training programmes, an exchange of skills, knowledge and experience, the strengthening of existing national institutions and the building of new ones, and the improvement of managerial, administrative and productive capabilities, together with operational research and pilot projects in fertility regulation, migration and spatial distribution.

Also during 1980 particular attention was directed towards the strengthening of country-component activities within global and inter-regional projects. Much of the research activity in global programmes was undertaken in the developing countries themselves. New methodologies were tested in collaboration with local experts to be generalized for use in a wide variety of settings. In the process, broader intercountry needs were served, with knowledge generated at the country level and nationals trained in new areas. The need to avoid overloading particular countries in this process or particular institutions within countries was a matter of concern, as was the need to ensure that the actual country components met country needs more effectively.

Greater attention was paid to the processes by which the results of global and interregional activities were utilized at regional and, most importantly, country levels. It was increasingly recognized that this process must be incorporated into the project at the beginning. Agencies were encouraged to experiment with alternative modes of disseminating their products, better suited to the needs of specific users.

In 1980, UNFPA sponsored, in co-operation with the Government of Italy and the City of Rome, an International Conference on Population and the Urban Future (Rome, 1-4 September). The objectives of the Conference were threefold: to increase the awareness and understanding of population factors in urban planning at local and national levels; to bring to the attention of planners, policy-makers and administrators the results of recent research and experience on urban issues and problems; and to provide a forum where all the parties involved in urban management could discuss problems and possible solutions, identify neglected areas and formulate ideas and proposals for future action.

At the end of the Conference, the Rome Declaration on Population and the Urban Future was adopted, by consensus, outlining strategies for the formulation of policies to deal with the problems of urbanization.

On 30 September, Italy addressed a letter to the Secretary-General annexing the Rome Declaration. The Declaration summarized the key points for planned urbanization, including the need to match population with resources. Stressing that a fairer distribution of wealth among nations was necessary to avoid continued aggravation of the urban situation, the Declaration called for managed population growth and planned urbanization to achieve a balanced allocation of resources and development opportunities and of the economic and social benefits resulting from them.

The Conference recommended that countries devise national strategies for the urban future that would include the formulation of comprehensive national population policies, and policies for balanced development and for the improvement of urban areas. The Declaration called on the various international bodies concerned, including non-governmental organizations, to help cities and nations deal effectively with urbanization problems. Governments of developed countries and others able to contribute to international assistance were asked to intensify their support for these activities.

As a follow-up to the 1979 International Conference of Parliamentarians on Population and Development,<sup>2</sup> parliamentarians from the member States of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) -Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand-met at Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, in September 1980 to discuss resources, population and development. A declaration issued at the end of the meeting reiterated the need for ASEAN to adopt an approach that would ensure the appropriate integration of resources and population in the formulation and implementation of its development policies and programmes.

An International Media Conference on Population and Development (Sarpsborg and Oslo, Norway, 12-16 May), sponsored by UNFPA in association with the Worldview International Foundation, was attended by key media representatives from Africa, Europe, the Indian sub-continent, the Middle East and North America. Its objective was to brief journalists on the many dimensions of the population issue.

Legislative decisions

The UNDP Governing Council adopted, on 23 and 30 June, two resolutions on the work of UNFPA. By the first of these, after approving several large-scale programmes totalling $138 million, the Council requested the UNFPA Executive Director, in the event of a shortfall in projected 1981 resources, to rephase or reduce that year's programme budgets equitably and flexibly. The Council also requested him to submit to its 1981 session the necessary documentation for a discussion of UNFPA's future role.

By the second resolution, the Council gave the Executive Director additional approval authority for 1981 of $78 million, to bring the total to $147 million. It also approved appropriations of $100,000 to be allocated from UNFPA resources to finance the 1980 administrative and support services budget.

The Governing Council decided, too, to review the question of the Fund's operational reserve at its next session and requested the Executive Director to submit recommendations.

In a report of 16 September to the General Assembly on UNFPA, the Secretary-General noted that the Fund had participated in all the principal meetings of the subsidiary machinery of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination in 1980. The Fund continued to share in UNDP's field and administrative services, including the services of UNDP resident representatives, to whom approximately 40 UNFPA field co-ordinators acted as senior advisers on population matters.

The Secretary-General expressed the hope that all countries, especially those most able to do so, would announce substantial increases in their voluntary contributions to UNFPA for 1981 at the 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities to permit UNFPA to reach its 1981 pledge target of $159 million (see following section).

On 5 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote decision 35/421, by which it took note of the Secretary-General's report on UNFPA. The text, similarly approved by the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee on 31 October, had been submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman on the basis of informal consultations. It replaced a draft resolution sponsored and subsequently withdrawn by Bangladesh, China, Indonesia, Italy, Japan, Malaysia, Mauritius, the Philippines and Thailand. By that text, the Assembly would have noted with satisfaction UNFPA's role in promoting its aims through its assistance programme and through such activities as the Rome International Conference on Population and the Urban Future. It would also have welcomed a Japanese proposal to establish an annual award to be presented through the United Nations for the most outstanding contribution to the awareness of population questions, or to their solution, and requested the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements for the award, in consultation with UNFPA's Executive Director.

Voluntary contributions

At the 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, held at United Nations Headquarters, New York, on 6 and 7 November (see also p. 600), pledges were made to UNFPA for 1981; these and subsequent confirmed pledges brought the total to $62.6 million by 31 December 1980. The cumulative total of pledges to UNFPA since its establishment in 1969 was $726.4 million.

Chapter XVII

Human rights questions

United Nations bodies continued during 1980 to investigate situations involving violations of human rights in several parts of the world, to develop international standards, and to pursue other means of promoting and protecting fundamental rights and freedoms.

The General Assembly decided to hold in 1983 a Second World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, to formulate measures aimed at ensuring the implementation of United Nations resolutions on racism and apartheid, and to review and assess the activities during the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1973-1983). As part of the Programme for the Decade, the Secretary-General organized for African countries a Seminar on Political, Economic, Cultural and Other Factors underlying Situations Leading to Racism including a Survey of the Increase or Decline of Racism and Racial Discrimination (Nairobi, Kenya, 19-30 May).

In 1980, parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination rose to 108, ratifications and accessions to the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid rose to 58, and parties to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights totalled 66 and 65, respectively.

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities of the Commission on Human Rights recommended that the Economic and Social Council consider setting up a human rights assistance fund to help countries achieve at least the minimum standards laid down in the international instruments on human rights.

The Assembly again condemned the collaboration of certain Member States with South Africa and requested the Security Council to consider complete sanctions. The Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa of the Commission on Human Rights continued to examine human rights violations in southern Africa, as well as violations of trade union rights. The Economic and Social Council reiterated its demand for abolition of all restrictions on trade union rights in South Africa.

The Commission on Human Rights and the Assembly repeated their calls for a halt to violations of human rights in the Arab territories occupied by Israel. Also, the Assembly's Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories reported on evidence of what it found to be continued violations (see p. 416).

States were urged to consider taking measures against nazism, fascism, neo-fascism or other ideologies based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror.

The Commission, the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly were again concerned with the human rights situation in Chile; the mandate of the Special Rapporteur studying that situation was extended and the Chilean authorities were urged to co-operate and to respect human rights. The Assembly requested from the Council recommendations concerning the extension of the mandate of the United Nations Trust Fund for Chile to become a United Nations Trust Fund for Victims of Gross and Flagrant Violations of Human Rights.

The human rights situations in a number of other parts of the world, such as Afghanistan, Bolivia, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Guatemala, Iran, Northern Ireland and Western Sahara, were discussed by the Commission and/or its Sub-Commission. Communications from non-governmental sources containing allegations of human rights violations were handled under a confidential procedure.

The Commission again set up a working group to examine situations of alleged human rights violations referred to it by the Sub-Commission, and those it had itself been keeping under review. It granted States that had been invited to address the Commission the right to participate in the entire discussion of the situation in which they were concerned.

The Sub-Commission adopted three resolutions relating to procedure: recommending establishment of a Secretariat information-gathering service; on arrangements for Sub-Commission members to visit countries to examine human rights problems; and proposing several ideas on its possible future role in emergency situations of human rights violations.

While the Commission requested the Secretary-General to continue and intensify his good offices in the field of human rights, the Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee decided not to take action on a draft resolution on his good offices in urgent situations of mass and flagrant human rights violations.

In the context of their continuing consideration of the right of peoples to self-determination, the Commission and the Assembly reaffirmed the legitimacy of the struggle of peoples for independence and liberation, and reaffirmed the inalienable right of the peoples of Namibia, of the Palestinian people and of all peoples under alien and colonial domination to self-determination.

On several institutional aspects of the promotion and protection of human rights, the Assembly emphasized the necessity of establishing the new international economic order to ensure the promotion and enjoyment of human rights, while the Commission continued its overall analysis of alternative approaches and ways and means for improving that enjoyment, paying attention to the preparation of a long-term programme. The Assembly again requested the Commission to promote the right to development as a human right. By another resolution, the Assembly invited all States to ensure the full implementation of the right to universal education.

The Commission requested the Secretary-General to seek the views of Governments on the possible need for emergency sessions of the Commission in order to respond to reports of flagrant human rights violations of an urgent nature. The Assembly supported efforts to encourage the establishment of regional arrangements to promote and protect human rights and requested the Secretary-General to keep under consideration the question of redesignating the Division of Human Rights as a Centre for Human Rights. It also requested the Commission to consider a proposal for the establishment of a post of United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

To develop public information activities in the field of human rights, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Labour Organisation, to draw up a world-wide programme for the dissemination of international human rights instruments.

The Assembly, through working groups, started preparation of a draft convention on the rights of migrant workers and continued work on a draft declaration on the human rights of non-citizens and on a draft body of principles for the protection of persons under any form of detention or imprisonment; a Commission working group was authorized to complete work on a draft convention against torture and other cruel and inhuman treatment.

The Commission also: took decisions seeking to eliminate slavery and slavery-like practices, such as apartheid and colonialism, the slave trade, sale of children, exploitation of child labour and debt bondage; continued work on a draft convention on the rights of the child; and requested the Secretary-General to seek up-to-date information on national legislation regarding conscientious objection to military service.

Under the United Nations programme of advisory services in human rights, a regional Symposium on the Role of the Police in the Protection of Human Rights was held at The Hague, Netherlands, in April, and a Seminar on the effects of the existing unjust international economic order on the economies of developing countries was held at Geneva in June/July.

Fellowships in the field of human rights were granted to nationals of 25 countries. On 10 December, the thirty-second anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was observed.

The Commission held its thirty-sixth session at Geneva from 4 February to 14 March. Its recommendations were acted on by the Economic and Social Council at its April/May session. Its Sub-Commission held its thirty-third session at Geneva from 18 August to 12 September, making recommendations that were to go before the Commission in 1981.

Details of these and related matters are described in this chapter.

Action against racism, racial discrimination, apartheid and racial intolerance

International action to combat racism and racial discrimination

Implementation of the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination

On 14 November 1980, by resolution 35/33, the General Assembly decided to hold in 1983 a Second World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, to formulate ways and means and specific measures aimed at ensuring full and universal implementation of United Nations decisions on racism, racial discrimination and apartheid, and to review and assess the activities taken in implementation of the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination adopted by a resolution of 2 November 1973;<sup>1</sup> by that same resolution, the Assembly launched the Decade on 10 December 1973 in an effort to accomplish the rapid elimination of all forms of racial discrimination. The first World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination was held in 1978.<sup>2</sup> The programme of national, regional and international activities to be undertaken during the second half of the Decade was adopted in November 1979.<sup>3</sup>

Other United Nations organs were active during 1980 on matters relating to the Decade. On 26 February, the Commission on Human Rights adopted four resolutions on implementation of the Programme for the Decade. By the first, it recommended that the Economic and Social Council, while evaluating the activities undertaken to implement the Programme, should consider their impact on specific groups such as migrant workers, immigrant communities, indigenous populations and ethnic minorities, and give special attention to co-ordination and co-operation within the United Nations system to ensure an integrated approach in dealing with racial discrimination problems. By the second, the Commission decided to organize a seminar in 1981 to study effective measures to prevent collaboration of transnational corporations and other established interests with the racist regimes of southern Africa. By the third, it requested the Secretary-General to consult the Commission on Transnational Corporations, the Special Committee against Apartheid, the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and the United Nations Council for Namibia to determine the modalities of that study. The Commission, by the fourth resolution, requested its Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities to prepare a study on ways to ensure implementation of United Nations resolutions on apartheid, racism and racial discrimination and to submit it with conclusions to the Commission in 1982.

When the Economic and Social Council considered the Programme for the Decade at its April/May session, it had before it two reports by the Secretary-General: his annual report describing Decade-related actions of United Nations organs and bodies, non-governmental organizations and the Secretariat Department of Public Information, as well as seminars and fellowships, up to 20 February; and his analysis of replies to a biennial questionnaire on progress achieved towards the goals and objectives set out in the Programme. As at 28 February, 21 countries had replied to the questionnaire: Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Cyprus, Denmark, Finland, France, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Guatemala, India, Iraq, Kuwait, Malawi, Norway, Pakistan, Sweden, Thailand, United Kingdom, United Republic of Cameroon. Supplementary information received after 1 March from an additional 14 Member States (Australia, Byelorussian SSR, Cape Verde, Costa Rica, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Kuwait, Mexico, Poland, Tunisia, Ukrainian SSSR, USSR, Yugoslavia), from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and from three non-governmental organizations was submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly in September.

By decision 1980/112 of 17 April, the Council requested its President to transmit a message to the newly elected President of Zimbabwe stating that Zimbabwe's independence marked a major step towards the achievement of the objectives of the Decade (see p. 247).

On 2 May, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights, the Council, by resolution 1980/28 adopted without vote, authorized the Sub-Commission: to entrust its Special Rapporteur, Abu Sayeed Chowdhury, with the preparation of a study on discrimination against members of racial, ethnic, religious or linguistic groups in criminal justice proceedings and on the ideologies or beliefs which contributed or led to racism; and to designate a special rapporteur to study the political, economic, cultural and other factors leading to racism, including a survey of the increase or decline of racial discrimination. The resolution had been approved without vote by the Second (Social) Committee on 29 April, after the Committee had adopted an Iraqi oral amendment on the Commission-recommended text: the survey's terms of reference would include the increase or decline of "all forms of" racism and racial discrimination.

At its 1980 session, the Sub-Commission, in resolutions of 5 September, decided to consider at its 1981 session the study on discriminatory treatment in the administration of criminal justice and preparation of the Commission-requested study on ways to encourage implementation of resolutions on apartheid, racism and racial discrimination; at that and subsequent sessions, it would consider political, economic, cultural and other factors leading to racism and racial discrimination together with methods for eradicating such causes. The Sub-Commission asked the Secretary-General to submit to it in 1982 a report on measures which it might recommend to Governments for enhancing and strengthening recourse procedures at national and local levels for victims of racial discrimination, and to prepare and disseminate pamphlets in various languages to popularize the findings of the Sub-Commission's studies on racial discrimination and the protection of minorities.

By another resolution of the same date, the Sub-Commission proposed that the Commission recommend to the Economic and Social Council that the Council: consider setting up a human rights assistance fund to help countries achieve rapidly at least the minimum standards laid down in the international instruments on human rights; assist in introducing human rights education, and if practicable human rights centres, in all countries' schools, colleges and universities; and request all Member States to translate important United Nations conventions, declarations and principles relating to human rights into their various languages. The Secretary-General was asked to collect information on how immigration laws affected different races, and measures needed and taken to eliminate discrimination from such laws and from employment and voting practices as well.

On 24 April, the Council adopted, by 36 votes to 11, with 5 abstentions, resolution 1980/7 on the implementation of the Programme for the Decade, by which it recommended to the General Assembly for adoption a draft resolution on the subject, calling for a number of specific actions to be taken during the remainder of the Decade. The Assembly later adopted the text, with amendments, as resolution 35/33 (see below).

The text was initially sponsored in the Council by Algeria, Bulgaria, Cuba, Cyprus, Ethiopia, the German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Hungary, India, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Pakistan, Senegal, Somalia, the Sudan, the United Republic of Tanzania, Yugoslavia and Zambia.

Jordan amended the proposed draft resolution in the Council by including: in a paragraph condemning policies of racism and racial discrimination, those practised in "all occupied Arab territories;" and, in a paragraph inviting intensified United Nations efforts to keep the public alert to the scourges of racial discrimination through publications of the Centre against Apartheid, reference to those of "other relevant bodies" as well. After the sponsors accepted the amendments, Iraq and Jordan became sponsors.

Israel, objecting to the Jordanian amendments, said the inclusion of any reference to Israel in a resolution purporting to deal with racism was an obscene distortion which detracted from the noble cause of the struggle against racism and racial discrimination:

While reiterating their support for the goals of the Decade, Finland and Sweden explained that they had voted against the resolution because of the attached draft resolution's references to the Declaration and the Programme of Action of the 1978 World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination,<sup>4</sup> its reaffirmation of support for armed struggle, its call on Governments to end all activities of enterprises under their jurisdiction in southern Africa, and its incorporation of the Jordanian amendments. The amendments also presented difficulties for Nepal.

Italy expressed similar views on behalf of Council members which were members of the European Economic Community (EEC), adding that the references to the Middle East and to armed struggle were unacceptable and that the problem of South Africa was not one of decolonization. Australia could not endorse the paragraphs on armed struggle or southern African enterprises, adding reservations on paragraphs calling for adoption of laws outlawing all organizations based on racial criteria or ideas, expressing satisfaction to several United Nations bodies for their contribution to implementing the Programme for the Decade, and deciding to convene a Second World Conference until a consensus was restored with regard to the Decade. Japan said it had abstained because of certain concepts included, and Barbados because it lacked Government instructions with regard to the Jordanian amendments. Though they voted in favour of the resolution, the Bahamas and Nepal said the amendments had also given them difficulties. The United States did not participate in the vote for reasons, it said, it had fully explained in the past.

Despite certain reservations, Chile, Lesotho, Mexico and Spain said they had voted in favour. Chile expressed reservations regarding a Second World Conference. Lesotho would have voted against a paragraph approving the Declaration of the International Seminar on an Oil Embargo against South Africa (see p. 212), had it been put to a vote. Mexico and Spain did not agree with certain paragraphs of the Programme of Action adopted by the 1978 World Conference. If a separate vote had been taken on paragraph 2-condemning racial discrimination in southern Africa, all occupied Arab territories and elsewhere, including the denial of the right of peoples to self-determination and independence-Mexico said it would have abstained because the relevance of certain concepts in that paragraph was not clear.

On 14 November, on the recommendation of its Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, the Assembly adopted, by 120 votes to 18, with 4 abstentions, the text proposed by the Council; it became resolution 35/33. Assembly thereby proclaimed that the attainment of the objectives of the Programme for the Decade and of the programme of activities for the second half of the Decade was a matter of high priority for the United Nations. It strongly condemned the policies of apartheid, racism and racial discrimination in southern Africa, all occupied Arab territories and elsewhere, including the denial of the right of peoples to self-determination and independence, vigorously condemned South Africa's repeated acts of aggression against neighbouring States, particularly recent attacks on Zambia, reaffirmed its strong support for the national liberation struggle and for the achievement of self-determination by all available means, including armed struggle, and called on all Governments to take legislative, administrative and other measures to put an end to enterprises in southern Africa owned by their nationals and corporate bodies under their jurisdiction.

The Assembly called on all States to adopt measures declaring punishable by law any dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority or hatred and outlawing organizations based on racial hatred and prejudice, appealed to all the mass media and educational and cultural institutions to co-operate fully in implementing the Programme for the Decade, approved the Declaration of the International Seminar on an Oil Embargo against South Africa, and invited all States, international bodies and non-governmental organizations to intensify campaigns aimed at securing the release of all political prisoners held by racist régimes because of their efforts to combat racism and at defending the right of self-determination.

The Assembly expressed its satisfaction to the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, the Special Committee against Apartheid, the United Nations Council for Namibia, the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and the Commission on Human Rights, through its Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa, for their contribution to the implementation of the Programme for the Decade. It decided to hold in 1983 a Second World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, with the main purpose of formulating specific measures aimed at ensuring the full and universal implementation of United Nations decisions on racism, racial discrimination and apartheid, and invited the Economic and Social Council to begin the preparatory work, submitting its suggestions in 1981.

The Third Committee on 27 October had approved by a recorded vote, requested by Israel, of 106 to 19, with 4 abstentions, the text recommended by the Council, after approving, without vote, an amendment proposed by Algeria and Ghana asking the Secretary-General to submit to the Assembly various previously requested studies on the subject of racial discrimination<sup>5</sup> for consideration under the agenda item dealing with implementation of the Programme for the Decade.

Denmark, speaking on behalf of the Nordic countries-Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden-expressed regret that they had to vote against the text because of its references to armed struggle and to the final documents adopted by the 1978 World Conference, to which they could not fully subscribe, and because paragraph 8, calling on Governments to take legislative measures to end enterprise activity in southern Africa, did not take into account that only the Security Council could adopt binding decisions.

Luxembourg (on behalf of the EEC members) and New Zealand explained their votes against the resolution on similar grounds. In addition, EEC felt that the Middle East situation should not be considered by the Third Committee, and could not accept that the situation in South Africa constituted a problem of decolonization; New Zealand had doubts about the value of a Second Conference if its goals were not clarified. The United States, while continuing to support the fundamental purpose of the Decade-namely the total and unconditional elimination of racism and racial discrimination-maintained its policy of non-participation in the activities of the Decade because of the Assembly's 1975 resolution on the elimination of all forms of racial discrimination, which had been adopted within the context of the Decade and characterized Zionism as a form of racism and racial discrimination.<sup>6</sup> Suriname had reservations on paragraph 2, which it said equated Israeli policy with racism and racial discrimination, although it had voted in favour of the resolution. The Ivory Coast and Jamaica also reserved their position on this paragraph.

Greece and Portugal abstained because of the reference to armed struggle, and Fiji and Papua New Guinea, though voting in favour, voiced the same reservations. Guatemala abstained because of the references to the Middle East. Chile had voted in favour despite some reservations on wording. Botswana wished, because of its extreme vulnerability as a land-locked country, to reserve its position on the oil embargo against South Africa.

Also on 14 November, the Assembly adopted, by 141 votes to 1, resolution 35/34 calling on all Governments to take the steps necessary to enable national non-governmental organizations established for the elimination of racial discrimination to function effectively in pursuit of harmonious relations between races and communities. The text, twice revised, was sponsored by Bangladesh, Barbados, Jamaica, Pakistan and Suriname and approved by the Third Committee on 27 October by 133 votes to 1.

The United States observed that it was maintaining its policy of non-participation in Decade-related resolutions. Israel opposed the text because of a preambular paragraph recalling the relevant provisions of the Assembly's 1979 resolution on implementation of the Programme for the Decade.<sup>7</sup> Notwithstanding their votes, Austria, the Netherlands, Norway (on behalf of the Nordic countries) and the United Kingdom reserved their position on the reference to that resolution.

By resolution 35/40 of 25 November, on the report of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, the Assembly welcomed the Committee's readiness to contribute to implementing the Programme for the Decade, asked the Economic and Social Council to invite the Committee to take part in preparations for the Second World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, and asked the Secretary-General to provide the needed assistance to the Committee for its Decade-related activities, including arrangements for a session in a developing country, preferably in Africa (for details, see subsection below).

Seminar on aspects of racial discrimination

As part of the activities under the Programme for the Decade, the Secretary-General organized at Nairobi, Kenya, from 19 to 30 May-for African member countries of the Economic Commission for Africa - a Seminar on Political, Economic, Cultural and Other Factors underlying Situations Leading to Racism including a Survey of the Increase or Decline of Racism and Racial Discrimination, particularly with regard to South Africa. In its recommendations, it suggested various national, regional and international measures to eradicate racial discrimination, such as: reviewing or establishing recourse procedures against any act of racial discrimination; ratifying and implementing international instruments bearing on apartheid and racial discrimination; making a study of the historical and current dimensions of tribalism; convening meetings to consider the role of information, including African literature, and the mass media in combating racism; and intensifying action against the régimes in South Africa and Namibia, including complying with the arms embargo, calling for mandatory sanctions and increasing support for liberation movements.

Elimination of racial discrimination

Status of the International Convention on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

The International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, adopted in 1965<sup>8</sup> entered into force on 4 January 1969.

As at 31 December 1980, the Convention had been ratified or acceded to by 108 States, of which two (Gabon and Uganda) became parties during the year:

Algeria, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Holy See, Hungary, Iceland, India, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Rwanda, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Spain, Sudan, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Cameroon; United Republic of Tanzania, Upper Volta, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Seven of the States parties-Costa Rica, Ecuador, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and Uruguay- had made declarations under article 14 of the Convention, recognizing the competence of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination to receive and consider communications from individuals or groups within their jurisdiction claiming to be victims of a violation by 'a State party of any of the rights set forth in the Convention. Under article 14, the Committee was to be competent to exercise this function when at least 10 States parties were bound by such declarations.

The Secretary-General submitted on 29 August his annual report to the General Assembly on the status of the Convention, listing the States which had signed, ratified, acceded to or succeeded to it.

By resolution 35/38, adopted without vote on 25 November, the Assembly took note of this report, expressed its satisfaction with the increase in the number of ratifications or accessions, reaffirmed its conviction that ratification or accession was necessary for the realization of the objectives of the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, asked States that were not parties to become parties, and appealed to parties to study the possibility of making the declaration provided for in article 14.

This last appeal was the result of an amendment proposed by Costa Rica, Ecuador and Uruguay when the draft resolution, sponsored by 37 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below), was discussed in the Third Committee. The amendment was approved by 92 votes to 1, with 37 abstentions; the text as a whole was approved without vote on 27 October.

Report of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, set up in accordance with the Convention to oversee its implementation, held its twenty-first session from 24 March to 11 April 1980 at Geneva and its twenty-second session from 4 to 22 August at United Nations Headquarters, New York.

At its two sessions, the Committee examined reports and information submitted by 38 States under article 9 of the Convention, requiring the submission of biennial reports by the parties on measures taken to give effect to the Convention. Representatives of the reporting States participated in the consideration of their respective reports. The Committee's eleventh annual report, submitted to the Assembly's 1980 regular session, contained the views of Committee members on each State report, as well as a summary of statements by the States parties concerned. After the Committee had agreed by consensus, following a procedural discussion, that its consideration of the initial report of Israel should not be interpreted as implying recognition of any title by Israel to the territories it had occupied since 1967, the Israeli representative, regretting that some Committee members had made what he termed highly political remarks, said he could not therefore introduce Israel's report or participate further in the proceedings. The Committee decided by consensus to postpone consideration of Israel's report until 1981.

The Committee unanimously adopted revised general guidelines concerning the form and content of the reports, which were to follow the order and wording of the articles of the Convention. Its one decision adopted during the year, on 8 April, concerned the information supplied by Cyprus and that country's inability to fulfil its obligations under the Convention on its whole national territory (see p. 459).

Also, the Committee examined, as authorized by article 15 of the Convention, copies of petitions, reports and other information on the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and on American Samoa, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, Brunei, the Cayman Islands, Guam, St. Helena and the United States Virgin Islands, territories on which information had been submitted to the Committee by the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>9</sup> It submitted to the Assembly its opinions and recommendations concerning the situation in those territories with regard to matters directly relating to the principles and objectives of the Convention.

During both sessions, the Committee considered matters concerning the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, including the results of its participation in and the reports of the 1979 round-table on the teaching of problems of racial discrimination and the 1979 United Nations Seminar on Recourse Procedures Available to Victims of Racial Discrimination and Activities to be Undertaken at the Regional Level.<sup>10</sup> The Committee also discussed its future activities within the framework of the Decade, including the question of the preparation of studies on articles 4 (concerning legal measures to be taken to prohibit acts and organizations promoting racism) and 7 (on combating racial prejudice by education and information) of the Convention.

In a report of 10 September to the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, responding to a 1979 Assembly request,<sup>11</sup> submitted a number of alternative proposals aimed at facilitating the holding of Committee sessions in developing countries. They included setting up a special trust fund, agreement by States parties to defray the additional costs involved, or authorizing a one-time expenditure for a session as part of the programme for the second half of the Decade.

By resolution 35/40 of 25 November, the Assembly took note with appreciation of the Committee's 1980 report, welcomed its readiness to continue to help implement Decade activities, asked the Economic and Social Council to invite the Committee to participate in preparations for the Second World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, and requested the Secretary-General to provide the necessary assistance. It called on the United Nations bodies concerned and administering powers to ensure that the Committee was supplied with all relevant information on all the territories to which the 1960 Declaration on granting independence applied, and urged all the Convention's States parties to co-operate fully with the Committee—noting with regret that on one occasion such co-operation was withheld by one State party. The Assembly expressed its grave concern that some States parties were being prevented from fulfilling their obligations under the Convention in parts of their respective territories, urged all States which were not parties to ratify or accede to the Convention, urged Member States to attend Committee sessions and to encourage national mass media to give wider publicity to the Committee and the Convention, and requested the Secretary-General to arrange for the Committee to hold, as part of its activities within the Programme for the Decade, one session in a developing country, preferably in Africa.

Resolution 35/40 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Third Committee which, on 27 October, had similarly approved the text proposed by 23 countries (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Argentina orally proposed but did not insist on an amendment to request the Secretary-

General to make every possible effort to assist the Committee by transmitting to it the reports submitted by States parties at his request. On behalf of the sponsors, Yugoslavia orally recast a paragraph commending the Committee for paying due attention to the protection of the rights of national or ethnic minorities and indigenous populations, as well as migrant workers, and calling on Member States to protect those groups from discrimination.

International Day

As in previous years, the Special Committee against Apartheid held, on 21 March, a special meeting in New York in observance of the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. That day marked the twentieth anniversary of the incident at Sharpeville, South Africa, in which 69 demonstrators against "pass laws" of the apartheid system were killed and 180 others wounded. Addresses were made by the Secretary-General, the chairmen of the regional groups of Member States at the United Nations, and representatives of the African National Congress of South Africa and the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania. Messages were read from 17 heads of State; others were received from 19 States-one of them on behalf of EEC members-two specialized agencies and a number of non-governmental organizations and solidarity movements. A special ceremony was also held that day at the United Nations Office at Geneva.

The General Assembly.

Reaffirming its determination to achieve the total eradication of racism, racial discrimination and apartheid,

Recalling once again that, in its resolution 3057 (XXVIII) of 2 November 1973 and in the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination annexed thereto, and in other relevant resolutions, it called upon all peoples, Governments and institutions to continue their efforts to eliminate racism, racial discrimination and apartheid,

Bearing in mind the Declaration and the Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination,

Recalling that, in the programme of activities to be undertaken during the second half of the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, contained in the annex to its resolution 34/24 of 15 November 1979, it called upon all States, United Nations organs and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to intensify their efforts to achieve the speediest attainment of the objectives of the Decade, aimed at the complete and final elimination of all forms of racism and racial discrimination,

Seriously concerned at the situation prevailing in South Africa and throughout southern Africa as a result of the policies and actions of the apartheid régime, particularly its efforts to perpetuate and strengthen racist domination of the country, its policy of "bantustanization," its brutal repression of opponents of apartheid and its renewed acts of aggression against neighbouring States,

Reaffirming that the policies and actions of the apartheid régime constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Reaffirming that apartheid is a crime against humanity,

Recognizing the gravity of the situation of women and children under the yoke of apartheid and racial discrimination,

Noting with satisfaction the favourable outcome of the struggle of the people of Zimbabwe to regain their sovereignty and national independence,

Recalling the importance of the attainment of the objectives of the Decade,

Convinced that a second world conference to be convened during the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination will make a useful and constructive contribution to the attainment of those objectives,

1. Proclaims that the elimination of all forms of racism and of discrimination based on race and the attainment of the objectives of the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination and of the programme of activities to be undertaken during the second half of the Decade, contained in the annex to its resolution 34/24, are matters of high priority for the international community and, accordingly, for the United Nations;

2. Strongly condemns the policies of apartheid, racism and racial discrimination practised in southern Africa, all occupied Arab territories and elsewhere, including the denial of the right of peoples to self-determination and independence;

3. Vigorously condemns the repeated acts of aggression committed by South Africa against neighbouring States. Particularly the recent attacks on Zambia;

4. Reaffirms once again its strong support for the national liberation struggle against racism, racial discrimination.

9. Calls upon all States to adopt, as a matter of high priority, measures declaring punishable by law any dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority or hatred and outlawing organizations based on racial hatred and prejudice, including neo-Nazi and Fascist organizations as well as private clubs and institutions which are based on racial criteria or which spread ideas of racial discrimination and apartheid;

10. Appeals once again to all States to continue to co-operate with the Secretary-General by submitting their reports to him, as provided for in paragraph 18 (e) of the Programme for the Decade;

11. Appeals once again to all the mass media and educational and cultural institutions to co-operate fully in implementing the Programme for the Decade;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to submit the various studies which the General Assembly requested to be undertaken in its resolutions 33/99 of 16 December 1976 and 34/24 of 15 November 1979, when completed, to the General Assembly at its future sessions for consideration under the item entitled "Implementation of the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination;"

16. Invites all States, international bodies and non-governmental organizations to intensify the campaigns aimed at securing the release of all political prisoners held by the racist régimes because of their courageous efforts to combat apartheid, racism and racial discrimination and at defending the right of their peoples to self-determination and independence;

17. Expresses its satisfaction to the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, the Special Committee against Apartheid, the United Nations Council for Namibia, the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and the Commission on Human Rights, through its Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa, for their contribution to the implementation of the Programme for the Decade;

18. Decides to hold in 1983, as an important event of the Decade, a Second World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, which, while reviewing and assessing the activities undertaken during the Decade, should have as its main purpose the formulation of ways and means and of specific measures aimed at ensuring the full and universal implementation of United Nations resolutions and decisions on racism, racial discrimination and apartheid;

Conscious of the need to mobilize public opinion through the media, the education system, non-governmental organizations and other institutions against all forms of racial discrimination,

Aware of the importance of Governments enacting appropriate legislation and taking other suitable measures to prohibit and bring to an end racial discrimination,

Recalling its resolution 34/49 of 23 November 1979 on national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Resolution 35/40, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/590, adopted without vote by Assembly on 25 November 1980, meeting 73.

The General Assembly.

Recalling its resolutions 34/28 of 15 November 1979 on the report of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination and 34/26 of 15 November 1979 on the status of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, as well as its other relevant resolutions on the implementation of the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on its twenty-first and twenty-second sessions, submitted under article 9, paragraph 2, of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination,

Emphasizing the obligation of all States parties to the Convention to take legislative, judicial and other measures in order to secure full implementation of the provisions of the Convention,

Convinced that all Member States should take effective measures, at the national and international levels, to combat acts or practices of racial discrimination, including the vestiges and manifestations of racist ideologies wherever they exist,

Aware of the importance of the contribution of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination to the implementation of the Programme for the Decade, through its activities within the framework of the implementation of the Convention,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on its twenty-first and twenty-second sessions;

2. Welcomes the readiness of the Committee to continue to contribute to the implementation of the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination by, inter alia, intensifying the monitoring of the implementation of the provisions of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, preparing relevant studies on the Convention and expanding co-operation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the International Labour Organisation and other relevant bodies within the United Nations system;

3. Requests the Economic and Social Council to invite the Committee to take, within the context of its activities on the implementation of the Convention, active part in the preparations for the work of the second World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination in the manner the Committee finds appropriate;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide necessary assistance to the Committee regarding its activities connected with its contribution to the implementation of the Programme for the Decade, as referred to in paragraphs 2 and 3 above;

5. Commends the Committee for paying greater attention to the question of the elimination of the policy of apartheid in South Africa and Namibia, as well as to the elimination of acts and practices of racial discrimination in Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories and in all other Territories to which General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 applies;

6. Further commends the Committee for paying due attention to the protection of the rights of national or ethnic minorities and indigenous populations, as well as the rights of migrant workers, and calls upon all Member States to take effective measures in protecting fully these groups of people from discrimination based on race, colour, descent or national or ethnic origin;

7. Calls upon the United Nations bodies concerned to ensure that the Committee is supplied with all relevant information on all the Territories to which General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) applies and urges the administering Powers to co-operate with these bodies by providing all necessary information in order to enable the Committee to discharge fully its responsibilities under article 15 of the Convention;

8. Notes with appreciation the adoption by the Committee of the revised general guidelines concerning the form and contents of reports by States parties under article 9, paragraph 1, of the Convention and invites States parties to supply the Committee, in accordance with these guidelines, with information on the implementation of the provisions of the Convention, including information on the demographic composition of their population and on their relations with the racist regime of South Africa;

9. Urges all States parties to the Convention to extend full co-operation to the Committee and notes with regret that on one occasion such co-operation was withheld by one State party;

10. Expresses its grave concern that some States parties to the Convention, owing to reasons beyond their control, are being prevented from fulfilling their obligations under the Convention in parts of their respective territories;

INTERNATIONAL DAY

A/35/22. Report of Special Committee against Apartheid, Chapter Chapter II L 1.

Apartheid racial discrimination in southern Africa

Status of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid

During 1980, four more States-Gabon, Mexico, Nicaragua and Suriname-adhered to the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid which was adopted by the General Assembly in 1973<sup>12</sup> and entered into force on 18 July 1976.

This brought the number of States having ratified or acceded to the Convention to 58 as at 31 December 1980:

Barbados, Benin, Bulgaria, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cape Verde, Chad, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, India, Iraq, Jamaica, Kuwait, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mali, Mexico, Mongolia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Seychelles, Somalia, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Cameroon, United Republic of Tanzania, Upper Volta, Yugoslavia, Zaire.

The Group of Three-Bulgaria, Cuba and Senegal, appointed by the Chairman of the Commission on Human Rights-established under article IX of the Convention to consider reports by States parties on measures they had taken to implement its provisions held its third session at Geneva from 28 January to 1 February. It considered and commented on reports from six States- the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, India, Iraq, the Syrian Arab Republic and the United Arab Emirates-representatives of which attended the meetings to supplement the information in the reports. The Group reiterated a recommendation made in previous years stressing the desirability for States parties to make suggestions for the establishment of the international penal tribunal envisaged in article V of the Convention to try persons accused of the crime of apartheid. In this connexion, it recommended that the Commission request the Secretary-General to study the possibility of convening a diplomatic conference of States parties to consider the modalities of the establishment of such a tribunal as well as measures to implement the Convention. The Group also drew attention to the importance of strengthening assistance to the liberation movements in southern Africa.

By a resolution of 26 February, the Commission took note with appreciation of the Group's report and recommendations, appealed for further accessions to the Convention, and requested the Secretary-General to renew his invitation to States parties to suggest ways of establishing the international penal tribunal.

By another resolution concerning the Convention, the Commission asked its Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa (see section below)-in co-operation with the Special Committee against Apartheid as appropriate, whose campaign to give effect to the Convention's provisions was welcomed- to continue its compilation of a list of persons, organizations and State representatives deemed responsible for crimes enumerated in the Convention and asked the Secretary-General to arrange for the widest possible publication of an account of each case in the list. The Ad Hoc Group was asked to study ways to ensure the implementation of international instruments such as the Convention, and States parties were urged to adopt the measures prescribed by the Convention, particularly the legislative and other measures called for in article IV to prosecute, try and punish persons responsible for or accused of acts defined in the Convention, and those in article V, referring to an international penal tribunal.

The Secretary-General, in a report to the Assembly of 29 August on the status of the Convention, included a list of States which had signed, ratified or acceded to the Convention, as well as views and comments of Cuba, the German Democratic Republic, Iraq, Panama, the Philippines and the Syrian Arab Republic on the conclusions and recommendations of the Group of Three at its 1979 session.<sup>13</sup>

The Assembly, by resolution 35/39 of 25 November: commended the States parties that had submitted their reports under article VII and urged others to do so as soon as possible; again strongly appealed to States to ratify or accede to the Convention without delay; called on States parties to implement fully article IV; called on them and the competent United Nations organs to submit their views on the conclusions and recommendations of the Group of Three contained in its 1979 and 1980 reports; invited the Commission on Human Rights to intensify its efforts to compile periodically the list of individuals, organizations, institutions and representatives of States deemed responsible for crimes enumerated in the Convention; and called on the competent United Nations organs to provide information as well as data on obstacles preventing suppression and punishment of apartheid. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to distribute the list among all States parties and United Nations Members, to publicize such facts by all means of mass communication, and to intensify his efforts to disseminate information on the Convention and its implementation with a view to further promoting ratification or accession.

Resolution 35/39 was adopted by a recorded vote of 98 to 0, with 24 abstentions. The Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee approved the text on 27 October by 113 votes to 1, with 22 abstentions; the vote was taken at Sweden's request. The text was sponsored by 37 countries (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

In explanation of vote, Japan and the United States said they had abstained because some of the resolution's provisions contained ambiguous or vague definitions. The United States referred in particular to a preambular paragraph reaffirming that apartheid was a total negation of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, a gross violation of human rights and a crime against humanity, seriously disturbing and threatening international peace and security, and a paragraph asking the Commission, in preparing its list, to take account of a 1978 resolution on the adverse consequences on human rights of giving aid to the racist regimes of southern Africa<sup>14</sup> and of the Commission's and its suborgans' documents on this subject reaffirming that States giving such aid became accomplices in apartheid. Moreover, the United States could not encourage States to become parties to the Convention. Greece, which also abstained, said its authorities were currently studying it.

Speaking on behalf of the member States of the European Economic Community, Luxembourg said they had abstained because they did not regard the Convention as an instrument enabling the international community to take effective measures to end apartheid, having reservations about the fact that a State party could condemn acts committed outside its jurisdiction by non-nationals. Moreover, the Convention did not clearly define the violations to which it referred, and entrusted responsibility for implementation to a United Nations organ even though many Members had not ratified it.

Although they voted in favour because of their firm opposition to apartheid, Chile and Turkey reiterated reservations on provisions which were incompatible with their national laws, as did Portugal which abstained.

By another resolution—35/206 A of 16 December, on the policies of apartheid of South Africa—the Assembly also appealed to all States which had not done so to accede to the Convention (see p. 207).

Adverse effects on human rights resulting from aid to colonial and racist regimes in southern Africa

In February 1980, the Commission on Human Rights considered a revised report prepared by Ahmed Mohamed Khalifa (Egypt), a Special Rapporteur of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities. The report contained a revised provisional general list of more than 2,600 cases of banks, firms and other institutions giving economic, military or other types of assistance to the colonial and racist regimes in southern Africa. It also annexed comments of Argentina, Canada, Denmark, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, the Netherlands, Spain and the United Kingdom on the part of the list relating to them. Preparation of the list was originally requested by the Commission in 1977.<sup>15</sup>

By a resolution of 26 February, the Commission called for an end to all forms of assistance to the racist régimes of southern Africa, called on Governments of countries where those on the list were based to stop trading, manufacturing and investing in the territories of those régimes, and requested that the revised report be appended to the Special Rapporteur's 1978 report, that it be printed and disseminated on the widest scale, and that the Economic and Social Council forward it to the General Assembly. The Commission further requested that the Special Rapporteur be mandated to update the list for the Commission every year. It forwarded to the Council for consideration a draft decision to this effect.

The Commission's recommendations were endorsed by the Council by decision 1980/131, adopted on 2 May by a recorded vote, requested by the United States, of 40 to 6, with 6 abstentions. The Council's Second (Social) Committee had approved the text on 29 April by a recorded vote, requested by the United Kingdom, of 34 to 5, with 7 abstentions.

Explaining its negative vote, the United States said the decision embodied ideas, such as an economic boycott, which it could not support, and the list referred to was biased and inequitably excluded certain nations.

On 2 September, the Sub-Commission mandated Mr. Khalifa to continue to update the list, subject to annual review, with details he considered appropriate and explanations or responses.

By resolution 35/32 of 14 November, the General Assembly took note of the revised report prepared by the Special Rapporteur and of the resolutions adopted by the Commission and the Sub-Commission. It vigorously condemned the collaboration of certain members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), Israel, other States, multinational corporations and other organizations with the South African regime, reaffirming that those which aided that régime became accomplices in the inhuman practices it perpetrated. It requested the Security Council urgently to consider complete and mandatory sanctions against South Africa under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter,<sup>16</sup> in particular a ban on technological assistance or collaboration in the manufacture of arms and military supplies and on loans, investments and trade, an embargo on oil and oil products and other strategic commodities, and cessation of nuclear collaboration. The Assembly appealed for extension of all possible co-operation to the liberation movements of southern Africa recognized by the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity, called for effective government action to put a stop to trading, manufacturing and investing activities in South Africa and Namibia, called for wide State and organizational publicity to be given to the Rapporteur's report, and decided to consider the question as a matter of high priority at its 1982 session.

Resolution 35/32 was adopted, by 117 votes to 10, with 15 abstentions, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, which approved the text on 27 October by 114 votes to 12, with 14 abstentions. The text was sponsored by Cuba, Somalia (on behalf of the African group of Member States at the United Nations) and Viet Nam.

Before the Committee approved the text, it approved, in a separate recorded vote, requested by the United Kingdom, of 92 to 21, with 24 abstentions, the paragraph condemning the collaboration of certain NATO members and other States and organizations with South Africa. On the appeal of several sponsors, Pakistan did not insist on an oral amendment it had submitted, recalling, in a preambular paragraph, the Eleventh Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers (Islamabad, 17-22 May).

In explanation of vote-and notwithstanding the affirmative votes of some of these States-Australia, Belgium, Chile, Colombia, Denmark (on behalf also of Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden), the Dominican Republic, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Israel, Liberia, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines, Singapore, Turkey and the United Kingdom expressed reservations on this paragraph as singling out certain countries in unjustified accusations as collaborators of the apartheid régime.

Several countries also expressed their opposition to sanctions, including the United Kingdom and the United States. Lesotho said it could not support such recommendations without seriously prejudicing its own vital interests. The United States did not agree that relations with South Africa were a hostile act, or that those engaged in such relations were accomplices in apartheid. Moreover, it said it strongly disagreed with nearly every paragraph of the resolution. The United Kingdom believed that sanctions were likely to damage neighbouring African countries. In the view of the Netherlands, which voted against the text, Western enterprises could make an important contribution to social change in South Africa by pursuing a non-discriminatory policy whenever possible.

The Nordic countries, which abstained, as well as Chile, the Dominican Republic, New Zealand and the United Kingdom, also could not support recommendations which did not respect the division of competence between different United Nations organs in accordance with the Charter.

Fiji and Portugal abstained because of how some paragraphs were worded and of the inclusion of irrelevant matters. Spain also considered some paragraphs exaggerated and discriminatory. Australia, the Bahamas, Belgium, Greece and the Netherlands considered some parts of the Special Rapporteur's report to be unfounded, lacking in balance or to have other shortcomings. The Dominican Republic, Greece and New Zealand could not support the call for government action against those listed in the report.

Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa

The Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts, established by the Commission on Human Rights in 1967 to examine the human rights situation in southern Africa, submitted two reports to the Commission in January 1980.

The first was a progress report, requested in 1979,<sup>17</sup> dealing with developments concerning policies and practices in violation of human rights in South Africa, Namibia and Zimbabwe and action taken to implement the Ad Hoc Working Group's recommendations since its establishment. The report also contained information on infringements of trade union rights in South Africa (see also p. 855), and on inquiries in respect of persons suspected of being guilty of apartheid or serious human rights violations in Namibia. It was prepared at meetings at Geneva from 14 to 25 January, based on oral statements and written communications from individuals and organizations, and United Nations and other documents. The Group expressed the view that the structure of apartheid in South Africa continued to be as described in previous reports. South Africa had strengthened its military occupation in Namibia, where the most significant developments during the period under review had been the continuing efforts to implement the proposal for a peaceful settlement. The human rights situation in Zimbabwe under the former illegal régime was outlined, as the country approached independence. The Group did not formulate any conclusions or recommendations, which were to be presented in a final report to the Commission in 1981.

A special report was submitted in accordance with a 1979 Commission request,<sup>18</sup> on the Group's investigation of cases of torture and murder of detainees in South Africa. It was based in the main on information contained in a report on such cases drawn up by the Special Committee against Apartheid, supplemented by first-hand oral and written statements gathered during a mission of inquiry to London from 30 July to 2 August 1979, and on information from various publications and reports; the South African Government had refused to collaborate with the Group. The Group's final report, considered at a session from 14 to 25 January 1980, examined 37 cases mentioned in the Special Committee's report relating to alleged perpetrators, abettors and accomplices involved in torture, murder or deprivation of liberty and fundamental rights. The Group concluded that torture by the security police continued to be common practice in South Africa with the apparent acquiescence of and cover-up by the Government. Although the charges of murder, torture and ill-treatment had been generally rejected, the Group suggested, on the basis of the evidence at its disposal, that the allegations were true and in general the Government had taken no steps against the torturers. It recommended that the Commission decide that the widest possible publicity should be given to the list of persons allegedly guilty of the crime of apartheid.

By a resolution of 26 February, the Commission requested the Group to continue to study the policies and practices violating human rights in South Africa, Namibia and, as appropriate, Zimbabwe, and to institute inquiries in respect of persons suspected of being guilty of apartheid or serious human rights violations in Namibia. The Commission also requested the Secretary-General to publish a summary of the Group's findings in the world's leading newspapers, together with the Commission's condemnation of the violations.

By another resolution of the same date, the Commission requested the Group to continue, in co-operation with the Special Committee against Apartheid, its compilation of the list of individuals, organizations, institutions and representatives of States deemed responsible for crimes of apartheid enumerated in the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid (see section above).

The General Assembly,

Recalling Its resolution 3068(XXVIII) of 30 November 1973, by which it adopted and opened for signature and ratification the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid, and its resolutions 3380(XXX) of 10 November 1975, 31/80 of 13 December 1976, 32/12 of 7 November 1977, 33/103 of 16 December 1978 and 34/27 of 15 November 1979,

Recalling also Commission on Human Rights resolutions 13(XXXIII) of 11 March 1977, 7(XXXIV) of 22 February 1978, 10(XXXV) of 5 March 1979 and 12(XXXVI) and 13(XXXVI) of 26 February 1980,

Convinced that the Declaration and the Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination as well as the programme of activities to be undertaken during the second half of the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 34/24 of 15 November 1979, are an important and constructive contribution to the struggle against apartheid, racism and all forms of racial discrimination,

Aware that the commemoration of the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, will encourage all States to intensify their efforts in supporting the colonially and racially oppressed peoples in their legitimate struggle to gain self-determination and independence, and to put an end to all practices of segregation and discrimination,

Reaffirming its conviction that apartheid constitutes a total negation of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and is a gross violation of human rights and a crime against humanity, seriously disturbing and threatening international peace and security,

Deeply concerned that the racist regime in South Africa has stepped up its policy of apartheid, repression, "bantustanization" and aggression and its continued illegal occupation of Namibia, thereby perpetuating on Namibian territory its odious policy of apartheid, racial discrimination and fragmentation,

Condemning the continued collaboration of certain States and transnational corporations with the racist regime of South Africa in the political, economic, military and other fields, thus encouraging it to persist in and intensify the brutal suppression of the people in South Africa,

Underlining that ratification of and accession to the Convention on a universal basis and the implementation of its provisions without any delay are necessary for its effectiveness and would be a useful contribution towards achieving the goals of the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination,

Taking into account Security Council resolution 418 (1977) of 4 November 1977 as a useful step towards achieving the purposes of the Convention,

Firmly convinced that the legitimate struggle of the oppressed peoples in southern Africa against colonialism, racism and apartheid and for the effective implementation of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence demands more than ever all necessary support by the international community and, in particular, further action by the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the status of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid;

2. Expresses its satisfaction with the increase in the number of States which have ratified the Convention or acceded thereto;

3. Commends the States parties to the Convention that have submitted their reports under article VII of the Convention and urges other States to do so as soon as possible, taking fully into account the guidelines prepared by the Working Group on the Implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid established in accordance with article IX of the Convention;

4. Strongly appeals once again to those States that have not yet become parties to the Convention to ratify it or to accede to it without delay;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts through appropriate channels to disseminate information on the Convention and its implementation with a view to further promoting ratification of or accession to the Convention;

6. Calls upon all States parties to implement fully article IV of the Convention by adopting legislative, judicial and administrative measures to prosecute, bring to trial and punish, in accordance with their jurisdiction, persons responsible for, or accused of, the acts defined in article II of the Convention;

7. Again calls upon all States parties and the competent United Nations organs to consider the conclusions and recommendations of the Working Group contained in its reports and to submit their views and comments to the Secretary-General;

8. Expresses its appreciation to the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts of the Commission on Human Rights for the compilation of the list of Individuals, organizations, institutions and representatives of States deemed responsible for crimes enumerated in article II of the Convention and Calls upon all States parties to give this list the widest possible dissemination;

9. Welcomes the efforts of the Commission on Human Rights to undertake the functions set out in article X of the Convention and invites the Commission to intensify, in co-operation with the Special Committee against Apartheid, its efforts to compile periodically the list of individuals, organizations, institutions and representatives of States deemed responsible for crimes enumerated in article II of the Convention, as well as those against whom or which legal proceedings have been undertaken;

10. Requests the Commission on Human Rights, in preparing the above-mentioned list, to take into account General Assembly resolution 33/23 of 29 November 1978 as well as the documents on this subject prepared by the Commission and its suborgans reaffirming, inter alia, that States giving assistance to the racist regime in South Africa become accomplices in the inhuman practices of racial discrimination and apartheid;

11. Calls upon the competent United Nations organs to continue to provide the Commission on Human Rights, through the Secretary-General, with information relevant to the periodic compilation of the above-mentioned list as well as with information concerning the obstacles which prevent the effective suppression and punishment of the crime of apartheid;

Resolution 35/32, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/588, adopted by Assembly on 14 November 1980, meeting 63, by 117 votes to 10, with 15 abstentions.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3382(XXX) and 3383(XXX) of 10 November 1975, 31/33 of 30 November 1976 and 33/23 of 29 November 1978,

Recalling also its resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, containing the Declaration and the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, and its resolution 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974, containing the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States,

Mindful of its resolution 3171(XXVIII) of 17 December 1973 relating to permanent sovereignty over natural resources of both developing countries and territories under colonial and foreign domination or subjected to the apartheid régime,

Recalling its resolutions on military collaboration with South Africa, as well as Security Council resolutions 418(1977) of 4 November 1977 and 421(1977) of 9 December 1977,

Bearing in mind Commission on Human Rights resolutions 7(XXXIII) of 4 March 1977, 6(XXXIV) of 22 February 1978, 9(XXXV) of 5 March 1979 and 11 (XXXVI) of 26 February 1980,

Recalling the relevant provisions of the Final Declaration of the Sixth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Havana from 3 to 9 September 1979,

Bearing in mind in particular the relevant decisions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its seventeenth ordinary session, held at Freetown from 1 to 4 July 1980, in particular the Declaration on Foreign Investment In South Africa, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-fifth ordinary session, held at Freetown from 18 to 28 June 1980,

Taking note of resolution 2(XXXIII) of 2 September 1980 of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities,

Taking note also of the revised report prepared by the Special Rapporteur on the adverse consequences for the enjoyment of human rights of political, military, economic and other forms of assistance given to colonial and racist régimes in southern Africa,

Reaffirming that any collaboration with the racist regime of South Africa constitutes a hostile act against the oppressed peoples of southern Africa and a contemptuous defiance of the United Nations and of the international community,

Considering that such collaboration strengthens the racist régime, encourages it to persist in its repressive and aggressive policies and seriously aggravates the situation in southern Africa, thereby constituting a threat to international peace and security,

Deeply concerned that the major Western and other trading partners of South Africa continue to collaborate with the racist régime and that their collaboration constitutes the main obstacle to the liquidation of the racist régime and the elimination of the inhuman and criminal system of apartheid,

Alarmed at the continued collaboration of certain Western States and Israel with the racist régime of South Africa in the nuclear field,

Deeply alarmed at reports that South Africa with Israeli co-operation has detonated a nuclear explosive device,

Regretting that the Security Council has not been in a position to take binding decisions to prevent any collaboration in the nuclear field with South Africa,

Recognizing that the that the utmost priority must be accorded to international action to secure the full implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations for the eradication of apartheid and the liberation of the peoples of southern Africa,

Conscious of the continuing need to mobilize world public opinion against the political, military, economic and other forms of assistance given to the racist régime of South Africa,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the oppressed peoples of southern Africa to self-determination, independence and the enjoyment of the natural resources of their territories;

2. Again reaffirms the right of those same peoples to dispose of those resources for their greater well-being and to obtain just reparation for the exploitation, depletion, loss or depreciation of those natural resources, including reparations for the exploitation and abuse of their human resources;

3. Vigorously condemns the collaboration of certain members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Israel and other States, as well as those multinational corporations and other organizations which maintain or continue to increase their collaboration with the racist régime of South Africa, especially in the political, economic, military and nuclear fields, thus encouraging that régime to persist in its inhuman and criminal policy of brutal oppression of the peoples of southern Africa and denial of their human rights;

4. Reaffirms once again that States and organizations which give assistance to the racist régime of South Africa become accomplices in the inhuman practices of racial discrimination, colonialism and apartheid perpetrated by this régime;

5. Requests the Security Council urgently to consider complete and mandatory sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations against the racist regime of South Africa, in particular:

(a) The prohibition of all technological assistance or collaboration in the manufacture of arms and military supplies in South Africa;

(b) The cessation of all collaboration with South Africa in the nuclear field;

(c) The prohibition of all loans to, and all investments in, South Africa and the cessation of any trade with South Africa;

(d) An embargo on the supply of petroleum, petroleum products and other strategic commodities to South Africa;

6. Appeals to all States, the specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to extend all possible co-operation to the liberation movements of southern Africa recognized by the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity;

7. Expresses its appreciation to the Special Rapporteur for his revised report;

8. Calls upon the Governments of the countries where the banks, transnational corporations and other organizations named and listed in the revised report are based, to take effective action to put a stop to their trading, manufacturing and investing activities in the territory of South Africa as well as in the Territory of Namibia illegally occupied by the racist Pretoria régime;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the revised report to the Special Committee against Apartheid, the United Nations Council for Namibia, other bodies concerned within the United Nations system and regional international organizations;

10. Calls upon all States, relevant specialized agencies and regional, intergovernmental and other organizations to give wide publicity to the report;

11. Invites the Commission on Human Rights to give a high priority at its thirty-seventh session to the consideration of the above-mentioned report;

12. Decides to consider this item at its thirty-seventh session as a matter of high priority in the light of any recommendations which the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, the Commission on Human Rights, the Economic and Social Council and the Special Committee against Apartheid may wish to submit to it.

Measures against ideologies and practices based on racial discrimination, hatred and terror

Although the question of measures to be taken against ideologies and practices based on terror or incitement to racial discrimination or any form of group hatred had been included in the agenda of the Commission on Human Rights since 1972, its consideration had been repeatedly postponed until the Commission's February/March 1980 session, when the Commission heard statements expressing concern about a resurgence of the ideology of fascism in certain countries and activities of a number of Fascist and neo-Fascist organizations; another statement sought to stimulate the Commission's interest in discrimination based on sexual preference.

On 15 December, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, the General Assembly adopted, by a recorded vote of 124 to 0, with 18 abstentions, resolution 35/200, by which it condemned all forms of totalitarian ideologies and practices based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror, including Nazi, Fascist and neo-Fascist activities, and those based on the systematic denial of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

The Assembly urged all States to give due consideration to implementing the provisions of a 1971 resolution (2839(XXVI))<sup>19</sup> by which it had urged States to take legislative and other measures, with due regard for the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>20</sup> to prevent activities of Nazi and racist organizations and groups. States were especially urged to give due consideration to taking the necessary measures against activities of groups and organizations practising nazism, fascism, neo-fascism or other ideologies based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror, in accordance with national constitutional systems, and to provide the Secretary-General, for a report, with their comments on such problems and on measures that should be taken to eradicate such ideologies. The Assembly asked the Commission to consider this subject at its 1981 session.

On 4 December, the Third Committee approved the resolution by a recorded vote, requested by the Ukrainian SSR, of 105 to 0, with 16 abstentions. The text was sponsored by Afghanistan, Angola, Benin, Bulgaria, the Congo, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mozambique, Poland, Seychelles, Togo, the Ukrainian SSR, Viet Nam and Zimbabwe; it was revised by the sponsors and contained a number of other amendments. Australia, Costa Rica, Greece and the Netherlands jointly introduced amendments to the title and several paragraphs, which were orally subamended by Madagascar and further orally amended by the United States.

The Committee approved, by 51 votes to 29, with 35 abstentions, a Malagasy subamendment adding, after the words "totalitarian ideologies and practices" wherever such wording appeared, the words "based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror." References to nazism and fascism were replaced, by the four-power amendments, by references to Nazi, Fascist and neo-Fascist activities. Similar amendments, adopted by 86 votes to 0, with 25 abstentions, changed the resolution's title to "Measures to be taken against Nazi, Fascist and neo-Fascist activities and all other forms of totalitarian ideologies and practices based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror."

At the request of Greece, recorded votes were taken on the remaining amendments. By 84 votes to 0, with 31 abstentions, the words "aggression, foreign occupation" were added after the words "victims of" in a preambular paragraph referring to the suffering, destruction and death of millions of victims of nazism and fascism. A provision emphasizing that those ideologies in all their manifestations constituted a threat to world peace and international security was changed to one emphasizing that they might jeopardize it; consequentially, the words "as well as" in the second half of that provision were replaced by "and constitute" an obstacle to friendly relations between States and peoples and to the promotion and observance of human rights. These two amendments were adopted by votes of 49 to 33, with 29 abstentions, and 50 to 17, with 36 abstentions, respectively. In the eighth preambular paragraph, a reference to the importance of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was inserted by 109 votes to 0.

At the request of Madagascar, a separate vote was taken on the retention of the words "and those based on the systematic denial of human rights and fundamental freedoms" in the ninth preambular paragraph, by which the Assembly bore in mind that all ideologies so based and all totalitarian ideologies in question were totally incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations and a number of other specific United Nations instruments. The words were retained by 81 votes to 15, with 12 abstentions. In the same paragraph, the references to nazism, fascism, neo-fascism and all related ideologies and practices based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror were replaced with a reference to all totalitarian ideologies and practices, including Nazi, Fascist and neo-Fascist activities and those based on the systematic denial of human rights and fundamental freedoms, by 104 votes to 0, with 4 abstentions. The tenth preambular paragraph was adopted by 102 votes to 1, with 10 abstentions. Before amendment, it had expressed deep concern at the increasing activities by groups and organizations in national and international dimensions propagating and practising nazism, fascism, neo-fascism and all related ideologies based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror. The amendments to operative paragraph 1, condemning all forms of totalitarian ideologies and practices in question, were adopted by 109 votes to 0, with 2 abstentions.

The Committee rejected, by 36 votes in favour to 54 against, with 23 abstentions, the replacement of paragraph 2 by one inviting all States to give due consideration to implementing resolution 2839(XXVI) in accordance with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It also rejected, by 25 votes in favour to 58 against, with 29 abstentions, replacing paragraphs 3 to 6 with a new operative paragraph requesting the Secretary-General to bring the contents of this resolution to the attention of Member States, specialized agencies and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations. At the request of Morocco, a recorded vote was taken on the word "all" appearing in paragraph 2 urging all States to give due consideration to implementing the 1971 resolution on this subject, and, at Jamaica's request, on the phrase "in accordance with the national constitutional systems" in the same paragraph, urging all States to give due consideration to taking (rather than urging all States to take-a United States oral subamendment) the necessary measures against the prescribed activities, in accordance with States' constitutional systems. They were retained by votes of 44 to 22, with 31 abstentions, and 78 to 3, with 24 abstentions, respectively. Paragraph 2 as a whole was then approved by a recorded vote, requested by Denmark, of 75 to 0, with 34 abstentions. Also in separate votes, the Committee approved the word "all" in paragraph 3, requesting all States to provide the Secretary-General with comments, by 70 votes to 0, with 31 abstentions, and the entire paragraph by 80 votes to 3, with 29 abstentions.

Speaking in explanation of vote on the resolution, the United States said it had abstained because it felt a global approach to nazism, fascism, neo-fascism and other totalitarianism forms was missing, and believed the best way to curb such ideologies was through the free exchange of ideas rather than suppression of dissident views. Denmark and Norway abstained because of the reference to resolution 2839(XXVI) which mentioned the 1968 Convention on the Non-Applicability of Statutory Limitations to War Crimes and Crimes against Humanity," to which they were not parties because of the broad scope of crimes covered and political elements reflected in it. Australia and the United Kingdom abstained, questioning the sincerity of the resolution. The United Kingdom believed its original motive to be propagandistic; it would have preferred a more balanced and unpoliticized text. Australia was not convinced that the issues dealt with were of such burning importance as claimed and believed that broader problems should be addressed in considering the question of totalitarianism. Albania, despite its support of the resolution, expressed dissatisfaction that the text did not deal with the political, economic and social causes of resurgent and increasing fascism and nazism and the fascist activities of imperialism and social imperialism. Albania did not think that the measures called for would produce concrete results.

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the United Nations emerged from the struggle against nazism, fascism, aggression and foreign occupation, and that the peoples expressed their resolve in the Charter of the United Nations to save future generations from the scourge of war,

Bearing in mind the suffering, destruction and death of millions of victims of aggression, foreign occupation, nazism and fascism,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles laid down in the Charter, which are aimed at maintaining international peace and security, developing friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principal of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and achieving international co-operation,

Emphasizing that nazism and fascism in all their manifestations may jeopardize world peace and international security, and constitute an obstacle to friendly relations between States and peoples and to the promotion and observance of human rights,

Reaffirming that the prosecution and punishment of war crimes and crimes against peace and humanity, as laid down in General Assembly resolutions 3(I) of 13 February 1946 and 95(I) of 11 December 1946, constitute a universal commitment for all States,

Recalling its resolutions 2331(XXII) of 18 December 1967, 2438(XXIII) of 19 December 1968, 2545(XXIV) of 11 December 1969, 2713(XXV) of 15 December 1970, 2839(XXVI) of 18 December 1971 and 34/24 of 15 November 1979,

Recalling also the Declaration on Social Progress and Development, the United Nations Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, Underlining the importance of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide and other relevant international instruments,

Bearing in mind that all totalitarian ideologies and practices based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror, including Nazi, Fascist and neo-Fascist activities, and those based on the systematic denial of human rights and fundamental freedoms, are totally incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security, the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, and the Declaration on the Preparation of Societies for Life in Peace,

Deeply concerned at the increase of activities at the national and international levels which propagate totalitarian forms of ideology and practices based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror, including Nazi, Fascist and neo-Fascist activities,

1. Condemns all forms of totalitarian ideologies and practices based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror, including Nazi, Fascist and neo-Fascist activities, and those based on systematic denial of human rights and fundamental freedoms:

2. Urges all States to give due consideration to implementing the provisions laid down in General Assembly resolution 2839(XXVI) in accordance with the provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and especially to taking the necessary measures against activities of groups and organizations practising nazism, fascism, neo-fascism or other ideologies based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror, in accordance with the national constitutional systems;

3. Requests all States to provide the Secretary-General with their comments on those problems and on measures that should be taken at the national and international levels to eradicate nazism, fascism, neo-fascism and related ideologies based on racial intolerance, hatred and terror;

4. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to consider this subject at its thirty-seventh session under the agenda item entitled "Question of measures to be taken against ideologies and practices based on terror or incitement to racial discrimination or any form of group hatred;"

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session, through the Economic and Social Council, a report in the light of the discussion to take place in the Commission on Human Rights and on the basis of comments provided by States.

Other matters concerning prevention of discrimination and protection of minorities

Elimination of religious intolerance

At its session in February/March 1980, the Commission on Human Rights, through an informal working group open to all its members, continued work on a draft declaration on the elimination of all forms of intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief, requested by the General Assembly in 1974.<sup>22</sup>

Agreement having been reached on the text of the preamble and on the first three articles of the draft declaration at previous sessions,<sup>23</sup> discussion focused on articles IV and V drawn up by a working group 'set up by the Commission in 1974. Article IV was a statement that States were to take effective measures to prevent and eliminate discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, make all efforts to enact or rescind legislation necessary to prohibit discrimination and take all appropriate measures to combat intolerance on grounds of religion or other beliefs. Article IV, and the first paragraph of article V stating that parents or legal guardians had the right to organize family life in accordance with their religion or belief, were adopted by consensus.

On 12 March, the Commission adopted a resolution by which it approved the group's report and decided to continue, as a matter of highest priority, its work on the declaration in 1981.

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted a resolution by which it welcomed the progress made in drafting the declaration, urged the Commission to complete its work with a view to submitting a single draft to the Assembly at its regular 1981 session, through the Economic and Social Council, and decided to give it high priority.

Resolution 35/125 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, where, on 7 November, the text was similarly approved, as sponsored by 36 powers (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Studies

Duties to the community and limitations on human rights

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities concluded its consideration of, and expressed deep appreciation to Special Rapporteur Erica-Irene A. Daes (Greece) for, the study on the individual's duties to the community and the limitations on human rights and freedoms under article 29 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.<sup>24</sup> It requested her to present the study to the Commission in 1981 and proposed that the Commission recommend to the Economic and Social Council that it: decide that the study should be printed and given the widest possible distribution, including in Arabic; endorse the study's recommendation that teaching and education in human rights be developed at all levels; and authorize the Sub-Commission to elaborate a draft declaration confirming common United Nations principles and standards defining limitations and restrictions on the exercise of certain human rights, as the study recommended.

The Commission, by a resolution of 29 February, had asked the Sub-Commission to continue examining the subject of the study and report to it on its conclusions and recommendations. By that resolution, it also appealed to Governments to encourage and support individuals and organs of society exercising their rights and responsibilities to promote the effective observance of human rights, and emphasized that, in the exercise of his rights and freedoms, everyone was to be subject only to such limitations as were determined in the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration, the International Covenants on Human Rights<sup>25</sup> and other relevant instruments; unlawful limitations or persecution of anyone exercising those rights was at variance with States' obligations under those instruments.

Status of the individual in contemporary international law

Endorsing a recommendation contained in the study on the individual's duties to the community (see preceding subsection), the Sub-Commission proposed that the Commission recommend that the Economic and Social Council authorize the Sub-Commission to appoint Mrs. Daes as Special Rapporteur to prepare a study on the status of the individual in contemporary international human rights law.

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the need to achieve international co-operation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion, as provided in the Charter of the United Nations,

Mindful of article 18 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which proclaim that everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion,

Convinced of the need for the elaboration of an international instrument on the elimination of all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief,

Recalling its resolution 3267(XXIX) of 10 December 1974, in which it requested the Commission on Human Rights to submit to the General Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council, a single draft Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief,

Recalling also Its resolutions 33/106 of 16 December 1978 and 34/43 of 23 November 1979,

Taking note with appreciation of Commission on Human Rights resolution 35(XXXVI) of 12 March 1980, in which the Commission decided to establish again, at its thirty-seventh session, an open-ended working group and to allot more time to that working group in order that it might complete the formulation of a draft Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief,

Taking note also of Economic and Social Council decision 1980/140 of 2 May 1980 concerning meeting services for the Commission on Human Rights,

1. Welcomes the progress so far made by the Commission on Human Rights at its thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth sessions in its drafting of the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief and its decision to give the matter the highest priority and to complete the formulation of that draft at its thirty-seventh session;

2. Urges the Commission on Human Rights to complete its work on the matter at its thirty-seventh session with a view to submitting to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session, through the Economic and Social Council, a single draft Declaration,

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its thirty-sixth session the item entitled "Elimination of all forms of religious intolerance" and to give it high priority.

Violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms

Human rights in the territories occupied by Israel

During 1980, the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly repeated their calls for a halt to violations of human rights in the territories occupied by Israel since the 1967 war. Also, the Assembly's three-member Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories reported on evidence of what it found to be continued violations.

Decisions of the Commission on Human Rights

On 13 February, the Commission on Human Rights adopted two resolutions on the question of the violation of human rights in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine.

By the first, it called on Israel to take immediate steps for the return of the Palestinians and other displaced inhabitants to their homes and property. It declared that Israel's grave breaches of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (fourth Geneva Convention of 12 August 1949) were war crimes and an affront to humanity. The Commission condemned and demanded that Israel desist forthwith from a number of specific Israeli policies and practices, as well as administrative and legislative measures taken to encourage, promote and expand the establishment of settlers' colonies, which further demonstrated Israel's determination to annex those territories. The Commission reaffirmed that all measures to change the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure or status of any part of the territories, including Jerusalem, were null and void and that Israel's settlement policy constituted a flagrant violation of the fourth Geneva Convention and United Nations resolutions. It demanded that Israel cease all torture and ill-treatment of Arab detainees and prisoners, calling on Israel to release those imprisoned as a result of their struggle for self-determination and liberation of their territories, and, pending their release, to accord them prisoner-of-war status. The Commission also renewed its request to the Secretary-General to collect statistical information on detainees and make it available to the Commission in 1981. It again condemned the destruction of Quneitra perpetrated prior to Israel's withdrawal from that Syrian city in 1974.

The Commission reiterated its call on all States and international organizations not to recognize any changes carried out by Israel in the occupied territories and to avoid actions or aid which Israel might use in its pursuit of annexation, colonization or any other policies and practices referred to in the resolution. The Commission called on Israel to report to it through the Secretary-General in 1981 on its implementation of the resolution.

By the second resolution, the Commission expressed deep concern at the consequences of Israel's refusal to apply fully and effectively the fourth Geneva Convention to the occupied territories, including Jerusalem, reaffirmed that the Convention was applicable to the territories, condemned Israel's failure to acknowledge that applicability, called on it to abide by its obligations thereunder and under international law, and urged States parties to the Convention to exert all efforts to ensure respect for and compliance with its provisions in the territories.

On 14 February, the Commission adopted a resolution by which it affirmed the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination without external interference, to the establishment of a fully independent and sovereign State in Palestine, and to return to their homes and property, and called for their return in the exercise of their right to self-determination. The Commission recognized their right to regain their rights by all means in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations. Noting with concern that the 1978 Camp David accords had been concluded outside the framework of the United Nations and without the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), it rejected those provisions of the accords which ignored, infringed, violated or denied the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and which envisaged and condoned continued Israeli occupation of the territories occupied since 1967, and declared that they and other agreements had no validity in so far as they purported to determine the future of the Palestinian people and the occupied territories. The Commission strongly condemned all partial agreements and separate treaties which constituted a flagrant violation of the rights of the Palestinian people, Charter principles and resolutions adopted in various international forums on the Palestinian issue, and urged all States and international organizations to support those people through its representative, PLO.

The inalienable right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, national independence, territorial integrity and national unity and sovereignty without external interference was also reaffirmed in a Commission resolution of 15 February on the right to self-determination (see p. 837).

Decisions of the Sub-Commission

On 11 September, the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities adopted three resolutions relating to human rights in the occupied Arab territories.

By the first, it rejected aspersions cast by Israel on the Sub-Commission's objectivity, asked its Chairman to appoint up to three members to visit and report on conditions in Israeli prisons and detention camps in which Palestinian Arab prisoners and detainees were held, and invited Israel to co-operate with them.

By the second resolution, it condemned, upon reports on the conditions suffered by Palestinian detainees and prisoners in Israeli prisons, Israeli violations of the Charter and other relevant United Nations instruments on human rights, and called on Israel to release all Palestinian political detainees or prisoners and ameliorate their conditions towards meeting international standards.

By the third, it urged Israeli authorities to withdraw from all the occupied Arab territories, including Jerusalem, and to stop immediately all excavation and works aimed at the destruction of the essential physical character, demographic composition, historical and institutional structures and status of the Holy City. It deeply deplored Israeli violations of human rights in the territories, including Jerusalem, strongly disapproved of Israel's refusal to implement the relevant United Nations decisions on Jerusalem, and also requested the Commission and the Economic and Social Council to take, as a matter of urgency, the necessary measures to implement this resolution. The Secretary-General was asked to update and submit to the Sub-Commission in 1981 a report on human rights violations by Israeli authorities in the occupied territories.

Report of the Special Committee on Israeli Practices and action by the General Assembly

The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories, in its 1980 report to the General Assembly, stated that Israel had continued its policy of annexation, implemented by the expropriation of property, the establishment of new settlements and the expansion of existing ones. With regard to the treatment of the civilian population, the Committee noted that acts of violence by the Israeli authorities had remarkably increased. No serious efforts had been undertaken to improve inhuman conditions in prisons or the treatment of detainees. (For details, see p. 416.)

On 11 December, the Assembly adopted six resolutions in connexion with the Committee's report. By resolution 35/122A (see p. 417), the Assembly again called on Israel to comply with the fourth Geneva Convention in Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem, and urged once more all States parties to that Convention to exert all efforts to ensure respect for and compliance with its provisions in those territories. By resolution 35/122 B (see p. 417), the Assembly reiterated these provisions, determined that Israel's measures and actions to change the legal status, geographical nature and demographic composition of the occupied territories had no legal validity, and called on Israel to desist from such actions. By resolution 35/122 C (see p. 418), the Assembly called on Israel to allow the Special Committee access to the occupied territories, condemned specific Israeli policies and practices in the occupied territories and demanded that they cease, and asked the Committee to consult with the International Committee of the Red Cross to ensure the safeguarding of the welfare and human rights of the population and to continue investigating the treatment of detained civilians in the territories. By resolution 35/122 D (see p. 418), the Assembly called on Israel to rescind measures taken in expelling and imprisoning the Mayors of Hebron and Halhul and in expelling the Sharia Judge of Hebron, and to facilitate their immediate return. The Assembly, by resolution 35/122 E (see p. 418), determined that all Israeli legislative and administrative measures and actions that purported to alter the character and legal status of the Syrian Golan Heights were null and void and constituted a flagrant violation of international law and the fourth Geneva Convention, and called on Israel to desist from enacting such legislation. By resolution 35/122 F (see p. 418), the Assembly condemned Israeli policies and practices against Palestinian students and faculty and the systematic repression of universities in the occupied Palestinian territories, demanded that Israel ensure the freedom of those institutions, and requested the Security Council to convene to take measures to ensure that Israel rescinded its measures against the Palestinian Mayors and the Sharia Judge and facilitated their immediate return.

On 5 December, the Assembly, by resolution 35/75, condemned Israeli policy resulting in the deterioration of the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the occupied territories (see p. 423).

By resolution 35/110 of the same date, the Assembly reaffirmed that Israeli measures to exploit the human, natural and other resources in the occupied territories were illegal and called on Israel to desist from such measures and to meet just claims for restitution of and compensation for the exploitation, loss and depletion of or damages to those resources (see p. 423).

(For further information on General Assembly consideration of and action related to the Israeli-occupied territories, see p. 416.)

Other actions

On 1 March, the Security Council, by resolution 465(1980), strongly deplored Israel's decision to prohibit the free travel of the Mayor of Hebron in order to appear before the Council and requested Israel to permit his free travel to United Nations Headquarters for that purpose, determined that Israeli settlement policy in the occupied territories was a flagrant violation of the fourth Geneva Convention, and requested a Council Commission to continue to examine the situation relating to those settlements (see p. 409). Reporting in November, the Commission recommended that Israel's attention again be drawn to the disastrous consequences of its settlement policy and, with regard to Jerusalem, that the Council urge Israel to implement fully the relevant resolutions (see p. 416).

On 5 June, the Council, by resolution 471(1980), condemned assassination attempts against the mayors of three West Bank cities and called for the prosecution of the perpetrators, called on Israel to compensate the victims, and expressed deep concern that Israel had failed to provide adequate protection to the civilian population in the occupied territories (see p. 414). On 8 and 20 May, the Council, by resolutions 468(1980) and 469(1980), called on Israel to rescind the illegal measures in expelling the Mayor and the Sharia Judge of Hebron and the Mayor of Halhul (see pp. 411 and 413). On 19 December, by resolution 484(1980), it declared it imperative that the Mayors be enabled to return to their homes and resume their responsibilities (see p. 425).

Also during 1980, the Secretary-General and the President of the Security Council received a number of communications from Member States relating to the situation in the occupied territories.. For information on these communications as well as a more detailed account of consideration by various United Nations bodies of the situation in the Israeli-occupied territories, including the status of Jerusalem, see the subchapter beginning on p. 398.

Human rights situation in Chile

During 1980, the Commission on Human Rights, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly dealt again with the human rights situation in Chile. The Special Rapporteur studying the question reported to the Commission at its February/March session, bringing up to date his 1979 report to the Assembly,<sup>26</sup> and, further updating it, submitted his second report to the Assembly later in the year. The Commission and the Assembly adopted resolutions by which they expressed concern that the situation had not improved and urged the Chilean authorities to respect human rights. The Assembly reiterated its appeal for contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for Chile.

Decisions of the Commission on Human Rights and the Economic and Social Council

By a resolution of 29 February, the Commission on Human Rights expressed deep concern about the conclusions in the report of the Special Rapporteur (see following section) that generally the situation of human rights in Chile had not improved and in a number of areas had even deteriorated, and at the whereabouts of the numerous persons who had disappeared since 1973. The Commission strongly urged the Chilean authorities to respect and promote human rights in accordance with their obligations under various international instruments and to take a number of concrete steps that would enable the Commission to consider terminating the mandate of the Special Rapporteur: restore democratic institutions and constitutional safeguards; take measures to prevent torture and other inhuman or degrading treatment and prosecute and punish those responsible for such practices; restore fully freedom of expression, information, assembly and association, as well as trade union rights, right of amparo (similar to habeas corpus) and the economic, social and cultural rights of the indigenous population; and allow Chileans freely to enter and leave the country. The Commission urged the Chilean authorities to investigate, clarify and inform relatives of the fate of persons reported to have disappeared for political reasons, and to institute criminal proceedings against and punish those responsible. It urged the authorities scrupulously to respect the duty of their judiciary to employ fully its constitutional power under habeas corpus and amparo. Extending the mandate of the Special Rapporteur for another year, it requested him to deal in his report to the General Assembly later in the year also with the problem of disappeared persons in Chile, and again urged the Chilean authorities to co-operate fully with him.

The Economic and Social Council on 2 May, by decision 1980/129, approved the Commission's decision to extend the Rapporteur's mandate and asked the Assembly to arrange for adequate financial resources and staff to implement the Commission's 29 February resolution. The Council adopted this decision by a recorded vote of 38 to 3, with 12 abstentions. The Second (Social) Committee had approved the decision on 29 April by a recorded vote of 32 to 3, with 8 abstentions; the text had been proposed by the Commission.

Speaking in explanation of vote, Chile stated that the Commission had singled out Chile in a selective and arbitrary manner, violating the principle of the legal equality of States, and had maintained that discrimination for purely political reasons. France stressed that the Special Rapporteur should not have a permanent' mandate and observed that it might reconsider its position, based on the situation in Chile during the coming year.

Report of the Special Rapporteur

The Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly on 23 October the second report of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Chile. The Special Rapporteur stated that, in certain respects, the human rights situation had deteriorated since his 1979 report, with an increase in the persecution of and threats against persons and institutions criticizing the Government. The Roman Catholic Church, whose actions in defence of human rights in Chile had been recognized by the United Nations, had been subjected to constant persecution. The state of emergency, in force for seven years, had been made more restrictive by new provisions adopted in 1980 authorizing the Government to assign persons, by administrative order, to residence in isolated places for three months. In addition, new legislation empowering the Minister of the Interior to hold detainees incommunicado for 20 days had encouraged arrests without legal warrant and detention of persons in secret places, ill-treated or tortured and without legal protection. The number of individual and collective arrests had increased over previous years. Although some judges had investigated cases of manslaughter resulting from torture and cases of disappearance, those responsible had never been sentenced. The courts had also failed to protect the population against arbitrary arrest, and the ineffectiveness of the legal remedy of amparo for human rights violations had become apparent.

The Special Rapporteur indicated that no solution had been reached in the case of hundreds of disappeared persons. He also pointed to continuing censorship, limitation of freedom of association affecting political parties and trade unions, unemployment problems and the extreme poverty of the indigenous populations, who were also threatened with the loss of their cultural and social identity.

The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Assembly call on Chile to: terminate the state of emergency; restore to the judiciary all its powers, enabling it to protect detainees and investigate human rights violations; restore the exercise of political rights and the full enjoyment of trade union rights, freedom of expression, university freedoms and freedom of assembly; respect freedom of information without restrictions and the right of citizens to enter and leave the country; inform the families concerned and the international community about the fate of missing persons, punish the culprits and compensate the victims' families; and conform in its economic and social plans and programmes to the international norms and instruments to which it had acceded, taking into account also the rights of ethnic minorities.

In a letter of 10 November, Chile reiterated that it did not recognize the legitimacy of ad hoc entities established to deal only with the human rights situation in Chile, that such selective and discriminatory arrangements were in violation of the Charter of the United Nations, especially the principle of the legal equality of States, and that, consequently, it would give no consideration to the report.

Action by the General Assembly

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/188, on the protection of human rights in Chile, by a recorded vote of 95 to 8, with 39 abstentions. By this resolution, the Assembly, expressing its grave concern at the deterioration of the human rights situation in Chile, in particular concerning the alteration of the traditional democratic legal system and its institutions and the repression of the human rights activities of the Catholic Church and of academic life, urged the Chilean authorities: to respect and promote human rights in accordance with their obligations under various international instruments and to take concrete steps as outlined in the 29 February resolution of the Human Rights Commission; to investigate the fate of persons who had disappeared for political reasons, inform their relatives and institute criminal proceedings against those responsible; to respect the right and duty of the judiciary to employ without restriction its constitutional power under habeas corpus and amparo; and to co-operate with the Special Rapporteur. The Assembly invited the Commission to extend his mandate for another year.

The Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee approved the text-sponsored by Algeria, Benin, Cuba, Denmark, Ireland, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mexico, Mozambique, the Netherlands, Nicaragua, Sao Tome and Principe, Sweden, Viet Nam and Yugoslavia on 3 December by a recorded vote of 90 to 8, with 37 abstentions.

Chile rejected the resolution, regarding it as immoral, unjust, discriminatory and selective, since the United Nations had not taken the same measures in cases of other countries where violations of human rights were massive, flagrant and systematic. In its opinion, the resolution ignored realities and violated the principles of co-operation and of non-interference in internal affairs as it touched issues not related to human rights, such as the autonomous judicial power and the plebiscite whereby the new constitution had recently been approved-referred to in a preambular paragraph indicating that restrictions and lack of popular participation in the preparation of Chile's draft constitution did not enable the plebiscite's results to be an authentic expression of the will of the Chileans. Chile would refuse to co-operate with the United Nations as long as it did not receive treatment according to Charter principles.

Speaking in explanation of vote, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Portugal, the United States and Venezuela, notwithstanding their support, and Colombia which abstained, felt the Commission had been selective. The United States added that, although human rights deficiencies remained, there had been improvement in Chile since 1977-ignored in the resolution. Canada supported the resolution, but with reservations on the reference to a constitutional procedure in a Member State.

United Nations Trust Fund for Chile

The five-member Board of Trustees of the United Nations Trust Fund for Chile held its second session at Geneva from 4 to 8 February 1980. The Trust Fund had been established in 1978 as a voluntary fund to receive contributions and distribute, through established channels, humanitarian, legal and financial aid to persons whose human rights had been violated by detention or imprisonment in Chile, to forced exiles and to relatives of such persons.<sup>27</sup>

During its second session, the Board of Trustees reviewed the information contained in the 1979 reports of the Special Rapporteur and the Expert on the Question of the Fate of Missing and Disappeared Persons in Chile<sup>28</sup> and concluded that there was an urgent need to provide immediate assistance to persons who had suffered serious long-term and substantial damage as a result of human rights violations and to their families. It decided that, in view of the limited funds, first consideration would be given to persons within Chile, and subsequently to those forced to live outside the country. The Board also made recommendations to the Secretary-General for grants to be awarded.

In a report to the General Assembly, the Secretary-General stated that, as at 6 October 1980, contributions made to the Fund by Cyprus ($1,000), Denmark ($25,000), the Netherlands ($50,000), Norway ($25,000), the Philippines ($250), Sweden ($50,000) and Yugoslavia ($5,000) totalled $156,250.

On the Board's recommendation, grants from the Fund totalling $101,250 had been made. Expenses incurred had amounted to $24,060, and $8,800 had been earmarked to finance programme support costs.

On 15 December, the Assembly adopted a resolution by which, noting that violations of human rights took place in various countries, it requested the Commission on Human Rights to study, at its 1981 session, the possibility of extending the Fund's mandate to study criteria for distribution, through established aid channels, of voluntary aid to persons not covered by the mandates of other United Nations trust funds whose human rights had been grossly and flagrantly violated, to those forced to leave their countries as a result, and to relatives of such persons. It requested the Economic and Social Council to submit to the Assembly's 1981 regular session recommendations concerning extending the mandate of the existing United Nations Trust Fund for Chile to become a United Nations Trust Fund for Victims of Gross and Flagrant Violations of Human Rights.

Resolution 35/190 was adopted by a recorded vote of 57 to 39, with 46 abstentions. The Third Committee, on 3 December, approved the text, sponsored by Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden, by a recorded vote, requested by the Federal Republic of Germany, of 48 to 40, with 46 abstentions.

Speaking in the Committee at the time of the voting, a number of countries, including India, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Poland, the USSR and Yugoslavia, opposed the resolution as premature. Poland and the USSR expressed the belief that it would not help the human rights situation in Chile, but would hamper the Trust Fund's operation. In the USSR's view, which was shared by Argentina, the proposed fund's vague criteria left room for misuse, as it was not clear who would be the beneficiaries. Egypt, India and Nigeria also felt that the issue of who the beneficiaries would be needed clarification.

The General Assembly,

Conscious of its responsibility to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, and determined to remain vigilant with regard to violations of human rights wherever they occur,

Noting that Governments have an obligation to protect and promote human rights and to carry out responsibilities they have undertaken under various international instruments,

Recalling its resolutions 31/124 of 16 December 1976, 32/118 of 16 December 1977, 33/175 of 20 December 1978 and 34/179 of 17 December 1979 on the protection of human rights in Chile, and 33/173 of 20 December 1978 on disappeared persons,

Recalling also Commission on Human Rights resolution 11(XXXV) of 6 March 1979 on violations of human rights in Chile. In which the Commission, inter alia, decided to appoint a Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Chile.

Deploring that the Chilean authorities have consistently refused to co-operate with the Special Rapporteur appointed by the Commission on Human Rights,

Expressing its regret that, according to the report of the Special Rapporteur, there has not been an improvement in the human rights situation in Chile, and that in certain respects it has, on the contrary, deteriorated,

Considering that the lack of popular participation in the preparation of the draft constitution and the existing restrictions, under the state of emergency, on the freedoms of assembly, association, expression and information do not enable the result of the recent plebiscite to be regarded as an authentic expression of the will of the Chilean people,

/Voting with increasing concern that the Chilean authorities continue to ignore the repeated appeal of the International community reflected in the various resolutions of the General Assembly and other international organs and have failed to take urgent and effective measures to investigate and clarify the fate of persons who have disappeared,

Expressing deep concern that the whereabouts of the numerous persons who have disappeared are still unknown and that this has caused grief and often hardship to their relatives,

1. Commends the Special Rapporteur for his report on the situation of human rights in Chile, prepared in accordance with Commission on Human Rights resolution 21(XXXVI) of 29 February 1980;

2. Requests the Commission on Human Rights at its thirty-seventh session to study thoroughly the report of the Special Rapporteur;

3. Expresses its grave concern at the deterioration of the human rights situation in Chile as reported by the Special Rapporteur, in comparison with the same period last year, in particular concerning the alteration of the traditional democratic legal system and its institutions and the repression of the human rights activities of the Catholic Church and of academic life;

4. Strongly urges the Chilean authorities to respect and promote human rights in accordance with their obligations under various international instruments and, in particular, to take concrete steps as outlined in Commission on Human Rights resolution 21(XXXVI);

5. Concludes, on the basis of the report of the Special Rapporteur, that continued vigilance with regard to the human rights situation in Chile is warranted;

6. Expresses its deep concern about the lack of information on the numerous persons who have disappeared, which continues to be a gross and flagrant violation of human rights;

7. Urges once more the Chilean authorities to investigate and clarify the fate of persons who have disappeared for political reasons, to inform relatives of the outcome and to institute criminal proceedings against those responsible for such disappearances;

8. Urges the Chilean authorities scrupulously to respect the right and duty of the Chilean judiciary to employ fully and without restriction its constitutional power under habeas corpus and amparo;

9. Urges once more the Chilean authorities to co-operate with the Special Rapporteur and to submit their comments on the findings of his report to the Commission on Human Rights at its thirty-seventh session;

10. Invites the Commission on Human Rights to extend the mandate of the Special Rapporteur for another year and requests the Commission to report on the human rights situation in Chile, through the Economic and Social Council, to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session.

The General Assembly.

Recalling Its resolution 33/174 of 20 December 1978, by which it established a United Nations Trust Fund for Chile as a voluntary fund to receive contributions and distribute humanitarian, legal and financial aid to persons whose human rights have been violated in Chile,

Recalling also its resolution 34/176 of 17 December 1979,

Noting that all Governments have an obligation to respect and promote human rights, in accordance with the responsibilities they have undertaken under various international instruments,

Noting with concern that gross and flagrant violations of human rights take place in various countries,

Considering the plight of victims of gross and flagrant human rights violations wherever they take place,

1. Decides to request the Commission on Human Rights to study, at its thirty-seventh session, the possibility of extending the mandate of the United Nations Trust Fund for Chile to receive voluntary contributions and further to study criteria for their distribution, through established channels of assistance, es humanitarian, legal and financial aid to persons, not covered by the mandate of other existing United Nations trust funds, whose human rights have been grossly and flagrantly violated, to those who have been forced to leave their countries as a result of gross and flagrant violations of their human rights end to relatives of persons in the above-mentioned categories, end to report thereon to the Economic and Social Council at its first regular session of 1981;

2. Requests the Economic and Social Council to submit to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session recommendations concerning the extension of the mandate of the existing United Nations Trust Fund for Chile to become a United Nations Trust Fund for Victims of Gross and Flagrant Violations of Human Rights.

Other matters relating to violations of human rights

Human rights situations in specific countries

During their 1980 sessions, the Commission on Human Rights and its Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities considered the human rights situation in a number of countries and territories, in addition to the situations dealt with under separate items relating to the territories occupied by Israel (see p. 818), to Chile (see p. 821) and to southern Africa (see p. 807).

Afghanistan

On 14 February, the Commission on Human Rights adopted a resolution by which it condemned Soviet military aggression against the Afghan people, deplored it as a flagrant violation of international laws, covenants and norms, primarily the Charter of the United Nations, demanded the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of all Soviet troops stationed on Afghan territories, called on Member States to refrain from providing assistance to the current imposed regime of Afghanistan, urged that assistance be provided to the refugees from there, recommended that all Member States affirm their solidarity with the Afghan people in their struggle to safeguard their national independence and provide all possible assistance to them for this purpose, declared its solidarity with Afghanistan's neighbouring countries against any threat to their security and well-being, and called on all States to support them in their efforts to safeguard their sovereignty, national independence and territorial integrity (see also p. 296).

Bolivia

On 12 September, the Sub-Commission adopted a resolution recommending that its parent Commission study in 1981 reported human rights violations in Bolivia and take urgent measures aimed at the restoration of human rights there. Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations were asked to submit relevant information, and Halima Embarek Warzazi (Morocco), a Sub-Commission member, was asked to analyse that information and make recommendations.

On 5 November, Bolivia transmitted a letter of 29 October from its President to the Secretary-General, emphasizing that human rights were respected unrestrictedly within the framework of Bolivian laws and stating that the Government was ready to fix a date on which a delegation from the Commission could visit the country.

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted, by a recorded vote of 83 to 9, with 47 abstentions, resolution 35/185, by which it urged the Bolivian authorities to ensure respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, including freedom of expression and trade union rights, and requested the Commission to accept the invitation by those authorities, in order to study the human rights situation at first hand.

The Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee approved the resolution on 3 December by a recorded vote of 77 to 8, with 49 abstentions. The text, twice revised, was sponsored by the Netherlands and Sweden.

Another draft resolution by which the Assembly would have deplored the military coup of 17 July 1980 that had suspended indefinitely the process of democratic institutionalization in Bolivia and violated the people's right to self-determination, urged Bolivian authorities to respect human rights and fundamental freedoms, and asked the Commission to review the situation at its 1981 session-was withdrawn by its sponsors, Nicaragua and Panama, in support of the Netherlands/Swedish text.

Speaking at the time of voting in the Committee, several countries, including Argentina, Bolivia, Morocco, Papua New Guinea, Singapore and Suriname, did not approve of a selective approach denouncing human rights violations only in certain countries. Costa Rica, Morocco and Suriname thought the matter should be dealt with within the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights of the Organization of American States (OAS), although Cuba expressed reservations on a preambular paragraph noting that OAS had decided to include the question in its agenda; Cuba did not recognize that organizations's competence. Fiji thought it would have been better to call first for the co-operation of the country concerned, and Costa Rica felt that complaints that should lead to investigations had prejudged the results of such investigations. The Comoros thought it was up to the Commission on Human Rights to recommend appropriate measures.

Bolivia charged that a campaign of slander against it had been unleashed by international extremism, joined by those who sought to impose on Latin America a pseudo-democratic servitude. As from 21 November, it stated, not a single political prisoner remained in Bolivia, and a number of international organizations, as well as the Commission, and all the world press had been freely admitted.

Cyprus

By a decision of 7 March, the Commission on Human Rights postponed debate on the question of human rights in Cyprus until its 1981 session. The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination adopted a decision on 8 April reiterating its hope that the Government of Cyprus would soon be enabled to exercise its full responsibilities under the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination<sup>29</sup> on its whole national territory. (See also p. 459.)

Democratic Kampuchea

Noting that in January 1979 Democratic Kampuchea had been invaded by foreign forces, the Commission on 11 March adopted a resolution by which it condemned the gross and flagrant violations of human rights which had occurred in Kampuchea, the invasion and occupation of parts of the country by foreign forces and the violations of human rights which had ensued. It called for their immediate withdrawal and cessation of hostilities and urged the parties to observe the fundamental principles of human rights and, in particular, to cease attacks against the civilian population, ensure the safety of displaced persons and refugees as well as adequate food and medical care and non-interference with all activities essential for the survival of civilians, and spare the lives of and treat humanely combatants who surrendered or were captured. The Commission commended the humanitarian efforts of United Nations and other organizations in bringing emergency supplies, called on the parties to co-operate fully with the relief agencies, commended the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and neighbouring countries, especially Thailand, for providing relief and assistance to Kampuchians who had been forced to flee, urged Governments and non-governmental organizations to continue such co-operation, and recommended that the people of Kampuchea be granted their fundamental freedoms and human rights, including the right to decide their own future through free and fair elections without outside interference, subversion or coercion.

The Commission requested a member of the Sub-Commission to review, at its session later in the year, any further available material on the situation and submit it to the Commission with recommendations. The Commission submitted to the Economic and Social Council a proposal to this effect for approval.

Before adopting this resolution, the Commission considered an analysis by the Sub-Commission Chairman of information received on the human rights situation in the country, consideration of which had been postponed in 1979.<sup>30</sup>

On 2 May, by decision 1980/136, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's request by a recorded vote of 34 to 6, with 8 abstentions. The text had been approved on 29 April by the Second (Social) Committee, by a recorded vote of 29 to 5, with 8 abstentions.

The Sub-Commission adopted, on 12 September, a resolution requesting that its records and the material reviewed by its member, Abdelwahab Bouhdiba (Tunisia), be transmitted to the Commission in 1981 and recommending that the Commission keep the question under review and consider inviting the Secretary-General to designate a Special Representative to assist in restoring full respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms as speedily as possible in Kampuchea.

By a letter of 20 August, Viet Nam transmitted a telegram of 16 August from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of Kampuchea to the Secretary-General and the President of the General Assembly stating that the discussion and adoption of resolutions on Kampuchea by the Commission and the Council in the absence of a representative of the People's Revolutionary Council of Kampuchea was an inadmissible, flagrant interference in the country's internal affairs and, therefore, such resolutions would be considered null and void. He added that the People's Council was prepared to consider receiving a delegation of the Commission for the purpose of conducting an investigation of the crimes of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary régime.

Throughout the year, the Secretary-General received several communications on the human rights situation in Kampuchea. On 27 and 29 February, Viet Nam transmitted statements of 14 and 22 February by spokesmen for the Ministries of Foreign Affairs of Viet Nam and the People's Republic of Kampuchea, charging responsibility for and condemning violations of human rights of the Kampuchean people by China and the United States, urging them to cease their aggressive activities and false charges.

On 12 March, Democratic Kampuchea transmitted a communique, issued in Paris on 4 March by the Vietnamese League for Human Rights, on crimes allegedly committed by the Hanoi authorities in Kampuchea against Kampuchians, including racial extermination of the Khmer people, famine, terrorism, misappropriating of humanitarian aid, and setting up Vietnamese settlements. On 10 November, Viet Nam transmitted reports and testimony on human rights violations by the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary régime, made public by a People's Revolutionary Tribunal at Phnom Penh in August 1979.

El Salvador

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted, by a recorded vote of 70 to 12, with 55 abstentions, resolution 35/192 by which it deplored the murders, disappearances and other human rights violations reported in El Salvador, asked the authorities to curb the reprehensible activities of paramilitary groups there, and urged the Government to ensure full respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. Specifically it was asked to guarantee the safety of the Apostolic Administrator of the Archdiocese of San Salvador, Monsignor Arturo Rivera Damas, whose life was in danger. The Assembly called on Governments to refrain from supplying arms and other military assistance in the current circumstances, and requested the Commission to examine in 1981 the human rights situation in that country.

The Third Committee approved the text—twice revised and sponsored by Algeria, Angola, Benin, Cuba, Democratic Yemen, Ecuador, Iraq, Mexico, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Panama, Sao Tome and Principe, Viet Nam and Yugoslavia—by a recorded vote of 63 to 13, with 48 abstentions. The sponsors further orally amended their text to delete specific reference to El Salvador from a preambular paragraph stating that the Assembly considered that the supply of arms and other military assistance would serve to aggravate the situation in that country, and from paragraph 5 calling on Governments to refrain from the supply of such aid in the current circumstances.

In explanation of vote, a number of countries, including Australia, Bolivia, Colombia, Egypt, France, the Netherlands, New Zealand, the Niger, Nigeria, the Philippines, Portugal, the United Kingdom, the United States and Venezuela, though some of them supported the resolution, expressed concern about its selective and discriminatory approach. The Philippines said the text failed to observe due legal process with regard to the country and to take account of the question of its sovereignty. The United States and Venezuela added that it did not take account of all the factors involved and assessed the situation incorrectly. Egypt said it would not participate in the vote; Colombia, Egypt, France, the Philippines, Portugal and the United Kingdom believed such allegations should have first been investigated and verified. Australia, the Dominican Republic and the Netherlands said that the absence of a reference to the activities of OAS was a major shortcoming. Australia and Canada had reservations on the reference regarding the supply of arms and other military assistance as inappropriate in a resolution dealing with human rights, while New Zealand interpreted it as an appeal to desist from violence. Denmark would have preferred that reference to be directed in a more specific way to all the parties involved.

The Salvadorian representative said a serious problem of violence existed in El Salvador—a problem which, despite social and economic reforms, his Government had not been able to solve. However, it was simplistic to view the situation in terms of human rights alone. His Government was greatly concerned at attacks on Church officials by terrorists and strongly condemned the murder of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero and of six leaders of the Revolutionary Democratic Front by extremist groups. El Salvador regretted that the resolution bypassed the regional initiative of the OAS, Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, scheduled to visit in February 1981, which should be given priority. The representative added that the text also prejudged a situation which could be established only through proper investigation, was not objective and contained inaccuracies.

Equatorial Guinea

On 2 May, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1980/137, approved, without vote, a decision of the Commission on Human Rights in a resolution of 11 March on the human rights situation in Equatorial Guinea. By this resolution, the Commission, in response to the Government's request, asked the Secretary-General to appoint an expert with wide experience of Equatorial Guinea's situation, in particular with a view to assisting its Government in fully restoring human rights and fundamental freedoms, keeping in mind the recommendations of the Special Rapporteur appointed by the Commission in 1979 to study the human rights situation there<sup>31</sup>—one recommendation being that the Commission should establish machinery to assist the Government in achieving full respect for human rights—and keeping in mind the political, economic and social realities of the country. The Secretary-General was asked to provide the necessary assistance, in consultation with the expert.

By its resolution, the Commission also requested the expert to report to it in 1981 on implementation, invited the Government to co-operate with the expert, and invited all States, specialized agencies, United Nations organs and humanitarian and non-governmental organizations to assist Equatorial Guinea in restoring human rights and fundamental freedoms.

The Commission proposed the text adopted by the Council, whose Second Committee approved it without vote on 29 April.

Guatemala

On 11 March, the Commission adopted a resolution by which it expressed profound concern at the deteriorating situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms in Guatemala. Reported actions of the Guatemalan authorities in putting down demonstrations of popular discontent indicated a lack of due respect for human rights and had contributed to events which had disturbed international public opinion, in the Commission's view. It urged the Government to ensure full respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, took note with satisfaction of the Government's decision to invite the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights to visit the country and decided to keep the situation under review. The Secretary-General was asked to report to the Commission in 1981 on the results of bringing this resolution to Guatemala's attention.

Iran

On 10 September, the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities adopted a resolution on the rights of persons belonging to ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities. It thereby expressed profound concern for the safety of recently arrested and all other members of the National Administrative Council of the Bahá'i religious community of Iran and requested the Secretary-General to transmit this concern to the Iranian Government, inviting it to express its commitment to the guarantees provided in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>32</sup> ratified by that State, by granting full protection of fundamental rights and freedoms to the Bahá'i community and by protecting the life and liberty of its members. The Bahá'i International Community was a non-governmental organization in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council.

On 12 September, the Sub-Commission adopted a resolution urging Iran, despite bitter memories and grave injustices suffered by the Iranian people, to continue and intensify efforts for the immediate release of the United States citizens held in Iran since November 1979, and appealing to all countries to refrain from any action which might hamper the solution of the problem. (See also p. 309.1)

Malawi

Having examined a situation of alleged persecution of Jehovah's Witnesses in Malawi between 1972 and 1975, and while deploring that no observations had been received from Malawi to clarify the matter or repudiate the grave allegations, the Commission on Human Rights adopted a decision on 7 March stating that, since the events complained of, no further allegations had reached the Commission and there were reasons to believe that the situation no longer persisted. The Commission therefore decided to conclude its examination by recommending to the Economic and Social Council the adoption of a resolution on the question.

On 2 May, the Council adopted the Commission's recommended text, without vote, as resolution 1980/31. It thereby regretted Malawi's failure to co-operate with the Commission in the examination of a situation said to have deprived thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses in Malawi of their basic human rights and fundamental freedoms between 1972 and 1975, which constrained the Council to publicize the matter. It expressed the hope that the human rights of all Malawi citizens had been fully restored and, in particular, that adequate measures were being taken to provide a remedy to those who might have suffered injustices. The Council's Second Committee had approved the text on 29 April, also without a vote.

In a note verbale of 12 May to the Secretary-General, Malawi denied the allegations that had been made; it had always desired to co-operate with the Commission, and if it had not responded to that body's invitations it was because it considered the allegations to be baseless. It said Jehovah's Witnesses had been banned in 1967 because of their seditious activities against the State and proselytizing among citizens, and expressed the hope that clarification of the real situation would enable the Council to consider withdrawing its resolution.

Northern Ireland

On 11 March, the USSR withdrew its draft resolution which would have had the Commission request the United Kingdom to supply it with information on action it had taken to stop flagrant and mass violations of human rights in Northern Ireland.

Western Sahara and camps of Tindouf and adjacent area

Concerned at the occupation of Western Sahara by Morocco and the violations of human rights resulting therefrom, the Commission on Human Rights, by a resolution of 15 February, took note with satisfaction of recommendations of the Organization of African Unity and the General Assembly concerning the exercise by the people of Western Sahara of the right to self-determination and independence, the sole means of putting an end to the violation of the fundamental rights of the Sahrawi people resulting from the foreign occupation of its territory. The Commission decided to follow closely the developments in this situation and to consider the question of Western Sahara at its 1981 session, as a matter of high priority.

When the Economic and Social Council on 2 May took note of the report of the Commission (by decision 1980/141; see p. 885), Morocco clarified its position opposing the Commission's resolution.

(See also p. 1087.)

The Commission decided on 11 March not to take action at its current session on either of two resolutions on the human rights situation in Western Sahara and in the camps of Tindouf and the adjacent area, consideration of which it had deferred in 1979.<sup>33</sup>

Mass exoduses

On 11 March, the Commission adopted a resolution calling on all States to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, and calling on them as well as intergovernmental and humanitarian organizations to provide relief and assistance to refugees and displaced persons. It urged States that were the source of large-scale exoduses, or were the place of refuge of persons and groups involved, to co-operate fully among themselves and with other States and organizations in rendering protection and assistance to victims, in searching for enduring solutions and in helping to prevent and eliminate conditions which might precipitate such exoduses. The Commission requested the Secretary-General, in cases where such exoduses became a matter of international concern and solidarity, to consider establishing direct contacts with Governments to assess the relationships between the situation and full enjoyment of human rights, and to make recommendations for ameliorating such situations. He was asked to submit to the Commission's next session, or to the General Assembly, his findings and recommendations to assist Governments in restoring full enjoyment of human rights.

By resolution 35/196 adopted without vote on 15 December, the Assembly endorsed the Commission's requests. Expressing deep concern at the continued incidence of large-scale exoduses and displacements and its determination to facilitate solutions to the problems they caused, the Assembly requested the Commission to recommend further action on the basis of the report to be submitted to it by the Secretary-General in 1981.

The Third Committee had approved the resolution-sponsored and orally revised by Australia, Canada, Costa Rica, Greece, Japan, Pakistan, Panama, Senegal, Somalia, the Sudan and the United States- without vote on 5 December. The revisions consisted of inserting references to displacements, as well as exoduses, in a preambular paragraph indicating that the Assembly was disturbed by their scale and magnitude and in paragraph 1 expressing its concern. Two subparagraphs which would have reiterated the specific requests in the Commission's 11 March resolution were deleted from paragraph 3 which endorsed the Commission's requests in that resolution. Also deleted was a request that the Secretary-General submit to the Commission in 1981 a report setting out steps taken to implement this resolution and the Commission's resolution and include any possible findings and recommendations.

Human rights of United Nations staff

Concerned at reports of infringements of the human rights of United Nations staff members, the Commission on Human Rights on 11 March adopted a resolution appealing to Member States to respect their obligations under the United Nations Charter and other international instruments and requesting the Secretary-General to use his good offices to ensure the full enjoyment of human rights by United Nations staff members and of their rights under the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations.<sup>34</sup>

Message on the question of Andrei Sakharov

The Commission decided on 11 March, on the proposal of the Chairman, to defer to its 1981 session consideration of the question of sending a message to the USSR requesting information on administrative measures taken in regard to Andrei Sakharov, a spokesman for human rights, as proposed by Costa Rica, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands, Panama, Portugal and the United Kingdom.

Questions concerning procedure

Procedures for dealing with human rights violations

At its 1980 session, the Commission on Human Rights adopted, in closed meetings, a number of decisions under the procedure established by the Economic and Social Council in 1970 for dealing with communications relating to violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms.<sup>35</sup> According to this procedure, particular situations which appeared to reveal a consistent pattern of gross and reliably attested violations requiring consideration by the Commission were to be brought to its attention by the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities.

On 7 March, the Commission adopted two decisions relating to this procedure. By the first, it set up a pre-session working group of five members to examine in 1981 situations referred to it by the Sub-Commission as well as those the Commission had decided to keep under review. By the second, it granted States that had been invited to address the Commission and answer questions the right to participate in the entire discussion of the situation with which they were concerned, and to be present during the adoption of any final decision in that regard.

On 2 May, without vote, the Economic and Social Council approved these decisions in adopting decisions 1980/134 and 1980/135, respectively. The texts, proposed by the Commission, were approved by the Second Committee without vote on 29 April.

The Sub-Commission adopted three resolutions in 1980 relating to procedure. By the first, of 11 September, it recommended the establishment of an information-gathering service within the United Nations Division of Human Rights to acquire information on human rights violations in different countries and called on the Economic and Social Council to seek authorization and provide funds and personnel for such a service.

By the second, of 12 September, the Sub-Commission requested the Commission in 1981 to authorize the Sub-Commission Chairman, in consultation with the Vice-Chairmen, the Rapporteur and the Secretary-General, and with the consent of the government authorities concerned, to arrange for one or more members to visit any countries which had been the subject of discussion at the Sub-Commission's 1980 session, with a view to examining and reporting on human rights problems there or problems of comparable magnitude which might come to their attention during their examination.

By the third, of the same date, the Sub-Commission informed the Commission of its readiness to assist in responding to reports of mass and flagrant human rights violations of an urgent nature and recommended that the Commission give attention to the ways it could do so. It urged the Commission to consider approaches to handling emergency situations which sought to utilize various human rights organs such as the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council, and draw upon the possible assistance of subsidiary organs such as the Sub-Commission. It recommended that the Commission recommend that the Economic and Social Council consider including as a regular item on its agenda the question of emergency situations of violations of human rights and suggested also that due consideration be given to various avenues open to the Secretary-General in responding to such human rights violations by, for example, using his good offices, personal contacts, special representatives, Secretariat members, field officers and other emissaries, or through other appropriate discreet methods. It requested him to inform the Sub-Commission in 1981 of the consideration given to the matter by the major United Nations organs.

The Sub-Commission annexed to this resolution ideas connected with its possible future role in emergency situations of human rights violations, such as: using it as a forum for discussing or expressing concern; seeking through it appropriate channels to bring a United Nations presence to bear on such situations, interceding or taking other appropriate action or, in particularly serious instances, drawing a situation directly to the Assembly's attention; suggesting inclusion of a specific situation in the Commission's agenda; analysing information it considered especially serious and making it available to the Commission; being granted the competence to intercede directly with Governments to save lives or to prevent imminent danger; and utilizing its Bureau in emergency situations, particularly having regard to its expert character.

Communications concerning human rights

Prior to the Commission's 1980 session, a five-member working group, established by the Economic and Social Council in 1979<sup>36</sup> to examine particular situations of alleged human rights violations referred to the Commission by the Sub-Commission or under Commission review, submitted a confidential report on the documents pertaining thereto. All actions under the procedure for handling communications relating to violations of human rights were to remain confidential until the Commission decided to make recommendations to the Council. In 1980, the Commission for the first time made such a recommendation, when it decided to conclude its examination of the alleged persecution of Jehovah's Witnesses in Malawi (see subsection above).

In addition, the Working Group on communications of the Sub-Commission considered, at its ninth session from 4 to 15 August, communications, including government replies, received since its 1979 session. Its task was to bring to the Sub-Commission's attention those which appeared to reveal a consistent pattern of gross and reliably attested violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms. The Secretary-General had prepared monthly confidential lists containing brief summaries of the 25,196 communications received since the Working Group's previous session. The Group submitted to the Sub-Commission's 1980 session a confidential report communicating its findings.

The Commission, by a decision of 29 February, postponed to its 1981 session consideration of a 1979 Sub-Commission recommendation that decisions of the Sub-Commission and its Working Group dealt with in closed session should be taken by secret ballot unless they decided otherwise.

Action against mass and flagrant human rights violations

Welcoming a 1979 statement by the Secretary-General that he had continued to exert his best endeavours on behalf of human rights whenever he considered his action might be of assistance,<sup>37</sup> the Commission on Human Rights adopted a resolution on 11 March by which it requested him to continue and intensify the good offices envisaged in the United Nations Charter in the field of human rights, and invited him to consider addressing the opening meeting of the Commission at its 1981 session.

In December, in the General Assembly's Third Committee, Canada, Cyprus, Equatorial Guinea, the Gambia, Greece, Lesotho, Nicaragua, Senegal, Somalia, Spain and the United Kingdom submitted a draft resolution by which the Assembly would have: reiterated that mass and flagrant violations of human rights were of special concern to the United Nations; urged again the appropriate United Nations bodies, within their mandates, to take timely and effective action in such cases; requested the Secretary-General, when urgent situations of mass and flagrant human rights violations arose—particularly in territories under foreign forcible acquisition, domination and occupation (Jordanian addition accepted by the sponsors) —to consider establishing direct contact with the Government concerned, with a view to assisting it, with its consent (India orally proposed this should be "upon its request") in the full restoration of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms as quickly as possible, and also with a view to considering which forms of assistance the United Nations could provide; and asked the Secretary-General to keep the heads of the Economic and Social Council or the Commission on Human Rights informed of developments regarding such situations and any action to be undertaken relating thereto.

Brazil orally proposed adding a new preambular paragraph to bear in mind particularly Article 2, paragraph 7, of the United Nations Charter—stating that the Charter did not authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters essentially within the jurisdiction of any State<sup>38</sup>—and a new paragraph affirming that nothing in the resolution should be understood as authorizing a qualitative change in the Secretary-General's role or as endorsing any action not in line with Charter principles, particularly Article 2, paragraph 7.

Brazil's first amendment was approved by a recorded vote of 67 to 31, with 28 abstentions. The Indian amendment was approved by a recorded vote of 47 to 39, with 40 abstentions. Canada had requested recorded votes on the proposed amendments. The Committee then approved, by a separate recorded vote, requested by Sweden, of 51 to 35, with 32 abstentions, the words "particularly Article 2, paragraph 7" in Brazil's second amendment. On an oral proposal by Ireland, the Committee decided on 4 December, by a recorded vote of 64 to 33, with 29 abstentions, not to take action on Brazil's second amendment as a whole and on the resolution as amended.

<sup>a</sup> Subsequently advised the Secretariat it had intended to vote in favour.

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Conscious of its responsibility to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all,

Noting that all Governments have an obligation to respect and promote human rights in accordance with the responsibilities they have undertaken under various international instruments,

Searing in mind resolution 19 adopted on 30 July 1980 by the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women,

Dismayed by reports of human rights violations in El Salvador and especially by the death of thousands of persons and the climate of repression and insecurity prevailing in the country, which favours terrorism by paramilitary groups and enables it to be engaged in with impunity,

Deeply shocked by the vile assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, a prestigious personality, outstanding for his defence of the human rights of the Salvadorian people, and by the persecution of Salvadorian figures such as Monsignor Arturo Rivera Damas, Apostolic Administrator of the Archdiocese of San Salvador,

Grave/y concerned about the unknown fate of many persons detained by the authorities,

Profound/y indignant at the assassination of Mr. Enrique Alvarez Córdova, President of the Revolutionary Democratic Front of El Salvador, as well as of five other members of the Executive Committee of that Front, perpetrated on 27 November 1980 in San Salvador,

Considering that the supply of arms and other military assistance will serve to aggravate the situation in that country,

1. Expresses its deep concern at the grave violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms in El Salvador;

2. Deplores the murders, disappearances and other violations of human rights reported in El Salvador and requests the Salvadorian authorities to take prompt action to curb the reprehensible activities of paramilitary groups;

3. Urges the Government of El Salvador to take the necessary steps to ensure full respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in that country and to guarantee the safety of Monsignor Arturo Rivera Damas, Apostolic Administrator of the Archdiocese of San Salvador, whose life is in danger;

4. Appeals for a cessation of violence and for the establishment of full respect for human rights in El Salvador;

5. Calls upon Governments to refrain from the supply of arms and other military assistance in the current circumstances;

6. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to examine, at its thirty-seventh session, the situation of human rights in El Salvador.

The Economic and Social Council,

Considering that the Commission on Human Rights has been examining since its thirty-third session, in 1977, the situation regarding the alleged persecution of Jehovah's Witnesses in Malawi,

Considering further that the Government of Malawi has not co-operated with the Commission on Human Rights or replied to the communications addressed to it regarding this matter,

1. Regrets the failure of the Government of Malawi to co-operate with the Commission on Human Rights in the examination of a situation said to have deprived thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses in Malawi of their basic human rights and fundamental freedoms between 1972 and 1975, which constrains the Economic and Social Council to publicize the matter;

2. Expresses the hope that the human rights of all citizens of Malawi have been fully restored and, in particular, that adequate measures are being taken to provide a remedy to those who may have suffered injustices.

The General Assembly,

Mindful of its mandate under the Charter of the United Nations to promote and encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all,

Disturbed by the scale and magnitude of the exoduses and displacements of populations involving hundreds of thousands of men, women and children in many regions of the world,

Noting the immense burden imposed on the first host countries and territories which receive the victims of these sudden and massive movements of population,

Bearing in mind the resolutions of the Economic and Social Council concerning international efforts to meet humanitarian needs in emergency situations,

Recalling Commission on Human Rights resolution 30(XXXVI) of 11 March 1980 concerning human rights and massive exoduses,

1. Expresses deep concern at the continued incidence of large-scale exoduses and displacements of populations and the resulting hardships and problems for the persons and States concerned;

2. Expresses its determination to facilitate solutions to the problems caused by these large-scale movements of population;

3. Endorses the requests of the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 30(XXXVI);

Importance for human rights of the realization of the right to self-determination

In the context of its continuing consideration of the question of the right of peoples to self-determination, the Commission on Human Rights, by a resolution adopted on 15 February 1980, reaffirmed the legitimacy of the struggle of peoples for independence, territorial integrity, national unity and liberation from colonial and foreign domination and foreign occupation by all available means, including armed struggle. It also reaffirmed the inalienable right of the peoples of Namibia, Zimbabwe and South Africa, of the Palestinian people and of all peoples under alien and colonial domination to self-determination, national independence, territorial integrity, national unity and sovereignty without external interference.

The Commission emphasized again that the practice of using mercenaries against States and national liberation movements was a criminal act and that the mercenaries were criminals, and called on Governments to enact legislation declaring their recruitment, financing, training and transit as punishable offences. It condemned States that maintained relations with the racist regimes in southern Africa and elsewhere, strongly condemned the increasing massacres of innocent and defenceless people by those regimes, and reiterated its demand for the immediate and unconditional release of all people detained or imprisoned as a result of their struggle for self-determination as well as full respect for their fundamental rights.

The Commission called on all States to implement the United Nations resolutions concerning the exercise of the right to self-determination, requested the United Kingdom to guarantee free and fair elections in Southern Rhodesia (Zimbabwe), and reiterated its appreciation for assistance to the peoples under colonial domination and foreign occupation in their struggle for self-determination and independence.

In the context of its item on self-determination, the Commission also adopted resolutions on the right to self-determination of the people of Afghanistan, the Palestinian people and the people of Western Sahara (see pp. 826, 819 and 830).

On 12 September, the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities adopted a resolution by which it: reaffirmed universal respect for the right of peoples to self-determination as the most fundamental condition for the preservation and promotion of human rights; declared its firm opposition to acts of foreign military intervention and occupation resulting in the suppression of self-determination and other human rights; called on States responsible to cease such suppression, particularly the reported brutal and inhuman methods employed; expressed its support for refugees driven from their countries as a result of military occupation and intervention, and reaffirmed their right to return; and recommended that the Commission give special attention to the violation of the right of self-determination and other human rights resulting from foreign military intervention or occupation.

In accordance with a 1979 General Assembly resolution,<sup>39</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report to the Assembly containing summaries of replies on action taken by Governments and non-governmental organizations in response to the Assembly's call for legislation against mercenaries and for maximization of assistance to peoples under colonial and foreign rule and to victims of racial discrimination. As at 31 October 1980, the Secretary-General had received information from 19 States-Algeria, Australia, the Byelorussian SSR, Chile, Cuba, Cyprus, El Salvador, the German Democratic Republic, Guinea, Haiti, Mali, Mexico, Norway, Portugal, Qatar, the Syrian Arab Republic, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and the United States-and four non-governmental organizations.

On 14 November, the Assembly, on the recommendation of its Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, adopted two resolutions on the importance of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination and of the speedy granting of independence for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights.

By the first-resolution 35/35 A- the Assembly reaffirmed the legitimacy of the struggle of peoples for independence, territorial integrity, national unity and liberation from foreign domination and occupation by all available means, including armed struggle, and the inalienable right of the peoples of Namibia, the Palestinian people and all peoples under alien and colonial domination to self-determination and sovereignty without external interference. It took note with satisfaction of a July decision of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) on Western Sahara (see p. 1087), took note of the contacts between the Comoros and France in the search for a just solution to the integration of Mayotte into the Comoros (see p. 257), condemned "bantustanization," reiterated its support for the oppressed people of South Africa, and strongly condemned the ever-increasing massacres of innocent and defenceless people by that regime.

The Assembly reaffirmed that using mercenaries was a criminal act and called on Governments to enact legislation declaring their recruitment, financing, training and transit to be punishable offences and prohibiting their nationals from serving as mercenaries. It condemned those members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and other countries whose relations with the racist regimes in southern Africa and elsewhere encouraged those regimes to persist in their suppression of peoples' aspirations for self-determination and independence, and again demanded the immediate application of the mandatory arms embargo imposed by the Security Council against South Africa. The Assembly strongly condemned Governments which did not recognize the right to self-determination of all peoples under colonial and foreign domination and alien subjugation, notably those of Africa and the Palestinian people, condemned Israeli expansionist activities in the Middle East and the continuous bombing of civilian Arab and Palestinian populations and destruction of their villages and encampments, and urged all States and competent international organizations to support the Palestinian people through its representative, the Palestine Liberation Organization, in its struggle for self-determination.

The Assembly demanded the immediate release of all persons detained or imprisoned for their struggle for self-determination and of children detained in Namibian and South African prisons, and full respect for fundamental individual rights. It called for maximization of assistance to peoples under colonial and foreign rule, and to the victims of racial discrimination and apartheid through their OAU-recognized liberation movements. It demanded that all Member States, specialized agencies and competent United Nations organizations do their utmost to ensure the full implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples<sup>40</sup> and intensify their efforts to support peoples under colonial, foreign and racist domination in their struggle for self-determination and independence, requesting the Secretary-General to give the widest possible publicity to both the Declaration and the struggle.

Resolution 35/35 A was adopted by 119 votes to 18, with 7 abstentions. The Third Committee approved the text-sponsored by Cuba, Somalia (on behalf of the African group of Member States at the United Nations) and Viet Nam on 27 October by 109 votes to 18, with 7 abstentions.

Somalia and Nigeria separately introduced and withdrew, on behalf of the African group, an oral amendment to redraft paragraph 7. The Assembly would thereby have deplored the practice of using mercenaries against national liberation movements and sovereign States, which constituted a threat to international peace and co-operation, and would have called on all States to take appropriate measures to prohibit their nationals from serving as mercenaries, bearing in mind the current drafting of an international convention against mercenaries' activities by the Sixth (Legal) Committee. Pakistan withdrew its oral amendment to insert a new preambular paragraph taking note of the relevant resolutions of the Eleventh Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers (Islamabad, 17-22 May).

By the second resolution-35/35 B-the Assembly reaffirmed that the universal realization of the right to self-determination and the speedy granting of independence to colonial countries and peoples were a fundamental condition for the guarantee, observance, preservation and promotion of human rights. It declared its firm opposition to acts of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, and called on the States responsible to cease such acts as well as all acts of repression, discrimination, exploitation and maltreatment. It deplored the plight of refugees and displaced persons uprooted by such acts and reaffirmed their right to return to their homes. It also requested the Commission on Human Rights to continue to give special attention to the violation of the right of self-determination and other human rights resulting from foreign military aggression, intervention or occupation.

Resolution 35/35 B was adopted without vote; the Third Committee had approved the text on 27 October by consensus, after revision by the sponsors (Costa Rica, Morocco, Oman, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia and Somalia) and as amended in five separate votes.

An Algerian proposal to reword the first preambular paragraph was accepted by the sponsors. That paragraph, which originally had reaffirmed the importance of universal respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and embodied in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>41</sup> was expanded to reaffirm the importance, for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights, of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination and the speedy granting of independence to colonial countries and peoples, principles enshrined in the Charter, the International Covenants on Human Rights<sup>42</sup> and the 1960 Declaration on granting independence. Another Algerian amendment replacing operative paragraph 1 was approved by 66 votes to 29, with 26 abstentions; the paragraph had previously reaffirmed that universal respect for the right of peoples to self-determination was the most fundamental condition for the preservation and promotion of human rights in various parts of the world.

Ethiopia submitted four oral amendments, which were approved by separate votes. Three of them added to one preambular and two operative paragraphs references to foreign "aggression" as well as military intervention and foreign occupation; they were approved by 70 votes to 10, with 38 abstentions, by 73 votes to 7, with 37 abstentions, and by 73 votes to 7, with 38 abstentions, respectively. The fourth amendment added a reference to "displaced persons" as well as refugees in paragraph 4 deploring their plight; it was approved by 84 votes to 6, with 28 abstentions.

The sponsors accepted oral drafting amendments by Mexico; they also accepted Mexican amendments to deplore, in paragraph 4, rather than express deep sympathy and support for, the plight of uprooted refugees and displaced persons, and to call on, in paragraph 3, the States responsible to cease military intervention and occupation as well as acts of repression, discrimination, exploitation and maltreatment, rather than to cease all acts of suppression pending the cessation of military intervention and occupation.

In explanation of their votes on resolution 35/35 A, a number of States, Belgium, Chile, Greece, the United Kingdom and the United States for example, were unable to accept the encouragement of armed struggle and affirmation of its legitimacy, and opposed the condemnation of NATO countries as unwarranted. Chile, the Netherlands, Thailand and Turkey also had reservations on the NATO paragraph, although all but the Netherlands voted for the resolution. Belgium felt that there was a general lack of balance in the resolution, which it opposed, although it supported the general objective-reaffirmation of the right of self-determination. Fiji did not approve of specific references to certain parties or groups when others might be equally guilty. In Chile's view, countries and organizations should not be specifically mentioned. The United Kingdom said the resolution gave a certain sense of unreality since it did not refer to the denial of the right to self-determination in a number of obvious current cases. The United States opposed the resolution, finding it replete with extreme positions, selective condemnations and unrealistic demands, and, along with Belgium, considered out of place the reference to the subject of mercenaries which was currently before another Committee. Guatemala, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, the United States and Uruguay had reservations on to paragraphs dealing with political problems in the Middle East.

In explanation of their positions on resolution 35/35 B, some countries, including Austria, Costa Rica, the Federal Republic of Germany and Greece, said the principle of self-determination applied to all countries; Papua New Guinea added that self-determination did not end after a country had achieved independence. Ethiopia and India considered that the question of the right to self-determination of sovereign nations should be approached cautiously. Ethiopia said that, had they been put to a vote, it would have voted against the second and third preambular paragraphs, which welcomed the progressive exercise of the right of self-determination by peoples formerly under colonial and alien domination and expressed deep concern that the right of self-determination of a growing number of sovereign peoples and nations was being threatened through acts of foreign military intervention or occupation. The Central African Republic said it supported the resolution with some reservations. The USSR stated that, although the resolution had certain shortcomings, it would serve as a warning to those forces trampling underfoot the right of peoples to self-determination.

Several countries, including Australia, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Greece, Japan, Papua New Guinea, the United States and Uruguay, said they would have preferred the original draft.

Resolution 35/35 B, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/591, adopted without vote by Assembly on 14 November 1980, meeting 63.

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the importance, for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights, of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination and the speedy granting of independence to colonial countries and peoples, principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, in the International Covenants on Human Rights and in the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

We/coming the progressive exercise of the right of self-determination by peoples formerly under colonial and alien domination and their emergence into sovereign statehood and independence,

Deeply concerned that the right of self-determination of a growing number of sovereign peoples and nations is being threatened or suppressed through acts of foreign military intervention or foreign occupation,

Further concerned that an increasing number of people have been uprooted from their homes and have become refugees as a consequence of such actions,

Noting the relevant resolutions regarding the violation of the right to self-determination and of other human rights of peoples as a result of military intervention and foreign aggression and occupation, adopted by the Commission on Human Rights at its thirty-sixth session,

1. Reaffirms that the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination and the speedy granting of independence to colonial countries and peoples are a fundamental condition for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights and for the preservation and promotion of such rights in various parts of the world;

2. Declares its firm opposition to acts of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, since they result in the suppression of the right to self-determination and other human rights of peoples in various parts of the world;

3. Calls upon those States responsible for such acts to cease their military intervention and occupation of foreign countries and territories, to cease all acts of repression, discrimination, exploitation and maltreatment of the peoples concerned, including innocent men, women and children, particularly the brutal and inhuman methods reportedly employed for the purpose;

4. Deplores the plight of the hundreds of thousands of refugees and displaced persons who have been uprooted by the aforementioned acts and reaffirms their right to return voluntarily to their homes;

5. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue to give special attention to the violation of the right of self-determination and other human rights resulting from foreign military aggression, intervention or occupation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report on this issue to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session under the item entitled "Importance of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination and of the speedy granting of independence to colonial countries and peoples for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights."

Protection from torture and other cruel or inhuman punishment

Human rights of detained or imprisoned persons

The United Nations continued work during 1980 to safeguard the human rights of detained or imprisoned persons, studied means of dealing with the disappearance of persons, especially after detention or imprisonment, and considered proposals for new studies on human rights in the administration of justice.

Standard-setting in this area concentrated on: a draft convention on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment; a draft body of principles for the protection of all persons under any form of detention or imprisonment; and a draft Code of Medical Ethics.

Body of principles for the protection of detainees or prisoners

In 1979, the Economic and Social Council had requested the Secretary-General to transmit to all Governments for their comments a draft body of principles for the protection of all persons under any form of detention or imprisonment, adopted by the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities.<sup>43</sup>

Reporting to the General Assembly, the Secretary-General summarized the comments he had received, as at 17 November 1980, from 23 States-Austria, Barbados, the Byelorussian SSR, Costa Rica, Cyprus, El Salvador, the Federal Republic of Germany, Hungary, Iraq, Italy, the Ivory Coast, Japan, the Niger, Norway, Panama, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR, the United Kingdom, the United States and Yugoslavia-several of which remarked on individual principles and definitions in the draft text.

A working group open to all Member States was established by the Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee on 2 October, to consider the draft body of principles as well as a draft declaration on the human rights of individuals who were not citizens of the country in which they lived (see p. 867). The group provisionally agreed on the texts of several draft principles. Principles 1 (prescribing treatment of detainees and prisoners with humanity and respect for human dignity) and 2 (providing that the rules would not weaken national laws or customs on fundamental human rights for such persons) were agreed together with an additional provision specifying that arrest, detention or imprisonment was to be carried out in accordance with the law and by authorized authorities. Principle 3 stated that detention and imprisonment were to be ordered or controlled by a judicial or competent legal authority. Principle 4 provided for application of the principles to all within each State, without distinction, although legal measures applying to certain categories of vulnerable or disadvantaged persons were not deemed to be discriminatory, subject to review. Principle 5 proscribed torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, and principle 6 held that States should prohibit by law acts contrary to these principles and should investigate complaints.

By resolution 35/177, adopted without vote on 15 December, the Assembly referred to its 1981 regular session the draft body of principles for consideration by the Sixth (Legal) Committee, and decided to establish at that session an open-ended working group to try to conclude consideration of the draft.

The Third Committee had approved the text on 1 December, also without vote. The text was sponsored by Austria, Colombia, Ecuador, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands, the Philippines, Sweden and the United States. On behalf of the sponsors, Austria orally revised the text, which had already been once revised, adding the paragraph referring the draft body of principles to the Sixth Committee. Mexico withdrew a separate draft decision it had submitted to refer the draft principles to that Committee. Morocco withdrew an oral amendment, based on a suggestion by Algeria supported by the USSR and Yugoslavia, to replace the paragraph on establishing a 1981 working group by one to have the working group to be established under resolution 35/199 of 15 December-to elaborate a draft declaration on the human rights of resident non-citizens (see p. 867)-conclude consideration of the principles, although the sponsors did accept a proposal to reverse the order of the last two operative paragraphs. Sweden, supported by Argentina, Egypt and Mexico, also submitted and withdrew an oral proposal that the Assembly take note of the draft resolutions on the body of principles and on the declaration on the rights of non-citizens and decide to set up a working group to meet for six weeks during the 1981 session to elaborate both the draft body of principles and the draft declaration.

Protection of the human rights of certain categories of prisoners

On 15 December, the Assembly adopted, without vote, resolution 35/189, by which it emphasized the particular importance of protecting the right of prisoners not to be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and their right to receive a fair hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal. It recognized that the arrest and detention in many parts of the world of persons because of their political opinions or convictions, as a result of their struggle against colonialism, aggression and foreign occupation and for self-determination, independence, and the elimination of apartheid racial discrimination and racism, because of their trade union activities or under discriminatory laws often gave rise to serious human rights problems. It reiterated requests to Member States it had made in 1977 and 1978<sup>44</sup> to take measures aimed at securing the release of such persons and to assure that their fundamental rights were protected during arrest or detention.

The Third Committee approved the resolution, as orally revised by the sponsors, on 3 December, also without vote. The text was sponsored by the Bahamas, Barbados, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Finland, Jamaica, Nigeria, Norway, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Venezuela.

Speaking in explanation of its position, the United States said the resolution could not be interpreted as calling for the release of all persons who, in serving their cause, committed offences the proscription of which was consistent with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.<sup>45</sup> Moreover, the formula in the third preambular paragraph, which distinguished discriminatory laws from laws which justified detention for common-law offences, should not prejudice the fundamental principle that political commitment did not justify common-law offences or acts of violence.

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, on 11 September, adopted a resolution reiterating strongly its recommendation that the Commission on Human Rights request the Economic and Social Council to authorize appointment of a group of five Sub-Commission members to meet prior to each session to analyse the material received in connexion with the human rights of persons subjected to detention or imprisonment and to prepare the Sub-Commission's annual review of developments in this field. For review at its 1981 session, the Sub-Commission requested the Secretary-General to invite Governments, specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations, the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) and non-governmental organizations to submit reliably attested information.

At its 1980 regular session, the General Assembly also adopted other resolutions relating to the protection of human rights of certain categories of prisoners. By resolution 35/206 K of 16 December, the Assembly requested all Governments and agencies in the United Nations system to promote campaigns in solidarity with political prisoners and detainees in South Africa, and asked the Special Committee against Apartheid to continue promoting the world campaign for their release (see p. 227). By resolution 35/35 A of 14 November, the Assembly demanded the immediate and unconditional release of all persons detained or imprisoned as a result of their struggle for self-determination and independence, and full respect for their fundamental rights (see p. 838). By resolution 35/122 C of 11 December, the Assembly condemned mass arrests, administrative detention and ill-treatment of the Arab population of the Israeli-occupied territories, and ill-treatment and torture of persons under detention, and asked the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories to continue investigating Israeli policies there and to consult with the International Committee of the Red Cross to ensure the safeguarding of the welfare and human rights of the population of those territories (seep. 418).

Disappeared persons

The Commission on Human Rights on 29 February adopted a resolution whereby it decided to establish for one year a working group of five of its members to examine questions relevant to enforced or involuntary disappearances. The group was to seek information from Governments, intergovernmental and humanitarian organizations and other reliable sources and report to the Commission in 1981 with conclusions and recommendations. The Secretary-General was asked to provide the group with the necessary assistance and to appeal to all Governments to co-operate with it and furnish the information required. The group was invited to carry out its work with discretion. Also, the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities was asked to continue studying the most effective means for eliminating enforced or involuntary disappearances, with a view to making general recommendations to the Commission at its 1981 session. The Commission's decision was approved by the Economic and Social Council by decision 1980/128 of 2 May, adopted without vote. The Council's Second (Social)

Committee, had approved the Commission-recommended text in like manner on 29 April.

The General Assembly adopted, without vote on 15 December, resolution 35/193, whereby it welcomed the Commission's establishment of the working group, requested the Commission to continue to study the question of involuntary or enforced disappearances as a matter of priority and to take any step it might deem necessary to the pursuit of its work when it considered the group's report, appealed to Governments to co-operate with the group and the Commission, and requested the Secretary-General to draw the concerns expressed in the resolution to the attention of all Governments, regional and interregional organizations and specialized agencies.

The Third Committee, on 4 December, approved the resolution, also without vote. The text was sponsored by Austria, Barbados, Canada, Costa Rica, Cyprus, France, Greece, Lesotho, Panama, Senegal, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States.

When the resolution was approved, Argentina expressed reservations on the establishment of the working group, and Chile objected to the ad hoc nature of the establishment of such groups. Cuba voiced deep concern about the proliferation of United Nations bodies. The USSR said the resolution should not prejudice the activities of the group, and felt the group should carry out its function in the course of one year.

Both the Assembly, by resolution 35/188 of 15 December, and the Commission, by a resolution of 29 February, took action on disappeared persons in Chile, urging Chilean authorities to investigate and clarify the fate of those who had disappeared for political reasons, inform their relatives and institute criminal proceedings against those responsible. The Commission further requested the Special Rapporteur appointed to examine human rights in Chile to deal in his report also with the problem of disappeared persons. (For details, see p. 821.)

The Sub-Commission, by a resolution of 11 September, urged the Commission to extend the working group's mandate, emphasizing that the extreme gravity of enforced or involuntary disappearances necessitated emergency action by the working group, by other United Nations organs and by the Secretary-General. It urged him to continue to exercise his good offices in cases of such disappearances, paying particular attention to those where action was necessary to preserve the life or integrity of individuals, and requested him to invite views of Governments and inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations, and transmit them to the Commission and the Sub-Commission in 1981, when the Sub-

Commission would consider the question as a matter of high priority.

The Sub-Commission decided to study the question further, especially with regard to: the adequacy of search and investigation methods, of methods for ensuring that law enforcement and security authorities or organizations were fully accountable in law, and of the protection of witnesses and journalists providing information about disappeared persons; and procedures for regarding as official the detention without trial as an emergency preventive measure, and for effective reporting, monitoring and appraisal of cases.

Independence and impartiality in judicial proceedings

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1980/124 adopted without vote on 2 May, authorized, as recommended on 29 February by the Commission on Human Rights, the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities to entrust L. M. Singhvi (India) with the preparation of a report on the independence and impartiality of the judiciary, jurors and assessors and the independence of lawyers, to the end that there should be no discrimination in the administration of justice and that human rights and fundamental freedoms might be maintained and safeguarded. The Council also requested the Secretary-General to give the Special Rapporteur all the assistance he might require. The Council's Second Committee had approved the Commission-recommended text without vote on 29 April.

Among the Sub-Commission's resolutions of 11 September on human rights of persons subjected to any form of detention or imprisonment, two pertained specifically to the protection of human rights in the administration of justice. By the first, considering that associations of judges and lawyers reinforced their professional competence and independence and thus aided them in protecting and promoting human rights, the Sub-Commission called on all States fully to respect and guarantee the right of all judges and lawyers freely and without interference to form or participate in professional organizations of their own.

By the second, the Sub-Commission requested the Secretary-General to invite Governments and organizations to transmit to its Special Rapporteur on judicial independence, through the Secretary-General in answer to a questionnaire, comments, views, court decisions or materials which might be relevant, and asked the Secretary-General to consider the possibility of organizing, within the framework of advisory services in the field of human rights, a seminar on the independence and impartiality of the judiciary, jurors and assessors and the independence of lawyers in different legal systems. The Sub-Commission asked the Special Rapporteur to give attention to ways whereby the judiciary and the legal profession could contribute to maintaining and safeguarding respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, and decided to include his study as a separate subject at its 1981 session.

The Economic and Social Council, by resolution 1980/28 of 2 May, authorized the Sub-Commission to entrust a Special Rapporteur with the preparation of a study on the discriminatory treatment of members of racial, ethnic, religious or linguistic groups at the various levels in the administration of criminal justice proceedings (for details, see p. 798).

By resolution 35/170 of 15 December, the General Assembly called on all States to consider favourably the use of the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials, which it had adopted in 1979,<sup>46</sup> within their national legislation and practice or directives governing law enforcement agencies (for details, see p. 783).

Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders

In the Caracas Declaration of the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (Caracas, Venezuela, 25 August-5 September), endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 35/171 of 15 December, the Congress declared that programmes for crime prevention and the treatment of offenders should be based on the social, cultural, political and economic circumstances of each country, in a climate of freedom and respect for human rights, that those responsible for the functioning of the criminal justice system were properly qualified and independent of personal or group interest, and that the administration of justice guaranteed the equality of everyone before the law and organs capable of providing speedy and fair justice and ensuring greater security and protection of the rights and freedoms of all (for details, see p. 780).

Declaration and draft convention against torture and other cruel and inhuman treatment

By resolution 35/178 of 15 December, the General Assembly welcomed Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/32 of 2 May, authorizing an open-ended working group of the Commission on Human Rights to meet for one week prior to its 1981 session to complete the work on a draft convention against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. The Assembly asked the Commission to complete the draft at that session. Preparation of the draft convention had been requested by the Assembly in 1977.<sup>47</sup>

The Council adopted its resolution without vote; the text had been similarly approved by the Second Committee on 29 April. In a resolution of 12 March by which it had proposed the text to the Council, the Commission noted with satisfaction progress made by a working group on the draft convention which had met prior to and during its current session, but had not been able to complete the task; it decided to accord high priority to consideration of the draft at its 1981 session.

The Secretary-General submitted a report to the Assembly in 1980 summarizing information received in response to a questionnaire concerning legislative, administrative or other measures taken by Member States to put into practice the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.<sup>48</sup> As at 24 November, 21 States—Australia, Bahrain, Bangladesh, the Byelorussian SSR, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, Egypt, Iraq, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Lebanon, Madagascar, Mexico, Nicaragua, Thailand, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR, Venezuela and Yemen—had replied since the Secretary-General's 1979 report.<sup>49</sup>

A second report by the Secretary-General reproduced Member States' unilateral declarations, received since he last reported in 1979,<sup>50</sup> against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, called for by the Assembly in 1977<sup>51</sup> to reinforce their support for the Declaration. As at 21 November 1980, five additional countries—Chile, Iraq, Mexico, Nicaragua and Panama—had deposited such declarations with the Secretary-General.

The Assembly, by resolution 35/178, requested the Secretary-General to forward to the Human Rights Committee the replies to his questionnaire received from States parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>52</sup> and invited Member States which had not done so to deposit with him their unilateral declarations against torture. The forwarding to the Human Rights Committee only of replies received from parties to the International Covenant resulted from an oral revision by the sponsors.

The Assembly adopted the resolution without vote; the Third Committee had likewise approved the text on 5 December. It was sponsored by Australia, Austria, Canada, Costa Rica, Denmark, Greece, India, the Netherlands, Panama, Sweden and the United States.

Draft Code of Medical Ethics

The General Assembly, by resolution 35/179 adopted without vote on 15 December, requested the Secretary-General to renew his request to Member States and to inter- and non-governmental organizations for comments and suggestions on the draft Code of Medical Ethics. It requested the Economic and Social Council to consider the draft Code at its April/May 1981 session, and invited Member States to take an active part in deliberations on the Code.

The resolution was approved without vote by the Third Committee on 5 December. It was sponsored by Australia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Lesotho, the Netherlands, Portugal, Sweden, Uganda and the United States. The sponsors orally revised their draft to express the belief, in a preambular paragraph, that the elaboration of a draft Code was an important step in the establishment, rather than progressive codification, of international standards in the field of human rights.

The draft Code had been submitted to the Assembly by the World Health Organization (WHO) in 1979, after the WHO Executive Board had endorsed the six principles in the draft, indicating the type of conduct by physicians that would be considered a contravention of medical ethics.<sup>53</sup>

The Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly in 1980 a report summarizing the comments and suggestions of Member States and organizations on the draft Code in response to the Assembly's 1979 request for such information.<sup>54</sup> As at 15 December 1980, the Secretary-General had received replies from 24 countries, two specialized agencies and three non-governmental organizations. Cape Verde, Denmark, the Dominican Republic, Gabon, Maldives and Rwanda either had no objections to the Code or no specific observations to make. Chile, Cyprus, the German Democratic Republic, Jordan and Suriname supported the Code or agreed to it in general. Austria, Barbados, the Byelorussian SSR, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, the Sudan, Sweden, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and the United States either expressed specific reservations, suggested redrafting various provisions, or felt that some modifications were needed to clarify certain points or that some of the principles should be re-examined.

The General Assembly,

Recalling the adoption, in its resolution 3452(XXX) of 9 December 1975, of the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment,

Recalling a/so its resolution 34/169 of 17 December 1979, by which it adopted the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials and decided to transmit it to Governments with the recommendation that favourable consideration should be given to its use within the framework of national legislation or practice as a body of principles for observance by law enforcement officials,

Recalling further that the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1979/34 of 10 May 1979, requested the Secretary-General to transmit to all Governments, for their comments, the draft Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment, adopted by the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities at its thirty-first session, with a view to consideration of the matter by the General Assembly at its thirty-fifth session,

Resolution 35/189, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/741, adopted without vote by Assembly on 15 December 1980, meeting 96.

The General Assembly,
Recalling its resolution 32/121 of 16 December 1977 regarding the protection of the human rights of persons who are detained either in respect of offences which they committed, or are suspected of having committed, by reason of their political opinions or convictions, or as a result of their struggle against colonialism, aggression and foreign occupation and for self-determination, independence, the elimination of apartheid and all forms of racial discrimination and racism, and the termination of all these violations of human rights,

Recalling also its resolution 33/169 of 20 December 1978 regarding the protection of the human rights of persons who have been arrested or detained as a result of their trade union activities,

Noting, however, that, although certain prisoners belonging to the above-mentioned categories may have been duly convicted of common-law offences, which may justify their arrest, detention or imprisonment, or may be detained pending a trial in respect of such offences, the arrest, detention or imprisonment for common-law offences cannot be justified when it is based on laws which are of a discriminatory nature or involve other serious violations of human rights, including apartheid,

Realizing that persons belonging to these categories are exposed to special dangers as regards the protection of their human rights and freedoms,

Noting that violations of their human rights and fundamental freedoms may consist in the arrest or detention itself, or in the treatment to which they are subjected,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recalling the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which states that any act of torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment is an offence to human dignity, that no State may permit or tolerate torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and that exceptional circumstances such as a state of war or a threat of war, internal political instability or any other public emergency may not be invoked as a justification of torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

Recalling also the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, Emphasizing the particular importance of protecting the right of prisoners not to be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and their right to receive a fair hearing by a competent, independent and impartial tribunal in the determination of any criminal charge against them,

Aware of the fact that, despite releases of prisoners in some countries, the general situation as regards the arrest and detention of persons belonging to the above-mentioned categories remains as serious as before,

1. Recognizes that the arrest and detention, in many parts of the world, of numerous persons on the above-mentioned grounds often give rise to serious human rights problems and that effective measures should be taken to eliminate these problems;

2. Reiterates, therefore, the requests to Member States in General Assembly resolutions 32/121 and 33/169 regarding the release of such persons and the assurance that their fundamental human rights are protected during their arrest or detention.

Expressing again its emotion at the anguish and sorrow of the families of victims of involuntary or enforced disappearances,

The Economic and Social Council.

Recalling General Assembly resolution 32/62 of 8 December 1977, by which the Assembly requested the Commission on Human Rights to draw up a draft convention against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and Council resolution 1979/35 of 10 May 1979, by which it authorized an open-ended working group of the Commission on Human Rights to meet for a period of one week prior to the thirty-sixth session of the Commission to complete the work on a draft convention against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

Considering that it was not found possible to complete the work on the draft convention during the thirty-sixth session of the Commission,

Taking note of resolution 34(XXXVI) of 12 March 1980 of the Commission on Human Rights,

1. Authorizes a meeting of an open-ended working group of the Commission on Human Rights for a period of one week prior to the thirty-seventh session of the Commission, to complete the work on a draft convention against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Commission on Human Rights at its thirty-seventh session all the material relevant to the draft convention.

Resolution 35/179, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/743, adopted without vote by Assembly on 15 December 1980, meeting 96.

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 3452(XXX) of 9 December 1975,

Bearing in mind article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Recalling once again its resolutions 32/62 of 8 December 1977, in which it requested the Commission on Human Rights to draw up a draft convention on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in the light of the principles embodied in the Declaration, 32/63 of 8 December 1977, in which it requested the Secretary-General to draw up and circulate among Member States a questionnaire soliciting information concerning steps they had taken, including legislative and administrative measures, to put into practice the principles of the Declaration, and 32/64 of 8 December 1977, in which it called upon Member States to reinforce their support of the Declaration by making unilateral declarations against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

We/coming resolution 11 adopted on 5 September 1980 by the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, in which the Congress expressed the belief that the draft convention should be finalized at the earliest possible time,

1. Welcomes Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/32 of 2 May 1980, by which the Council authorized an open-ended working group of the Commission on Human Rights to meet for a period of one week prior to the thirty-seventh session of the Commission to complete the work on a draft convention against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;

2. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to complete as a matter of urgency, at its thirty-seventh session, the drafting of a convention on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, with a view to submitting a draft, including provisions for the effective implementation of the future convention, to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session;

4. Invites Member States which have not yet done so to deposit the unilateral declarations with the Secretary-General, as called for under General Assembly resolutions 32/64 of 8 December 1977 and 33/178 of 20 December 1978;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its thirty-sixth session the item entitled "Torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment."

A/35/372 and Add. 1-3. Report of Secretary-General.

A/C.3/35/L.83. Australia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Lesotho, Netherlands, Portugal, Sweden, Uganda, United States: draft resolution, as orally revised by sponsors, approved without vote by Third Committee on 5 December, meeting 84.

A/35/743. Report of Third Committee, draft resolution III.

Resolution 35/179, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/743, adopted without vote by Assembly on 15 December 1980, meeting 96.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/168 of 17 December 1979, in which it requested the Secretary-General to circulate the draft Code of Medical Ethics to Member States, the specialized agencies concerned, interested intergovernmental organizations and interested non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council for comments and suggestions,

Taking note of resolution 11 adopted on 5 September 1980 by the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, in which the Congress expressed the hope that the General Assembly would adopt the draft Code, subject to any amendments which appear to be necessary,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the draft Code of Medical Ethics,

Having been unable for lack of time to decide the matter during its thirty-fifth session,

Believing, however, that the elaboration of a draft Code of Medical Ethics constitutes an important step in the establishment of international standards in the field of human rights,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to renew his request for comments and suggestions on the draft Code of Medical Ethics to Member States, the specialized agencies concerned, interested intergovernmental organizations and interested non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council which have not yet responded to his earlier note, and to submit a revised report to the Economic and Social Council at its first regular session of 1981 and to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session;

2. Invites those Member States which have not yet done so to submit their comments and suggestions on the draft Code;

3. Requests the Economic and Social Council to consider the draft Code at its first regular session of 1981, taking into account the comments and recommendations submitted, with a view to presenting it to the General Assembly for adoption at the thirty-sixth session;

4. Invites Member States to take an active part in the future deliberations on the draft Code;

5. Decides to consider again the question of the draft Code of Medical Ethics at its thirty-sixth session under the item entitled "Torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment."

Other human rights questions

Continuing their efforts further to promote and encourage human rights and fundamental freedoms, the Commission on Human Rights, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly in 1980 considered a number of specific human rights questions not covered in the above subchapters.

Several decisions and resolutions concerned institutional aspects of the promotion and protection of human rights (see section immediately following). In addition, the Council reiterated its demand for abolition of all restrictions on trade union rights in South Africa (resolution 1980/33.) With regard to the the human rights of migrant workers, the Assembly, through a working group, started preparation of a draft convention; another group continued work on a draft declaration on the human rights of non-citizens.

Three additional States became parties to one or both of the International Covenants on Human Rights, whose importance was reaffirmed by the Commission, and the Assembly, by resolution 35/132, invited States to become parties to them. As at 31 December, 52 States had signed one or both of the two Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 concerning respect for human rights in armed conflicts, and 17 had ratified or acceded to one or both of them.

The Assembly adopted two resolutions on human rights and scientific and technological development (resolutions 35/130 A and B); the second concerned examination of the question of the protection of persons detained on grounds of mental ill-health. By another decision, the Assembly invited all States to ensure the full implementation of the right to universal education (resolution 35/191). The relationship of human rights to development was also the subject of an Assembly decision (resolution 35/174).

The Commission continued to elaborate a draft convention on the rights of the child, and its Sub-Commission took a number of decisions on slavery and slavery-like practices following consideration of reports of its Working Group on that question. In connexion with its examination of the role of youth in the promotion and protection of human rights, the Commission sought information from Member States on national legislation relating to conscientious objection to military service.

In 1980, a symposium and a seminar were held under the United Nations programme of advisory services in human rights. Fellowships were granted to nationals of 25 countries. On 10 December, Human Rights Day, the thirty-second anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was celebrated.

Details of these and related matters follow.

Further promotion and encouragement of human rights and fundamental freedoms

The Commission on Human Rights, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly took action during 1980 on several institutional aspects of the promotion and protection of human rights.

With regard to the work of the Commission and its Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, the Council decided to reintroduce summary records, issuance of which had been suspended in 1979, and authorized additional meeting services for working groups (decisions 1980/133 and 1980/140). By resolution 1980/30, the Council requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and the International Labour Organisation (ILO), to draw up a world-wide programme for the dissemination of international instruments on human rights.

The Assembly requested the Commission to discuss the question of the establishment of bodies entrusted with fact-finding missions (resolution 35/176) and to consider a proposal for the establishment of a post of United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (resolution 35/175). It requested the Secretary-General to maintain co-operation with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) concerning the elaboration of an African charter of human rights and establishment of an African commission on human rights, and to arrange for a seminar of Asian States in Sri Lanka in 1981 (resolution 35/197). By resolution 35/194, it asked him to keep under consideration the question of redesignating the Division of Human Rights as a Centre for Human Rights.

Programme and methods of work of the Commission and its Sub-Commission

In 1979, the Economic and Social Council had suspended for two years the provision of summary records for the Commission on Human Rights and its Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities,<sup>55</sup>

By decision 1980/133, adopted on 2 May 1980 by a recorded vote, requested by the United States, of 47 to 1, with 5 abstentions, the Council decided that summary records were to be reintroduced, commencing with the Commission's 1981 and the Sub-Commission's 1980 session. The Second (Social) Committee approved the decision, recommended by the Commission, on 29 April by 41 votes to 1, with 3 abstentions.

Speaking in explanation of vote, the United States maintained its opposition to the reinstatement of summary records; it was concerned about the budgetary implications and considered that a Council decision which had been endorsed by the General Assembly should have been referred to the Assembly before being reversed. The USSR said such reinstatement should not involve any increase in expenditures.

This action had been urgently requested by the Commission in a resolution of 11 March. In addition, on 6 February the Commission had decided to send a telegram to the Council President requesting their reintroduction, observing that it had been unable to find any manner in which it could carry on its work without such records without serious prejudice to its work.

With respect to its current meetings, the Commission on 12 February decided to reproduce, in six annexes to its report, records of its discussion on nine agenda items, dealing with: violations of human rights in the occupied Arab territories; violations in southern Africa; adverse consequences for human rights of aid to colonial and racist regimes in southern Africa; the right to self-determination; human rights of detainees and prisoners; promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the Commission's programme and methods of work; violations in any part of the world; implementation of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid;<sup>56</sup> and study of ways to ensure implementation of resolutions on apartheid and racial discrimination and of the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination.<sup>57</sup>

The Council, by decision 1980/140, adopted without a vote on 2 May, authorized three hours of additional meeting services a day during the Commission's 1981 session, on the understanding that such additional services would give all the existing working groups on international instruments of human rights and other matters sufficient time for their deliberations, taking into account pre-session arrangements already provided for two of the groups. The Second Committee approved the text without vote on 29 April, which was based on a Commission recommendation of 12 March, orally amended in Committee by Ireland, which accepted sub-amendments by the USSR. Ireland added to the Commission's recommended text the Council's understanding. The USSR added the reference to "other matters" being dealt with by working groups and to the specific decisions authorizing pre-session arrangements (i.e. resolution 1980/32 and decision 1980/138 of 2 May, dealing with work on draft conventions against torture and on the rights of the child; see pp. 845 and 869, respectively).

By a resolution of 11 March, the Commission decided to continue its overall analysis of the United Nations approach to the promotion and encouragement of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the question of the Commission's programme and methods of work and alternative approaches and means within the United Nations system to improve the enjoyment of human rights. It decided to establish to that end at the beginning of its 1981 session an open-ended sessional working group, which was also to consider the question of the co-ordination of specific human rights activities within the United Nations system and make recommendations regarding the overall analysis for Commission consideration. The Commission requested the Secretary-General to seek the views of Governments on the possibility of the creation of an intersessional role for its Bureau and on the possible need for emergency sessions to respond to reports of flagrant human rights violations of an urgent nature. It asked him to submit to it in 1981 information on intersessional roles of other United Nations bureaux and on the means and financial implications of convening intersessional and emergency meetings.

By resolution 35/174 of 15 December (see p. 865), the General Assembly reiterated its 1979 request<sup>58</sup> to the Commission to continue its work on the overall analysis with a view to further promoting and improving human rights and fundamental freedoms and on the overall analysis of the alternative approaches and ways and means for improving the effective enjoyment of those rights and freedoms, and emphasized the necessity of establishing the new international economic order to ensure their promotion and enjoyment.

Pursuant to the Assembly's 1979 resolution on this question,<sup>59</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a progress report to the Assembly in September 1980 on the Commission's ongoing work on the overall analyses, outlining the principal decisions -including the above 11 March resolution- taken by the Commission in this connexion at its 1980 session, as well as activities of the Division of Human Rights.

The Commission, by a decision of 29 February, decided to consider further in 1981 a 1979 resolution of the Sub-Commission recommending a change in the name of the Sub-Commission, voting by secret ballot and biannual meetings.

Regarding these topics-and in view of the increasing number, importance and complexity of subjects discussed by its members, the increasing number of working groups and the heavy workload imposed on the Division of Human Rights in the preparation of documents for it-the Sub-Commission, by a resolution of 12 September, again requested the Commission to recommend to the Economic and Social Council that it authorize the Sub-Commission to meet for two weeks twice a year, alternating between New York and Geneva, that the Sub-Commission be renamed the Sub-Commission of the Commission on Human Rights, and that it be empowered to vote by secret ballot, should it so decide.

On the same day, the Sub-Commission postponed discussion of the question of its competence to send telegrams to Governments referring to respect for human rights in their countries.

Fact-finding missions

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/176 on alternative approaches and ways and means within the United Nations system to improve the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms. By the first operative paragraph of this resolution, it considered that the question of the establishment of bodies entrusted with fact-finding missions and the extent to which they might enhance the promotion and protection of human rights required serious consideration, and, by the second, requested the Commission on Human Rights to discuss this question at its 1981 session.

The Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee approved the text without vote on 26 November, as sponsored and twice revised by Italy, which had taken into account joint amendments by Algeria, Cuba, India and Yugoslavia. The amendments substituted the two operative paragraphs for one which would have expressed the view that in principle the creation of such bodies might usefully strengthen existing procedures and enhance the role of the United Nations in protecting human rights; it had not requested consideration by the Commission. The first operative paragraph was approved by a separate vote of 58 to 1, with 58 abstentions. Had the resolution been put to the vote, Indonesia said, it would have abstained.

Regional arrangements for the promotion of human rights

In 1979, the General Assembly had requested the Secretary-General, under the programme of advisory services in human rights, to explore with the States in areas where regional arrangements in the field of human rights did not exist the possibility of holding a seminar to discuss methods to promote and protect human rights.<sup>60</sup>

In an August 1980 report on the implementation of that resolution, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that he had followed closely the efforts of governmental and non-governmental organizations to encourage the establishment of regional or subregional human rights arrangements and was currently exploring with certain States the possibility of holding the suggested seminar as soon as possible.

The Assembly adopted resolution 35/197 on such regional and subregional arrangements. Noting with satisfaction current OAU efforts to elaborate an African charter of human rights and set up an African commission on human rights, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to maintain close co-operation with the OAU Secretary-General on that matter. It welcomed an offer by Sri Lanka to host a seminar of Asian Member States to consider regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights and requested the Secretary-General, after consultations with the States concerned, to arrange for holding the seminar at Colombo in 1981.

The resolution was adopted without vote on 15 December, following its approval in the same manner by the Third Committee on 28 November. The text was sponsored by Bangladesh, Barbados, Ireland, Jamaica, Morocco, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Somalia, Sri Lanka and the United Kingdom.

The Lao People's Democratic Republic said it had serious reservations with regard to the request to the Secretary-General to make the needed arrangements for the seminar; it appeared to oblige him to convene the seminar in 1981 even before knowing the results of the consultations, which could seriously prejudice the seminar's results. Guinea expressed reservations on that paragraph because it did not feel the Assembly had taken a final decision on the calendar of conferences and meetings.

Israel observed that it had supported the adoption of the text without vote on the understanding that any regional arrangements would be made on a non-discriminatory basis.

Secretariat services

concerned with human rights

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1980/132 adopted without vote on 2 May, endorsed a request contained in a resolution of 28 February of the Commission on Human Rights that the Secretary-General consider, if he deemed it appropriate, the redesignation of the Division of Human Rights as a Centre for Human Rights and ensure adequate resources for the human rights sector in the Secretariat. The Second Committee had approved the text without vote on 29 April.

Italy proposed an oral amendment to have the Council join in the General Assembly's request to the Secretary-General for redesignation,<sup>61</sup> thus bringing the Council's decision in line with the Commission's resolution, but subsequently withdrew it. Following consultations, Cyprus proposed the text adopted, which, in its opening phrase, endorsed the request by the Commission as contained in its resolution of 28 February- rather than, after noting the resolution, requesting the Secretary-General to consider the redesignation. The original text was proposed by the Commission.

Brazil and the USSR, speaking after approval of the decision, believed that the redesignation was unnecessary. The USSR recalled its suggestion that the Division should become part of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, since the questions the Centre dealt with included those of human rights. Ireland and the United Kingdom, on the other hand, thought that there was full justification for giving the Division an appropriate title.

In a November report on Secretariat services concerned with human rights, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that a thorough review of the financial and other resources allocated to the human rights sector was currently in progress and that the Assembly would be informed of its outcome, either in an additional report or in the context of the presentation of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1981-1983. With respect to redesignation, he stated that, while the Division of Human Rights met the technical criteria for a Centre for Human Rights, he believed that further consideration was required.

The Assembly, by resolution 35/194 of 15 December, requested the Secretary-General to keep the question under consideration with a view to redesignating the Division as a Centre for Human Rights when he deemed it appropriate, taking into account views expressed at the current Assembly session.

The resolution was adopted without vote, following approval by the Third Committee by consensus on 5 December. The text was sponsored and orally revised by Italy following consultations. Italy replaced its original operative paragraphs, which would have requested the Secretary-General to proceed with the redesignation of the Division as a Centre and would have further requested him to report on implementation to the Commission and the Assembly in 1981. Italy's revision also expanded the sixth preambular paragraph to encompass more of the Secretary-General's statement pertaining to the redesignation in his report-a statement noted in the paragraph. The words "the Division of Human Rights meets the technical criteria for a Centre, as set forth in his report on organizational nomenclature in the Secretariat"-a 1977 report<sup>62</sup>- in that paragraph were approved separately, by a roll-call vote of 89 to 0, with 25 abstentions. A recorded vote was taken at the request of the United Kingdom; that it be a roll call vote was a request of Fiji. The United Kingdom said it had requested the vote to enable countries to express their views so that the Secretary-General would be clearly aware of them. The USSR said it would abstain in the vote on the phrase; it was unacceptable that a sentence from the Secretary-General's report should be quoted out of context as the meaning thus became distorted. The Niger said it had not participated because a vote on the phrase, rather than the paragraph, seemed illogical.

Egypt proposed an oral amendment to have the Secretary-General take into account the views expressed "in this connexion," but withdrew it on the understanding that due account should be taken of the views expressed on the subject at several Assembly sessions rather than merely at the current session, as indicated in the text. The Niger proposed reformulation of the text to redesignate the Division, rather than keep the question under consideration with a view to redesignating it, but withdrew the proposal in favour of the consensus hoped for by the resolution's sponsor.

Speaking in explanation of vote, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR said they had not opposed the resolution on the understanding that the Secretary-General would take account of the opinion of all delegations; moreover, they considered that the text would put an end to attempts to bring pressure to bear on the Secretary-General at every session. Hungary also opposed changing the designation. Jamaica, New Zealand and Portugal said they would have preferred the original text.

Public information activities in the field of human rights

The Economic and Social Council adopted without vote on 2 May, as resolution 1980/30, a text recommended by the Commission on Human Rights on 11 March urging government action to facilitate publicity on United Nations activities in human rights, with particular reference to the work of the Commission. The Council thereby requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with UNESCO and ILO, to draw up and implement a world-wide programme for the dissemination of international instruments on human rights in as many languages as possible and to report on its implementation to the Commission at its 1981 session. The Secretary-General was asked: to inform the Committee on Information of the Assembly's strong hopes for recommendations to develop public information activities in the human rights field; to invite Governments, organizations and United Nations information centres to comment on implementation of this resolution; to ensure adequate resources for preparation and distribution of human rights publications; and to report on these matters to the Commission in 1981.

The Second Committee approved the text without vote on 29 April. The Commission's proposed draft was orally amended in Committee by Ireland and subamended by the USSR, whose amendments were accepted without objection. Ireland inserted the paragraph to request the Secretary-General to ensure that adequate resources were available to permit the prompt (a USSR subamendment substituted "speedy") preparation and distribution of the existing publications of the services of the Secretariat (the USSR replaced the last eight words with the phrase "existing United Nations publications") concerned with human rights.

Pursuant to a 1979 request by the Commission,<sup>63</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report to it in 1980 summarizing existing public information activities in the field of human rights and containing proposals for their further development. With regard to future activities, the Secretary-General stated that it was planned that, in co-operation with the Division of Human Rights, an information circular on recent developments be issued on a regular basis by the Press and Publications Division of the Department of Public Information (DPI). Task forces on human rights at United Nations Headquarters, New York, and in Geneva would continue to give close attention to the needs for public information activities in human rights, with a view to intensifying them. In order to bring about greater public awareness, the Division of Human Rights would collaborate with DPI to highlight special themes or selected topics.

In section III of its resolution 35/201 of 16 December, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to ensure that DPI continued to orient its work also towards the dissemination of information on promotions of human rights, among other topics see p. 473).

