Preliminary Remarks

The Commission on Human Rights, at its sixth session, adopted the following resolution:

"The Commission on Human Rights

Considering that it is highly important to promote by all possible means the knowledge and scientific study of the problems connected with the protection of human rights, both international and domestic,

Considering that in order to achieve these ends, as complete as possible a bibliography of the scientific works on this subject published in recent years should be made available,

Requests the Secretary-General:

1. To prepare and circulate a general bibliography of scientific works related to the problem of the protection of human rights;
2. To limit this bibliography for the time to works published after 31 December 1939."

The Secretary-General accordingly presents the following Bibliography and draws the attention of the Commission to certain points:

A. The Bibliography is limited to works published after December 1939, in accordance with the terms of the resolution. For this reason, many important works are excluded because they were published before that date.

B. The Bibliography includes not only works which deal with the protection of human rights in general on the international and national plane, as requested, but also works on subjects which are closely related to this problem, such as: human rights in general; international relations and human rights; historical antecedents; the United Nations and human rights, etc.; and works related to particular human rights listed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

C. This Bibliography, however, does not include all general treatises of international law or books on constitutional law, although it goes without saying that certain aspects of international and domestic law have a direct bearing on the problem of the protection of human rights. Any person interested in that problem will of course look into general treatises dealing with these matters.

D. The Bibliography is not intended to be exhaustive, although the /Secretary-General

Secretary-General has attempted to make it as extensive as time would permit.

E. In compiling the Bibliography, the Secretary-General has attempted to take into account works in all languages. Nevertheless, limitations of time, financial means and staff have imposed certain restrictions in this regard. The Bibliography includes in total 3379 items. As to languages, these items are distributed as follows:

- English	1652
- French	855
- Spanish	468
- Russian	53
- other Slavonic languages (Bulgarian, Czech, Polish)	15
- Portuguese	26
- Italian	69
- German	195
- Dutch	17
- Scandinavian languages (Swedish, Norwegian, Danish)	29

It is respectfully submitted that Middle Eastern countries and India and Pakistan are represented by items published in the English and French languages by writers and scholars of those countries.

F. The Bibliography includes articles published in periodicals, as well as books and pamphlets.

G. Social surveys providing data on human rights have been included.

H. Although in theory it is easy to make a distinction between "scientific" and "political" works, it is, however, difficult to draw this line in practice. A political pamphlet which contains, for example, plans for action, propaganda, etc., may include ideas which are of the utmost interest from a theoretical point of view. The criterion followed with regard to this point therefore has been broad and flexible.

I. The Bibliography is divided into two sections:

Section I contains works dealing with general problems:

- bibliographies;
- human rights in general;
- human rights and international relations;
- historical antecedents of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;
- the United Nations and human rights;
- Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

- international protection of human rights;
- domestic protection of human rights;

Section II contains works dealing with matters related to particular human rights proclaimed in the articles of the Universal Declaration. This does not mean, of course, that the publications listed under each article necessarily deal directly with that article, but that they cover matters relating to its contents. This section includes also special headings on international penal law, war crimes and genocide.

J. The inclusion of a particular publication in no way implies any adherence to the point of view or doctrine proclaimed in it. Doctrines which might give rise to objections or controversies, may nevertheless give inspiration to rectify situations where human rights are curtailed or to find better methods of overcoming them.

K. The face title and reference of each item is given in the language in which the item appears.