Creation of a post of High Commissioner for Human Rights

By resolution 35/175 of 15 December, adopted without vote, the General Assembly requested the Commission on Human Rights to consider a proposal for the establishment of a post of United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights under an agenda item entitled "Further promotion and encouragement of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the question of the programme and methods of work of the Commission: alternative approaches and ways and means within the United Nations system for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms." It asked the Commission to submit, through the Economic and Social Council, to the Assembly at its regular 1981 session a report on its work on that item, including the views expressed in the Commission with regard to the proposal, and decided to consider the question at that session under the item "Alternative approaches and ways and means within the United Nations system for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms."

The Third Committee approved the text on 26 November, also without vote, as sponsored by Canada, Costa Rica, Denmark, the Dominican Republic, the Gambia, Honduras, Lesotho, the Netherlands, Norway, Senegal, Spain and Suriname; the sponsors accepted several amendments proposed jointly by Algeria, Cuba, India and Yugoslavia.

As a result of those amendments, the first preambular paragraph was replaced: rather than recall its 1979 resolution<sup>64</sup> by which it had decided, with respect to an overall analysis of United Nations alternative approaches to human rights undertaken by the Commission, to consider at its 1980 regular session the question of the creation of a post of High Commissioner, the Assembly recalled that resolution, in which it had decided to consider the question under a specific agenda item (with the same title as that under which it was to be considered in 1981). The fourth and fifth preambular paragraphs were also replaced: they had originally recognized the long-standing interest in the establishment of the post as a means of improving the effectiveness of United Nations machinery for promoting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms, and had expressed belief that a decision on the establishment of such a post would be facilitated if more careful examination of its possible terms of reference was carried out; these were replaced by paragraphs taking note of the proposal for the establishment of such a post and bearing in mind that the proposal required more careful examination.

The three operative paragraphs were also replaced. Originally they would have requested the Commission to give comprehensive consideration in 1981 to the possible terms of reference of a High Commissioner and submit its views to the Assembly that year, when it would consider them, taking into account the work done on the subject, including the Commission's views, and requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission and the Assembly in 1981 a tabulation of the possible terms of reference suggested to date to the Assembly, the Council, the Commission and its Sub-Commission for the proposed High Commissioner. A fourth operative paragraph, by which the Assembly would have decided to consider the question at its 1981 session under an item entitled "Question of the establishment of a United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights" was deleted.

Speaking after approval of the text, Brazil said it considered the resolution superfluous. Gabon, Nepal and Thailand said they would have abstained, and the Philippines and Saudi Arabia would have voted against, had the text been put to a vote. India and the USSR said they had not opposed adoption since they regarded it as procedural, but maintained their positions in opposition to the creation of such a post. The United Kingdom said it would have preferred the original wording.

Individualization of prosecution and penalties

The Commission on Human Rights, by a resolution of 11 March, reaffirmed all relevant principles governing the fundamental safeguards of the individual set forth in particular in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights<sup>65</sup> and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,<sup>66</sup> called on Governments to see to their strict application so that no one could be prosecuted or persecuted merely because of his connexion, particularly family connexion, with a suspect or accused or convicted person, and requested its Sub-Commission to study and submit general recommendations on this question.

Status of international human rights conventions

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, which had a five-member sessional working group to consider ways to encourage universal acceptance of a list of specific human rights instruments, decided, on 11 September, that the question of the designation of the human rights instruments to be included in that list—among them the 1979 International Convention against the Taking of Hostages<sup>67</sup> and the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>68</sup> in addition to a number of others designated by the Sub-Commission in 1979<sup>69</sup>—would be considered at the next group's session. It decided to allot more time to the group's sessions in view of the volume and complexity of its work, and requested the Secretary-General to prepare and make available to the group a study on extra-territorial criminal responsibility, with special reference to the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid.<sup>70</sup>

The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly in August his annual report on the status of international human rights conventions for which he acted as depositary. The report listed 20 instruments and the States which had ratified or acceded to them as at 30 June 1980.

Allegations of infringements of trade union rights in South Africa

The Economic and Social Council adopted, without vote on 2 May, resolution 1980/33, by which it requested the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa of the Commission on Human Rights to continue to study the situation of trade union rights in South Africa, consulting with ILO and the Special Committee against Apartheid as well as with international and African trade union confederations. The Council reiterated its demand for the immediate and complete abolition of all restrictions on the trade union rights of all African workers in South Africa, including migrant workers from neighbouring countries, and the immediate and unconditional recognition of all existing African trade unions. It deplored the manœuvres of the South African Government and companies, including transnational corporations, to weaken the African trade union movement through the establishment of so-called parallel trade unions, and the harassment of officials of independent unions. The Council demanded the release of all trade unionists in prison and the lifting of all banning orders imposed on persons engaged in trade union activities.

The Second Committee approved the resolution, sponsored by Algeria, Finland, Ghana, India, Nigeria, Senegal, Sweden, the United Republic of Tanzania, Yugoslavia and Zambia, on 30 April, also without vote.

This resolution was adopted after the Council had examined the January 1980 report of the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts. This was principally a progress report on developments concerning problems and practices in violation of human rights in southern Africa, but also dealt with South Africa's suppression of the right to organize trade unions. The report recounted reaction and resistance to the recommendations of the 1979 report of the Wiehahn Commission, set up in South Africa to examine ways industrial relations in the country could be reformed. It also gave the most recent examples of struggles by black trade unions for recognition, and noted that a number of companies had failed to abide by the code of conduct recommended by the European Economic Community (EEC) to companies operating in the country. The Group's report noted that, in connexion with 51 industrial strikes in South Africa, 250 employees had been prosecuted for strike action. (See also p. 810.)

The portion of the Group's report that concerned infringements of trade union rights was submitted to the Council separately in March.

Explaining their position after approval of the resolution, Australia, Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and the United Kingdom said the provision deploring manœuvres of companies to weaken the African trade union movement should be understood as applying only to companies which were not implementing EEC's code of conduct in full.

Human rights of migrant workers

Pursuant to a 1979 Economic and Social Council resolution,<sup>71</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the Council in February 1980 a report covering the activities of United Nations bodies and specialized agencies which were co-operating in the preparation of an international convention on the protection of the rights of all migrant workers. As of 1 January, substantive replies to the Secretary-General's invitation of 29 May 1979 to those bodies to forward their views or information on the subject had been received from nine United Nations bodies and four specialized agencies, and were summarized in his report.

The Council took note of the Secretary-General's report when it adopted, without vote on 30 April, resolution 1980/16 on measures to improve the situation of migrant workers. It expressed concern that the Commission on Human Rights was unable to consider the question at its 1980 session (on 12 March it had postponed consideration to its 1981 session) and invited international organizations to co-operate with the working group the General Assembly had decided in 1979<sup>72</sup> to create at its regular 1980 session to elaborate an international convention on the protection of the rights of all migrant workers and their families. The Council invited the Commission to devote, at its 1981 session, all the time required to implement the Commission's 1979 resolution on the human rights of migrant workers,<sup>73</sup> invited host countries to ensure the protection of migrant workers' families, and decided to make further recommendations to the Assembly's working group in the light of conclusions on the subject which the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission for Social Development would submit in their 1981 reports.

The Second Committee approved the text by consensus on 21 April as sponsored by Algeria, Barbados, Mexico, Pakistan, Romania, Senegal, Turkey and Yugoslavia. The sponsors deleted from the first operative paragraph-noting that, despite some Governments' and organizations' efforts, migrant workers continued to be denied the enjoyment of their basic rights- the adjective "full" which had preceded "enjoyment." The sponsors accepted a suggestion by the Federal Republic of Germany to add "a considerable number of" before "migrant workers" in that paragraph. They also accepted an oral proposal by France to include a new paragraph inviting international organizations to participate in the working group's deliberations, and a drafting change proposed by the Committee Chairman.

In related actions, the Commission on the Status of Women adopted at its February/March session a resolution recommending that the Council consider also the plight of female migrant workers and the wives of migrant workers and make recommendations to the 1980 Assembly session (see p. 887). In addition, the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women, held in July, called for an end to discrimination against migrants, recommended a number of principles that States should adopt as a basis for their action relating to migrant women, and recommended that the Assembly's working group for elaborating a draft convention should devote particular attention to the problems of migrant women (see p. 895).

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities adopted, on 2 September, a resolution requesting the Commission on Human Rights to ask the Council to arrange for a 1976 report by Halima Embarek Warzazi (Morocco), the Special Rapporteur charged with studying the exploitation of labour through illicit and clandestine trafficking, to be printed as soon as possible and given the widest possible dissemination, and expressed the hope that she would be able to participate in the Assembly's working group. In a resolution on slavery and the slave trade, adopted on 10 September (see p. 868), the Sub-Commission requested the Secretary-General to bring to the attention of Governments concerned, the Organization of American States (OAS) and relevant specialized agencies for comment a report concerning migrant workers, submitted to the Sub-Commission's Working Group on slavery in August 1979.

The Chairman of the Working Group on the Drafting of an International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Their Families, Antonio González de León (Mexico), reported to the Assembly on 25 November on the Group's activities during its 10 meetings held between 8 October and 19 November. Convened by the Third Committee and open to all Member States, the Group held a broad preliminary exchange of views on the basic rights of migrant workers and their families, seeking to identify the essential elements which should be included in the envisaged convention. The Chairman's report noted that delegations realized that they would not, at the current session, be able to begin the work of drawing up a draft convention.

The Group, at its last meeting, decided to annex to its report the documents before it: a survey by the Secretary-General of some international instruments in the field of human rights concerning distinctions in the enjoyment of certain rights as between nationals and non-citizens; a paper by ilco on the possible contents of a convention; working papers by Italy and the United States reflecting their concerns and matters of special significance to their Governments; and two working papers by the Chairman, one seeking to reflect the main concerns which had emerged in the documents and debates up to the end of October, and the other containing an outline for the convention, which included a synthesis of the basic themes which, in the Chairman's opinion, had been identified in the documents and discussions.

The International Labour Organisation, which participated in the Group's deliberations, submitted to the Assembly on 2 September a note on its standards and activities relating to the protection of migrant workers.

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/198, by which it decided that the Working Group should meet for two weeks immediately after the Economic and Social Council's April/May 1981 session and during the regular 1981 Assembly session, in order to continue its work. It invited the Secretary-General to communicate to Governments the Chairman's report and its annexed documents to enable the Group's members, in the light of instructions from their Governments, to undertake preparation, at the intersessional May meeting, of a preliminary draft convention for consideration by the Assembly at its regular 1981 session. It also invited the Secretary-General to communicate the report and documents, for information purposes, to the competent United Nations organs and interested international organizations, so that they could participate in the Group's work, and to communicate to those organs and organizations, and to Governments, the draft convention to be drawn up, in order to ensure effective preparation of the Assembly's 1981 work on elaborating a draft convention.

The resolution was adopted by a recorded vote of 131 to 0, with 11 abstentions, following its approval by the Third Committee on 28 November by a recorded vote, requested by the Netherlands, of 117 to 0, with 12 abstentions. It had 23 sponsors (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Algeria, on behalf of the sponsors, revised the original text: to change references to the Working Group's report to references to the report of the Group's Chairman; to insert operative paragraph 5 inviting the Secretary-General to communicate, for information purposes, the Group's documents to competent United Nations organs and interested international organizations; and to include those organs and organizations, in paragraph 6, as well as Governments, among those which were to receive the report and the preliminary draft convention.

Separate votes were taken on several oral amendments. The Committee rejected:

- a United States proposal (replacing an earlier proposal to delete paragraph 2) to take note with appreciation, rather than with satisfaction, of the report-by 19 votes in favour to 71 against, with 23 abstentions;

- three United States amendments to paragraphs 4, 5 and 6, to have the effect of inviting comments from Governments on the report, the annexed documents and the draft convention-by 33 votes in favour to 61 against, with 21 abstentions, by 30 to 64, with 19 abstentions, and by 30 to 65, with 19 abstentions, respectively; and

- a Niger amendment to delete from paragraph 4, inviting transmittal of the Group's documents in order to enable its members, in the light of instructions from their respective Governments, to undertake in May 1981 the preparation of the preliminary draft convention, the words "their respective" in order, Niger said, that comments might be received from States which had not participated in the Group's work-by 13 votes in favour to 57 against, with 39 abstentions.

The United States withdrew proposals it had made to add a preambular reference to economic benefits derived by States of origin from migrant workers, and to change a reference to the need for further efforts to ensure the protection of the rights and the improvement of the living conditions of migrants and families to the need "to consider" further efforts.

Speaking in explanation of vote, New Zealand and the United States said they did not see the need for a new convention; if one was needed, it should be worked out within the framework of ILO—a view shared by the Netherlands. Moreover, the United States regretted that the text did not refer to countries of origin, which had a major responsibility in this area, and it had difficulties with the Chairman's report, which it considered incomplete, inaccurate and biased. France deplored the fact that the resolution did not give the specialized agencies the position they deserved, and, since the relevant amendments had been rejected, had felt obliged to abstain. New Zealand also felt that comments should have been invited from States and specialized agencies. The United Kingdom had reservations about the financial implications as well as the absence of reference to the need for such comments. Portugal would have preferred a consensus; without the co-operation of the host country and the country of origin, it said, no solution could be reached—a view shared by the Netherlands.

International Covenants on Human Rights

Status of the International Covenants

During 1980, three additional States became parties to one or both of the International Covenants on Human Rights adopted by the General Assembly in 1966: the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, together with its Optional Protocol.<sup>74</sup>

France, Nicaragua and Sri Lanka ratified or acceded to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. That Covenant, which entered into force on 3 January 1976, had the following 66 States parties as of 31 December 1980:

Australia, Austria, Barbados, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Guinea, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Iran, Iraq, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritius, Mongolia, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Rwanda, Senegal, Spain, Sri Lanka, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zaire.

The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which entered into force on 23 March 1976, had been ratified or acceded to by all the above States except the Philippines, Australia having ratified it during 1980. The Optional Protocol to that Covenant, which entered into force on the same date, had the following States as parties: Barbados, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Finland, Iceland, Italy, Jamaica, Madagascar, Mauritius, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Peru, Senegal, Suriname, Sweden, Trinidad and Tobago, Uruguay, Venezuela, Zaire.

In addition, Sri Lanka made declarations, pursuant to article 41 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, recognizing the competence of the Human Rights Committee, established under that Covenant, to receive and consider communications by a State party claiming that another State party was not fulfilling its obligations under the Covenant. Fourteen parties had made such a declaration: Austria, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Italy, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Senegal, Sri Lanka, Sweden, United Kingdom. The provisions of article 41 came into force on 28 March 1979.

By a resolution of 21 February, the Commission on Human Rights reaffirmed the importance of the International Covenants as major parts of international efforts to promote universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms and encouraged Governments to publish their texts and disseminate them widely. It urged all States which had not done so to become parties to the Covenants and to consider acceding to the Optional Protocol, and invited the States parties to the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights to consider making the declaration provided for in article 41. By another resolution of that date, the Commission invited States which had not ratified the Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to do so and to carry out the commitments in that Covenant.

After receiving an annual report from the Secretary-General on the status of ratifications, accessions and signatures to the Covenants and the Optional Protocol, the General Assembly, by resolution 35/132 -adopted without vote on 11 December-again invited States to become parties to the Covenants and to consider acceding to the Protocol, and invited the States parties to the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights to consider making the declaration provided for in article 41. The resolution also dealt with aspects of the implementation of each Covenant (see following subsections). It was approved without vote on 7 November by the Third Committee, where it was sponsored by 21 countries (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

The Byelorussian SSR, Poland, the Ukrainian SSR and the Lao People's Democratic Republic, in letters dated 28 November and 12, 16 and 24 December, respectively, characterized as invalid the signing by what they termed the "so-called Government of Democratic Kampuchea" of human rights instruments on 17 October, including the two Covenants.

Ecuador, by a note verbale of 1 October, forwarded a letter of 18 September from Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela to the Secretary-General, transmitting the Charter of Conduct signed on 11 September at Riobamba, Ecuador, by the four countries, joined by Costa Rica, Panama and Spain which acceded to its purpose and spirit. The signatories agreed to make efforts to adopt common policies in a number of areas, act jointly in the face of economic threat, encourage peaceful dispute-settlement and promote new integral development schemes, based on social justice, among other efforts to respect and enrich their common principles and values.

By a letter of 27 October, the German Democratic Republic transmitted to the Secretary-General the resolutions adopted at the Sixty-seventh Inter-Parliamentary Conference (Berlin, 14-25 September) pertaining to, among other subjects, international law and human rights, including the situation in various specific countries.

Implementation of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

The Sessional Working Group on the Implementation of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, set up by the Economic and Social Council to consider the reports of States parties to the Covenant, held its second session at United Nations Headquarters from 11 to 25 April. Fourteen of the States making up the Group, which were also States parties to the Covenant, were appointed by the Council President, and the Council took note of this action on 9 and 11 April, incorporating it into decision 1980/111, which it adopted without vote. In announcing the appointments on 11 April, the President said he had detected a lack of interest in and willingness to serve on the Group, which caused him to doubt whether the right mechanism had been chosen for dealing with the implementation of the Covenant. On 25 April, by the same decision, the Council, after a statement by the President concerning the appointment of one member from Latin American States to fill a remaining vacancy in the Group, agreed that at the current session, without creating a precedent, there was no need to proceed with that appointment, inasmuch as the Group was concluding its work that day.

The Working Group considered 24 reports received from States parties concerning the rights covered by articles 6 to 9 (the right to work and to favourable conditions of work, rights of trade unionists and the right to social security) of the Covenant, which were selected for attention in the first biennial stage of the reporting procedure, and proposals relating to the review of the Group's composition and mandate. As at 1 February, the effective date in a report to the Council by the Secretary-General on the status of ratifications or accessions to the Covenant and on the submission of reports under the first and second stages of the reporting procedure, 27 States had submitted their reports: Australia, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Chile, Colombia, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia (consideration deferred), Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Hungary, Iran (withdrawn), Jamaica, Mongolia, Norway, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Spain, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic (deferred), Tunisia, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Kingdom. Madagascar reported in November. The Secretary-General presented to the Council in February an analytical summary of the reports on these articles he had received from Jamaica, Spain and the Syrian Arab Republic, updating his 1979 report to the end of that year.

The International Labour Organisation presented its third report under Covenant article 18, prepared by its Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations, which met in March, relating to progress achieved in observing articles 6 to 9 in the reporting countries of Bulgaria, Jamaica, Spain and the Syrian Arab Republic.

Reports under the second stage of the programme (rights covered by articles 10 to 12 pertaining to the protection of the family, mothers and children, an adequate standard of living, and physical and mental health) were received from 21 States-Austria, Byelorussian SSR, Chile, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iraq, Mongolia, Norway, Panama, Poland, Romania, Senegal, Sweden,

Syrian Arab Republic, USSR, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania-as at 3 October. The Secretary-General submitted an analytical summary of the reports on these articles which he had received by 10 January. These reports were not examined in 1980.

The World Health Organization submitted a report under article 18 of the Covenant, on the implementation of article 12 at the international level and on relevant global policy decided collectively by its member States.

A draft resolution proposed by the Group's Bureau was subsequently withdrawn. By that text, the Working Group would have recommended the adoption of a resolution by which the Economic and Social Council would have welcomed the efforts to establish a constructive dialogue with the States parties whose reports were considered, recommended to the States parties to study the views of the Working Group on their reports with a view to adopting further measures, if necessary, or providing clarifications where needed, and invited those which had not submitted reports to do so as soon as possible.

The Working Group's report also contained a synopsis of five proposals considered by the Group-although not in depth owing to time constraints-which had been put forward in view of the difficulties it had faced at its first two sessions. It recommended that the Council should consider reviewing the Group's membership and composition as well as the possibility of allowing the Group to meet for three weeks annually before the Council's first regular session, and that consideration be given to appointing the Group's members for two or three years at the Council's organizational session from a list of candidates nominated by the Covenant's States parties, in order to allow it to meet before the Council's first regular session.

On 6 February, the Council-by decision 1980/102 adopted, without vote, on a proposal of its President in light of consultative meetings-decided to carry out at its organizational session for 1981 the review of the composition of the Working Group called for by the Council in 1978.<sup>75</sup>

The Council also adopted without vote, on 2 May, resolution 1980/24, by which it decided to review at its 1981 organizational session the composition, organization and administrative arrangements of the Group, requested the Secretary-General to solicit, and report to the Council at that session on, the views on this subject of Council members and all States parties to the Covenant, and decided that the Group would be constituted at that session under existing arrangements, starting its work at the beginning of the April/May 1981 session if the review could not be concluded at the organizational session.

On the same date, by decision 1980/122-adopted, without objection, as orally proposed by the Council President- the Council took note of the Working Group's report.

Resolution 1980/24 was sponsored, in its final, sponsor-revised and orally amended form, by Australia, Canada, Cyprus, Ecuador, Finland, the Federal Republic of Germany, Jamaica, Japan, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Senegal, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom. In their statements on the resolution, Chile and France expressed reservations with regard to the procedure of the Working Group in its consideration of reports. The United Kingdom expressed the hope that the Council would agree to set up a pre-sessional working group composed of experts from States parties to the Covenant who were members of the Council. Brazil said it could not support the system whereby expenses for the implementation of the Covenant were covered by the United Nations regular budget. The Federal Republic of Germany agreed with the Council President's suggestion that informal consultations be held during the Council's second 1980 session with a view to facilitating the proceedings, on the basis of which it might be possible to appoint a pre-sessional working group.

The General Assembly, in its resolution 35/132 of 11 December (see preceding subsection), welcomed the Council resolution regarding the consideration of reports under the Covenant, invited States to become parties to the Covenant, and asked the Secretary-General for another status report in 1981.

By resolution 35/191 on the right to education, adopted on 15 December, the Assembly appealed to States which had not done so to accelerate the procedure of ratification of the Covenant and to put its provisions into effect systematically (see p. 863).

Implementation of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights

The third meeting of the States parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights was held at the United Nations Headquarters on 12 September. Nine members of the Human Rights Committee were elected to replace those whose terms were due to expire on 31 December.

The Human Rights Committee, established under the Covenant, held its ninth and tenth sessions at Geneva from 17 March to 3 April and from 14 July to 1 August, respectively, on which it reported to the General Assembly in September. It held its eleventh session at Geneva from 20 to 31 October. The Committee continued to consider reports submitted by States parties to the Covenant on the measures they had taken to implement it. The Committee dealt in 1980 with reports from Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Hungary, Iraq, Italy, Mongolia, Senegal, Suriname and Venezuela.

The Committee also adopted final views on several communications, submitted to it under the Optional Protocol to the Covenant, alleging violations of the Covenant by Uruguay. This procedure permits individuals claiming that their rights have been violated, after they have exhausted all available domestic remedies, to submit written communications to the Committee for consideration. One communication, submitted by Ana María García Lanza de Netto on behalf of her aunt and uncle Beatriz Weismann Lanza and Alcides Lanza Perdomo, 'who later joined as submitting parties, alleged that the two relatives had been arbitrarily arrested, kept incommunicado, mistreated and detained without charges for many months. Another, submitted by Luciano Weinberger Weisz on behalf of his brother, Ismael Weinberger, was alleged by the author to have been arrested without warrant and convicted for his political and trade union activities. Three other communications from Uruguayan citizens-William Torres Ramírez, Miguel Ángel Millán Sequeira and Alberto Grille Motta-alleged arrest, mistreatment, detainment without access to legal assistance and denial of recourse to habeas corpus.

In each of these cases, in final views adopted on 3 April, 23 and 29 July and 28 October, the Committee was of the view that the State party was under an obligation to provide the victims with effective remedies, including compensation (and, in the Weinberger case, immediate release), and take steps to ensure that similar violations did not occur. In the last-mentioned case, a dissenting opinion was appended to the Committee's view by a Committee member.

The Committee decided on 28 March to discontinue consideration of a communication submitted by Guillermo Waksman, an Uruguayan journalist; it took note with satisfaction that the State party had taken steps to remedy the passport matter complained of.

On another aspect of its work, the Committee decided that extracts from reports by States parties concerning articles of interest to the specialized agencies should be transmitted to them on a regular basis, and agreed that information from the agencies on corresponding provisions of their instruments should similarly be made available to Committee members, and other information on request.

In accordance with the Covenant, the Committee's report was to be submitted to the General Assembly through the Economic and Social Council. However, by decision 1980/187 of 25 July-adopted, without vote, as orally proposed by the Council President on a recommendation of the Secretariat-the Council authorized the Secretary-General to transmit the report directly to the 1980 Assembly session.

The Secretary-General submitted on 10 September a report regarding future meetings of the Committee and, in particular, exploring the possibility of the holding of future meetings in a developing country, as the Assembly had requested in 1979,<sup>76</sup> and suggesting the establishment of a trust fund for that purpose.

The General Assembly, by resolution 35/132 of 11 December (see subsection above): noted with appreciation the Committee's report and expressed satisfaction at the manner in which it was undertaking its functions; expressed its appreciation to the States parties to the Covenant which had co-operated with the Committee in submitting their reports; urged those which had not submitted their reports to do so as speedily as possible, and those which had been requested to provide additional information to comply; noted that the Committee was considering the question of follow-up to its consideration of reports; appreciated that the Committee was striving for uniform standards in the implementation of the Covenant and Protocol; emphasized the importance of the strictest compliance with obligations under the Covenant; welcomed the measures taken by the Secretary-General to improve publicity for the Committee's work; and requested him to make appropriate arrangements for holding Committee meetings in developing countries.

Speaking in explanation of vote and expressing reservations on this last provision, Brazil said it considered that costs connected with sessions of the Committee should be shared by signatories of the Covenant.

Respect for human rights in armed conflicts

Status of Protocols to the Geneva Conventions

In accordance with a 1979 General Assembly resolution,<sup>77</sup> the Secretary-General submitted his annual report to the Assembly in February 1981 on the status of ratifications of and accessions to-between 30 June 1979 and 19 January 1981-the two 1977 Protocols.<sup>78</sup> Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 concerning respect for human rights in armed conflicts.

As at 31 December 1980, 17 States had ratified or acceded to Protocol I, on the protection of victims of international armed conflicts: Bahamas, Bangladesh, Botswana, Cyprus, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, Gabon, Ghana, Jordan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Niger, Sweden, Tunisia, Yugoslavia. All of these States except Cyprus had also adhered to Protocol II, on the protection of victims of non-international conflicts.

The following States had signed but not ratified or acceded to the Protocols as at 31 December: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Chile, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Egypt, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece (Protocol I only), Guatemala, Holy See, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Mongolia, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines (Protocol I only), Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, San Marino, Senegal, Spain, Switzerland, Togo, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Kingdom, United States, Upper Volta, Viet Nam (Protocol I only), Yemen.

Human rights and scientific and technological developments

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, at its 1980 session, adopted two resolutions on human rights and scientific and technological developments. By the first, adopted on 10 September, it entrusted one of its members, Erica-Irene A. Daes (Greece), with studying the question of the protection of persons detained on grounds of mental ill-health against treatment that might adversely affect the personality, with a view to submitting in 1981 a draft body of guidelines related to the procedures for determining whether adequate grounds existed for detaining persons on such grounds, and of principles for the protection of persons suffering from mental disorder. It requested the Secretary-General to transmit a questionnaire, prepared by the Special Rapporteur, to Governments, specialized agencies and concerned inter- and non-governmental organizations, and decided to establish at its 1981 session a working group to consider her submission, with a view to adopting it at that session.

By the second resolution, adopted on 11 September, the Sub-Commission, noting the risks of interference with privacy posed by the increasing world-wide use of computerized personal files, and convinced that immediate action was needed, requested its Chairman to designate a member to study relevant guidelines in this area and report with proposals to the Sub-Commission in 1981.

The Commission on Human Rights, by a decision of 12 March, had postponed to its 1981 session consideration of the question of human rights and scientific and technological developments.

By a note of 29 May, the Secretary-General outlined the consideration of this question since 1974 by various United Nations bodies.

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted two resolutions on the subject. By the first-resolution 35/130 A-it stressed the importance of implementing its 1975 Declaration on the Use of Scientific and Technological Progress in the Interests of Peace and for the Benefit of Mankind<sup>79</sup> in order to promote human rights under conditions of scientific and technological progress, requested the specialized agencies and other United Nations bodies to take the Declaration into account in their programmes and activities, and requested the Commission on Human Rights to give special attention to and the Secretary-General to submit in 1981 a report on its implementation.

By the second resolution-35/130 B-the Assembly welcomed the action taken by the Sub-Commission to study the question of the protection of persons detained on grounds of mental ill-health, and requested the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights to consider the draft guidelines and principles to be submitted by the Sub-Commission's Special Rapporteur, with a view to submitting them to the 1982 Assembly session.

Resolutions 35/130 A and B were adopted by recorded votes of 111 to 0, with 30 abstentions, and of 78 to 0, with 62 abstentions, respectively. The Third Committee approved them on 7 November by 107 votes to 0, with 26 abstentions, and by a recorded vote, requested by the United Kingdom, of 70 to 0, with 63 abstentions, respectively.

The first resolution was sponsored by Afghanistan, Argentina, the Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, the Dominican Republic, the German Democratic Republic, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mauritania, Mongolia, Poland and Viet Nam. Before joining in the sponsorship of the text, Argentina proposed a sponsor-accepted oral amendment to include a preambular reference to the Declaration on

Social Progress and Development.<sup>80</sup> An oral amendment proposed by Australia, welcoming the Sub-Commission's 11 September resolution relating to a study on guidelines for the protection of individuals against interference, was subsequently withdrawn.

The second resolution was sponsored and orally revised by Costa Rica, Guatemala, Italy, Morocco, the Netherlands, Norway and the United Kingdom. Its fourth preambular paragraph, by which the Assembly took note of the Sub-Commission resolution of 10 September entrusting the submission of guidelines to a Special Rapporteur, was approved separately by 56 votes to 8, with 61 abstentions.

Speaking in explanation of vote on the first resolution, Luxembourg, on behalf of EEC's member States, said they would abstain, recalling that they also had abstained on the Declaration on the Use of Scientific and Technological Progress, and expressed their reservations on the value of the request to the Commission to give it special attention. The United States also abstained because of its reservations on the Declaration.

With regard to the second resolution, the USSR said the draft had nothing to do with human rights and scientific and technological developments. Moreover, the text of the Sub-Commission's resolution was not currently before the Third Committee. The Philippines observed that it had abstained, as it had in 1978 in the vote on a similar resolution.<sup>81</sup>

Right to education

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/191, inviting all States to consider appropriate legislative, administrative and other measures, including material guarantees, in order to ensure the full implementation of the right to universal education, and to give all necessary attention to defining and determining the means for implementing the provisions concerning the role of education in the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s) annexed to Assembly resolution 35/56 of 5 December (see p. 499). It appealed to all States which had not done so to accelerate the procedure of ratification of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights<sup>82</sup> and of the 1960 UNESCO Convention against Discrimination in Education, and to States parties to those and other instruments in the field to put their provisions into effect. The Assembly invited all specialized agencies to co-operate with UNESCO to ensure education a high priority in Development Decade programmes, and appealed again to all States, in particular the developed countries, to support, through fellowships and other means, developing countries' efforts in the education and training of national personnel needed in industry, agriculture and other sectors. It invited the Director of UNESCO to submit to the 1981 Assembly session a report on the most appropriate measures, at the national and international levels, for the effective implementation of the right to education in the application of the Strategy for the Decade.

The Third Committee approved the text—which was sponsored by 44 countries (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below) and introduced by Romania—on 2 December, also without vote.

In explanation of its position on the resolution, Brazil considered that the goals of universal and gradually free-of-charge secondary education should be subject to domestic legislation; in Brazil there was also private education. Also, paragraphs 3 and 4, inviting implementation of provisions on the role of education and priority in education programmes under the new International Development Strategy, would lead to its sectoralization; all the Strategy's goals, Brazil said, not only those of a social nature, required support.

Resolution 35/191 also contained an expression of thanks to the Director-General of UNESCO for a preliminary report transmitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General in a note of 26 September. It had been prepared in accordance with a 1979 request<sup>83</sup> seeking: information on UNESCO activities in relation to education and training of national personnel of developing countries; views on the need for and possibility of reinforcing UNESCO activities for co-operating with those countries' efforts to ensure adequate education networks, fellowships and facilities for training nationals; and information on the difficulties and obstacles encountered in implementing the right to education.

The organization's regular programme, according to the report, covered all levels, types and forms of education, including the training of qualified personnel and administrative staff. Universal and compulsory primary basic schooling and the elimination of illiteracy were two of its main objectives. Resources devoted to the training of personnel in many areas, as for example education and rural development, had increased by approximately 50 per cent between the bienniums 1977-1978 and 1979-1980 and by an additional 20 per cent between 1979-1980 and the triennium 1981-1983; the proposed appropriation for 1981-1983 was about $87.9 million. Extrabudgetary resources had also increased steadily over the years; for 1981-1983, they were estimated at $173 million. Extrabudgetary projects were concerned mainly with training staff in varying specializations and at a variety of levels, for example teacher-training, and with technical and vocational education.

In addition to the regular programme and extrabudgetary activities, other programme sectors, for example the area of natural sciences and technology, contributed to the training of national personnel; total resources devoted to both this field and that of education for 1981-1983 were estimated at $450 million. The question of expanding UNESCO programmes and activities in these areas was essentially one of resources available.

The Director-General also noted that, as at 31 July 1980, 68 States had deposited instruments of acceptance or ratification of the Convention against Discrimination in Education—a frame of reference to ensure to everyone the right to education, one of the basic human rights—whose adoption in 1960 had coincided with the beginning of a series of regional conferences on educational planning at the ministerial level.

Relationship of human rights to development

The Commission on Human Rights, by a resolution of 21 February, reiterated that the right to development was a human right and that equality of opportunity for development was as much a prerogative of nations as of individuals. It requested the Secretary-General to arrange for a Seminar on the Effects of the Existing Unjust International Economic Order on the Economies of the Developing Countries and the Obstacle that this Represents for the Implementation of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, particularly the right to enjoy adequate standards of living.

The Seminar was held at Geneva from 30 June to 11 July, attended by participants from 26 countries as well as representatives from United Nations organs, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and national liberation movements.

The Seminar: recommended research towards establishing practical and legal aspects of the right to development—essential for strengthening nationhood, economic independence and cultural identity— and ways to bring it about; stressed the importance of an interdisciplinary approach to development issues to ensure that human and economic rights complemented rather than competed with each other; urged removal of internal and external constraints to and creation of appropriate environments for development, encouragement of regional economic co-operation, and making public opinion aware of the importance of the establishment of a new economic order for realizing human rights; recommended holding a seminar on ties linking human rights, peace and development and a joint meeting of the Commission on Human Rights, the Commission for Social Development and the Committee for Development Planning to consider aspects of integrating the right to development in the development process; stressed the need for further research into popular participation in promoting human rights and decision-making; recommended developing countries' participation in decision-making in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund; and recommended that the Seminar's aims and conclusions be publicized and its report transmitted to the Assembly.

A number of other conclusions and recommendations, widely supported, did not achieve consensus. The Secretary-General transmitted the report by a note of 26 August to the Assembly's eleventh special (August/September) session on economic development and to its 1980 regular session.

As the Commission on Human Rights had recommended in a resolution of 29 February, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1980/126 of 2 May, authorized the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities to appoint Raúl Ferrero Costa (Peru) as Special Rapporteur to prepare a study on the new international economic order and the promotion of human rights. This decision was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Second Committee, which had similarly approved the Commission-proposed text on 29 April, after Yugoslavia orally corrected a reference to the new international economic order. The Special Rapporteur, who represented the Sub-Commission at the June/July Seminar, made a brief presentation at the August/September session of the Sub-Commission and indicated that his preliminary report would be submitted during 1981.

The Commission, by a resolution of 21 February, renewed its invitation to United Nations economic and social organs to take account in their activities of the Secretary-General's 1979 study on the international dimensions of the right to development as a human right.<sup>84</sup> The Commission invited the Preparatory Committee for the New International Development Strategy to pay due attention to the integration of human rights in the development process. It requested the Secretary-General, in a follow-up study of the regional and national dimensions of the right to development as a human right,<sup>85</sup> to elaborate on the conditions required for the enjoyment of the right to development, paying special attention to: the duty to achieve and strengthen solidarity; peace and development of friendly relations; environment control and improvement; fair trading; equitable sharing of the common heritage of mankind; the right of peoples to self-determination and to their natural wealth and resources; just and sincere co-operation among all nations; free choice of development models; participation by the masses in defining and applying development policy; non-discrimination in exercise of the right to development; safeguards against arbitrary action and in favour of respect for human rights; and regional agreements for optimum exploitation of wealth.

The Commission requested the Secretary-General to take government views into account and stressed the duty of all States to create the necessary conditions for realization of the right to development.

Acting on a text recommended by the Commission, the Council, by decision 1980/130 of 2 May, requested the Secretary-General to furnish all the assistance necessary in order that the study might be completed satisfactorily. The Council adopted this decision without vote, following approval of the text in the same manner by the Second Committee on 29 April.

The General Assembly adopted on 15 December resolution 35/174, emphasizing the necessity of establishing the new international economic order to ensure the promotion and full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all. It requested the Commission to continue work on overall analyses of the United Nations approach to human rights and of alternative approaches and ways to improve the enjoyment of human rights, and to promote the right to development as a human right and take action for its realization. It reaffirmed the paramount importance of Member States' undertaking obligations through accession to or ratification of international instruments in this field; consequently, United Nations standard-setting work and universal acceptance of those instruments should be encouraged. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to give priority to the holding in 1981 of a seminar on relations between human rights, peace and development and, to this end, to report to the Commission at its 1981 session.

The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to include in a study he was preparing on how the realization of human rights was afected by current international conditions, with particular reference to apartheid and racial discrimination, colonialism and imperialism, and existing unjust international economic relations -the following topics: possible solutions which would help eliminate massive and flagrant human rights violations and violations of the rights of peoples and individuals affected by situations such as those resulting from apartheid, racial discrimination, colonialism, foreign domination and occupation, aggression, and threats against sovereignty, national unity and territorial integrity; and an indication of the obstacles to the establishment of the new international economic order. The study had been requested by the Assembly in 1979.<sup>86</sup>

The resolution was adopted by a recorded vote of 120 to 1, with 26 abstentions. The Third Committee approved the text, as orally revised and amended, on 26 November by a recorded vote, taken at the request of Cuba, of 110 to 1, with 25 abstentions. The draft was sponsored by 24 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Cuba, on behalf of the sponsors, amended preambular and operative paragraphs recognizing and affirming, respectively, that United Nations efforts to promote and protect all human rights should continue-substituting civil and political as well as economic, social and cultural rights for "all human rights." Ireland orally proposed that these provisions should be replaced by preambular and operative paragraphs recognizing and emphasizing, respectively, that United Nations efforts to promote and protect civil and political rights should accompany efforts to establish the new international economic order; it later withdrew these amendments, along with one to insert a new preambular paragraph stating that the Assembly remained convinced of the importance of achieving complete respect for the civil and political rights of individuals at the national and international levels, and another to add a reference to a 1978 Assembly resolution requesting the Commission to take views made during the Assembly's 1978 debate into account in its overall analysis of the United Nations approach to human rights.<sup>87</sup>

After Cuba deleted the phrase, in a preambular paragraph and paragraph 1 referring to the Commission's analyses being undertaken "through the existing structures of the United Nations system," Ireland withdrew an oral amendment it had submitted to that effect. The sponsors accepted another Irish amendment to change a clause in paragraph 7, that the establishment of the new international economic order was essential for the effective promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms to one reading that it was an essential element for such promotion.

The United Kingdom orally proposed a new preambular paragraph recalling a 1979 Assembly resolution about the need for United Nations action in cases of mass and flagrant violations of human rights.<sup>88</sup> It also proposed mention of that resolution in paragraph 7, requesting the Secretary-General to include various elements in his study. In the fifth preambular paragraph, recognizing the need to establish the new economic order so that human rights and fundamental freedoms for all could be fully realized, the United Kingdom proposed to refer to "all" human rights and fundamental freedoms, and to establishing the new order "based on respect for human rights." The request in paragraph 5 to the Commission would be to define rather than promote the right to development. The United Kingdom withdrew its amendments.

Morocco proposed replacing the fifth preambular paragraph with one recognizing that the efforts of States and the United Nations for promoting political, civil, economic, social and cultural rights should go hand in hand with the establishment of the new economic order so as to ensure the full enjoyment of those rights. A sub-amendment by Argentina, a sponsor of the resolution, to replace "should go hand in hand with" by "necessitate" (later changed to "require") was adopted by 58 votes to 32, with 29 abstentions, after which Morocco's amendment was adopted by a recorded vote of 61 to 23, with 40 abstentions.

The words "with appreciation" in a preambular paragraph taking note with appreciation of the report of the June/July Seminar were retained by 74 votes to 11, with 36 abstentions, in a separate vote requested by Morocco. A Moroccan oral amendment to replace paragraph 3, emphasizing the necessity of establishing the new international economic order to ensure promotion and full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, by one stressing the fundamental importance of the establishment of that order to ensure the full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms for everyone was rejected by 21 votes in favour to 46 against, with 48 abstentions.

In explanation of vote, Finland, on behalf of the five Nordic countries, explained their abstention on the basis that the resolution contained elements which did not enjoy broad international support. In addition, the participation of workers in management, the guarantee of which was referred to in a preambular paragraph, could not be regarded as a human right but social policy. New Zealand and EEC members, which abstained, shared that view; New Zealand noted with concern what it said was a tendency to give economic, social and cultural rights priority over civil and political rights. Portugal abstained and, along with EEC members, considered that the resolution did not strike a balance between the two sets of rights. Greece abstained, as it was not able to accept concepts, such as the right to development, that were not universally recognized, a point also made by the Nordic countries and New Zealand. These countries as well as Australia felt the Assembly should not prejudge the conclusions of the Commission, which was studying the question. Austria abstained because the text did not fully reflect the principles of the Assembly's 1977 resolution setting out concepts the United Nations should take into account in its approach to future work in the human rights field.<sup>89</sup> The United States, which voted against the text, indicated that a new international economic order was not a prerequisite for the promotion and protection of human rights, a view shared by Greece, Luxembourg (speaking for EEC members), New Zealand, Turkey and the Nordic countries. In addition, the United States said the list of situations, set forth in earlier resolutions, that the Secretary-General was asked to study was incomplete and biased.

Venezuela, which supported the text, did not think it was clear enough regarding the need to find effective solutions for safeguarding human rights and fundamental freedoms at the international level. Colombia expressed reservations on what it considered the unsatisfactory wording of the fifth preambular paragraph and paragraph 3; the establishment of the new order and the enjoyment of various rights seemed to be highly interdependent.

Protection of human rights of non-citizens

The Economic and Social Council, by resolution 1980/29 adopted without vote on 2 May 1980, transmitted to the General Assembly for consideration the text of a draft declaration on the human rights of individuals who were not citizens of the country in which they lived. The draft had been (United Kingdom), Special Rapporteur of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, and amended by the Sub-Commission. The Council recommended that the Assembly should consider adopting such a declaration, taking account of comments received from Member States in response to a 1979 Council decision.<sup>90</sup> The Second Committee approved the resolution on 29 April, also without vote. The text had been proposed by the Commission on Human Rights, which had, by a resolution of 29 February, expressed its deep appreciation to the Special Rapporteur.

The Secretary-General transmitted the revised draft declaration to the General Assembly on 28 August, as well as the comments received from 30 Member States as at 29 February: Austria, Belgium, Byelorussian SSR, Cyprus, Dominican Republic, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, India, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Kuwait, Liberia, Mexico, Morocco, Netherlands, Norway, Panama, Qatar, Rwanda, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Spain, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, USSR, United Kingdom.

During the 1980 Assembly session, consideration of the draft declaration was undertaken by a working group of the Third Committee, open to all Member States, which also was asked to consider a draft body of principles for the protection of all persons under an form of detention or imprisonment (see p. 842). The group, in its report to the Third Committee, said it had agreed provisionally on the formulation of the first two articles, which still contained some unagreed wording. Article 1 defined the term "alien" as an individual in a State of which he was neither a national nor a citizen, but there was no agreement on characterizing him as residing there or being present in that State, or whether to qualify his presence as lawful. By article 2, aliens were to observe the laws of the host State and respect its people's customs and traditions, but there was no agreement on the wording of a proscription on illegal activities or activities prejudicial to the State.

In the working group, written amendments were submitted by France and Mexico, Australia proposed a redrafting of the first four articles, the United Kingdom analysed in a working paper questions raised on some definitions and proposed a solution, the Netherlands submitted a new article, and a paper examining the terms contained in the draft declaration was submitted by the Secretariat; all were appended to the group's report.

The General Assembly, on 15 December, adopted without vote resolution 35/199, thereby noting that the working group had done useful work but had not had sufficient time to conclude its task. The Assembly decided to establish, at its 1981 regular session, an open-ended working group to conclude elaboration of the draft declaration, and expressed the hope that it would be adopted by the Assembly at that session.

The Third Committee approved the text on 28 November, also without vote. It was sponsored by Barbados, Belgium, Costa Rica, Egypt, Finland, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Ghana, Greece, Jamaica, Mexico, Morocco, the Netherlands, Papua New Guinea, Sweden, the United Kingdom and Uruguay.

The USSR orally proposed deleting paragraph 2, by which the Assembly decided to establish a working group. The amendment was rejected by a recorded vote, requested by the United Kingdom, of 21 in favour to 62 against, with 35 abstentions.

Sweden withdrew an oral proposal it had made that the Assembly decide to establish at its 1981 session a working group to meet, if possible twice weekly for six weeks, for the further elaboration of the draft declaration on the human rights of non-citizens as well as of the draft body of principles for the protection of all persons under any form of detention or imprisonment.

Slavery, including slavery-like practices of apartheid and colonialism

At its 1980 session, the Commission on Human Rights took three decisions on the question of slavery and slavery-like practices, on the basis of recommendations made by its Sub-Commission in 1978.<sup>91</sup>

By a resolution of 29 February, the Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council authorize the Sub-Commission to entrust Benjamin Charles George Whitaker United Kingdom with extending and updating a 1966 Sub-Commission Report on Slavery for submission to the Sub-Commission at its 1981 session.

On the same date, the Commission adopted two decisions, by the first of which it requested the Secretary-General to update the list of experts in legal, economic and sociological disciplines available for advice on the liquidation of slavery,<sup>92</sup> and by the second extended the period of work of the Working Group on slavery to five working days immediately before the Sub-Commission's session.

The Commission's decisions on the Report on Slavery and the Working Group were adopted without vote by the Council on 2 May as decisions 1980/123 and 1980/127, respectively, after approval by the Second Committee on 29 April, also without vote.

At its 1980 session, the Sub-Commission considered the reports of its Working Group on slavery on its fifth (August 1979) and sixth (August 1980) sessions and a report on apartheid as a collective form of slavery, prepared by the Secretary-General pursuant to a 1978 Sub-Commission request.<sup>93</sup>

By a resolution of 10 September, the Sub-Commission urged States to ratify the 1949 Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others<sup>94</sup> and the 1956 Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery,<sup>95</sup> requested the Secretary-General to call on States parties to those Conventions to submit regular reports on the situation in their countries, and on other States to supply information to the Working Group, recommended that the Commission resolve that the United Nations should have a special responsibility in influencing Governments to end slavery and slavery-like practices and proposed that it consider establishing a human rights assistance fund, called on the mass media to help eliminate slavery, and decided to resume annual consideration of the reports of the Working Group.

The Sub-Commission decided to bring the Secretary-General's report on the slavery-like practices of apartheid and colonialism and a report on child labour in South Africa that had been submitted to the Working Group to the attention of the Commission's Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa, the Special Committee against Apartheid and the Director-General of ILO. It strongly rejected South Africa's labour practices as a modern form of slavery, strongly expressed its conviction that collaboration with South Africa contributed to perpetuation of apartheid and expressed its support for sanctions against the apartheid regime and for the projected International Conference on Sanctions against South Africa (see p. 212).

The Sub-Commission requested the Secretary-General to bring a report on migrant workers, submitted to the Working Group on slavery, to the attention of the Governments concerned, OAS and specialized agencies for comment, and asked him to request information from Guatemala on such denunciations as were related to slaver-like practices in that country (see also p. 829). It expressed its appreciation to Mauritania on its decision to eradicate slavery and invited it to supply information to the Working Group on measures taken to that effect. It noted with appreciation information submitted to the Working Group by Australia and invited Australia to consider ratifying the Tribal and Indigenous Populations Convention.

With regard to the sale of children, the Sub-

Commission invited the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the International Committee of the Red Cross to provide information to the Working Group concerning the sale of children for adoption, rejecting practices based on financial considerations in disregard of the welfare of the children involved and calling for an immediate end to such practices, in particular as they affected refugee children. It requested the Secretary-General to bring a report on the sale of children in Thailand, submitted to the Working Group, to the attention of that Government for comments, and recommended that the Commission invite Thailand to adopt and enforce legislation prohibiting the practice and to take steps to eliminate the causes. It again invited the competent United Nations agencies to look into the question of the sale of children with a view to elaborating technical assistance measures aimed at eliminating the causes.

The Sub-Commission requested the Secretary-General to bring the Working Group's reports and documentation on debt bondage to the attention of India for information; it invited the Secretariat to give priority to the study of debt bondage requested by the Sub-Commission in 1978,<sup>96</sup> and to examine the possibility of organizing a round-table or symposium on debt bondage as part of the advisory services programme.

The Sub-Commission also called on States to give publicity to cases of traffic in persons, to persuade people of the dangers, and invited them to take more effective measures to end the traffic in women both within and across their borders.

By another resolution of the same date, the Sub-Commission addressed the question of apartheid as a collective form of slavery, endorsing and submitting to the Commission recommendations of the Working Group. It recommended that the Commission should consider the Secretary-General's report on the question with a view to recommending appropriate action, including mandatory sanctions against South Africa. It requested the Secretary-General to bring the report to the attention of all Member States and competent United Nations bodies, including the International Court of Justice, in order that they might assess its conclusions including, in particular, those to the effect that: apartheid represented a systematization and formalization of controls over the black people of South Africa with a view to maintaining the slavery-like practices imposed; South Africa continued, through repressive legislation, to enforce the system despite growing resistance; and, in agriculture, the exploitation of black workers continued.

Draft convention on the rights of the child

During 1980, the Commission on Human Rights continued work on a draft convention on the rights of the child through a working group, open to all its members and whose elected Chairman/Rapporteur was Adam Lopatka (Poland). The group met between 29 February and 7 March. Proceeding from four preambular paragraphs adopted in 1979, the group approved five more in 1980 as well as the first article of the draft convention, which defined the concept of child (as a person under 18 unless national law set the age of majority earlier), and a portion of the second article on the birthright to a name and to acquire a nationality.

By a resolution of 12 March, the Commission decided to continue work on the draft convention as a matter of priority, with a view to completing it at its 1981 session for transmission to the General Assembly through the Economic and Social Council. On the Commission's request, the Council, by decision 1980/138 of 2 May, authorized a one-week session of an open-ended working group prior to that session to work on the text. This decision was approved on 29 April by the Second Committee, without vote, as it was in the Council.

The Assembly, by resolution 35/131 of 11 December, welcomed the Council's decision and requested the Commission to continue to give high priority to completing the draft convention. The resolution, sponsored by 52 countries (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below), was approved by the Third Committee on 7 November. It was approved in both bodies without vote.

Exploitation of child labour

On the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights, the Economic and Social Council adopted, on 2 May, decision 1980/125, authorizing the Sub-Commission to entrust Abdelwahab Bouhdiba (Tunisia) with the preparation of a report on the exploitation of child labour. The Council adopted this decision without vote, following approval of the text, also without vote, by its Second Committee on 29 April. In a resolution of 29 February, the Commission requested the Special Rapporteur to submit his report to the Sub-Commission at its 1981 session.

In a resolution on various forms of slavery and slavery-like practices, adopted on 10 September (see section above), the Sub-Commission also dealt with the exploitation of child labour, requesting the Secretary-General to bring reports on child labour in Italy, Spain, West Malaysia and Thailand, submitted to its Working Group on slavery, to the attention of the Governments concerned for comments. It again called on all Governments to ratify the 1973 ILO Convention on Minimum Age for Admission to Employment, to implement the relevant ILO Recommendation (No. 146) and to ensure the enactment and enforcement of adequate legislation to protect the rights of working children. It requested the Secretary-General to bring the Working Group's documentation on child labour to ILO's attention for use in its general survey concerning the Minimum Age Convention and to the attention of the United Nations Development Programme for planning programmes for specially deprived areas. It invited UNESCO to inform Member States of its readiness to provide assistance to develop and adapt educational systems to the needs of working children.

Periodic reports on human rights

By a decision of 12 March, the Commission postponed to its 1981 session consideration of periodic reports on human rights, submitted according to a specific schedule,<sup>97</sup> by Governments and specialized agencies on human rights developments in individual countries. The postponed agenda item concerned reports related to freedom of information, civil and political rights, and the right of everyone to leave any country and to return to one's own country.

On a Commission recommendation of the same date, the Council, by decision 1980/139 of 2 May, postponed the session of the Commission's Ad Hoc Committee on Periodic Reports on Human Rights, scheduled to take place prior to the Commission's 1981 session, until prior to the 1982 session. The decision was adopted without vote, following approval in like manner by the Second Committee on 29 April.

Conscientious objection to military service

In connexion with its consideration of the role of youth in the promotion and protection of human rights, the Commission adopted on 12 March a resolution by which it requested the Secretary-General to seek again from Member States up-to-date information and comments on national legislation and other measures and practices relating to conscientious objection to military and alternative service, and to report to the Commission in 1981.

of 16 December, appealed to the youth of South Africa to refrain from enlisting in the South African armed forces and invited all Governments and organizations to assist persons compelled to leave South Africa because of their objection, on the ground of conscience, to serving in its military or police force (see p. 216).

Advisory services in human rights

In 1980, a symposium and a seminar were held under the United Nations programme of advisory services in human rights. The regional Symposium on the Role of the Police in the Protection of Human Rights took place at The Hague, Netherlands, from 14 to 25 April (see p. 782).

As recommended by the Commission on Human Rights in 1979,<sup>98</sup> a Seminar on the Effects of the Existing Unjust International Economic Order on the Economies of the Developing Countries and the Obstacle that this Represents for the Implementation of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms was held at Geneva from 30 June to 11 July (see p. 864).

In a resolution of 11 September, the Sub-Commission requested the Secretary-General to consider the possibility of organizing, within the framework of the advisory services programme, a seminar on the independence and impartiality of the judiciary, jurors and assessors and the independence of lawyers in different legal systems, which would assist the Sub-Commission's Special Rapporteur charged with studying this question in the preparation of his report (see p. 844). The Sub-Commission, in a resolution of 10 September on slavery and slavery-like practices, requested the Secretariat to examine the possibility of organizing a round-table or symposium on debt bondage, as part of the advisory services programme (see p. 868).

During 1980, 25 fellowships in the field of human rights were granted to nationals of the following countries: Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Comoros, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Gabon, Italy, Jamaica, Malaysia, Mauritius, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Rwanda, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Ukrainian SSR, United Republic of Tanzania, Zaire, Zambia. The programme covered studies relating to: the protection of human rights in the administration of justice, in criminal procedure and in preliminary investigations and pre-trial proceedings; the implementation of the International Covenants on Human Rights;<sup>99</sup> the protection of the rights of the child; the roles of police, ombudsmen and related institutions in the protection of human rights and the rights of the citizen; and human rights and the human environment.

In its resolution 35/174 on alternative approaches and ways and means within the United Nations system for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, adopted on 15 December, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to give priority, through the advisory services programme, to the holding in 1981 of a seminar on the relations between human rights, peace and development (for details, see p. 865).

Human Rights Day

A report on the annual observance of Human Rights Day on 10 December, the anniversary of the adoption by the General Assembly of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>100</sup> was presented by the Secretary-General to the Assembly on 13 November 1980. This report, on the thirty-first anniversary of the Declaration, summarized information received from the following 31 countries on their 1979 Human Rights Day observances: Afghanistan, Austria, Bolivia, Botswana, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Haiti, Hungary, Iraq, Japan, Kuwait, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Senegal, Seychelles, Singapore, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Turkey, USSR, United States.

Bearing in mind Commission on Human Rights resolution 28(XXXVI) of 11 March 1980, in which the Commission decided to continue at its thirty-seventh session its work on the overall analysis of the further promotion and encouragement of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including alternative approaches and ways and means within the United Nations system for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Taking note of the proposal for the establishment of a post of United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1979/39 of 10 May 1979 on the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts of the Commission on Human Rights on allegations regarding infringements of trade union rights in the Republic of South Africa,

Noting with grave concern that recent reforms in South African labour legislation were cosmetic in nature and not aimed at producing fundamental changes in the situation of African workers, and that the legislation continues to deny them full and equal trade union rights,

1. Takes note of the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts of the Commission on Human Rights, submitted pursuant to the above-mentioned resolution;

2. Requests the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts to continue to study the situation and to report thereon to the Commission on Human Rights and the Economic and Social Council, as appropriate;

3. Also requests the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts, in the discharge of its mandate, to consult with the International Labour Organisation and the Special Committee against Apartheid, as well as with international and African trade union confederations;

4. Reiterates its demand for the immediate and complete abolition of all restrictions on the trade union rights of all African workers in South Africa, including migrant workers from neighbouring countries, and the immediate and unconditional recognition of all existing African trade unions;

5. Deplores the manoeuvres of the Government of South Africa and companies, including transnational corporations operating in South Africa, to weaken the existing African trade union movement through the establishment of so-called parallel trade unions and the harassment of officials of independent African trade unions;

6. Demands the release of all trade unionists in prison and the lifting of all banning orders imposed on persons engaged in trade union activities.

Resolution 1980/16, as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/48 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 30 April 1980, meeting 18.

The Economic and Social Council,

Convinced of the need for international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, intellectual or humanitarian nature and in developing or encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Bearing in mind the provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Mindful of the contribution made by migrant workers to the economic growth and the social and cultural development of host countries,

Mindful also of the efforts which must still be made in order to protect the rights and improve the living conditions of all migrant workers and their families,

Recalling that the family is the natural, basic element of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State and that, in that context, the families of migrant workers are entitled to the same protection as migrant workers themselves,

Recalling its resolution 1979/13 of 9 May 1979,

Considering General Assembly resolution 34/172 of 17 December 1979, which refers to the elaboration of an international convention on the protection of the rights of all migrant workers and their families,

Having taken note of the report of the Secretary-General on measures to improve the situation and ensure the human rights and dignity of all migrant workers,

Having taken note a/so of the concerns expressed by the Commission on the Status of Women at its twenty-eighth session in its resolution 1 (XXVIII) of 5 March 1980, on the welfare of female migrant workers and the wives of migrant workers,

Concerned at the fact that the Commission on Human Rights was unable to consider at its thirty-sixth session the item relating to migrant workers,

1. Notes that, despite the efforts made by the Governments of some host countries and by some international organizations, a considerable number of migrant workers continue to be denied the enjoyment of their basic rights;

2. Duly notes the decision by the General Assembly, in paragraph 3 of its resolution 34/172, to create at its thirty-fifth session a working group open to all Member States to elaborate an international convention on the protection of the rights of all migrant workers and their families;

3. Invites the international organizations concerned to participate in the deliberations of the working group and to co-operate with a view to elaborating such a convention;

4. Invites the Commission on Human Rights, at its thirty-seventh session, to devote all the time required to the implementation of paragraph 1 of Council resolution 1979/13;

5. Invites also the Governments of host countries to ensure the protection of the families of migrant workers;

6. Decides to consider at its first regular session of 1981 the item entitled "Measures to improve the situation and ensure the human rights and dignity of all migrant workers," to follow the progress of work relating to the elaboration by the General Assembly of the above-mentioned international convention on the protection of the rights of all migrant workers and their families, and to make further recommendations to the working group on the convention in the light of the conclusions concerning the subject which the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission for Social Development will submit in their reports on their thirty-seventh and twenty-seventh sessions, respectively, to the Economic and Social Council.

The General Assembly,

Convinced that the obligation of all States to observe the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations is fundamental for the promotion and respect of human rights and fundamental freedoms and for the realization of the full dignity and worth of the human person,

Bearing in mind Article 13, paragraph 1 b, of the Charter, by which the General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Recalling the importance of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and of the International Covenants on Human Rights in further promoting international co-operation in respecting and observing human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling also its resolution 32/130 of 16 December 1977, in which it decided that the approach to the future work within the United Nations system with respect to human rights questions should take into account the concepts set forth in that resolution,

Recognizing that the efforts of States and of the United Nations for the promotion of political, civil, economic, social and cultural rights require the establishment of the new international economic order to ensure the full enjoyment of those rights,

Recognizing also that the efforts of the United Nations and its Member States to promote and protect civil and political as well as economic, social and cultural rights should continue,

Reiterating its profound conviction that all human rights and fundamental freedoms are indivisible and interdependent, and that equal attention and urgent consideration should be given to the implementation, promotion and protection of both civil and political, and economic, social and cultural rights,

Stressing that, in order fully to guarantee human rights and complete personal dignity, it is necessary to guarantee the right to work, the participation of workers in management, and the right to education, health and proper nourishment, through the adoption of measures at the national and international levels, including the establishment of the new international economic order,

Emphasizing that the right to development is a human right and that equality of opportunity is as much a prerogative of nations as of individuals within nations,

Recalling its resolution 34/46 of 23 November 1979,

Appreciating that it is necessary that the Commission on Human Rights should continue its current work on the overall analysis with a view to further promoting and improving human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the question of the Commission's programme and working methods, and on the overall analysis of the alternative approaches and ways and means for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, in accordance with the provisions and concepts of resolution 32/130,

Noting with appreciation the report of the Seminar on the Effects of the Existing Unjust International Economic Order on the Economies of the Developing Countries and the Obstacle that this Represents for the Implementation of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, organized by the United Nations and held at Geneva from 30 June to 11 July 1980,

Taking into account the request made to the Secretary-General in paragraph 12 of resolution 34/46,

1. Reiterates its request to the Commission on Human Rights to continue its current work on the overall analysis with a view to further promoting and improving human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the question of the Commission's programme and working methods, and on the overall analysis of the alternative approaches and ways and means for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, in accordance with the provisions and concepts of General Assembly resolution 32/130;

2. Reaffirms that it is of paramount importance for the promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms that Member States undertake specific obligations through accession to or ratification of international instruments in this field, and that, consequently, the standard-setting work within the United Nations system in the field of human rights and the universal acceptance and implementation of the relevant international instruments should be encouraged;

3. Emphasizes the necessity of establishing the new international economic order to ensure the promotion and the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all;

4. Affirms that the efforts of the United Nations and its Member States to promote and to protect civil and political rights, as well as economic, social and cultural rights, should continue;

5. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to take the necessary measures to promote the right to development as a human right, which is as much a prerogative of nations as of individuals within nations, and to take action for its realization;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to give priority, through the programme of advisory services in the field of human rights, to the holding in 1981 of a seminar on the relations that exist between human rights, peace and development and, to this end, to present a report to the Commission on Human Rights at its thirty-seventh session, as was recommended by the Seminar on the Effects of the Existing Unjust International Economic Order on the Economies of the Developing Countries and the Obstacle that this Represents for the Implementation of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, when preparing the study requested in paragraph 12 of resolution 34/46, to include possible solutions which will help eliminate the massive and flagrant violations of human rights and of the rights of peoples and individuals affected by situations such as those resulting from the evils mentioned in paragraph 1 (e) of resolution 32/130, and to indicate the obstacles to the establishment of the new international economic order, which is an essential element for the effective promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its thirty-sixth session the item entitled "Alternative approaches and ways and means within the United Nations system for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms."

Sub-Commission at its thirty-second session, reports prepared by the International Labour Organisation on that subject and other relevant reports. The Council also decided to request the Secretary-General to give the Special Rapporteur all the assistance he might require in his work, including all relevant information from reliable sources.

Status of women

The World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women was held at Copenhagen, Denmark, in July 1980. It evaluated progress made in implementing the World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year drawn up in Mexico City at the 1975 World Conference of the International Women's Year,<sup>1</sup> refining its programmes where necessary and proposing a Programme of Action for the Second Half of the United Nations Decade for Women, from 1981 to 1985.

The Conference adopted the Programme of Action and 48 resolutions aimed at achieving the goals of its theme, "Equality, Development and Peace," with special emphasis on a subtheme: "Employment, Health and Education."

Preparations for the World Conference had been made by its Preparatory Committee, which held its third, and final, session in April.

The Commission on the Status of Women held its twenty-eighth session at Vienna from 25 February to 5 March. In its report, the Commission outlined priority areas for attention during the second half of the Decade, focusing on the most vulnerable groups of women and measures for the advancement of rural women and the welfare of female migrant workers and wives of migrant workers.

The Economic and Social Council later adopted 12 of 13 resolutions that the Commission recommended for its adoption—in many cases after amendment. The resolutions contained: elements, mechanisms and strategies to be considered in establishing the Programme of Action for the Second Half of the United Nations Decade for Women (resolutions 1980/1, 1980/3, 1980/4 and 1980/6); suggestions to the mass media on presenting the role of women and men in society (1980/5); invitations to adhere to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (1980/34); guidelines for setting up national machinery to monitor and implement the 1975 World Plan of Action (1980/35); an invitation to the General Assembly to consider the question of elaborating a draft declaration on the participation of women in the strengthening of international peace (1980/36); an appeal for support for the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women (1980/37); a decision to continue the existing integrated system of reporting on the status of women under various directives (1980/38); a reaffirmation of principles in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights governing guarantees of fundamental freedoms (1980/40); and an appeal for attention to be given to the conditions in which women were detained (1980/41).

Procedures for dealing with non-governmental communications on the status of women remained to be agreed upon (resolution 1980/34), and the Council issued an additional appeal for support for the Voluntary Fund (1980/42).

The Assembly, in December, endorsed the Programme of Action as adopted by the World Conference (resolution 35/136). It urged appointment of a director for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women and invited contributions to its Trust Fund (35/134) as well as to the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women (35/137), and made recommendations for assistance to refugee and displaced women (35/135). It also urged adherence to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (35/140), which recorded 81 signatories by the end of 1980—the first year it was opened for signature.

The United Nations took steps to include women and women's concerns in its various development activities; a reporting system was set up to permit regular monitoring of achievements and problems in this regard (resolution 35/78).

These and other decisions are described in this chapter.

World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace

The World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace took place at Copenhagen, Denmark, from 14 to 30 July 1980, and held 21 plenary meetings. Representatives of 145 Governments, five United Nations specialized agencies, 10 intergovernmental, and a number of non-governmental, organizations and several United Nations bodies and programmes participated. The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), the South West Africa People's Organization, the African National Congress and the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania, both of South Africa, sent observers. (See APPENDIX III for list of State participants and officers.)

The Conference agenda covered four substantive areas: the effects of apartheid on women in southern Africa and special measures to assist them; a mid-point review and evaluation of progress in and obstacles to attaining the objectives of the Decade at the national, regional and international levels from 1975 to 1980, in keeping with the 1975 World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year; elaboration of the Programme of Action for the Second Half of the United Nations Decade for Women; and the effects of Israeli occupation on Palestinian women inside and outside the occupied territories, with emphasis on a review of their social and economic needs and special measures to assist them. Consideration of different aspects of each of these agenda items were assigned to the Conference's two main committees—the First and Second Committees—while the other items on the agenda were discussed in plenary meetings. In addition, the Conference established a Committee of the Whole to consider Part One—the “Background and framework” section—of the Programme of Action.

The Conference was opened by the United Nations Secretary-General, who stated that global problems were so interlocked that efforts for their solution must proceed simultaneously along several paths. Issues apparently specific to women could not be dissociated from the broader questions of development and peace. He said that the three goals of the Decade—equality, development and peace—were therefore also those of the United Nations itself.

Queen Margrethe II of Denmark made the inaugural address, expressing the hope that women all over the world would benefit from the Conference's work. She also stressed that efforts for the advancement of women could not be pursued in a political vacuum but must be closely related to parallel international efforts to strengthen development and peace.

The President of the Conference said it was that body's task to take action to improve the conditions of poverty under which millions of women were living. Efforts to establish a new international economic order should aim not only at redressing the balance between rich and poor countries but also at rectifying the inequalities between the sexes.

Preparations for the Conference

Preparatory meetings

Following upon preparatory meetings or seminars at which the role of women was considered and recommendations were adopted, held in the various regions during 1979 under the auspices of the regional commissions, a high-level meeting on the employment of women in countries of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) was organized by OECD in Paris on 16 and 17 April 1980. In addition, the secretariat of the World Conference co-sponsored preparatory seminars: the Hemispheric Seminar on Women under Apartheid (Montreal, Canada, 9-11 May) and the International Seminar on Women and Apartheid (Helsinki, Finland, 19-21 May) (see p. 228)—both in co-operation with the Special Committee against Apartheid and the latter also with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO); and the Seminar on Women and the Media (New York, 20-25 May), also with UNESCO.

Pre-Conference consultations open to all States invited to take part in the Conference were held at Copenhagen on 13 July, under the presidency of the Chairman of the Preparatory Committee for the Conference, to consider matters of procedure and organization. The report on the consultations was accepted by the Conference as a basis for its work.

Decisions of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council

The Commission on the Status of Women, meeting at Vienna in February/March, gave extensive consideration to the documents prepared for the World Conference and made a number of recommendations on issues that required Economic and Social Council attention or action.

On 5 March, the Commission adopted a resolution by which it recommended that the Council, at its April/May 1980 session, while considering measures to improve the situation of all migrant workers (see p. 856), also consider the plight of female migrant workers and wives of migrant workers, and communicate its recommendations to the General Assembly at its 1980 regular session. The Commission appealed to the World Conference to give maximum publicity to the plight of those women from developing countries, particularly those in southern Africa.

By a resolution of 4 March, the Commission asked the Conference Secretary-General to convey the Commission's concern about the situation of disabled women and its views on special measures that might be taken to prevent disability through education of parents in general and young mothers in particular. The Commission requested the United Nations Secretary-General, in implementing the Plan of Action for the International Year of Disabled Persons (1981) adopted by the Assembly in 1979,<sup>2</sup> to ensure that special attention was given to the situation of women, particularly with respect to disability prevention, and invited the Executive Secretary of the Year to harmonize the Year's Plan of Action with the programme of action for the second half of the Decade for Women.

Twelve other resolutions proposed by the Commission were later adopted by the Economic and Social Council.

At its President's suggestion, the Council on 9 April set up an informal working group open to all Council members to consider five of the resolutions submitted by the Commission specifically related to Conference preparations. It met between 10 and 15 April, although it was unable to agree on all aspects of proposed revisions of Commission resolutions pertaining to the programme of action for the second half of the Decade, and the influence of the mass communications media on attitudes towards men's and women's roles in society. The drafts were also discussed in the Council's Second (Social) Committee.

On 17 April, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/6, as revised and submitted by the working group, and as further orally amended in the Council. By that resolution, the Council recognized that, in a number of countries (a clause added by the working group), basic constraints that had impeded implementation of the 1975 World Plan of Action included: inadequate access of women to training; lack of financial resources and of awareness about opportunities; weak communication between the neediest women and policy-makers; injustice in national laws and inadequate legal commitment to equal opportunity; insufficient working environments and support services to facilitate women's participation in economic and political life; too narrow a distribution among women of the skills, experience and contacts useful in public life; too few women in decision-making positions; insufficient attention to women's needs in national and sectoral planning and inadequate monitoring of the effects of public policy; not enough recognition of the economic value of women's work; insufficient appreciation by policy-makers of the need for economic and social change in the situation of women, and consequent lack of political will; attitudes not conducive to a policy of equal opportunities for both sexes; and an inadequate understanding that change in the position of women was a matter for concern and endeavour by both men and women. Another constraint was the current unsatisfactory international economic situation and inequities and imbalances in international economic relations, which necessitated the establishment of the new international economic order; this was a provision added by the working group on a proposal by Yugoslavia, incorporating suggestions by Brazil, India and Italy.

The Council called on the Conference Secretary-General to take a number of recommendations into account in the Conference preparations, including: in the preparation of documentation, the Commission's views at its February/March session; relating the content of the programme of action for the second half of the Decade directly to the review of progress in achieving the objectives of the World Plan of Action and to constraints impeding their achievement; ensuring sufficient documentation to facilitate that review of progress (this provision was changed by the working group from the Commission's text, which had recommended that, as part of the documentation, a sufficient data base should be made available to facilitate the review); provision of guidelines in the programme of action for developing indicators and methods for monitoring progress-and assistance for Governments in their evaluation of progress at the national level (the second part of this provision was added by the working group); and publication of the progress review and evaluation as a single document, including a statistical annex, in a form accessible to the greatest number of persons. A summarized version of the 1975 World Plan of Action should be available for use by Conference participants and, soon after the Conference, a similar document should be issued containing the main Conference decisions.

The Council requested that the views and expertise of the specialized agencies and other United Nations bodies be fully taken into account in preparing the review and in formulating strategies for the programme of action, asked that Member States at meetings of the Preparatory Committee for the New International Development Strategy pay special attention to the problems of women in development, with a view to incorporating the subject of women in development strategies for the 1980s, and urged the Assembly, when formulating the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade, to consider the role of women in the development process, the effects of development on the position of women, and the results of the Conference.

An annex to the resolution, which the Council decided without objection to retain, listed strategies to be considered in establishing the programme of action for the second half of the Decade for Women. These included: efforts to integrate women in all sectors of development plans and policies; establishing programmes to provide information to women about available opportunities and training, and to use education and communications media to project women's potentialities, changing roles and responsibilities; increasing women's participation in the decision-making process; promoting and assisting grass-roots-level women's organizations (the working group deleted a Commission reference to such organizations as key instruments of development); and giving attention and support to women's role and participation in traditional and cultural life. A network of child-care centres would be desirable so that women could participate more actively in every field (this provision was orally proposed in the Council by Argentina and adopted without objection; the Commission's and working group's texts, whose paragraphs were reordered, had stated that a network of child-care centres should be established as a matter of urgency and as an essential service in increasing socialization of women's household work to enable them to participate more actively in every field).

In the Commission, Finland, the Federal Republic of Germany, New Zealand, Norway, Trinidad and Tobago, the United Kingdom and the United States expressed reservations on the appropriateness of the annex, as did Chile in the Council.

Mexico observed at the time of the resolution's adoption that it had proposed inclusion of a reference to food in the first paragraph of the annex on efforts to integrate women in all areas of development- but would support adoption of the text as it stood. The USSR said that it had not objected to the adoption of the resolution, on the understanding that it would be implemented within the approved United Nations budget and with voluntary funds.

Also on 17 April, on the recommendation of its working group, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/5, thereby taking note of a report by a Commission Special Rapporteur, Esmeralda Arboleda Cuevas (Colombia), on the influence of the mass communication media on current attitudes towards the roles of women and men. The Council called on those responsible for the content and presentation of media material to make additional efforts to present in a more comprehensive and balanced way the right of women to equal opportunities with men, encouraging relevant organizations, institutions and associations to exercise their influence on those responsible. The Council suggested (changed by the working group from "recommended") that the Preparatory Committee for the Conference recommend that the Special Rapporteur's report, reflecting Commission members' comments, serve as a background document.

The report, according to its author, aimed at: producing a set of guidelines for project planning and policy action at all levels (global, regional and national) to advance studies and action programmes on women and the mass communication media; evaluating how the World Plan of Action relating to those media translated into positive action by Governments and organizations; and appraising how various programmes and projects of the specialized agencies, together with regional workshops and seminars, helped to bring the subject into clearer focus. The report contained recommended policy action to these ends.

The Council's working group was unable to reach agreement on all the wording of the Commission's draft text, particularly the second paragraph, where the original text encouraged "all relevant organizations, political parties, women's associations and other relevant groups or institutions" to exercise their influence to obtain more-balanced media coverage. Taking account of several comments on this phrase in the Council, Hungary proposed that it be replaced by "all relevant organizations, institutions and other associations"—a formulation that the Council accepted without objection.

The working group deleted from the original text a preambular reference to the cause of a likely increase in mass communication media influence, i.e. the result of the use of new technologies for improving transnational audio-visual communication media.

On 11 April, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/1, by which it invited the Preparatory Committee for the World Conference to include in its draft programme of action for the Conference proposals to improve the health, working and educational conditions of rural women and a recommendation to extend labour and social security legislation to rural areas in countries where it was appropriate, and to include where feasible the general plans set forth in the Programme of Action of the 1979 World Conference on Agrarian Reform and Rural Development.<sup>3</sup>

The working group's recommended text of this resolution was essentially the same, with drafting changes, as that approved by the Commission.

On 16 April, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/3 concerning institutions responsible for implementing at the international and regional levels the 1975 World Plan of Action during the second half of the Decade for Women. The text approved by the Council's working group was essentially the same as that recommended by the Commission. By the text, the Council requested the specialized agencies to include in their reports to the Commission information on procedures established to promote incorporation of women's needs into their programmes and activities, on measures taken on behalf of women and on the impact of such measures. The Council recommended that the programme of action for the second half of the Decade should include: an increase in the effectiveness of special United Nations mechanisms to realize the World Plan of Action and to increase incorporation of women's needs and participation in United Nations activities; provision of adequate, regular resources to those mechanisms (the working group added a reference to include those from voluntary sources); and guidelines for studying all programmes in respect of their likely impact on women, and monitoring and evaluation measures. The Council urged the specialized agencies and United Nations bodies to increase co-ordination and co-operation by using the interagency programme for the Decade for Women and the Advancement of Women Branch of the Secretariat's Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs.

Also on 16 April, the Council adopted, without vote, resolution 1980/4 on the recommendation of its working group. By this text, the Council asked the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the application of the 1949 Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others,<sup>4</sup> with special emphasis on the causes and socio-economic conditions which encouraged prostitution, and recommended that the Preparatory Committee for the Conference include this problem in the draft programme of action.

In addition to making drafting changes, the working group revised the Commission's proposed text in which the Secretary-General would have been asked to explain why no report on the Convention's application had ever been prepared, and expressing a desire that it be done. The group also deleted a recommendation that the Preparatory Committee take the appropriate steps to campaign against this social scourge of which women were the victims.

Work of the Preparatory Committee

The Preparatory Committee for the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women held its third session from 7 to 18 April at United Nations Headquarters, New York, when it considered substantive reports relating to specific items on the Conference's provisional agenda, reports of regional and sectoral preparatory meetings, questions concerning the organization of the Conference and other matters.

The Committee established a drafting group which reviewed and amended the draft programme of action for the second half of the Decade submitted by the Secretary-General. Although a number of representatives reserved their Government's position on certain paragraphs and sections, the Committee adopted the draft programme and requested that it be circulated by early May; Conference participants were invited to submit amendments by 1 June for compilation and Conference consideration.

The Committee also recommended that a report on the social and economic conditions of Palestinian women inside and outside the occupied territories, transmitted by the 1979 regional preparatory meeting of the Economic Commission for Western Asia, be submitted to the Conference, as well as the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on the Status of Women on mass media impact on women (see preceding subsection, Council resolution 1980/5).

The admissibility of the former report was contended in a letter of 6 May to the Secretary-General from Israel, which charged that the report was a crude and tendentious exercise aimed at misrepresenting the problems surrounding the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The Committee also made recommendations on the number and distribution of offices in the General Committee of the Conference (to be composed of 22 Vice-Presidents and the five major presiding officers), on recommendations for the allocation of agenda items and on a timetable for the work of the Conference. Pre-Conference consultations were to be held on 13 and 14 July.

The Committee decided, subject to a reservation made by the group of African States which asked for a larger number of seats, to propose to the Economic and Social Council that each regional group would fill one of the five major offices of the Conference (to be held by a President, Rapporteur-General, two main committee Chairmen and a Credentials Committee Chairman), that the 22 Vice-Presidents would also be drawn from the regional groups with a specified number allotted to each group, and that each group would be represented on the Bureaux of each of the Conference's two main committees.

A note by the Secretariat of 21 April observed that the African group had stated that, since it comprised 49 States, it was entitled to seven, rather than six, vice-presidential posts.

On 2 May, the Council, taking into account a 1979 Assembly decision requesting the Council to decide on the Conference's officers,<sup>5</sup> authorized its President and the other Council Bureau members, in consultation with the regional groups' chairmen, to resolve the outstanding questions relating to the Conference Bureau, including the number of Vice-Presidents.

This action was contained in decision 1980/147, sponsored by Australia, Brazil, Japan, Nigeria and Yugoslavia and adopted without vote. The matter had also been discussed in the Second Committee, whose Chairman proposed, and the Committee agreed without objection on 30 April, that it be referred to the plenary Council since informal consultations had not led to a consensus.

In a note of 2 July, the Council President reported that during consultations it had transpired that the African group would, if given an additional post of Vice-President, allocate it to newly independent Zimbabwe. With the concurrence of the regional groups' chairmen, the Council Bureau had resolved to allocate such an additional post, without creating a precedent and purely as a gesture to Zimbabwe. Also, a Vice-Chairman in charge of co-ordinating the work of the main committees, rather than the Credentials Committee Chairman, would be one of the five major posts of the Conference.

On 3 July the Council, by decision 1980/150 orally proposed by its President and adopted without objection, took note of the President's note of 2 July.

Decisions of the World Conference

Programme of Action for the Second Half of the United Nations Decade for Women

On 30 July, the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women adopted the Programme of Action for the Second Half of the United Nations Decade for Women. The Programme's aim was to promote attainment of equality, development and peace, with special emphasis on employment, health and education.

Practical measures were set out for advancing the status of women and strengthening comprehensive and effective strategies to remove obstacles and constraints on women's full and equal participation in development, including actions to solve the problems of underdevelopment and of the socio-economic structures which placed women in an inferior position.

The three-part Programme consisted of a background and framework section (Part One), a programme of action at the national level (Part Two) and a programme at the international and regional levels (Part Three).

Part One of the Programme of Action contained the Introduction, which listed the Programme's legislative mandates, set out the objectives of the United Nations Decade for Women, and defined the nature and scope of the Programme for the second half of the Decade. Part One also contained a historical perspective, outlined in Chapter I, focusing on the roots of inequality of women with men and reviewing progress achieved in the first half of the Decade, thereby drawing lessons for the future. The conceptual framework of the Programme, outlined in Chapter II, discussed the need to include new data and strategies concerning women's participation in development during the Third United Nations Development Decade, as well as the interrelationship of the objectives of the United Nations Decade for Women and the subtheme of the World Conference: "Employment, Health and Education."

Part Two of the Programme, on targets and strategies at the national level, consisted of three sections dealing with: national targets and strategies in general; objectives and priority areas for action in the fields of employment, health, education and training; and priority areas requiring special attention.

National strategies for accelerating the full participation of women in economic and social development stressed the importance of the role of non-governmental organizations and women's groups in ensuring the effectiveness of national machinery. The need to integrate women into all stages of national budget formation, development planning, and project development and implementation was underlined, as well as the need to improve the data base on women and ensure that such information was disseminated throughout the country. Also emphasized was the importance of ensuring the participation of women in political and decision-making processes. Women of the entire world should participate in efforts to promote international co-operation and strengthen peace.

When dealing with the subtheme of the Conference, the Programme first outlined the specific objectives relating to each area and then made recommendations for action. On employment, for example, it recognized women's right to work and to receive equal remuneration with men for work of equal value. It also stressed the need for protective associations for women workers, to prohibit dismissal on grounds of pregnancy or maternity leave, and to protect women against harassment in the work place.

Attention was paid to the need to develop health programmes, applying the traditional skills of village women and designed for women's specific health problems.

Among the measures to attain the objective of equal access to educational and training opportunities, stress was placed on literacy efforts, equal access, special programmes, research, enrolment encouragement, removing sex bias from learning materials and establishing targets.

Reviewing and evaluating progress made and obstacles encountered at the national level, the Programme identified and made recommendations on a number of areas which required special attention: food production, child care, rural and migrant women, unemployed women, women who alone were responsible for their families, and young women.

Part Three of the Programme made recommendations in three areas: international targets and strategies, international policies and programmes, and regional policies and programmes. The Chapter on international targets and strategies attempted to place the Programme in the time-frame of the past five years within the broader perspectives of global priorities and programmes and to show the linkages between those priorities and the status of women. It also took into account the recent trends in the United Nations towards decentralization of some activities and the strengthening of regional programmes, and put into perspective the action taken by the regional commissions in drawing up regional plans of action. Finally, it underlined the need for integrating programmes and co-ordinating efforts, possibly involving structural changes to implement them.

The Chapter on international policies and programmes basically followed the strategies of the 1975 World Plan of Action, elaborating and updating them in the light of recent United Nations priorities. It recommended appropriate measures to ensure that women's role in economic development would be taken fully into account at the General Assembly's eleventh special session on economic development in August/September 1980, as well as in forthcoming conferences and programmes such as the 1981 Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy and the programme of the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990) (see p. 703).

Proposed international policies and programmes were grouped under five headings: technical co-operation, training and advisory services; elaboration and review of international standards; research, data collection and analysis; dissemination of information and experience; and review and appraisal.

A subsection of the first of these headings, on mobilization of human resources, discussed the participation and representation of women at all levels in all programmes affecting them. It also placed emphasis on assisting the developing countries in developing and strengthening endogenous capabilities in and women's accessibility to science and technology; other proposals sought aid to women in southern Africa, Palestinian women, and women refugees and displaced women the world over.

The Programme of Action at the international level had a threefold thrust: first, the reorientation of concepts, methods and approaches to women as a critical factor in the development of human society; second, the elaboration of policies and programmes to achieve the goals of the Decade, bearing in mind the priority areas of employment, health and education, and the target groups; and third, adequate institutional arrangements involving where necessary either structural adjustments or the strengthening of existing mechanisms for the effective discharge of dynamic programmes.

The last Chapter, on regional policies and programmes, incorporated the recommendations which emerged from the regional preparatory meetings, emphasizing regional activities and proposing recruitment of women for high-level posts in the regional commissions and reinforcement of regional centres for research and training.

Work of the Committees

The Committee of the Whole held four meetings between 17 and 29 July to consider Part One of the Programme of Action- the Introduction and Chapters I (Historical perspective) and II (Conceptual framework). It reached agreement on all parts of the text, with the exception of paragraphs 2 and 5.

Concerning paragraph 2, the Deputy Presiding Officer of the Committee proposed to the Conference for adoption the following text:

In 1975, International Women's Year, a World Conference was held in Mexico City which adopted the World Plan of Action for the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, 1976-1985, and the Declaration on the Equality of Women and their Contribution to Development and Peace. The principles and objectives proclaimed at the Mexico City Conference for the Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace are still relevant today and constitute the basis of action for the Decade. They were further reaffirmed by a number of United Nations regional, sectoral and international meetings as well as by the social and economic recommendations of the Conference of Non-Aligned and Developing Countries on the Role of Women in Development held in Baghdad [Iraq] in May 1979, which were endorsed by the sixth summit of Heads of State and Government of Non-Aligned Countries.

The Conference adopted this text by a roll-call vote of 89 to 7, with 23 abstentions. Explaining its vote against the paragraph, the United States said the 1975 Declaration on the Equality of Women had not been adopted by consensus, and the reference to the Baghdad Conference was not acceptable to the United States, which could not subscribe to recommendations of conferences at which it had not been represented. Iraq and the Syrian Arab Republic reserved their position because the text referred only to decisions on social and economic questions by the non-aligned conference and not to those on political questions.

India proposed for adoption a text for paragraph 5 that it had submitted on behalf of the members of the "Group of 77" developing countries, which read:

Without peace and stability there can be no development. Peace is thus a prerequisite to development. Moreover, peace will not be lasting without development and the elimination of inequalities and discrimination at all levels. Equality of participation in the development of friendly relations and co-operation among States will contribute to the strengthening of peace, to the development of women themselves and to equality of rights at all levels and in all spheres of life, as well as to the struggle to eliminate imperialism, colonialism, neo-colonialism, zionism, racism, racial discrimination, apartheid, hegemonism, and foreign occupation, domination and oppression as well as full respect for the dignity of the peoples and their right to self-determination and independence without foreign interference or intervention and to promote guarantees of fundamental freedoms and human rights.

Israel asked for a separate vote on the word "zionism;" following a procedural debate, the Conference decided, by 59 votes to 37, with 13 abstentions, that the text involved a matter of procedure rather than substance, involving a simple majority vote, and, on the motion of Senegal, further decided, by 69 votes to 24, with 25 abstentions, to vote first on the paragraph as a whole. It was adopted by a roll-call vote of 69 to 24, with 25 abstentions.

Statements explaining their votes or reservations on the paragraph were made by Argentina, Australia, Bhutan, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Finland, Gabon, Guatemala, Israel, Japan, Luxembourg (on behalf of the nine members of the European Community), Nepal, New Zealand, Nigeria, Portugal, Senegal, Switzerland, the United States, the Upper Volta and Venezuela. New Zealand, Switzerland and the United States, explaining their vote against the paragraph, stated that the use of the word "zionism" in the document was unacceptable; Venezuela reserved its position with respect to the use of that term.

The Conference's First Committee held meetings from 15 to 29 July at which it considered: a review of the situation of the effects of apartheid on women in southern Africa; progress and obstacles encountered at the national level in reaching the objectives of the 1975 World Plan of Action; national targets and strategies (chapter III of Part Two of the Programme of Action), with emphasis on the Conference's subtheme; and a review of the social and economic needs of Palestinian women.

The First Committee recommended to the Conference for adoption the text of Chapter III of Part Two of the Programme and 11 draft resolutions. The Conference adopted the Programme text and all but one of the resolutions-on women and discrimination based on race (see subsection below) -without vote on 30 July.

The Second Committee held meetings from 15 to 29 July at which it considered: special measures to assist women under apartheid in southern Africa; progress and obstacles in reaching the objectives of the Decade for Women at the national, regional and international levels in keeping with the World Plan; regional and international targets and strategies, including the situation of women refugees; and special measures for assistance to Palestinian women.

The Second Committee recommended to the Conference for adoption the text of Part Three of the Programme (comprising Chapters IV to VI) and 34 draft resolutions.

Before adoption of the Second Committee's Programme text without vote on 30 July, a separate vote was taken on the paragraph-paragraph 244 in the final version-which concerned assistance to the Palestinian women inside and outside the occupied territories. By this paragraph the Conference called for aid to those women, in consultation with PLO, in the areas of: studies and research pertinent to their social and economic conditions and needs; exercising their human rights; educational and training programmes; preservation of the Palestinian national identity; elimination of restrictive measures hindering their access to employment and equal pay; strengthening women's organizations for developing institutional capabilities for educational programmes and child-care services; health and nutrition programmes and training; and dissemination of information about the effects of Israeli occupation.

The Conference adopted the paragraph by 76 votes to 4, with 24 abstentions, following which statements in explanation of vote were made by Canada, Grenada, Guatemala, Israel and the United States (see also subsection immediately following).

On the same day, the Conference adopted without vote 21 of the Second Committee's 34 recommended draft resolutions; the remainder were adopted by vote (see subsection below).

The report of the Credentials Committee (Belgium, China, Congo, Ecuador, Pakistan, Panama, Senegal, USSR, United States) was approved by the Conference on 29 July, although Cuba and the USSR, on behalf of two groups of State representatives, did not accept as valid the credentials of the Democratic Kampuchean representatives, and Iraq did not recognize Israel's credentials.

Adoption of the Programme of Action

The Programme of Action was adopted, as a whole, on 30 July, by a roll-call vote of 94 to 4, with 22 abstentions."

While the States which spoke in explanation of vote or position generally affirmed their commitment to working for the themes of the Decade and many action-oriented parts of the Programme to achieve equality between men and women and address their special needs, a number of them observed that they could not support the Programme as a whole because of specific reservations on various provisions.

The United States said that the dynamism of the Programme had been all but lost in the din of political polemics. In its opinion, a few States, rather than concentrating on matters of real concern to all women, had chosen to use the Conference as a forum for venting international differences inappropriate to the context of the Conference.

Canada held a similar view, stating that it had been obliged to vote against the Programme as a whole since it had voted against paragraph 5 and against paragraph 244, on assistance to Palestinian women, discussed in a political framework more appropriate to other forums.

Other countries, such as Australia, Denmark and other European Community members, Finland, Guatemala, Norway and Sweden, abstained or voted against the entire Programme because of their disapproval of terms or formulations in those two paragraphs, which they felt reflected the Middle East conflict rather than true concern with the education, health and employment of Palestinian women. Canada and Luxembourg (on behalf of the European Community) expressed the view that the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East was the most appropriate channel for humanitarian assistance to Palestinian women.

Several speakers - among them Austria, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Gabon, Guatemala, Iceland, Luxembourg (on behalf of the European Community), New Zealand, Norway, Paraguay, Portugal and Switzerland-expressed the view that the Conference had been used as a forum for a debate that had distracted it from its main issue-equality. They believed that women would be deeply disappointed that, because of the introduction of controversial political issues only marginally relevant to their central cause, it had not proved possible to adopt the Programme of Action by consensus.

The Holy See said it felt that too little attention had been given to the full range of women's roles, prerogatives and responsibilities in and other contributions to society and to their role in the family; it also had reservations with respect to references regarding family planning.

Others, Albania and Mozambique for example, said it was impossible to deal with the problems of women in isolation from the political context, or to talk of education, health and employment without referring to the fundamental causes of oppression. In Albania's view, the true cause of inequality between men and women was the division of society into oppressors and oppressed, and a contributory cause was the aggressive policies of the super-powers.

Jordan supported the Programme as a whole, including the controversial paragraphs, because it believed that the Programme envisaged meatures of great concern to the women of Jordan and of the world.

Turkey said it regretted the political polarization of the Conference, but acknowledged that the persistent requests of the developing countries that sexual inequalities should be analysed, both in the concept of sexism and with respect to its relationship to the prevailing international order, were legitimate.

New Zealand said that economic organization by itself was not responsible for the subordinate position of women in development, and it was fallacious to group them with the poor without recognizing their special vulnerability as women; it regretted that the Conference had not dedicated itself to the elimination of all exploitative relationships, particularly between men and women. Sweden said it was disappointed that Governments were unwilling to recognize that the oppression of women had more and other causes, which must be tackled in parallel with efforts to bring about a change in international economic relations.

Japan observed that its participation and votes in the Conference did not affect its basic position with regard to some concepts contained in the new international economic order.

China supported the Programme but felt that not all its provisions were applicable to the policies of every State, each of which was free to formulate practical plans to suit its own specific conditions.

Reservations with respect to numerous other paragraphs of the Programme that were not the subject of separate votes were formulated by participating States; a compilation of these was included in the Conference's report.

Resolutions adopted by the Conference

On the recommendation of its Committees, the World Conference adopted 45 resolutions on a wide range of issues. Three resolutions were adopted without reference to a committee: one (resolution 32) denouncing criminal acts of the South African regime against Angola-adopted by a roll-call vote of 100 to 0, with 17 abstentions; another (resolution 33) recommending General Assembly consideration of the convening of another world conference on women in 1985-adopted without vote; and the third (resolution 48), proposed by Mexico and adopted by acclamation, expressing gratitude to the host country.

One group of resolutions adopted without vote was addressed to the United Nations system and dealt with conditions of employment of women within that system, co-ordination of issues relating to the status of women, and enlarging the role of the Commission on the Status of Women.

By resolution 21, the Conference urged the Assembly to provide from the regular United Nations budget increased financial resources for programmes and personnel to implement the Programme of Action and the resolutions adopted by the Conference. The Secretary-General and the heads of specialized agencies and United Nations bodies were urged to appoint more women to regular posts in their organizations, particularly to decision-making posts at the regional level.

By resolution 22, the Conference called on the Secretary-General and organization heads to consider the implications for their organizations of the Programme of Action, requesting the Secretary-General to report to the Assembly's regular 1980 session on arrangements to be made for its implementation, co-ordination, monitoring and evaluation.

By resolution 24, the Conference urged the Secretary-General and organization heads to set recruitment targets to ensure that by 1982 25 per cent of all professional posts subject to geographical distribution were held by women. They were also called on to designate co-ordinators to review employment policies to ensure equal treatment of men and women and the absence of sexual harassment, and to receive grievances dealing with discriminatory practices.

By resolution 39, the Conference recommended that machinery be established and resources provided for integrating women in the development process and that co-ordination of activities be undertaken at all levels to enable that machinery to achieve the priority objectives of the World Plan of Action.

By resolution 40, the Conference asked the Commission on the Status of Women to pay particular attention to implementation of the Programme of Action and other Conference recommendations and formulation of proposals and recommendations for the Economic and Social Council based on all the relevant information, to co-ordinate the resulting material, and to contribute to the establishment of the new international economic order and the formulation of the new International Development Strategy for the 1980s. The Secretary-General was asked to consider ways to enable the Commission to fulfil these functions and strengthen the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs so that it could help the Commission in these tasks.

The Conference, by resolution 42, appealed for increased contributions to the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women (see p. 907).

Other resolutions adopted without vote related to action expected of the United Nations system. By resolution 6, the Conference recommended that the Secretary-General ensure that Conference documents on the review and evaluation of progress made in the implementation of the World Plan of Action at the national level were published as a single document as soon as feasible and in a form easily accessible to the largest number of persons.

The Conference, by resolution 35, urged United Nations Member States to support projects for national reconstruction, economic and social development and the achievement of the goals of the Decade for Women; it also urged international organizations and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) to aid Nicaragua in this respect, with special emphasis on women.

By resolution 47, adopted by 92 votes to 0, with 11 abstentions, the Conference called on Member States to integrate, in all plans and programmes at the national and international level, the aims established by the World Plan of Action as further elaborated at Copenhagen, and to create conditions for economic and social progress to improve the economic, social and political status of women. It urged all, especially the developed, countries to conduct in a spirit of constructive co-operation the economic negotiations related to the new International Development Strategy and to bring the global negotiations to satisfactory agreements, and asked the Secretary-General to transmit to the Assembly's special August/September 1980 session on the establishment of the new international economic order the Conference's final documents. Reservations with respect to this resolution were formulated by Luxembourg (on behalf of European Community members) and the United States.

Several resolutions dealt with the integration of women in the development process. In this category were resolutions 8 (on data-gathering through census questionnaires), 15 (on the International Center for Public Enterprises in Developing Countries), 36 (on women and development assistance programmes) and 39 (on establishment and strengthening of machinery for integrating women in development) - (for details, see p. 913).

Another group of resolutions addressed issues concerning special categories of women and disadvantaged women.

Resolutions 41 and 44 dealt with the situation of women in rural areas. By resolution 41, the Conference invited Governments to: review the food situation from the viewpoint of consumption, quality and distribution; identify nutritional needs; establish priorities; allocate resources to increase rural women's productivity and instruction in technologies, marketing and transformation techniques; increase nutritional education; promote participation in rural organizations; monitor progress; and strengthen international co-operation.

By resolution 44, it urged that Governments and United Nations and other funding organizations give special attention to the needs and priorities identified by rural women and that development activities minimize rural-to-urban migration. The Conference asked Governments to ensure that rural women had access to training for employment, to rural industrialization programmes and to credit services equally with men, and that they were encouraged to participate fully in co-operatives and marketing organizations and to attain key leadership roles. It further requested Governments to make trained professionals specially concerned with education, health and employment available in rural areas, urged them to give priority to programmes for landless rural women and their families, and asked organizations to support co-operation between women in developed and developing countries and among developing countries. The Conference urged the United Nations and its organizations, particularly the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Labour Organisation, to help train women at the paraprofessional level in basic agricultural techniques as field workers, review their funding policies, especially regarding action programmes for women, devote more funds to the development of rural women and seek to employ more women skilled in agriculture at the policy-making level.

By resolution 3, calling on States to end all discrimination against migrants, the Conference drew up a set of principles as a basis for State action to this end, and recommended, with a view to promoting implementation of those principles, that the working group to be established by the Assembly at its 1980 regular session to elaborate a draft convention on the protection of the rights of migrant workers and their families should devote particular attention to the problems of migrant women.

By resolution 43, the Conference invited Governments to ratify the Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others,<sup>7</sup> urged Member States to recognize that every woman and child had the right to legal protection against abduction, rape and prostitution, reminded them that prostitutes had the right to legal protection against maltreatment, and called for concerted efforts in the campaign against the scourge. The Conference invited the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (see p. 779) to make recommendations on the relationship between development, prostitution and exploitation, and traffic in persons, and recommended that the Secretary-General invite Members to take action against international networks of traffickers and procurers and report to the Commission on the Status of Women and the General Assembly on world prostitution, its causes and conditions encouraging it.

All the above resolutions on special categories of women were adopted without vote.

Four resolutions reflected the Conference's concern about women refugees and displaced women. By resolutions 12 and 13 on those categories the world over, and by resolution 10 on assistance to Lebanese women and resolution 34 on assistance to Sahrawi women, the Conference urged or appealed for assistance programmes or financial, material and technical assistance. Resolution 10 was adopted by 112 votes to 0, with 9 abstentions, and resolution 34 by a roll-call vote of 51 to 10, with 38 abstentions.

Guinea, the Ivory Coast, Morocco, the Niger, Senegal and the United Republic of Cameroon considered that the subject-matter of resolution 34 was not within the competence of the Conference, observing that the issue was currently under consideration by the Organization of African Unity. China maintained that disputes between third world countries should be settled through peaceful negotiations, and Pakistan said its affirmative vote was not to be taken as an implicit condemnation of Morocco, but as support for the principle of self-determination.

By resolution 12, adopted without vote, the Conference urged the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) to establish programmes to deal with the special needs of refugee women and children, including special health, nutritional, resettlement and reunification programmes, and related public information activities. It urged UNHCR to work with host-country Governments to encourage participation of women in the administration and design of refugee assistance and training programmes, and recommended that UNHCR increase the number of women at all levels of its staff and establish a high-level position for a co-ordinator for women's programmes.

By resolution 13, the Conference condemned and called for cessation of foreign aggression, racism, oppression, apartheid colonialism, neo-colonialism and the use of inhumane weapons and war methods and called for creation of conditions enabling refugees to return safely to their homes; it urged all possible humanitarian assistance for them, demanded that abusers of refugee women and children be brought to justice, urged UNHCR to undertake studies leading to special relief programmes directed to their critical needs and urged an increase in the number of women on the staffs of United Nations relief agencies. The resolution was adopted by a roll-call vote of 97 to 0, with 29 abstentions. Despite its vote in favour, Switzerland said it hoped that refugee problems would be solved in other forums, considering such issues extraneous to the subject of the Conference.

Concerning several other special categories of women, the Conference adopted resolution 2 on disabled women, by which it appealed for support and contributions to the success of the International Year of Disabled Persons (1981), requested that national programmes for the Year take into consideration the special needs of disabled women for medical, social and vocational rehabilitation, and set out the objectives Member States should seek to attain in this field.

By resolution 4, the Conference requested that special attention be paid to the problems of elderly women, called for the nomination of women as representatives to the 1982 World Assembly on Aging, and asked the Secretary-General to collect data on elderly women, prepare a comparative study on the availability of social and economic security for them and their need for a minimum standard of social security, and submit the data to Conference participants, the World Assembly and the Commission on the Status of Women with a view to recommending action.

By resolution 27, the Conference urged States to identify the needs of young women and to adopt measures for their integration in all aspects of national life and development.

By resolution 29, on women living in conditions of extreme poverty, the Conference appealed to all people and Governments to address the needs of the poorest women, recommending that Member States report quinquennially to the Commission on major socio-economic policies, with particular emphasis on progress regarding the poorest women.

The above four resolutions were adopted without vote. In four other resolutions similarly adopted, the Conference expressed its concern for women's health, welfare and family situation.

By resolution 1, on family planning, it called on Governments to take appropriate measures, including legislative ones, to provide information, education and means to enable the free exercise of the right to determine family size, and recommended that governmental resources be set aside for population programmes.

By resolution 5, on battered women, the Conference called for a study and analysis of the problem by the Secretary-General, and urged Member States to consider establishing family courts, to adopt measures to protect, treat and counsel the victims of family violence, and to implement programmes to prevent it.

By resolution 14, the Conference urged Governments to adopt integrated programmes of family health and welfare and urged co-ordinated efforts to promote such programmes.

By resolution 37, on the health and well-being of women in the Pacific, the Conference called on nuclear-weapon States to refrain from testing nuclear weapons and devices in the Pacific, expressing grave concern about the hazard such testing posed to the environment and health, and calling on all States to support a comprehensive test-ban treaty.

By resolution 17, adopted by 75 votes to 0, with 35 abstentions, Governments were urged to conclude international agreements to ensure that alimony would be paid to abandoned wives of spouses who had left the country.

By resolution 20, adopted without vote, the Conference called on Member States to intensify efforts to control illicit drug traffic by taking stringent legal measures, and invited Governments that had not done so to exercise strict control over narcotics cultivation and manufacture.

In another group of resolutions, the Conference attempted to define the role of women in world peace, international security and self-determination, and made specific recommendations concerning violations of human rights of women for political reasons.

By 97 votes to 0, with 30 abstentions, the Conference adopted resolution 7. It thereby recognized that impeding women's economic, social and political participation was contrary to the ideals of the preparation of societies for life in peace, and considered it a task of States and international organizations to involve women in disarmament efforts and in the elimination of economic inequality, discrimination and exploitation, aggressive wars, colonialism, neo-colonialism, racism, apartheid and human rights violations. It appealed to all women to discourage and eliminate racial hatred, prejudice, discrimination, injustice and violence, and to women artists, writers, journalists, educators and civic leaders to implement the idea of preparing societies for peace by eliminating bias and stereotypes and by revising textbooks, curricula and teaching methods. It urged greater efforts to distribute information on women's contribution to the promotion of processes for preparing societies for living in peace, and invited the Secretary-General to take due account, in his periodic report on the Declaration on the Preparation of Societies for Life in Peace,' of the contribution of women to the implementation of that Declaration.

By resolution 11, adopted 77 votes to 6, with 35 abstentions, the Conference asked the Assembly to further the elaboration of a draft declaration on the participation of women in the struggle for the strengthening of international peace and security, and against colonialism, racism, racial discrimination, foreign aggression and occupation and all forms of foreign domination (see p. 911).

By resolution 26, adopted by 65 votes to 0, with 42 abstentions, the Conference reaffirmed the right of all developing countries to seek development assistance from any and all sources, and condemned acts of destabilization, blackmail, sabotage and violence against those countries. China said it opposed aid to States engaged in aggression and expansion threatening peace and regional security; in view of the ambiguity of the text, China said, it had not participated in the voting.

On human rights questions in specific countries, the Conference, by resolution 18-adopted by 69 votes to 8, with 39 abstentions-urged Chilean authorities to respect human rights, clarify the fate of disappeared persons, punish those responsible and allow women to struggle for equality, development and peace. It urged the Assembly to continue to pay careful attention to human rights in Chile, in particular the situation of women and children in that country. Chile considered the subject-matter outside the competence of the Conference and the Federal Republic of Germany said it regretted the continued selective treatment of Chile.

By resolution 19-adopted by a roll-call vote of 55 to 11, with 46 abstentions-on the situation of women in El Salvador, the Conference urged Salvadorian authorities to provide information on disappeared persons and women detained for political reasons, and asked the Assembly at its 1980 regular session to adopt measures that would lead quickly to the restoration of human rights and fundamental freedoms in that country.

Paraguay considered both the above resolutions outside the competence of the Conference. Paraguay and Honduras also considered that the latter text was not in keeping with the principle of non-intervention in other States' internal affairs, and Honduras believed the time was not opportune for taking a decision of that nature while mediation was going on for settling disputes between it and El Salvador. Venezuela said it regarded various provisions as partial, limited, incomplete and inaccurate.

By resolution 46, adopted by 63 votes to 2, with 30 abstentions, the Conference resolved to condemn any action designed to hamper the full exercise by Bolivian women of their political rights or delay their participation in their country's development process. Peru expressed concern that such resolutions dealt with the internal affairs of States.

By resolution 23, adopted without vote, the Conference called on Governments to provide information, on request, and assistance in cases of reliable evidence of the disappearance of a person, asked them to ensure security for all to prevent disappearances, and drew the attention of the Working Group established by the Commission on Human Rights to examine involuntary disappearances to the effects on women as victims and relatives.

By resolution 28, the Conference called on all States to sign, ratify and ensure effective implementation of the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,<sup>9</sup> and to publicize it (see p. 909).

A group of resolutions dealt with discrimination of various types.

By resolution 31, adopted by a roll-call vote of 78 to 3, with 39 abstentions, the Conference reaffirmed its condemnation of all racist regimes and countries which co-operated with them, or which practised discrimination based on race other than apartheid. It called on the United Nations and the specialized agencies to take steps in their programmes to overcome the dual burden of discrimination based on both race and sex, and urged countries which had not ratified the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination<sup>10</sup> to do so. Lesotho formulated a reservation on the condemnation of all co-operating countries.

Resolutions 16 and 45 related to conditions created by apartheid in South Africa and Namibia. By resolution 16, adopted by 75 votes to 7, with 22 abstentions, the Conference urged that the proposed International Conference on Sanctions against South Africa (see p. 212) should be held as soon as possible, considering it important that that Conference pay special attention to the situation of women and children under apartheid. By resolution 45, adopted by 63 votes to 4, with 4 abstentions, the Conference paid tribute to the sacrifices of women and children in South Africa and Namibia in the struggle for their inalienable rights and national liberation, calling on the women of the world to pressure their Governments to sever all links with the apartheid régimes and disseminate information on apartheid's effects. It urged the Security Council to support an oil embargo and comprehensive economic sanctions against South Africa. It condemned aggression against the front-line States, urged the highest priority to assistance to women in South Africa and Namibia and called for immediate release of all political prisoners there, endorsed the declaration and recommendations of the Helsinki and Montreal pre-Conference Seminars in May and commended them for urgent attention to Governments and organizations, and appealed for support to the various projects of national liberation movements and front-line States, especially those designated for women and children. It urged strengthening of the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women for the legal defence of political prisoners and appealed for ratifications of the 1973 International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid<sup>11</sup>. Botswana formulated reservations on this resolution.

Other resolutions covered education, research and training, and promotion of other United Nations objectives, such as adequate water supply and anti-desertification efforts, in the context of the goals of the Decade for Women. They were adopted without vote.

By resolution 30, the Conference called on Governments to adopt programmes to eliminate illiteracy, increase education budgets- to 7 or 8 per cent of gross national product where possible -promote equality in education and training, emphasizing vocational technical training and training in economic, scientific and technical fields, facilitate re-entry into professional life, eliminate financial barriers, increase the role of teachers in promoting equality, and eliminate attitudinal barriers and sex stereotypes in education and training. Governments able to do so were asked to provide special assistance to developing countries, and UNESCO was asked to ensure that education and technical training of women were given priority at its next General Conference.

By resolution 38, the World Conference appealed for financial and other support for the new International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (see p. 914).

By resolution 25, the Conference urged Member States and United Nations organizations to promote the objectives of the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990) (see p. 703), commit funds and programme efforts, and promote the full participation of women in water supply projects. It urged the World Health Organization to support country programmes and recommended that UNDP review progress in attaining this resolution's goals.

By resolution 9, the Conference requested the United Nations and its specialized agencies to intensify their efforts to combat desertification and drought in the Sahelian region of Africa, and suggested that this aim be pursued not by establishing new bodies but by providing existing concerned regional bodies with additional resources.

E/1980/L.17 and Add.1. Report of informal working group on agenda item 8, revised draft resolution IV and Annex, with proposed additional amendments.

Resolution 1980/6 and Annex, as submitted by informal working group on agenda item 8, E/1980/L.17 and Add.1, and as further orally amended by Argentina, adopted without vote by Council on 17 April 1980, meeting 9.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 3520(XXX) of 15 December 1975, in which the Assembly decided that in 1980, at the mid-term of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, a world conference would be convened to review and evaluate the progress made in implementing the recommendations of the World Conference of the International Women's Year, and to re-adjust programmes for the second half of the Decade in the light of new data and research,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolution 2062(LXII) of 12 May 1977, in which the Council requested the Secretary-General to prepare, for the consideration of the Commission on the Status of Women at its twenty-seventh session, a report outlining a programme of concrete action for the second half of the Decade,

Recalling further General Assembly resolution 33/185 of 29 January 1979, in which the Assembly adopted the sub-theme "Employment, Health and Education" for the Conference and recommended that the Conference should place emphasis on elaborating action-oriented plans for integrating women in the development process, particularly by promoting economic activities and employment opportunities on an equal footing with men through, inter alia, the provision of adequate health and educational facilities,

Noting with appreciation the progress made in the preparations for the Conference by the Preparatory Committee, the Secretary-General of the Conference and the specialized agencies,

Recognizing that, in spite of increasing awareness and commitments of national Governments, the international community, voluntary organizations, the communication media and others during the last five years, since the adoption of the Declaration of Mexico on the Equality of Women and Their Contribution to Development and Peace, 1975, many important obstacles and constraints still impede the practical application of the World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year,

Taking note of the fact that the advancement of women is affected by inequalities and inequities in the world situation,

Aware that the Conference, to be held at Copenhagen in July 1980, should be an important occasion for assessing progress towards the attainment of the three objectives of the Decade and for deciding on future priorities and strategies for action,

Noting that the elaboration of the international development strategy for the third United Nations development decade at the special session of the General Assembly devoted to development, to be held in August 1980, will provide opportunity at the global level for due account to be taken of women's role in development,

Bearing in mind that at the national, regional and international levels there is a lack of adequate mechanisms for continuing the monitoring and evaluation of the measures for attaining the objectives of the United Nations Decade for Women,

1. Recognizes that in a number of countries the following are among the major, basic underlying constraints that have impeded the implementation of the World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year at the national level and, consequently, at the regional and international levels:

(a) The present unsatisfactory international economic situation and the existence of inequities and imbalances in international economic relations, which necessitate the establishment of the new international economic order;

(b) Inadequate access of women to training, especially in skills in the non-traditional sectors, owing to socio-cultural constraints, prejudices and insufficient training facilities;

(c) Lack of sufficient awareness among women, especially those from the rural areas and urban slums, about opportunities available for their development;

(d) Weak communication between those whose needs are greatest of all, including rural women and the urban poor, and policy-makers in both governmental and non-governmental spheres;

(e) Lack of financial resources, which, especially in a time of world recession, is aggravated by the factors mentioned above which affect the allocation of scarce resources;

(f) Persistence, in many countries, of injustice to women in national laws and administrative regulations, and inadequate positive legal commitment to a policy of equal opportunities for both men and women;

(g) Insufficient provision of working environments and support services that would facilitate the participation of women in economic and political life;

(h) Too narrow a distribution among women of the skills, experience and contacts which contribute to effective participation in public life at national and international levels;

(i) Insufficient number of women in decision-making positions at all levels of governmental and non-governmental action;

(j) Insufficient systematic attention to the particular needs of women in national and sectoral planning, and inadequate monitoring of the effects of public policy on women:

(k) Inadequate recognition of the economic value of women's work in monetary and non-monetary sectors;

(l) Insufficient appreciation among policy-makers in many countries of the need for economic and social change in the situation of women, and consequent lack of political will;

(m) Attitudes concerning the role of men and women which are not conducive to a policy of equal opportunities for both sexes, often including a perception among women themselves of playing an inferior or restricted role;

(n) Inadequate understanding that change in the position of women in society is not a matter for concern and endeavour by women alone: the ultimate aim is the enrichment of the whole society, and both men and women must be fully involved in an effort to achieve this:

2. Calls upon the Secretary-General of the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace to take into account in the final preparations for the Conference the following recommendations:

(a) In the preparation of documentation for the Conference, the views expressed by the Commission on the Status of Women at its twenty-eighth session should be taken into account;

(b) The content of the programme of action for the second half of the Decade should be directly related both to the review of progress in achieving the objectives of the World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year and to the basic underlying constraints that have impeded the attainment of those objectives: some of the important strategies that need to be given consideration appear in the annex to the present resolution;

(c) Sufficient documentation should be ensured that will facilitate the review of progress towards the achievement of the objectives of the Decade;

(d) In the draft programme of action for the second half of the Decade, guidelines should be provided for the development of indicators and methods for monitoring progress at the international and regional levels and Governments should be assisted in their evaluation of progress at the national level;

(e) The document on review and evaluation of the progress achieved in the implementation of the World Plan of Action should be published, including the statistical annex, in a single document for the Conference and it should be published as soon as feasible after the Conference in a form easily accessible to the largest possible number of persons;

(f) The summarized version of the World Plan of Action adopted at Mexico City in 1975 should be available for the use of delegations to the Conference;

(g) As soon as possible after the Conference, a document should be provided in a format similar to that mentioned in subparagraph (f) above, in order that the main decisions may be effectively disseminated and implemented;

3. Requests that the views and expertise of the specialized agencies and other United Nations bodies should be fully taken into account in the preparation of the review and the formulation of strategies for inclusion in the programme of action for the second half of the Decade;

4. Further requests that Member States, in their deliberations at the forthcoming and subsequent meetings of the Preparatory Committee for the New International Development Strategy, should pay particular attention to the problems of women in development with a view to incorporating the subject of women in the development strategies of the 1980s;

5. Urges the General Assembly at its special session devoted to development, in its elaboration of the strategy for the third United Nations development decade, to consider the role of women in the development process as well as the effects of development on the position of women, and to take full account of the results of the Conference.

ANNEX

Strategies to be considered in establishing the programme of action for the second half of the Decade

1. Efforts for the integration of women in all sectors of the development plans and policies should be incorporated in the programme, particularly in the sectors of employment, health and education, by the allocation of adequate financial, human and technical resources, by the establishment of targets for allocation of physical and financial resources, and by the study of the likely impact on women of all programmes at the planning stage; and by the monitoring and evaluation of such programmes for the extent of women's participation in and benefit from them.

2. Concrete programmes should be established for providing information to women about the opportunities available to them, especially in the areas of employment, health and education, and for incentives and programmes for increasing their access to training, more particularly in the non-traditional fields.

3. Concrete programmes should be established by the use of education and the communication media to project women's potentialities and changing roles and responsibilities.

4. The participation of women should be increased at all decision-making levels of government, political parties, trade unions, judiciary and elected bodies.

5. Grass-roots-level organizations of women should be promoted and given assistance in mobilizing women, particularly poor women in rural and urban areas, in acquiring training in productive activities and access to needed development services and inputs and in organizing working women, particularly in the unorganized sector, for protection against exploitation and for socio-occupational mobility through education, training and the necessary supportive services.

6. Attention and support should be given to women's role and participation in traditional and cultural life.

7. It would be desirable to establish a network of child-care centres in order to enable women to participate more actively in every field.

The Economic and Social Council.

Recalling its resolution 2063(LXII) of 12 May 1977 regarding the influence of the mass communication media on attitudes towards the roles of women and men in present-day society,

Taking note of the report of the special rapporteur of the Commission on the Status of Women, Mrs. Esmeralda Arboleda Cuevas, on the influence of the mass communication media on attitudes towards the roles of women and men in present-day society, and of the importance of the problems raised in that report, Emphasizing the enormous potential of the mass communication media for the training and education of the general public, in particular the potential of television and its applicability in schools and adult education centres.

Taking into account the increasing amount of time devoted by the general public to television and its influence on public attitudes and patterns of behaviour, Considering that the influence of the mass communication media is likely to increase during the next few years.

Regretting a tendency in mass communication media to present women in stereotyped roles and pointing to the need to correct this tendency,

1. Calls upon those responsible for the content and presentation of material by mass communication media to make additional efforts to present in a more comprehensive and balanced way the right of women to enjoy equal rights and equal opportunities with men;

2. Encourages all relevant organizations, institutions and other associations to exercise their influence on those responsible in order to achieve the aforementioned aims;

3. Suggests that the Preparatory Committee for the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women should decide, at its third session, to recommend that the report of the special rapporteur should serve as a background document, under item 8 of the provisional agenda for the Conference, after appropriate revision in the light of the comments made during the twenty-eighth session of the Commission on the Status of Women.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that, in General Assembly resolution 3520(XXX) of 15 December 1975, it was decided to convene a world conference in 1980, at the mid-term of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace,

Bearing in mind the third session of the Preparatory Committee for the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women, established by Economic and Social Council resolution 2062(LXII) of 12 May 1977,

Recalling that the Preparatory Committee is responsible for making recommendations regarding the substantive and organizational arrangements for the Conference,

Reviewing the World Plan of Action for the implementation of the Objectives of the international Women's Year, adopted by the World Conference of the international Women's Year,

Noting that the World Plan of Action stresses the need to promote the advancement of rural women,

Observing that, in some countries, very little progress has been achieved in this direction,

Recalling that there is a Programme of Action concerning rural questions, which contains sections devoted to the consideration of concrete measures for the advancement of rural women, and which the General Assembly endorsed in its resolution 34/14 of 9 November 1979,

1. Invites the Preparatory Committee for the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women, in considering and elaborating, at its third session, the draft programme of action to be submitted to the Conference, to include specific short-term, medium-term and long-term proposals for action to improve the health, working and educational conditions of women in rural areas;

2. Invites the Preparatory Committee to include in the draft programme of action to be submitted to the Conference a recommendation that labour and social security legislation should be extended to rural areas in those countries for which this is appropriate;

3. Urges the Preparatory Committee to take into account the general plans set forth in the Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Agrarian Reform and Rural Development, and endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 34/14, and to include them to the extent feasible and appropriate in the draft programme of action to be submitted to the Conference.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 3520(XXX) of 15 December 1975, in which the Assembly, inter alia, invited all relevant organizations of the United Nations system to submit their proposals and suggestions for implementing the World Plan of Action for the implementation of the Objectives of the international Women's Year and related resolutions of the World Conference of the international Women's Year, to develop and implement a joint interagency medium-term programme for the integration of women in development, with special emphasis on technical co-operation in programmes relating to women and development, and to render, in accordance with requests of Governments, sustained assistance in the formulation, design, implementation and evaluation of projects and programmes which would enable women to be integrated in national and international development,

Recalling a/s General Assembly resolution 33/185 of 29 January 1979, in which the Assembly invited the relevant organizations of the United Nations system to review progress made as well as constraints and specific problems encountered in their technical and operational areas, and to suggest appropriate programmes for the second half of the United Nations Decade for Women, with special emphasis on the subtheme "Employment, Health and Education,"

Noting with appreciation the reports of United Nations bodies and specialized agencies on their activities of special interest to women,

1. Requests the specialized agencies to include in their reports to the Commission on the Status of Women information on the institutional mechanisms and procedures established to promote the incorporation of women's needs into their programmes and activities;

2. Also requests the inclusion in the reports of the specialized agencies to the Commission on the Status of Women of measures being taken on behalf of women and their impact, both quantitatively and qualitatively;

3. Recommends that the draft programme of action for the second half of the United Nations Decade for Women should include at the international and regional levels:

(a) An increase in the effectiveness of special mechanisms established within United Nations bodies, including the regional commissions and the specialized agencies, to realize the World Plan of Action for the implementation of the Objectives of the international Women's Year, to increase the incorporation of women's needs into all their programmes and activities and also to increase women's participation in and benefit from those programmes and activities;

(b) Provision of adequate financial, human and technical resources on a regular basis, including those from voluntary sources, to such special mechanisms to enable them to carry out their tasks effectively;

(c) Establishment of guidelines, wherever they do not already exist, for the study of all programmes and projects in respect of their likely impact on women, and measures for monitoring and evaluating such programmes in respect of the extent of their benefits to women;

4. Urges the specialized agencies and United Nations bodies to increase their co-ordination and co-operation, using the interagency programme for the United Nations Decade for Women and the Advancement of Women Branch of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat as effective mechanisms.

Referring to the Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others, approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 317(IV) of 2 December 1949,

Referring also to the resolution adopted on 2 July 1975 by the World Conference of the international Women's Year concerning the combating of prostitution and the illicit traffic in women, especially young girls, and to resolution 1 (XXVII) of 4 April 1978 of the Commission on the Status of Women,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the application of the Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others, emphasizing in particular the causes and socio-economic conditions which encourage the development of prostitution;

Implementation of the World Plan of Action and the Programme of Action for the Second Half of the United Nations Decade for Women

Implementation by the Commission on the Status of Women and Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council on 2 May 1980 adopted without vote resolution 1980/35 on national machinery for monitoring and implementing the World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year.<sup>12</sup> By that text, the Council recommended that national machinery be established, given adequate resources and, wherever possible, an appropriate central location within the governmental structure with effective links to national planning units, supported by any necessary special units within departments, especially those concerned with health, education, employment, labour, rural development, credit and marketing, and provided with adequate arrangements for linkages at subnational and local levels. The Council recommended strengthening national mechanisms by a network arrangement within women's groups and organizations; such groups, especially at the local level, should be given adequate resources.

The Council's Second (Social) Committee approved the text which had been recommended by the Commission on the Status of Women at its February/March session-without vote on 23 April, after the recommendation that national machinery be given an appropriate central location in the governmental structure had been orally amended by Brazil to add the words "wherever possible." Argentina said it would not oppose adoption of the text, although it felt it seemed to anticipate recommendations which the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women should make.

Report of the Secretary-General and General Assembly implementation action

In pursuance of resolution 22 adopted in July 1980 by the World Conference (see p. 894), the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly on 22 October a report on what arrangements should be made by United Nations-associated organizations to implement the Programme of Action for the Second Half of the Decade decided on by the Conference. The report summarized the recommendations relating to international action contained in the Programme of Action and the monitoring and evaluation roles of various United Nations organs for review and appraisal of progress; it reviewed interagency co-ordination machinery to reorient and reinforce programme activities, and made suggestions for the initial phase of implementation, including the need for follow-up by the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination and its Consultative Committee on Substantive Questions, the need for improved co-ordination in the area of technical co-operation and the need to increase the use of the interagency programme for the Decade for Women and of the Advancement of Women Branch in the Secretariat's Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs.

On 11 December, the Assembly adopted - by a recorded vote of 132 to 3, with 9 abstentions - resolution 35/136, endorsing the Conference's Programme of Action for the Second Half of the Decade. The Assembly affirmed that implementation of the Programme should result in the complete integration of women into the development process and the elimination of inequality, and guarantee their broad participation in efforts to strengthen peace and security. It urged Governments and all organizations of the United Nations system to take implementation measures at all levels.

The Assembly asked that Member States, in preparing and evaluating projects and programmes, pay special attention to measures for the involvement and benefit of women. It called on all Governments and organizations to intensify, at regional levels, the dissemination of information and exchange of experiences on women's participation in programmes and information activities.

The Assembly asked the regional commissions to consider the Programme of Action with a view to formulating programmes to implement its recommendations, urging them to report to the Economic and Social Council at its first regular 1982 session, and biennially thereafter, on the specific aspects of the situation of women in all sectors of their development programmes.

The General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Council at its April/May 1981 session proposals for implementing the Programme, taking into account the need, indispensable for the advancement of women, speedily to establish the new international economic order and implement the objectives of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s).

It also asked the Secretary-General to consider measures to enable the Commission on the Status of Women to discharge its functions with respect to the Programme and the World Plan of Action, and to take immediate action to strengthen the Vienna Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs. The Assembly asked him and international organizations to establish focal points for co-ordinating questions relating to women and integrating them into their work programmes, and invited him to circulate and publicize the Conference report as widely as possible and to submit to the Assembly's 1981 regular session a report on measures taken to implement this resolution.

The Assembly decided to convene in 1985, at the end of the Decade, a World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women.

The text was approved by the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee on 6 November by a recorded vote, requested by Israel, of 128 to 3, with 7 abstentions. It was introduced by Venezuela on behalf of United Nations Member States belonging to the "Group of 77" developing countries, which revised their text before Committee approval.

At the request of Norway, separate votes were taken in Committee and at Israel's request the votes were recorded on a preambular paragraph reaffirming the principles and objectives set forth in the 1975 Declaration of Mexico on the Equality of Women and Their Contribution to Development and Peace<sup>13</sup> and in the 1975 World Plan of Action (adopted by 110 votes to 4, with 22 abstentions), and on operative paragraph 2 endorsing the Programme of Action (adopted by 111 votes to 4, with 20 abstentions). Oral drafting changes proposed by Australia were not accepted by the sponsors.

In explanation of vote, Australia, Belgium, Bolivia, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Israel, Japan, Luxembourg (on behalf of the nine member States of the European Economic Community (EEC), the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, the United States and Uruguay restated or maintained reservations expressed at the Conference on the Programme of Action as adopted by the Conference and endorsed in the Assembly's resolution. Australia, Canada, Chile, Denmark (on behalf also of Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden), New Zealand and the United States referred specifically to the mention in the Programme of Action, grouped with other policies to be eliminated such as colonialism and apartheid. The United States also could not agree that aid should be provided in consultation with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Luxembourg, on behalf of EEC members, said they also had reservations on certain preambular paragraphs.

Austria, Denmark (on behalf of the Nordic countries), Fiji, Ireland, Malawi, the Netherlands, Papua New Guinea and Thailand expressed reservations on the two paragraphs on which separate votes had been taken, although, with the exception of the Netherlands which abstained, they voted in favour of the resolution as a whole.

The Ukrainian SSR and the United Kingdom emphasized the need to make optimum use of existing resources.

Reporting system during the second half of the United Nations Decade for Women

In 1979,<sup>14</sup> the Assembly had decided to integrate the United Nations reporting systems on the implementation of the 1967 Declaration on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women<sup>15</sup> with procedures for biennial system-wide reviews of the realization of the World Plan of Action and of progress under the International Development Strategy for the Second United Nations Development Decade<sup>16</sup> (the 1970s).

On 23 April, the Council's Second Committee approved the text, submitted by the Commission, without vote.

Resolution 1980/35, as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/50 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 2 May 1980, meeting 23.

The Economic and Social Council.

Recalling the provisions of the World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year, adopted by the World Conference of the International Women's Year, recommending the establishment within government of national commissions, women's bureaux and similar machinery, with adequate staff and budget, for the achievement of the goals of the World Plan of Action.

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, entitled "Review and evaluation of progress achieved in the implementation of the World Plan of Action: national planning, national machinery and legislation."

Affirming the crucial role of national mechanisms, in promoting the integration of women into the whole development process,

Affirming a/so the important role of women's groups and organizations in the identification of problems, in the monitoring of programmes of special interest to women and in the provision of special services to women, as well as their role as a mobilizing force at the local level and as a means of instilling in women confidence in their capacity to influence the processes of change.

Recognizing the need to strengthen women's groups and organizations to enable them to carry out their functions effectively,

1. Recommends that national machinery should be:

(a) Established wherever it has not already been established;

(b) Given adequate human, financial and technical resources;

(c) Given, wherever possible, an appropriate central location within the governmental structure, having effective links with national planning units;

(d) Supported by special units, where necessary, within the relevant departments and agencies, especially those concerned with health, education, employment, labour, rural development, credit and marketing;

(e) Provided with adequate arrangements for linkages at subnational and local levels;

2. Also recommends that national mechanisms should be strengthened by means of a network arrangement within women's groups and organizations;

3. Further recommends that women's groups and organizations, especially at the local level, should be given adequate financial and technical resources to facilitate their ability to work with the national machinery in order better to achieve their common objective of promoting the integration of women in development.

Resolution 1900/38. as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/50 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 2 May 1980, meeting 23.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 5(I) of 16 February 1946 and its resolution 48(IV) of 29 March 1947 on the status of women, In which it reaffirmed that it was the fundamental purpose of the Commission on the Status of Women to develop proposals for promoting equal rights for women and eliminating discrimination on grounds of sex in the legal, political, economic, social and educational fields and, accordingly, resolved that the functions of the Commission should be to prepare recommendations and reports on those matters for submission to the Council and to make recommendations on urgent problems requiring immediate attention, based on all relevant information,

Reaffirming the need for reports based on the integrated reporting system for the continued performance of those functions by the Commission on the Status of Women,

Recalling that the General Assembly, in Its resolution 33/186 of 29 January 1979, decided to integrate the reporting systems on the implementation of the Declaration on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women with those procedures established for biennial system-wide reviews and appraisals of the realization of the World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year and of the progress made under the International Development Strategy for the Second United Nations Development Decade, and to review the new reporting system in the light of further developments,

Noting the reports on the revised procedures utilized for the purposes of the first biennial round of the integrated reporting system during the biennium 1978-1979, prepared by the Advancement of Women Branch of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat,

Noting further the suggestions of the Advancement of Women Branch for further revision of procedures in order to take into account the needs of Governments, specialized agencies, regional commissions and other bodies of the United Nations system during the second biennial round of the integrated reporting system during the biennium 1980-1981, and for the undertaking of a programme of wide-spread dissemination of information obtained as a result of the operation of the reporting system,

Convinced that the Commission on the Status of Women should continue its fundamental functions of monitoring the situation with regard to the status of women and of developing proposals and recommendations to the Economic and Social Council on the basis of all relevant information, and that it should, for that purpose, co-ordinate the results of an improved reporting system on the status of women and the continuing work of the Advancement of Women Branch in the maintenance of the existing data bank and in the development of appropriate indicators of the status of women,

1. Decides to continue the existing integrated reporting system on the status of women as the means of monitoring the realization during 1980-1985 of the World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year and of the programme of action for the second half of the United Nations Decade for Women;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, within the framework of the regular budget, the Advancement of Women Branch of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs has the resources needed to implement its current programme for development of the integrated reporting system and to provide for the widest dissemination of information obtained therefrom;

3. Further requests the Advancement of Women Branch to provide, for each session of the Commission on the Status of Women, a progress report on implementation of new strategies for women and on its work aimed at the follow-up and harmonization of activities of the various bodies of the United Nations system, including institutes and regional commissions, which contribute to the promotion of the rights of women.

The General Assembly,

Taking into account the significance and the results of the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women, held at Copenhagen from 14 to 30 July 1980.

Expresses its deep appreciation to the Government and people of Denmark for acting as host to the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women.

Other matters relating to the status of women

Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women

Programmes and management

The Commission on the Status of Women at its February/March 1980 session, after considering the Secretary-General's 1979 report to the General Assembly on the management of the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women,<sup>17</sup> recommended for adoption by the Economic and Social Council a resolution on the Fund. The Council adopted it without vote as resolution 1980/37, following approval of the text by its Second (Social) Committee without objection on 24 April.

By this resolution, adopted on 2 May, the Council requested all funding organizations and the specialized agencies to review and revise their financial and technical assistance support, to assess its impact on women and to ensure the involvement of and benefit to women, and to report to the Assembly on the results, and corrective action taken, every second year beginning in 1981.

The Council encouraged Governments to review their national development plans to assess their impact on women and to make adjustments where necessary, taking into account the possibility of assistance from multilateral and bilateral resources, and encouraged them to formulate guidelines for implementing the objectives of the United Nations Decade for Women.

Recognizing the importance of continuing the Voluntary Fund's activities beyond the Decade, the Council expressed concern that pledges to the Fund were not keeping pace with demands and strongly urged Member States to support its activities as generously as possible.

Australia orally proposed in Committee an additional provision, later withdrawn, emphasizing the desirability of ensuring that the Fund's resources were directed solely towards implementing programmes and projects.

By resolution 1980/42 of the same date, also adopted without vote, the Council appealed strongly to Member States in a position to do so to support the Voluntary Fund during the second half of the Decade, and asked the Secretary-General, in preparations for the July World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women, held at Copenhagen, Denmark (see subchapter above), to provide adequate documentation and public relations material on the Fund and invite Member States to announce at the Conference their intention of making pledges to the Fund at the November United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities (see p. 600).

The Second Committee approved the text, sponsored by Belgium, India, Jamaica, Nigeria, Trinidad and Tobago, the United Kingdom and the United States, on 30 April by consensus.

By resolution 42 adopted without vote, the World Conference appealed for increased contributions to the Fund, expressed its desire that the activities developed by the Fund should continue beyond the Decade and appealed to the regional commissions to make policy-level posts available to the women's programme from the United Nations regular budget rather than from the Fund.

The Secretary-General reported to the Assembly in October on the management of the Fund and on the discussion of the Fund by its Consultative Committee. The report reviewed developments from October 1979 to September 1980, including the Committee's major recommendations and observations resulting from its seventh (31 March to 4 April) and eighth (8 to 12 September) sessions and its policy advice, and also examined the financial needs of the Fund.

During the period under review, 61 new projects were recommended for implementation, in addition to continuing phases of ongoing projects-46 at the country level and 21 regional or subregional- raising the proportion of country-level projects from 66 per cent in 1979 to 69 per cent in 1980. Expenditures for 1980 country-level projects (other than $4,000 used as support funds by the regional commissions) averaged $70,000, while regional projects averaged $57,000.

To assist in the rapid transfer of funds for project execution and in project supervision, a Memorandum of Understanding between the Secretary-General and the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) was signed; it became effective on 25 June. The United Nations would retain Fund management and overall co-ordination responsibilities. A supplementary trust fund was set up by the Secretary-General, to be managed by UNDP, to which the United Nations would transfer funds from the Voluntary Fund for approved country-level projects; UNDP would make remittances to executing agencies, supervise implementation of projects and assure submission of progress reports at least biannually. As at the end of 1980, 70 per cent of Fund-supported projects were to be administered under this agreement.

In addition to the increasing number of UNDP-assisted country-level projects, intended to ensure that special attention was given to rural women and poor women in urban areas, the major trend for Fund use appeared in increased rural-production and income-raising activities, as opposed to the more traditional women's areas of health, nutrition and home economics. The Fund experimented with providing revolving loan funds to women's groups engaged in such activities, for example for forest-related cottage industries in five Asian countries, a small industrial production unit in Lebanon and an agricultural production group in Colombia. A manual on how to organize and manage revolving loan funds, directed to village women, was prepared. Negotiations were under way with larger funding sources within and outside the United Nations system to finance continuing phases of projects for which the Fund had financed pilot activities.

The Consultative Committee requested background papers on Fund activities, indicating unique Fund functions and Fund management, recommended again that senior women's programme officer posts in regional commissions should not continue to be financed from the Fund, and recommended that the commissions' views should be sought on ways to increase aid to the least developed countries.

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/137 on the Voluntary Fund; its Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee had approved the text in like manner on 7 November. The resolution was sponsored by Barbados, Belgium, Costa Rica, Ghana, Guyana, India, Jamaica, Kuwait, the Netherlands, New Zealand, the Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Sweden, the United Kingdom, the United Republic of Cameroon, the United Republic of Tanzania, and the United States.

By that text, the Assembly: noted with satisfaction the decisions of the Consultative Committee; welcomed the new procedures and increased use of the Fund for country-level projects; expressed its appreciation to United Nations organs for their invaluable assistance to the Fund's work; urged the regional commissions to strengthen their programmes for women from within regular budget resources; asked relevant United Nations bodies to review their support activities in relation to the involvement of and impact on women and to report to the Assembly every second year beginning in 1981; appealed for increased support to the Fund; and asked the Secretary-General to continue to report annually on the management of the Fund and on progress in implementing its activities and to include the Fund as one of the programmes of the United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities.

Voluntary contributions

At the 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, held on 6 and 7 November in New York, pledges were made to the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women for 1981; these and subsequent confirmed pledges before year's end brought the total to $1,454,475 from 38 countries. As at 31 December 1980, 25 countries had paid $2,898,126 during the year.

Convention on the Elimination of All

Forms of Discrimination against Women

Several United Nations organs during 1980 called on States to become parties to the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.<sup>18</sup> The Economic and Social Council took this action by resolution 1980/34, adopted without vote on 2 May, and the General Assembly by resolution 35/140, adopted in like manner on 11 December.

By its resolution, the Council expressed the hope that the Convention would come into force at an early date, invited the Secretary-General to promote its signing and ratification, asked him to arrange a signing ceremony during the July World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women, and encouraged non-governmental organizations to study and make known the Convention's provisions.

The Commission on the Status of Women had recommended the text in March, which was approved by the Second Committee without vote on 23 April. The Committee first amended the text, on an oral proposal by Sweden, deleting mention of arrangements for opening the Convention, since that procedure had already taken place, and instead urging Governments to take the necessary steps to sign, ratify and/or accede to it.

By resolution 28, the World Conference called on all States to sign and ratify the Convention, to take all necessary measures for its implementation and to publicize it, and asked specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to take part in national and international publicity activities. Although the resolution was adopted without vote, Pakistan observed that it had reservations regarding some articles of the Convention, and Haiti's reservation pertained to a preambular reference to the need for co-operation among all women "irrespective of their social and economic systems."

During its discussion of the item, the Assembly's Third Committee had before it a September report by the Secretary-General on the status of adherence to the Convention. He reported that the Convention was opened for signature in New York on 1 March and would enter into force on the thirtieth day after the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession had been deposited with him.

At the signing ceremony in Copenhagen on 17 July, 52 States signed the Convention and two States deposited instruments of ratification. Twelve other countries signed the Convention during the World Conference. As at 31 December, there were 81 signatures by the States listed below, 10 of which were followed by deposit of instruments of ratification (indicated by an asterisk); there was also one accession.

Afghanistan, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Barbados,* Belgium, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bulgaria, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Cape Verde (accession only), Chile, China,* Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba,* Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Denmark, Dominica,* Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic,* Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana,* Haiti, Honduras, Hungary,* Iceland, India, Indonesia, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Mexico, Mongolia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Philippines, Poland,* Portugal,* Romania, Rwanda, Senegal, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden,* Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

China, Cuba, the German Democratic Republic, Hungary and Poland entered reservations at the time of ratification concerning article 29 of the Convention, which laid down arbitration procedures for disputes about its interpretation or application, including referral to the International Court of Justice.

By resolution 35/140, the Assembly expressed great satisfaction with the number of signatories and noted the ratifications with appreciation.

The Third Committee on 7 November had approved the text without vote, as sponsored by 43 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Iraq said it had reservations regarding the Convention because certain provisions might be in contradiction with local legislation in Iraq. Had there been a vote on the resolution, Morocco said it would have voted against it.

The Byelorussian SSR, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Poland and the Ukrainian SSR, in communications to the Secretary-General in November and December, expressed the view that signature of the Convention by Democratic Kampuchea was unlawful inasmuch as they considered the People's Republic of Kampuchea to be that country's sole legitimate Government and that international agreements could be concluded only by representatives appointed by the People's Revolutionary Council.

Draft declaration on women's participation in the strengthening of international peace

The Commission on the Status of Women, at its 1980 session, established a 15-member working group, chaired by Commission Vice-Chairman Mamello Morrison (Lesotho), to discuss the Commission's task, given to it by the General Assembly in 1979,<sup>19</sup> of elaborating a draft declaration on the participation of women in the struggle for the strengthening of international peace and security and against colonialism, racism, racial discrimination, foreign aggression and occupation and all forms of foreign domination. The group had before it a January report by the Secretary-General containing the text of a draft declaration, as well as excerpts from replies received from 19 Governments and from specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations on the nature and content of the draft declaration, and summarizing views expressed during the Assembly's 1979 regular session. The group proposed that the Commission recommend remanding the question of elaborating a draft declaration to the Assembly.

The Commission approved the group's proposal, thereby recommending a draft resolution for adoption by the Economic and Social Council referring the matter back to the Assembly and inviting it to consider the question at its 1980 regular session. The Council adopted the text without vote on 2 May as resolution 1980/36; it had been similarly approved by the Second Committee on 23 April.

The July World Conference at Copenhagen endorsed this course of action by its resolution 11, adopted by 77 votes to 6, with 35 abstentions, requesting the Assembly to further the elaboration of such a draft declaration on the basis of the views and proposals in the Secretary-General's report.

In November, during the Assembly's 1980 session, the German Democratic Republic introduced in the Third Committee, on behalf of 29 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below), a draft resolution containing the text of a proposed three-part declaration on the subject. By this text, the Assembly would have solemnly proclaimed a Declaration on the Participation of Women in the Struggle for the Strengthening of International Peace and Security and Against Colonialism, Racial Discrimination, Foreign Aggression, Occupation and All Forms of Foreign Domination, called on States to take specific action to give effect to the Declaration's principles, and provided for biennial review of progress in promoting the equality of women.

Part I of the resolution contained the five articles of the Declaration. Article I stated that the equal participation of women in political affairs and in the endeavour to implement the right to live in peace as a fundamental right was to be promoted by all appropriate means. By article 2, States were to create the prerequisites for women to participate in the struggle against the arms race and for disarmament; in using the resources released by disarmament measures, particular attention was to be given to the advancement of women and the protection of mothers and children. To create prerequisites for world-wide enforcement of equal rights for women, colonialism, apartheid, racism, racial discrimination, neo-colonialism, foreign aggression, acquisition of foreign territory by force, and foreign occupation as well as the economic and social consequences thereof were to be eliminated, as stated in article 3. Article 4 stated that all forms of oppression and inhuman treatment of women on account of their advocacy of international peace and the right to self-determination were to be condemned as crimes against humanity and as gross violations of human rights; solidarity and assistance should be rendered to women victims of aggression, colonialism, racism, racial discrimination, apartheid oppression, exploitation and fascism, and those compelled to live under the most adverse conditions. By article 5, the implementation of the sovereign right of every State to establish an economic order of its own choice and utilize its own natural resources, the democratic restructuring of international economic relations and the reduction of differences in the level of developed and developing countries was to be ensured.

To implement the Declaration, part II of the resolution would have had the Assembly call on all States to: ensure implementation of the Programme of Action adopted at the July World Conference; adopt programmes to ensure the active co-operation of women to attain the Declaration's goals; promote exchanges of experience to enhance the involvement of women in efforts to attain the Declaration's aims; publicize, and influence mass media concerning, women's role in the struggle for peace, understanding, racial and sexual equality, self-determination and international co-operation and against colonialism, racism and racial discrimination; pay tribute to women's contribution in these areas by proclaiming special days and by other marks of appreciation; and encourage women to participate in organizations aimed at the strengthening of international peace and security and friendly relations and co-operation among nations.

By part III, United Nations bodies were to review biennially the progress made in promoting the equality of women in respect of their participation in the above struggles as a reflection of their involvement in the political affairs of society.

The sponsors orally redrafted the title of the draft Declaration and, rather than have the Assembly proclaim the Declaration, would have it request the Secretary-General to seek the views of Governments and then consider the draft with a view to adopting it.

Amendments and subamendments to the resolution and the draft Declaration were submitted by Morocco and Saudi Arabia to redraft the title and, in preambular references: to welcome women's struggle against apartheid foreign military intervention against peoples and sovereign nations and the recruitment and sending of mercenaries; to speak of implementation of and respect for the right of all peoples to self-determination, rather than merely implementation of that right; to qualify sources of tension and crisis as those due to foreign military intervention against peoples and sovereign nations, aggression and increased use of mercenaries; and to add that respect for self-determination was one of the policies inseparably linked with efforts to maintain peace. Foreign military intervention and increased use of mercenaries would also be added to article 3 of the Declaration as prerequisites for "achievement of peace and the happiness and welfare of women," rather than for unrestricted enforcement of the equal rights of women, and a phrase to that effect added to several provisions of the resolution which spoke of struggle against various victimizing policies (Algeria orally proposed that the phrase "foreign military or other intervention" be used). In article 4, the two-power amendments would speak of self-determination "without foreign intervention" and would expand victimizing policies to include military intervention and attacks of mercenaries. Oral subamendments by Algeria proposed to add to enumerations of proscribed activities "the policy of territorial expansionism practised by certain States to the detriment of the right of peoples under colonial and foreign domination to self-determination and independence," and Morocco subamended those to include hegemonism.

Ireland introduced a draft decision by which, as amended by Jamaica, the Assembly would ask the Secretary-General to seek Member States' views on the draft Declaration and submit a report to the Assembly in 1981, when it would consider the text in an open-ended working group within the Third Committee. Ireland withdrew this draft decision.

Following consultations, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya introduced an oral draft decision, which was adopted without vote by the Assembly on 11 December as decision 35/429. The Assembly thereby decided to ask the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on a text entitled "Draft Declaration on the Participation of Women in the Struggle for the Strengthening of International Peace and Security and against Colonialism, Apartheid All Forms of Racism and Racial Discrimination, Foreign Aggression and Occupation and All Forms of Foreign Domination," and to report to its 1981 session, when it would consider the text, and the amendments submitted, with a view to adopting the draft. The Assembly also postponed consideration of the draft resolution on the subject. Ireland orally amended the draft decision in Committee to ask for the report. The Third Committee approved the amended text without vote on 6 November.

Training of women for development

Mobilization of women in development

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

In March 1980, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a comprehensive report on the effective mobilization and integration of women in development, requested by the Assembly in 1979<sup>20</sup> and prepared on the basis of observations and studies made by 28 bodies of the United Nations system.

The report evaluated the impact, on overall national development, of policies aimed at mobilizing and integrating women in the development process, focusing on employment in the production of primary commodities and in manufacturing and services, education and health. It examined, at both governmental and intergovernmental levels, ways to promote mobilization and integration measures affecting women directly and immediately and measures affecting the societal environment in which they lived and worked. Thus, it examined ways of promoting direct measures concerned with women's health, education, employment, reproductive behaviour, social and legal status, participation in political affairs and responsibilities as household managers and heads of families, but concluded that such measures, although of vital importance, could succeed only if the broader social context were made less hostile to women. The report also examined ways of promoting adjustments to policies concerned with intermediate and underlying processes: financial and monetary matters, macro-economic structures, choice of science and technology, selection of energy use, priorities in commodity production and the consumption of goods, infrastructure and services. In most instances, such policies had been formulated without regard for their consequences for women; nor had account been taken, with regard to their chances of success, of the fact that women's participation in development remained severely limited.

The report emphasized that the processes which needed to be taken into consideration in the formulation of policies designed to mobilize women effectively and integrate their efforts in development were complex, requiring multidisciplinary analysis and intersectoral planning. An annex to the report provided a tentative graphical depiction of interdependencies between development processes and the condition of women in developing countries.

The Secretary-General pointed to a need to assess development strategies in terms of their contribution to the mobilization of women. Such assessments should be undertaken in the priority areas of the new international economic order, which involved mobilization of all available human resources. Stronger emphasis should be placed on the role of women in such areas as food production, processing of primary commodities and promotion of industrialization in developing countries, transfer of technology, and energy. These processes being closely linked, the United Nations system's organizations should adopt an interdisciplinary and comprehensive approach to research and planning for women in development within the context of the new International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s).

ACTION BY THE WORLD CONFERENCE

The July World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women (see subchapter above) adopted without vote a number of resolutions dealing with the integration of women in the development process. The Conference, by resolution 8, suggested to Governments and international organizations the revision of census questionnaires to provide data on women that could be used to estimate their progress towards integration in development. By resolution 15, the Conference, stressing the need for action-oriented research on integrating women in development, emphasized the importance of co-operation among developing countries, through the International Center for Public Enterprises in Developing Countries—a joint institution of developing countries—in advancing women's role and position as a factor of development in public enterprises, and asked United Nations organizations and developed countries interested in the management of public enterprises to co-operate in the Center's activities.

By resolution 36, the Conference appealed to both donors and recipients of development assistance to involve women in programmes from their earliest stages and ensure that women's interests were taken into account in and not adversely affected by projects, and urged them to consult on, review and evaluate their arrangements regularly; donors were asked to make more resources available for programmes to benefit women.

By resolution 39, the Conference recommended the establishment of machinery for integrating women in development, and provision of resources for it, as well as full co-ordination of activities at every level to enable the machinery to achieve the priority objectives of the 1975 World Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Objectives of the International Women's Year.<sup>21</sup>

ACTION BY UNIDO AND UNDP

At its Third General Conference (New Delhi, India, 21 January-9 February), the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) adopted a resolution on women and industrialization, emphasizing that the integration and participation of women at all levels in the industrialization process was a vital prerequisite for balanced and equitable development, and calling on Governments to promote their involvement and integration in industrial development and to eliminate discriminatory attitudes and practices hampering such participation. Stressing UNIDO's essential role in this area, the Conference requested the Executive Director of UNIDO to take various actions designed to strengthen UNIDO's capacity to support the activities of Governments in this matter, including submission of a progress report to the Industrial Development Board in 1981. (See also p. 653.)

On 26 June, the Governing Council of UNDP adopted a decision on evaluation of technical co-operation activities, in a section of which it expressed its appreciation for a summary report by the UNDP Administrator, undertaken in collaboration with other United Nations organizations, on an action-oriented assessment of rural women's participation in development; it endorsed a recommendation that, in collaboration with those organizations, an intensive action programme be undertaken, including special programming assistance, to overcome obstacles to such participation identified in the report. The Council requested the Administrator to ensure that the recommendations in his report were applied in all UNDP-supported projects and programmes in a manner designed to support both rural and urban women. The recommendations, aimed at promoting women's participation in development programmes, included special training activities and assistance, preparation of guidelines for agency field staff, studies to increase the data base on women's work, and preparation of country profiles on the situation of women.

DECISION BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The General Assembly, on 5 December 1980 without vote, adopted resolution 35/78 on the mobilization and integration of women in development.

The Assembly thereby welcomed inclusion in the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade of special provisions relating to the integration of women in overall development [for text of relevant provision (paragraph 51) of the Strategy, annexed to General Assembly resolution 35/56 of 5 December, see p. 508], endorsed the resolution on women and industrialization adopted by the UNIDO Conference and asked that the Executive Director's report requested therein be transmitted also to the Assembly's 1981 regular session. The Assembly asked the Secretary-General to ensure that the review of progress made in carrying out recommendations relating to mobilization of women contained in the 1975 World Plan of Action and the Programme of Action for the Second Half of the United Nations Decade for Women (see p. 890) was made part of the review of progress made in implementing the new International Development Strategy.

The Assembly called on bodies of the United Nations system to give sustained attention to the integration of women in the formulation, design and implementation of development projects and programmes in the context of the new Strategy, called on them and Governments to make every effort to implement the recommendations and resolutions related to this topic adopted by the July World Conference, and urged the 1981 United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy, the 1981 Conference on the Least Developed Countries and United Nations bodies concerned with the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990) to take fully into account women's needs and concerns.

The Assembly asked the Secretary-General to continue assessing the effects of current international economic structures on the situation of women in trade, technology transfer, agriculture, food prices and industrialization, and, in co-operation with the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, and other United Nations bodies, to develop specific-action-oriented research and training programmes in this regard, in particular in the field of technical co-operation for development. It requested him to submit a report in 1981 on implementation of a provision of a 1979 resolution calling on United Nations agencies and organizations to assist Governments in integrating women in rural development,<sup>22</sup> and to prepare a comprehensive and detailed outline for an interdisciplinary and multisectoral world survey on the role of women in overall development.

The resolution was approved without vote by the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee on 20 November; the text was submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman following informal consultations on a draft proposed by 44 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below), which was then withdrawn.

Differences from the 44-power text, in addition to drafting changes, included: addition of preambular paragraphs noting the Secretary-General's March report on the subject and reiterating that accelerated development required the real and effective participation of women and men in all aspects of the development process; addition of the operative paragraph calling for sustained attention to women's integration at all stages of development projects and programmes; and expansion of the paragraph requesting action-oriented research and training programmes by specifying in particular those in the field of technical co-operation for development. The Secretary-General was to report to the 1981 Assembly session on a detailed outline for a survey on women's role in development, rather than in 1982 as earlier proposed.

Following approval of the resolution, the United States recalled its position on the recommendations and resolutions of the World Conference, but hoped to participate in programmes on a selective basis. Jamaica said it was its understanding that the review of progress made in implementing the recommendations concerning the World Plan of Action would be taken fully into account in the new Strategy for the 1980s. Czechoslovakia said it was the understanding of the socialist States of Eastern Europe that activities arising out of the resolution would supplement those recommended by the Third Committee which were intended to ensure equal rights for women and to obtain their active participation in strengthening international peace and security and in combating colonialism, racism, aggression, and foreign occupation and domination, and whose documents and decisions at the current session should be taken into account in the Secretary-General's 1981 survey report.

International Research and Training institute for the Advancement of Women

The report of the Board of Trustees of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women on its first session (Geneva, 22-26 October 1979) was submitted to the Economic and Social Council in February 1980, and the Secretary-General reported on the Institute's activities in March.

The reports outlined developments concerning the Institute and measures recommended pending its installation at Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic. The Board had adopted its programme budget for the biennium 1980-1981, and recommended that, pending the appointment of a Director, a co-ordinator be designated and staff appointed to begin the work of the Institute.

The Institute began work on its programme in January 1980, carrying out its activities at United Nations Headquarters, New York, under a co-ordinator. Its substantive activities were grouped under research, training, and information, documentation and communication. The programme budget requested a survey on existing data on research and training activities as well as dissemination of data as part of the clearing-house functions of the Institute. That documentation was presented to the World Conference. The Board's report also outlined some perspectives for future activities of the Institute.

On 2 May, the Council adopted, without vote, decision 1980/143, by which it authorized the Secretary-General to transmit to the Assembly without Council debate his report on the work of the Institute, and decision 1980/146, by which it took note of the report of the Institute's Board of Trustees. Both decisions were orally proposed by the Second Committee Chairman and approved by that Committee without objection on 18 and 30 April, respectively. Argentina, in a statement in Committee after approval, said the Board did not currently reflect appropriately the principle of regional distribution of seats.

In July, by resolution 38 adopted without vote, the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women noted with satisfaction the establishment of the Institute and the commencement of its operations, and recommended that it undertake research and training programmes in all regions and countries to facilitate the implementation of the Conference's Programme of Action and that United Nations-related organizations and Member States hold regional seminars on carrying out such programmes on the needs of women. It urged those organizations to co-operate with and assist the Institute in carrying out its programmes and appealed to Member States to provide voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women.

On 11 December, the Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/134 pertaining to the Institute. Its Third Committee similarly approved the text on 6 November, as sponsored by Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, Guyana, Japan, Jordan, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, the Philippines, Somalia, Uruguay, Venezuela and Yugoslavia.

By that text, the Assembly urged the Secretary-General to appoint the Director of the Institute, taking fully into account the consultations held with Member States to that end, expressed its desire that consultations with the Dominican Republic would be expeditiously concluded for the Institute's installation and functioning there, reiterated the 1976 guidelines set for the Institute by the Economic and Social Council,<sup>23</sup> in particular the need for close collaboration with regional institutes having similar objectives, invited Governments to contribute to the Trust Fund for the Institute, both financially and in kind, and asked the Secretary-General to report to the Council at its April/May 1981 session on implementation of this resolution.

VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS

At the 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, held on 6 and 7 November in New York (see p. 600), pledges were made to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women for 1981. These and subsequent confirmed pledges before year's end brought the total to $334,913 from 14 countries. As at 31 December 1980, four countries had paid $44,875 during the year.

Communications on the status of women

On 3 March, at its 1980 session, the Commission on the Status of Women appointed a five-member Ad Hoc Working Group on Communications to review, among other documentation, a confidential list of communications concerning the status of women prepared by the Secretary-General, to recommend those which should be made available to the Commission and to make proposals on problems requiring immediate attention. Reporting orally to the Commission on 5 March, the Group stated that it had taken note of the contents of the communications and had informed the Group member's respective regional groups of the issues raised in its review.

The Commission then recommended for adoption by the Economic and Social Council a resolution on communications on the status of women. By this text, the Council would have borne in mind that by a 1975 decision<sup>24</sup>—taken following a Commission decision to delete the question of dealing with communications from its work programme—it had invited the Commission to reconsider dealing with communications relating to the status of women. The Council would also have stated that it was mindful of the need for a United Nations body concerned with women's rights to provide international recourse for persons, organizations and States, recognizing the desirability of strengthening the Commission to deal with communications relating to political, civil, economic, social and cultural rights and the status of women in all aspects. By the single operative paragraph, the Secretary-General would have been asked to appoint an ad hoc group of experts, to meet at Vienna, to study procedures for dealing with such communications and report to the Commission in 1982.

The draft was discussed by the Council's Second Committee, where amendments were submitted jointly by Argentina, Barbados, Brazil, Chile, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Mexico, Trinidad and Tobago, and Venezuela.

In addition to proposing several preambular changes, these States proposed replacing the existing operative paragraph by two others, to the effect that the communications referred to should be examined by the Commission on Human Rights rather than by an ad hoc group of experts. The amendments were approved by a recorded vote, requested by Venezuela on behalf of their sponsors, of 20 to 19, with 7 abstentions.

The text, as thus amended, was approved by the Second Committee on 30 April by 19 votes to 6, with 20 abstentions.

In the light of the adoption of the nine-power amendments, amendments by the United States were not put to a vote. The United States had proposed to replace the existing operative paragraph by provisions by which the Council would have requested the Secretary-General (changed to the Chairman of the Commission on the Status of Women on an oral suggestion by India), in consultation with the regional groups, to appoint a 10-member working group from among members of the Commission on the Status of Women, to meet at Vienna for a week prior to the Commission's 1982 session, to study and evaluate procedures for handling communications relating to the status of women, with the object of submitting recommendations on procedures for adoption by the Commission. The Council would have asked the Secretariat to assist the working group by providing background information regarding existing procedures. The United States had accepted a United Kingdom subamendment by which the Council would have decided to consider the Commission's recommendations on this question at its first regular session of 1982, taking into account other existing procedures on communications in the United Nations system.

Speaking in Committee in explanation of vote, Australia, Belgium, France, Ghana, Spain, the United Kingdom, the United Republic of Tanzania, and the United States said they had voted against the amended text; the amendments constituted a substantial modification of the Commission's original resolution and their effect would be to transfer an important task of the Commission on the Status of Women to the Commission on Human Rights.

The United States reintroduced its amendments in the plenary Council, as well as others which would have: added a new preambular paragraph to have the Council bear in mind that, in its 1975 decision on communications, it had invited the Commission to reconsider its existing authority to deal with communications; and replaced a preambular paragraph stating that the Council was taking into account Commission on Human Rights procedures for dealing with communications with a paragraph recognizing the desirability of strengthening the Commission on the Status of Women to deal with communications relating to women's political, civil, economic, social and cultural rights and their status in all its aspects.

Following consultations in the Council, Cyprus introduced a draft resolution which it said represented a consensus text to replace that approved by the Second Committee on 30 April; the Council adopted it without vote on 2 May as resolution 1980/39. By that resolution, the Council, recalling that the Commission on the Status of Women was entitled to receive communications relating to the status of women but had no mandate to act on them, requested that Commission to consider at its 1982 session, for submission to the Council at its first regular session that year, procedures for handling such communications; it also requested the Commission on Human Rights to submit to the Council at the same session its views on how they should be handled. At that session, the Council would consider the matter of procedures for handling such communications, taking into account both Commissions' views. The Council also asked the Secretary-General to provide background information regarding existing United Nations procedures on communications.

The Bahamas expressed reservations on the text; the Council had not been given the opportunity to explore all aspects of the question through a representative group of experts, it said.

The United States felt that communications on women that had been referred to the Commission on Human Rights had not been dealt with effectively and that the procedures of the Commission on the Status of Women should be strengthened to provide a working mechanism to examine such communications.

The USSR said it did not approve of the tendency towards proliferation of procedures for handling communications alleging human rights violations. It expressed reservations on the preamble and on the provision by which the Commission on the Status of Women was asked to submit its views on procedures, since the Commission itself had clearly stated that it had no mandate to deal with such communications.

Fundamental freedoms guaranteed to individuals

On 2 May, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/40, by which it reaffirmed the principles governing the fundamental guarantees of the individual as set forth in several articles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. 25 The articles cited were articles 3 (on the right to life, liberty and the security of person), 6 (on the right to recognition as a person before the law), 7 (on equality before and equal protection of the law) and 10 (on entitlement to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal). The Council called on Governments to ensure their strict application and particularly that no one could be prosecuted, persecuted or harassed simply because of a family or social relationship with an accused or convicted person. Finally, the Council recommended that competent international bodies, particularly the Commission on Human Rights, find ways of putting an end to such action-ensuring fundamental rights and guarantees for all, and in particular safeguarding women and children against reprisals-and of restoring the rights of those deprived of them.

The draft, submitted by the Commission on the Status of Women, was discussed by the Council's Second Committee. Argentina orally proposed that the Committee vote on a draft decision by which the Council would decide to take no decision on the Commission's recommended text, taking into account the fact that the Commission on Human Rights on 11 March had adopted a resolution (see p. 855) which it said carried out the action being recommended in the current resolution. France observed that the Human Rights Commission resolution dealt with reprisals against detainees, in particular political detainees, which violated basic human rights, while the current text focused on the protection of women and children, not only those whose relatives were detained but also those who were themselves suspects and subjected to reprisals or pressure. The Argentina proposal was rejected by 9 votes in favour to 24 against, with 10 abstentions. The Committee then approved the Commission-recommended text, without vote, on 23 April. Argentina observed that it had not participated in the consensus.

Conditions in which women are detained

Resolution 1980/41, which the Council adopted without vote on 2 May, was entitled "Conditions in which women are detained." By that text, the Council solemnly appealed to Governments and international bodies concerned with human rights to pay particular attention to the conditions in which women were detained, especially concerning respect for their dignity and corporal integrity. On an oral proposal by the Federal Republic of Germany, after a suggestion by Brazil, the Second Committee changed the title of the resolution; in the form recommended by the Commission on the Status of Women, which had submitted the text, the resolution had carried the title "Communications concerning the status of women." The Committee then approved the text without objection on 24 April.

Refugees and displaced women

The July 1980 World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women adopted resolutions 12 and 13 urging international action to alleviate the overall situation of women refugees and displaced women and encouraging women's participation in assistance programmes for this category of women (see p. 917).

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/135 by which it urged the international community to provide assistance to displaced and refugee women, and urged the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to undertake detailed studies on the particular vulnerabilities of women in refugee status and to implement programmes and projects on the basis of such studies (see p. 939).

Women and children under apartheid

At its 1980 regular session, the General Assembly adopted on 16 December resolution 35/206 N urging high priority for measures of assistance to women in South Africa and Namibia during the second half of the United Nations Decade for Women. The Assembly endorsed the Declaration and Recommendations of the International Seminar on Women and Apartheid (Helsinki, Finland, 19-21 May) (see p. 228) and the relevant recommendations of the Copenhagen World Conference on women in July (see p. 898). The Assembly also commended the Special Committee against Apartheid for giving special attention to the plight of women and children under apartheid, asked the Commission on Human Rights to investigate crimes against them in South Africa, appealed for support for projects of national liberation movements and front-line States designed to assist refugee women and children from South Africa and Namibia, encouraged organizations concerned with women in South Africa to proclaim an International Day of Solidarity with the Struggle of Women of South Africa and Namibia, invited women's organizations to intensify action in solidarity with the liberation struggle in South Africa, and asked the Special Committee and its Task Force on Women and Children to promote and monitor implementation of World Conference recommendations, publicize the plight and liberation struggle of women and children under apartheid, and encourage and co-sponsor conferences on the subject.

(For further details of resolution 35/206 N, see p. 228.)

Work programme and report of the Commission on the Status of Women

On 2 May, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote decision 1980/144, approving the provisional agenda and documentation for the Commission's 1982 session, and decision 1980/145, taking note of the Commission's report on its 1980 session-its twenty-eighth, held at Vienna from 25 February to 5 March. The text of the first decision had been recommended by the Commission; the second was orally proposed by the Chairman of the Council's Second Committee. The Committee approved them without objection and without vote, respectively, on 30 April.

The appropriateness of the item on communications was discussed in the Second Committee on 30 April, in connexion with the resolution the Committee approved on the subject as proposed by the Commission and amended by nine powers (see p. 916). Argentina said that, since communications were to be transmitted to the Commission on Human Rights, it was questionable whether the agenda item should continue to be included. This view was supported by the USSR, while Australia, France, Ireland, the United Kingdom and the United States took the position that the item should remain. Ireland observed that the Committee had approved the resolution but the Council had not yet adopted it. Argentina then suggested that the Committee might take note of the provisional agenda instead of approving it-a solution supported by Algeria, the Bahamas and Sweden and rejected by France and Ireland.

The Committee Chairman orally proposed that the Committee approve the provisional agenda on the understanding that the Commission would, in turn, adopt its agenda in final form. The Committee then approved the agenda without objection.

The USSR, after adoption of the decision, said the Council's action should not be taken to prejudge the question of the agenda to be adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women when it met.

Resolution 1980/40, as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/50 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 2 May 1980, meeting 23.

The Economic and Social Council.

Keeping in mind the provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Considering that everyone has the right to security of person,

Considering that all are equal before the law and are entitled, without discrimination, to equal protection of the law,

Considering that everyone is entitled, in full equality, to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal in the determination of his or her rights and obligations and of any criminal charge against him or her,

Deeply concerned about the fact that close relatives, particularly the spouses, mothers and children, of persons accused of a penal offence are often, because of their relationship to those persons, the victims of persecution, harassment and other infringements of their rights,

1. Reaffirms the principles governing the fundamental guarantees of the individual, as set forth particularly in articles 3, 6, 7 and 10 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

2. Calls upon Governments to ensure the strict application of those provisions, and particularly to ensure that no one can be prosecuted, persecuted or harassed simply because of a family or social relationship with an accused or convicted person;

3. Recommends that the competent international bodies, particularly the Commission on Human Rights, should find ways to put an end to such action, ensuring that all persons may enjoy fundamental rights and guarantees, and in particular providing effective protection for women and children in order to safeguard them against any reprisals, and to restore their rights to those who have been deprived thereof.

Resolution 1980/41, as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/50 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 2 May 1980, meeting 23.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that, under article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, no one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

Recalling the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which was adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 3452(XXX) of 9 December 1975,

Considering that, in many countries, prosecuted, indicted or imprisoned women are often subjected to intolerable treatment and specific forms of torture, especially when they are harassed in violation of fundamental rights, because of their national or racial origin, or solely on the basis of their political opinions,

Solemnly appeals to Governments and to international bodies concerned with the defence of human rights to pay particular attention to the conditions in which women are detained, especially concerning respect for their dignity and corporal integrity.

Chapter XIX

United Nations Children's Fund

The Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) held its annual session from 19 to 30 May 1980 in New York, approving commitments and endorsing the medium-term work programme for UNICEF activities on behalf of the world's children, particularly those in developing countries. Prominent among these activities were UNICEF's actions in carrying out its responsibilities for co-ordinating follow-up activities to the International Year of the Child (IYC), observed in 1979.

The Economic and Social Council (resolution 1980/62) and the General Assembly (resolution 35/79) subsequently endorsed the Board's policies, actions and conclusions, details of which are given in this chapter.

Activities in 1980

At its May session, the Executive Board of UNICEF approved commitments totalling $244 million, of which $213 million was for co-operation in country programme aid and programme support services. It also approved recommendations amounting to $130 million for funding by specific-purpose contributions. Endorsing the proposals made by the Fund's Executive Director in the medium-term work plan, the Board agreed to income targets of $290 million for 1981 and $350 million for 1982, exclusive of Kampuchean relief operations.

Planning and programming for children

The Executive Board endorsed the general directions given in a report by Inspector Maurice Bertrand of the United Nations Joint Inspection Unit on planning and programming for children at the country level. The report's central concern was how UNICEF could rationalize its planning and programming methods to be more effective in assisting the Governments and populations of developing countries to execute their policies and programmes in favour of children. The specific recommendations included: maintaining a system of permanently updated internal guidelines; encouraging all countries to formulate long-term strategies for children as a framework for medium-term activities; paying more attention to the definition of objectives; utilizing a more systematic approach to monitoring and evaluation; and, particularly, making a major effort to improve the availability of information on a national basis concerning the situation of children.

The Board requested that the Executive Director proceed cautiously in pursuing the recommendation to build the information base, so as not to overburden government capacities or sacrifice any element of UNICEF's traditionally action-oriented approach.

Education

The Board considered a report by the Executive Director assessing the application of policies for UNICEF co-operation in formal and non-formal education. It concluded that these policies remained valid and endorsed recommendations made for improving their implementation. However, it wished to see a sharper focus on education as part of basic services, greater community involvement, and a better meshing of education activities with activities in other fields of co-operation, such as women's activities, water supply and sanitation, food and nutrition, and health.

The Fund's participation in education programmes in 1980 chiefly involved improving the quality and relevance of primary education; the training of primary-school teachers was a programme component in 76 countries. The Fund also supported non-formal education, to provide basic skills for children and young people who had left or had never attended school. While expenditures for formal education remained at the 1979 level ($26 million), those for non-formal education rose (to $8.5 million from 1979's $7.4 million) partly as a result of greater attention paid to programmes for women and girls. During 1980, expenditures for education amounted to 16 per cent of UNICEF's regular programme expenditure. A total of 88,000 educational institutions received supplies and equipment, and 91,300 teachers, instructors and other education personnel received training with UNICEF stipends.

Women, children and development

The Executive Board reviewed UNICEF's policies of co-operation in programmes for women and girls on the basis of a report analysing a number of UNICEF programmes or services designed exclusively or partially for women. The analysis showed a tendency not to involve women closely enough in the formulation or evaluation of activities for their benefit. The report concluded that UNICEF should give more attention in the future to five areas: information gathering as a basis for programme preparation, advocacy, women's income-generating activities, the participation of women in community life, and monitoring and evaluation. The Board stressed that UNICEF should advocate a broad perception of women in society and in the development process. In the design of programmes for low-income women in developing countries, priority should go to activities with the strongest impact on the well-being of children; income-generating activities for women should be developed as well as accompanying social support services, such as appropriate technology to lighten the burden of household work, suitable child-care arrangements, and the promotion of work environments encouraging women to breast-feed. The Fund was also asked to collaborate with Governments in the eradication of the practice of female circumcision, by supporting national initiatives and taking cognizance of cultural and religious sensitivities.

Childhood disabilities

At its 1980 session, the Board endorsed the guiding principles in a report prepared for it by Rehabilitation International, a non-governmental organization in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, on helping countries improve the prevention and treatment of childhood disability as part of community-based services. The report stressed prevention of impairments and limiting their effects. The involvement of families and the community was considered to be paramount. The Board accepted these principles and recommended their gradual incorporation into UNICEF's regular programming.

Child health services

Increasingly, UNICEF's support of mother and child health was set in the context of primary health care, an intersectoral community-based approach to the provision of health services. Child health, together with water supply and family planning, continued to account for more than half of UNICEF's regular programme expenditure. Some 43,000 health institutions received supplies and equipment; more than 38,000 of these were in rural areas, reflecting the growing emphasis on community-based services. Nearly 116,000 medical personnel, chiefly public health workers, received training with UNICEF stipends.

Water supply and environmental sanitation

During 1980, more than 99,000 rural water-supply installations were completed, serving about 10.5 million people. Some 275,000 excreta-disposal installations were completed to serve approximately 1.7 million people. Accompanying activities included health education and training in the maintenance of water supply systems. During the year, UNICEF joined the co-operative action for the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990), proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 35/18 of 10 November. (For further details, see p. 704.)

Child nutrition

Expenditures by UNICEF on child nutrition increased in 1980, reaching more than 7 per cent of regular programme assistance. Child nutrition also received substantial support under the aegis of health and education programmes. Work at the national level included nutritional surveillance, training, applied nutrition activities such as family food production and storage, goitre control, campaigns against vitamin-A deficiency, and selective supplementary feeding. The Fund continued to work with the World Health Organization on the promotion of breast-feeding and the drafting of an international code for the marketing of breast-milk substitutes.

Emergency relief and rehabilitation

On 14 February 1980, the Executive Board held a special one-day session to review the Kampuchean emergency relief operation carried out by UNICEF jointly with the International Committee of the Red Cross and in collaboration with the World Food Programme. Expenditures by UNICEF for emergency relief and rehabilitation rose to 4 per cent of total programme assistance during 1980, or to 23 per cent if the Kampuchean relief operation was included.

Emergency relief was funded primarily by specific-purpose contributions, although funds could be diverted from regular programme resources (as was done for 10 countries in 1980) or released from the Executive Director's emergency fund (13 countries).

At its May session, the Board again reviewed UNICEF's role as the lead agency of the United Nations system for carrying out the Kampuchean relief programme, and considered other serious emergencies in Africa and Asia in which UNICEF was increasingly active. The emergency fund was raised from $1 million a year to $3 million. The Board expressed approval of the work done by UNICEF in the Kampuchean relief operation and reaffirmed the policy on emergency relief which had led to UNICEF's involvement, while acknowledging the extra burden entailed. The Board decided to keep the situation under review.

Income and expenditures

During 1980, UNICEF's income totalled $316 million. Of that, $208 million was allocated to general programmes and $108 million to specific purposes, including $54 million for Kampuchean relief. By source of income, 68 per cent came from Governments as regular and special contributions, 22 per cent from private sources such as fund-raising campaigns, greeting-card profits and individual donations, 2 per cent from the United Nations system, and 8 per cent from miscellaneous sources.

Not included in the recorded income were donations-in-kind delivered through UNICEF in 1980, mainly in the form of children's foods, valued at $11 million. Also not counted as income was $31 million handled by UNICEF as funds-in-trust not subject to Board commitment, mainly for reimbursable supply procurement on behalf of Governments, organizations in the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations.

Expenditures in 1980 amounted to $314 million: $203 million for programme assistance ($145 million for supplies and $58 million for non-supply assistance); $38 million for programme support services; $23 million for administrative services; $49 million for Kampuchean relief; and $600,000 for operational costs for IYC (see section below).

Programme and revenue targets

On 25 July 1980, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the policies, actions and conclusions of the Executive Board of UNICEF as adopted at its May session, and appealed to all Governments to increase their voluntary contributions to the Fund so that it might reach the income target of $350 million for 1982 appearing in the UNICEF medium-term work plan.

These actions were set forth in resolution 1980/62, adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee. The text had been similarly approved by the Committee on 17 July; the sponsors were Ethiopia, India, Mexico, Norway, Pakistan, the Philippines, Senegal, Somalia, Sweden, Thailand, the United States, Venezuela, Yugoslavia and Zambia.

Before approval of the text, Pakistan, on behalf of the sponsors, in addition to making a number of drafting changes, reworded the beginning of a preambular paragraph expressing support for Executive Board action in IYC follow-up (see following section), expanding it to express support for the Board's recommendation that IYC follow-up activities should be based on the premise that those activities would be integrated into the total UNICEF programme. At the request of the USSR, the sponsors deleted a preambular paragraph stating that the Council was awaiting with interest any Board recommendations in 1981 with respect to a possible enlargement of its membership, on the basis of informal consultations to be undertaken by its Chairman before the Board's 1981 session. To the paragraph endorsing the policies, actions and conclusions of the Board's 1980 session, the clause "as they were adopted at its session" was added.

Follow-up of the #### International Year of the Child

In 1979, the General Assembly had designated UNICEF, which had been the lead agency of the United Nations system for IYC commemorated in 1979, as the lead agency also for co-ordinating the development aspects of the follow-up of IYC<sup>1</sup>. The Executive Board decided that in undertaking this responsibility UNICEF should merge the follow-up activities with its regular programme of work. Specific approaches and activities were approved which would signify UNICEF's broad concern with the world's children but would not detract from its overriding commitment to meeting the needs of children in developing countries; these were to include establishing a referral service for technical and operational information regarding the situation of children, and promoting intercountry exchange of information. In developing countries, UNICEF was asked to widen the scope of its co-operation to include giving more attention to the general conditions for children's sound personal development, and to children with special problems; at the same time, UNICEF should assume responsibility for drawing attention to the needs and problems of children that were common to both developing and industrialized countries.

On 5 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/79, recognizing the need for a much greater effort by the international community to sustain the impetus generated by IYC and to achieve the goals and objectives of the new International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s). The Assembly commended the policies and activities of UNICEF and endorsed Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/62 (see preceding section). The Assembly urged UNICEF, with the support of its national committees, to respond imaginatively and vigorously to its important responsibilities in IYC follow-up activities. It appealed to Governments and organizations to re-examine their activities on behalf of children in the light of the goals of the new International Development Strategy and to co-operate fully with UNICEF. The Assembly also appealed to all Governments, especially those not contributing at a level commensurate with their capacity, to increase their contributions, if possible on a multiyear basis, so that the Fund might reach its 1982 income target of $350 million.

Resolution 35/79 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee. The text, submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman following consultations on a draft sponsored by 32 powers (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below) was approved by the Committee without vote on 31 October. The 32 States consequently withdrew their draft.

Differences, essentially preambular, between the two texts pertained to the new wording "having in mind the importance of," rather than the emphasis accorded to, social and human development objectives, and the addition, to a reference to the need for increased funds, of the clause "as established by the Executive Board" of UNICEF.

Speaking after approval, the USSR reiterated the importance it attached to the principle of voluntary contributions to UNICEF.

Among the objectives of the new International Development Strategy for the 1980s—adopted by the Assembly by resolution 35/56 of 5 December (see p. 499)—was fostering the welfare of children, in pursuit of the objectives highlighted during IYC; moreover, the essential role of the family in the balanced development of the child should be stressed. Efforts should be made to improve the living conditions of children and to eliminate child labour, with special attention to the large number of them under 15 years of age living in poor rural and urban areas. (For text of relevant provision (paragraph 50) of the Strategy, see p. 508.)

Convention on the rights of the child

On 12 March 1980, the Commission on Human Rights decided to continue in 1981, as a matter of priority, its work on a draft convention on the rights of the child, and requested the Economic and Social Council to authorize a one-week session of a working group to facilitate completion of the work. This was agreed to by the Council by decision 1980/138 of 2 May. The General Assembly, by resolution 35/131 of 11 December, noted with satisfaction the work accomplished and asked the Commission to continue to give high priority to completing the draft. (See p. 869.)

By another decision, adopted on 29 February, the Commission requested authorization for a special rapporteur to prepare a report on the exploitation of child labour, taking into account all the economic, social, cultural and psychological dimensions of the issue (see p. 869).

Voluntary contributions

The 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities was held at United Nations Headquarters, New York, on 6 and 7 November (see p. 600). In all, 84 Governments announced pledges or indicated expected pledges to UNICEF's general resources for 1981 amounting to $108 million. Further contributions totalling $9 million were announced for specific purposes and projects. These and additional contributions received or pledged for the year ended 31 December 1980 (excluding $31.8 million in supplementary funds, $39.3 million from non-governmental sources, $6.1 million from the United Nations system and $54 million for Kampuchean relief) are indicated in the table below.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 34/105 of 14 December 1979 and Council resolution 1979/53 of 2 August 1979,

Having considered the report of the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund on its session held in New York from 19 to 30 May 1980,

Noting with appreciation the extensive work undertaken during the International Year of the Child by the United Nations Children's Fund as lead agency for the Year, and by other participating organizations,

Noting also the recommendations of the Executive Board regarding its programmes concerning education services, women, children and development, childhood disability, planning and programming for children at the country level, and the promotion of the component of technical co-operation among developing countries, and in particular its efforts to promote the local production of items and the indigenous application of appropriate technologies,

Expressing its support for the Executive Board's recommendation that the follow-up activities of the International Year of the Child should be based on the premise that those activities will be integrated in the total programme of the United Nations Children's Fund and will require the continuous co-operation of other organizations concerned in the United Nations system, as an augmentation of their usual co-operation with the Fund in the implementation of the basic services strategy and other programmes,

Aware that the expanded activities of the Fund will require increased financial resources,

1. Endorses the policies, actions and conclusions of the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund as they were adopted at its session and recorded in its report;

2. Appeals to all Governments to increase their voluntary contributions to the Fund in relation to their capacity, so that it may reach the income target of $350 million for 1982, as it appears in the medium-term work plan approved at the recent session of the Executive Board.

The General Assembly,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/62 of 25 July 1980.

Having considered the report of the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund on its session held at United Nations Headquarters from 19 to 30 May 1980,

Believing that the International Year of the Child has given new impetus to recognition of the importance of the well-being and upbringing of children and of services on their behalf,

Appreciating the important responsibilities placed upon the United Nations Children's Fund as lead agency of the United Nations system responsible for co-ordinating the development aspects of the follow-up activities of the International Year of the Child, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 34/4 of 18 October 1979, as well as the responsibilities relating to children in the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

Recognizing the need for a much greater effort on the part of all concerned in the international community to sustain the impetus generated by the International Year of the Child and to achieve the goals and objectives of the International De-

Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

Having in mind the importance of the objectives of social and human development, including the well-being of children, as an integral part of the development process set forth in the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

Aware that the expanded activities of the United Nations Children's Fund will require increased funds, as established by the Executive Board,

1. Commends the policies and activities of the United Nations Children's Fund;

2. Endorses Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/62;

3. Fully appreciates the responsibilities of the United Nations Children's Fund and the broad range of activities on behalf of children to be undertaken by it in light of the still enormous unmet needs of children in the developing countries;

4. Urges the United Nations Children's Fund, with the support of its national committees, to respond imaginatively and vigorously to its important responsibilities in the follow-up activities of the International Year of the Child, in close co-operation with the relevant organizations of the United Nations system and with the International community generally;

5. Appeals to Governments and the relevant organizations of the international community to re-examine their own activities on behalf of children with a view to accelerating progress towards the achievement of the goals and objectives of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade and to co-operate fully with the United Nations Children's Fund;

6. Expresses its appreciation to all Governments that are contributing to the United Nations Children's Fund and appeals, with a sense of urgency, to all Governments, especially those that are not contributing at a level commensurate with their capacity, to increase their contributions, if possible on a multiyear basis, so that the Fund may reach its income target of $350 million for 1982, as presented in the medium-term work plan approved by the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund at its session held from 19 to 30 May 1980.

Chapter XX

Refugee questions

The world-wide population of refugees and displaced persons continued to grow during 1980 and the question of aid to refugees occupied several of the main bodies of the Organization during the year.

The number of refugees of concern to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) again rose, particularly in Africa and Western Asia, where material assistance also increased substantially—largely because of growing numbers of refugees in the Horn of Africa and in Pakistan.

To assist refugees in Africa, the General Assembly decided to convene an international conference at the ministerial level to be held at Geneva in April 1981 (resolution 35/42) and, together with the Economic and Social Council, it adopted resolutions on the needs of refugees and/or displaced persons in Djibouti, Ethiopia, Somalia and the Sudan (resolutions 35/182, 35/183, 35/180 and 35/181).

The Assembly also took action on refugee and displaced women and children (resolutions 35/135 and 35/187) and on international co-operation to avert new flows of refugees (35/124).

Details of these matters can be found in the sections below.

In another action, the Assembly moved to aid student refugees from Namibia and South Africa living in Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland and Zambia (resolution 35/184) (see p. 238).

Activities of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

International protection

During the year, the picture with regard to international protection—the primary function of UNHCR—improved somewhat. There was no large-scale refoulement, the forcible return of asylum-seekers to a territory where there was reason to fear persecution—and States were generally liberal in their admission procedures.

The number of parties to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, which established minimum rights for those who became refugees before 1 January 1951, rose from 77 to 81. The number of parties to the Convention's 1967 Protocol, which extended coverage of the Convention to new groups of refugees, increased from 72 to 79.

The High Commissioner continued to encourage further accessions to these instruments, as well as the adoption of national legislation affecting the status of refugees, and his efforts were greatly assisted by regional action. A joint working group of UNHCR and the Organization of African Unity (OAU) was established to follow up questions relating to protection of refugees in Africa, based on recommendations of the 1979 Conference on the Situation of Refugees in Africa, held at Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania.<sup>1</sup> Close relations were also maintained with the Council of Europe, the Organization of American States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the League of Arab States.

The Executive Committee of the Programme of UNHCR, in conclusions adopted at its thirty-first session, held at Geneva from 6 to 16 October 1980: stressed the fundamental principles of international protection and the need for their scrupulous observance; expressed serious concern that there were still cases where the principle of non-refoulement had been disregarded, and called on States to ensure that it be taken into account in treaties and national legislation; stressed that the essentially voluntary character of repatriation should always be respected; reiterated its condemnation of military attacks on refugee camps in southern Africa and the need for protection and aid to the victims; and, after noting with grave concern continuing attacks on refugees and asylum-seekers, particularly in the South China Sea, stressed that measures be taken by Governments to prevent their recurrence. The Committee decided to request the High Commissioner to convene an expert group to examine all aspects of temporary refuge within the framework of problems of large-scale influx.

Material assistance to refugees

In 1980, material assistance again increased substantially, totalling $497 million, of which $282 million went to finance UNHCR's general programmes of assistance and $215 million to special programmes.

AFRICA

In Africa the largest refugee problem continued in the Horn and the Sudan. A total of $67 million was spent in Djibouti, Ethiopia and Somalia ($47.6 million under the general programme) and another $15.9 million in the Sudan (general programme: $11 million). In Somalia, where lack of natural resources made large-scale aid indispensable, some 40 camps were opened to accommodate a Government-estimated 1.2 million Ethiopian refugees. A special programme of humanitarian assistance to displaced persons, begun in 1978 in Ethiopia and forming part of the special programme of aid to the Horn of Africa, had benefited some 300,000 people by the end of 1980.

There were also huge refugee problems in other countries of the continent, where over the past decade the number of refugees had grown to almost 5 million by the end of 1980. Angola had 73,000 refugees—55,000 from other southern Africa countries and 18,000 from Zaire; Uganda's total of 113,000 came from Ethiopia (1,000), Rwanda (80,000) and Zaire (32,000); in the United Republic of Cameroon there were an estimated 110,000 from Chad; the United Republic of Tanzania had 156,000 of various origins; in Zaire it was estimated there were 350,000 to 400,000, mainly of Angolan and Ugandan origin; while in Zambia there were some 36,000 from southern African States.

Emergency relief provided by UNHCR included food, clothing, blankets, medicines, shelter, and local integration assistance such as community development, education, supplementary feeding programmes, and legal and social counselling.

Aid was also provided to refugees in Botswana, Egypt, Kenya, Lesotho, Mozambique, Swaziland and Zimbabwe. In other countries of Africa there remained over 250,000 refugees of concern to UNHCR.

Expenditure for all programmes in Africa during the year totalled some $170.9 million.

THE AMERICAS

During the year, the number of refugees in Latin America increased by some 65,000, to 175,000. New programmes had to be implemented for Salvadorian refugees, estimated at 80,000, and assistance to Nicaraguans continued. Elderly refugees of European origin also continued to be aided, as were Indo-Chinese refugees, who were provided with integration and family reunification programmes. Total expenditure for the Latin American countries reached $13.1 million.

In addition to accepting refugees from other countries, Canada and the United States received further refugees and displaced persons from South-East Asia: Canada admitted 35,382 and the United States 152,481. Obligations in the two countries exceeded $487,000.

ASIA AND WESTERN ASIA

Total UNHCR expenditure for Asia and Western Asia during 1980 again increased considerably, amounting to $272.8 million, over $100 million more than in 1979.

The number of Afghan refugees in Pakistan and other countries increased more than three-fold to 1.4 million in Pakistan alone, where UNHCR expenditures exceeded $69.3 million.

Indo-Chinese refugees continued to arrive in neighbouring countries but the relatively high rate of resettlement following the July 1979 Geneva Meeting on Refugees and Displaced Persons in South-East Asia<sup>2</sup> led to a net reduction of remaining caseloads and resulted in an improvement in camp conditions. New arrivals in Hong Kong, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, the Philippines and Singapore totalled 51,744, whereas 130,390 departed for resettlement. Obligations for these countries amounted to over $66.7 million.

Vietnamese refugees in China increased to 263,000. Most UNHCR assistance measures were directed towards achieving self-sufficiency through local integration. Expenditure for aid came to over $11.8 million.

In Thailand, some $97.5 million was expended on a variety of programmes, and at the end of 1980 there remained 261,334 Indo-Chinese refugees of concern to UNHCR; departures for resettlement in third countries totalled 126,225. Substantial efforts were directed at alleviating the conditions of the 141,100 Kampuchean accommodated near the Thai-Kampuchean border.

Large numbers of Kampuchean were reported to be returning to their homeland and settling in their native provinces: 115,000 from Viet Nam, 20,000 from the Lao People's Democratic Republic, and 175,000 from Thailand and its eastern frontier. This brought the number of returnees to approximately 310,000. An aid programme was launched by UNHCR to help them attain self-sufficiency as rapidly as possible.

In the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the $5.1 million expended went mainly to assist the 10,700 refugees from Democratic Kampuchea and an estimated 9,000 returnees from holding centres in Thailand.

It was estimated that 35,000 Kampuchean were left in Viet Nam at the end of 1979 and $1,297,000 was obligated in 1980 for their resettlement. Progress was made in implementing a programme for orderly departure of Vietnamese from Viet Nam, and 4,706 departed for countries of new residence; $927,177 was obligated for this programme.

More than $257,000 was committed by UNHCR to Australia and New Zealand, which accepted, respectively, 15,404 and 1,816 South-East Asian refugees.

In Western Asia-Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, the Syrian Arab Republic and the United Arab Emirates- the refugee population was estimated at 150,000. An amount of $108,300 was obligated for assistance to refugees in Jordan, the Syrian Arab Republic and the United Arab Emirates. Local settlement aid provided refugees with basic needs. Beneficiaries included Eastern Europeans in the Syrian Arab Republic, Ethiopians in Jordan, and Ugandans and Zanzibaris in Dubai and Abu Dhabi.

In Lebanon, the refugee population increased to 3,200, mainly because of the continuing arrival of Ethiopians. A total of $219,000 was disbursed.

EUROPE

For the third successive year the number of refugees in Europe increased-reaching 580,000—with naturalizations, voluntary repatriations and resettlement being offset by new arrivals. Some 30,000 Indo-Chinese refugees arrived in Europe, and UNHCR co-operated with Government and voluntary agencies to assure appropriate programmes facilitating their adaptation and integration. Obligations for activities in Europe (excluding Cyprus) came to $8 million.

The High Commissioner again co-ordinated United Nations humanitarian assistance for Cyprus and, with the continued co-operation of the United Nations Peace-keeping Force in Cyprus and the World Health Organization, provided medical supplies and equipment and permanent shelter, and tended to the needs of the young, handicapped and elderly. Total 1980 expenditures amounted to $15,240,223. (See also p. 458.)

Assistance to refugees in Africa

International Conference on Assistance to Refugees in Africa

On 24 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1980/55, by which it took note of a resolution adopted in June by the OAU Council of Ministers expressing deep concern over the ever-increasing number of refugees in Africa and inviting consultations with organizations, Governments and United Nations bodies to assess the possibility of holding of a pledging conference for African refugees under United Nations auspices. The Economic and Social Council asked the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to consult with the OAU Secretary-General on convening such a conference. The United Nations Secretary-General was further requested to arrange consultations with United Nations bodies for a publicity programme on the needs of the African refugees and report on progress to the General Assembly later in the year. The Council appealed meanwhile to Member States and United Nations bodies to provide maximum aid to refugees in Africa as well as to Governments of countries of asylum.

Resolution 1980/55, sponsored by 20 powers (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below), was introduced by Nigeria and adopted without vote.

Complying with the Council's request, the Secretary-General reported in November that he had met with the OAU Secretary-General on 27 August and had also discussed the matter with the High Commissioner. During the consultations it was stressed that Africa not only harboured the largest refugee population of any region, but also that many of the countries of asylum were in the least developed category. It was felt that the level of international aid provided did not adequately reflect these considerations, and that there should be an international conference to mobilize additional resources for African programmes. A task force composed of representatives of these three officials was set up to organize the conference, with UNHCR providing the conference secretariat and taking the lead in preparing and implementing the programme and in conducting a system-wide information campaign to publicize the African refugee situation.

On 25 November, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/42 by which it approved the Secretary-General's report calling for a conference. It requested that he co-operate closely with the OAU Secretary-General and the High Commissioner to convene the conference at ministerial level at Geneva on 9 and 10 April 1981 and assist concerned African countries in preparing documents and programmes for assistance. The Assembly also approved the measures proposed for a concerted information programme and publicity by United Nations bodies, appealed for the utmost support for maximum assistance to the refugees and to the countries of asylum, and urged continued support for UNHCR and other co-operating United Nations programmes on behalf of African refugees.

Resolution 35/42, adopted without vote, had been recommended by the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, which had likewise approved the text on 14 November. Senegal introduced it on behalf of its sponsors, the Member States belonging to the African group at the United Nations, after they had revised their original draft.

Assistance to refugees in Djibouti

On 28 April 1980, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1980/11, by which it requested all States to respond generously and expeditiously to an appeal by the High Commissioner<sup>3</sup> to enable him to mobilize the maximum international support to alleviate the sufferings of the refugees in Djibouti and other countries in the Horn of Africa. The Council invited him to continue to intensify his humanitarian assistance to refugees in Djibouti and requested him to co-operate with United Nations bodies and non-governmental organizations to render maximum aid to that country. The Secretary-General was asked to send an interagency mission to assess the refugees' needs and the High Commissioner was asked to report to the Council's July 1980 session on steps taken.

Resolution 1980/11, sponsored by the Central African Republic, Democratic Kampuchea, Djibouti, France, Indonesia, Jordan, Kenya, Lesotho, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Morocco, Pakistan, Senegal, the Sudan, Swaziland, the United Arab Emirates, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Zambia, was adopted without vote, based on a sponsor-revised text.

On 16 July, the High Commissioner informed the Council that in 1977, at the time of the first major influx of refugees into Djibouti, UNHCR had established an office there. The interagency mission sent to Djibouti from 5 to 11 June in response to Council resolution 1980/11, he said, had noted that refugees totalled 40,000, 12 per cent of the population, half of whom had settled in the city of Djibouti while others were concentrated outside the capital in camps at Dikhil and Ali Sabieh; all were living in substandard conditions. These, together with some 20,000 Djibouti nomads who would have to be relocated in relief camps because of the loss of their livestock as a result of the drought, had created a burden the country could not carry. While UNHCR and other United Nations bodies had been helping to provide emergency aid, more durable solutions needed to be found. According to the Government, total assistance needs came to over $19 million, and an additional amount of some $8.6 million was requested for drought victims. The High Commissioner therefore envisaged an increase in the size of UNHCR's 1980 programme and was working out an adequate one for 1981.

Also on 16 July, the Council, on an oral proposal by the President, adopted without objection decision 1980/153 by which it took note of the High Commissioner's statement.

On 21 July, in a statement to the Council, the Under-Secretary-General for Special Political Questions and Co-ordinator of Special Economic Assistance Programmes said that the growing refugee problem in Djibouti, combined with a serious drought, had created a grave situation; urgent aid was required not only for the refugees, but for those in drought-stricken rural areas.

On 23 July, the Council took note of the Under-Secretary-General's statement when it adopted resolution 1980/44, expressing appreciation for the Secretary-General's action in dispatching the interagency mission. It invited the

High Commissioner to continue his humanitarian aid, and asked him to ensure that adequate assistance programmes were organized for the refugees and to monitor the situation, maintaining close contact with Member States and organizations so as to mobilize needed assistance.

Resolution 1980/44, sponsored by Bangladesh, Djibouti, Iraq, Jordan, Lesotho, Somalia and the Sudan, was adopted without vote.

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/182, by which it endorsed the mission's report and recommendations, presented to the Assembly in a report by the Secretary-General in September; invited the High Commissioner to continue humanitarian assistance to the refugees in Djibouti, and requested him to ensure that adequate assistance programmes were organized and the necessary aid mobilized. The Secretary-General was requested to report on implementation to both the Council and the Assembly in 1981.

Resolution 35/182 was adopted without objection. On 19 November the Third Committee had unanimously approved the sponsor-revised draft, introduced by Swaziland on behalf of 37 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Assistance to refugees in Somalia

In a letter of 7 April 1980 to the President of the Economic and Social Council, Somalia stated that it was hosting more than 1.3 million refugees and that, unless urgent humanitarian assistance was forthcoming, starvation and death faced hundreds of thousands of them. Somalia expressed its appreciation for the Secretary-General's appeal contained in an 11 February note verbale but added that, despite donations from a number of Governments, further aid was required. Therefore, it requested that an item entitled "Assistance to the refugees in Somalia" be included in the Council's agenda.

At its April/May session, the Economic and Social Council had before it a report by an inter-agency mission which had visited the country from 10 to 16 December 1979. The mission reported that Somalia, a least developed country, was faced with massive problems as a result of accepting refugees estimated at 1.2 million -one-quarter of Somalia's population. The mission concluded that the Government's estimate of a refugee-camp population of 475,000 was broadly correct. New entrants were arriving at a rate of over 1,000 daily and it was unlikely they would return home for some years. Since over 90 per cent of the refugees were women and children, and most of the men elderly or handicapped, projects aimed at self-sufficiency were difficult to carry out. Also, a prevailing drought necessitated massive food aid and threatened future agricultural prospects.

Assistance required for refugees in camps totalled $120.7 million; $20.5 million was needed to develop the economic and social infrastructure; and $135.8 was required for an accelerated three-year development programme.

On 28 April, the Council adopted resolution 1980/9 by which it endorsed the appeal of the Secretary-General, a 4 March appeal by the High Commissioner for Refugees (see below), and appeals of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) to provide food, medicines and other aid, as recommended by the interagency mission. The Council requested the Secretary-General to mobilize urgent humanitarian assistance for the refugees in Somalia on the basis of the mission's report, and, along with the High Commissioner, to report to the Council later in 1980.

The text of this resolution was sponsored by Democratic Kampuchea, Egypt, Indonesia, Italy, Jordan, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Senegal, Singapore, Somalia, the Sudan, Thailand, the United Arab Emirates, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Zambia, revised by them and adopted without vote.

On 16 July, the High Commissioner, orally reporting in accordance with resolution 1980/9, informed the Council that, for an estimated average of 640,000 refugees in Somalia in 1980, assistance items to a value of $40.7 million would be required in addition to 135,000 tonnes of food. In January he had appointed a co-ordinator of activities there, and on 4 March he had appealed for prompt donations. Currently, $22 million had been received.

On 16 July, the Council, on an oral proposal by its President, adopted without objection decision 1980/153 by which it took note of the High Commissioner's statement.

The same day, Somalia informed the Council that, since the visit by the interagency mission, the situation in Somalia had assumed new magnitude and gravity. It therefore suggested that a follow-up mission review the position.

On 24 July, the Council requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the High Commissioner, to consider dispatching a review mission to Somalia to assess the current refugee situation. It further requested that they submit an updated report for the General Assembly's 1980 regular session and appealed for further aid for the refugees.

These actions, incorporated in resolution 1980/53, were adopted without vote, as proposed by Burundi, Djibouti, Iraq, Italy, Jordan, Kuwait, Lesotho, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Senegal, Somalia, Sudan, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, the United Arab Emirates, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Zambia. The text was orally amended by France and the sponsors to take note of Somalia's statement and to replace a request to dispatch as a matter of urgency the review mission with the request that such a mission be considered.

A note verbale of 13 June from Somalia, addressed to the Secretary-General, transmitted two resolutions adopted by the Eleventh Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers (Islamabad, Pakistan, 17-22 May). By the first of these resolutions, on assistance to refugees in Somalia, the Conference expressed appreciation to the Government of Somalia for its efforts to accommodate a growing number of refugees on its territory until they were able to return to their homeland. By the second, on foreign intervention in the Horn of Africa and continued aggression against Somalia, the Conference denounced the continued presence of foreign troops in that country, decided to support Somalia to enable it to withstand foreign aggression, and called on all parties concerned with the Eritrean problem to seek a just solution.

In a letter of 8 September to the Secretary-General, Ethiopia said the resolutions were totally misleading since they were conceived solely by Somalia. Ethiopia accused Somalia of subversive and terrorist acts and of fabricating the claim that there were over 1 million refugees from Ethiopia in Somalia. Ethiopia added that some 500,000 Somalis had fled their country.

On 15 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/180, by which it took note of Somalia's measures to provide services to the refugees, commended the Secretary-General for steps taken to promote international action to provide relief and noted with appreciation efforts by the High Commissioner to provide humanitarian assistance, requesting them to continue to mobilize such aid. The Assembly endorsed the appeals of the Economic and Social Council, the Secretary-General, the High Commissioner and other United Nations bodies for increased aid to UNHCR-sponsored refugee programmes, and urged Member States, the United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank, and intergovernmental and financial institutions to help Somalia strengthen its infrastructure. The Secretary-General was requested to dispatch a mission to Somalia to review comprehensively the refugee situation in the light of developments since publication of the interagency mission's report and, in co-operation with the High Commissioner, to have the mission's report circulated promptly and submitted to the Council's first regular 1981 session.

Resolution 35/180 was adopted without objection. On 19 November, the Third Committee had unanimously approved the draft, introduced by Zaire and sponsored by 41 nations (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Before approval of the twice-revised text in Committee, Senegal said that Ethiopia—which had submitted separate amendments to the 41-power text—and Somalia had accepted the following amendments by the African group of States: two paragraphs were deleted, a preambular one recognizing that appeals to the international community for refugee aid in Somalia could best be promoted through an effective and concerted information programme by the United Nations system, and an operative one requesting the Secretary-General, in co-operation with UNHCR, to ensure that the community was kept informed of the conditions and needs of refugees in Somalia on a continuing basis through such a programme, including the participation of UNICEF, FAO/World Food Programme (WFP) and other concerned agencies; a paragraph commending the Somali Government for its humanitarian decision to receive refugees and provide them with food, shelter, medicine and essential humanitarian services was replaced by one taking note of the Government's measures to provide shelter, food and other services to the refugees in Somalia; and the phrase "in the areas where the refugees have been located" was deleted from two references to strengthening the social and economic infrastructure of the country.

The Ethiopian amendments would also have: added a preambular paragraph referring to the need to ensure that humanitarian aid was not diverted for other purposes, and an operative one calling on all concerned to ensure that this was carried out; added a preambular paragraph noting the immediate and ongoing need strictly to monitor and verify all statistics relating to refugees in Somalia, and an operative one requesting the Secretary-General in co-operation with UNHCR to establish machinery to ensure the availability of correct and reliable statistics submitted relating to such refugees as a basis on which humanitarian aid could be calculated and assessed; and replaced the paragraph commending the Somali Government for its decision to receive the refugees and provide them with aid by one commending the Secretary-General for his efforts in mobilizing international aid to Somalia.

Speaking in the Committee, Ethiopia said that Somalia had indicated a high refugee population to obtain more aid, and questioned whether such aid was being used for political purposes to destroy those for whom it had been sought since food was going to the Somali armed forces. Somalia maintained that the refugee situation had been verified by governmental and inter-governmental agencies and visiting missions; the refugees had been driven from Ethiopia by that country's repressive policies.

Situation of refugees in the Sudan

On 28 April, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1980/10, by which it called attention to the urgent need for increased resources to care for the growing number of refugees in the Sudan and expressed appreciation to the Government for its efforts to accommodate them on its territory. Noting the Sudan's decision to convene an international conference on the refugees at Khartoum on 20 June, the Council appealed to donor countries and international organizations and voluntary agencies to participate in the conference at high level. After expressing appreciation to the High Commissioner for his work for the refugees, with support from the international community, the Council requested him, in co-operation with United Nations bodies and non-governmental organizations, to give maximum assistance to the Sudanese Government. The Council requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with UNHCR, to send an interagency mission to the Sudan to assess the amount of assistance for relief and settlement programmes for refugees and to report to the Council in 1981.

The text of resolution 1980/10, sponsored by Democratic Kampuchea, Djibouti, Egypt, Ethiopia, Indonesia, Italy, Kenya, Lesotho, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Nigeria, Pakistan, Senegal, Somalia, the Sudan, the United Arab Emirates, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Zambia, was revised by them and adopted without vote.

On 23 July, the Council adopted resolution 1980/45, by which it noted with appreciation arrangements made by the Secretary-General to send an interagency mission to the Sudan soon and requested him to ensure that the mission's report was published without delay and submitted for the General Assembly's 1980 session. The Council again called on Member States and United Nations organizations to render maximum assistance to the Sudan in its efforts to aid the refugees, and commended it for convening the International Conference on Refugees in the Sudan (Khartoum, 20-22 June), drawing attention to the refugees' plight. The Council also decided to review the situation in 1981.

Resolution 1980/45, sponsored by Australia, Bangladesh, Burundi, Djibouti, Ethiopia, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lesotho, Morocco, Nepal, Somalia, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, the United Arab Emirates and the United Republic of Tanzania, was adopted without vote.

At its 1980 regular session, the General Assembly had before it the report of the interagency mission that visited the Sudan from 12 to 22 June. The report stated that, while UNHCR and WFP had supplemented the Government's efforts to aid the half million refugees—who came from Chad, Ethiopia, Uganda and Zaire—a substantial portion of their needs remained uncovered. The report underlined the urgent need for financial and technical support for the Government's settlement plans for 98,000 refugees in 1980 and for a further 100,000 during 1981-1982. There was also a pressing need to strengthen infrastructure and services in agriculture, education, health and training. A total of $230 million in assistance was required for programmes proposed by the Government.

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/181, by which it commended the Secretary-General for sending the interagency mission to the Sudan, endorsed its report and recommendations, and requested him to circulate the report to Member States, international organizations and voluntary agencies and to appeal to them, in close co-ordination with the High Commissioner, for generous contributions to the refugees. It requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the High Commissioner, to send urgently follow-up missions to the Sudan to carry out feasibility studies on strengthening the Government's capacity to pursue cost-effective strategies and locate new settlements as part of overall development. The Assembly appealed to Member States, UNHCR, organizations and agencies to give maximum assistance towards the Sudanese Government's efforts to aid the refugees, and commended its initiative in drawing the attention of the international community to their plight by convening the International Conference. The Secretary-General was requested to report in 1981 on the resolution's implementation.

Resolution 35/181 was adopted by the Assembly without objection. On 19 November, the Third Committee had unanimously approved the draft, as revised and introduced by Indonesia on behalf of its 47 sponsors (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Assistance to displaced persons in Ethiopia

On 16 April, the Economic and Social Council heard a statement by the Ethiopian Commissioner for Relief and Rehabilitation outlining difficulties faced by his Government in its development efforts—drought, illiteracy, food shortages and the need to resettle more than 1 million people in more fertile areas of Ethiopia. He added that, since more than half a million people remained to be resettled—a problem being made more acute by additional war-displaced persons- his Government was appealing for short-term emergency aid, noting that arrangements were being made for an interagency mission to further evaluate Ethiopia's needs.

On 28 April, the Council adopted resolution 1980/8, by which it appealed to all Member States, voluntary agencies and other organizations to assist the Ethiopian Government in providing relief and rehabilitation to displaced persons in Ethiopia, and requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with UNHCR, to send a multiagency mission to that country to assess the extent of the problem and the magnitude of aid required and to mobilize humanitarian assistance from the international community. The Secretary-General was requested to report to the Council and the Assembly later in the year.

Resolution 1980/8, sponsored by Cuba, Ethiopia, India, Kenya, Lesotho, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, the Sudan, Uganda, the United Republic of Tanzania, Viet Nam and Zambia, was adopted without vote.

At its July session, the Council had before it the report of the multiagency mission which had visited Ethiopia from 6 to 15 July. The report stated that, at Ethiopia's request, the Office of the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator had also sent a mission from 27 May to 7 June to evaluate the country's immediate and long-term needs. Since the Ethiopian Government's April estimate, according to the multiagency mission, the number of displaced persons had increased to between 2.1 million and 2.4 million-compared to a total population of 6.8 million-over half of whom were in temporary shelters or regularly came to Government feeding stations. An estimated 812,000 tonnes of food-mainly cereals-would be required over the coming three and a half years, the period which, in the mission's opinion, was necessary before self-sustaining settlements could be envisaged. Assistance required for long-term rehabilitation and development programmes was also outlined.

Introducing the mission's report to the Council on 22 July, the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator said that, in view of the background of extreme underdevelopment, any programme of assistance to displaced persons in Ethiopia would have to be in the nature of a comprehensive development programme. Priority needs were identified in agriculture, industry, power, food, water, training, health, housing, mining, transport and communications.

On 24 July, the Council adopted resolution 1980/54, by which it: took note of the mission's report; commended the Secretary-General's action in arranging circulation of a comprehensive report on displaced persons in Ethiopia; requested him, in consultation with UNHCR, to appeal to the international community and to find ways to mobilize urgent humanitarian assistance for those persons and for voluntary returnees to Ethiopia; and appealed to Member States, United Nations bodies, other organizations and voluntary agencies to assist the Ethiopian Government in its relief efforts. The Council asked the Secretary-General to report at the Assembly's 1980 regular session on the resolution's implementation.

The text of the resolution, sponsored in its revised form by Algeria, Burundi, Ethiopia, Kenya, Lesotho, Liberia, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mongolia, Nepal, the Sudan, Uganda, the United Republic of Tanzania, Viet Nam and Zambia, was adopted without vote.

The Secretary-General's report to the Assembly transmitted the interagency mission's report describing Ethiopia's economic and financial position and providing information on the assistance required for the relief and rehabilitation of the displaced persons in Ethiopia. On 15 December the Assembly adopted resolution 35/183, by which it endorsed the Council's appeal and that of the Secretary-General-contained in a note verbale of 11 November-urging Governments and organizations to provide prompt and generous aid to displaced persons. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to report on progress to the Council and the Assembly again in 1981. The High Commissioner was also requested to continue to mobilize humanitarian assistance for the relief and rehabilitation of certified voluntary returnees.

Resolution 35/183 was adopted without objection. The Third Committee had unanimously approved the 30-nation draft on 19 November, following its introduction by Zimbabwe on behalf of 30 sponsors (See DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Before approval of the sponsor-revised text in Committee, Senegal said that Somalia-which had submitted separate amendments to the 30-nation text-and Ethiopia had accepted the following amendments by the African group of States: rather than taking note of the Ethiopian Commission's statement, the Assembly expressed itself as having heard it; and the reference to voluntary returnees for which the High Commissioner was asked to continue mobilizing assistance were qualified by the addition of the word "certified."

The Somali amendments would have: added a preambular paragraph referring to the need to ensure that humanitarian aid was not diverted for other purposes, and an operative one calling on all concerned to ensure that this was carried out; added a preambular paragraph noting the immediate and ongoing need strictly to monitor and verify all statistics submitted relating to displaced persons and returnees in Ethiopia, and an operative one requesting the Secretary-General, in co-operation with UNHCR, to establish machinery to ensure the availability of correct and reliable statistics relating to displaced persons and voluntary and genuine returnees in Ethiopia, as a basis on which such humanitarian aid as might prove necessary could be calculated and assessed. Further Somali amendments would have: deleted the reference to difficulties encountered by the Ethiopian Government in providing for relief and rehabilitation of displaced persons in Ethiopia; added "genuine" to the reference to voluntary returnees; and, added to the paragraph requesting UNHCR to continue mobilizing humanitarian aid for the relief of such returnees, "subsequent to the introduction of appropriate and comprehensive UNHCR registration procedures in the affected areas and bearing in mind the duty of UNHCR to 'protect' refugees and strictly to uphold the principle of 'non-refoulement.'" Also, Somalia's amendments would have removed from a preambular paragraph a phrase stating that the representative of the Secretary-General had asked for the assistance of the international community.

Assistance to other refugees

Refugee and displaced children

On 15 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 35/187, by which it expressed gratitude to the High Commissioner for his assistance to refugee and displaced children and requested him to intensify his efforts, endeavouring to ensure that the cultural and family identity of the minors settled was preserved, and to associate all the specialized agencies in the action undertaken. This resolution was adopted without vote. The Third Committee had likewise approved the draft on 3 December, sponsored by France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Panama, Senegal, Togo, Tunisia, the United Republic of Cameroon, and Zaire.

Several oral amendments were withdrawn before approval. A Cuban proposal would have added to a preambular paragraph referring to the disturbing situation of millions of refugee and displaced children, particularly those not yet settled—a reference to those who were victims of such situations as those arising from apartheid racial discrimination (Oman suggested that racial discrimination be preceded by "all forms of"), colonialism, foreign domination and occupation, aggression and threats to national sovereignty; Morocco would have included foreign military intervention against sovereign countries and the activities of mercenaries. The United Kingdom would have replaced the Cuban addition by referring to those who were "mainly victims of situations of violations of human rights."

Refugee and displaced women

The World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, held at Copenhagen from 14 to 30 July 1980, adopted two resolutions on refugee and displaced women (see p. 896). By these resolutions the Conference called for: attending to the specific needs and safeguarding the interests of refugee and displaced women in such areas as assistance, relief, health, education, employment, family planning, resettlement and family reunification, safe and honourable repatriation, and protection; bringing to justice those who abused women and children; ensuring that women and children were not the target of indiscriminate hostilities; and women's participation in administration of refugee aid programmes.

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/135 on refugee and displaced women, by which it requested all States to co-operate with UNHCR in protecting the well-being of women and children in particular, and called on all States and donors providing immediate relief to refugees and displaced persons to endeavour to lessen the special vulnerability of women in these circumstances, by ensuring access to emergency relief and to health programmes and their active participation in decision-making in refugee centres. The Assembly also called on those assisting in resettlement or repatriation to recognize the pivotal role of the mother in the family and in the provision of family welfare, to ensure women's rights to physical safety, and to facilitate their access to counselling services and material aid. It urged the international community to provide urgent, adequate assistance to refugee women and developing countries of asylum, especially the least developed among them.

The Assembly urged the High Commissioner to work with host Governments to encourage the participation of women, including refugees, in the administration of refugee programmes. He was asked, in consultation with host countries, to determine the extent to which women were especially vulnerable in refugee situations, and to formulate and implement remedial programmes, co-ordinating research and data collection and analysis with United Nations agencies and non-governmental organizations. He was also asked to ensure that the number of women on his staff was increased and that a high-level staff position was designated as co-ordinator for women's programmes.

Resolution 35/135 was adopted without vote.

The Third Committee on 6 November had similarly approved the text, as sponsored by Australia, Austria, Colombia, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Japan, Kenya, the Niger, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines, the Sudan, the United Republic of Cameroon, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Zimbabwe. The first draft was revised by the sponsors to incorporate amendments jointly proposed by Burundi, Egypt, Nigeria, Somalia, the Sudan, Swaziland and the United Republic of Tanzania. The amendments added the two paragraphs by which the Assembly urged assistance to refugee women and countries of asylum, and requested a report on implementation.

The sponsors further orally revised their text so as to refer in the first paragraph to the protection of fundamental, rather than legal, rights under international law and national legislation. They did not accept a Syrian suggestion to refer to displaced as well as refugee women in paragraph 5 on the participation of women in the administration of refugee aid programmes.

International co-operation to avert new flows of refugees

By a letter of 24 September 1980 to the Secretary-General, the Vice-Chancellor and Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Federal Republic of Germany requested that an additional item entitled "International co-operation to avert new flows of refugees" be included in the agenda of the General Assembly's thirty-fifth (1980) session.

An annexed explanatory memorandum pointed out that the mass flight of refugees—estimated at between 10 million and 12 million people—had attained proportions unequalled in past decades and was affecting an increasing number of Member States, especially developing countries. While the international community had done much to relieve the suffering, it could not eliminate the real causes of the movement of refugees, which endangered the domestic order of the countries of asylum and jeopardized the stability of entire regions. It was therefore incumbent upon the United Nations to seek ways and means of avoiding new streams of refugees.

Following discussion in the Special Political Committee, the Assembly, on 11 December, adopted a Committee-approved resolution by the preamble of which it expressed grave concern over the increasing flows of refugees in many parts of the world, and considered that massive flows of refugees might not only affect the domestic order and stability of receiving States but also jeopardize the stability of entire regions and thus endanger international peace and security. It also stated that it was deeply disturbed by the suffering of millions who fled or were forcibly expelled from their homelands and sought refuge in other countries, and reaffirmed the right of return of the refugees.

By the operative part of the resolution the Assembly strongly condemned all policies and practices of oppressive and racist regimes as well as aggression, alien domination and foreign occupation, which were primarily responsible for the massive flows of refugees and which resulted in human suffering. The Assembly invited, for a 1981 report by the Secretary-General, comments and suggestions on international co-operation to avert new flows of refugees and to facilitate the return of those who wished to do so.

Based on a draft introduced by Sierra Leone on behalf of 27 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below), this text was adopted as resolution 35/124 by a recorded vote of 105 to 16, with 14 abstentions; the Committee had approved it on 5 December by a roll-call vote, requested by Singapore, of 93 to 15, with 9 abstentions.

In revising their original text, the sponsors incorporated amendments proposed by Jordan, on behalf of States members of the Arab group at the United Nations, and by Nigeria.

Several amendments were then proposed to the revised draft-two to insert new paragraphs as the first operative paragraph. The first of these—proposed by Algeria, Angola, Cuba, Democratic Yemen, Mozambique, Sao Tome and Principe, and Zimbabwe, revised to incorporate oral subamendments by Angola and Democratic Yemen—would have added a paragraph to have the Assembly strongly condemn the policies and practices of the racist regimes of South Africa and Israel and their allies which bore major responsibility for the flow of refugees, displaced persons, emigrants and suffering people of Namibian, South African and Palestinian origin. The second, proposed by Pakistan, would have added a paragraph to have the Assembly strongly condemn the policies and practices of racism, zionism and all forms of repression including alien domination, military occupations and foreign armed interventions which were mostly responsible for the massive flows of refugees in various regions of the world.

These two amendments were superseded by the text of a new first operative paragraph, proposed by Senegal and incorporating a Yugoslav oral subamendment, adopted by a roll-call vote, requested by Singapore, of 90 to 16, with 10 abstentions. By a roll-call vote, requested by Ethiopia, of 76 to 19, with 20 abstentions, the Committee had previously decided that Senegal's proposal constituted a subamendment to the seven-power amendment.

Somalia withdrew an amendment it had submitted, to have the Assembly establish, after its 1980 regular session in the light of Members' comments and observations, United Nations mechanisms to study the means of international co-operation to avert new flows of refugees.

Speaking in explanation of vote in Committee, Brazil said it had voted in favour of the resolution because of the issue's importance and had borne in mind that it was primarily procedural; however, it considered that a number of problems in that area were within the exclusive competence of States, and reserved its position until the issue had been thoroughly studied. Yugoslavia stressed that governmental views should be considered before the line of action to be followed was decided upon. Israel had voted affirmatively on the understanding that, when abnormal relations existed between States, such as a state of war, the alleged right of return of expatriates must be viewed in an appropriate light.

Kuwait said it had voted in favour on the understanding that the policies and practices of racist regimes referred to also covered Zionism, and that the Secretary-General's report should include comments and suggestions concerning Palestinian refugees. India felt the report should also cover peaceful population outflows.

Botswana, though voting in favour, expressed doubt whether the massive flows of refugees referred to in the preambular part of the resolution could in themselves, endanger international peace and security; it felt the danger lay in their actual causes. Botswana added that it interpreted the text in the sense of Charter articles concerning non-interference in internal affairs—a principle to which it was strongly committed. Luxembourg stated that, together with other members of the European Economic Community, it had voted in favour; the approved text would facilitate international co-operation in preventing refugee outflows.

Mozambique said its negative vote was not because of lack of interest in the fate of refugees, since it had accepted thousands, but because it could not understand why it had been decided, by rejecting its amendment, to spare the South African régime which was responsible for the refugee flow.

The United Republic of Tanzania also pointed out that it had accepted substantial numbers of refugees but had felt obliged to abstain in view of the political turn taken by the debate; it was dangerous to try to categorize refugees.

Report of the High Commissioner

On 24 July, on an oral proposal by its President, the Economic and Social Council adopted without objection decision 1980/163, by which it decided to transmit, without debate, the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to the General Assembly's 1980 session.

On 25 November, the Assembly, having considered the UNHCR report, adopted resolutions 35/41 A and 35/41 B.

By the first of these resolutions, the Assembly recognized the High Commissioner's leading responsibility in emergency refugee situations. It called on the international community to share the burden of assisting refugees and displaced persons, and urged Governments to contribute generously to the UNHCR programme, which would require an estimated $500 million in 1980 and possibly the same amount in 1981. Governments were also urged to facilitate UNHCR efforts in international protection by observing the principle of asylum and non-refoulement, and to support UNHCR efforts to promote durable solutions to the problems of refugees and displaced persons whenever emergencies occurred.

The Assembly stressed the importance of maintaining relief efforts and resettlement momentum for boat and land cases in South-East Asia, urged all Governments to provide opportunities for durable solutions for those refugees, and urged UNHCR to explore further arrangements to facilitate prompt and unhindered disembarkation of refugees rescued at sea and their resettlement. It also expressed appreciation for the High Commissioner's role in repatriating and co-ordinating aid to Zimbabwean refugees.

The Assembly welcomed steps taken to implement recommendations of the 1979 Arusha Conference," urged utmost support for the International Conference on Assistance to Refugees in Africa (see p. 933) and recommended that UNHCR substantially increase aid programmes for Africa.

By resolution 35/41 B, the Assembly authorized the High Commissioner to allocate from the UNHCR Emergency Fund up to $10 million annually for refugees and displaced persons in emergency situations for which there was no provision in approved programmes, it being understood that the amount available for any one emergency should not exceed $4 million in any one year and that the Fund was maintained at not less than $44 million. The Assembly also noted a recommendation of the UNHCR Executive Committee that the Secretary-General and the High Commissioner formulate recommendations for allocation of financial responsibility for UNHCR's administrative costs between its voluntary funds and the United Nations regular budget.

Resolutions 35/41 A and 35/41 B were adopted jointly, without vote. The Third Committee had likewise approved the texts on 14 November; they were introduced by Finland on behalf of 25 sponsors (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

The sponsors made some drafting changes to their original draft and reworded several paragraphs: originally paragraph 2 would have had the Assembly welcome efforts by the High Commissioner to adapt the management of his services to the vastly increased tasks and encouraged him to continue those efforts in close contact with the Executive Committee; by paragraph 6, it would have welcomed steps taken to implement the Arusha Conference recommendations, urged States to provide the utmost support for the projected international conference on aid to refugees in Africa, and recommended that the High Commissioner consider increasing substantially the assistance programmes allocated to Africa. Rather than welcoming his readiness as in the original draft, the Assembly in paragraph 10 took note of his efforts to contribute towards improving co-ordination and effectiveness of action to provide international humanitarian assistance "to refugees and displaced persons of concern to his Office," rather than humanitarian aid "in situations of man-made disasters."

Speaking in Committee after approval of the text, Morocco said it would have abstained had the resolution been put to a vote, since the amendments did not improve the text; it had difficulty in understanding what was meant by the request in paragraph 2 that the High Commissioner should continue his efforts within the framework of comprehensive action. The USSR said it considered that the financing of the international conference should not entail any additional expenses under the United Nations regular budget.

Communications

In a letter of 16 May 1980 to the Secretary-General, the President of the United States outlined his country's immigration policy towards Cuban citizens- tens of thousands of whom, he said, were fleeing Cuba under chaotic and perilous conditions- and others, including criminals who had not completed their sentences, who were being ejected.

On 22 July, in a letter to the President of the Economic and Social Council, the United States requested, on behalf of his country and Costa Rica, circulation of a note and communiqué issued by the Minister for Foreign Affairs a.i. of Costa Rica at the conclusion of the second meeting, held in San José on 8 May, concerning humanitarian problems relating to persons who had left or were trying to leave Cuba. Representatives of Australia, Belgium, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Chile, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Peru, Spain, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, the United States, Uruguay and Venezuela had attended. Based on the discussions, Costa Rica requested the Secretary-General, or other competent organizations, to provide their good offices in order to conclude safe and orderly departure arrangements between Cuba and other interested countries, and to take other measures to facilitate a humanitarian resolution of the problem.

In a statement issued in reply two days later, Cuba said it was following a migration policy in conformity with its legal and constitutional order, whereby anyone who so wished could leave the country; the migration had not been given impetus by Cuba's policy, but resulted from the poverty brought about by the colonialist and imperialist exploitation of the third world and the existing unjust international economic order.

On 5 November, Viet Nam forwarded a report on Indochinese refugees in which it denied that it was forcing Vietnamese to leave their homeland and announced drastic measures against those departing illegally. According to Viet Nam such departures had increased owing to strict United States immigration policies. Of 32,000 applicants authorized to leave only about 1,000 had been accepted by the United States, Viet Nam said. Vietnamese were therefore opting for illegal departure since, provided they survived several days of sea voyage, they were immediately accepted as refugees in the United States, the report added.

Other communications, submitted to the Secretary-General in 1979 and 1980 in connexion with the report of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees or the agenda item on international co-operation to avert new flows of refugees, concerned refugees in South-East Asia (see subchapter commencing on p. 335).

Resolution 1980/55, as proposed by 20 powers, E/1980/L.54, and as orally revised by sponsors, adopted without vote by Council on 24 July 1980, meeting 44.

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered resolution CM/Res.814(XXXV) adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-fifth ordinary session, held at Freetown, Sierra Leone, from 18 to 28 June 1980, by which it expressed its deep concern over the ever-increasing number of refugees in Africa and the alarming deterioration of their living conditions,

Aware that the serious situation arising from the growing number of refugees, currently estimated at five million, places a heavy social and economic burden on the host countries which provide the refugees with asylum or relief,

Conscious of the need for greater attention to be paid by the international community to the plight of refugees in Africa and, for that purpose, the need for the intensified dissemination of information on the problem,

Appreciating the assistance given so far by the international community to refugees in Africa,

Noting, however, that the amount of assistance received falls far short of the overall requirements to meet the needs of the refugees,

1. Takes note of resolution CM/Res. 814(XXXV) of the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity, in particular paragraph 8 thereof, relating to the need for an international pledging conference for refugees in Africa;

2. Requests the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to consult the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity on appropriate ways and means of convening such a conference;

3. Further requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations to arrange for consultation with the competent United Nations agencies and bodies for the purpose of preparing an adequate publicity programme giving special attention to the conditions and needs of refugees in Africa;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its thirty-fifth session on the progress of his consultations;

5. Appeals, meanwhile, to all Member States and appropriate United Nations organizations and programmes to provide the maximum financial and material assistance to refugees in Africa, as well as to the Governments of the countries of asylum, in order that the latter may strengthen their capacity to act as hosts to the refugees and to provide the necessary services for their care, rehabilitation and resettlement.

Resolution 35/42, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/650 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Assembly on 25 November 1980, meeting 73.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/61 of 29 November 1979,

Taking note of resolution CM/Res.814(XXXV) concerning the situation of refugees in Africa, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-fifth ordinary session, held at Freetown from 18 to 28 June 1980,

Having heard the statements of the Secretary-General of the United Nations, the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the serious situation of refugees in Africa,

Grave/y concerned at the growing number of refugees on the African continent, who now constitute over half the population of refugees in the world,

Aware of the consequent social and economic burden placed on African countries of asylum as a result of the increased influx of refugees and the subsequent impact on their development,

Bearing in mind the heavy sacrifices that the countries of asylum are making, despite their limited resources, to alleviate the plight of those refugees,

Appreciating the contributions made by donor countries as well as the assistance that the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Children's Fund, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the World Food Programme and other intergovernmental and non-governmental agencies have provided to refugees in Africa,

Noting with deep regret the inadequacy of the assistance provided to the growing number of African refugees,

Recognizing the universal collective responsibility to share the urgent and overwhelming burden of the problem of African refugees through effective mobilization of resources to meet the urgent and long-term needs of the refugees and to strengthen the capacity of countries of asylum to provide adequately for the refugees while they remain in their countries, as well as to assist the countries of origin in the rehabilitation of genuine voluntary returnees,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/55 of 24 July 1980 in which the Council requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to consult the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity on appropriate ways and means of convening an international pledging conference for refugees in Africa, Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on his consultations with the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees concerning the organization of an international conference on assistance to refugees in Africa.

1. Notes with profound regret that the international community has not given sufficient attention to the plight of refugees in Africa;

2. Requests, consequently, the international community to contribute substantially to programmes designed to help those refugees;

3. Approves the report of the Secretary-General calling for an international conference to mobilize assistance for refugees in Africa, as well as the measures proposed for a concerted programme of information and publicity by the relevant bodies of the United Nations system in support of the conference;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in close co-operation with the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to convene at Geneva on 9 and 10 April 1981, at the ministerial level, an International Conference on Assistance to Refugees in Africa;

5. further requests the Secretary-General in the process of preparing for the Conference, and in close co-operation with the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to assist the concerned African countries in identifying priorities and preparing necessary documents and programmes for assistance to African refugees;

6. Authorizes the Secretary-General to meet the expenses for organization of the Conference under the regular budget of the United Nations;

7. Appeals to the international community, all Member States, the specialized agencies, regional and intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations to provide the utmost support for the Conference with a view to offering maximum financial and material assistance to refugees in Africa;

8. Further appeals to the international community to provide all necessary assistance to the countries of asylum to enable them to strengthen their capacity to provide the necessary facilities and services essential to the care and well-being of the refugees and to assist the countries of origin in the rehabilitation of genuine voluntary returnees;

9. Urges the international community to continue to support the annual programmes of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and of other United Nations agencies co-operating with the High Commissioner on behalf of refugees in Africa;

10. Requests the High Commissioner, in close co-operation with the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity, to keep under constant review the situation of refugees in Africa in order to ensure maximum international assistance on a global basis;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Economic and Social Council at its first regular session of 1981 and to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Resolution 1980/11, as proposed by 18 powers, E/1980/L.25/Rev.1. adopted without vote by Council on 28 April 1980, meeting 14.

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of the appeal of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees with respect to humanitarian assistance to Djibouti and other countries in the Horn of Africa,

Taking note also of the request made by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to the High Commissioner, in the report on its thirtieth session, to continue to intensify assistance to the refugees in Djibouti and other countries in the region,

Noting with appreciation the assistance thus far provided to the refugees and the proposed programme for Djibouti,

Noting a/so that the substantially increased number of refugees in Djibouti has over-taxed the Government's effort to improve social and public services in the country and placed a heavy burden on the meagre resources available there,

Deeply concerned at the gravity of the food shortage in the region, which has been aggravated by the recent severe drought that has affected most of the region, devastating the life-supporting elements, killing great numbers of livestock and causing considerable loss of human life through starvation, thirst and disease,

Aware of the determined efforts made by the Government of Djibouti, since it attained independence, to cope with the refugee situation, as well as the recent severe drought, through a national self-reliance campaign designed to provide the refugees with protection, shelter and assistance,

Noting with appreciation the concern and continued efforts of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the World Health Organization, the Economic Commission for Africa and such non-governmental organizations as Médecins sans frontières and Volontaires du progrès, which have worked closely with the Government of Djibouti in the relief and rehabilitation programme for the refugees and the drought-stricken population of the country,

Realizing that the assistance thus far received falls far short of the existing needs and requirements of coping with the refugee situation and that an urgent programme to include the drought-stricken population of the country is required,

Recognizing the plight of the refugees and the formidable burden imposed on the limited resources of the Government of Djibouti,

1. Requests all States to respond generously and expeditiously to the appeal of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to enable him to mobilize the maximum international support in order to alleviate the sufferings of the refugees in Djibouti and other countries in the Horn of Africa;

2. further requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to co-operate with the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme, the World Food Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the World Health Organization and other specialized agencies, as well as non-governmental organizations, to render the maximum possible assistance to the Government of Djibouti;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to send a United Nations interagency mission to Djibouti to assess the needs of the refugees;

Recalling Council resolution 1980/11 of 28 April 1980 on assistance to the refugees in Djibouti, Resolution 35/180, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/714, adopted without objection by Assembly on 15 December 1980, meeting 96.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/61 of 29 November 1979 on the situation of African refugees, by which it requested the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to make every effort to mobilize additional resources to meet the needs of refugees in Africa,

Having heard the statement of the High Commissioner on the situation of refugees in Somalia,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/9 of 28 April 1980, by which the Council, inter alia:

(a) Took note of the report of the interagency mission which visited Somalia from 10 to 16 December 1979 to study the refugee situation in that country and to draw up a programme of assistance to deal with the urgent humanitarian needs there,

(b) Endorsed the appeal of the Secretary-General of 11 February 1980, as well as the appeals launched by the High Commissioner, the Director-General of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the Executive Director of the United Nations Children's Fund, for urgent international assistance to help the Government of Somalia to provide the necessary care and attention to the refugees,

(c) Recognized the heavy burden placed on the Government of Somalia in caring for the refugees and the need for international assistance to share that burden,

Recalling further Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/53 of 24 July 1980, by which the Council, inter alia:

(a) Noted with concern the dramatic increase in the refugee population in Somalia,

(b) Requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the High Commissioner, to consider the necessity of dispatching a review mission to Somalia to assess current developments in the refugee situation, as a follow-up to the earlier report of the interagency mission,

Recognizing the heavy burden placed on the Government of Somalia in caring for the refugees and the need for international assistance to share that burden,

Mindful that Somalia is classified as a least developed country and that its meagre resources and inadequate infrastructure are not capable of coping with the refugee situation alone, without jeopardy to its social and economic development and without endangering the general well-being of the population,

Expressing deep appreciation for the assistance which has been rendered by several Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to Somalia in support of the refugee programmes,

Deeply concerned, however, that the response of the international community to date has not been commensurate with the needs of the refugees, as described in the report of the interagency mission,

1. Commends the Secretary-General for taking steps to promote continued and concerted international action to assist the Government of Somalia to provide relief aid for the refugees;

2. Takes note with appreciation of the efforts undertaken by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to provide humanitarian assistance to the refugees in Somalia;

3. Takes note of the measures which the Government of Somalia is taking in order to provide shelter, food and other services to the refugees in Somalia;

4. Endorses the appeal of the Secretary-General of 11 February 1980 and the appeals launched by the High Commissioner, the United Nations Children's Fund and the World Food Programme for urgent international assistance to help the Government of Somalia to provide the necessary care and attention to the refugees;

5. Endorses a/so the appeal of the Economic and Social Council to all Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and all voluntary agencies to increase further their assistance to the Government of Somalia and to the various refugee programmes sponsored by the Office of the High Commissioner so as to ensure the adequate and continuous provision of emergency relief and humanitarian assistance to refugees in Somalia;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the High Commissioner, to dispatch a mission to Somalia to make a comprehensive review of the refugee situation in that country in the light of developments since the publication of the report of the interagency mission which visited Somalia in December 1979;

7. Further requests the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the High Commissioner, to arrange for the report of the review mission to be circulated as soon as it is published, so that the international community may have an updated report on the condition of the refugees in Somalia and an assessment of their over-all needs, including measures for strengthening the social and economic infrastructure of the country;

8. Requests the Secretary-General and the High Commissioner to continue their efforts to mobilize humanitarian assistance for the relief and rehabilitation of the refugees in Somalia;

9. Urges Member States, the United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank and intergovernmental and financial institutions to assist Somalia in strengthening its social and economic infrastructure so that essential services and facilities can be strengthened and expanded;

Having heard the statement of the High Commissioner concerning the report of the Secretary-General on the visit of the interagency mission to the Sudan from 12 to 22 June 1980,

Noting with appreciation that the Government of the Sudan, with the help of the High Commissioner and the international community, held an important and well-attended Conference at Khartoum from 20 to 22 June 1980, entitled "International Conference on Refugees in the Sudan,"

Deeply concerned that the assistance rendered to the Sudan falls far short of today's needs required to set in motion the process of rehabilitation, settlement and community development, together with the strengthening of national services to cope with the significant addition to the population caused by the continuing massive influx of refugees,

Resolution 35/135, as recommended by Third Committee,

A/35/639, adopted without vote by Assembly on 11 December 1980, meeting 92.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the resolutions adopted by the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women and the recommendations contained in the Programme of Action for the Second Half of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace relating to refugee and displaced women, which are of concern to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Recognizing that the problems of refugees and displaced persons affect every continent and place special burdens on developing countries,

Aware that the increasingly serious situations of refugees and displaced persons place heavy social and economic burdens on those countries which provide asylum, relief or rehabilitation,

Noting with great concern that women and children constitute the majority of refugees and displaced persons in most areas,

Recognizing that the needs of refugee and displaced women as mothers and as women who have sole responsibility for the support of their families require constructive recognition by all parties to their relief and rehabilitation,

Recognizing also the particular vulnerability of refugee and displaced women to intimidation, exploitation and physical and sexual abuse,

Aware that the special problems of refugee and displaced women have to date not been fully studied,

Strongly emphasizing the need for increased support from the international community for the large number of refugees and displaced persons,

1. Requests all States to co-operate with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in order to assure full protection of the well-being of women and children in particular, in accordance with their fundamental rights under international law and national legislation;

2. Calls upon all States and donors providing immediate relief to refugees and displaced persons to endeavour to lessen the special vulnerability of women in these circumstances, by ensuring their access to emergency relief and to health programmes, and their active participation in decision-making in centres or camps for refugees or displaced persons;

3. Urges the international community to provide urgent and adequate assistance to all refugee and displaced women and to developing countries providing asylum or rehabilitation, especially the least developed and most seriously affected countries;

4. Further calls upon all States and donors assisting in the rehabilitation, resettlement or repatriation of refugees and displaced persons to recognize the pivotal role of the mother in the family, and thus in the provision of family welfare, to ensure women's rights to physical safety and to facilitate their access to counselling services and material assistance;

5. Urges the High Commissioner to work with the host country Governments to encourage the participation of women, including refugee women, in the administration of refugee assistance programmes, notably the provision of essential food, shelter and medical services in countries of asylum, and to promote their participation in training and orientation programmes in countries of asylum and resettlement;

6. Urges the High Commissioner to draw upon the expertise of all United Nations bodies concerned and, in consultation with the countries concerned, to carry out detailed studies and research to determine the extent to which refugee and displaced women are especially vulnerable and to formulate and implement programmes and projects based upon the results of these studies;

7. Recommends that the Office of the High Commissioner should co-ordinate with the interested United Nations agencies and non-governmental organizations concerned the collection and analysis of data and the conduct of research and case studies on the critical needs of refugee and displaced women;

8. Further recommends that the High Commissioner should ensure that the number of women at all levels on his staff, particularly in the field, is increased and that a high-level staff position is designated as a co-ordinator for women's programmes.

The General Assembly,

Gravely concerned over the increasing flows of refugees in many parts of the world,

Deeply disturbed by the human suffering affecting millions of men, women and children who flee or are forcibly expelled from their homelands and seek refuge in other countries,

Reaffirming the right of refugees to return to their homes in their homelands,

Commending the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for his untiring humanitarian and social efforts,

Commending also all Governments, United Nations organs, specialized agencies and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations which have provided aid for their contributions, and stressing the importance of their efforts in this field,

Noting that, in addition to creating individual human misery, flows of refugees can impose great political, economic and social burdens upon the international community as a whole, with particularly dire effects on developing countries with limited resources of their own,

Considering that massive flows of refugees may not only affect the domestic order and stability of receiving States but also jeopardize the stability of entire regions and thus endanger international peace and security,

Conscious of its duty to examine in depth all aspects of the refugee problem and to study the means and resources provided by the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations in order to maintain international peace and security.

Reaffirming the inviolability of existing international norms and principles governing responsibilities of States, especially regarding the protection of refugees, and reaffirming the framework of competences of international organizations and institutions,

Reaffirming its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970, by which it approved the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, Convinced, therefore, that the United Nations is called upon to consider, in addition to humanitarian and social relief, suitable means to avert new flows of refugees,

1. Strongly condemns all policies and practices of oppressive and racist regimes as well as aggression, alien domination and foreign occupation, which are primarily responsible for the massive flows of refugees throughout the world and which result in inhuman suffering;

2. Invites all Member States to convey to the Secretary-General their comments and suggestions on international co-operation to avert new flows of refugees and to facilitate the return of those refugees who wish to return;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session, for its further examination and thorough study, the views, comments and suggestions expressed by Member States, together with those expressed on the item at its thirty-fifth session, including all additional contributions pertaining to the matter which he may receive from other United Nations organs;

Chapter XXI

International drug control

In 1980, drug abuse and its associated problems continued to increase throughout the world. Substantial quantities of natural drugs continued to be produced illicitly. Also, large amounts of synthetic drugs continued to be diverted from licit sources onto the black market or manufactured in clandestine laboratories.

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs held its sixth special session at Vienna from 11 to 20 February to consider further its drug abuse control strategy and policies. It continued work on and drafted during the year a preliminary document on a comprehensive, co-ordinated global strategy to interdict narcotics trafficking, eradicate illicit production and demand, educate citizens on the danger of drug abuse and rehabilitate addicts.

The Commission recommended six resolutions for adoption by the Economic and Social Council, which the Council adopted on 30 April. By these texts, the Council: invited governmental action on the 1979 work of the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) and asked the Board to recommend a programme of action to achieve a lasting balance between the demand for and the supply of opiates for legitimate purposes (resolutions 1980/17 and 1980/20); invited greater participation by the United Nations system in drug abuse control, particularly in Africa (1980/18 and 1980/19); and endorsed international co-operation in enacting legislation and enforcement action to attack the financial assets and transactions of illegal traffickers (1980/21).

The Commission and INCB also sought greater adherence to international drug control treaties; the Council asked the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control (UNFDAC) to assist the newly created Conference of the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances in identifying resources and programmes for implementation (resolution 1980/22).

The General Assembly, in adopting resolution 35/195 on 15 December, also appealed for universal application of the international treaties, and sought greater financial support for UNFDAC, a balance between opiate supply and demand, discouragement of economic interests aimed at increasing drug abusers and legalizing abuse, and more assistance for drug control programmes in producing countries.

Details of these activities are given in this chapter.

Implementation of drug treaties

Ratifications and accessions

During 1980, Ireland and Papua New Guinea acceded to the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1961, bringing the total number of parties to the Convention to 112.

Bangladesh, Ireland and Papua New Guinea acceded to the 1972 Protocol amending the 1961 Convention. The number of parties to the Convention as amended thus stood at 71.

Ethiopia, Grenada, Malawi, Morocco and Papua New Guinea acceded to, and the United States ratified, the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances, bringing the total number of parties to that Convention to 68.

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 35/195 by which it repeated its appeal to all States not parties to the 1961 and 1971 Conventions and the 1972 Protocol to take the necessary steps to accede to them (for details, see section below on INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION IN DRUG ABUSE CONTROL).

The Economic and Social Council, by resolution 1980/18 of 30 April, invited African countries to accede to the international drug conventions, in particular the 1971 Convention (see subsection below on ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN DRUGS), and by resolution 1980/17 of the same date (see subsection below on the INTERNATIONAL NARCOTICS CONTROL BOARD), it appealed to Governments, particularly those of countries which manufactured and exported psychotropic substances, to collaborate fully in control efforts by becoming parties to the 1971 Convention and by providing, whether parties or not, the information required by the Convention.

Reports of Governments

During 1980, annual reports for 1979 were submitted by Governments to the Secretary-General with respect to the working of the international treaties on narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances in 116 countries and territories. At the same time, 34 Governments communicated 76 legislative texts concerning the implementation of these treaties at the national level.

At its special session in February, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs requested the Secretary-General to contact parties to the Conventions which had not fulfilled in a regular manner their treaty obligations and to request an explanation; he was to report on the outcome.

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

During its sixth special session, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs reviewed the world situation and trends with regard to the abuse of drugs, measures to reduce illicit demand, the continuing increase in the illicit traffic in drugs of abuse and the action undertaken at both the national and international level to contain and reduce that traffic. When it considered the report of INCB for 1979, the Commission turned its attention to the world requirements of opiates for medical and scientific purposes and the situation with respect to supply. Emphasis was placed on the achievement of a long-term balance between supply of and demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances for legitimate purposes.

The Commission reviewed the current control status of certain substances under the international treaties. In the course of that review, it decided that sufentanil and tilidine should be included in Schedule I of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1961, as amended, (thus subject to all measures of control applicable under the Convention), and dextropropoxyphene in Schedule II (thus requiring medical prescriptions and stricter controls over import and export). It also decided that TCP (1-[1-(2-thienyl)cyclohexyl] piperidine), PHP (or PCPY) (1-(1-phenylcyclohexyl) pyrrolidine) and PCE (N-ethyl-1-phenylcyclohexylamine) should be included in Schedule I and mecloqualone in Schedule II of the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances.

The Commission again strongly urged all States to adhere to the 1971 Convention, recommended that States parties make full use of the measures of protection provided therein against the import of unwanted psychotropic substances, and invited Governments to import such substances from States parties to the Convention or from States which applied its provisions relating to international trade.

Recognizing the need for guidelines for granting exemptions of preparations from certain control measures under the 1971 Convention, the Commission recommended that Governments take into account the World Health Organization (WHO) proposals in this regard and that they consider exempting in vitro diagnostic reagents, buffers and analytic standards containing substances in Schedules II to IV of the Convention, and asked the Secretary-General and WHO to continue collecting information in order to elaborate guidelines on exemptions.

Noting that in 1979 the statute had been adopted establishing the Conference of the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances as a permanent institution, the Economic and Social Council welcomed the establishment of the Conference and its Permanent Secretariat at Buenos Aires, Argentina, stressed the need for the 1973 Agreement which had entered into force in 1977 to be ratified by the regional States which had not done so, and urged UNFEDAC to assist the Permanent Secretariat in studying the current situation in the region, identifying resources available and programmes to be implemented in pursuance of the Agreement. It recalled that Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador, Paraguay, Uruguay and Venezuela were parties to the Agreement.

Resolution 1980/22, containing these provisions, was adopted without vote on 30 April, having been similarly approved by the Second (Social) Committee on 10 April. The text had been recommended by the Commission.

By decision 1980/117 of the same date, also adopted without vote, the Council asked the United Nations Secretariat to ensure that the Conference's Permanent Secretariat would be granted observer status at future sessions of the Commission. This decision was also based on a Commission recommendation, approved without vote on 10 April by the Second Committee.

International Narcotics Control Board

In 1980, INCB held two sessions at Vienna: its twenty-seventh, from 27 May to 6 June, and its twenty-eighth, from 15 October to 7 November. During the year, it continued to survey the world situation and maintained a dialogue with Governments to further the aims of international drug control treaties. In particular, it conducted a training seminar in Mauritius in December for drug control administrators from 20 African countries.

In its annual report to the Economic and Social Council for 1979, INCB noted that the treaty controls applicable to the licit movement of narcotic drugs were generally satisfactory and that progress was being made towards improving the control of psychotropic substances. On the other hand, the different aspects of the drug abuse problem-illicit production, traffic and demand-had reached pandemic proportions. Heroin retained its primacy as a source of death in drug abuse, although exceeded in extent of abuse by other drugs, such as cannabis, illicit traffic in which was immense and escalating; also substantial and escalating was illicit traffic in cocaine. The Board urged Governments and international organizations to establish the necessary priorities and to allocate adequate resources to permit an expanded and revitalized counter-attack against drug abuse to be undertaken nationally, bilaterally, regionally and internationally.

In analysing the situation with regard to the over-production of raw materials for the licit manufacture of opiates, INCB pointed out that such over-supply presented a risk of leakage to illicit channels in addition to adverse economic and commercial consequences. The main countries which produced, manufactured and consumed opiates had co-operated with INCB to try to rectify the situation and INCB would continue its collaboration with the Governments concerned.

On 30 April 1980, the Council adopted resolution 1980/17, commending INCB for its work in 1979 and appealing to the international community to launch an intensified attack against drug abuse in all its aspects. Further, it urged INCB to intensify its diplomatic dialogues with Governments and called for a strengthening of national controls over psychotropic substances. Finally, it recommended that a favourable response by the international community be given to requests from developing countries for assistance in drug control.

Resolution 1980/17 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Second Committee, which similarly approved on 10 April a text recommended by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs.

Also on 30 April, in adopting resolution 1980/20 on the question of maintaining a world-wide balance between the supply of and legitimate demand for narcotic drugs for medical and scientific purposes, the Council urged importing countries to support and aid traditional supplier countries in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of narcotic raw materials for export. It urged major producing and manufacturing countries to restrict their production levels substantially and asked INCB to study and recommend a concrete programme of action to achieve a lasting balance between supply and demand for legitimate purposes.

Resolution 1980/20 was adopted without vote, the same manner in which it had been approved by the Second Committee on 10 April. The text had been recommended by the Commission.

Operational activities

Drug abuse and measures to reduce illicit demand

At its February 1980 session, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs noted the continued spread of heroin abuse, particularly in Western Europe, South-East Asia, the Middle East and Oceania. The number of heroin-related deaths had significantly increased. Traditional opium consumption prevailed in a number of countries, especially in Asia and the Far East and the Middle East. Abuse of barbiturates, non-barbiturate sedative-hypnotics and amphetamines continued to rise in most parts of the world. Cocaine was increasingly abused in the Americas and Western Europe. Coca-paste smoking, a new and dangerous pattern, had extended from Peru and Bolivia, where it had originated, to several other countries of the Americas. The abuse of LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide) had either levelled off or declined in many countries, while in North America PCP (phencyclidine) abuse continued to spread. Cannabis remained the most widely abused illicit drug world-wide; stronger forms such as cannabis resin and liquid cannabis were increasingly gaining ground on the illicit market. There was a continued tendency towards multiple-drug abuse which frequently included alcohol. Involvement with drugs was most commonly encountered among young people in urban areas.

On the recommendation of the Commission, in furtherance of efforts to reduce demand, the Economic and Social Council, by resolution 1980/19 of 30 April, requested United Nations bodies and specialized agencies to make drug abuse control an item on the regular agenda of their governing bodies. It also invited concerned organizations- the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, WHO and the United Nations Development Programme- to explore means for further developing drug abuse prevention and control, rehabilitation and social reintegration activities, as part of their regular programmes, and to separate in their reports their extrabudgetary drug programmes from their regular budget activities, to give a clearer view of the types and amounts of resources devoted to drug abuse control and prevention. The Council commended WHO for integrating elements of drug abuse prevention and intervention in its primary health care programmes and its strategy for health for all by the year 2000, for its expanded efforts in reviewing compounds for consideration and scheduling by the Commission and for developing guidelines for implementing international treaties. It asked WHO to expand its role in drug abuse prevention and intervention within the context of country health programmes in which it was participating.

Resolution 1980/19, dealing with greater participation by the United Nations system in drug abuse control, was adopted without vote, having been approved in like manner by the Second Committee on 10 April.

The Commission also recommended that Governments monitor closely the prescribing of psychotropic substances and narcotic drugs in general and adopt appropriate measures to prevent indiscriminate prescribing of methadone for the treatment of opiate addiction.

Illicit traffic in drugs

Reviewing the illicit drug traffic situation in 1978 and 1979, the Commission, at its February 1980 session, noted a consistently deteriorating situation. Ways had to be found to reduce demand. Meanwhile, better equipped and trained, national drug-law enforcement agencies were strengthening bilateral, regional and international co-operation, which accounted in part for more and larger seizures of many drugs. However, new sources of illicit supply were emerging; drug trafficking groups were more widespread; other professional criminal gangs were increasingly attracted to trafficking in illegal drugs; greater numbers of clandestine laboratories were discovered, producing heroin, cocaine and psychotropic substances; heroin from parts of the Middle East posed a growing threat to parts of Western Europe; cocaine availability was increasing in many regions; and cannabis remained abundantly available, with new supplies entering the illicit traffic from Africa south of the Sahara.

The Commission concentrated on developing countermeasures to these trends. At its initiative, expert meetings were held during 1980 to strengthen international co-operation in a number of areas that had proved effective in countering aspects of the illicit drug traffic. Results of these meetings included: preparation of guidelines to improve co-operative drug-law enforcement training and exchange of experience, and to promote co-operative investigation of financial activities involving illicit drug trafficking; publication of a comprehensive catalogue of technological aids for improved drug-law enforcement; and publication of methods to achieve a more co-ordinated approach to counter criminals involved not only in drug trafficking but also in other organized crime.

A meeting of experts was requested to examine means of preventing the availability of acetic anhydride and acetyl-chloride for use in the illicit manufacture of heroin, and the Commission asked Governments to make available to the experts information on the manufacture, marketing, distribution and use of those substances.

The five-member Sub-Commission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East (Vienna, 8 and 9 February) and the 25-member Meeting of Operational Heads of National Narcotics Law Enforcement Agencies, Far East Region (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 1-5 December) continued developing practical countermeasures to the illicit drug traffic and related phenomena.

According to a February decision of the Commission, invitations to attend the Meetings of Operational Heads to observers from countries outside the region which were affected by the illicit drug traffic from the Far East and which had an operational involvement in combating it were in future to be sent to countries which requested observer status, at the discretion of the United Nations Secretariat's Division of Narcotic Drugs on the understanding that expenses thus incurred were to continue to be borne by the countries invited.

Since clear links had been established between drug trafficking and organized crime, the Commission decided on 19 February that the relationship should be examined during the year at a meeting of interested government authorities and the Division of Narcotic Drugs, in consultation with competent bodies and with UNFDAC assistance, to determine a more co-ordinated approach to counter the activity of those engaging in related crimes nationally and internationally.

By another decision of 19 February, the Commission asked all Governments to implement a number of countermeasures against illicit drug traffic, with Secretariat help within available resources: carrying out 1979 Commission decisions on making greater use of technological aids for improved enforcement action against drug traffickers, on giving closer attention to financial assets and transactions related to such traffic, and on taking measures to control the chemical precursors of drugs of abuse;<sup>1</sup> co-operating more closely in the exchange of information; increased training for enforcement officers in couriers' methods of operation and drug identification; more rapid and effective communication; and more equipment and technical assistance.

Acting on the Commission's recommendation and considering that African countries lacked the human and financial resources effectively to control drug abuse and illicit traffic, the Economic and Social Council, by resolution 1980/18, requested the United Nations, the specialized agencies and other organizations to increase assistance in this respect to African countries, particularly in research, training, prevention and treatment of addiction. It also invited African countries to accede to the drug conventions and strongly recommended that they strengthen their regional co-operation through existing institutions by establishing a special commission.

Resolution 1980/18 was adopted without vote on 30 April, after approval by the Second Committee in like manner on 10 April. The USSR said it had not objected to the resolution's adoption on the understanding that it would not entail any extra expenditures from the regular budget.

By resolution 1980/21, approved and adopted in the same manner on the same dates, the Council endorsed a 1979 Commission resolution<sup>2</sup> requesting the Division of Narcotic Drugs, in consultation with the International Criminal Police Organization, the Customs Co-operation Council and other organizations and States, to synthesize pertinent legislation, administrative measures and law enforcement action by Governments to attack the financial resources and assets acquired by persons who might be members or financial backers of drug trafficking organizations, with a view to identifying and prosecuting illegal drug traffickers. It invited the Secretary-General to convene a meeting, financed by UNFDAC, of international financial, legal and police experts to prepare guidelines for the negotiation of treaties that would facilitate and promote the co-operative investigation of financial activities involving illicit drug trafficking and the prosecution of major traffickers.

Scientific research

During 1980, the United Nations Narcotics Laboratory made substantial progress in the preparation of a multilingual dictionary of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, which would facilitate the practical implementation of the 1961 and 1971 Conventions.

The Laboratory continued to assist in strengthening national narcotics laboratories in developing countries in areas directly affected by illicit traffic. These were situated in Burma, Iraq, the Philippines, Portugal, the Sudan, Tunisia and Turkey. The Laboratory also continued to provide training for scientists from developing countries in methods for identifying and analysing drugs of abuse. Fellowship holders from Bahrain, the Philippines and Turkey received this training during 1980.

In addition, the technical and scientific literature collection was further expanded and the Laboratory provided national narcotics laboratories with scientific reference books and other literature on drugs of abuse.

As in the past, the Laboratory maintained close contact with collaborating scientists and distributed for research reference samples of drugs of abuse to collaborating scientists and institutions.

United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control

During 1980, voluntary contributions to UNFDAC totalled $5.9 million, bringing the total since UNFDAC was established in 1971 to some $50 million, contributed by Governments, private organizations and individuals. Estimated expenditure in 1980 was $5.7 million, supporting some 50 projects in the field of drug abuse control.

During its consideration of the report of UNFDAC, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs noted the increasing share of its resources devoted to country programmes, reaching 68 per cent devoted to 12 such programmes in 1980. These programmes, generally development oriented, aimed at direct action on illicit supply of, traffic in and demand for narcotic drugs, and were concentrated in a small number of countries where the greatest possible impact could be anticipated.

Considerable progress was reported in obtaining financial support from development aid funds in donor countries. Such contributions were earmarked for specific development-oriented projects included in the UNFDAC country programmes. Particular attention was drawn to the link that existed between illicit cultivation of the opium poppy and levels of socio-economic development. Integrated rural-development pilot projects financed by UNFDAC in Burma, Pakistan and Thailand had defined this link and established that such development could be an effective tool against illicit opium-poppy cultivation.

Other UNFDAC-financed projects included successful work in Turkey to control licit cultivation of the opium poppy and avoid leakage into illicit channels, thus ensuring that Turkey was no longer a source of illicit opium.

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs in February decided that UNFDAC should be assisted to associate itself with the annual United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities. In a note of 13 November, the Secretariat indicated its intention to include UNFDAC among the programmes and funds to which pledges would be made at the Conference (see p. 601).

By resolution 35/195 of 15 December (see following section), the General Assembly underlined its appeal to all Governments to increase their financial support for UNFDAC, so that it could continue its efforts to reduce the illicit supply, traffic and demand for narcotic drugs, and called particularly on States which needed assistance in crop-substitution or law enforcement programmes to present projects to the Fund and other funding bodies for bilateral aid.

International co-operation in drug abuse control

At its February 1980 session, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, recognizing the deteriorating situation in many parts of, the world concerning the availability, abuse and misuse of both narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, adopted a resolution requesting the Director of the Division of Narcotic Drugs to continue the preparation of a document on international drug control. The document was to comprise a long-term strategy as well as a five-year programme of action with cost estimates, defining activities that the Secretary-General would pursue within the United Nations regular budget. It also requested the Director to take into account the views expressed by Governments and to consult closely with UNFDAC, the specialized agencies and other international organizations in the preparation of the document.

On 30 April, at the Commission's request, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1980/118, decided to bring the Commission's resolution, together with the comments of the Council members, to the attention of the General Assembly. The decision, annexing the resolution, was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Second Committee which had similarly approved the text on 10 April. The USSR recalled that it had not opposed the Commission resolution on the understanding that the implementation of measures contained in it would not imply any increase in expenditures under the United Nations regular budget.

On 12 November, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a report on an ad hoc meeting on co-ordination in matters of international drug control, held at Vienna on 25 and 26 September to examine the best way to control and enhance co-ordination in the United Nations in designing and implementing programmes to reduce the illicit supply of and demand for drugs. It also studied steps taken to make drug abuse control activities a regular item on the agenda of governing bodies. Participants considered a preliminary document, drafted in response to the Assembly's 1979 request for a drug abuse control programme,<sup>3</sup> presenting a possible long-term strategy and a five-year United Nations programme of action for 1982-1986, with cost estimates. They agreed that, in future, agencies reporting on their activities in this field might usefully do so through the Secretary-General's annual report on international co-operation in drug abuse control.

The Assembly on 15 December 1980 adopted resolution 35/195 on international co-operation in drug abuse control. Concerned with the growing threat caused by the abuse of and illicit traffic in drugs and their adverse effects on socioeconomic development and national security, it appealed for universal application of the international drug control treaties and for the implementation of the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions aimed at achieving a lasting balance between demand and supply of opiates and avoiding diversion of licit production to illicit channels. The Assembly called on concerned States to discourage the powerful economic interests which were propagating a false image of drug use aimed at increasing the number of abusers and legalizing the abuse. It also called for increased co-operation among all States to prevent uncontrolled or illicit cultivation, production, export, import, transit and consumption of drugs and for greater assistance for drug control programmes in producing countries, including crop-substitution and law enforcement programmes. The Assembly called on the Commission to complete the international programme for drug abuse control so that a co-ordinated global strategy could be translated into action at the earliest possible date.

Resolution 35/195 was adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, which on 4 December similarly approved a text sponsored by 27 nations (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

In the Committee, Morocco withdrew oral amendments it had put forward to add two new paragraphs: one would have requested all States, in particular consumer States, to use every means to combat and condemn the powerful economic interests which encouraged increased use of drugs and sought their improper legalization; the other would have underlined the need of producing countries to receive greater aid from interested countries to facilitate implementation of crop-substitution policies.

The sponsors orally revised their original draft. In addition to some drafting changes, a preambular paragraph was deleted which had expressed awareness of the need to oppose and condemn the powerful economic interests which were propagating a false and deceitful image of drug use with the aim of increasing the number of drug abusers and legalizing the abuse, and a new operative paragraph was added inviting States concerned to take appropriate measures to discourage those interests. Also added was the paragraph underscoring the need of producing countries to receive greater assistance from interested Governments and international organizations to facilitate drug abuse control.

Other decisions

At its February 1980 session, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs decided that the Division of Narcotic Drugs, with UNFPA aid, should publish a compilation of resolutions, decisions and recommendations of the United Nations drug control organs in French and Spanish as soon as possible.

On 30 April, by decision 1980/119 adopted without vote, the Economic and Social Council approved the provisional agenda and list of documents for the twenty-ninth (1981) session of the Commission. Again it acted on the recommendation of the Second Committee, which approved the text on 10 April, without vote, as proposed by the Commission.

On an oral proposal by its President, the Council on 30 April adopted decision 1980/120, taking note of the report of the Commission on its sixth special session, held from 11 to 20 February.

The Economic and Social Council.

Noting that the Conference of States Parties to the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances met at Buenos Aires, from 26 to 28 June 1979, under the terms of article 11 of the Agreement,

Noting also that the Conference of States Parties adopted a statute establishing the Conference of the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances as a permanent institution, with the status of an international body possessing legal personality, and the Permanent Secretariat, with headquarters at Buenos Aires, as an executive organ with the task of facilitating the co-ordination of activities directed towards the effective achievement of the objectives of the Agreement in the fight against drug abuse and illicit traffic in drugs in this region,

Emphasizing the importance of those decisions as a demonstration of the determination of the countries involved to ensure the discharge of their international obligations in this field by the most effective methods, in order that South America should not become a propitious area for illicit activities in the production and abuse of and traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Bearing in mind that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs invited the Conference of the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances to be represented by an observer at its sixth special session,

Recalling that Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador, Paraguay, Uruguay and Venezuela are parties to the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, Bearing in mind its resolution 1979/7 of 9 May 1979,

1. Welcomes the establishment of the Conference of the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances and the Permanent Secretariat of the Conference;

2. Reaffirms the provisions of its resolution 1979/7;

3. Stresses the need for the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances to be ratified by those States in the region which have not yet done so;

4. Urges the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control to assist the Permanent Secretariat of the Conference of the South American Agreement on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances in carrying out a study of the present situation in the region, identifying the resources available and the Programmes to be implemented in pursuance of the Agreement.

INTERNATIONAL NARCOTICS CONTROL BOARD

Report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1979 (E/INCB/47). U.N.P. Sales No.: E.80.XI.2; 1980 (E/INCB/52). U.N.P. Sales No.: E.81.XI.2.

E/1980/32. Report of International Narcotics Control Board for 1979 (Summary).

E/1980/47 and Corr.1. Report of Second Committee, draft resolution I.

Resolution 1980/17, as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/47 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 30 April 1980, meeting 18.

The Economic and Social Council.

Having considered the report of the International Narcotics Control Board on the work it undertook in 1979 to carry out its treaty responsibilities,

Noting with deep concern the conclusion of the Board, that, despite the efforts made by the international community to date, the increased awareness on the part of the international community of the drug problem in all its aspects and the improvements that have been made in some countries, drug abuse in many countries, both developing and developed, has reached pandemic proportions and the situation has continued to deteriorate and to endanger even children,

Noting also the comments and suggestions made by the Board concerning specific problems which, in its opinion, merit urgent attention and appropriate action by the international community, particularly by certain countries and regions,

Bearing in mind the observation of the Board that the non-medical use of psychotropic substances manufactured clandestinely and diverted from licit manufacture or not yet under effective control poses an increasingly serious problem and that developing countries are at high risk, especially because their administrative resources do not always permit adequate control of the importation and medical use of those substances,

Noting with concern that, despite the co-operation of the Governments directly concerned, and particularly those of countries which produce raw materials for opiates, the Board estimated that there remains a substantial excess of production over requirements of such drugs for medical and scientific purposes,

1. Commends the International Narcotics Control Board for its work in 1979 and expresses appreciation to its members, especially those whose terms of office expire during 1980, for their valuable service in international drug control;

2. Appeals to the international community to renew its dedication to drug abuse control and to launch an intensified and co-ordinated attack against illicit drug production, trafficking and abuse;

3. Invites Governments, in particular those mentioned in the report of the International Narcotics Control Board, to consider urgently the comments and conclusions contained therein, with a view to taking appropriate action;

4. Urges the International Narcotics Control Board to intensify its diplomatic dialogues with Governments, especially with those of countries identified in its report as current sources of uncontrolled and illicit drug production, transit countries and countries in which drug abuse is prevalent, with a view to supporting the efforts made by Governments to attain the aims of the international drug control conventions;

5. Appeals to Governments, particularly those of countries which manufacture and export psychotropic substances, to strengthen their national controls over those substances and to collaborate fully in efforts at international control by becoming parties to the Convention on Psychotropic Substances, 1971, and by providing, whether parties or not, the information required by the Convention;

6. Recommends that requests from developing countries for assistance to enable them to establish or improve their drug control administration should be given a prompt and favourable response by the international community and reminds developing countries that, once they become parties to the 1971 Convention, they can utilize the safeguards in article 13 thereof to prevent the import from other parties of unwanted psychotropic substances;

7. Urges the International Narcotics Control Board to continue to collaborate with the Governments concerned with a view to reducing to the greatest possible extent the over-supply of opiates for medical purposes and to endeavouring to bring about a balance between supply and demand;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Governments for their consideration and appropriate action.

E/1980/14, Chapter I A. Draft resolution IV, as recommended by Commission, approved without vote by Second Committee on 10 April, meeting 3.

E/1980/47 and Corr.1. Report of Second Committee, draft resolution IV.

Resolution 1980/20, as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/47 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 30 April 1980, meeting 18.

The Economic and Social Council.

Recalling the relevant provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1961, to limit the cultivation, production, manufacture and use of narcotic drugs to an amount required for medical and scientific purposes,

Mindful of its resolution 1979/8 of 9 May 1979,

Bearing in mind that the maintenance of a world-wide balance between the supply of narcotic drugs and the legitimate demand for those drugs for medical and scientific purposes constitutes an important aspect of the international strategy and policy on drug abuse control,

Having considered the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1979 on the world requirements and supply of licit narcotic drugs, Noting with concern the Board's assessment that a situation of substantial over-production of opiates will prevail between 1980 and 1983.

Further noting that special consideration should be given to those countries that have made heavy investments and set up costly systems of control to meet the medical and scientific requirements of the international community,

1. Urges the Governments of the importing countries that have not already done so to take effective steps to support the traditional supplier countries and to give those countries all the practical assistance they can in order to prevent the proliferation of sources of production of narcotic raw materials for export;

2. Urges the Governments of the major producing and manufacturing countries that in recent years have added to their capacity for export to take effective measures to restrict substantially their production levels, so as to restore a lasting balance between supply and demand and to prevent diversion of drugs to illicit channels;

3. Requests the International Narcotics Control Board to undertake a detailed study of the situation and to recommend a concrete programme of action with a view to achieving a lasting balance between the demand for and the supply of narcotic drugs for legitimate purposes;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Governments for their consideration and appropriate action.

Resolution 1980/19, as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/47 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 30 April 1980, meeting 18.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing the close involvement of the specialized agencies and programmes of the United Nations system in the prevention and control of drug abuse,

Taking note of Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution I(XXVII) of 24 February 1977, in which the Commission called for greater participation of the specialized agencies in the prevention and control of drug abuse and particularly in the reduction of demand for illicit drugs,

Bearing in mind General Assembly resolution 34/177 of 17 December 1979, especially paragraph 6 thereof, in which the Assembly requested the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization and the United Nations Development Programme to make development and implementation of programmes aimed at the reduction of illicit production of and demand for drugs a regular item on the agenda of their governing bodies,

Viewing with appreciation the adoption by the Executive Board of the World Health Organization at its sixty-fifth session of resolution EB 65.R7 of 23 January 1980, in which the Board called for the inclusion of drug abuse control in the agenda of the thirty-third World Health Assembly and the integration, in collaboration with member States, of elements for drug abuse prevention and intervention in its primary health care programmes and its strategy for health for all by the year 2000,

1. Commends the World Health Organization for the above-mentioned steps taken by the Executive Board at its sixty-fifth session, for its expanded efforts in reviewing compounds for consideration and scheduling by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and for the development of guidelines for the implementation of international treaties;

2. Requests the specialized agencies and United Nations programmes—the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization and the United Nations Development Programme—to make drug abuse control an item in the regular agenda of their governing bodies as a means of furthering their efforts in the reduction of demand for illicit drugs;

3. Invites the World Health Organization, through its primary health care programmes, its strategy for health for all by the year 2000 and other activities, to expand its role in drug abuse prevention and intervention within the context of the country health programmes in which it is participating;

4. Further invites the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the United Nations Development Programme, in addition to the World Health Organization, to explore means for further developing the activities incorporated in their existing regular programmes on the prevention and control of drug abuse and on rehabilitation and social reintegration of drug users;

5. Requests the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization and the United Nations Development Programme, in describing the activities of their drug abuse programmes, to separate their regular budget activities from their extrabudgetary drug programmes, in order to provide the Commission on Narcotic Drugs with a clearer view of the types and amounts of resources devoted to the prevention and control of drug abuse;

6. Further requests the above-mentioned United Nations bodies to keep the Commission on Narcotic Drugs informed and to report to the Economic and Social Council on the implementation of the present resolution.

Resolution 1980/18 as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/47 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 30 April 1980, meeting 18.

The Economic and Social Council.

Recalling its resolution 2065(LXII) of 13 May 1977, in which it urged that special attention should be devoted to African countries with a view to preventing and combating abuse of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Concerned at the increase in the abuse of cannabis and psychotropic substances in African countries,

Conscious that problems connected with drug addiction affect African individuals, families and societies,

Considering that African countries do not at present have the human, material and financial resources for effective control of drug abuse and illicit traffic,

Welcoming the conclusions of the seminars organized at Lagos, in November 1979, and at Dakar, in January 1980,

1. Stresses the need for African countries to hold regular meetings on the drug problem at the regional level;

2. Invites the African countries that have not yet done so to accede to the international drug conventions, and in particular to the Convention on Psychotropic Substances, 1971;

3. Strongly recommends that African countries should strengthen their regional co-operation through existing institutions, particularly the Organization of African Unity, inter alia, by establishing a special commission;

4. Requests the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat, the specialized agencies and governmental and non-governmental organizations to increase their assistance to African countries, particularly in the research, prevention and treatment of drug addiction and in the training of law-enforcement and control officers;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, among other measures, to provide financial support for the implementation of the present resolution and to transmit it to the General Assembly.

E/1980/14, Chapter I A. Draft resolution V, as recommended by Commission, approved without vote by Second Committee on 10 April, meeting 3.

Resolution 1980/21, as recommended by Second Committee, E/1980/47 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Council on 30 April 1980, meeting 18.

The Economic and Social Council.

Recalling its resolution 2002(LX) of 12 May 1976, and articles 4, 35 and 36, particularly paragraph 2 (a) (ii) of article 36, of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1961, as well as those articles as amended by articles 13 and 14 of the 1972 Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1961, and articles 21 and 22 of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances, 1971,

Mindful that illicit trafficking in drugs requires large sums of money, usually in the form of currency, and involves financial transactions of significant size,

Noting that the members and financial backers of trafficking organizations are involved in the acquisition of assets by means of profits generated from such illicit activities, although they may not be directly involved in the actual movement of illicit drugs,

Convinced that close attention to financial transactions and the acquisition of assets involving persons who may be members or financial backers of trafficking organizations is valuable in identifying and prosecuting international drug traffickers and in dismantling major trafficking organizations,

Aware that some Governments have already enacted legislation and have undertaken enforcement activities to attack the financial resources and assets acquired by means of the illegal profits of major drug traffickers,

Believing that co-operation between Governments focusing on such financial activities can lead to the destruction of international criminal enterprises engaged in illicit drug trafficking,

Endorsing Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 3(XXVIII) of 21 February 1979, in which the Commission requested the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat, in consultation with the International Criminal Police Organization, the Customs Co-operation Council and other international organizations and bodies and interested Member States, to examine and synthesize the pertinent legislation, administrative measures and law-enforcement action already undertaken by some Governments as a means of providing practical guidelines and furthering co-operation among Governments facing these problems,

1. Requests the Division of Narcotic Drugs to endeavour urgently to complete the action requested by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs in its resolution 3(XXVIII);

2. Invites the Secretary-General to convene, as soon as feasible thereafter, a meeting of international financial and legal experts, police experts in illegal financial activities and criminal conspiracies, and officials familiar with the prosecution of those involved in international criminal conspiracies for the purpose of preparing guidelines for the negotiation of treaties that would facilitate and promote the co-operative investigation of financial activities involving illicit drug trafficking and that would lead to the prosecution of major traffickers;

3. Recommends that, if necessary, the expenses incurred in holding the meeting envisaged in paragraph 2 above should be borne by the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control;

4. Invites the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its twenty-ninth session on the action taken pursuant to the present resolution, including in his report any draft model agreement that is elaborated for the consideration of the Commission, and to consider possible transmission of any such draft agreement to Governments.

At its 18th plenary meeting, on 30 April 1980, the Council decided to bring Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 5(S-VI) of 20 February 1980, entitled "International drug control strategy and policies," the text of which is annexed to the present decision, together with the comments made thereon by the Council at its first regular session of 1980, to the attention of the General Assembly at its thirty-fifth session for appropriate action.

ANNEX

Resolution adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its 893rd meeting on 20 February 1980

5(S-VI). International drug control strategy and policies

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs,

Pursuant to the request by the General Assembly in paragraph 2 of its resolution 34/177 of 17 December 1979 to finalize at the sixth special session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs a meaningful drug control strategy and policies,

Recalling paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 32/124 of 16 December 1977 and Assembly resolution 33/168 of 20 December 1978,

Further recalling Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 8(XXVIII) of 23 February 1979 and draft resolution III, entitled "Greater United Nations participation in drug abuse control," recommended by the Commission at its sixth special session to the Economic and Social Council for adoption,

Recognizing the progress already achieved through international efforts in this field,

Mindful of the deteriorating situation in many parts of the world with respect to the availability, abuse and misuse of both narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Noting with satisfaction the preparatory work done by the Division of Narcotic Drugs,

Considering that, in the limited time available, the Commission has been unable to complete the complex task assigned to it by the General Assembly,

1. Requests the Director of the Division of Narcotic Drugs to continue the preparation of a document on international drug control for submission to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its twenty-ninth session, comprising:

(a) A long-term strategy;

(b) A five-year programme of action with cost estimates, defining activities that the Secretary-General would pursue through the Division or other branches of the United Nations, within the framework of the United Nations regular budget, and having as a basis the principles annexed to Commission resolution 8(XXVIII);

2. Further requests the Director, in the preparation of the document, to take into account opinions expressed by Governments and to consult closely with the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control, the specialized agencies and other international organizations, with a view to identifying:

(a) Activities that the Fund might support;

(b) The participation of other specialized agencies and international organizations, including the international financial institutions;

(c) Supplementary activities that could be available for national, bilateral or regional execution;

3. Invites the Director to carry out this task by appropriate means;

4. Recommends that the Fund should allocate funds to the Division of Narcotic Drugs to the extent that these are not available from the regular budget for this purpose;

5. Requests the Director to ensure that the preliminary draft document is sent to States members of the Commission, as well as to observers, not later than 15 November 1980;

6. Invites the Economic and Social Council to bring the present resolution to the attention of the General Assembly, together with any comments the Council may wish to make, for appropriate action by the Assembly at its thirty-fifth session.

General Assembly— 35th session

Resolution 35/195, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/741, adopted without vote by Assembly on 15 December 1980, meeting 96.

The General Assembly,

Recalling once more the resolutions on the problem of drug abuse control adopted in recent years by the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the World Health Organization and other relevant organizations,

Recalling, in particular, its resolution 34/177 of 17 December 1979, in which it pointed out the importance of international co-operation in drug abuse control,

Recognizing the growing threat caused by the spread of drug abuse, its serious impact on human health, its adverse effects on social development (social disintegration, increasing criminality), economic advancement and national security in a number of countries,

Aware that illicit traffic in drugs and the profits accruing therefrom to traffickers and criminal organizations pose a threat to the socio-economic well-being of many countries,

Referring to the relevant provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, of that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, which form the basis of all international drug abuse control efforts,

Noting with satisfaction the positive results that have been attained in a number of countries in the fight against drug abuse and in the control of drug trafficking,

Concerned that none the less many of the objectives of drug abuse control set out in international conventions on narcotic drugs and in the resolutions and documents of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and other international bodies concerned with this question have not yet been achieved,

Realizing the necessity of further concerted efforts by the international community, particularly by the United Nations, in addition to national measures, to resolve the problem of drug abuse, in particular by the reduction of the illicit supply, demand and traffic,

Conscious of the need for a five-year, continuously updated international programme of action in drug abuse control, as called for in General Assembly resolution 32/124 of 16 December 1977 and Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolutions 8(XXVIII) of 23 February 1979 and 5(S-VI) of 20 February 1980, which should be supplemented by a long-term strategy or programme,

Noting the report of the Economic and Social Council on narcotic drugs,

1. Takes note of the resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its first regular session of 1980 on the subject of narcotic drugs, elaborated on the basis of the report of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on its sixth special session, and urges all agencies and organizations concerned with the implementation of the resolutions referred to in the preamble, as well as all States and organizations whose assistance has been requested, to take the necessary measures so that the contemplated programme for practical and dynamic drug abuse control can be completed and implemented at the earliest possible date;

2. Repeats its appeal to all States which have not yet become parties to the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, the 1972 Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 to take the necessary steps to accede to these conventions and thus ensure their universal application;

3. Invites all Governments to collaborate closely with the International Narcotics Control Board, the Division of Narcotic Drugs and the other relevant bodies in the United Nations system, particularly by supplying them with the necessary information so that they may fulfil their tasks both pursuant to the provisions of the narcotics conventions and in accordance with their purposes;

4. Urges all States to take suitable steps to implement Economic and Social Council resolutions 1979/8 of 9 May 1979 and 1980/20 of 30 April 1980 with a view to achieving and maintaining a lasting balance between demand and supply of opiates and avoiding the possibility of diversion of licit production to illicit channels;

5. Invites States concerned to take appropriate measures to discourage the powerful economic interests which are propagating a false and deceitful image of drug use with the aim of increasing the number of drug abusers and legalizing the abuse;

6. Underlines its appeal to all Governments to increase their financial support for the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control, so that it may forward the enhancement of measures for the reduction of the illicit supply, traffic and demand for narcotic drugs, and calls particularly upon States which require assistance in crop-substitution or law enforcement programmes to present suitable projects to the Fund and other international funding bodies or projects for bilateral development assistance;

7. Underscores the need of producing countries to receive greater assistance from interested Governments and relevant international organizations to facilitate drug abuse control, including crop-substitution policies or law enforcement programmes;

8. Calls upon all States to co-operate in a suitable fashion to prevent the uncontrolled or illicit cultivation, production, export, import, transit and consumption of narcotic drugs or psychotropic substances, and to take suitable measures to prevent the misuse of chemical substances for the production of drugs;

9. Calls upon the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to present, at its thirtieth regular session, the completed international programme for drug abuse control so that such a comprehensive, co-ordinated global strategy may be translated at the earliest possible date into actions seeking to interdict narcotics trafficking, eradicate the illicit production and demand, educate citizens throughout the world regarding the dangers of drugs and treat and rehabilitate those individuals who have become dependent upon or addicted to drugs;

10. Invites the Economic and Social Council to give once more particular attention to these questions at its first regular session of 1981;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments.

A/35/3/Rev.1. Report of Economic and Social Council for year 1980, Chapter XXIII.

Chapter XXII

United Nations disaster relief

While a number of United Nations programmes and organizations were involved in providing disaster relief assistance during 1980, the Office of the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator (UNDRO) remained the focal point for co-ordination of such efforts and a clearing-house for aid extended by external sources.

The Economic and Social Council (resolution 1980/51) and the General Assembly (35/86) urged special efforts to increase the resources of the United Nations Sudano-Sahelian Office (UNSO), which operated within the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) to co-ordinate United Nations aid to, and assisted on behalf of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) (see p. 727) the efforts of, 18 African countries in drought-recovery and anti-desertification programmes. A number of these countries, as well as others in Africa, were also provided special economic assistance and reconstruction, rehabilitation and development aid (see p. 268).

Aid was mobilized by both the Council and the Assembly for UNDR0 relief, rehabilitation and recovery programmes for Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda (resolutions 1980/70 and 35/90) and Ethiopia (1980/2 and 35/91); aid to Dominica, afflicted by hurricane damage, was also continued (35/102).

The Secretary-General's annual report on the activities of UNDR0 outlined technical assistance given for disaster preparedness and prevention activities as well as disaster relief aid extended to various countries throughout the world during the reporting period. These activities were commended by the Assembly, which retained for another two years from 1 January 1982 the UNDR0 trust fund resolution 35/107).

Most of the above activities are described in this chapter. Additional emergency, humanitarian and special assistance given through other United Nations efforts, such as special economic assistance programmes or those for reconstruction, rehabilitation and development following civil strife, are described elsewhere (see p. 539).

Assistance activities in 1980

Aid to Sudano-Sahelian populations

The United Nations Sudano-Sahelian Office was in 1980 the principal institution of the United Nations system, operating within UNDP, to co-ordinate the efforts of United Nations agencies to help the eight drought-stricken countries of the Sahel (Cape Verde, Chad, Gambia, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal, Upper Volta) which were members of the Permanent Inter-State Committee on Drought Control in the Sahel (CILSS) to implement their medium- and long-term recovery and rehabilitation programme. It was also the arm of the United Nations responsible for assisting, on behalf of UNEP and under a joint UNDP/UNEP venture, a group of designated countries of the Sudano-Sahelian region and adjacent areas in the implementation of the 1977 Plan of Action to Combat Desertification.<sup>1</sup> The original 15 States involved in this second programme were the above eight countries and Ethiopia, Kenya, Nigeria, Somalia, the Sudan, Uganda and the United Republic of Cameroon. During 1980, Djibouti, Guinea and Guinea-Bissau were added to the group. On 5 December, the General Assembly by resolution 35/72 (see below) invited the Governing Council of UNEP to examine the possibility of including Benin in that list.

As a result of expanding operational capability, the number of UNSO-assisted projects for drought-related recovery and rehabilitation increased since 1975 from 52 (21 regional and 31 national, costed at approximately $153 million) to 113 (25 regional and 88 national, requiring $646 million). By the end of 1980, approximately $368 million of this amount had become available from various quarters. This included bilateral and multilateral sources, as well as over $51 million contributed by and through the United Nations Trust Fund for Sudano-Sahelian Activities (see also p. 585).

As at the end of 1980, the main contributors to the Trust Fund were Australia, Canada, Denmark, the Federal Republic of Germany, Iran, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, the United States and Yugoslavia.

Sudano-Sahelian recovery and rehabilitation activities were concentrated mainly in the agricultural sector and included the development and improvement of water, forestry and range resources, assistance for the development of irrigation systems, the local manufacture of agricultural tools and equipment, the establishment and operation of seed multiplication programmes, the strengthening of crop protection capabilities and the development of livestock resources. Special emphasis was given to the development and strengthening of national and regional infrastructures in the fields of feeder-road transport systems, storage facilities, telecommunications, and agro-meteorological and hydrological services.

Desertification control projects included such aspects of forestry as conservation, afforestation, reforestation and fuelwood plantations, rangeland and livestock management, agricultural production, water resources development and conservation, sand dune fixation, alternative sources of energy, meteorology, institutional support, policy planning and co-ordination.

Of special prominence among UNSO-assisted regional activities was a programme for the construction, improvement and maintenance of a region-wide system in the Sahel of all-weather feeder roads to isolated, drought-prone areas. The estimated 1980 cost of the programme, comprising almost 3,400 kilometres of roads, was close to $141 million. Of this amount, approximately $92 million had been secured by the end of 1980 for the construction of some 1,900 kilometres, either on a bilateral or multilateral basis, or through contributions to the Trust Fund. Approximately 955 kilometres of feeder roads were constructed and in use; of these, 700 kilometres were constructed with direct UNSO participation.

The Secretary-General reported on the Sudano-Sahelian drought-related programme to the General Assembly in May, through UNDP and the Economic and Social Council. Desertification control activities were also reported by the Executive Director of UNEP and the Administrator of UNDP to their respective Programme's Governing Councils; the former Council at its April session and the latter at its June session noted these reports. The UNEP Executive Director was authorized on 29 April to submit an updated report to the Assembly's regular 1980 session, which opened in September (see p. 727).

The UNDP Governing Council on 27 June authorized the Administrator to continue granting to the drought-affected Sahelian countries, from unallocated funds, the benefits given to the least developed countries, until the consequences of the drought were eliminated; it urged special governmental efforts to enable UNSO to respond more fully to the priority requirements of the States members of CILSS and asked the Administrator to continue to enhance UNSO's capacity to respond effectively to those requirements.

By another decision of the same date, the Governing Council asked the Administrator to set up a special programme for providing more aid to drought-stricken African countries to reconstruct their economies and shield them from the consequences of drought, and appealed for general international emergency assistance to those countries. (See also p. 267.)

The Economic and Social Council, for its part, on 23 July adopted resolution 1980/51 on implementation of the recovery and rehabilitation programme in the Sudano-Sahelian region. By this action, it noted with satisfaction the report of the Secretary-General, expressed its profound gratitude to all contributors to the implementation of the recovery, rehabilitation and development programmes in the Sahel, and strongly urged that all Governments make special efforts to increase the resources of UNSO to enable it to respond more fully to the priority requirements of the Sahelian Governments. Further, it urged all United Nations organs, agencies and programmes to increase assistance, through UNSO, and to consult together on ways to achieve the goals of the programmes.

Resolution 1980/51, was adopted, without vote, as recommended by the Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee, which approved a lo-power text-orally amended by the USSR and revised by the sponsors-without opposition on 14 July. The sponsors were Algeria, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Lesotho, Nigeria, Senegal, Uganda, the United States, Zaire and Zambia. Their revision, suggested by the United States, was to add the clause inviting organizations to engage in consultations to determine how they might best help to achieve the goal of increased aid for recovery, rehabilitation and development programmes; thereby the ability (a USSR oral proposal changed that word from "capacity") of UNSO to respond to priority requirements might be enhanced.

The General Assembly, on 5 December, adopted without vote resolution 35/86 on the same topic. By this resolution, the Assembly, noting with satisfaction the decisive role played by UNSO in helping to combat the effects of the drought and to implement the medium- and long-term recovery and rehabilitation programme adopted by CILSS, and in mobilizing the necessary resources to finance priority projects, called on the international community to provide adequate and urgent food aid to the countries of the Sahel, expressed gratitude to the Governments, intergovernmental and private organizations and individuals that had contributed to this programme and strongly urged all Governments to make special efforts to increase the resources of UNSO. It invited UNSO to continue strengthening its co-operation with CILSS.

The Assembly acted on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, which approved without vote on 19 November a text sponsored and subsequently revised by Bangladesh, Benin, Cape Verde, Chad, the Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Mali, Mauritania, the Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Uganda and the Upper Volta.

The Economic and Social Council on 23 July also adopted resolution 1980/52 on implementation in the Sudano-Sahelian region of the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification, by which it reiterated its concern over the seriousness of desertification in the region and the persistent critical situations resulting from it which hampered the economic and social development of the regions's countries; it noted with satisfaction UNSO's progress and recommended annual UNEP reports on the subject (for details, see p. 729).

On 5 December, the Assembly by resolution 35/72 took similar decisions. It reiterated its concern over the particular seriousness of desertification in the Sudano-Sahelian region and the severe effects on the region's economic and social development and on the way of life of its population, as well as the need for the implementation in the region of the Plan of Action to Combat Desertification on an intensified and sustained basis. It noted with satisfaction UNSO's progress in assisting the region's Governments, invited the UNEP Governing Council to examine the possibility of including Benin in the list of countries which received assistance of this kind, invited UNEP and UNDP to continue to support UNSO in its expanded responsibilities at a level commensurate with the region's pressing needs, and urged all concerned to respond favourably to regional Governments' requests for assistance in combating desertification. (For details, see p. 729).

Aid to drought-stricken areas in Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda

At its July 1980 session, the Economic and Social Council heard statements by the representatives of Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda, who called attention to their countries' suffering from the prevailing drought situation in the region.

On 25 July, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/70 whereby, deeply concerned at the gravity of the food situation resulting from drought and other natural disasters facing the four countries and noting with appreciation the work of UNDR0 and other United Nations relief agencies, appealed to Member States and appropriate organizations and agencies to provide relief, rehabilitation and recovery assistance to the four countries, and requested the Secretary-General to send, as a matter of urgency, a multi-agency mission to those countries to assess the extent of the problem and the magnitude of the assistance required, to mobilize humanitarian assistance from the international community and to report to the General Assembly at its regular 1980 session on the progress achieved.

The Council acted on the recommendation of the Third Committee which, on 21 July, approved without vote a text sponsored by Djibouti, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lesotho, Morocco, Somalia, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, Uganda and the United Arab Emirates. Oral sponsor-revisions included deletion of the word "floods" from a preambular paragraph expressing deep concern at the gravity of the food situation resulting from natural disasters in the affected countries, and Uganda was listed as one of the four affected countries, replacing a general reference to "other affected countries in the region." In addition, a paragraph was deleted which would have asked UNDR0 immediately to assess the gravity of floods in the Sudan and the volume of assistance needed, with a view to mobilizing urgent relief.

An interagency mission visited the four countries in August, September and October and reports on its findings were annexed to four reports submitted to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General. On 3 November, the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator reported orally to the Assembly's Second Committee on the recommendations of the mission. He noted that the mission found, in each of the four countries visited, serious economic problems, namely accelerated inflation and balance-of-payments difficulties, further burdened by a considerable refugee population and by the severe drought that had prevailed since 1979. In each of them, government officials at the highest level continually emphasized the regional nature of the problem. They expressed concern that responses taken in one country without making similar responses in the border regions of adjacent countries would not solve the overall problem. The mission also noted that it was quite apparent that the four countries had considerable medium- and long-term development needs requiring urgent attention, and each Government expressed the need for a follow-up multiagency mission to assess those needs.

The Djibouti mission (31 August-8 September), which included representatives of six United Nations relief agencies or bodies, found that the most pressing need was water for human and animal consumption. Families which had lost their livestock herds because of the lack of water were settled in camps where food was scarce and water meagre; the Government's distribution capability was inadequate and should be enhanced. The few water trucks available were in constant use over extremely rough roads, and some of the newer camps lacked shelter. The mission therefore recommended the provision of food, shelter, transportation, medical equipment and supplies and an accelerated well-drilling programme. An expert should be employed to analyse the feasibility of creating a "breeding-feeding" nucleus of livestock.

The Somalia mission (9-22 September), which included representatives of seven United Nations relief agencies and programmes, noted that the drought, which affected 16 regions of the country, involved over 80 per cent of the economically active population engaged in agriculture. Large numbers of draught animals, which formed an important agricultural subsector to the growing of certain crops, had died as a result of the drought. This loss adversely affected production and the subsistence of herders, and had a devastating effect on the national economy, which found itself compelled to import foodstuffs necessary to balance the deficit crop production. The mission also pointed out that Somalia had an inadequate transport and distribution system and, as the majority of the population were nomadic or semi-nomadic, their frequent movement made it difficult to meet their health and educational needs. The mission's recommendations for assistance were largely in the areas of food, water, transport, medical and veterinary support, range development and reforestation.

Seven United Nations relief agencies and programmes participated in the mission which visited the Sudan (23 September-1 October). Much of the country was in a precarious ecological situation, the desert since 1973 having steadily spread southward; land devoted to cash crops and pasture had suffered from insect infestation and recurrent drought and fires in 1979 and 1980. The most seriously affected provinces were Eastern Equatoria, Jonglei and Upper Nile, in the southern region, where the failure of rain during the planting season had resulted in a very poor harvest of basic foodstuffs. The acute water shortage, particularly in Eastern Equatoria, had caused a substantial loss of cattle. Many existing wells had dried up, water-supply installations were not functioning because of maintenance problems, and water trucks and pumps were badly needed. The country lacked adequate primary health care; mass disease control, environmental sanitation, waste disposal facilities and access to potable water required urgent attention in the Sudan, as well as in the other three countries visited.

Representatives of seven United Nations agencies and programmes visited Uganda (6-14 October). Agriculture provided subsistence for 90 per cent of the population, which had been almost self-sufficient in food production until the early 1970s but which had suffered seriously from a deterioration in the economic infrastructure over the past several years. The situation had been worsened by lawlessness and disorder in the past two years: looting of food and a sharp increase in cattle raids in the Karamoja area, in the north-east, had resulted in the displacement of thousands of people. Because of a poor harvest in that region, only an estimated two-month supply of food was available and no surplus food was available to be transferred from other, more productive areas of the country. Also lacking were farm implements, fertilizers, seeds and pesticides and other agricultural necessities. The water situation was also critical; while Uganda was well endowed with water resources, they were not evenly distributed. Most of the population depended on open pools and unprotected wells, many of which were far removed from the population they served. Uganda's once-adequate transport system was in a serious state. Without a considerable increase in spare parts and tires, adequate workshop and repair facilities, as well as additional rolling stock, the delivery of the necessary food requirements to remote areas would be difficult.

On 19 November, the Second Committee approved without vote a draft resolution on aid to these four States; the Assembly similarly adopted the text on 5 December as resolution 35/90. It was sponsored in Committee, in revised form, by 32 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

The Assembly thereby endorsed the recommendations of the multiagency mission and commended the Secretary-General for his speedy and positive response to the urgent situation in the four countries; it noted with appreciation the measures taken by him, in co-operation with UNDRP and other organizations of the United Nations system, to ensure the speediest and most effective relief aid for the victims of drought and other natural disasters. It also appealed to Member States and international governmental and non-governmental organizations to make generous contributions in the form of financial, material and technical assistance. The Assembly recommended that Governments of the drought-stricken countries of the region should consider the establishment of an intergovernmental body which would co-ordinate and support their efforts to combat the effects of drought and other natural disasters and to deal with medium- and long-term recovery and rehabilitation. It asked the Secretary-General, in consultation with the UNDP Administrator and concerned organizations, to assign responsibility for assisting those countries to the appropriate body within the United Nations system to be funded by voluntary contributions, and further requested him to mobilize international assistance for the affected populations of the four countries and to send, as a matter of urgency, a multiagency mission to those countries to assess their medium- and long-term needs.

Aid to drought-stricken areas of Ethiopia

Relief and rehabilitation efforts to improve the situation in the drought-stricken areas of Ethiopia were undertaken in 1980 by UNDRP, UNDP and other organizations.

In an oral report to the Economic and Social Council on 14 April, the Disaster Relief Co-ordinator advised that the situation in the country had not improved substantially; many of the normally perennial rivers had dried up and losses of human life and cattle had been reported. He also said that an interministerial mission was currently touring the area to assess the situation; its findings would form the basis for an appeal to the international community for emergency assistance. A representative of the UNDP Administrator reported on the assistance rendered by the international community through UNDP. The Commissioner for Relief and Rehabilitation of Ethiopia informed the Council of measures taken by his Government to increase agricultural productivity, resettle people to more fertile areas, and promote literacy. Despite these efforts and the generous response of the international community, he said, Ethiopia was still forced to appeal for more international assistance and was faced with yet another problem: the resettlement of war-displaced persons.

On 16 April, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/2, sponsored by Algeria, Cuba, Egypt, Ethiopia, India, Kenya, Lesotho, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Nepal, Nigeria, Pakistan, the Sudan, Trinidad and Tobago, the United Republic of Tanzania, Yugoslavia and Zambia.

By this resolution, the Council, noting the efforts made to cope with the situation, requested the Co-ordinator and United Nations organizations and specialized agencies, in their respective areas of competence, and appealed to Member States and to inter-governmental, non-governmental and voluntary organizations, to continue and intensify their assistance to Ethiopia in its relief and rehabilitation efforts, particularly the Government's resettlement programme, and to implement fully the relevant provisions of various General Assembly and Council resolutions.

Malawi, on behalf of the sponsors, orally amended the text, which they had previously revised, by deleting, at the request of Morocco and Somalia from a preambular paragraph expressing deep concern at the gravity of the food situation due to the drought and other natural and man-made disasters the word "man-made," and omitting a preambular paragraph recalling a 1978 Council resolution* inviting the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to intensify humanitarian assistance to refugees and displaced persons in the Horn of Africa. Also at Somalia's request, an operative paragraph inviting the High Commissioner to continue to intensify humanitarian aid to the displaced persons in Ethiopia was omitted.

Expressing support for the resolution after its approval in Committee, on the understanding that the assistance requested would be used solely for humanitarian purposes, the United States added that it should not be used for political or other ends and that no favouritism should be shown to any social group.

Between 27 May and 7 June, a multi-donor/interagency mission visited Ethiopia. Its report was issued on 13 June, after an appeal summarizing its findings had been sent to the donor community and a meeting had been held at Geneva to brief donors.

The Secretary-General reported in October to the General Assembly on the situation. On 3 November the Disaster Relief Co-ordinator, orally reporting to the Assembly's Second Committee, stated that the mission's concerns were to ensure that the aid given could be handled at the ports and transported to distribution centres, and ultimately to the people in need. This proved to be particularly difficult because of the obstacles to distribution in northern, north-central and southern areas where the majority of the Government-estimated 5 million affected people were said to be. Further, the mission found itself compelled to consider questions of development and disaster prevention as well as of immediate relief. It also recommended that some new organizational machinery be established to deal with a situation in which it was necessary to give relief and development aid in the same area, at the same time, to the same people who had been touched by the coincidence of a natural and a man-made disaster. The mission was of the opinion that the real solution to Ethiopia's problems lay in the promotion of development programmes in areas of agricultural potential rather than in the provision of perennial relief to people in areas where the possibilities for even subsistence agriculture had long since been exhausted.

The response of the international community to the mission's report was valued at just over $8 million, but some important contributions of foodstuffs had not been ascribed a cash value. The United Nations Children's Fund implemented a special $2.5 million project for immediate relief and rehabilitation funded by the European Economic Community and a contribution from the Swiss Government. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations launched six new projects for increasing agricultural productivity, at a cost of $4.6 million. World Food Programme (WFP) involvement in the resettlement of drought victims amounted to $1.5 million; the rehabilitation of forest, grazing and agricultural land, at a cost of $37 million, had been approved in 1979 and implementation was started following a WFP mission to Ethiopia in April/May 1980.

On 19 November, the Second Committee approved without vote a draft resolution sponsored in a revised form by 44 nations (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below); it was adopted by the Assembly without vote on 5 December as resolution 35/91.

The Assembly thereby requested the organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and appealed to other donors to continue and intensify their assistance to Ethiopia for the relief, rehabilitation and recovery of the drought-stricken areas, and called on all concerned to ensure that the international assistance provided would be used for that sole purpose. It also called for reports to be submitted on the matter in 1981.

Aid to Dominica

ber 1980 on assistance to Dominica. The report stressed the magnitude of the damage inflicted upon the population and the economy of the country by hurricanes and other natural disasters in 1978 and 1979. It mentioned the prompt and generous response of the international community and annexed excerpts of replies to the Assembly's appeal for assistance and described the needs of the country.

In an oral report to the Economic and Social Council on 21 July 1980, the Under-Secretary-General for Special Political Questions and Co-ordinator of Special Economic Assistance Programmes, on behalf of the Secretary-General, gave an account of the situation in Dominica. The impact of the hurricanes had been so great, he said, that the country's gross national product for 1979 was estimated to have fallen 17 per cent from the already depressed level of the year before. Thus, there had been a sharp fall in the Government's revenues at the very time when considerable expenditures were necessary for relief and rehabilitation. Most of the nearly $8 million deficit for the 1979/1980 fiscal year, three times that of the previous year, had been covered by bilateral and multilateral emergency aid. The Government was again seeking assistance to cover a substantial deficit for 1980/1981.

On 23 July, the Council took note of this report. The action was embodied in decision 1980/158, adopted without objection on an oral proposal by the Council President, following a suggestion by Nigeria.

On 5 December, the General Assembly, by resolution 35/102 adopted without vote after considering the Secretary-General's September report, and in the light of another hurricane, "Allen," which had struck the island in August 1980, urged the international community to continue to assist Dominica, with the utmost urgency, and requested the Secretary-General to keep the Council and the Assembly informed of the results achieved.

The Assembly acted on the recommendation of its Second Committee which on 19 November approved without vote the text as sponsored by 27 Members (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Aid to the Dominican Republic

In an oral report to the Economic and Social Council on 21 July 1980, the Under-Secretary-General for Special Political Questions and Co-ordinator of Special Economic Assistance Programmes described post-hurricane reconstruction efforts in the Dominican Republic and aid for the country's rehabilitation and development. He said the economic and social situation remained serious: per capita gross domestic product in real terms had changed little since 1976, unemployment and underemployment were high and the country faced a serious balance-of-payments deficit.

By decision 1980/158 of 23 July (see preceding subsection), the Council took note of this report.

In September, the Secretary-General submitted a report to the General Assembly on assistance to the Dominican Republic. The report stressed the seriousness of the economic and social situation due to hurricanes in 1979 which had caused heavy damage, estimated at $800 million, to the agricultural, industrial and housing sectors. Economic recovery had begun, the report added, but further assistance was needed. The 1980 budget deficit was expected to exceed $180 million. The deficit in the current account in 1980 was projected to be $425 million, resulting in a further loss of over $100 million in foreign exchange reserves.

On 5 December, the Assembly, with the adoption of decision 35/423, took note of the Secretary-General's report. The decision was taken without vote; the Second Committee had similarly approved the text on 20 November on an oral proposal by its Chairman.

Other assistance activities in 1980

The table on the next page provides statistical information on international aid provided, in United States dollars, for relief and other operations in which UNDRO was involved during 1980. Other contributions were also reported without any monetary value ascribed to them.

Disaster preparedness and prevention

The Secretary-General, in his May 1980 report on the activities of UNDRO in the field of disaster preparedness and prevention, noted that the Governing Council of UNDP in 1979 had called on the Administrator to continue his efforts to help Governments requesting technical assistance in disaster preparedness and prevention at the national and regional levels.<sup>4</sup> He also noted that, apart from such projects developed specifically by UNDRO, an increasing number of development programmes had recently, directly or indirectly, incorporated disaster-prevention elements.

In 1980, UNDRO provided technical and expert advice in pre-disaster planning, disaster preparedness and prevention to some 20 countries, three regional programmes and one regional project.

The Government of Solomon Islands adopted a pre-disaster contingency plan developed by an UNDRO consultant. Jamaica, following the passage of hurricane "Allen" in August 1980, asked UNDRO to assist in the strengthening and planning of activities for its national Office of Disaster Preparedness and Emergency Relief Co-ordination, set up with UNDRO assistance following disastrous floods in 1979. Chile, Indonesia, Mozambique, Niue, Peru, Senegal, Somalia and the United Republic of Tanzania also received assistance in various aspects of disaster preparedness and prevention.

Planning and disaster prevention advisory services were given for the reconstruction of 31 villages and towns of upper Egypt damaged by floods late in 1979; this project was undertaken jointly with the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) (UNHCS).

An UNDRO-sponsored Disaster Preparedness Project Conference was held in the Dominican Republic in May. Plans for a pan-Caribbean preparedness and prevention project were evolved, stemming mainly from an earlier project envisaged by UNDRO for the eastern Caribbean countries. The long-range objective of the two-year project was to develop the individual as well as the collective capacity of the participating countries to prevent or mitigate the effects of potentially disastrous situations and to cope with disasters.

The Office continued to co-operate with UNHCS in providing physical planning assistance for reconstruction in Montenegro (Yugoslavia), and served as liaison between this project and a United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) project for seismic risk reduction in the Balkan region.

Bangladesh and Burma with UNDRO aid held training seminars in disaster preparedness for officials at the subdivisional level. The Office funded three disaster preparedness fellowships requested by Bangladesh, India and Pakistan; training was carried out in Japan.

Measures to expedite international relief assistance

Reporting to the General Assembly on UNDRO activities during 1980, the Secretary-General noted that, in accordance with current practice, United Nations organizations could intervene only after an official request for assistance had been received from the Government of a country affected by a disaster. Only then could the mobilization and co-ordination of United Nations relief activities be undertaken. In general, the presence of an UNDRO representative in the affected country, in advance of an official request for assistance, to help in assessing the needs, to disseminate information, and to act as a clearing-house for assistance from external sources, was welcomed. Another means to enhance operational efficiency in disaster-prone countries was the establishment of disaster teams. These teams, consisting of representatives of United Nations agencies already in the country, could monitor the situation, act rapidly and be strengthened by representatives from Headquarters whenever necessary.

The Secretary-General also reported that UNDRO had reviewed the efforts of both national and international lawyers to deal with the legal issues affecting the delivery of disaster relief, including the implications resulting from the application of modern technology, particularly remote sensing, to disaster work. It intended to draw up the text of an international agreement on the provision of disaster relief; initial work was under way with the United Nations Institute for Training and Research and with the League of Red Cross Societies, the Henry Durant Institute and the International Law Association.

By a decision of 27 June, the UNDP Governing Council, noting a report of the Administrator on criteria for UNDP response to natural disasters, agreed that long-term disaster-related assistance over and above country indicative planning figures would be limited to technical assistance activities of direct benefit to the population of the stricken area, limited to $1 million from the Programme Reserve per natural disaster (with a $2 million maximum per year and per country). The Council approved an increase from $20,000 to a $30,000 maximum to be allocated from the Reserve for immediate relief assistance in any one situation following a natural disaster.

Report of UNDRO

The United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator presented the May report of the Secretary-General on the work of his Office to the Third Committee of the Economic and Social Council on 17 July 1980. He noted, among other things, the need for a clear definition of the Office's duties, including its responsibilities in disasters resulting from non-natural events, and the extent of UNDRO's responsibility as the United Nations system's focal point for disaster relief, i.e. whether that responsibility should be discharged in the kinds of disaster which did not call for exercising a co-ordination function.

During the year under review (up to March 1980), the Co-ordinator had signed a multi-agency agreement between UNEP, WFP, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the International Labour Organisation, UNESCO, the World Health Organization, the World Meteorological Organization and UNDRO. Executive heads of other participating agencies also signed the agreement, which defined functional responsibilities in many kinds of activities related to disaster prevention, preparedness and relief.

The main concern of many Council members was the role, mandate and effectiveness of UNDRO, but it was felt that it was premature to consider any change in its mandate before completion of an ongoing evaluation of its role and activities by the United Nations Joint Inspection Unit (JIU).

On 25 July, the Council, by decision 1980/184 adopted without objection, took note of the report of the Secretary-General on the work of UNDRO. The Council acted on an oral proposal of its President.

On 3 November, the Co-ordinator presented the Secretary-General's report on UNDRO's activities to the Second Committee of the General Assembly. He observed that UNDRO had decided to share its total resources in the ratio of 60:30:10 for relief, preparedness and prevention, respectively.

He noted recommendations for action arising from the report, which included: extension of the life of the UNDRO trust fund; agreement by the Assembly to the submission, in the 1982-1983 programme budget, of proposals for a further transfer of costs from voluntary funding to the regular budget; and the desirability of Member States advising their missions in disaster-prone countries to take part in disaster preparedness arrangements made by UNDP resident representatives and to help finance seminars on their role following disasters.

The Co-ordinator reported briefly on the finds and recommendations made by interagency missions to Djibouti, Ethiopia, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda and enumerated the emergencies in which the Office had been engaged during the period reviewed.

On the recommendation of the Second Committee, the Assembly, with the adoption of resolution 35/107 on 5 December, commended the activities of UNDRO which had contributed to the easing of the consequences of natural disasters. It called on Governments and international organizations to co-operate with the Co-ordinator by providing timely information on the nature and extent of their current and intended assistance to disaster-afflicted countries. It decided to maintain for a further two-year period, as from 1 January 1982, the trust fund for strengthening UNDR0, in order to ensure that the financial resources available to the Office remained adequate, and it urged all Governments to contribute to it. It also decided to review UNDR0's mandate in 1981.

The resolution, revised and sponsored by 28 Members (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below), was adopted without vote; the Second Committee had similarly approved the text on 20 November.

After the text was approved, the USSR reiterated its position that UNDR0 should be financed from voluntary contributions only. Canada considered that there was a need to clarify UNDR0's mandate following the review by JIU as well as one currently being carried out by the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination.

Also on 5 December, the General Assembly adopted, by resolution 35/56 (see p. 499), an International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s), whereby the international community was to take measures to improve and strengthen arrangements to provide developing countries with adequate assistance in disaster relief, preparedness and prevention. Resolution 35/90, as recommended by Second Committee, A/35/663, adopted without vote by Assembly on 5 December 1980, meeting 84.

The General Assembly,

Having heard the statement made by the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator before the Second Committee on 3 November 1980,

Noting with satisfaction the reports of the Secretary-General on assistance to the drought-stricken areas of Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda, to which were annexed the relevant reports of the multiagency mission sent to study the humanitarian needs of the drought-affected victims in those countries,

Noting with concern the grave effects in Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda of successive years of drought and the resulting shortage of foodstuffs, livestock, fodder and water,

Bearing in mind that it is in conformity with the principle of international solidarity enunciated in the Charter of the United Nations to render assistance to Member States which are the victims of major natural disasters,

Aware of the adverse effects of the drought on the economic and social development of Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda,

Aware also of the regional nature of the existing drought situation in the countries of the Horn of Africa,

Recalling the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council concerning assistance in cases of natural disaster, in particular Assembly resolutions 2816(XXVI) of 14 December 1971 and 2959(XXVII) of 12 December 1972,

Recognizing the very high costs involved and the great problems of distribution to the remote areas of Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda,

1. Expresses its deep sympathy to the people and Governments of Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda for the loss of human and animal lives caused by the drought;

2. Endorses the recommendations made by the multiagency mission in the reports annexed to the relevant reports of the Secretary-General;

3. Commends the Secretary-General for his speedy and positive response to the urgent situation of the drought-stricken countries of Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda, and for his action in dispatching a multiagency mission to those countries to ascertain their immediate needs for assistance to the affected populations;

4. Notes with appreciation the measures already taken by the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the Office of the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator and other agencies and organizations of the United Nations system, to ensure the speediest and most effective relief aid for the victims of drought and other natural disasters in Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda;

5. Appeals to Member States and to international governmental and non-governmental organizations to make generous contributions towards helping the affected populations in the form of financial, material and technical assistance, as described in the reports of the multiagency mission;

6. Recommends that Governments of the drought-stricken countries of the region should consider the establishment of an intergovernmental body with the responsibility for co-ordinating and supporting the countries' efforts to combat the effects of drought and other natural disasters and to deal with the problem of medium-term and long-term recovery and rehabilitation;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme and other organizations concerned within the United Nations system, to assign, as early as possible, the responsibility for assisting those countries in the region to the appropriate body, within the system, which will be funded from voluntary contributions, will be responsible for the co-ordination of the activities of the United Nations system in support of the recovery and rehabilitation efforts of the countries concerned and will also provide direct assistance to the Governments of those countries in co-ordinating inputs from donor sources and in strengthening their national and regional capabilities to mitigate the effects of future droughts and promote sustained economic and social development;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To mobilize international assistance for the populations affected as a result of drought and other natural disasters in the four countries concerned;

(b) To send, as a matter of urgency, a multiagency mission to Djibouti, Somalia, the Sudan and Uganda to assess the medium-term and long-term needs of the Governments of those countries for their drought-afflicted populations;

9. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the Economic and Social Council at its second regular session of 1981 on the results of the multiagency mission concerning the medium-term and long-term needs of the Governments concerned and also to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session on the progress achieved in the implementation of the present resolution.

Chapter XXIII

Consultative arrangements with non-governmental organizations

At the end of 1980, there were 608 non-governmental organizations (NGOs) with which the Economic and Social Council had consultative arrangements. These were divided into three groups. In category I were 30 organizations broadly representative of major population segments in a large number of countries, closely involved with the economic and social life of the areas they represented, and which had marked and sustained contributions to make to the achievements of the United Nations in social, cultural, educational, health, scientific, technological and human rights fields.

In Category II were 205 internationally known organizations having special competence in, and specifically concerned with, only a few of the fields of activity covered by the Council.

Of the 373 names on the Roster, 161 were organizations that the Council, or the Secretary-General in consultation with the Council or its Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations, considered able to make occasional and useful contributions to the Council's work. The Roster also included an additional 212 organizations having consultative relations with the specialized agencies.

During 1980, the Committee held two meetings, on 10 April in New York and on 4 July in Geneva, to consider requests for hearings from NGOs and recommend those to be heard by the Council. It also met once informally to discuss the preparation and limitation of documents.

Operating consultative arrangements

Written statements

Seven written statements by five individual NGOs were submitted to the Council during 1980 under the arrangements for consultation. These statements addressed questions of capital punishment, and racial discrimination and support for Zimbabwe and the independence of Namibia, and recounted individual NGO activities during the year concerning environment protection, augmenting domestic savings and women's contribution to the solution of food problems. In addition, by a joint statement pertaining to social development questions, three NGOs transmitted a resolution on social defence, and a joint statement submitted by 17 NGOs, submitted for the Council's general discussion of international economic and social policy, suggested elements they hoped to see included in the new International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s). Written statements were also submitted to the Commission on Human Rights, the Commission on the Status of Women, the Statistical Commission, the July World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women and the August/September Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders.

Oral statements

During the first regular 1980 session of the Council, in April/May, the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) made statements in the Second (Social) Committee on agenda items dealing with measures to improve the situation and ensure the human rights and dignity of all migrant workers and with human rights questions. The International Federation of Business and Professional Women made a statement in that Committee on the agenda items covering activities for the advancement of women and the United Nations Decade for Women.

During the Council's second regular session, in July, three organizations made statements during the Council's general discussion of international economic and social policy, including regional and sectoral developments: Inter-Parliamentary Union, International Chamber of Commerce, World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU).

In the Council's First (Economic) Committee, WFTU also made statements on two additional agenda items: science and technology for development, and transnational corporations; ICFTU also addressed the latter item. Both the Inter-Parliamentary Union and the World Confederation of Labour were heard on the agenda item which dealt with international co-operation on the environment.

The International Catholic Child Bureau, speaking also on behalf of the Committee of Non-Governmental Organizations for the International Year of the Child (IYC), was heard on the item pertaining to IYC during the Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee's consideration of a comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development. The League of Red Cross Societies also made statements on special economic and disaster relief assistance in the Council and on that topic when the Third Committee was discussing international co-operation and co-ordination within the United Nations system.

Chapter XXIV

Co-ordination and organizational questions

During 1980, the activities of the United Nations organizations represented in the interagency Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) continued to give effect to General Assembly proposals on restructuring the economic and social sectors of the United Nations system. Particular attention was paid to the system's operational activities for development, a topic which was discussed by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) in May/June and was the main topic at the Joint Meetings of ACC and CPC in July.

At its April session, ACC—a committee composed of the executive heads of organizations of the United Nations system and chaired by the Secretary-General—discussed aspects of a policy review, a report on which was then being prepared by the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation. Later in the year, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly acted on that report. The Council also took action on CPC's and ACC's reports. By resolution 35/81, the Assembly decided to undertake a comprehensive policy review of operational activities in 1983 and every three years thereafter.

At its May/June session, CPC—the main subsidiary organ of the Council and the Assembly for planning, programming and co-ordination—concluded its review of the process of programme planning in the United Nations.

Details of these and other actions are described in this chapter.

Functioning of co-ordination machinery

Restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations system

Operational activities for development

The Consultative Committee on Substantive Questions (Operational Activities) of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) discussed, at its session from 26 February to 6 March 1980, several of the provisions relating to operational activities of the United Nations system contained in the General Assembly's 1977 resolution on restructuring the system's economic and social sectors.<sup>1</sup> The Committee planned to continue to review progress in implementing the resolution at its 1981 session, with emphasis on: the use of the United Nations Development Programme country-programming process as a frame of reference for operational activities carried out and financed by United Nations organizations from their own resources; the introduction of improved linkages between technical co-operation, pre-investment and investment; and progress in implementing recommendations to United Nations organizations, particularly in intercountry programming and means of co-operating with regional commissions in operational activities.

In its annual report to the Economic and Social Council on its activities from mid-1979 to April 1980, ACC noted its consideration during that period of various aspects of a policy review of operational activities for development, a report on which was being prepared by the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation, in consultation with ACC, in accordance with a 1979 Assembly request.<sup>2</sup>

A draft of the report was considered by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) at its May/June session and was the main topic at the annual Joint Meetings of ACC and CPC in July. The Council, by resolution 1980/66 of 25 July, recommended that the Assembly select issues for action in the light of the report's recommendations. The Assembly, by resolution 35/81 of 5 December, urged increased contributions and multiyear pledges for operational activities, and invited recommendations on ways to reduce support costs, maximize uniformity, and harmonize and improve procedures; it established a scheme for annual reporting of statistical information on all operational activities for development conducted by the United Nations system, and decided to undertake a triennial policy review of operational activities, beginning in 1983.

(For further details, see p. 607.)

Interagency co-ordination

At CPC's suggestion, informal consultations took place in July between Economic and Social Council members and representatives of United Nations organizations on ways to improve communication between ACC and intergovernmental bodies. The Council on 25 July, by decision 1980/185 informing the Assembly of the consultations, stated that improvements should first be sought in the operation of existing mechanisms, and especially the CPC/ACC Joint Meetings; informal consultations between Joint Meeting representatives would take place early in 1981 to discuss subjects for consideration by and organization of future Joint Meetings (see also p. 571).

By resolution 35/9 of 3 November, the Assembly invited ACC to report to it in 1981 on the measures it had taken to implement provisions in the annex to its 1977 restructuring resolution recommending that arrangements should be made to improve communication between ACC and the intergovernmental bodies concerned, including wider access to the results of and participation in relevant ACC discussions<sup>3</sup> (for further details of the resolution, see p. 1202).

Work of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination

In its annual report of 15 April 1980 to the Economic and Social Council concerning its work from mid-1979 to date, ACC addressed principally the issues of development and international economic co-operation and management issues, as well as operational activities for development (see section above) and programme questions related to cross-organizational analysis (see following subchapter). It noted the deteriorating global economic situation and the dangers of a stalemate in what was known as the North-South dialogue on economic issues. It observed that it was actively assisting United Nations efforts to formulate a new international development strategy for the 1980s, particularly through its Task Force on Long-term Development Objectives, and in preparations that were under way for launching global economic negotiations.

During the reporting period, ACC was particularly concerned with management issues, especially those related to the work of the International Civil Service Commission, and a review and assessment of the budgetary and financial practices of the organizations by the central United Nations bodies responsible for system-wide co-ordination. It undertook, through its Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions, an examination of ways of harmonizing staff regulations and rules of the organizations of the common system.

Work also continued on harmonizing financial and budgetary practices in the organizations of the system and to promote common approaches to problems arising in the field (see also p. 1230). Under ACC auspices, the organizations reached agreement in principle on the establishment and joint financing of a fund to meet the cost of security measures that might be required to protect international staff in emergency situations. In this connexion, ACC approved on 2 April a statement on the security and independence of the international civil service, the text of which was annexed to its report (see p. 996).

In an addendum dated 2 July, ACC published two statements, one on a reservation registered by China to the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies,<sup>4</sup> and one on denial by States of privileges and immunities to United Nations high officials under both that Convention and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations<sup>5</sup> (see p. 996).

In conclusion, ACC emphasized the importance it attached to reorienting intersecretariat work to give the highest priority to substantive questions of central importance to the development of countries and to international economic co-operation. A major concern of ACC had been to ensure that its subsidiary machinery concentrated on such issues.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1980/184 on international co-operation and co-ordination within the United Nations system, took note of the annual overview report of ACC for 1979/1980.

This decision, orally proposed by the Council President, was adopted without objection on 25 July. Other aspects of the decision concerned ACC's report on United Nations expenditures in relation to programmes (see p. 996) and a report on the work of the Office of the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator (see p. 967).

Other reports by ACC during 1980 dealt with interagency action in rural development (see p. 564) and the effect of continuing currency instability on the budgets of organizations in the United Nations system (see p. 1233).

Work of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination

On 6 February, the Economic and Social Council, after hearing an oral report on documentation for CPC's mid-1980 session, decided to request the Secretary-General to ensure that all documents required would be available in all languages. The Council took this action in adopting, without objection, decision 1980/107, on an oral proposal by the USSR.

At its May/June session, CPC concluded its review of the process of programme planning in the United Nations (see p. 995) and, in that connexion, considered model medium-term plan programmes on commodities and transnational corporations, on the basis of principles and recommendations formulated at its 1979 session.<sup>6</sup>

In addition, CPC considered revisions to the United Nations medium-term plan for 1980-1983 (see pp. 570 and 1201) and the programme performance of the United Nations for the 1978-1979 biennium (see p. 1199). It also carried out an evaluation of the programme of manufactures of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and related activities in the United Nations Industrial Development Organization. It made recommendations on cross-organizational programme analyses of the United Nations system (see p. 995), in particular those of the energy (see p. 704) and rural development (see p. 563) programmes, and reviewed operational activities (see p. 608), regional co-operation and development activities (see p. 569) and the CORE project (see p. 995).

Referring to restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations system, CPC felt that the Assembly should consider examining the implementation of its 1977 resolution on restructuring<sup>7</sup> to evaluate to what extent the restructuring process had begun to meet better the requirements of the Declaration and the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order,<sup>8</sup> should formulate guidelines for a questionnaire to collect information for that appraisal and should invite the Joint Inspection Unit to co-operate in the appraisal.

As a general recommendation, CPC believed that ACC should devote more attention to substantive questions, rather than administrative and personnel matters being considered by expert bodies.

On 25 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote decision 1980/179 by which it: took note of CPC's report on the work of its 1980 session; decided that human settlements should be excluded from programme areas selected for analysis; recommended that CPC's proposal that guidelines should be formulated for a questionnaire to elicit information from United Nations organizations for an appraisal of the implementation of the 1977 restructuring resolution be ignored; endorsed CPC's other conclusions and recommendations, taking into account its members' reservations and comments, and transmitted CPC's report for consideration by the Assembly at its 1980 session.

The text, sponsored by Ethiopia and Kenya, was revised by the sponsors to take account of oral proposals by the United Kingdom-relating to the wording of the subparagraph indicating provisions in CPC's report which were not to receive Council approval-and an oral amendment by the USSR to add the phrase by which the Council took account of reservations and comments by CPC members. The Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee approved the amended text without vote on 21 July.

After the decision was adopted, the United Kingdom said that the recent establishment of the human settlements programme did not, in its view, justify the programme's exclusion from the proposed study.

Ireland said it did not approve of all CPC's recommendations; it considered that the priority accorded to human rights was too low-a view that had also been expressed by Belgium on behalf of European Economic Community members.

By resolution 35/9 of 3 November, on the medium-term plan for 1980-1983, the Assembly decided to endorse most of CPC's conclusions and recommendations, taking account of reservations and comments, excluding from its endorsement the same elements that the Council had excluded by decision 1980/179 (for further details of the resolution, see p. 1202).

Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC

In accordance with decision 1980/148, adopted without objection on 2 May by the Economic and Social Council on the recommendation of its

<sup>8</sup> See Y.U.N., 1974, pp. 324 and 326, texts of Declaration and Programme of Action, contained in resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974.

Bureau, the fifteenth in the series of Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC was held at Geneva on 1 and 2 July (rather than on 30 June and 1 July as had been previously arranged); they reported their views and conclusions to the Council. Their report, dated 8 July, noted that, as CPC had recommended, the discussions had centred on operational activities for development in connexion with a comprehensive review of those activities being carried out pursuant to the Assembly's 1977 resolution on restructuring<sup>9</sup> (see p. 608).

In addition, the Joint Meetings discussed a report on the implementation of the interagency project register, CORE 1 (see p. 995).

In adopting resolution 35/9 on 3 November, relating to the medium-term plan for 1980-1983, the Assembly reaffirmed its belief that the Joint Meetings, after the necessary preparations envisaged in Council decision 1980/185 (see p. 571), should afford the specialized agencies the opportunity to discuss problems of mutual interest with the appropriate Assembly- and Council-designated intergovernmental body, and asked the Secretary-General and agency heads to ensure their personal participation in those Meetings (for further details of the resolution, see p. 1202).

Co-ordination of programme activities

Planning process, joint planning and cross-organizational programme analysis

Addressing the concept of cross-organizational programme analysis-an approach endorsed by the General Assembly in 1977<sup>10</sup> and intended to facilitate the co-ordination functions of intergovernmental organs by focusing on programme areas where several, organizations of the United Nations system were active, and dispensing with review of individual agencies' programmes- the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC), in its annual overview report for 1979/1980 to the Economic and Social Council, suggested that the experience in preparing such analyses indicated that they fell into two broad types: an overview of a field of activity, such as science and technology or rural development, and a review based on follow-up action to or the need to update earlier analyses. Both types followed a three-phased process of design, data collection and processing, and analysis. Because of the complexity of this process, ACC recommended that a two-year period be allowed to produce an acceptable programme analysis.

In choosing future cross-organizational programme analyses, ACC proposed the following criteria: relevance to as many Governments and to the programmes of as wide a cross-section of organizations as possible; suitability for follow-up activities to major conferences or special years; and their potential for follow-up action from a programme analysis. It analysed programmes in two areas-energy and rural development (see pp. 704 and 563) -and recommended that future analyses should attempt to assess the system's activities more thoroughly, including the identification and distribution of tasks among organizations and a general evaluation of co-ordination of activities at the country level, taking into account recipient countries' views. (For details, see also p. 570.)

In terms of follow-up, the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) felt the area of physical infrastructure, natural resources and environment offered the best potential for joint planning within the system.

Another concern of ACC during the reporting period was interagency follow-up to the Programme of Action adopted by the 1979 United Nations Conference on Science and Technology for Development.<sup>11</sup> Full co-operation and support would be extended by ACC to the Intergovernmental Committee on Science and Technology for Development, including the creation of a Task Force on Science and Technology for Development responsible for preparation and follow-up of Intergovernmental Committee recommendations calling for intersecretariat collaboration; substantive support to ACC consultative committees on science and technology issues; and advice and assistance to the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation.

A major activity was the preparation of a System-Wide Medium-Term Environment Programme, the first step in the preparation of which was to be an agreement on objectives for the period 1984-1989, to be submitted to the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) in 1981. The medium-term Programme-a basic document for United Nations bodies for planning and programming in environment-related matters, encompassing UNEP-supported activities as well as those of an environmental nature included in programmes of organizations of the United Nations system-was to be submitted to that Council in 1982.

The Committee also formulated its views on a Perspective Document requested by the UNEP Governing Council, recommending that the Document should: attempt to define shared perceptions of long-term environmental issues and of efforts needed to deal with the problems of protecting and enhancing the environment, help define a long-term agenda for action during coming decades, and set aspirational goals for the international community.

Reviewing ACC's report at its May/June session, CPC felt that it was not able, on the basis of the cross-organizational programme analyses undertaken thus far, to analyse the effectiveness of programmes in responding to the mandates of intergovernmental bodies and could not, therefore, draw conclusions on the need for co-ordination. The Committee agreed with ACC that a cross-organizational programme analysis should be carried out in public administration and finance for 1982 and expressed general support for marine activities as the subject for such an analysis in 1983.

At its 1980 session, CPC also examined the planning process in the United Nations. Discussion centred on the need to involve regional, sectoral and other organs in the preparation of medium-term plans, the question of priority-setting within the medium-term plans, and the inadequate relationship between priorities and budgetary allocations. The Committee concluded that priority-setting was too complex a matter to be resolved at its current session and accordingly the existing procedure would have to be continued in the programme budget for 1982-1983, based on existing priorities recommended at CPC's 1978 session (see also pp. 570 and 1201).

The Committee also discussed the timetable for preparing the programme budget for 1982-1983—proposing that it be finalized and distributed by the end of April 1981—and the relationship between the work of CPC and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions.

At its second regular 1980 session, the Economic and Social Council considered CPC's report and, by decision 1980/179 of 25 July, endorsed its recommendations (see p. 992).

On 3 November, the Assembly adopted resolution 35/9 on the medium-term plan for 1980-1983, thereby endorsing most of CPC's conclusions and recommendations as they related to programme planning, programming, budgeting and evaluation. It asked CPC to determine new criteria and methods for setting programme priorities, considered that it should not continue to set relative real growth rates, and invited it, in setting programme priorities, to take into account the views on subprogramme priorities of the competent intergovernmental and expert bodies. (For further details of resolution 35/9, see p. 1202.)

Co-ordination of administrative activities

Information systems

At its May/June 1980 session, the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) noted with satisfaction that the interorganizational project register known as CORE 1—the first phase of a Common Register of projects designed to produce a financial analysis of the development expenditures of United Nations organizations by sector and country—had been implemented. However, it felt that, before further development, a thorough examination of CORE 1 was indicated. For the time being, therefore, work should not be started on CORE 2, a more elaborate indexing of activities in development projects.

The Committee noted that the Inter-Organization Board for Information Systems (IOB) was preparing a report for the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) on an alternative approach to CORE 2, involving an assessment of the feasibility of producing a guide to technical co-operation activities in low-income (or least developed) countries, including both multilateral and bilateral activities.

At the July Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC, CPC's recommendations on the project were discussed, and the Joint Meetings noted with appreciation the progress in implementing CORE 1, urging that the project be completed as expeditiously as possible and calling for the participation of all organizations which had not submitted the required data.

For the Joint Meetings, IOB had prepared a report giving a brief explanation of the CORE project and its two component parts (CORE 1 and 2), outlining the approach to 16 organizations requesting input to implement CORE 1, and the responses received, and presenting the results obtained for the United Nations system based on the material they contributed. It also drew some conclusions and raised questions for consideration at the Joint Meetings.

The 16 organizations approached were: United Nations, United Nations Children's Fund, United Nations Development Programme, World Food Programme, United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, International Labour Organisation, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, World Health Organization, International Civil Aviation Organization, Universal Postal Union, International Telecommunication Union, World Meteorological Organization, Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, World Intellectual Property Organization, International Atomic Energy Agency. The file of data for 14 of them included about 12,000 items collected between the second half of 1979 and May 1980. Responding organizations reported incurring input-preparation costs of about $40,000, mostly staff costs, about the same as the cost of the study; thus total cost of the CORE 1 implementation on 1978 expenditures requested by ACC was about $80,000. About 90 per cent of the total 1978 expenditure reported by ACC to the Economic and Social Council was covered by CORE 1 implementation, although it noted that important gaps remained in information collected.

Security and independence of the international civil service

In a statement of 2 April, annexed to its annual report for 1979/1980, ACC noted with concern that certain member States of organizations of the United Nations system had in the past taken measures against international civil servants which threatened their security and obstructed the discharge of their duties.

The Committee said it considered that any infringement of the security and independence of United Nations staff by any member State of an organization of the system was a serious threat to international co-operation. The executive heads of the system's organizations appealed for full government assistance in ensuring respect for the principles to which member States had subscribed.

(See also p. 1140.)

In its report to the General Assembly, CPC took note of ACC's statement, expressing the view that, in order to be completely objective, ACC should have covered all aspects of the independence of the international civil service, including the question of supplementary payments to international officials by their Governments. It noted that the whole question could perhaps be referred to the International Civil Service Commission. It also noted that ACC had agreed, in principle, at the intersecretariat level on the establishment and financing, on a joint basis, of a fund to meet the cost of security measures to protect international staff in emergencies. Proposals in that regard would be submitted to the various intergovernmental bodies for approval.

In an addendum to the annual report, ACC's Organizational Committee noted its review of the position on reservations registered by States with regard to the Conventions on the privileges and immunities of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies.<sup>12</sup> It approved on behalf of ACC a statement on a reservation by China to the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies, relating to section 32 of article IX under which differences arising out of interpretation or application of the Convention were to be referred to the International Court of Justice unless the parties agreed to another mode of settlement. A second statement concerned the application of section 21 of article V of the United Nations Convention and section 19 of the article VI of the specialized agencies Convention, under which the executive heads and specified high officials of the United Nations and specialized agencies were to be accorded, in addition to the immunities and privileges enjoyed by all international officials, the privileges and immunities, exemptions and facilities accorded to diplomatic envoys, in accordance with international law. Certain States, ACC noted with concern, were denying those additional privileges and immunities to officials concerned who were nationals of, or permanently resident in, those States. It was ACC's opinion that this practice introduced an element of discrimination on grounds of nationality, contrary to the concept of an independent international civil service.

Expenditures in relation to programmes

On 6 February 1980, by decision 1980/103, the Economic and Social Council, having considered ACC's 1979 report on expenditures of the United Nations system in relation to programmes,<sup>13</sup> decided that, starting in 1980, such reports should be submitted to it every two years, and no longer contain explanatory notes. This decision, proposed by the Council President in light of consultative meetings of Council members, was adopted without vote.

On 25 July, by decision 1980/184, the Council decided to consider ACC's 1980 report at its resumed second regular session of 1980, in November. The Council took this decision, without vote, as recommended by its Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee, which had similarly approved the text on 22 July, on an oral proposal by its Chairman.

The August 1980 (first biennial) report prepared by ACC showed expenditures of regular budget and extrabudgetary funds of the programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system for the period 1978-1979 ($5,952.1 million) and estimated expenditures for 1980-1981 ($7,173.8 million). It consisted mainly of tables and related footnotes using the revised interorganizational classification of programmes developed by ACC and first used in the 1979 report.

On 7 November, by decision 1980/193, the Council took note of the report. The text, orally proposed by the Council President, was adopted without objection.

Training and research

United Nations Institute for Training and Research

Activities in 1980

During 1980, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (IMOTAR), an autonomous organization within the framework of the United Nations, continued to carry out research, training and related activities in pursuance of its mandate to enhance the effectiveness of the United Nations system, particularly in the maintenance of peace and security and the promotion of economic and social development. The Institute provided practical assistance to the United Nations, its agencies and Member States, with particular emphasis on the problems facing developing countries and on the creation of a new international economic order.

Training activities organized by UNITAR were as follows: programmes on the work and organization of the United Nations, including a seminar for new representatives to the General Assembly; programmes on certain issues before the United Nations, e.g. a seminar on multilateral diplomacy and the new international economic order (Vienna 3-17 May), and a UNITAR/Economic Development Institute of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development seminar on economic development and its international setting (Washington, D. C., 12-27 March); training programmes other than for diplomats, e.g. the UNITAR/Association of International Libraries Second World Symposium on International Documentation (Brussels, 20-22 June); and training services requested by Member States, including assistance in establishing or developing institutes of diplomatic studies in Saudi Arabia and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya. As in previous years, UNITAR continued to administer the United Nations/UNITAR Fellowship Programme in International Law, under which 23 fellowships were awarded in 1980.

The Department of Research was reorganized around two topic clusters: medium-range studies in United Nations policy and efficacy, and studies in regional co-operation. The policy and efficacy studies were done by a core staff with the help of graduate research assistants; the studies in regional co-operation were done by project officers funded by special-purpose grants. Work under way during the year included studies on: the institutional aspects of the new international economic order; the elimination of racism and apartheid; uniform rules applicable to disaster relief operations; the rights of the child; critical assessment of the role and prospects of the International Law Commission; methodological and regional issues in development-related decision-making and forecasting; intraregional migration in the Commonwealth Caribbean and its implications for population policies and development planning; and an evaluation of the liability of States for damage caused through scientific and technological innovations.

The Project on the Future, one of UNITAR's main programme areas, concentrating on long-term problems of socio-economic and technological transformation, continued to focus on policy choices and the supply of energy and natural resources. The programme on policy choices included a project on technology, domestic distribution and North-South relations that developed a global model of the dynamics of the world economy. In the context of this programme a four-man research team was established at Dakar, Senegal, to examine strategies for the future of Africa, and a major conference on alternative development strategies for the future of Asia was held at New Delhi, India, in March. Work on physical limits and supply possibilities of energy and natural resources continued: preparations were begun for the establishment of a UNITAR/United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) information centre on heavy crude oil and tar sands, and preparatory work for conferences included that for a conference on small energy resources, to be held in 1981, and the Second International Conference on Heavy Crude and Tar Sands, scheduled for 1982.

A project on obstacles and opportunities in the establishment of the new international economic order, resulting in 17 volumes, was completed in 1980. The series dealt with functional issues of the new order (finance, industrialization, trade) as well as institutional and cultural aspects and with their application to specific geographic areas. As part of the project, implemented in close collaboration with the Centre for Economic and Social Studies of the Third World in Mexico, a conference on regionalism and the new international economic order was held in New York on 8 and 9 May by UNITAR in co-operation with the Club of Rome. It emphasized the need for: creating regional financial centres to accelerate development and regional bodies to enhance technology transfer; co-ordinating agricultural and fiscal policies to decrease food dependencies and better allocate costs of national subsidies; strengthening educational, scientific and technological facilities; sharing market intelligence and expanding regional markets; and identifying natural resources needed to sustain regional development. Work began during the year on exploring means of translating the conference's conclusions into effective policies.

Following consideration at a mid-term session in New York on 19 and 20 February of a 1979 recommendation of the General Assembly,<sup>1</sup> the UNITAR Board of Trustees approved at its nineteenth session, held in New York from 9 to 12 September, a decision that a United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research should be established within the framework of UNITAR. The Institute was established at Geneva on 1 October as an interim arrangement until the Assembly's 1982 special session devoted to disarmament. (See also p. 113.)

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit

In April 1980, the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) presented a report to the General Assembly, prepared in December 1979, on the organization and staff of UNITAR, its scope and functions, funding, relationships and co-operation, and effectiveness and acceptance. The Inspectors believed that UNITAR was at a crossroads in its development; it should continue, but its role should be better defined and strengthened. The most suitable solution to its funding problems would be to have a core budget financed by the United Nations regular budget, supplemented by voluntary contributions.

The Inspectors recommended that UNITAR should consist of two departments, one for training and one for research.

Co-operation with regional and national training centres should be strengthened, although UNITAR's statutory training function should not be expanded to include United Nations staff training activities.

While the current selection of research projects seemed reasonable, their quantity, breadth, duration and variety could be detrimental to their quality. A better focus of efforts and concentration of resources were needed, and UNITAR should review its capacity to serve as a "think tank" to suggest solutions to world problems.

A recommendation was made to phase out UNITAR's Geneva office. The Inspectors also pointed to the dangers of duplication between UNITAR and the United Nations University (UNU), stressing the need for close co-operation, with the possibility of a meeting between the two organizations to discuss co-ordination and overlap. Relationships with universities and study centres outside the United Nations system should be encouraged.

Finally, the Inspectors recommended that a network strategy, under which UNITAR would serve as a focal and co-ordinating point for the United Nations and United Nations-assisted regional or global institutes working in the fields of peace and development, should be introduced gradually. It was further suggested that UNITAR might be an executing agency for UNDP.

Commenting on the JIU report in an October report, the Secretary-General noted that JIU's recommendations had formed the basis for a fundamental re-examination of UNITAR's performance and future course of action. He stated that the recommendation on financing would do much to place the financing of UNITAR on a firmer basis, allow for long-term planning of quality projects and relieve the Executive Director and his colleagues of the burden of continuous fund-raising.

The Secretary-General pointed out that the Project on the Future and the Research Department were intended to have different orientations, and felt that the suggestion to combine them should be viewed with caution. Similarly, he felt that it would not be advisable to reduce or close down UNITAR's Geneva Office, in view of the substantial training activities carried out there and of the establishment at Geneva of the Institute for Disarmament Research.

The Secretary-General agreed that UNITAR should strengthen co-operative links with similar bodies inside and outside the United Nations system. He believed that co-operation with UNU was an area that would benefit from clearer guidelines drawn jointly by UNU and UNITAR in consultation with him and the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Decisions of the General Assembly

On 5 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted two resolutions on UNITAR, focusing on the report of the Executive Director to the Assembly and financial support for the Institute. In addition, on 10 December, by decision 35/427 (see p. 1236), the Assembly took note with appreciation of JIU's report on UNITAR.

By resolution 35/53 A, the Assembly took note with appreciation of the Executive Director's report on UNITAR activities from 1 July 1979 to 30 June 1980 and of a statement he had made to the Second (Economic and Social) Committee in introducing his report on 2 October outlining the activities of UNITAR for the reporting period. The Assembly welcomed the emphasis, on and urged continuation of the concentration of the work of UNITAR in the sphere of, economic and social training and research, as well as specific projects on problems previously identified by the Assembly.

The Executive Director had pointed out in his statement that UNITAR's budgetary deficit for 1980-1981 was an estimated $1.11 million. The Board of Trustees had recommended the urgent adoption of a new approach to financing: that a grant-in-aid be given to meet the current deficit and that the core staff and service costs as set out in the 1981 and future budgets of UNITAR be subsumed in the regular budget of the United Nations.

By resolution 35/53 B, the Assembly decided that a grant-in-aid should be provided, on an exceptional basis, from the United Nations budget to meet current deficits, requested the Executive Director in the light of JIU's recommendations further to reduce costs and increase the Institute's resources, urged all States that had not contributed to UNITAR to do so, called on all donor States, especially those not contributing at a level commensurate with their capacity, to increase substantially their voluntary contributions, and requested the Executive Director to report to the Assembly in 1981 on steps taken to resolve the problem and on the financial prospects of UNITAR.

These resolutions were introduced by Kuwait and sponsored in a revised version by 27 powers (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below). While the Second Committee had approved the texts jointly on 31 October by 115 votes to 9, with 9 abstentions, the Assembly adopted each separately: resolution 35/53 A was adopted by 126 votes to 9, with 4 abstentions; resolution 35/53 B was adopted by 125 votes to 9, with 6 abstentions. In both bodies, operative paragraph 1 of resolution 35/53 B, containing the decision that a grant-in-aid should be provided from the United Nations budget, was approved by separate votes. In Committee, the vote was taken at the request of the USSR and several other Members; the paragraph was approved by 102 votes to 11, with 18 abstentions. In the Assembly, the paragraph was adopted by 113 votes to 11, with 15 abstentions.

Kuwait, presenting the revised text in Committee, further orally amended the first preambular paragraph of the second resolution to have the Assembly recognize the importance of UNITAR's role in providing training and research for enhancing-rather than ensuring- the effectiveness of the United Nations.

Nigeria, expressing a reservation on the wording of paragraph 2, said it did not seem logical to request the Executive Director to enhance the effectiveness of UNITAR while at the same time asking him to reduce its costs and increase its resources.

Also speaking in Committee in explanation of vote, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic and the USSR, which opposed the second resolution, said the decision to absorb UNITAR's deficit through a grant-in-aid provided from the regular budget would set a dangerous precedent for other bodies with the same status. Brazil, which abstained in the vote on the resolution, invoked the principle that no changes should be made in the statute of institutions with regard to which it had been stipulated, at the time of their establishment, that their activities would be financed from voluntary contributions. A number of other Members, including Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, Ireland, Italy, Japan and the United Kingdom, said they had voted against or abstained on the first operative paragraph because they could not support the budgetary practices involved.

Canada, Liberia and the Netherlands said they believed that UNITAR deserved firmer financial support, and the possibility of providing it with a core budget from the regular budget should be considered.

In accordance with Assembly resolution 35/53 B, a grant-in-aid of $305,700 was provided to UNITAR from the United Nations budget. The deficit of $346,242 as at 31 December 1980 was thus reduced to $40,542.

Voluntary contributions

During 1980, the contributions listed in the tables below were received by UNITAR. In addition, at the 1980 United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities, held at United Nations Headquarters, New York, on 6 and 7 November, pledges to UNITAR for 1981 were made in the amount of $420,816.

United Nations University

Activities in 1980

The year 1980 marked the fifth year of operations for the United Nations University (UNU) following the opening of its headquarters at Tokyo, Japan, in 1975. As UNU began to focus on its next stage, there was also continuity in its original work in research, advanced training and dissemination of knowledge conducted through three programmes-on world hunger, human and social development, and the use and management of natural resources.

In addition to individual programme activities, UNU had two active joint programme projects: the role of women in post-harvest food conservation (world hunger and human and social development programmes) and bioconversion of organic residues for rural communities (world hunger and natural resources programmes).

The University had 28 associated institutions and 112 research and training units carrying out UNU work in more than 60 countries. A total of 85 UNU fellows were in training, and more than 70 workshops, seminars, symposia and meetings were organized by UNU during the year.

On 1 September, Mr. Soedjatmoko, an Indonesian scholar of international development and politics, became Rector of UNU, appointed by the United Nations Secretary-General after consultation with the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). He succeeded James M. Hester the first Rector.

During 1980, the Council of UNU met at Tokyo from 23 to 27 June and from 1 to 5 December, for its fifteenth and sixteenth sessions. At its June session, the Council noted the satisfactory progress achieved during the term of the first Rector and unanimously adopted a resolution of appreciation for his leadership.

Upon assuming office, the new Rector began a broad review of UNU aims and activities; at the December Council meeting, he presented his ideas for UNU's next stage, indicating that any new activities should build on what UNU had achieved to date. He cited three particular clusters of problems as the basis for new UNU consideration and effort: the world economy and the global economic crisis, the management of social transformation, and mankind's preparation for the twenty-first century.

In December, the Council appointed an Ad Hoc Committee on Planning to advise it on the long-term orientation of UNU, on the medium-term plan framework, institutional arrangements, programme evolution and new-activity development, and on criteria for establishing associated institutions, and to review new activities for the medium-term plan, including their order of priority.

In 1980, UNU published more than 100 titles, including five issues of the Food and Nutrition Bulletin and the monthly ASSET (Abstracts of Selected Solar Energy Technology). A new periodical, Mountain Research and Development, was launched. The University also became co-publisher, with the United Nations Department of Public Information, of Development Forum, a publication of the United Nations system in the field of economic and social development (see also p. 479.)

At its 1980 sessions, the Council of UNU considered the matter of the finances and fund-raising, including the recommendations in a 1979 report on fund-raising efforts.<sup>2</sup> The Council noted that it had adopted, as policy, suggestions on several alternative fund-raising possibilities: using funds earmarked by Governments for overseas development, seeking aid from intergovernmental agencies, particularly for fellowships, and from foundations, universities, research institutions and individuals, and participation in the use of the United Nations Interim Fund for Science and Technology for Development. Proposals that Governments commit themselves to annual "interest equivalents" (10 per cent) of their share of the Endowment Fund, that they issue special-purpose "perpetual" bonds for their share and pay interest only, and that they contribute United Nations bonds arising from financing costs of the Congo operations (on which the United Nations annually paid $8.5 million towards redemption in 1990) appeared to the Council to be innovative ways to raise funds for UNU.

As at 31 December 1980, pledges and contributions from 33 States to the Endowment Fund and the General Operating Fund of UNU totalled $143,495,759, of which $109,768,932 had been paid. Contributions received during the year are shown in the table below.

Total expenditures incurred for UNU operations in 1980 were $12,354,317.

Legislative decisions

On 25 July 1980, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1980/187 adopted without vote, authorized the Secretary-General to transmit the report of the UNU Council directly to the General Assembly for consideration. The text was orally proposed by the Council President on the recommendation of the Secretariat.

On 5 December, the Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/54 by which it noted with satisfaction the substantial expansion of UNU programmes, that tangible results of its research and advanced training activities were being produced, and that UNU had intensified collaboration with United Nations agencies and programmes, in particular UNESCO, and other institutions and urged continuation of those efforts.

The Assembly recommended continued broadening of UNU's concern with pressing global problems, for which it should further strengthen the intellectual capability of its Centre in Tokyo. It stressed the need to create a greater awareness of UNU's objectives through effective use of its programmes and networks, thereby stimulating greater financial support.

The Assembly appealed to Member States to take cognizance of UNU's achievements and to contribute generously to its Endowment Fund and, additionally or alternatively, make operating contributions.

This resolution was adopted on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, which approved the text without vote on 31 October.

In the Second Committee, a draft sponsored by Austria, Bangladesh, Ghana, Iceland, India, Indonesia, the Ivory Coast, Japan, Jordan, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, Thailand and Venezuela was withdrawn in favour of a text submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman following informal consultations on the 16-nation draft.

The revised text added a fourth preambular paragraph, proposed by Mongolia, noting UNU's activities in studying the role of new theoretical concepts in human and social development.

Establishment of the University for Peace

The Commission on the University for Peace, established in 1979,<sup>3</sup> met twice in 1980 to prepare, in co-ordination with the Government of Costa Rica, the structure, organization and setting in motion of the University for Peace—a specialized international institution, within the system of the United Nations University (UNU), for post-graduate studies, research and dissemination of knowledge specifically aimed at training for peace. The Commission's first two sessions were held from 16 to 20 June at United Nations Headquarters, New York, and from 4 to 8 September at San José, Costa Rica. It also visited the site proposed for the University in Costa Rica.

The Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly in October on the Commission's work, forwarding its report of 8 September together with his comments on its findings.

The Commission in its report envisaged the University's role to be not only in the field of human rights but also in education through innovation in the analysis and teaching of the causes of conflicts and how to overcome them in the interests of peace. Its special role lay in research, teaching and dissemination of information in education for peace, with special regard to its teaching function. The Commission set no guidelines for running the University, but believed that those aims should be translated into its structure, organization and curricula. The Secretary-General concurred with the Commission's findings in these matters and considered that university bodies should feel free to elaborate further on them; roles of different components of the University could thus be more clearly defined, including that of a proposed International Centre for Documentation and Information for Peace.

The Commission stressed that the University should not disregard ground already consolidated by others, but should approach the broad collection of peace problems more innovatively than other organizations concerned with such problems.

The Commission considered that both the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) should have close ties with the University and that a relationship agreement should be set up with UNU. The Secretary-General welcomed such links.

The Commission recommended that the University be established in accordance with the terms of an international agreement to be endorsed by the Assembly at the same time as a charter governing its operations. The Commission asked the Secretary-General to prepare for Assembly consideration a draft agreement and charter.

An estimated $14 million would be required for the capital and recurrent costs of the University in its initial three-year period. A formula was discussed whereby $5.5 million would be made available annually, by means of a contribution of 10 cents on each barrel of oil purchased by the beneficiaries of a Joint Declaration of the Presidents of Mexico and Venezuela made on 3 August at San Jose, guaranteeing a supply of oil to the beneficiaries and a 30 per cent credit on the oil bill (total oil consumption of countries affected by the Declaration was currently 160,000 barrels daily). The Secretary-General considered that an arrangement of that kind, described to the Commission, would comply with the financial conditions established by the Assembly in 1979 that the constitution and operation of the University should not have financial implications for the United Nations budget or UNU.<sup>4</sup> It was his view, however, that long-term voluntary financing should also be sought from outside the region as a reflection of the international character of the institution.

Although the Commission did not specifically recommend creation of a preparatory commission to undertake interim work, the Secretary-General felt that such a body was necessary pending the establishment of the Council of the University. He recommended that the existing Commission continue as Preparatory Commission of the University.

By a note verbale of 13 October to the Secretary-General, Costa Rica transmitted a resolution supporting the creation of a University for Peace, adopted on 24 September by the sixty-seventh Inter-Parliamentary Conference (Berlin, 14-25 September).

When the Assembly's Second (Economic and Financial) Committee considered the Secretary-General's report, Costa Rica introduced a draft resolution on behalf of 44 sponsors (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below). This draft was later withdrawn by the sponsors and replaced by one submitted by a Committee Vice-Chairman on the basis of informal consultations. The Committee approved the revised text without vote on 31 October. By the 44-power text, the Assembly would have approved the establishment of the University and, in a paragraph immediately following, adopted the International Agreement for the Establishment of the University for Peace and its Charter. In the revised text, which the Assembly adopted without vote on 5 December, the Assembly approved by a single paragraph the establishment of the University in conformity with the International Agreement and the Charter. The Assembly expressed its appreciation to the Costa Rican President and Government for the efforts undertaken to organize and finance the University without burdening the budget of the United Nations or UNU (the revised text had added "in accordance with paragraph 2 (d) of General Assembly resolution 34/111"<sup>5</sup>-which indicated that it should be guaranteed that the University was financed by voluntary contributions and should have no financial implications for the United Nations budget or UNU).

These provisions were contained in resolution 35/55, to which was annexed the International Agreement for the Establishment of the University for Peace; annexed to the Agreement was the Charter of the University. Approving the establishment of the University in conformity with those instruments, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to open the Agreement for signature within 10 days, expressing hope for the widest possible adherence. The Assembly decided to extend the mandate of the Commission, which would act as the University's preparatory body pending establishment of a University Council.

The International Agreement, whose depositary was the Secretary-General, was opened for signature on 5 December, until 31 December 1981, and was signed on that day by Costa Rica and Venezuela. It was to enter into force when signed or acceded to by 10 States from more than one continent.

APPENDIX TO THE CHARTER

General principles formulated by the Commission on the University for Peace established by the General Assembly pursuant to its resolution
34/111 of 14 December 1979

1. The persistence of war in the history of mankind and the growing threats against peace in recent decades jeopardize the very existence of the human race and make it imperative that peace should no longer be viewed as a negative concept, as the end of conflict or as a simple diplomatic compromise, but rather that it should be achieved and ensured through the most valuable and most effective resource that man possesses: education.

2. Peace is the primary and irrevocable obligation of a nation and the fundamental objective of the United Nations; it is the reason for its existence. However, the best tool for achieving this supreme good for humankind, namely education, has not been used.

3. Many nations and international organizations have attempted to attain peace through disarmament. This effort must be continued; yet facts show that man should not be too optimistic as long as the human mind has not been imbued with the notion of peace from an early age. It is necessary to break the vicious circle of struggling for peace without an educational foundation.

4. This is the challenge that now faces all nations and all men as the twenty-first century approaches. The decision must be made to save the human race, which is threatened by war, through education for peace. If education has been the instrument of science and technology, there is all the more reason to use it to achieve this primary right of the human being.

Chapter XXVI

Other economic and social questions

Preservation and development of cultural values, including restitution of cultural and artistic property

The Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly in September 1980 a report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) on that organization's efforts to preserve and develop cultural values, including the protection, restitution and return of cultural and artistic property. Covering the period from May 1978 to May 1980, the report described a number of UNESCO projects. In January research was begun for a publication for the Second World Conference on Cultural Policies, scheduled to be held in 1982, analysing the role of cultural values in contemporary societies. Preparation for two volumes of a history of civilizations in Central Asia began in 1980, and studies were completed or continued on various African, Arab, European and Latin American and Caribbean cultures. The organization continued to help member States to preserve and develop their cultural heritage, and preparatory work for eight new international campaigns to preserve the treasures of mankind had begun, involving monuments and sites in Haiti, Malta, Mauritania, Peru, Senegal, Sri Lanka and Viet Nam, and the heritage of Jesuit missions to the South America Guarani people.

In March a special committee of governmental experts was convened in Paris to prepare a draft recommendation concerning the safeguarding and preservation of moving images.

The first session of the 20-member Intergovernmental Committee for Promoting the Return of Cultural Property to Its Countries of Origin or Its Restitution in Case of Illicit Appropriation was held in 1980 (5-9 May, Paris). As an advisory body it was to facilitate negotiations, promote international co-operation, foster a public information campaign, guide UNESCO planning and programme implementation in this field, and encourage research and studies. A report was prepared for the Committee's consideration on the feasibility of procuring by way of compensation cultural property of a different origin should it be impossible to restore or return the cultural objects sought.

The Director-General also reported on other UNESCO activities related to the return or restitution of cultural property, among which were continued efforts to extend the application of the 1970 Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property (ratified or accepted by 46 member States as of 31 March 1980), and the 1972 Convention concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage (with 51 adherents at 31 March). In connexion with strengthening international co-operation in the campaign against illicit traffic in cultural property, the Director-General stated that a report was being prepared.

On 11 December 1980, the General Assembly adopted, without vote, two resolutions concerned with the preservation of cultural values and the return of cultural property to countries of origin.

By the first, resolution 35/127, the Assembly took note with appreciation of the report of the Director-General of UNESCO, commended that organization for continuing to include in its medium- and long-term plans the problem of the preservation and further development of cultural values and for the results already accomplished and called on it to pursue these efforts, including inscription of the subject on the agenda of the 1982 World Conference on Cultural Policies.

Resolution 35/127 was introduced in the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee by Poland on behalf of 41 sponsors (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below); the Committee approved it without vote on 7 November.

By resolution 35/128, the Assembly commended UNESCO for its work in connexion with the restitution of cultural property, asking the organization to intensify its efforts to help countries find solutions to such problems and urging Member States to co-operate by: drawing up inventories of cultural property existing in their territories and abroad; preventing illicit import, export and transfer of ownership of such property; and drawing up bilateral agreements. The Assembly again invited all Governments to accede to UNESCO'S 1970 Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property, appealed to Member States to encourage mass information media and educational and cultural institutions to arouse greater awareness of the return or restitution of cultural property, and asked the Secretary-General, in co-operation with UNESCO, to mobilize the United Nations information media to alert international public opinion to the question. The Assembly expressed the desire that the 1982 World Conference on Cultural Policies would devote considerable attention to the subject, to improve international cultural co-operation.

Resolution 35/128 was introduced in the Third Committee by Egypt on behalf of 46 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below). After approval of the text, Luxembourg said that the member States of the European Economic Community reaffirmed previously expressed reservations; UNESCO, in their view, was the proper forum for consideration of this question. Japan stated that had there been a vote on paragraph 6, inviting accession to the 1970 Convention, it would have abstained.

The United States said it did not agree with the appeal for encouragement of the mass media to arouse greater awareness of the issue, which the United States felt could be interpreted as a call for governmental involvement in mass information media affairs. The United States supported the principle of returning cultural property under the terms of the 1970 Convention but was opposed to efforts to require Governments to return such property that went beyond the Convention's terms, which did not require restitution of works of art that had entered a country before the date of the Convention's entry into force in that country.

Sweden recorded that, had there been a vote, it would have abstained on both resolutions.

Questions relating to youth

Technical co-operation

During 1980, technical assistance to developing countries for youth-related activities continued through the interregional advisory services programme. The United Nations interregional advisory on youth policies and programmes undertook missions to Bangladesh, Ecuador, Kuwait, the Marshall Islands Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands) the Philippines, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sri Lanka and the United Arab Emirates.

An ad hoc interagency meeting was held at Vienna from 22 to 24 September to consider a cross-organizational programme analysis on youth activities of the United Nations system to be submitted to the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination in 1981.

A revised annotated list of and commentary on the activities of some centres engaged in research and information programmes in the field of youth, prepared by the United Nations Secretariat, was published during the year.

Policies and programmes relating to youth

International Youth Year (1985)

In accordance with a 1979 General Assembly resolution,<sup>1</sup> the Secretary-General reported in 1980 on the activities of the United Nations system relating to the designation of 1985 as International Youth Year: Participation, Development, Peace, and transmitted the replies from the following 21 Member States to his request for suggestions on a specific programme of measures and activities for the preparation and observance of the Year: Argentina, Bahrain, Benin, Burma, Byelorussian SSR, Cyprus, Cuba, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, Finland, France, Japan, Kuwait, Oman, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Rwanda, USSR, United Kingdom. In general, the replies supported the Secretary-General's view that the Year should be a step in a long-term planning and development process and not a one-time event. The first step should, according to the Secretary-General, be the selection of long-term objectives and the preparation of a programme of implementation having 1985 as its target. In 1985, in addition to the activities organized to celebrate the Year, an evaluation of the programme might take place, leading to a revision of long-term objectives.

The report also referred to the current status of the Advisory Committee for the International Youth Year, established by the Assembly in 1979<sup>2</sup> (see below).

By resolution 35/126, adopted without vote on 11 December 1980, the Assembly invited all States, United Nations-related bodies, concerned inter-governmental, non-governmental and youth organizations, to exert all possible efforts for the preparation and observance of the Year and to undertake action in accordance with their experience, conditions and priorities.

Stressing the importance of active participation of youth organizations in activities at all levels, the Assembly requested the Secretary-

General: to prepare, in accordance with Member States' proposals and in consultation with all interested organizations, a draft programme for the preparation and observance of the Year; to convene three sessions of the Advisory Committee before 1985, the first in early 1981, to formulate for the Assembly a programme of activities to be undertaken prior to and during the Year on the basis of the Secretary-General's draft programme; to invite States not members of the Committee as well as specialized agencies, concerned intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations having consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, to participate as observers in the Committee; and to continue, through all the media at his disposal, to give widespread publicity to the activities of the United Nations system in the field of youth and to increase the dissemination of information on youth.

The Assembly invited the Committee to pay particular attention to, and called on it to seek information about the activities of, regional and international meetings dealing with youth or youth questions. The Secretary-General was requested to provide a list of such meetings to the Committee, which was invited to consider being represented at such meetings in consultation with the bodies concerned.

The Assembly appealed to States, organizations and the public to contribute generously to supplement United Nations regular budget funds for the Year, and requested the Secretary-General to take measures for obtaining such voluntary contributions.

Resolution 35/126 was adopted on the recommendation of the Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, which had approved without vote on 7 November a draft introduced by Romania on behalf of 76 sponsors (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

Before approval of the resolution in Committee, the sponsors orally revised their text to incorporate aspects of two joint amendments—one by the Federal Republic of Germany and the Netherlands, and the other by the Netherlands and the United Kingdom. The first added paragraph 5, by which the Secretary-General was requested to invite organizations to participate as observers in the Advisory Committee. To this invitation the resolution's sponsors added States not Committee members and the specialized agencies.

The second amendment sought to replace a paragraph inviting the Committee to be represented in regional and international meetings dealing with youth questions by two paragraphs calling on the Committee to seek information about the activities of such meetings, and requesting the Secretary-General to provide a list of relevant meetings for the Committee, inviting it to consider being represented at such meetings. After further revision by the sponsors, these provisions became paragraphs 7, 8 and 9, by which the Assembly invited the Committee to pay particular attention to (changed from "to be represented in") the meetings, called on it to seek information about their activities, and requested the Secretary-General to provide a list. The two amendments were consequently withdrawn.

By other sponsor oral revisions, a preambular reference to the importance of direct participation of youth in shaping the future of "humanity" was changed to "mankind," a reference to Assembly decision 35/424 of 5 December 1980 was added on international years and anniversaries (see p. 1029), and the invitation in paragraph 1 to exert all possible efforts for preparations and observance of the Year was expanded to extend to the specialized agencies "and all other United Nations bodies."

By the 1979 resolution establishing the Advisory Committee,<sup>3</sup> the Assembly had entrusted the appointment of the Committee's 23 members of to the Third Committee Chairman. In a note of 17 June 1980, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly of a communication of 5 May he had received from the Chairman stating that, owing to disagreement among the regional groups on the distribution of seats, he had been unable to appoint the members. The Chairman listed 24 Member States nominated by the groups.

On 28 October, the Third Committee approved, without objection, a draft decision orally proposed by its Chairman. By this decision, the Assembly, taking into consideration that it had not been possible to appoint the Committee members as directed, would decide that the Committee should be composed of the 24 States listed in the Secretary-General's note of 17 June, on the understanding that that should not set a precedent in the future establishment of similar bodies. The Assembly adopted this text without vote on 11 December as decision 35/318.

In a note of 18 December, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the text of a communication of 12 December which he had received from the Third Committee Chairman, quoting decision 35/318 and stating that he therefore appointed the 24 States as members of the Advisory Committee (for membership, see

Channels of communication

with youth and youth organizations

On 2 May 1980, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/25, by which it stated its awareness of the urgent need for more effective and better co-ordinated arrangements for the work of the United Nations system in the field of youth, and requested the Secretary-General to report through it to the Assembly in 1981 on the implementation of its 1979 resolution requesting him to take measures to that end.<sup>4</sup> The Council also requested him to bring the current resolution to the Assembly's attention at its 1980 regular session in order to permit Member States to comment on the best ways of improving United Nations co-ordination and information in the field.

The Council's Second (Social) Committee had approved the resolution by consensus on 21 April; the text was sponsored by Algeria, Ecuador, Ghana, India, Indonesia, Lesotho, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mexico, Nepal, Pakistan, the Philippines, Romania, Senegal, Turkey, Venezuela, Yugoslavia and Zambia.

In accordance with a 1979 Assembly resolution,<sup>5</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report to the Assembly in 1980 summarizing the views of 19 Member States (Austria, Bahrain, Benin, Burma, Cyprus, Dominica, Egypt, El Salvador, France, Iraq, Japan, Kuwait, Netherlands, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Singapore, Sri Lanka), 20 non-governmental youth organizations, three regional commissions and six United Nations organs on a set of proposed additional guidelines, annexed to the Assembly's resolution, for improvement of channels of communication between the United Nations and youth and youth organizations. The first set of guidelines on the subject had been adopted by the Assembly in 1977.<sup>6</sup>

All respondents supported the additional guidelines and many suggested ways of improving communication. The Secretary-General pointed out that attainment of the objectives of the International Youth Year required a comprehensive, integrated approach to the problems of youth and action in all economic and social sectors and on all levels of policy-making and planning. Strengthened collaboration between the United Nations and the regional commissions and co-ordination of activities by concerned United Nations offices and specialized agencies in the field of youth could help ensure the Year's success. He also made several suggestions to strengthen communication with youth which included exploring setting up a young people's advisory group to advise on a publication of interest to youth, increased financial and technical support to the Geneva Informal Meeting - a grouping of international youth non-governmental organizations and broadening short-term internships at United Nations Headquarters to include the Secretariat's Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs in Vienna and regional commission offices.

Having noted with appreciation the Secretary-General's report, the Assembly, by resolution 35/139 of 11 December, again requested the Secretary-General to implement fully, at the global level, the 1977 guidelines for improving communication channels and requested him to assist Governments and the regional commissions in implementing the guidelines and to promote implementation at national and regional levels.

The Assembly also requested him, in co-operation with United Nations bodies, including the regional commissions, to report to it in 1981 on progress achieved in implementing the guidelines at all levels, and to submit for adoption by the Assembly in 1981 proposals for additional guidelines, consistent with the 1977 guidelines and based on the additional ones of 1979 as well as the Secretary-General's suggestions in reports to the past three sessions of the General Assembly.

Resolution 35/139 was adopted without vote; the Third Committee had approved the text similarly on 7 November, as introduced by Egypt on behalf of 30 sponsors (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below).

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/151 of 17 December 1979 by which it decided to designate 1985 as International Youth Year: Participation, Development, Peace,

Recognizing the profound importance of the direct participation of youth in shaping the future of mankind and the valuable contribution that youth can make in the implementation of the new international economic order based on equity and justice,

Considering it necessary to disseminate among youth the ideals of peace, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, human solidarity and dedication to the objectives of progress and development,

Convinced of the imperative need to harness the energies, enthusiasms and creative abilities of youth to the tasks of nation building, the struggle for self-determination and national independence, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, and against foreign domination and occupation, the economic, social and cultural advancement of peoples, the implementation of the new international economic order, the preservation of world peace and the promotion of international co-operation and understanding,

Emphasizing that the United Nations should give more attention to the role of the young people in the world of today and to their demands for the world of tomorrow,

Recalling the topicality of assessing the needs and aspirations of youth, and reaffirming the importance of current and projected United Nations activities designed to increase the opportunities for youth and for its active participation in national development activities,

Believing that it is urgently desirable to consolidate the efforts of all States in carrying out specific programmes concerning youth and to improve the activities of the United Nations and the specialized agencies in the field of youth, including youth exchanges in the cultural, sporting and other fields,

Reaffirming the necessity for better co-ordination of efforts in dealing with problems confronting young people and in examining the manner in which those problems are being treated by the specialized agencies and by various United Nations bodies,

Considering that the preparation and the observance of the International Youth Year will offer a useful and significant opportunity for drawing attention to the situation, needs and aspirations of youth, for increasing co-operation at all levels in dealing with youth issues, for undertaking concerted action programmes in favour of youth and for involving young people in the study and resolution of major international, regional and national problems,

Confident that the International Youth Year will serve to mobilize efforts at the local, national, regional and International levels in order to promote the best educational, professional and living conditions for young people, to ensure their active participation in the overall development of society and to encourage the preparation of new national and local policies and programmes in accordance with each country's experience, conditions and priorities,

Recognizing that the preparation and the observance of the International Youth Year will contribute to the reaffirmation of the goals of the new international economic order and to the implementation of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

Recalling also in this connexion its decision 35/424 of 5 December 1980 and Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/67 of 25 July 1980 on the question of international years and anniversaries,

Aware that, for the International Youth Year to be successful and to maximize its impact and practical efficiency, adequate preparation and the widespread support of Governments, all specialized agencies, international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the public will be required,

Noting with great satisfaction the interest of Member States, of various United Nations bodies and specialized agencies and youth organizations in the decision to designate 1985 as International Youth Year: Participation, Development, Peace,

1. Invites all States, all the specialized agencies and all other United Nations bodies and the international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned, as well as youth organizations, to exert all possible efforts for the preparation and observance of the International Youth Year and to undertake in this respect specific actions in accordance with their experience, conditions and priorities;

2. Stresses the importance of active and direct participation of youth organizations in the activities organized at the local, national, regional and international levels for the preparation and the observance of the International Youth Year;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare, in accordance with the proposals made by Member States and in consultation with all the specialized agencies and interested international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, as well as youth organizations, a draft programme for the preparation and observance of the International Youth Year;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to convene three sessions of the Advisory Committee for the International Youth Year in the period 1981-1985 so that it may formulate, for consideration by the General Assembly, a specific programme of measures and activities to be undertaken prior to and during the Year on the basis of the draft programme prepared by the Secretary-General;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite the States which are not members of the Advisory Committee, the specialized agencies, the concerned intergovernmental organizations and the concerned non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council to participate as observers in the work of the Advisory Committee;

6. Further requests the Secretary-General to convene the first session of the Advisory Committee in early 1981, to provide it with all necessary assistance and to submit its first report to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session;

7. Invites the Advisory Committee to pay particular attention to regional and international meetings dealing with youth or related to youth questions and requests the Secretary-General to provide every means to assist it in this regard;

8. Calls upon the Advisory Committee, when applying paragraph 7 above, to seek information about the activities of regional and international meetings dealing with youth or related to youth questions;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide a list of relevant meetings for the first session of the Advisory Committee and invites the Committee to consider the question of being represented at such meetings in consultation with the bodies concerned;

10. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to take concrete measures, through all the communications media at his disposal, to give widespread publicity to the activities of the United Nations system in the field of youth and to increase the dissemination of information on youth;

11. Appeals to all States, to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and to the public to make in due time generous voluntary contributions to supplement funds provided under the United Nations regular budget for the costs of the programme of the International Youth Year and requests the Secretary-General to take all appropriate measures for obtaining such voluntary contributions;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its thirty-sixth session the item entitled "International Youth Year: Participation, Development, Peace" and to grant it high priority.

A/34/855, A/35/771. Appointment of members of Advisory Committee for International Youth Year. Notes by Secretary-General.

A/35/632 and Corr.1. Report of Third Committee, draft decision, as orally proposed by Committee Chairman, approved without objection by Committee on 28 October, meeting 35.

Decision 35/318, by which the General Assembly, taking into consideration the fact that it had not been possible to proceed to the appointment of the members of the Advisory Committee for the International Youth Year under Assembly resolution 34/151 of 17 December 1979, decided that the Advisory Committee should be composed of representatives of the twenty-four Member States listed in the note by the Secretary-General of 17 June 1980, on the clear understanding that that should not be regarded as setting a precedent in the establishment of similar bodies in the future, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/632 and Corr.1, adopted without vote by Assembly on 11 December 1980, meeting 92.

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 34/151 of 17 December 1979, by which it decided to designate 1985 as International Youth Year: Participation, Development, Peace,

The elderly and the aged

World Assembly on Aging (1982)

In accordance with a 1978 General Assembly resolution,<sup>7</sup> the Secretary-General in March 1980 presented to the Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council, a draft programme and arrangements for a World Assembly on the Elderly, to be convened in 1982. (In December 1980, by resolution 35/129 (see below), the General Assembly changed the name to the World Assembly on Aging--"the aging" defined as those who were 60 years of age and older.)

The Secretary-General identified the main issues to be considered at the World Assembly as humanitarian and developmental. Humanitarian issues concerned the specific needs of the aging, including health, social welfare, housing and environment, education, the family and income security. Developmental issues addressed the implications for society at large of the increasing numbers and the proportion of older persons in the total population, and concerned the role of the aging in such areas as the relationship between the aging of populations and social and economic development.

With the main objective of the World Assembly being to launch an international action programme aimed at guaranteeing economic and social security to older persons, as well as opportunities to contribute to national development, the Secretary-General elaborated on its purposes and objectives: to focus attention on issues of aging in designing policies and development programmes, to exchange views on dealing with such issues, to consider action needed at national, regional and international levels, and to encourage wider participation in and support for United Nations activities related to aging and give them guidelines and directions. He also outlined the World Assembly's scope, participation, documentation and preparatory work.

On 2 May, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/26, by which it requested the Secretary-General to designate, from outside the United Nations, a full-time Secretary-General for the World Assembly, who would be a recognized expert on the aging and have experience with the United Nations system. It also requested that every effort be made to absorb the costs of this position through existing resources and/or voluntary contributions, without prejudice to the regular programme of social development activities and the proposed activities for the Assembly, as outlined in the Secretary-General's report.

The Council recommended that the General Assembly should approve the Secretary-General's proposals on the World Assembly and should: authorize him to implement those proposals; establish an advisory committee for the World Assembly of not more than 23 Member States, designated by the Chairman of the Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee after consultation with the regional groups, based on equitable geographical distribution; request the Secretary-General to convene the advisory committee as early as possible in 1981 at Vienna to prepare, in consultation with Member States, a draft international plan of action in time for that committee's consideration, and, before, during and after the World Assembly, to bring to public attention its issues, deliberations and recommendations; call on Governments, specialized agencies, regional commissions and non-governmental organizations to participate in the preparatory work and in the Assembly itself; recommend that the agencies particularly concerned with a broad area within the Assembly's purview should designate staff to serve as focal points to ensure full co-operation with the Secretariat; request the regional commissions to co-operate in the preparations and to convene meetings to promote national and regional activities; and request the World Assembly to submit proposals and recommendations to the Assembly's 1982 session, if possible.

Resolution 1980/26 was approved without vote by the Council's Second (Social) Committee on 30 April. Its text was first orally revised by its sponsors (Malta, Nepal, United States) to add to the recommendation that the Secretary-General be asked to prepare a draft plan of action the clause "in consultation with Member States," and to recommend that agencies concerned with a broad area within the Assembly's purview should "designate," rather than "be able to assign," staff to serve as focal points. The sponsors also accepted an Indian oral amendment to paragraph 2 to indicate that the efforts made to absorb the costs of the Assembly's Secretary-General would be without prejudice to the regular programme "of social development activities" rather than the regular programme "on aging."

Speaking after approval, Belgium said it doubted the necessity of a full-time Assembly Secretary-General; the USSR saw no need to establish either such a post or an advisory committee. Belgium and Sweden felt that asking that the person be appointed from outside the United Nations infringed the prerogative of the United Nations Secretary-General.

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/129, by which it adopted the Council's recommendations in resolution 1980/26 and called on the Secretary-General to take measures to enable the Secretariat's Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, in co-operation with the specialized agencies and organizations concerned, to undertake all necessary preparatory and follow-up activities of the World Assembly. It decided to change the name of that Assembly to the World Assembly on Aging in view of the interrelatedness of the issues of aging individuals and the aging of populations.

The General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to establish a voluntary fund for the World Assembly, appealed to Member States to make contributions to the fund, and asked the Secretary-General to launch a campaign to establish an emblem for the World Assembly. It invited the United Nations Fund for Population Activities to continue to provide financial support to the preparatory work for the World Assembly as well as to the implementation of the international plan of action resulting from it. It also invited Member States to consider establishing national committees for the Assembly and to conduct activities at the national level along the lines of the Secretary-General's programme and in conformity with the culture, customs and traditions of each country, and requested the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly a progress report on preparations.

The draft of resolution 35/129 had been approved without vote on 7 November by the General Assembly's Third Committee; it was sponsored by Algeria, Austria, Barbados, Bolivia, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Egypt, Guatemala, Guyana, Iceland, India, Lebanon, Malta, Mauritania, Morocco, Nepal and the Philippines.

In the Committee the sponsors had orally revised their text to delete a paragraph approving the Secretary-General's proposals in his report, including the financial and administrative arrangements. The Federal Republic of Germany and the United Kingdom expressed reservations regarding the resolution's financial implications; the USSR's position was that the resolution should have no such implications for the United Nations budget.

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming General Assembly resolution 33/52 of 14 December 1978, by which the Assembly decided to organize a World Assembly on the Elderly in 1982, as a forum to launch an international action programme aimed at guaranteeing economic and social security to older persons, as well as opportunities to contribute to national development,

Recognizing the interdependence and interrelationship of humanitarian and development aspects with regard to the well-being of the aging within the general population, and being aware, in particular, of the importance of finding practical and effective ways and means of strengthening the role of the aging within the family,

Recognizing that the World Assembly on the Elderly should be conceived as an important means of stimulating and providing guidelines for action by national Governments and international organizations,

Taking note with appreciations of the report of the Secretary-General on the proposed programme and arrangements for the World Assembly on the Elderly,

Concerned that the preparation for the World Assembly on the Elderly should be given the full attention that it warrants. at the highest levels, in view of the importance of the question,

Bearing in mind the provisions of General Assembly resolution 34/225 of 20 December 1979,

Believing that it would be desirable for the person in charge of arrangements for the World Assembly on the Elderly to be able to devote full time and attention to the preparations for the Assembly and to the Assembly itself,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to designate, from outside the United Nations, a full-time Secretary-General for the World Assembly on the Elderly, who shall be a recognized expert on the aging and shall have experience with the United Nations system;

2. Requests that, concurrently with the implementation of the provisions of General Assembly resolution 34/225, every effort should be made to absorb the costs associated with the establishment of the position of Secretary-General of the World Assembly on the Elderly through existing resources and/or voluntary contributions, without prejudice to the regular programme of social development activities and the proposed activities for the Assembly, as outlined by the Secretary-General in his report;

3. Recommends that the General Assembly should approve the proposals of the Secretary-General regarding the World Assembly on the Elderly and should:

(a) Authorize the Secretary-General to undertake the measures required to implement these proposals;

(b) Decide to establish an advisory committee for the World Assembly on the Elderly composed of not more than twenty-three Member States, designated by the Chairman of the Third Committee of the General Assembly after consultation with the different regional groups, on the basis of equitable geographical distribution;

(c) Request the Secretary-General to convene the advisory committee as early as possible in 1981 at the Vienna International Centre, to ensure that the preparations for the World Assembly on the Elderly shall be well under way by early 1981 and to advise him on all matters stated in his programme;

(d) Request the Secretary-General, in consultation with Member States, to prepare a draft international plan of action in time to be considered by the advisory committee;

(e) Request the Secretary-General to take the necessary steps before, during and after the World Assembly on the Elderly to bring to public attention the issues before it, as well as its deliberations and recommendations;

(f) Call upon Governments, specialized agencies, regional commissions and non-governmental organizations to participate fully in the preparatory work for the World Assembly on the Elderly and in the Assembly itself;

(g) Recommend that specialized agencies which are particularly concerned with a broad area within the purview Of the World Assembly should designate staff members to serve as focal points to ensure full co-operation and co-ordination with the Secretariat;

(h) Request the regional commissions to give the fullest possible co-operation to the Secretary-General in the preparations for the World Assembly on the Elderly and to convene regional meetings in order to promote national and regional activities in this field;

(i) Request the World Assembly on the Elderly to submit, if possible, such proposals and recommendations as it deems appropriate to the General Assembly at its thirty-seventh session;

4. Requests that an item entitled "World Assembly on the Elderly" should be included in the provisional agenda of the thirty-sixth session of the General Assembly and that the Secretary-General should prepare a progress report on the preparations for the World Assembly.

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/26 of 2 May 1980 concerning the World Assembly on the Elderly,

Recalling, in particular, paragraph 3 of its resolution

33/52, in which it requested the Secretary-General to elaborate, in consultation with Member States, the specialized agencies and organizations concerned, a draft programme for the World Assembly on the Elderly,

Desiring that the World Assembly on the Elderly should result in societies responding more fully to the socio-economic implications of the aging of populations and to the specific needs of older persons,

Appreciating the leading role of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat in preparing for the World Assembly on the Elderly,

Appreciating also the financial support of the United Nations Fund for Population Activities in the preparatory work for the World Assembly on the Elderly,

Stressing that the World Assembly on the Elderly is a significant event through which a long-term programme of action can be launched,

Having considered with satisfaction the report of the Secretary-General on the draft programme for the World Assembly on the Elderly,

1. Calls upon the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures to enable the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, in close co-operation with the specialized agencies and organizations concerned, to undertake all the necessary preparatory and follow-up activities of the World Assembly on the Elderly;

2. Adopts the recommendations of the Economic and Social Council contained in its resolution 1980/26;

3. Decides to change the name of the World Assembly on the Elderly to the World Assembly on Aging in view of the interrelatedness of the issues of aging individuals and the aging of populations as defined by the Secretary-General's draft programme;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to establish a voluntary fund for the World Assembly on Aging and to inform Member States of the existence of the fund;

5. Appeals to Member States to make in due time generous voluntary contributions to the Fund for the World Assembly on Aging;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to launch a campaign, as soon as possible, to establish an appropriate emblem for the World Assembly on Aging;

7. Invites the United Nations Fund for Population Activities to continue to provide financial support to the preparatory work for the World Assembly on Aging as well as to the implementation of the international programme of action which would result from the Assembly;

8. Invites Member States to consider establishing national committees for the World Assembly on Aging and to conduct activities at the national level along the lines of the Secretary-General's programme and in ways that are in conformity with the culture, customs and traditions of each country;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its thirty-sixth session an item entitled "World Assembly on Aging" and requests the Secretary-General to prepare a progress report on the preparations for the World Assembly on Aging, including the report of the Advisory Committee for the World Assembly on Aging, whose establishment was recommended by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 1980/26, to be considered under this item.

International Development Strategy

On 5 December 1980, the General Assembly, by resolution 35/56 (see p. 499), adopted the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade, setting out policy measures to be taken by States and the United Nations in the transport sector. The international community was to: continue enabling developing countries to expand their merchant fleets towards reaching a 20 per cent share of the dead-weight tonnage of the world merchant fleet by 1990; assist those countries expand ports and related inland transport facilities and maritime training infrastructure, and in developing shipbuilding and ship-repairing capacities; support road and railway transport sectors in developing countries; support regional co-operation, especially in the implementation of the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa (1978-1988) (see p. 761); and explore ways to increase financing for development of the transport sector. Developing countries were to be enabled to make major advancements in air transport, particularly air cargo transport, with particular attention to be given to eliminating discriminatory practices in civil aviation.

(For text of relevant provisions (section III I) of the Strategy, see p. 515.)

Convention on International Multimodal Transport of Goods

The United Nations Conference on a Convention on International Multimodal Transport was reconvened, under the auspices of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), from 8 to 24 May 1980 at Geneva. The first part of the session had been held in November 1979.<sup>8</sup> The officers and structural organization of the resumed session, attended by representatives of 85 member States of UNCTAD, were the same as those at the first part,<sup>9</sup> except that Yugoslavia replaced India as a Vice-President.

At the final meeting on 24 May, the Conference approved the reports of the Chairmen of its First and Second Committees, annexed them to its own report and adopted by consensus the United Nations Convention on International Multimodal Transport of Goods and the Final Act of the Conference. The Convention consisted of a preamble together with 40 articles, divided into eight parts.

Part I (articles 1 to 14) gave definitions of terms and described the scope of the Convention's application, and established its mandatory application; the Convention was not to affect national regulation and control of multimodal transport. "International multimodal transport" was defined as the carriage of goods under a single contract by at least two modes of transport between different countries, where the place for taking charge of the goods or their delivery by the multimodal transport operator, as provided for in the contract, was located in a contracting State. A "multimodal transport operator" was defined as a person who concluded a multimodal transport contract and who acted as a principal, not as an agent or on behalf of the consignor or of the carriers participating in the multimodal transport operations, and who assumed responsibility for the performance of the contract. Also defined were the multimodal transport contract and document, consignor and consignee, goods, international convention, mandatory national law, and writing, i.e. telegram or telex.

Part II (articles 5 to 13) established rules regarding the multimodal transport document to be issued by the operator when the goods were taken in charge by him and which, at the option of the consignor, would be in either negotiable or non-negotiable form.

Part III (articles 14 to 21) established a uniform basis of liability for the operator concerning loss resulting from loss of or damage to the goods, as well as delay in delivery. It also set limits of liability for such loss which were to apply unless loss of or damage to the goods occurred during one particular stage of the multimodal transport in respect of which an applicable international convention or mandatory national law provided a higher limit of liability, in which case the higher limit was to apply.

Part IV of the Convention concerned the liability of the consignor. Article 22 laid down that the consignor would be liable for loss sustained by the operator if such loss was caused by the fault or neglect of the consignor. Article 23 set forth special rules for dangerous goods.

Part V (articles 24 to 27) set out requirements regarding notice of loss, damage or delay, the time-limit set on legal proceedings, and provisions regarding legal jurisdiction and arbitration. Unless notice of loss or damage was given in writing by the operator to the consignor not later than 90 days after the occurrence of such loss or after the delivery of the goods, whichever was later, the failure to give such notice would be prima facie evidence that the operator had sustained no loss or damage due to the fault of the consignor.

Part VI (articles 28 to 31) dealt with contractual stipulations and the relationship of the Convention to other conventions dealing with the transport of goods. It was specified that the unit of account to be used when computing the limit of operator liability was to be the special drawing right, as defined by the International Monetary Fund.

Part VII (article 32) stipulated that, subject to provisions of national law or regulations and inter-governmental agreements, the customs transit of goods would be in accordance with the rules and principles contained in the annex to the Convention.

Part VIII (articles 33 to 40) concerned the depositary (the Secretary-General), signature, ratification, acceptance and approval of and accession to the Convention, its entry into force and date of application, arrangements for amending it, rights and obligations under existing conventions, and denunciation. The Convention was opened for signature from 1 September 1980 to 31 August 1981 at United Nations Headquarters, New York, and for accession by all States not signatories. It was to enter into force one year after 30 States had either signed it not subject to ratification, acceptance or approval or had deposited instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession. No reservations could be made.

The General Assembly, by resolution 35/60 of 5 December, noted with satisfaction the adoption of the Convention and urged all Governments to consider signing it and taking the necessary steps to become contracting parties as expeditiously as possible. (For further details of resolution, see p. 637.)

After the approval of the draft by the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, France, Greece, Japan, Spain and the United Kingdom reiterated statements they had made at the time the Convention was adopted.

Japan had said that the adoption of a uniform system of liability altered existing practices based on a network approach and would substantially increase transportation costs, affect trading interests and possibly conflict with other transport conventions—a view shared by Greece. Japan and the Netherlands had said their participation in the consensus adoption should not be regarded as acceptance of the principles of the Convention; the Netherlands believed that only a complete network system for localized damage was satisfactory for multimodal transport.

France, which also supported the network system, had said some provisions were contradictory to French legal principles. Along with the United Kingdom, it believed that it was inappropriate and undesirable that a private law convention should include public law provisions. The United Kingdom had not been persuaded that the Convention was the best way to further the common objective of encouraging multimodal transport and world trade, and felt that it made inadequate provision for the legal position of the actual carrier. Spain had also felt there was some imbalance in the Convention, such as the preponderant role ascribed to the consignor to determine the nature of the recourse to the contract, too high a limit of liability, and legal uncertainty in provisions on conflict between conventions.

Container standards for international multimodal transport

The UNCTAD Committee on Shipping at its ninth session, held at Geneva from 1 to 12 September 1980, adopted a programme of work in the field of multimodal transport and containerization. In the short term, the Committee would consider the establishment of indigenous multimodal transport operators in developing countries, technological developments in unitization of cargo in multimodal transport, and container standards for such transport. In the medium term, it would consider the relationship between partners in international multimodal transport and the institutional framework of such transport, the economics of unitization and adequacy of service, technological developments, and technical co-operation and interregional seminars.

By the above decision, adopted on 12 September, the Committee requested the UNCTAD secretariat to prepare studies for the Committee, giving priority to: the relationship between multimodal transport operators, actual carriers and shippers; national policy measures concerning multimodal transport operations and containerization; unitization and containerization of the main primary products traded by developing countries; how different developing countries had adapted containerization to their needs and how new transport technologies could best be adapted to their requirements; and a review of studies and activities of other institutions within the United Nations system and of intergovernmental organizations concerning technical assistance and financing. The secretariat was also requested to report on the liner conference practices in relation to container tariff rules and the feasibility of preparing model rules, and to analyse experience in multimodal transport operations.

World Communications Year (1983)

The Secretary-General submitted to the Economic and Social Council at its July 1980 session a report on World Communications Year, submitted in accordance with a 1979 Council decision.<sup>10</sup> The report summarized the views of 16 Member States (Bulgaria, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Jamaica, Jordan, Kuwait, Luxembourg, Mexico, Niger, Nigeria, Poland, Sweden, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Kingdom) on the Secretary-General's proposals on the scope, programme of activities, organizational structure and financial implications for the Year, which he had submitted to the Council in 1979.<sup>11</sup> It also contained a suggestion from the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) that the title of the Year should be extended by the addition of "Development of Communications Infrastructures."

The Council's Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee considered the report together with a draft decision proposed by the Chairman. By this decision, the Council would have decided that: 1983 would be appropriate for the celebration of the Year, provided that arrangements for its financing had been made, based in principle on voluntary contributions; the programme of activities and the scope of the Year would follow the Secretary-General's 1979 proposals and would focus on communications infrastructures; and ITU should be designated as the lead agency, be requested to further preparations and mobilize the necessary budgetary resources, and be requested to submit to the Council in 1981 a report on the state of preparations and the financial resources available, to enable the Council to make an appropriate proposal to the General Assembly.

On 18 July, the Chairman informed the Committee that, since there was no consensus on his draft decision, the text was withdrawn.

On 22 July, the Committee approved by consensus a draft resolution sponsored by Barbados, Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Lesotho, Morocco, Nepal, Nigeria, Senegal, Somalia, the Sudan and the United Republic of Tanzania. The Council adopted the text without vote on 25 July as resolution 1980/69.

By this resolution, the Council recommended to the General Assembly 1983 as an appropriate year for the celebration of World Communications Year, provided that arrangements for its financing had been made, based on the principle of voluntary contributions. It also recommended that the programme of activities and the scope of the Year should be based on activities at the national and international levels and focus on communications infrastructures, and further that the Secretary-General continue consultations with Governments on the content of the programmes of activities and their evaluation and submit to the Council in 1981 revised proposals on programmes for the Year.

The Council requested that the Secretary-General's 1980 report be submitted to the Administrative Council of ITU for consideration and, with ITU's comments, be submitted to the Council in 1981. It recommended that ITU be designated as the lead agency for the Year and be responsible for co-ordinating the interorganizational aspects of the programmes and activities of other United Nations organizations, and that it proceed with preparations and mobilize the resources necessary to meet the Year's budgetary requirements, reporting to the Council in 1981 on preparations and resources available and on programmes that might be of interest to developing countries. The Council further requested that, in making preparations, due account be taken of the Year's importance as an event near the mid-point of the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa (1978-1988)

(see p. 761), that the Secretary-General of ITU be designated as co-ordinator of the United Nations system for the Year, and that the ITU secretariat serve as the secretariat for the Year.

Prior to approval of the text in the Third Committee, the sponsors made drafting changes and accepted oral amendments by the USSR. By these amendments: in paragraph 1 on the date for observance of the Year, the Council recommended to the Assembly, rather than decided, that 1983 would be appropriate; in paragraph 3, the text of what had been a preambular paragraph was inserted so that the Secretary-General would continue consultations with Governments, "taking into account the relevant sections of the guidelines for future international years" (the guidelines were annexed to Council resolution 1980/67 of 25 July, for details of which see p. 1028); and a phrase was added to paragraph 6 whereby the ITU secretariat should serve as the secretariat for the Year.

Following the Committee's approval of the text, the USSR said that, in view of the strong interest expressed by developing countries, particularly those from Africa, in the celebration of a World Communications Year, it had joined in the consensus, although it continued to have doubts about the practical usefulness of the decision.

The representative of ITU expressed appreciation of the confidence shown in the Union by the recommendation that it be designated as lead agency. The project had not only been the subject of Assembly and Council resolutions, but had also been approved by the Universal Postal Congress of the Universal Postal Union, and the Administrative Council of ITU had been responsible for the proposal that 1983 be designated as the appropriate year within the Transport and Communication Decade. Other specialized agencies had also expressed interest in various aspects of the Year, he said.

The Assembly's Second Committee had before it, during its consideration of the 1980 report of the Economic and Social Council, a draft resolution on World Communications Year, sponsored by Burundi, the Central African Republic, the Congo, Ethiopia, Kenya, Lesotho, Morocco, Nepal, Nigeria, Rwanda, Somalia, the Sudan, the United Republic of Cameroon and the United Republic of Tanzania. The Committee approved this text without vote on 14 October and the Assembly adopted it, also without vote, on 5 December as resolution 35/109.

The Assembly thereby endorsed the Council's arrangements for the Year, as outlined in Council resolution 1980/69, and requested it to make proposals to the Assembly in 1981 following its evaluation of the report on the state of preparations and, in particular, on the financial resources that would be available and on programmes that might be of interest to the international community, particularly the developing countries.

Following approval of the resolution in the Second Committee, the USSR said it had not opposed the resolution since it did not affect the celebration of the Year in 1983; however it reiterated the reservations it had expressed in the Council.

Transport of dangerous goods

The Committee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods, at its eleventh session held at Geneva from 1 to 10 December 1980, stressed the world-wide value of the United Nations Recommendations on the transport of dangerous goods, as well as the importance of keeping them up to date. As for an international convention covering all modes of transport, the Committee decided, endorsing a decision of the Group of Rapporteurs, that greater harmonization of existing rules with the Recommendations should be achieved before giving priority to such a convention. The USSR expressed regret at that decision. The Committee agreed unanimously that co-operation with other international organizations was essential and that reciprocal participation in each other's activities would and should continue to achieve a greater harmonization of existing regulations.

On the basis of the reports of the Group of Experts on Explosives on its 1979 and 1980 sessions, the latter held from 4 to 8 August, the Committee adopted a scheme of procedures for testing substances which might have explosive properties. The Committee took various other decisions concerning enumeration and classification of explosive substances and, as a consequence, restructured one chapter of the Recommendations. Basic provisions for the loading and carriage of explosives in freight containers were formulated of particular interest to the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO) since shipping in freight containers had become almost universal.

As a result of four sessions of its Group of Rapporteurs—two in 1979 and two in 1980 (11 to 22 February and 11 to 15 August)—the Committee adopted several new listings for radioactive substances and pesticides, among other dangerous goods. As for packaging regulations, the Committee, bearing in mind the desirability of harmonization with IMCO's Code on international maritime dangerous goods, took decisions on multimodal tank containers. Agreement was also reached on, among other things, organic peroxides, labelling and consignment procedures.

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 32/160 of 19 December 1977 on the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa, in paragraph 5 of which, in view of the importance of transport and communications to other regions of the world, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General, in consultation with the International Telecommunication Union and other specialized agencies concerned, to propose for consideration one year during the Decade as World Communications Year,

Recalling also Council decision 1979/63 of 3 August 1979 on the World Communications Year, whereby the Council requested the Secretary-General to consult with Member States on the scope, proposed programme activities and organizational structure for the Year and to report thereon to the Council at its second regular session of 1980.

Recognizing the fundamental importance of the communications infrastructure as an essential element in the economic and social development of all countries,

Convinced that a World Communications Year would provide the opportunity for all countries to undertake an in-depth review and analysis of their policies on communications development and stimulate the accelerated development of communications infrastructures,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General, containing the proposed programme of activities for the World Communications Year, and the comments thereon,

1. Recommends to the General Assembly 1983 as an appropriate year for the celebration of World Communications Year, provided that the arrangements necessary for its financing have been made, based on the principle of voluntary contributions;

2.. Recommends also that the programme of activities and the scope of the Year should be based on activities at the national and international levels and should focus on communications infrastructures;

3. Further recommends that the Secretary-General, taking into account the relevant sections of the guidelines for future international years, should continue consultations with Governments on the content of the programmes of activities and their evaluation and should submit to the Council, at its second regular session of 1981, revised proposals on programmes for the Year;

4. Requests that the report of the Secretary-General should be submitted to the Administrative Council of the International Telecommunication Union for consideration and that both the report and the comments of the Administrative Council should be submitted to the Economic and Social Council at its second regular session of 1981;

5. Recommends also that the International Telecommunication Union should be designated as the lead agency for the Year and should bear the responsibility for co-ordinating the interorganizational aspects of the programmes and activities of other agencies, and as the lead agency should, in co-operation with other organizations concerned within the United Nations system, proceed with preparations and, in particular, mobilize the resources necessary to meet the budgetary requirements for the Year;

6. Further requests that, in making preparations for the Year, due account should be taken of the importance of the Year as an event near the mid-point of the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa, and that the Secretary-General of the International Telecommunication Union should be designated as the co-ordinator of the United Nations system for the World Communications Year and the secretariat of the International Telecommunication Union should serve as the secretariat for the Year;

7. Requests the lead agency to submit to the Council, at its second regular session of 1981, a report on the state of preparations for the Year and, in particular, on the financial resources that are available and programmes that may be of interest to developing countries, in order to enable the Council to make appropriate proposals to the General Assembly.

International tourism

During 1980, the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) maintained co-operation with the World Tourism Organization (WTO), which was responsible for technical co-operation projects in the field of international tourism, in the context of area development planning.

A seminar/workshop on investment and financing of tourism development projects and related infrastructures (Phuket, Thailand, 19-25 February), was organized by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) in co-operation with WTO. Following

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 32/160 of 19 December 1977 on the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa, in which it requested the Secretary-General, in consultation with the International Telecommunication Union and other specialized agencies concerned, to propose for consideration, as appropriate, one year during the Decade as a World Communications Year, in view of the importance of transport and communications to other regions of the world,

Noting Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/69 of 25 July 1980, in which the Council recommended 1983 as an appropriate year for the celebration of World Communications Year, provided that the arrangements necessary for its financing had been made, based on the principle of voluntary contributions,

1. Endorses the arrangements made by the Economic and Social Council concerning the programmes, organization, co-ordination and mobilization of resources to meet the requirements for a World Communications Year, as outlined in Council resolution 1980/69;

2. Requests the Economic and Social Council to make appropriate proposals to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session, following its evaluation of the report on the state of preparations for the World Communications Year, in particular on the financial resources that will be available and on programmes that may be of interest to the international community, particularly the developing countries.

International co-operation in cartography

Activities in 1980

During 1980, the main technical co-operation activities in cartography, including short-term advisory missions, were geared to strengthening national capabilities in surveying, mapping, hydrography, photogrammetry and map production, and support to mapping agencies, training institutions and remote-sensing services. The United Nations Secretariat Department of Technical Co-operation for Development: planned for a project in China concerning establishment of a remote-sensing system funded by the Interim Fund for Science and Technology for Development; planned for an interregional project, funded by the Interim Fund, on satellite data for resources development; supported a United Nations Development Programme project in Mozambique for a national facility to interpret remotely sensed geologic data; and provided technical advice and staff support to preparatory assistance missions for programmes in remote sensing, using existing facilities within the respective regions.

Under the United Nations programme of technical assistance, 23 experts were assigned to Fiji, Guyana, Jamaica, Jordan, Madagascar, Nepal, the Philippines, and Trinidad and Tobago in all branches of cartography, i.e. geodesy, photogrammetry, land and cadastral surveying, map reproduction and printing, and hydrography; 28, fellowships were awarded for studies in cartography, surveying and mapping, topography, remote sensing and photogrammetry.

Regional cartographic conferences

Ninth Regional Cartographic Conference for Asia and the Pacific

The Ninth United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for Asia and the Pacific, held at Wellington, New Zealand, from 11 to 22 February 1980, was attended by 150 representatives and observers from 38 countries and territories, and seven intergovernmental and international scientific organizations. The Conference elected Ian F. Stirling (New Zealand) as President, Tiavolo Seumanutafa (Samoa) and Andreas Christofi (Cyprus) as First and Second Vice-Presidents, respectively, and A. B. Basnyat (Nepal) as Rapporteur.

Four technical committees were established to review the latest techniques and developments in cartography. These were Committees I to IV, dealing with, respectively: geodesy (including satellite geodesy) and topographic mapping (including satellite imagery and conventional photography); thematic and small-scale mapping (including remote-sensing applications) and preparation and reproduction of maps (including automation, communication and geographical names); cadastral surveying and urban mapping (including land information systems); and hydrographic surveying and nautical charting. The plenary Conference considered technical assistance, including training, and national reports on the subject.

On 22 February, the Conference adopted 24 resolutions stressing, in particular, the need for hydrographic and cadastral surveying and land information systems (including education and training), an increased use of satellites for geodetic purposes (including the definition of maritime boundaries) and for natural resources exploration, and an improved and larger exchange of information and co-ordination of activities, including technical assistance among the countries of the region. Other resolutions concerned the standardization of geographical names, the holding of workshops and seminars on land and hydrographic surveying, the setting up of an advisory panel on cadastral surveying and mapping and the establishment of an expert working group on space cartography.

Third Regional Cartographic Conference for the Americas (1984)

The Secretary-General submitted a report to the Economic and Social Council at its April/May 1980 session on the Second United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for the Americas, which had been held in September 1979.<sup>12</sup> The Secretary-General outlined the Conference's decisions and recommendations and suggested that the Council might wish to endorse the recommendation that the Third Conference be held in 1984, to accept the offer of either Argentina or Chile to be the host country and to request him to take measures to implement the Second Conference's recommendations.

On 28 April 1980, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1980/14 on a proposal by Argentina, the Bahamas, Barbados, Brazil, Chile, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Mexico, Spain, Trinidad and Tobago, and Venezuela.

The Council thereby decided to accept Argentina's offer to host the Third United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for the Americas. It requested the Secretary-General to arrange for the Conference to be held at Buenos Aires for two weeks during the first half of 1984 and ensure that invitations were sent to United Nations Member States or members of specialized agencies and other interested international organizations. It further requested him to take measures to implement the Second Conference's recommendations, taking into account opinions expressed at the Council's April/May session, and to submit to the Council in 1981 an interim report on measures adopted to that end.

The Council expressed appreciation for the work in cartography carried out by the Pan-

American Institute of Geography and History at Santiago, Chile, invited international bodies to co-ordinate their activities in this field so as to avoid duplication and provide greater support to development plans of countries of the region, and requested the Secretary-General to take steps to co-ordinate co-operation between the Institute and the Cartography Section of the United Nations Secretariat.

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the Second United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for the Americas, held at Mexico City from 3 to 14 September 1979,

Expressing its appreciation for the valuable contribution made by the Conference to the promotion of cartographic work conducted in the countries of the region for the purposes of their economic and social development plans,

Noting the recommendations of the Conference that the Third United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for the Americas should be held in 1984 so as not to coincide with the meeting of the Directing Council of the Pan-American Institute of Geography and History and its commissions, which is to be held in 1982,

Noting with appreciation that the Governments of both Argentina and Chile have offered to act as host for the Conference,

Noting further that Santiago will be the venue of the meeting of the General Assembly of the Pan-American Institute of Geography and History,

1. Decides to accept the offer of the Government of Argentina to act as host and to afford full co-operation to the Third United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for the Americas, which will be held in 1984;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 31/140 of 17 December 1976, to ensure that the Conference is held at Buenos Aires for two weeks during the first half of 1984 and, in particular, that invitations are sent to the Governments of the States Members of the United Nations or members of specialized agencies and other interested international organizations;

3. Further requests the Secretary-General to take, as appropriate, practical measures for the implementation of the recommendations of the Second United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for the Americas, taking fully into account the opinions expressed on those recommendations at the first regular session of 1980 of the Economic and Social Council, and to submit to the Council in 1981 an interim report on measures adopted to that end;

4. Expresses its deep appreciation for the important work in cartography carried out by the Pan-American Institute of Geography and History;

5. Invites all interested international bodies to co-ordinate their activities in this field so as to avoid duplication and provide greater support to the development plans of the countries of the region;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate steps to co-ordinate co-operation between the Pan-American Institute of Geography and History and the Cartography Section of the Secretariat.

World Climate Programme

Responding to a 1979 request from the Economic and Social Council,<sup>13</sup> a representative of the World Meteorological Organisation (WMO) reported orally to the Council on 10 July 1980 on developments concerning the World Climate Programme. Speaking in the Council's Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee, he said that during the past year, the WMO Executive Committee had approved establishment of an office in the WMO secretariat to achieve co-operation among the Programme's four component elements- the World Climate Research Programme, the World Climate Applications Programme, the World Climate Data Programme and the World Climate Impact Studies Programme. In addition to WMO, the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU) and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) had major responsibility for the component programmes. Other United Nations agencies and bodies were also actively involved in the planning and implementation of the World Climate Programme.

A WMO/ICSU Joint Scientific Committee, which was responsible for the activities of the Research Programme, had developed a plan of action related to climate model development, climatologically significant processes and diagnostic studies. In its initial stage, the Applications Programme emphasized new methodology for the application of climatic data in the food, water and energy sectors. Under the Data Programme, plans were being developed for a WMO referral and information system for the global atmospheric, hydro-meteorological and oceanic data of WMO members. With regard to the Impact Studies Programme, the UNEP Governing Council had adopted a plan of action including establishment of a Scientific Advisory Committee.

The WMO representative noted that, at a Technical Conference on Climate for Asia and the Western Pacific to be held in December 1980, it would be possible to achieve wide dissemination of current knowledge, intercountry co-operation and a clear view of the area's major climate-related problems. Similar conferences were planned for Africa in 1981 and Latin America in 1982. A joint WMO/UNEP/ICSU meeting of experts (Villach, Austria, November 1980) was to ensure close co-operation in assessing the role of carbon dioxide in climate variations.

Having heard his statement, the Third Committee approved without vote on 10 July a draft decision orally proposed by its Chairman whereby the Council would take note of the oral progress report. The Council adopted this text, similarly, on 25 July as decision 1980/180.

After adoption of the decision, Nigeria, speaking on behalf also of Argentina, Australia, Brazil, China, Chile, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Ghana, Hungary, India, Iraq, Japan, Mexico, Pakistan, Senegal, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States, representatives of which also served on WMO's Executive Committee, expressed the importance they attached to the World Climate Programme; they considered that the Council should endorse a 1979 World Meteorological Congress recommendation that WMO be designated the lead agency in the United Nations system responsible for co-ordinating and implementing the Programme, and requested that the Council note the work WMO was starting under the Programme and commend the Programme to all United Nations Member States.

Consumer protection

Pursuant to an Economic and Social Council resolution of 3 August 1979,<sup>14</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a progress report on consumer protection to the Council at its July 1980 session. A comprehensive report-including proposals for adequate standards and other measures on consumer protection which States could consider adopting, taking into account in particular the concern of developing countries, and organizational arrangements envisaged for carrying out work on the subject-was to be submitted in 1981.

The progress report contained a brief account of the efforts of organizations of the United Nations system to carry out the tasks requested of them in the 1979 resolution, including an elaboration of the proposals to be included in the comprehensive report, for which purpose two ad hoc interagency meetings had been convened. It was agreed that that report would be organized under three headings: specific needs of countries, particularly developing countries, for consumer protection; proposals for standards and other measures for consumer protection which States could consider adopting; and organization of current and envisaged activities of the United Nations. An annex would contain a survey of these activities. The report also suggested headings under which proposals for adequate standards and measures would be elaborated.

In order better to assess and develop the measures that might be taken at the national and international levels •to meet consumer protection needs, the organizations planned to hold regional consultations, to be convened as appropriate by the regional commissions, the first set of which were scheduled at Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific headquarters in Bangkok in December 1980 and January 1981.

On 25 July, on the recommendation of its Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee which had discussed the report and approved without vote on 22 July a text orally proposed by its Chairman—the Council likewise adopted decision 1980/182, whereby it took note of the progress report and requested the Secretary-General to take into full consideration the comments made in (changed from “made by” on an oral proposal by the USSR) the Council when preparing the comprehensive report to be submitted in 1981.

A draft decision proposed by the Chairman was withdrawn as there was no consensus on it. By the text, the Council would have taken note of the progress report, endorsed the proposals for the comprehensive report contained in it, including the emphasis on developing countries' specific needs for consumer protection standards and other measures at the national level, as well as the international aspects of trade and production; and agreed that regional consultations would be useful for securing direct contributions for defining the needs and utilizing the experience of developing countries.

International years and anniversaries

At its July 1980 session, the Economic and Social Council had before it a report of the Secretary-General on international years and anniversaries, prepared in response to a 1979 Council decision.<sup>15</sup>

The report summarized comments received as of 30 May 1980 from 19 Member States (Australia, Canada, Chile, Cyprus, Finland, France, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, New Zealand, Norway, Philippines, Portugal, Singapore, USSR, United Kingdom) and on behalf of the nine member States of the European Economic Community (EEC) on proposed guidelines for establishing uniform criteria and procedures to be applied to the proclamation, organization and evaluation of future international years. The guidelines had been submitted to the Council in 1979, at which time other Governments had commented on them.<sup>16</sup> On the basis of these comments, revised guidelines were submitted in 1980 by the Secretary-General for the Council's consideration.

The report was considered by the Council's Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee, which also had before it a note by the Secretariat containing texts of a draft resolution, two revisions thereto, and amendments; these texts had been discussed by the Committee in 1979 but no action had been taken.<sup>17</sup>

On the Committee's recommendation, the Council on 25 July adopted, without vote, resolution 1980/67, by which it took note with appreciation of the Secretary-General's report and of the revised guidelines therein. Adopting the guidelines, annexed to the resolution, as its criteria and procedures with regard to future proposals for international years, the Council submitted them to the General Assembly for consideration, invited the specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system to adopt them, and invited Member States to take them into account in considering proposals for international years.

The text, essentially the same as the last revised version of the draft resolution submitted in 1979, had been sponsored in the Committee by Ireland, Mexico, Sweden and Zambia, and was approved without objection on 16 July.

After approval of the resolution, Iraq stated it had not opposed the text on the understanding that the criterion of stipulating that the subject of an international year should be of concern to the majority of countries regardless of their economic and social systems and should contribute to the development of international co-operation in solving global problems, with special attention to those affecting developing countries, applied to such matters as the situation of peoples subjected to foreign occupation or racial discrimination and apartheid.

The USSR, on behalf also of the Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mongolia, Poland and the Ukrainian SSR, which had submitted amendments to the text in 1979, said they did not accept all the provisions in the annex, particularly that proposals for international years made under United Nations auspices should, before proclamation, be brought to the Council's attention for its advice on the year's timing and for evaluation of its purpose in the light of the guidelines. In their view, international years should not be proclaimed unless they contributed to the solution of major international problems, such as the consolidation of detente, achievement of disarmament, the struggle against imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism, racism, apartheid, aggression, occupation and exploitation, and the just restructuring of international economic relations; moreover, programmes should be oriented towards national measures.

Nigeria said it interpreted a guideline that the subject of an international year should be consistent with principles of the Charter of the United Nations as a reference to Article 1, paragraph 1 (specifying one of the purposes of the United Nations as being to maintain international peace and security) and Article 55 (c) (on promoting universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms).<sup>18</sup>

On the recommendation of its Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, the General Assembly, on 5 December, adopted without vote decision 35/424, by which it adopted the guidelines annexed to Council resolution 1980/67 as the United Nations criteria and procedures for future proposals for international years and recommended that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system adopt the guidelines and apply them when proposals for international years were made in their legislative organs.

The decision, sponsored by Ireland, Sweden and Zambia, had been approved without vote by the Committee on 14 October. After its approval, Nigeria stated that it construed paragraph 11 of the revised guidelines as enabling certain organs to pronounce themselves against a decision of the Assembly to proclaim an international year. Paragraph 11 stated that the Assembly should not take a final decision on a proposal for such a year until at least one year had elapsed after its introduction, thus allowing all Member States' views to be taken into account and allowing competent organs to assess it thoroughly in the light of its practical desirability and the probability of real results. Earlier, the resolution's sponsors had orally proposed to delete that final phrase setting out parameters of assessment; subsequently they agreed to retain the original wording.

The Economic and Social Council,
Recognizing the contribution that the celebration of international years and anniversaries can make to the furtherance of international co-operation and understanding,

Mindful of the need to consider carefully proposals for the designation of international years and anniversaries,

Recalling its resolution 1368(XLV) of 2 August 1968, in which it expressed the hope that new proposals for the designation of international years and anniversaries would be avoided except on the most important occasions,

Recalling also its resolution 1800(LV) of 7 August 1973 and General Assembly resolution 3170(XXVIII) of 17 December 1973,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on international years and anniversaries, submitted pursuant to Council decision 1979/64 of 3 August 1979, and of the revised guidelines for future international years contained in paragraph 29 of the addendum to that report,

1. Adopts the guidelines contained in the annex to the present resolution as its criteria and procedures with regard to future proposals for international years;
2. Submits those criteria and procedures to the General Assembly for consideration at its thirty-fifth session;
3. Invites the respective legislative organs of the specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system to adopt those criteria and procedures;
4. Also invites States Members of the United Nations to take those criteria and procedures into account in considering proposals for international years.

ANNEX

Guidelines for future International years

I. Criteria for the proclamation of international years

1. The proposed subject of the year should be consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations, as stated in the Charter of the United Nations.
2. The subject should be of priority concern in the political, social, economic, cultural, humanitarian or human rights fields.
3. The subject should be of concern to all or to the majority of countries, regardless of their economic and social systems, and should contribute to the development of international co-operation in solving global problems, with special attention to problems affecting developing countries.
4. The desirability of proclaiming international years and the selection of their themes should in general be determined from the point of view of their possible contribution to solving existing international problems, thus contributing to the strengthening of universal peace.
5. The subject should be one involving action at the international and national levels.
6. The subject should be one for which there is a reasonable expectation that an international year would generate significant follow-up at both the national and the international level in the form of new activities or the strengthening of existing ones.
7. Every effort should be made to ensure that there is an interval of at least two years between international years and a longer interval between years designated for similar subjects.
8. Years should be designated to focus on one subject or on closely related subjects.
9. International years should be proclaimed only when celebrations of shorter duration, such as a month, a week or a day, will not suffice.
10. When a world conference on a particular subject has been or is being separately convened, or when a subject is already of wide international concern and effective organizations and programmes exist to further its ends, an international year should not normally be proclaimed.

II. Procedures preceding the proclamation of international years

11. A final decision on a proposal for an international year should be taken by the General Assembly, not earlier than one full year after the introduction of the proposal, thus allowing the views of all Member States to be taken into account and allowing the competent organs to make a thorough assessment of the proposal in the light of its practical desirability and the probability of real results.
12. Proposals for international years made under the auspices of organizations within the United Nations system should, before the proclamation of the years, be brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Council, to enable the Council, in so far as the proposals fall within its competence, to advise on the timing of the proposed years and to evaluate their purpose in the light of the present guidelines.

13. A year should not be proclaimed before the basic arrangements necessary for its financing have been made and such financing should in principle be based on voluntary contributions.

14. A year should not be proclaimed before the basic arrangements necessary for its organization have been made.

III. Procedures for organizing the celebration of international years

15. The basic objectives of each year should be clearly defined.

16. In general, there should be a period of two years between the proclamation of an international year and the beginning of that year.

17. Years having economic, or social themes should be primarily directed towards promoting international development efforts in practical ways.

18. Measures and activities to be carried out at the international level should complement and support measures and activities at the national level.

19. There should ordinarily be national committees or other mechanisms for preparing for, conducting and following up the international year at the national level.

20. There should be effective co-ordination of the activities of all United Nations organizations and bodies concerned, so as to avoid any duplication of activities.

21. The proclamation of international years and activities connected with them should not lead to a proliferation of posts in the United Nations Secretariat or in the secretariats of other international organizations; furthermore, expenditures should normally be met from existing resources in the regular budget.

22. As a rule, special secretariats established for the celebration of international years should be dissolved immediately upon the conclusion of those years.

IV. Procedures for the evaluation of international years

23. Each international year should have objectives likely to lead to identifiable and practical results.

24. Procedures for evaluation should be established during the preparatory process and should form part of the implementation and follow-up of each international year.

25. Evaluation should, inter alia, assess the activities generated during the year and continuing after the year ends, as well as modifications in ongoing activities attributable to the year, with a view to integrating those activities, if necessary, in regular programmes.

26. Evaluation after the year should be based on reporting arrangements designed especially for the subject of the international year; it should facilitate the follow-up process and it should provide guidance for future international years.

27. Evaluation should be carried out within the budgetary resources provided, and the results of such evaluation should be submitted to the existing appropriate intergovernmental bodies for consideration.

Decision 35/424, by which the General Assembly decided:

(a) to adopt the guidelines contained in the annex to Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/67 of 25 July 1980 as the criteria and procedures of the United Nations with regard to future proposals for international years; and (b) to recommend that the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system should adopt those guidelines and apply them when proposals for international years were made in their respective legislative organs, as recommended by Second Committee, A/35/545, adopted without vote by Assembly on 5 December 1980, meeting 84.

Exchange of information on banned hazardous chemicals and unsafe pharmaceutical products

On 29 April 1980, the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) urged Member States to institute adequate protection measures for the handling and disposal of hazardous chemical wastes, to exchange information on such measures and the procedures used in their implementation, and to develop notification procedures and controls for transfers of such wastes between countries. The UNEP Executive Director was requested, in co-operation with other international organizations, to develop guidelines for safe disposal of such wastes and measures concerning their transboundary transport.

The Economic and Social Council, in formulating its work programme for 1980, decided that a report on the experience of Member States and United Nations agencies and bodies on exchanging information on banned hazardous chemicals and unsafe pharmaceuticals—which the General Assembly in 1979<sup>19</sup> had requested the Secretary-General to submit to it through the Council in 1980—should be considered under its agenda item on narcotic drugs.

The Secretary-General submitted a note to the April/May session of the Council, informing it that the scope of the Assembly's 1979 resolution was much broader than work in the field of narcotic drugs, as it dealt with matters of concern to several United Nations organizations and programmes. Extensive consultations with many agencies and bodies would be needed and information required from Member States. Therefore, he would not be able to present his report in 1980, and suggested that the Council postpone consideration until 1981; should the Council agree, a similar recommendation might be made to the Assembly.

In the Council's Second (Social) Committee, Argentina stated that inclusion of the Secretary-General's report under the item on narcotic drugs unduly limited the scope of the Assembly's 1979 resolution, and suggested that the report be considered under the item on social development questions or in plenary meetings to avoid misunderstanding regarding the resolution's scope.

On the understanding that in future the matter would be included in the relevant agenda items, the Committee, without objection on 8

April, as orally proposed by its Chairman, recommended that the Council postpone consideration of the Secretary-General's report until 1981 and accordingly recommend that the Assembly postpone its consideration until that year. On 30 April, the Council adopted this recommendation without vote as decision 1980/116..

On 15 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 35/186, by which it noted with regret that the Secretary-General had been unable to present the report requested in 1979. It invited Member States to provide information on the measures they had taken to exchange information on hazardous chemicals and unsafe pharmaceutical products banned in their countries, and requested the Commission on Transnational Corporations to study in 1981 ways within the information system on transnational corporations to improve exchange of information on such chemicals and products, with a view to formulating recommendations. The Assembly again requested the Secretary-General to report in 1981 on the experience of Member States and concerned United Nations bodies and appealed to them, especially the World Health Organization, to assist and co-operate in the report's preparation.

The resolution was sponsored in the Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee by Argentina, Benin, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Jordan, Kenya, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines and Venezuela. After approving paragraph 2—requesting the Commission on Transnational Corporations to study ways of improving information exchange—by a vote, requested by the United Kingdom and others, of 103 to 0, with 25 abstentions, the Committee on 28 November approved the text as a whole by a recorded vote, requested by Argentina, of 119 to 0, with 11 abstentions. The Assembly also voted separately on paragraph 2, which it adopted by a recorded vote of 121 to 0, with 20 abstentions.

Explaining their abstention in the Third Committee, the United Kingdom and the United States said they did not believe that the Commission on Transnational Corporations was the appropriate body to deal with improving information exchange on the products in question, nor, in the opinion of the United States; did it have manpower, expertise or budget to carry out the envisaged activities. Moreover, the issue involved more than just transnational corporations; Member States and other United Nations bodies should participate in the exchange and co-operate in preparing the report.

Sweden, on behalf of the Nordic countries, said they had abstained in the vote on paragraph 2 because the Economic and Social Council was the body that would be responsible in 1981 for considering the question dealt with in that paragraph.

Resolution 35/186, as recommended by Third Committee, A/35/741, adopted without vote by Assembly on 15 December 1980, meeting 96.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/173 of 17 December 1979, in which it recognized the urgent need to take concrete measures to prevent adverse effects on health on a world-wide basis,

Noting with regret that the Secretary-General was unable to present the report requested in General Assembly resolution 34/173,

Aware that the Commission on Transnational Corporations will examine the report on the activities of the United Nations Centre on Transnational Corporations and the study on transnational corporations in the pharmaceutical industry in developing countries, according to the agenda approved by Economic and Social Council in its decision 1980/170 of 24 July 1980,

Aware also that many organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system have interest in and expertise on this subject and can therefore provide valuable assistance to the Secretary-General in his preparation of the report for next year,

Taking into account that the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the Economic Commission for Europe, the United Nations Centre on Transnational Corporations, the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat, the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the World Health Organization have already been involved in this exercise, Conscious of the importance of the information system on transnational corporations for the analysis of transnationals in certain sectors of special social and humanitarian interest to host countries, particularly developing countries,

Mindful of the importance of objective information about banned hazardous chemicals and unsafe pharmaceutical products,

1. Invites Member States to provide information on the measures they have taken to exchange information on hazardous chemicals and unsafe pharmaceutical products that have been banned in their countries;

2. Requests the Commission on Transnational Corporations to study, during its seventh session, the ways and means within the information system on transnational corporations to improve the exchange of information on banned hazardous chemicals and unsafe pharmaceutical products, with a view to formulating appropriate recommendations:

3. Requests once again the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the United Nations organs, organizations and bodies concerned, to submit a report to the General Assembly, at its thirty-sixth session, on the experience of Member States and United Nations organs, organizations and bodies concerned;

4. Appeals to the United Nations organs, organizations and bodies concerned, especially the World Health Organization, to provide any assistance, expertise and co-operation required for the preparation of the above-mentioned report.

Participation of intergovernmental organizations in the work of the Economic and Social Council

By decision 1980/114 of 28 April 1980, the Economic and Social Council decided, on the recommendation of its Bureau, that the Asian Productivity Organization, the International Center for Public Enterprises in Developing Countries, the Latin American Energy Organization and the Latin American Economic System might participate on a continuing basis, without the right to vote, in the Council's deliberations on questions within the scope of the organizations' activities.

On 8 July, by decision 1980/151, the Council decided, also on its Bureau's recommendation, that the African Regional Centre for Technology might participate under the same conditions.

Both decisions were orally proposed by the Council President and were adopted without objection following consideration of notes from the Bureau transmitting the organizations' applications contained in letters of 6 September, 20 November and 11 September 1979, and 1 February and 13 May 1980, respectively.

Questions relating to the Declaration on the granting of independence and to the International Trusteeship System

Chapter I

International Trusteeship System

General aspects

Territory under the Trusteeship System

Under the International Trusteeship System established by the Charter of the United Nations, Member States administering Trust Territories were accountable to the United Nations for the discharge of their responsibilities and obligations in the administration of the Territories.

During 1980, one Trust Territory remained under the System: the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (a strategic area in accordance with Article 83 of the United Nations Charter)<sup>1</sup> administered by the United States.

Examination of annual report

In supervising the administration of the remaining Trust Territory on behalf of the Security Council, the Trusteeship Council in 1980 examined the annual report submitted to both Councils by the Administering Authority. It also examined, among other things, petitions and communications affecting the Territory and reports of visiting missions.

Under the procedures followed by the Trusteeship Council, the Special Representative of the Administering Authority, the High Commissioner of the Trust Territory, brought the Council up to date on events in the Territory. This statement was supplemented by comments or written statements of other Special Representatives and Special Advisers-representatives of the Territory attached to the delegation of the Administering Authority. These spokesmen and the United States representative on the Council then replied to questions put to them by Council members. There followed a general debate in which Council members gave their opinions on conditions in the Territory and final statements were made by representatives of the Administering Authority; a summary of the observations made by members in their individual capacity was included in the Council's report. Japan, at its request, was invited to participate at a meeting during the 1980 session, without the right to vote.

The Trusteeship Council held its forty-seventh session at United Nations Headquarters, New York, from 19 May to 12 June 1980, during which it examined the annual report submitted by the Administering Authority on the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, for the period 1 October 1978 to 30 September 1979, and adopted conclusions and recommendations on it. (For further details, see following subchapter.)

In accordance with its normal practice, the Council adopted a report to the Security Council which contained a section on conditions in the Trust Territory.

Composition of the Trusteeship Council

At its 1980 session, the Trusteeship Council was composed of one Administering Authority—the United States—and four non-administering members: China, France, the USSR and the United Kingdom, which sat on the Council by virtue of their being permanent members of the Security Council. China did not participate in the session.

Petitions and oral hearings

The examination of petitions concerning Trust Territories derived from Article 87 of the <sup>1</sup> For text of Article 83 of the Charter and other Charter Articles referred to herein, see APPENDIX II.

United Nations Charter, which provided that the General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council might accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the Administering Authority. Petitions relating to the strategic area were governed by Article 83 of the Charter and the terms of a Trusteeship Agreement.

Under its rules of procedure, the Council at its 1980 session considered en bloc five written petitions and 33 communications concerning specific complaints or on general questions pertaining to the Trust Territory. It also heard three petitioners: Jonathan M. Weisgall, Legal Counsel for the people of Bikini; William Alexander of the Focus on Micronesia Coalition, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America; and Roger S. Clark, of the International League for Human Rights. It took note of the communications and, in the case of written petitions, drew the attention of the petitioners to the observations of the Administering Authority, if required. Eight further communications were received before the end of the year.

Visiting missions

Palau

On 29 May 1980, the Council took note of the report of a visiting mission it had sent to Palau, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, from 3 to 12 July 1979 to observe a constitutional referendum held on 9 July,<sup>2</sup> and expressed appreciation of the work accomplished.

This action was contained in Council resolution 2171(XLVII), adopted by 3 votes to 1; the text was proposed by the United Kingdom.

In explaining its negative vote, the USSR noted its continuing opposition to holding referendums in separate parts of the Trust Territory, considering that they were illegal, contravened the Trusteeship Agreement and the Charter, and led to fragmentation of the Territory.

The Palau Legislature had not certified the results of the July 1979 referendum, and voters on 23 October 1979 had rejected a revised constitution. The October referendum had had the effect of confirming the results of the July referendum. Consequently, a new referendum was called for 9 July 1980 to update and ratify the constitution voted on in the July 1979 referendum.

By a note verbale of 17 July 1980, the United States transmitted to the Secretary-General a United States/Palau joint communiqué of 20 June, following a meeting of the Palau Commission on Status and Transition (Guam, 16-20 June) to discuss the future political status of Palau, its future relationship with the United States, military land use and operating rights and the law of the sea, as well as financial arrangements set forth in a compact of free association, which were viewed by the Commission as inadequate. Dialogue was to be continued after the forthcoming constitutional referendum.

By a note verbale of 10 September, the United States transmitted a resolution adopted by the Palau Legislature on 31 July, approving the results of the Palau constitutional referendum held on 9 July 1980, at which a majority of voters had approved the Constitution of the Republic of Palau. Also transmitted were the texts of the new Constitution with amendments adopted by the Legislature.

Elections were held in Palau on 4 November for the new constitutional Government, which was to take office on 1 January 1981, the effective date of the new Constitution.

Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands

Pursuant to a 1978 Trusteeship Council resolution,<sup>3</sup> amended by a decision of 15 February 1979,<sup>4</sup> a mission visited the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands from 1 to 29 March 1980 to report on the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Territory, with special attention to the question of the future of the Territory. The two-nation mission-France and the United Kingdom-submitted its report to the Trusteeship Council on 12 May, setting forth its findings, conclusions and recommendations on those issues, as well as its views on war and post-war damage claims, military facilities and the future political status of the Territory.

Regarding political advancement, the mission noted that apart from legal matters most of the functions previously carried out by the Administering Authority had been transferred to the new constitutional Governments in the Northern Mariana Islands, the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia, which were in the process of assuming full governmental and administrative authority (Palau had not yet established a constitutional government). The mission shared the view of earlier missions that it was important to note the effect of tradition and the traditional authorities on the newly emerging institutions. In general, the mission considered that Micronesians appeared to be politically mature and well versed in democratic concepts and procedure, but there was urgent need for further education on the political options open to them, the processes of termination of the Trusteeship Agreement, and political and economic prospects afterwards.

The mission reiterated the recommendations of previous missions that the people of Micronesia must be able to see more clearly their likely economic prospects. They must therefore be informed at an early stage about United States financial support likely to be available, given different decisions on status, and have some idea of what support they could expect from the international community. It agreed that Micronesia, lacking an economic infrastructure to survive without continuing aid, could be self-sufficient only if it reduced its standard of living to a point which would be unacceptable to the population.

Noting that the Administering Authority had an excellent record in the field of education, the mission reiterated that greater emphasis should be given to vocational and technical training, to school-building maintenance and construction, and to training and recruitment of doctors and teachers.

The mission renewed an appeal for further urgent efforts to resolve war damage claims resulting from the Second World War and from post-war nuclear tests.

The mission recommended that the Education for Self-Government programme, launched in 1974 and terminated in 1979, be revived to help dispel misconceptions voiced by Micronesia, explain the working of the Trusteeship System and provide information on the various political options open to them, including independence. It reiterated the hope that after termination of the Trusteeship Agreement-targeted by the Administering Authority for 1981 -the Micronesians would take steps to establish, with what power they might decide to invest in it, the all-Micronesian entity which they had agreed on at Molokai, Hawaii (United States), in October 1977 thus maintaining a form of unity. While aware of the Northern Mariana Islands' view that they should be allowed to seek termination independently from the other entities, the mission reiterated that the Trusteeship Agreement should be terminated simultaneously for the whole of the Trust Territory. It stated that there was almost universal support in principle for some form of continuous relationship with the United States after termination of the Agreement. Negotiations between the Administering Authority and representatives of the Marshall Islands, Palau and the Federated States of Micronesia concerning future political status were in progress, and a draft compact of free association was initiated by the Marshall Islands President and the United States representative on 14 January 1980 at Kona, Hawaii.

The mission stated that as the target date for termination of the Trusteeship Agreement approached, it was of the first importance that the emerging entities should begin to establish external links, particularly with countries in the Asian Pacific region. The mission was pleased to note that those initial contacts had been made.

A number of the mission's recommendations and observations were endorsed or noted in the conclusions and recommendations of the Trusteeship Council (see following subchapter).

On 28 and 29 May, the Council considered the mission's report together with the annual report of the Administering Authority.

By resolution 2172(XLVII) of 29 May, the Council took note of the mission's report and the Administering Authority's observations, and decided that it would continue to take the mission's recommendations, conclusions and observations into account in future, inviting the Administering Authority to do likewise. This resolution was adopted by 2 votes to 0, with 2 abstentions; the text was proposed by France.

Explaining its abstention, the USSR said the report's conclusions on a number of basic issues were at variance with the factual material presented. Thus, for example, there was no objective assessment of reasons which led to fragmentation of the Trust Territory, resulting in entities that were unable to survive economically by themselves. The USSR could not agree with the report's argument that the separatist tendencies were a strengthening, positive, natural trend there or that maintenance of that situation or of the United States presence there would promote the independence or unity of the islands.

The United States said its abstention was based on past practice, since its actions as Administering Authority were the subject of the report, and the recommendations were directed to the United States.

Attainment of self-government or independence and co-operation with the Special Committee on the Declaration on the granting of independence

At its 1980 session, the Trusteeship Council considered together the questions of attainment by the Trust Territory of self-government or independence and co-operation with the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>5</sup>

During the Council's discussion, the USSR said that nothing in Article 83 of the Charter prohibited other United Nations bodies, particularly the Special Committee or the General Assembly, from monitoring the situation in the Trust

Territory. Recalling that the United States had until 1975 submitted reports to the Assembly on the situation in the Trust Territory, the USSR considered the current refusal to do so as contravening the Charter and established practice. It noted that Article 83 clearly set forth that any change in the status of a strategic Trust Territory could be made only by a decision of the Security Council and not unilaterally by the Administering Authority.

The United States said that under paragraph 1 of that Article, all functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas were to be exercised by the Security Council, and Article 85 clearly limited the functions of the Assembly to Trusteeship areas not designated as strategic. The United States had in the past co-operated with the Special Committee and it would continue to do so, on matters within its jurisdiction.

The United Kingdom observed that the Assembly, in the resolution by which the Special Committee had been created,<sup>6</sup> had requested the Trusteeship Council to assist that Committee in its work. The Council had extended such assistance in relation to the former non-strategic Trust Territories. However, since there were no longer any such Territories, the Council reported to the Security Council rather than to the Assembly. In those circumstances, the United Kingdom considered that the Trusteeship Council was no longer called upon to assist the Special Committee.

On 29 May, the Trusteeship Council decided, without adopting a resolution, to draw the attention of the Security Council to the conclusions and recommendations that had been adopted concerning the attainment, under the Council's guidance, of self-government or independence by the Trust Territory and to the statements by Trusteeship Council members on that question.

The Trusteeship Council's conclusions and recommendations with regard to the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands are summarized in the following subchapter.

Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination and co-operation with the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

During the Council's consideration in 1980 of the questions of co-operation with the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination and the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination,<sup>7</sup> the United States said it was pleased to note the absence of racial discrimination of any kind in the Trust Territory. Respect for basic human rights was guaranteed not only by the Trust Territory Code but also by the new constitutions which had been adopted in the individual entities. Its views on the Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination had been amply explained.<sup>8</sup>

The USSR stated that the Trusteeship Council must participate in the world community's activities to eliminate racism and racial discrimination; responsibility for preventing manifestations of such discrimination in the Trust Territory must be borne by the Administering Authority. The USSR said the Authority's report for 1979 had contained no information on the implementation in the Trust Territory of United Nations decisions prohibiting racial discrimination. Previously and at the current session, it had been noted that the Authority had not carried out all its obligations under the Charter and the Trusteeship Agreement, especially in the social and economic spheres. The USSR believed that the Council should call on the Authority to undertake all necessary measures to implement the provisions of the Charter and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination<sup>9</sup> in the Trust Territory. In its view, the Council should step up its co-operation with the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, as called for by Assembly decisions. It should also adopt measures to respond to the Assembly's appeal to all Governments and United Nations organs to participate actively in the implementation of the Programme for the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination.<sup>10</sup>

On 10 June 1980, the Trusteeship Council decided, without adopting a resolution, to take note of the statements made by Council members.

Dissemination of information on the United Nations and the Trusteeship System

The Secretary-General again reported to the Trusteeship Council in 1980 on activities undertaken to distribute United Nations documents and to disseminate information on the aims and activities of the United Nations and the International Trusteeship System. This report, covering the period from 1 May 1979 to 30 April 1980, detailed activities carried out by the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) through the United Nations information centres in Tokyo and Washington, D. C. Publications furnished to the Territory and the United States Congress through these centres included press releases, newsletters and special features on United Nations activities. The United Nations film depository library on Ponape was enlarged and radio tapes were distributed to territorial radio stations.

The DPI representative assured the Council that his Department and its information centres would continue their efforts to keep the people of the Trust Territory fully informed of their political options and of services available from the United Nations with regard to their aspirations to nation-building and development.

The United States said that the number of United Nations publications provided to the Territory's inhabitants had increased and the distribution system streamlined; as in past years, the highlights of the current session of the Trusteeship Council were being reported daily to the Trust Territory via satellite, and tapes of the discussions would also be mailed to radio stations in the Territory. The Council's 1979 proceedings had been broadcast on all Trust Territory radio stations, in many cases in the local languages.

On 27 May, the Trusteeship Council took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Offers of study and training facilities

Under procedures adopted by the Trusteeship Council for the administration of the programme of scholarships and fellowships for inhabitants of Trust Territories, initiated by the General Assembly in 1952,<sup>11</sup> the Secretary-General reported to the Council on the programme for the period 25 May 1979 to 24 May 1980. He stated that scholarships and training facilities had been offered by Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Indonesia, Italy, Mexico, Pakistan, the Philippines, Poland, Tunisia, the USSR and Yugoslavia; however, according to information made available to him, no applications for scholarships offered by these States were received during the reporting period.

The United States said that 2,050 students who studied in colleges outside Micronesia received some form of assistance from the Trust Territory Government, including 1,250 who received grants. A further 500 were studying abroad on their own. In addition, 394 students from the Northern Mariana Islands were studying abroad in post-secondary institutions. The Trust Territory continued to give publicity to educational opportunities available outside the Territory. Although language differences made it difficult for Micronesians to take full advantage of scholarship offers by Member States, a number of scholarships had nevertheless been accepted.

On 27 May 1980, the Trusteeship Council took note of the report of the Secretary-General.

Trust Territory of the Pacific islands

The Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, administered by the United States, includes more than 2,100 islands and atolls scattered over an area of some 7.8 million square kilometres of the western Pacific Ocean, north of the Equator. The islands, with a total land area of about 1,850 square kilometres, form three major archipelagos—the Marianas, the Carolines and the Marshalls—collectively known as Micronesia (Guam, the largest island in the Marianas, is not part of the Trust Territory). According to a census taken in September 1980, the population of the Trust Territory was 132,632.

Ultimate executive and administrative authority for the Government of the Trust Territory and responsibility for carrying out international obligations undertaken by the United States with respect to the Territory are vested in a High Commissioner, appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the United States Senate.

Following a 1975 plebiscite, a Covenant to Establish a Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands in Political Union with the United States of America was approved by the United States Congress; it was signed into law on 24 March 1976, and a separate administration was established in the Northern Mariana Islands as of 1 April 1976. The Islands' status as a commonwealth was to come into full legal existence upon termination of the Trusteeship Agreement.

In a referendum held on 12 July 1978, Kosrae, Ponape, Truk and Yap, in the Caroline archipelago, approved and ratified a constitution for the Federated States of Micronesia, whose Congress was inaugurated on 10 May 1979. The Marshall Islands and Palau, having rejected that constitution, adopted their respective constitutions on 1 March 1979 and 9 July 1980. Legislative power in the Marshall Islands was vested in the elected Nitijela (Parliament), inaugurated on 1 May 1979. The Administering Authority vested interim legislative authority in the Palau Legislature pending entry into force of its new Constitution on 1 January 1981.

In 1980, conditions in the Trust Territory were considered by the Trusteeship Council and by the General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>12</sup>

Communications

By a letter of 21 February 1980 to the Secretary-General, the USSR transmitted a statement of the same date calling attention to what it termed continuing unlawful actions of the United States in connexion with the Trust Territory—steps to dismember it, militarize it and ultimately turn it into a colonial appendage. Having imposed on the Mariana Islands the status of a so-called commonwealth in political union with the United States, the USSR charged, recent negotiations with the other three island groups would also impose on them the status of free association with the United States, equivalent in the USSR's view to annexation.

Similarly, on 28 April, Bulgaria by a note verbale and the German Democratic Republic by letter noted with concern those United States actions, which they described as aimed at destroying the territorial unity of the Trust Territory and transforming it into a military staging area threatening other peoples, and which were a flagrant violation of the Charter of the United Nations and the 1960 Declaration on granting independence.

By a letter of 8 May to the Secretary-General, the United States took strong exception to the USSR allegations. The Trusteeship Council's conclusions and recommendations, it said, were totally at variance with the USSR statement. The United States regretted the decision of the Micronesians to seek separate political identities, but observed that developments in the Territory had resulted from decisions taken by the people of the Territory themselves in exercise of their right to self-determination. After recounting the events which had led to those decisions, the United States rejected any implication that it had violated the Charter or the Trusteeship Agreement, and said it would continue to encourage the development of self-determination in the Territory until the Trusteeship was terminated.

By a note verbale of 4 November, the United States transmitted a press statement of 31 October, released after the initialling of a draft compact of free association by the Governments of the United States, the Federated States of Micronesia and the Marshall Islands. The compact was to come into effect—after being endorsed by a plebiscite in the territorial entities and approved by the Governments of Palau, the Marshall Islands, the Federated States and the United States—upon termination of the Trusteeship Agreement. The compact recognized the authority and responsibility of the three Micronesian entities over their domestic and foreign affairs in a relationship of free association, terminable unilaterally by any signatory at any time, although the United States defence responsibilities and economic aid were to continue for at least 15 years irrespective of such termination. It also set forth the financial and other types of assistance the United States was to provide over that period. If the compact was approved, the United States would present the completed arrangements to the United Nations and seek termination of the Trusteeship Agreement.

Following the 4 November elections in Palau, its President-elect initialled the compact on 17 November.

Consideration by the Trusteeship Council

From 19 May to 12 June 1980, the Trusteeship Council considered the report of the United States Government on the administration of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands for the period 1 October 1978 to 30 September 1979. It subsequently reported to the Security Council on this Territory, a strategic area in accordance with Article 83 of the Charter.<sup>13</sup>

In formulating its conclusions and recommendations, the Trusteeship Council took into account the observations of a visiting mission that had observed a constitutional referendum in Palau in July 1979 and one that had toured the Trust Territory in March 1980 (see preceding subchapter).

A summary of the Council's discussion and main conclusions and recommendations follows.

Land and people

The Trusteeship Council noted that, according to the President of the Federated States of Micronesia, the creation of new institutions and the establishment of the capital at Ponape constituted an additional financial burden for the Federation. It considered that that question should continue to receive particular attention.

The Council took note of the concern expressed by representatives of Micronesia about the possible dangers of the dumping by Japan of nuclear waste in the Pacific region and the comments made in that regard by the Administering Authority. The United States observed that the Japanese authorities had assured it that, before dumping, Japan intended to ratify and adhere to the relevant international conventions regulating sea dumping of radioactive wastes. The Council also took note of a letter of 3 June to the Council President by which Japan had informed the Council of the measures it was taking to assure the safety of its proposed dumping of low-level radioactive wastes into certain areas of the Pacific Ocean.

Population movements

The Council noted with satisfaction that the clean-up and rehabilitation programme of Enewetak in the Marshall Islands had been completed in 1980, as scheduled. It took note of the Administering Authority's intention to resettle the inhabitants of Enewetak shortly.

The Council was, however, still concerned about the fate of the Bikinians, who could not expect to return to Bikini in the near future. It noted that joint exploratory missions to find a relocation site for the Bikinians had been organized since the Council's 1979 session, and hoped a speedy solution could be found, taking account of the wishes of the populations concerned.

The Council recommended that the Administering Authority ensure that all necessary measures were taken to remove the radiation hazards which remained in numerous atolls. The Council noted with satisfaction a law signed on 12 March 1980 committing the United States to provide medical aid to the people of each Marshallese atoll for any ailments resulting from nuclear-weapon testing.

The Council remained concerned about the situation on Ebeye in the Marshall Islands. The inhabitants had described their problems to the 1980 visiting mission as due to over-population, inadequate health and communication systems and unemployment among young persons. The Council noted that projects relating to the water supply and sewerage systems and repair work on the roads and the hospital were to be undertaken in 1981.

War and post-war damage claims

The Council reiterated its concern that war damage claims had not been settled as determined by the Micronesian Claims Commission.

The Council noted the observation of the 1980 visiting mission that the failure to resolve the issue of Title I war claims (for damages sustained during the Second World War) continued to cause Micronesians deep distress. It again appealed for further urgent efforts to resolve that long-standing issue in the best interests of the innocent victims, reiterating its hope that a humanitarian solution would be achieved before the termination of the Trusteeship Agreement.

The Council was pleased to note that outstanding claims under Title II (relating to post-war damages as a result of nuclear testing), as adjudicated by the Commission, had been settled.

Political advancement

The Trusteeship Council noted with satisfaction that, apart from legal matters, most of the day-to-day functions previously carried out by the Administering Authority had been transferred to the new constitutional Governments, although the High Commissioner retained ultimate authority and responsibility for the Trust Territory until termination of the Trusteeship Agreement.

The Council took note of the Palau constitutional referendum in July 1979, and the visiting mission's conclusion that a voter majority had come out in favour of the draft constitution (see p. 1036). The Council welcomed the fact that, with the establishment of constitutional government in Palau in January 1981, there would be locally elected governments in charge of administration throughout the Trust Territory.

The Council noted the concern expressed by the 1980 visiting mission at the termination of the Education for Self-Government programme, in view of the need for such a political education programme to prepare the people for the plebiscite on future status expected to take place in 1981.

The Council welcomed steps taken to encourage "Micronization" of the civil service, although the size of the civil services throughout the Territory remained a cause for concern. It urged the Administering Authority to aid in creating jobs in the private sector to reduce the civil service without, however, exacerbating the unemployment problem.

The Council noted that judicial responsibilities were being transferred to courts established in accordance with the constitutions of the entities.

Economic advancement

The representative of the Administering Authority informed the Council that out of the $232.8 million committed to the five-year capital improvement programme throughout the Trust Territory in 1976, $105 million worth of projects were in various stages of construction at the end of fiscal year 1979. The Council noted with satisfaction the High Commissioner's statement that the goals of that programme should be met by 1981; by then the projects would be either completed or under construction. In addition to these large-scale projects, several smaller ones were taking place throughout the islands.

The Council regretted that a second-level capital improvement programme, designed for development of the outer islands, was currently merely at the study stage.

The Council agreed with the 1980 visiting mission that structural imbalances in the Micronesian economy, hard hit by the effects of inflation and energy price increases, seemed not to have been significantly reduced. It felt that economic assistance should be increased to enable the people to achieve a certain measure of self-determination. The grant from the Administering Authority to the Territory (excluding the Northern Mariana Islands) was $120 million for 1980. The 1978/1980 grant to the Northern Mariana Islands was $11.8 million; that entity also received from the Administering Authority $13 million for operations and $11.3 million for the capital improvement programme.

The Council noted that the value of the Territory's exports amounted to only one fifth of its imports. Inasmuch as the funds currently derived from agriculture, handicrafts, fishing and tourism could not increase rapidly to any significant degree, it urged the Administering Authority to promote production that could satisfy local needs, especially agricultural and livestock production. The Council asked the Administering Authority to promote export-oriented agriculture. It welcomed the inclusion of coconut oil in the generalized system of preferences, noting with satisfaction that customs duties on that product were to be eliminated in January 1981. Taxes and duties should be designed to discourage imports that were obtainable locally. The Council reiterated its concern at the absence of small industry in the Territory, and welcomed the expansion of the tourist industry, while expressing the hope that the existing social structures would be safeguarded and the environment preserved. It noted that transport and communications continued to be a serious problem; the road network remained inadequate in certain parts of the Territory, but it noted with satisfaction the construction or planning of new docks and airports.

The Council strongly encouraged the Territory's leadership to develop relations with the various regional and international agencies and noted with satisfaction efforts to forge links and develop co-operation with other States in the region. It also noted with satisfaction assistance provided by the World Health Organization (WHO) under a three-year health development programme launched in 1979, particularly in medical and paramedical training and fellowships.

The Council noted with satisfaction that the transfer of public land to local authorities was essentially completed, an exception being small areas of Palau.

The Council further noted with satisfaction that the maritime authorities of the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands and Palau were working to strengthen their legislation to protect 200-mile economic zones. It took note of the Administering Authority's intention to help ensure respect for those rights. The Council noted with satisfaction that fishing agreements had been concluded with Japan by the various entities and that the Administering Authority was paying constant attention to projects for improving marine resources exploitation.

During the discussions in the Council, the USSR stated that the activities of the Administering Authority in the sphere of social and economic conditions remained depressing. It had not carried out its obligations under the Trusteeship Agreement. The USSR pointed out that Micronesian representatives had stated in the Council that the islands were currently less self-sufficient than they had been during the initial period of Trusteeship. The Territory was in a state of economic stagnation and economically totally dependent on external financing. Other problems were growing unemployment, insufficient water and electric power, an inadequate communications system, a trade deficit, declining traditional forms of national production and a shortage of medical staff and supplies.

France stated that it would be vain to claim that Micronesia would be able to ensure its economic self-sufficiency in the immediate years to come. There were many obstacles the Territory faced in its development efforts: great distances between the islands, limited natural resources, lack of local capital and insufficient qualified manpower. The Administering Authority had made increased efforts in education and social development, and had begun to provide the Territory with the infrastructure indispensable for any economic take-off. Nevertheless, it appeared that the efforts made should have been taken further to benefit the outlying islands, in particular where development problems seemed to persist on a crucial scale. Greater efforts should also be aimed at developing the agricultural sector and in establishing small industries based on local resources.

The United Kingdom stated that over the years the Trusteeship Council had expressed concern at the imbalances in the Territory's economy, the extent of its dependency on the Administering Authority, and the need to create a basic infrastructure, reduce expenditure in the government sector and promote the productive sector. The United Kingdom was pleased to note the undertaking by the Administering Authority to provide an infrastructure capable of sustaining economic development. It felt the outer islands and the Federated States of Micronesia seemed particularly in need of assistance, drew attention to the importance of an expanded communications system, and expressed the hope that some elements of the second-level capital improvement programme for the outer islands, which had not been approved, might be revived.

Japan—which by a letter of 23 May had asked to participate in the debate and did so with the Council's consent—said its relations with Micronesia had been enriched recently through increased trade, investment and personal interchange. In 1979, its trade with Micronesia amounted to approximately $46 million, a 22 per cent increase over 1978, a year when Japanese investment in Micronesia had reached $12 million. Further, each year an increasing number of Japanese citizens visited Micronesia, to an estimated 77,000 in 1979. Japan had also been extending technical co-operation, mainly in fishery and rice-cultivation technology, and was currently studying a project for earth satellite stations for communication.

The United States, referring to the overall problem of economic development and self-sufficiency, stated that it had been disappointed at the rate of economic development in parts of the Trust Territory and had hoped for better results. None the less, it believed that economic conditions had greatly improved over the 33 years of Trusteeship; appropriations for the Territory had rapidly increased in the last two decades and currently stood at approximately $1,000 <sup>per</sup> capita. It would continue to assist Micronesia in the post-termination period to promote its economic development and increased self-sufficiency.

Social and educational development

The Trusteeship Council welcomed the establishment of a health manpower training programme for the Trust Territory, located in Ponape, which offered study courses in all aspects of health care. It noted that the number of dispensaries had declined, that the Marshall Islands had concluded an agreement with the Seventh-Day Adventist Mission in Guam for Mission control and management of health services, and that Micronesia continued to experience difficulties in recruiting qualified Micronesian doctors. The Council endorsed a suggestion by the 1980 visiting mission that territorial Governments might consider offering incentives to encourage the study of medicine.

One of the major problems in the health care field continued to be the high cost of maintenance; care should be taken to ensure construction of long-lasting facilities, using local materials as much as possible. The Council noted efforts to reduce medical treatment outside the Territory, and commended the Administering Authority for its continuing efforts to improve health standards, including its successful vaccination programmes, but urged efforts to eliminate the shortage of drugs and other medical supplies.

The Council reiterated the visiting mission's observation that there was still too much reliance on external aid for financing community activities, continued to be concerned with unemployment and the imbalance between public- and private-sector wage-earners, commended the Administering Authority for its low-cost housing programmes but noted that 36 per cent remained in poor condition and called on the Authority to pay due attention to possibilities of using local materials and labour in the housing industry, and endorsed the visiting mission's positive appraisals of youth and Peace Corps programmes.

The Council reaffirmed its satisfaction with the Administering Authority's record in the field of education, notably in universal instruction at the primary level and in the high rate of seconddary school attendance. It reiterated the hope that students would be encouraged to choose areas of study that would equip them to assist in the development of Micronesia, noting that the importance of vocational and technical training appeared to be recognized increasingly in the Territory. It reiterated the 1980 visiting mission's observation that educational policy planning should be directed to subjects offering satisfactory chances of employment in the Territory.

Since many schools had fallen into disrepair, the Council called for priority to be given to training in maintenance and hoped that future educational policies would be directed towards improving the quality of teaching and that an incentive programme could be instituted to improve teacher training. It noted the visiting mission's observations that secondary school facilities and materials were more satisfactory than those of elementary schools, that greater efforts should be made to assist private schools financially, and that education should encourage development of a Micronesian identity, while at the same time the search for local identity should not overshadow the requirements of the modern world.

The Council endorsed the mission's suggestion that pre-college courses for advanced education studies abroad should be introduced and its concern that vocational programmes be kept up to date.

Attainment of self-government or independence

The Trusteeship Council reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of Micronesia to self-determination, including the right to independence in accordance with the Charter and the Trusteeship Agreement.

The Council regretted that the establishment of a constitutional government in Palau had been delayed. It noted that negotiations on the Territory's future political status had taken place at Kona, Hawaii, from 7 to 14 January 1980, that agreement was reached between the United States and the Marshall Islands on the settlement of disputes on environmental matters, and that the Marshall Islands President and the representative of the United States President had initialled a draft compact of free association to come into effect upon the termination of the Trusteeship Agreement.

Representatives of the Federated States of Micronesia and the Marshall Islands also initialled a compact on 31 October (a revised version of the one the Marshall Islands had previously initialled on 14 January) after a national and state-level review process had been completed in the Federated States. The President-elect of Palau initialled it on 17 November. (See also p. 1041.)

The Council noted that, once the compact of free association was signed, it would be submitted to a referendum held simultaneously in each of the areas to which the compact applied. It took note with interest of the stated intention of the Administering Authority to invite the international community to observe the referendum.

The Council noted the establishment in March 1980 of the Palau Commission on Status and Transition, which met in June (see p. 1036), and noted with interest territorial representatives' statements emphasizing, as they had the previous year, their desire to maintain preferential and close relations with the Administering Authority after termination of the Trusteeship.

The Council reiterated that all Micronesians should be given the fullest opportunity, before the referendum, to inform themselves of their political choices, and took due note of the United States intention to conclude negotiations and seek termination of the Trusteeship Agreement by 1981.

It noted with interest the United States statement that it intended to proceed in a manner fully consistent with the United Nations Charter and to take up the matter of termination of the Agreement at the appropriate time with the Trusteeship Council and the Security Council.

The Council urged the Administering Authority to consider maintaining the amount of its aid, after the end of its mandate, at a level comparable to the current one. It expressed the hope that the Micronesians would take steps to establish, after the termination, the all-Micronesian entity agreed at Molokai in October 1977. It noted with interest a suggestion by the Governor of the Northern Mariana Islands that 1981 be declared "The Year of the Pacific."

During the Council's deliberations, the United States said that the compact of free association was based on the Statement of Principles signed at Hilo, Hawaii, in April 1978.<sup>14</sup> The compact provided for considerable economic assistance and for certain United States federal programmes to the three entities. Arrangements for use of land by the United States were negotiated and agreed upon bilaterally with the Governments concerned.

The USSR said that, instead of being prepared for self-determination and independence as required by the Charter, the Trusteeship Agreement and the 1960 Declaration on granting independence, Micronesia had been made into a Territory dependent on the United States. Its economic situation and its social development had not progressed much since its colonial past. From a single, integrated Trust Territory, Micronesia was being turned into several dismembered territories. The compact of free association with the United States was far from leading Micronesia to complete self-determination and independence, providing as it did for the retention by the United States of full responsibility for questions involving defence and security. Moreover, the military activities of the Administering Authority in the Trust Territory constituted a threat to the security of Micronesians and to adjacent countries.

Micronesians were entitled to expect the establishment of their own independent and sovereign State that would be free of any external interference, the USSR continued. The question of the future of Micronesia was an integral part of the problem of decolonization. What the United States was doing demonstrated its intention to decide that future unilaterally, in its own way, in circumvention of the Security Council and in violation of the Charter and 1960 Declaration. It was the Security Council which had conferred Micronesia on the United States under the Trusteeship Agreement and only that Council could terminate the Agreement.

France observed that, while the development towards a form of autonomy for the component parts of the Territory flowed from the freely expressed will of its inhabitants, it was nevertheless regrettable that a trend towards unity of the Territory had not prevailed. France had always felt that the populations concerned would have benefited from maintaining close links in the context of a unified whole. Regrettable as it might be, the choice of the Micronesians nevertheless should be respected. France noted with satisfaction that the United States intended to seek the international community's participation in observing the plebiscite on the final act of self-determination and to take up the matter of the termination of the Trusteeship Agreement at the appropriate time with the Trusteeship and Security Councils.

The United Kingdom stated that the chief cause for concern on the political side had been the development of separatist trends which had resulted in the emergence of four political entities. It regretted those divisions, believing that the interests of the inhabitants of Micronesia would be better served by a single political entity. It recognized, however, the geographical and other factors which had prompted separatist sentiments and, since it favoured self-determination, it respected the wishes of the people concerned, which had been expressed in accordance with democratic procedure. It continued to hope, however, that after the termination of the Trusteeship Agreement they would take steps to establish an all-Micronesian entity.

Japan said it hoped to contribute as much as possible to the development of Micronesia, whose economic prosperity, political stability and social welfare were matters of profound interest to it. Micronesia and Japan were neighbours with close historical, cultural and economic relations. Japan looked forward to exploring ways to strengthen further their friendship and affirmed its willingness to promote further co-operation with Micronesia.

Report of the Trusteeship Council

On 12 June 1980, the Council, by 2 votes to 1, with 1 abstention, adopted its conclusions and recommendations on conditions in the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, drawn up by its two-member Drafting Committee (France and the United Kingdom). These were first approved section by section. At the same time, on the Drafting Committee's recommendation, it adopted by 3 votes to 0, with 1 abstention-as the basic text for the chapter on conditions in the Territory for inclusion in the Council's report to the Security Council-a working paper on the subject prepared by the Secretariat. It then adopted its report, as a whole, to the Security Council by 3 votes to 1.

The USSR, in explanation of its negative vote, said the illegal and unlawful fragmentation of a unified, single Trust Territory had become a fait accompli. While the USSR did not want to intervene in the internal affairs of the Micronesians or give them recommendations about their future status or social structure, as long as Micronesia remained under the control of the Security Council and the Trusteeship Council, it considered the Administering Authority's actions aimed at fragmenting the Territory, and at creating economically and politically unviable separate situations for the various island entities there, to be incompatible with the Charter, as were the Authority's efforts to resolve the situation on the basis of a compact of free association.

The USSR stated that the Trusteeship Agreement had in no way sanctioned or authorized the establishment or use of military bases in Micronesia for the strategic goals of the Administering Authority in peacetime. Currently, the Territory was being turned into a military outpost of the United States in the Pacific region. In addition, the USSR felt that the socio-economic sector was viewed as a purely secondary matter by the Administering Authority.

The United States, in explanation of its abstention, said it was customary for the Administering Authority to abstain in the vote on the conclusions and recommendations inasmuch as they were addressed to the Authority. It assured the Council, however, that as in past years it would study them with great care and give them full consideration.

Referring to what it termed the so-called issue of the fragmentation of the Trust Territory, the United States said there was a basic contradiction in the USSR's statements: on the one hand, it spoke of the responsibility to administer and maintain a single entity in Micronesia and, on the other hand, of the inalienable right to self-determination of Micronesians. The people of Micronesia had exercised that right and freely determined that it was in their best interests and consistent with their desires to have separate governmental entities which reflected their cultural and family ties. The United States had accepted their decision.

Referring to the comments on military activities in Micronesia, the United States said that under the Trusteeship Agreement and the Charter it was permitted to have military facilities and to carry on military activities in the Territory. However, the United States did not have military facilities or bases, nor plans for military activity, there. Its one base at Kwajalein in the Marshall Islands was not a military facility but was used to test missiles.

Consideration by the Special Committee

The situation in the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands was discussed in 1980 by the General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples at meetings held on 20 and 21 August.

By a set of conclusions and recommendations it adopted on 21 August, drawn up by its Subcommittee on Small Territories, the Special Committee reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of the Trust Territory to self-determination and independence in conformity with the United Nations Charter and the 1960 Declaration.

The Committee continued to note with regret the Administering Authority's refusal to participate in the Committee's examination of the situation in the Trust Territory and again called on it to comply with repeated requests that a representative be present to provide information.

The Committee expressed the hope that the termination of the Education for Self-Government programme would not be a final decision.

It took due note of the Administering Authority's intention to conclude negotiations and seek termination of the Trusteeship Agreement by 1981. Recognizing that it was ultimately for the Territory's people to decide their political destiny, the Committee called on the Administering Authority to preserve the unity of the Trust Territory until the people had exercised their right to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration.

While noting that new territorial authorities had assumed certain responsibilities relinquished by the Administering Authority, the Committee none the less regretted that the High Commissioner maintained veto power in some areas, and recalled that the Authority was duty-bound to transfer all power to the Territory's elected leaders who should also participate fully in the budget process.

The Committee noted the finding that structural imbalances in the Territory's economy appeared not to have been significantly reduced, regretted that it appeared to depend on grants as much as in the past and reaffirmed that economic development assistance should be increased. It noted the Administering Authority's statement that a start had been made in implementing a five-year indicative development plan, in particular in respect of the economic infrastructure.

The Committee noted with satisfaction the assistance provided by WHO, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Asian and Pacific Development Institute and the South Pacific Commission, and joined in encouraging the Territory's leadership to develop relations with various regional and international agencies, in particular those within the United Nations system.

It urged continued measures to safeguard and guarantee the Micronesians' right to own and dispose of their natural resources. It hoped that their rights over a 200-mile exclusive economic zone would be respected and they would receive all benefits deriving from it.

Entering reservations on this last recommendation, the USSR said it had not objected to its adoption on the understanding that implementation did not prejudice the decision of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea. It also reiterated its serious reservations on the Administering Authority's report on Micronesia.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

During 1980, the General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples<sup>1</sup> continued to discharge the mandate entrusted to it by the Assembly and to seek suitable means for immediate, full implementation of the Declaration in territories that had not attained independence. A special meeting of the Assembly was held on 12 December to mark the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration; the preceding day, a Plan of Action for its full implementation was adopted.

An account follows of the Committee's work during 1980, the consideration of its report by the Assembly and related action by other United Nations bodies. Namibia and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands are discussed in other chapters (see pp. 1102 and 1035). The former colonial territory of Southern Rhodesia became the independent State of Zimbabwe in April 1980 (see p. 243), and the New Hebrides acceded to independence in July as the Republic of Vanuatu.

General questions

General aspects of implementation of the Declaration

System of examination

During 1980, the General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples continued examination of a number of questions relating to the implementation of the Declaration, as well as its implementation with regard to specific territories.

To assist in its examination, information papers prepared by the Secretariat described recent political and constitutional developments and economic, social and educational conditions in each territory. The information was derived from published sources or transmitted by administering powers under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations.<sup>2</sup>

In addition, the Committee heard statements from administering powers on political and constitutional developments in the territories they administered. Those not members of the Committee were also invited to participate in the examination of the territories they administered, as were representatives of national liberation movements of colonial territories discussed.

Petitions were circulated and petitioners heard. The Committee was empowered to send missions to territories to obtain first-hand information, to hold meetings away from United Nations Headquarters, and to establish subsidiary bodies. The Committee maintained its Working Group, its Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance and its Sub-Committee on Small Territories. It granted requests for hearings concerning Belize, East Timor, Namibia, the United States Virgin Islands and Western Sahara, as well as to representatives of Puerto Rican organizations.

The Committee formulated its decisions and recommendations either as a consensus statement or a resolution. Following normal practice, it submitted to the Assembly in 1980 a report containing an account of its consideration of the situation in each territory or group of territories coming under its purview and of special questions that it took up separately, on the basis of which the Assembly considered the implementation of the Declaration in general and with respect to individual territories.

Between 11 March and 24 October the Committee held 20 plenary meetings, and its Working Group (which functioned as a steering committee) and subsidiary bodies a total of 37 meetings, at which general aspects of the implementation of the Declaration were considered and its implementation with respect to the following territories: American Samoa, Antigua, Belize, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Brunei, Cayman Islands, Cocos (Keeling) Islands, East Timor, Falkland Islands (Malvinas), Gibraltar, Guam, Montserrat, Namibia, New Hebrides (which became independent in 1980 as Vanuatu), Pitcairn, St. Helena, St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla, Southern Rhodesia (which became independent in 1980 as Zimbabwe), Tokelau, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, Turks and Caicos Islands, United States Virgin Islands, Western Sahara.

Consideration by the Special Committee

As in previous years, the Special Committee in 1980 considered a number of general questions arising in connexion with the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and related Assembly decisions, including the activities of foreign economic and other interests impeding the implementation of the Declaration (see p. 1070), military activities and arrangements by colonial powers which were considered incompatible with Assembly resolutions, implementation of the Declaration by the specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations (see following subchapter), the question of sending visiting missions to colonial territories and the question of the publicity to be given to the decolonization work of the United Nations.

At the invitation of the United Kingdom, the Committee twice dispatched a visiting mission to the Turks and Caicos Islands, in April and October/November, for information and to observe general elections in the territory (see p. 1085); in July, at Australia's invitation, it sent a mission to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands to secure information on their future status (see p. 1079). On the basis of the missions' conclusions and recommendations, the Committee made recommendations concerning the territories. The Committee also accepted invitations from New Zealand and the United States to send missions in 1981 to Tokelau and American Samoa, respectively.

A report by the Committee's Chairman stated that, following consultations with administering powers, Australia, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States had reiterated their readiness to continue to co-operate with the Committee concerning receiving missions to territories under their administration; he noted with satisfaction this positive attitude.

On 5 August, the Committee adopted a resolution, without objection, by which it stressed the need to continue sending missions to colonial territories in order to facilitate implementation of the Declaration, called on the administering powers to continue to co-operate by permitting the access of such missions and asked its Chairman to continue consultations with those powers.

Reiterating its condemnation of all military activities and arrangements by colonial powers in territories under their administration that were detrimental to the rights and interests of colonial peoples and impeded implementation of the Declaration, the Committee, on 20 August, adopted a consensus statement.

By this decision, the Committee again deplored that the colonial powers had taken no steps to implement requests to terminate such activities and eliminate military bases in colonial territories, repeated its request that they do so, and reiterated its conviction that, in many instances, military activities and arrangements in territories were a serious impediment to full, speedy implementation of the Declaration. In the Committee's view, a particularly serious situation prevailed in southern Africa owing to manoeuvres by Pretoria to perpetuate its illegal occupation of Namibia, to impose a puppet régime on the people of that territory, and to suppress by force their legitimate aspirations. In its escalating war against the Namibians and their national liberation movement- the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) - the regime had repeatedly committed acts of aggression against neighbouring Angola and Zambia.

Observing that the South African Government had continued to expand its network of military bases and build up its military forces in Namibia, the Committee: condemned, and requested cessation of, military co-operation by certain Western and other States with South Africa in supplying it with arms, military equipment and technology, including nuclear technology capable of being used for military purposes; condemned, in particular, the use of massive armed force in Namibia to suppress the liberation struggle there, including the recent establishment of the so-called South West Africa/Namibia Army; demanded the cessation of the war of oppression and the dismantling of all military bases in the territory; and appealed to all States to increase their moral and material assistance to its people and their national liberation movement.

The Committee deprecated the continued alienation of land for military installations, considering that large-scale utilization of local economic and manpower resources to service such installations diverted resources that could be more beneficially utilized to promote economic development.

It asked the Secretary-General to undertake an intensified publicity campaign to inform world public opinion of the facts concerning military activities and arrangements in colonial territories.

Following the adoption of this decision, Australia and Denmark said they had some difficulties with the text but were able to join in the consensus. Australia believed that South Africa should become a party to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons.<sup>3</sup> Denmark would have liked less general formulations on some points and different wording on others.

On the question of publicity to be given to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization, the Committee, on 5 August, by endorsing the conclusions and recommendations of its Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance on that subject, reiterated the importance of mobilizing world public opinion in support of the struggle of peoples under colonial rule to achieve self-determination, freedom and independence. The Committee remained of the view that, because non-governmental organizations were in a 'position to reach broad sectors of public opinion in countries where the need for information on decolonization was greatest, they should be urged to intensify their work in that field, and recommended that the Secretary-General be asked to update the list of such organizations active in decolonization. The Committee continued to consider it essential to intensify the dissemination of information on decolonization issues, putting special emphasis on: the liberation struggle in Namibia; publicizing the activities, resolutions and basic materials of United Nations organs in the field of decolonization; establishing a closer working relationship with Namibia's national liberation movement through the Organization of African Unity (OAU); and intensifying the activities of all United Nations information centres, particularly in Western Europe and the Americas, where the Secretariat's Department of Public Information (DPI) should make an all-out effort to obtain wider coverage by major information organs and provide the Committee with an analysis of the causes for their limited coverage of decolonization issues.

The Committee recommended that Member States be called on to give the widest possible publicity to the twentieth anniversary in 1980 of the adoption of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.

In this connexion, Romania transmitted on 8 December a message from its President to the Secretary-General and to the Assembly President on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of the Declaration, and the USSR on 10 December transmitted a message from its President to Assembly participants. The Secretary-General, by notes of 11 and 12 December, circulated messages received from 23 heads of State or Government relating to the anniversary: Argentina, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Democratic Kampuchea, Egypt, Ethiopia, German Democratic Republic, Guinea, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Israel, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mali, Mongolia, Pakistan, Poland, Romania, USSR, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zambia.

On 16 May, the Committee endorsed the Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance recommendations concerning the anniversary commemoration. It thereby requested the Assembly to hold a special meeting in 1980 to commemorate the anniversary, authorized the Sub-Committee to draft a programme of action to accelerate implementation of the Declaration, for Committee consideration and submission to the Assembly's special meeting, and asked States and the Secretary-General to undertake anniversary-related activities.

On 5 August, the Committee adopted the Sub-Committee's report, thereby endorsing its recommendations and conclusions on dissemination of information on decolonization. The draft text of a plan of action drawn up by the Sub-Committee for the full implementation of the Declaration was reviewed, and amendments proposed, by a Committee working group; the Committee on 20 August adopted the amendments and, by 20 votes to 0, with 2 abstentions, the Sub-Committee's report containing the plan; it was subsequently transmitted for consideration by the Assembly by a letter of 25 August from the Committee Chairman to the Secretary-General (see section immediately following).

On 20 May, the Committee Chairman issued a statement on the eighth annual observance of the Week of Solidarity with the Colonial Peoples of Southern Africa Fighting for Freedom, Independence and Equal Rights. Activities were undertaken in observance of the Week with the cooperation of DPI, assisted by United Nations information centres throughout the world.

Reviewing the list of territories to which the Declaration was applicable, the Committee, on 20 August, by 12 votes to 0, with 11 abstentions, adopted a resolution sponsored by Cuba and Iraq reaffirming the inalienable right of the people of Puerto Rico to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration, as asserted by its previous decisions on Puerto Rico. It urged the United States to adopt measures for the transfer of powers to the people of Puerto Rico and to present, as soon as possible, a plan for its decolonization. It declared unacceptable any measure attempting to change the status of Puerto Rico without the consent and participation of its people. The Committee condemned the persecution, imprisonment and repressive measures to which organizations and persons struggling for the self-determination of Puerto Rico were subjected, as well as the manoeuvres and provocations of the United States Navy on the island municipality of Vieques, and demanded that the United States terminate its military activities in Puerto Rico. The Committee welcomed the release of four Puerto Rican nationalists held prisoner, reiterated its request to the United States to allow a fact-finding mission to visit Puerto Rico and decided to keep the question under review.

Explaining their abstentions, Australia and Denmark said the Assembly in 1953<sup>4</sup> had recognized that the Puerto Rican people had effectively exercised their right to self-determination; Puerto Rico was not listed as a non-self-governing territory and therefore should not be the subject of substantive discussion by the Committee.

Chile, which also abstained, considered it was inadmissible for the Committee to express preferences for the options apparently before the people of Puerto Rico, who alone should decide freely what their future would be.

China observed that it had not participated in the voting; however, it maintained that the Puerto Rican people should enjoy the right to national self-determination and independence, and that their affairs should be determined by themselves and their wishes respected without foreign interference.

On 5 December, Cuba transmitted a memorandum of 25 November addressed to the Assembly from the Partido Socialista Puertorriqueño, urging the Assembly to make it clear that it expected the United States to respond to the request addressed to it by the Committee.

In approving recommendations of its Working Group, the Committee decided, in the light of communications by Cuba and Papua New Guinea, to continue consideration in 1981 of the question of the list of territories to which the Declaration applied, including matters relating to New Caledonia.

By a letter of 23 May, the USSR transmitted to the Secretary-General a message of congratulation from Leonid I. Brezhnev, General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and President of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR, to African States and peoples on the occasion of Africa Liberation Day.

Consideration by the General Assembly

General aspects of the question of the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples were considered at three General Assembly meetings on 10 and 11 December; some 34 Members participated in the debate on the report of the Special Committee covering its work in 1980. Chapters of the Committee's report dealing with specific territories were allocated to the Assembly's Fourth Committee for consideration and report.

<sup>4</sup>See Y.U.N., 1953, p. 539, resolution 748(VIII) of 27 November 1953.

Plan of Action

The Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, as proposed by the Special Committee, was contained in an annex to resolution 35/118, adopted by the General Assembly on 11 December by a recorded vote of 120 to 6, with 20 abstentions.

The Plan of Action set forth the following measures.

Member States were to: promote the full implementation of the Declaration in the Trust Territory and all non-self-governing and other colonial territories, including the adoption by the Security Council of measures against régimes engaging in repression of colonial peoples thus impeding the maintenance of international peace and security; render all necessary moral and material assistance in the struggle to exercise the right to self-determination and independence; intensify efforts to promote the implementation of Assembly and Security Council resolutions relating to territories and to end any form of collaboration with South Africa, particularly in the nuclear field, taking measures to prevent such collaboration and uranium purchases by bodies or individuals within their jurisdiction; endeavour to achieve the cessation of new foreign investments in and financial loans to South Africa; ensure that the permanent sovereignty of countries and territories under colonial, racist and alien domination over their natural resources was fully respected and safeguarded; discourage immigration to colonial territories; oppose all military activities by colonial and occupying powers in the territories and intensify efforts to secure the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of those powers' military bases and installations; and intensify aid to the national liberation movements recognized by OAU. All States were to enhance public awareness of the need for assistance in eradicating colonialism and were to co-operate with the United Nations Council for Namibia and the Special Committee.

The Assembly drew the Security Council's attention to the need to continue giving special attention to situations where the denial of the right of peoples to self-determination posed a threat to international peace and security and, in particular, the need to consider imposing mandatory economic sanctions against South Africa and to reinforce the arms embargo against that country.

The Committee was to continue to examine States' compliance with the Declaration and was directed: to continue seeking the most suitable ways for the speedy and total application of the Declaration to all territories that had not attained independence and propose to the Assembly specific measures for its complete implementation; to review thoroughly the list of territories to which the Declaration applied and to report thereon to the Assembly in 1981; to continue sending periodic missions to the territories; to continue examining the views expressed by their peoples and by representatives of non-governmental organizations and individuals with knowledge of conditions there; and to assist the Assembly in making arrangements, in co-operation with the administering powers, for a United Nations presence in the territories to help elaborate procedural arrangements for implementing the Declaration and observe or supervise the final stages of the process of decolonization.

The United Nations was to intensify efforts to disseminate information on decolonizations, the struggle for self-determination and equal rights, and the role of national liberation movements. United Nations organizations were to render all possible moral and material assistance to colonial peoples and their liberation movements.

Non-governmental organizations opposed to colonialism were asked to intensify their activities in co-operation with the Secretary-General and relevant United Nations organs.

Speaking in explanation of vote, Australia, Austria, Canada, Denmark (on behalf also of Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden), France, Ireland, the Netherlands, Portugal, Turkey and the United States expressed regret that on so important an occasion as the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration a greater effort had not been made to produce a consensus text.

The United States, while supporting the objective of a plan of action to promote self-determination, said that excesses of language in almost every paragraph forced it to oppose the text. It could not accept the seeming endorsement of armed struggle, the politicization of the specialized agencies, the unqualified condemnation of foreign investment and military activities in non-self-governing territories and the calls for sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter.<sup>5</sup> Canada, France, the Netherlands and Portugal also said they could not support the resolution as it contained propositions and principles unacceptable to them. The United Kingdom said the Plan of Action did not contribute in any way to a genuine analysis of colonial problems or to a wider understanding of colonial territories. The Netherlands and the United Kingdom, believing that apartheid was not a colonial question, considered that the language referring to apartheid problems distorted a text purporting to deal with the broader subject of decolonization. The Netherlands said it did not favour total isolation of South Africa and did not agree with the categorical statements that military activities as such constituted an obstacle to implementation of the Declaration.

Botswana and Swaziland expressed reservations, because of their geographical location, with regard to the provision of the Plan of Action on the need to consider imposing mandatory economic sanctions against South Africa.

Implementation of the Declaration

On 11 December, the Assembly, with the adoption of resolution 35/119, took a series of decisions on the political, economic and military aspects of the process of decolonization. The resolution was proposed by 40 Member States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below) and adopted by a recorded vote of 134 to 3, with 9 abstentions.

By this text the Assembly: reaffirmed its 1960 resolution containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,<sup>6</sup> its 1970 resolution containing a programme of action for its implementation<sup>7</sup> and all other resolutions on decolonization; called on the administering powers to enable the dependent peoples of the territories concerned to exercise fully and without further delay their inalienable right to self-determination and independence; reaffirmed that the continuation of colonialism was incompatible with the Declaration, the United Nations Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights<sup>8</sup> and posed a serious threat to international peace and security; reaffirmed its determination to ensure the speedy eradication of colonialism and the strict observance by all States of the relevant provisions of those instruments; and reaffirmed its recognition of the legitimacy of the struggle to exercise the right to self-determination and independence by all the necessary means.

The Assembly approved the Special Committee's 1980 report and called on all States and United Nations-related organizations to give effect to its recommendations and to United Nations resolutions. It condemned the continuing activities of foreign economic and other interests which were impeding implementation of the Declaration, especially in Namibia, strongly condemned all collaboration, particularly nuclear and military, with South Africa and asked States to cease such collaboration, requested all States, directly and through action in United Nations organizations, to withhold all assistance from South Africa until the inalienable right of the people of Namibia to self-determination and independence had been restored, urged them to provide moral and material assistance to those people and asked them to refrain from any action implying recognition of the legitimacy of the illegal occupation.

The Assembly called on the colonial powers to withdraw their military bases and installations from colonial territories and not to establish new ones. Administering powers were asked to make effective use of all possible assistance to strengthen the economies of the territories and were called on to co-operate with the Special Committee and, in particular, to permit missions to the territories under their administration.

The Special Committee was asked: to formulate proposals for the elimination of the remaining manifestations of colonialism and to report thereon to the Assembly in 1981; to make suggestions which could assist the Security Council in considering appropriate measures under the Charter with regard to developments in colonial territories likely to threaten international peace and security; to continue examining compliance with the Declaration and other resolutions on decolonization, paying particular attention to the small territories, including sending missions, and to recommend the most suitable steps to enable the populations to exercise their right to self-determination, freedom and independence; and to enlist governmental and organizational support in achieving the Declaration's objectives and in implementing United Nations resolutions, particularly as concerned the people of Namibia.

Speaking in explanation of vote, Canada, France and Portugal expressed regret that they would not be able to support the resolution because it contained propositions and principles unacceptable to them. While supporting the resolution, Austria, Ireland and Japan maintained reservations on some of the paragraphs and language used, as they had when such language had appeared in similar resolutions in the past. France did not think it was for the Assembly to decide on the status of any given territory. Austria, Denmark (on behalf of the five Nordic countries) and Uruguay pointed out that paragraph 4, reaffirming the legitimacy of colonial peoples' struggle to exercise their right to self-determination by all means at their disposal, used a formulation that might be considered contrary to the principle that the United Nations should seek peaceful solutions. Denmark also observed that other paragraphs on which it expressed reservations seemed to run counter to the principle of universality, to which the Nordic States remained committed.

The United States said it could not participate in the approval of the Special Committee's report since it dealt with both Puerto Rico and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, which were not properly within the purview of that Committee.

Malawi, though it voted in favour, entered reservations on the paragraphs condemning foreign economic activities and all collaboration with South Africa. Because of provisions in the same vein, it abstained on resolution 35/118 containing the Plan of Action.

Dissemination of information

On 11 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 35/120 concerning the dissemination of information on decolonization. It was sponsored by 30 States (see DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES below) and adopted by a recorded vote of 142 to 0, with 5 abstentions.

The Assembly thereby approved the chapter of the Special Committee's report relating to publicity for the decolonization work of the United Nations, and reaffirmed the importance of the widest possible dissemination of information on the evils and dangers of colonialism, on colonial peoples' efforts to achieve self-determination and independence and on international community assistance towards eliminating the remaining vestiges of colonialism.

The Assembly asked the Secretary-General to continue, through all the media at his disposal, to publicize widely and continuously the work of the United Nations in decolonization and, inter alia: to continue, in consultation with the Special Committee, to collect, prepare and disseminate basic material, studies and articles relating to the problems of decolonization; to seek the full co-operation of the administering powers; to intensify the activities of all information centres, particularly in Western Europe; to maintain a close working relationship with OAU; to enlist the support of non-governmental organizations in disseminating information; and to ensure the availability of the necessary facilities and services for this work.

The Assembly invited all States, United Nations organizations and interested non-governmental organizations to undertake or intensify, in co-operation with the Secretary-General, large-scale dissemination of information on the evils and elimination of colonialism.

Speaking in explanation of vote, the United States said it was increasingly troubled by the propagandistic thrust of the Special Committee's activities under the guise of information. Belgium deplored the lack of objectivity it said was too frequently manifested in Objective: Justice and publications in the Decolonization series, cited in a paragraph asking that such publications be continued and that selected material from them be reprinted.

Related Assembly decisions

The Assembly on 14 November adopted resolutions 35/35 A and B reaffirming the importance of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination, national sovereignty and territorial integrity and of the speedy granting of independence to colonial countries and peoples for the full enjoyment of human rights (see p. 837).

Discussion in the General Assembly

On 10 December, speaking in his capacity as Chairman of the Special Committee, the representative of Trinidad and Tobago stated that the accession of Zimbabwe to independence in April was a source of particular satisfaction to the Committee, representing the culmination of a long and hard-won struggle by the courageous Zimbabwean people. Equally satisfactory were the attainment of independence by Vanuatu and the admission of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines as a Member of the United Nations during 1980.

He drew attention to the dispatch of the 1980 missions to the Turks and Caicos Islands and the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, emphasizing the invaluable role they played in enabling the United Nations to secure first-hand information on conditions in the territories and to ascertain the wishes and aspirations of the people on their future status.

Despite the efforts of the international community, the people of Namibia had not achieved their basic rights and freedom, the Chairman observed. South Africa's attitude had been characterized by dilatory tactics aimed at maintaining and strengthening its illegal hold over the territory. The Committee condemned South African and other foreign economic interests which continued to plunder the territory's human and natural resources and it demanded that such exploitation cease forthwith. It believed that the international community should intensify its support of the Namibian people and SWAPO in their just struggle to achieve independence and national unity in a free Namibia. Given South Africa's increased use of force to perpetuate its illegal domination, its refusal to comply with Security Council resolution 385 (1976)<sup>9</sup> declaring it imperative that free elections under United Nations supervision and control be held for Namibia, and its repeated acts of aggression against neighbouring States, the Committee recommended that the Council consider taking effective measures as provided for in Chapter VII of the Charter. It had recommended that the Secretary-General place particular emphasis on the widest possible dissemination of information concerning SWAPO'S struggle, that basic United Nations texts and resolutions on decolonization be more widely distributed and that publicity materials on the topic be increased through all United Nations information centres to mobilize public opinion in support of colonial peoples.

Referring to the twentieth anniversary of the

<sup>9</sup> See Y.U.N., 1976, p. 782, resolution 385(1976) of 30 January 1976.

Declaration, the Chairman said the Committee commended for adoption the plan of action it had prepared for full implementation of the Declaration.

During the debate, all speakers praised the contribution of the United Nations to the process of emancipation of colonial countries and peoples since the adoption of the Declaration. The majority expressed deep satisfaction at the significant advances that had been made in decolonization during the past 20 years and expressed their firm conviction that it was the United Nations responsibility to do everything possible, without delay, to eliminate the remaining vestiges of colonialism in the world. The achievements in decolonization were, in their view, due mainly to the pressures exerted by the international community following adoption of the Declaration. Several paid tribute to the national liberation movements of the territories concerned, without whose efforts and sacrifices, they said, such achievements would not have been possible.

Bangladesh, the Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Romania, Tunisia, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR, the United Republic of Cameroon, and Viet Nam underscored the gravity and explosiveness of the situation in southern Africa, characterizing it as a threat to international peace and security. In the opinion of the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mauritius and the USSR, one of the main obstacles to self-determination and national independence, particularly in Namibia, remained the support which the minority regime of South Africa continued to receive from foreign companies and monopolies engaged in exploiting Namibia's natural and human resources. To ensure the regime's greatest possible isolation, those countries, as well as Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mongolia and the United Republic of Cameroon, expressed the view that economic sanctions provided for under Chapter VII of the Charter should be applied to South Africa.

China warned that countries that had overthrown colonial rule were faced with a new threat: that posed by hegemony or neo-colonialism, supported by puppet regimes.

The situation in the colonial territories in other parts of the world was discussed by several States, including Bulgaria, the Byelorussian SSR, Guyana, India, Madagascar, Mauritania, Mongolia, Poland, the USSR and the United Republic of Tanzania. They emphasized that the peoples of all colonial and non-self-governing territories, regardless of the territory's small size and population, geographic location or limited resources, should have all the rights and privileges set out in the Declaration. Guyana pointed out that the special characteristics of a number of colonial territories required innovative approaches by the Special Committee and by the administering powers concerned.

Australia argued that because of the distinctive situation of small territories the problems they faced were quite different from those of larger and richer territories. Accordingly, it believed that it was essential for each case of decolonization to be considered on its merits, objectively and with full account taken of the people's wishes; it was not up to the international community to determine the political status to be chosen by the people. In Australia's view, the role of the United Nations was to assist them in exercising their own freely expressed wishes. The United Kingdom said it would promote and encourage progress towards independence but would not push colonial territories towards independence if they felt they needed more time for social, political or economic development.

Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom maintained that they had a firm and long-standing commitment to the principle of decolonization, taking full account of the wishes of the people. As administering powers, they expressed their continuing willingness to extend full co-operation to the United Nations. They also shared the view that there must be more room given to the many and varied problems faced by the small territories as they moved towards self-government.

Special meeting to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the Declaration

On 12 December 1980, the Assembly held a special meeting to mark the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples. Statements were made by the Assembly President, the Secretary-General, the Chairman of the Special Committee, the President of the United Nations Council for Namibia and the current chairmen of the regional groups of Member States at the United Nations.

The Assembly President said the United Nations Charter had formally ushered in the era of decolonization, but it was not until 1960, the great year of African independence, that the wind of change was felt on the continent most widely affected by the colonial system. It was not until the adoption of the Declaration that the spirit of national liberation from alien domination found its full expression in an international document specifically adopted for that purpose. The question of Namibia still remained to be resolved; intensive United Nations efforts over many years in this regard had met with great resistance. He affirmed that the United Nations would do everything in its power to live up to its special responsibility towards that territory and its people, and that the international community would not rest until the Namibian people had freely exercised the rights proclaimed in the Declaration.

The Secretary-General said that the adoption of the Declaration was an act of conscience on the part of the international community. More importantly, by identifying colonialism as a major obstacle to the attainment of the principal objective of the United Nations—the strengthening of international peace and security—it committed the Organization to playing a central and active role in the process of decolonization. In the 20 years that had elapsed since the adoption of the Declaration, the world had witnessed one of the most remarkable developments of modern times: 136 million people in 59 Trust Territories and non-self-governing territories had emerged from dependent status, and the vast majority were represented in the Assembly. The admission of Zimbabwe was a fitting climax to a period which would no doubt be remembered as the era of decolonization, he said.

The Chairman of the Special Committee said it was self-evident that the Declaration had had a wide-ranging effect on many aspects of international life and on the evolution of the United Nations itself. The importance of the United Nations as the standard-bearer in this area was strengthened by its central role in the achievement of one of the fundamental purposes set out in the Charter, namely, to uphold the principle of equal rights, self-determination and independence. The current composition of the membership of the United Nations was eloquent testimony to an outstanding achievement—more than one third of the 154 Members were former colonial territories which had joined the community of nations as sovereign States since 1960. The work of the Special Committee, however, as indeed of the United Nations as a whole, particularly the Security Council, could hardly be considered complete: colonialism in any form, in any territory, must be eliminated, he said.

The President of the Council for Namibia said that this anniversary commemoration was a painful reminder that long before the adoption of the Declaration the question of Namibia's occupation by South Africa had been on the Assembly's agenda. The continued illegal occupation of Namibia and South Africa's persistence in defying United Nations resolutions should evoke feelings of outrage within the international community. The time was long overdue for the community to stand firm and resolutely demand that South Africa withdraw from Namibia without delay.

The Sudan, speaking on behalf of the African States, said that the African people, guided by OAU, would spare no effort to bring the lofty principles of the Declaration to reality. The overwhelming majority of the community of nations strongly supported the just cause of the peoples of southern Africa. It was imperative that serious measures be taken in accordance with Chapter VII of the Charter and that all States and United Nations-related organizations continue helping the national liberation movements in southern Africa in their just struggle against apartheid and racial discrimination.

Of the 24 territories still listed as non-self-governing, Cyprus said, on behalf of the Asian States, that the case of Namibia touched the very core of the United Nations system. If South Africa's intransigence and delaying tactics continued, the United Nations should take more resolute measures under the Charter in order to allow Namibia's people to exercise their right to self-determination and independence.

The German Democratic Republic said, on behalf of the socialist States of Eastern Europe, that the twentieth anniversary of the Declaration was for them an occasion to continue and intensify their efforts aimed at the speedy and final eradication of the remnants of colonialism and racism. They would do so within the framework of the United Nations and they would continue to give all-round support and assistance to the national liberation organizations — the legitimate representatives of the peoples struggling for independence and self-determination.

Costa Rica, on behalf of the Latin American group, said that since the adoption of the Declaration 52 additional States had become members of the United Nations, bringing the Organization much closer to its goal of universality. It should not be forgotten, however, that there remained painful examples, frustrations, despair and even serious setbacks in the process of liberation and the preservation of the independence of many peoples on all continents.

Portugal, on behalf of the group of Western European and other States, said that United Nations action in the field of decolonization was not completed but that the end of the road was none the less in sight. It stressed the deep commitment of the group to promoting the ideals and objectives of the Declaration and to seeking implementation of the principle of equal rights and self-determination among all peoples in accordance with the Charter.

Kuwait, on behalf of the Arab States, said that the role of the United Nations in the struggle for independence had been a positive one. It had extended political and moral support and provided the forum through which the world had become acquainted with the problems of oppressed peoples suffering from foreign rule.

The adoption of the Declaration was a translation of the will of the world to end foreign occupation and alien domination.

The General Assembly,

Having decided to hold a special commemorative meeting on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960.

Convinced that the Declaration has played and will continue to play an important role in assisting the peoples under colonial domination in their struggle for freedom and independence, and in mobilizing world public opinion for the complete elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations,

Reaffirming that all peoples have the right to self-determination and independence and that the subjection of peoples to alien domination constitutes a denial of fundamental human rights and is a serious impediment to the maintenance of international peace and security and the development of peaceful relations among nations,

Reaffirming also the relevant provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Deeply conscious of the fact that twenty years after the adoption of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples the system of colonialism continues to exist in several areas of the world,

Mindful of the courageous struggle being carried out by the peoples of southern Africa for freedom, self-determination, independence and equal rights,

Noting with satisfaction the achievement of independence in the last twenty years by a number of Trust Territories and Non-Self-Governing Territories, most recently Zimbabwe and Vanuatu.

Bearing in mind the important work accomplished by the United Nations and the international community with a view to securing the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration and other resolutions of the United Nations on the question of decolonization.

Reiterating the importance of publicity as an instrument for furthering the aims and purposes of the Declaration and of the role played in this connexion by a number of non-governmental organizations having a special interest in the field of decolonization.

Recalling its resolution 2621 (XXV) of 12 October 1970, containing the programme of action for the full implementation of the Declaration.

Determined to take all necessary measures leading to the complete elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations without further delay,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of all peoples under colonial domination to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

2. Declares that the continuation of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations, including racism, apartheid and the exploitation by foreign and other interests of economic and human resources, is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration and the principles of international law;

3. Reaffirms that the policy of apartheid of the South African regime and its illegal occupation of Namibia violate the principles enshrined in the Charter and constitute a threat to international peace and security;

4. Reaffirms the inherent right of peoples under colonialism in all its forms and manifestations to struggle by all means at their disposal against those colonial and racist regimes which suppress their aspirations for freedom, self-determination and independence;

5. Categorically rejects any agreement, arrangement or unilateral action by colonial and racist Powers which ignores, violates, denies or conflicts with the inalienable right of peoples under colonial domination to self-determination and independence;

6. Adopts the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples set forth in the annex to the present resolution.

ANNEX

Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

1. Member States shall do their utmost to promote, in the United Nations and the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system, effective measures for the full implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, in all Trust Territories and Non-Self-Governing Territories and other colonial Territories, irrespective of their size, including the adoption by the Security Council of necessary measures against Governments and regimes that engage in any form of repression of colonial peoples which would seriously impede the maintenance of international peace and security.

2. Member States shall render all necessary moral and material assistance to the peoples under colonial domination in their struggle to exercise their right to self-determination and independence.

3. Member States shall intensify their efforts to promote the implementation of the resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Security Council relating to Territories and countries under colonial domination.

4. Member States shall intensify their efforts to end all political, military, economic and other forms of collaboration with South Africa, particularly in the nuclear field, including the supply of nuclear material and equipment or components thereof, the transfer of nuclear technology and financial, technical or other assistance to the nuclear programme of South Africa, the sale of uranium enrichment facilities to, and the purchase of uranium from, South Africa, and shall take measures to prevent such collaboration and purchases by corporations, institutions and other bodies or individuals within their jurisdiction.

5. Member States shall endeavour to adopt, both individually and collectively, measures to achieve the cessation of all new foreign investments in and financial loans to South Africa.

6. Member States shall continue to wage a vigorous and sustained campaign against activities and practices of foreign economic, financial and other interests operating in colonial Territories which are detrimental to the interests of the population of those Territories and shall adopt legislative, administrative or other measures to bring about the discontinuance of such activities and practices on the part of their nationals and companies within their jurisdiction.

7. Member States, as well as the organizations within the United Nations system, having regard to the relevant provisions of the Declaration on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, contained in General Assembly resolution 3201 (S-VI) of 1 May 1974, and the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States, contained in Assembly resolution 3281 (XXIX) of 12 December 1974, shall ensure that the permanent sovereignty of the countries and Territories under colonial, racist and alien domination over their natural resources shall be fully respected and safeguarded.

8. Member States shall adopt the necessary measures to discourage or prevent the systematic influx of outside immigrants and settlers into Territories under colonial domination, which disrupts the demographic composition of those Territories and may constitute a major obstacle to the genuine exercise of the right to self-determination and independence by the people of those Territories.

9. Member States shall oppose all military activities and arrangements by colonial and occupying Powers in the Territories under colonial and racist domination, as such activities and arrangements constitute an obstacle to the full implementation of the Declaration, and shall intensify their efforts with a view to securing the immediate and unconditional withdrawal from colonial Territories of military bases and installations of colonial Powers.

10. Member States shall also adopt the necessary measures to prevent the recruitment, financing and training of mercenaries in their territories for use against the national liberation movements struggling for their freedom and independence from the yoke of colonialism, racism and apartheid.

11. Member States shall recognize that armed conflicts in which peoples are fighting against colonial and racist domination and occupation in exercise of their right to self-determination are international armed conflicts as provided for by Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 1949. The legal status envisaged to apply to the combatants in the 1949 Geneva Conventions shall apply to persons engaged in armed struggle against colonial and alien domination and racist regimes. Those persons captured as prisoners shall be accorded the status of prisoners of war and their treatment shall be in accordance with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, of 12 August 1949.

12. Member States and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system shall intensify their moral and material assistance to the national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity.

13. All States shall undertake measures aimed at enhancing public awareness of the need for active assistance to bring about the complete eradication of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations, including racism and apartheid, through the exercise of the right to self-determination. In particular, States shall endeavour to create satisfactory conditions for activities by national and international non-governmental organizations in support of the peoples under colonial domination.

14. All States shall co-operate fully with the United Nations Council for Namibia, the legal Administering Authority of the Territory until independence, in discharging the mandate entrusted to it under the terms of General Assembly resolution 2248(S-V) of 19 May 1967 and subsequent resolutions of the Assembly.

15. All States shall also co-operate fully with the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in the performance of its mandate.

16. The General Assembly draws the attention of the Security Council to the need to continue to give special attention to those situations where the denial of the right of peoples to self-determination, as defined in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), poses a threat to international peace and security and, in particular, the need:

(a) To consider imposing mandatory economic sanctions against South Africa, under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, including in particular a mandatory embargo on the supply of petroleum and petroleum products to South Africa;

(b) To reinforce the arms embargo against South Africa by adopting comprehensive mandatory measures to end all military and nuclear collaboration with the apartheid régime of South Africa.

17. The Special Committee shall continue to examine the full compliance of all States with the Declaration and with other relevant resolutions on the question of decolonization. Questions of territorial size, geographical isolation and limited resources should in no way delay the implementation of the Declaration. Where General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) has not been fully implemented with regard to a given Territory, the Assembly shall continue to bear responsibility for that Territory until all powers are transferred to the people of the Territory without any conditions or reservations and the people concerned have had an opportunity to exercise freely their right to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration. The Special Committee is hereby directed:

(a) To continue to seek the most suitable ways for the speedy and total application of the Declaration to all Territories which have not yet attained independence and to propose to the General Assembly specific measures for the complete implementation of the Declaration;

(b) To undertake a thorough review of the list of Trust and Non-Self-Governing and other Territories which have not yet attained independence to which the Declaration applies and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session;

(c) To continue to send visiting missions to the colonial Territories at periodic intervals in order to enable the Special Committee to obtain first-hand information on conditions in those Territories;

(d) To continue to examine the views expressed, orally or in writing, by the peoples of the colonial Territories as well as by representatives of non-governmental organizations and individuals with knowledge of conditions in those Territories. Particular consideration shall be given to oral petitions and written communications regarding the Territories on which information is not being transmitted as provided for by Article 73 e of the Charter or to which the Special Committee is denied access;

(e) To assist the General Assembly in making arrangements, in co-operation with the administering Powers, to secure a United Nations presence in the colonial Territories to enable it to participate in the elaboration of the procedural arrangements for the implementation of the Declaration and to observe or supervise the final stages of the process of decolonization in those Territories.

18. The United Nations shall intensify its efforts in disseminating information by all available means, including publications, radio and television, on the struggle of peoples for self-determination, independence and equal rights and against colonial domination, on the activities of the United Nations in the field of decolonization and on the role of the national liberation movements.

19. The specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system shall render, or continue to render, all possible moral and material assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories and to their national liberation movements.

20. Those non-governmental organizations with a special interest in the field of decolonization and actively opposed to colonialism in all its forms and manifestations are requested to intensify their activities in co-operation with the Secretary-General and the relevant organs of the United Nations.

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and 2621 (XXV) of 12 October 1970, containing the programme of action for the full implementation of the Declaration.

Recalling all its previous resolutions concerning the implementation of the Declaration, in particular resolution 34/94 of 13 December 1979, as well as the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Condemning the continued colonialist and racist repression of millions of Africans, particularly in Namibia, by the Government of South Africa through its persistent, illegal occupation of the international Territory and its intransigent attitude towards all efforts being made to bring about an internationally acceptable solution to the situation obtaining in the Territory,

Deeply conscious of the urgent need to take all necessary measures to eliminate forthwith the remaining vestiges of colonialism, particularly in respect of Namibia where desperate attempts by South Africa to perpetuate its illegal occupation have brought untold suffering and bloodshed to the people,

Strongly deprecating the policies of those States which, in defiance of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, have continued to collaborate with the Government of South Africa in its domination of the people of Namibia,

Conscious that the success of the national liberation struggle and the resultant international situation have provided the international community with a unique opportunity to make a decisive contribution towards the total elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations in Africa,

Welcoming warmly the achievement of independence by the peoples of Zimbabwe and Vanuatu and mindful of the imperative need to assist the Governments of the two countries in their respective efforts to achieve national reconstruction and economic development,

Noting with satisfaction the work accomplished by the Special Committee with a view to securing the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration and the other relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Noting also with satisfaction the co-operation and active participation of the administering Powers concerned in the relevant work of the Special Committee, as well as the continued readiness of the Governments concerned to receive United Nations visiting missions in the Territories under their administration,

Reiterating its conviction that the total eradication of racial discrimination, apartheid and violations of the basic human rights of the peoples of colonial Territories will be achieved most expeditiously by the faithful and complete implementation of the Declaration, particularly in Namibia, and by the speediest possible complete elimination of the presence of the illegal occupying regimes therefrom,

1. Reaffirms its resolutions 1514(XV) and 2621 (XXV) and all other resolutions on decolonization and calls upon the administering Powers, in accordance with those resolutions, to take all the necessary steps to enable the dependent peoples of the Territories concerned to exercise fully and without further delay their inalienable right to self-determination and independence;

2. Affirms once again that the continuation of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations-including racism, apartheid, the exploitation by foreign and other interests of economic and human resources, and the waging of colonial wars to suppress national liberation movements-is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and poses a serious threat to international peace and security;

3. Reaffirms its determination to take all necessary steps with a view to the complete and speedy eradication of colonialism and to the faithful and strict observance by all States of the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the guiding principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

5. Approves the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples covering its work during 1980, including the programme of work envisaged for 1981;

6. Calls upon all States, in particular the administering Powers, and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to give effect to the recommendations contained in the report of the Special Committee for the speedy implementation of the Declaration and the other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

7. Condemns the continuing activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration with regard to the colonial Territories, particularly Namibia;

8. Strongly condemns all collaboration, particularly in the nuclear and military fields, with the Government of South Africa and calls upon the States concerned to cease forthwith all such collaboration;

9. Requests all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to withhold assistance of any kind from the Government of South Africa until the inalienable right of the people of Namibia to self-determination and independence has been restored, and to refrain from taking any action which might imply recognition of the legitimacy of the illegal occupation of Namibia by that regime;

10. Calls upon the colonial Powers to withdraw immediately and unconditionally their military bases and installations from colonial Territories and to refrain from establishing new ones;

11. Urges all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to provide all moral and material assistance to the oppressed people of Namibia and, in respect of the other Territories, requests the administering Powers, in consultation with the Governments of the Territories under their administration, to take steps to enlist and make effective use of all possible assistance, on both a bilateral and a multilateral basis, in the strengthening of the economies of those Territories;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) in all Territories which have not yet attained independence and, in particular:

(a) To formulate specific proposals for the elimination of the remaining manifestations of colonialism and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth session;

(b) To make concrete suggestions which could assist the Security Council in considering appropriate measures under the Charter with regard to developments in colonial Territories that are likely to threaten international peace and security;

(c) To continue to examine the compliance of Member States with the Declaration and with other relevant resolutions on decolonization, particularly those relating to Namibia;

(d) To continue to pay particular attention to the small Territories, including the sending of visiting missions thereto, as appropriate, and to recommend to the General Assembly the most suitable steps to be taken to enable the populations of those Territories to exercise their right to self-determination, freedom and independence;

(e) To take all necessary steps to enlist world-wide support among Governments, as well as national and international organizations having a special interest in decolonization, in the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration and in the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, particularly as concerns the oppressed people of Namibia:

13. Calls upon the administering Powers to continue to co-operate with the Special Committee in the discharge of its mandate and, in particular, to permit the access of visiting missions to the Territories to secure first-hand information and ascertain the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the facilities and services required for the implementation of the present resolution, as well as of the various resolutions and decisions on decolonization adopted by the General Assembly and the Special Committee.

Implementation of the Declaration by the specialized agencies and United Nations-associated international institutions

Consideration by the Special Committee

In 1980, the General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples again examined, at plenary meetings held between 11 and 20 August, the question of the implementation of the Declaration by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations.

The Committee had before it a report by the Secretary-General, submitted also to the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly in accordance with a 1979 Assembly resolution,<sup>10</sup> containing replies to a request for information on ways in which the agencies and institutions were implementing the Declaration and other resolutions. Replies were received from the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the International Labour Organisation (ILO), the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the World Health Organization (WHO), the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the Universal Postal Union (UPU), the International Telecommunication Union, the World Meteorological Organization, the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, the World Intellectual Property Organization, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) (see p. 1065).

Statements by representatives of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the national liberation movements of the colonial territories concerned who participated in the Committee's work were taken into account in the Committee's consideration of this subject.

The Committee also had before it a report on consultations between its Chairman and the President of the Economic and Social Council on means to co-ordinate the policies and activities of United Nations organizations in implementing Assembly resolutions on the question (see section immediately below) and a report of its Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance, to which it had allocated consideration of the matter, containing its conclusions and recommendations. The report also contained an account of the Sub-Committee's consultations during the year with representatives of ILO, FAO, UNESCO, WHO, IMF, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), UNICEF and UNDP.

The decisions of the Special Committee on this topic were embodied in a resolution adopted without objection on 20 August by which the Committee approved the Sub-Committee's report and reaffirmed that recognition by United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the struggle of colonial peoples to exercise their right to self-determination and independence entailed, as a corollary, the extension by the United Nations system's organizations of all necessary moral and material assistance to those peoples and their national liberation movements; it asked them to render such aid as a matter of urgency and to continue providing such aid to the newly independent and emerging States.

The Committee expressed its appreciation to specialized agencies and other organizations that had continued to co-operate with the United Nations and OAU in the implementation of the Declaration and United Nations resolutions, and urged them to accelerate the speedy implementation of the relevant provisions, expressing concern that aid thus far extended, particularly to the people of Namibia and their national liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), was far from adequate in relation to needs.

It regretted that the World Bank and IMF had not taken the necessary measures towards full and speedy implementation of the instruments in question, deploring in particular the fact that they maintained co-operation with the South African régime, and urged their executive heads to draw the governing bodies' attention to this resolution with a view to formulating specific programmes beneficial to colonial territories, particularly Namibia.

The Committee recommended that the system's organizations should initiate or broaden contacts with colonial peoples in consultation with OAU, and urged the executive heads of the organizations to formulate with OAU and submit, as a matter of priority, to their governing and legislative organs concrete proposals for full implementation of relevant United Nations decisions, in particular specific programmes of assistance to the peoples of the colonial territories and their liberation movements. It recommended that the organizations introduce greater flexibility in their assistance programme procedures so as to be able to extend the necessary aid without delay.

The Committee also called for withholding aid to South Africa until it restored to the Namibian people the right to self-determination, and urged full membership in United Nations bodies of the United Nations Council for Namibia.
